After a brief sojourn in Rome (May, 1734) to conduct his Mass at the San Lorenzo Church, he returned to Naples; there his new opera Adriano in Siria was produced, on Oct. 25, 1734, with an intermezzo, Livietta e Tracollo (performed at various times under different titles, La Contadina astuta, La finta Polacca, etc.). During another trip to Rome he performed his serious opera L'Olimpiade (Jan. 8, 1735), directing from the harpsichord, but it had little success. His last opera was a comic play, Il Flaminio (Naples, autumn, 1735). At that time his health was undermined by consumption; early in 1736 he went to Pozzuoli, where he died at the age of 26; he was buried in the common grave. His last completed work was a masterpiece of sacred music, Stabat Mater. Several dramatic works ascribed to Pergolesi and published under his name, notably Il Maestro di musica and Il Geloso schernito, are spurious.—The revival of his comic intermezzo La Serva padrona in Paris (1752) precipitated the so-called 'querelle des bouffons' between the supporters of the Italian and the French factions. Pergolesi's instrumental music is less known, and there are grave doubts as to the authenticity of many of these works published under his name: 14 trio sonatas (of these, 3 were ed. by Riemann, Berlin, 1900); 6 concertini for strings (publ. in London as works by Carlo Ricciotti); 3 'sinfonie' (string quartets); 2 concertos for flute and strings; sonata for violin and strings; 5 harpsichord sonatas. Stravinsky used some of these instrumental works for his ballet Pulcinella, but most of the borrowed material is not by Pergolesi. La Serva padrona was publ. in new editions by Abert (1911), Karl Geiringer, and others; Flaminio was ed. by Mortari (1942); the spurious Il Maestro di musica (which is in reality a pasticcio publ. in Paris in 1753) was orchestrated and ed. by Schering (1924); the intermezzo La finta Polacca was issued by Radiciotti (1914); the Stabat Mater was publ. by Eulenburg in A. Einstein's edition. Among other extant works attributed to Pergolesi are the oratorios, Il Pentimento, La Morte d'Abel, and Septem verba; 10 chamber cantatas; at least 5 Masses; still doubtful is the authenticity of many arias, including the popular Tre giorni son che Nina. A complete ed. of Pergolesi's works, Opera Omnia, was brought out in Rome (1940-42), in 5 vols. (148 works, of which 129 publ. for the first time; many are spurious). —Bibliography: P. Boyer, Notices sur la vie et les ouvrages de Pergolèse, in 'Mercure de France' (July, 1772); Marchese di Villa-rosa, Lettera biografica intorno alla patria ed alla vita di G. B. Pergolesi (Naples, 1831; 2nd ed., 1843); F. Villars, La Serva padrona, son apparition à Paris en 1752, son influence, son analyse (Paris, 1863); A. Gianandrea, Pergolesiana (Jesi, 1885); E. Faustini-Fasini, G. B. Pergolesi attraverso i suoi biografi e le sue opere (Milan, 1900); G. Radiciotti, G. B. Pergolesi; vita, opere ed influenza su l'arte (Rome, 1910; 2nd ed., Milan, 1935; in German, Zürich, 1954); A. Della Corte, G. B. Pergolesi, in L'Opera comica italiana nel 1700 (vol. I, pp. 49-75; Bari, 1923); G. Radiciotti, Tre giorni, in 'Musica d'oggi' (July, 1925); A. Della Corte, Pergolesi (Turin, 1936); R. Giraldi, G. B. Pergolesi (Rome, 1936); G. de Saint-Foix, Le deuxième centenaire de Pergolesi, in 'Revue de Musicologie' (1936); special issues of 'Rassegna Musicale' (1936) and 'Musica d'oggi' (1936); H. Claydon, Three String Quartets Attributed to Pergolesi, in 'Music & Letters' (Oct., 1938); F. Schlitzler, G. B. Pergolesi (Turin, 1940); S. A. Luciani, G. B. Pergolesi: note e documenti (Siena, 1942); E. J. Luin, Fortuna e influenza della musica di Pergolesi in Europa (Siena, 1943); F. Walker, Two Centuries of Pergolesi Forgeries and Misattributions, in 'Music & Letters' (Oct., 1949); C. L. Cudworth, Notes on the Instrumental Works Attributed to Pergolesi, in 'Music & Letters' (Oct., 1949); F. Walker, Pergolesi Legends, in 'Monthly Mus. Record' (1952); F. Walker, 'Orazio': The History of a Pasticcio, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1952). For a complete list of pamphlets publ. in Paris during the 'querelle des bouffons' see L. Reichenburg, Contribution à l'histoire de la Querelle des Bouffons (Philadelphia, 1937); for details of performances, alternative titles, etc., consult A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; new ed., 1955).

Peri, Jacopo, Italian composer; called 'Il Zazzerino' from his abundant hair, b. Florence, Aug. 20, 1561; d. there, Aug. 12, 1633. Of noble family, he studied at Lucca under Cristoforo Malvezzi; was maestro at the court of Ferdinando I and Cosimo II de' Medici, and from 1601 at the court of Ferrara. A participant in the Florentine circle at the houses of Counts Bardi and Corsi, where the revival of ancient Greek musical declamation was planned, Peri set to music Rinuccini's text of Dafne (1597). It was first performed at Corsi's palace in Florence, and played again at Pitti's palace. Peri followed it with a setting of Rinuccini's Euridice for the wedding of Maria de' Medici with Henry IV of France (produced Oct. 6, 1600). Dafne was the first 'opera,' or drama set to music in monodic style (i. e., vocal soli supported by instruments); this style was termed 'stile rappresentativo.' In 1608 Peri wrote for Mantua the recitatives of Adriano (text by Rinuccini), while Monteverdi composed the arias. In the same year he submitted in Mantua an opera Tetide (text by Cini), which, however, was not produced. With Grazie, Signorini, and del Turco he wrote Guerra d'amore (Florence, 1615). No records are available showing that Adone (text by Cicognini), composed 1620, ever had a public performance. La Precedenza delle dame was produced at Florence in 1625, and Peri also collaborated with Gagliano on La Flora (Florence, Oct. 11, 1628). He published in 1609 Le varie musiche . . . in 1-3 parts, some to be sung with harpsichord or chitarrone, others to be played on the organ. Kiesewetter printed 3 madrigals a 4 in Schicksale und Beschaffenheit des weltlichen Gesanges (1841). Fragments from Euridice are in several histories of music; a complete ed. was publ. by Guidi in Florence, and by Torchi in vol. VI of 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia'; a facsimile reprint was publ. in Milan, 1934; A. Schering's Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen contains 3 excerpts (Nos. 171a-c). — Cf. G. O. Corazzini, Commemorazione della Riforma melodrammatica, in the annual report of the 'Reale Istituto di Musica' (Florence, 1895); A. Solerti, Le Origini del melodramma (3 vols., Florence, 1905); O. G. Sonneck, Dafne, the First Opera, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft,' vol. XV (1913); M. Mila, J. Peri, in 'Rassegna Musicale' IV (1933). For details of productions of Peri's operas, see A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943).

Périer, Jean, French tenor; b. Paris, Feb. 2, 1869; d. there, Nov. 3, 1954. He studied at the Paris Cons., obtaining 1st prize for singing (1892); was engaged at the Opéra-Comique. He created the role of Pelléas at the première of Debussy's opera (1902), and sang the leading tenor parts in several other premières of French operas; a talented comedian, he also appeared in variety shows in Paris. He publ. an instructive album, Mes Exercices, tirés des chansons populaires de France.

Perinello, Carlo, Italian editor and composer; b. Trieste, Feb. 13, 1877; d. Rome, Jan. 6, 1942. He studied music in Trieste and Leipzig; then taught at the Trieste Cons. (1904-14) and at the Milan Cons. He served on the staff of the Istituto Editoriale Italiano, and collaborated in the preparation of its publications.

Perini, Flora, Italian mezzo-soprano; b. Rome, Nov. 20, 1887. She studied with Zaira Falchi at the Santa Cecilia in Rome, where she graduated in 1907 as winner of the gold medal; made her début at La Scala, Milan, in 1908; then sang in Venice (1909), in Madrid and Buenos Aires (1910); in Bari, Rome, Montevideo, and Rio de Janeiro (1911); in Barcelona and Palermo (1912); in Turin and St. Petersburg (1913); in Trieste and Turin (1914); American début at the Metropolitan Opera House in Puccini's Manon Lescaut, Nov. 27, 1915; then was a regular member of the Metropolitan Opera Co. (1915-24). In 1924 she returned to Italy.

Perkins, Charles Callahan, American musician and painter; b. Boston, March 1, 1823; d. Windsor, Vt., Aug. 25, 1886. He was educated at Harvard Univ.; also studied in Italy and in Paris. In 1850 he became the head of the Handel and Haydn Society, in which position he exercised considerable influence on musical affairs in Boston; compiled (with John S. Dwight) vol. I of History of the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston (Boston, 1883). See the article on him in the Dictionary of American Biography (vol. XIV).

Perkins, Francis Davenport, American music critic; b. Boston, Nov. 18, 1897. He studied at the New England Cons., at Trinity College, Cambridge, England, and at Harvard Univ. (B. A. cum laude, 1918). In 1919 he became exchange editor of the N. Y. 'Tribune' (which in 1924 became the N. Y. 'Herald Tribune'), from 1922 assistant music critic; also contributed numerous articles to various musical publications.

Perkins, Henry Southwick, American vocal teacher; b. Stockbridge, Vt., March 20, 1833; d. Chicago, Jan. 20, 1914. He studied voice at the Boston Music School (graduated in 1861); later, in Italy. He filled various administrative and educational posts in Iowa, Kansas, and Illinois; in 1890, founded the Chicago National College of Music; was active as director of music festivals and conventions across the country, from Maine to California. He was one of the organizers of the Music Teachers National Association in 1876; edited 30 song books, hymn books, class books; etc.; composed vocal quartets and songs.

Perkins, (David) Walton, American pianist and music critic; b. Rome, N. Y., Nov. 16, 1847; d. Chicago, Feb. 6, 1929. He was a pupil of Th. Kullak and Anton Rubinstein in Berlin; upon his return to America, he settled in Chicago; with William H. Sherwood, organized the Sherwood Music School in Chicago (1897); was its director until 1901. In 1906, became president of the Chicago Cons. of Music. He wrote music criticism in various Chicago newspapers; publ. Piano Technique; also piano pieces and songs; edited collections of choruses, and composed choral works.

Perkins, William Oscar, American vocal teacher and composer; brother of Henry Southwick Perkins; b. Stockbridge, Vt., May 23, 1831; d. Boston, Jan. 13, 1902. He studied voice in Milan; lived in Boston as a teacher; publ. about 40 collections of songs, anthems, etc., including many of his own pieces.

Perkowski, Piotr, Polish composer; b. Owieczacz, Nov. 17, 1902. He studied in Warsaw with Statkowski and in Paris with Albert Roussel. After 1945 he taught at the Warsaw Cons. —Works: ballet Swante-wit (Poznan, June 19, 1948); 2 symphonies (1925; 1949); a sinfonietta; a piano concerto (1925); a violin concerto (1933); numerous sets of stylized Polish dances for piano; songs. In his early years he was influenced by abstract musical ideas; his Geometrical Suite for orch. (1930) is typical of that trend; later he followed the folkloric style.

Perle, George, American composer; b. Bayonne, N. J., May 6, 1915; studied with La Violette at De Paul Univ.; also took private lessons with Ernst Krenck. He was lecturer in music history at City College, N. Y. (1948); in 1949, was appointed instructor in music history and composition at the Univ. of Louisville. —Works: 2 symphonies, 3 string quartets, sonata for solo viola, works for band, piano sonatas, etc. In most of his music he follows the 12-tone technique of composition. He has contributed valuable articles on old music to various publications. —Cf. G. Chase, America's Music (N. Y., 1955; p. 611 ff.).

Perlea, Jonel, Rumanian conductor; b. Ograda, Dec. 13, 1900, of a German mother and a Rumanian father. He studied music in Munich and Leipzig; held posts as conductor in Leipzig and Rostock; from 1934-44 was conductor at the Bucharest Opera. During the last year of World War II he was interned in a German concentration camp. After 1945, he conducted opera in Italy, including regular appearances at La Scala. He made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera House, Dec. 1, 1949, in Tristan und Isolde; also was guest conductor with several American and European symphony orchestras. In 1955 he was appointed conductor of the Connecticut Symph. Orch. He has written a violin concerto, several orchestral works, and chamber music.

Perne (pärn), François Louis, French music scholar; b. Paris, Oct. 4, 1772; d. there, May 26, 1832. He studied with Abbé d'Haudumont at the maîtrise of St.-Jacques-de-la-Boucherie; was chorus singer at the Paris Opéra in 1792; double-bass player in the orch. there, 1799. His profound skill in composition was illustrated by his writing a triple fugue, to be sung backwards on reversing the page; his knowledge of old music was extraordinary. In 1813 he became prof. of harmony at the Paris Cons., as successor to Catel; he became inspector-general of the Cons. in 1816, and librarian in 1819. In 1822 he went into retirement, at an estate near Laon; returned to Paris shortly before his death. He publ. Exposition de la séméiographie, ou notation musicale des Grecs (1815), Cours d'harmonie et d'accompagnement (1822), Chansons du Châtelain de Coucy (1830), and a great number of articles on Greek and medieval music publ. in vols. I-IX of the 'Revue Musicale' edited by Fétis. He also wrote several pieces of sacred music.

Perosi, Don Lorenzo, distinguished Italian composer of church music; b. Tortona, Dec. 20, 1872; d. Rome, Oct. 12, 1956. He studied music at the Cons. of Milan (1892-93); also took courses at Haber's School for Church Music at Regensburg (1894); became maestro di cappella at Imola, and then at San Marco in Venice. He was ordained priest in 1896; in 1898 became musical director of the Sistine Chapel, and leader of the papal choir; he resigned this post in 1915 owing to a severe mental disturbance; spent some time in a sanitarium (1922-23). Regaining his health after treatment, he returned to active service as choral conductor and composer. Shortly after his 80th birthday, he led a performance of his oratorio Il Natale del

Redentore at the Vatican, before Pope Pius XII (Dec. 28, 1952). He was a self-denying and scholarly worker for the cause of the cultivation of a pure church style, both in composition and in performance, and was esteemed above all others as a church musician by his colleagues and at the Vatican. His magnum opus, the sacred trilogy La Passione di Cristo (I. La Cena del Signore; II. L'Orazione al monte; III. La Morte del Redentore), was produced in Milan, Dec. 2, 1897, at the Italian Congress for Sacred Music, and had numerous performances elsewhere in Europe and America. Other oratorios are: La Trasfigurazione del Nostro Signore Gesù Cristo (Venice, March 20, 1898); La Risurrezione di Lazaro (Venice, July 27, 1898, in La Fenice Theater, by special permission); La Risurrezione di Cristo (Rome, Dec. 13, 1898); Il Natale del Redentore (Como, Sept. 12, 1899); L'Entrata di Cristo in Gerusalemme (Milan, April 25, 1900); La Strage degli innocenti (Milan, May 18, 1900); Mosè (Milan, Nov. 16, 1901); Dies Iste (Rome, Dec. 9, 1904); Transitus Animae (Rome, Dec. 18, 1907); In Patris memoriam (Naples, May 15, 1919); Giorni di Tribolazione (Milan, Oct., 1916). He wrote further some 40 Masses with organ; a Requiem with instrumental accompaniment; a Stabat Mater for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; Vespertina Oratio, for solo voices, chorus, and orch.; about 150 motets, Psalms, etc.; 2 symph. poems, Dovrei non piangere and La Festa del villaggio; a series of 8 orchestral pieces, each named after an Italian city: Roma, Firenze, Milano, Venezia, Messina, Tortona, Genoa, Torino; other orchestral works; a piano concerto; a violin concerto; chamber music; many organ works. —Bibliography: I. Seytre, L'Abbé Perosi: sa biographie, son œuvre (Nice, 1901); Romain Rolland, Don Lorenzo Perosi, in Musiciens d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1914; in English, N. Y., 1915); A. Damerini, Lorenzo Perosi (Rome, 1924); E. Carabella, L'Oratorio musicale e la 'Risurrezione di Cristo' di Lorenzo Perosi (Milan, 1924); Z. Musmeci, Don Lorenzo Perosi e le sue opere (Acireale, 1932); A. Della Corte, Lorenzo Perosi (Turin, 1936); A. Pagliarunga, Lorenzo Perosi (Rome, 1952); M. Gliński, Lorenzo Perosi (Milan, 1953).

Perotin (called Perotinus Magnus), celebrated composer of the 12th century; the greatest master (after Leonin) of the Notre Dame School, representing the flowering of the 'Ars antiqua.' He was maître de chapelle at 'Beatae Mariac Virginis' (before the erection of Notre-Dame), Paris. Among his extant works are 'organa' in 2, 3, and 4 parts. His melodic writing differs from the practice of Leonin in that he employs triadic progressions; there is also a suggestion of rudimentary canonic procedures. His most famous quadruple organum, Sederunt principes, was publ. by R. Ficker in 1930, and appears in several collections of medieval music. Other works are in Coussemaker's L'Art harmonique au XII<sup>e</sup> et XIII<sup>e</sup> siècles; vol. I of 'Oxford History of Music'; Y. Rokseth, Motets du XIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1936); Davison and Apel, Historical Anthology of Music (vol. I, 1946); etc. —Cf. R. Ficker, in Neue Musikzeitung (1928, 2); J. Handschin, in Schweizerisches Jahrbuch für Musikwissenschaft (vol. II); F. Ludwig, in the Riemann-Festschrift (1909), the Archiv für Musikwissenschaft (vol. III), the Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft (vol. V), Guido Adler's Handbuch der Musikgeschichte (1930), and the Adler-Festschrift (Vienna, 1930). See also H. Besseler, Die Musik des Mittelalters und der Renaissance (Potsdam, 1931-35); G. Reese, Music in the Middle Ages, chap. 11 (N. Y., 1940); J. Chailley, Histoire musicale du moyen-âge (Paris, 1950); W. Waite, The Rhythm of Twelfth-Century Polyphony (New Haven, 1954).

Perrin, Harry Crane, British organist and pedagogue; b. Wellingborough, Aug. 19, 1865; d. Exeter, England, Nov. 6, 1953. Pupil in Dublin of Sir R. Stewart, Dr. C. W. Pearce, and Dr. F. Bates; Mus. Bac., Dublin, 1890; F.R.C.O., 1892; Mus. Doc., 1901; 1892-98, organist and choirmaster at St. Michael's, Coventry; 1898-1908, at Canterbury Cathedral, and conductor of the Cathedral Musical Society; 1908-30, prof. of music and director of the Cons., McGill Univ., Montreal, Canada (from 1920, dean of the faculty there); 1930, retired as dean-emeritus, and returned to England. —Works: cantatas; overture and suite for orch.; numerous church services and anthems; song cycles, part-songs, etc.

Perrin (pëhr-ran'), Pierre, French poet; b. Lyons, c. 1616; d. Paris, April 25, 1675. Author of the librettos for the first French operas (so called): Cambert's La Pastorale (1659), Pomone (1671), and Ariane (1672). The privilege obtained from Louis XIV by Perrin and Cambert to organize an 'Académie de musique' (1668) was revoked in Lully's favor (1672). —Cf. A. Pougin, Les vrais créateurs de l'opéra français, Perrin et Cambert (Paris, 1881); H. Prunières, Lully and the Académie de Musique et de Danse, in the Mus. Quarterly (Oct., 1925).

Perry, Edward Baxter, American pianist; b. Haverhill, Mass., Feb. 14, 1855; d. Camden, Maine, June 13, 1924. He early lost his sight; was taught by J. W. Hill at Boston; studied later in Germany under Kullak, Clara Schumann, Pruckner, and Liszt. Returning to America, he originated the 'lecture-recital'; visited every state of the Union, appearing in over 3,000 piano recitals, and an equal number of 'lecture-recitals'; 1881-83, prof. of music at Oberlin College; 1897-98, concertized in Europe; 1917, appointed dean of fine arts and director of music at the Woman's College, Montgomery, Alabama. —Works: a Loreley fantasia, The Lost Island, and other piano pieces; a string quartet; wrote Descriptive Analyses of Piano Works (1902) and Stories of Standard Teaching Pieces (1910). —Cf. 'Dictionary of American Biography,' vol. XIV (1934).

Perry, George, English composer; b. Norwich, 1793; d. London, March 4, 1862. He was a choir boy at the Cathedral of Norwich; moved to London in 1822, and became director of the music at the Haymarket Theatre; then organist of Quebec Chapel; 1832-47, concertmaster of the Sacred Harmonic Society orch. —Works: the oratorios Elijah and The Priests of Baal (1818), The Fall of Jerusalem (1830), The Death of Abel (1846), Hezekiah (1847); a cantata, Belshazzar's Feast (1836); 2 operas, Morning, Noon and Night (1822), Family Quarrels (1830); overture to The Persian Hunters; anthems, songs, piano pieces. —Cf. 'Dictionary of National Biography,' vol. XLV (1896).

Persiani (née Tacchinardi), Fanny, Italian coloratura soprano; b. Rome, Oct. 4, 1812; d. Paris, May 3, 1867. Her father, the tenor Nicola Tacchinardi, was her teacher. After a successful début at Leghorn in 1832, she sang in the principal cities of Italy; from 1837-47 she appeared in London and Paris with brilliant success; also visited Holland and Russia, but returned to Paris in 1858. —In 1830 she married Giuseppe Persiani (1804-69), a composer of 11 operas. —Cf. G. Tebaldini, G. Persiani e F. Tacchinardi, memorie ed appunti, in the Rivista Musicale Italiana (vol. 12).

Persichetti, Vincent, outstanding American composer; b. Philadelphia, June 6, 1915. He studied piano with Alberto Jonás and Olga Samaroff; composition with Paul Nordoff and Roy Harris; conducting with Fritz Reiner. In 1942 he was appointed head of the dept. of composition at the Philadelphia Cons.; in 1948, joined the staff of the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y.; wrote (with Flora Rheta Schreiber) the monograph William Schuman (N. Y., 1954). Persichetti's music is remarkable for its contrapuntal compactness, in a synthetic style, amalgamating the seemingly incompatible idioms of different historical epochs; the basis is tonal, but the component parts often move independently, creating polytonal combinations; the rhythmic element is always strong and emphatic; the melody is more frequently diatonic than chromatic or atonal. —Works: 4 symphonies: No. 1 (1942; Rochester, Oct. 21, 1947); No. 2 (1942); No. 3 (Philadelphia, Nov. 21, 1947); No. 4 (Philadelphia, Dec. 17, 1954); concertino for piano and orch. (Rochester, Oct. 23, 1945); Dance Overture (Tokyo, Feb. 7, 1948); Fables, for narrator and orch. (Philadelphia, April 20, 1945); The Hollow Men, for trumpet and string orch. (Germantown, Dec. 12, 1946); Divertimento for band (N. Y., June 16, 1950); Fairy Tale, for orch. (1950); Pagant, for band (Miami, March 7, 1953); Symphony for Strings (Louisville, Aug. 28, 1954); a series of serenades for various groups: No. 1, for 10 wind instruments (1929); No. 2, for piano (1929); No. 3, for violin, cello, and piano (1941); No. 4, for violin and piano (1945); No. 5, for orch. (Louisville, Nov. 15, 1950); No. 6, for trombone, viola, and cello (1950); No. 7, for piano (1952); No. 8, for piano, 4 hands (1954); King Lear, ballet music for 7 instruments (Martha Graham Co., Montclair, N. J., Jan. 31, 1949); 2 string quartets (1939; 1944); suite for violin and cello (1940); sonata for solo violin (1940); 2 piano quintets: No. 1 (1940); No. 2 (Library of Congress, Washington, Kroll String Quartet and the composer, Feb. 4, 1955; his most remarkable chamber music work); violin sonata (1941); Pastoral for woodwind quintet (Philadelphia, April 20, 1945); Vocalise for cello and piano (1945); sonata for unaccompanied cello (1952); 9 piano sonatas; 6 piano sonatinas; 3 sets of Poems for piano; sonata for 2 pianos (1940); concerto for piano 4 hands (1952); The Little Piano Book (1953); Magnificat for chorus and organ (1940); Two Chinese Songs (1945); 3 Canons for Voices (1947); several choruses; harpsichord sonata (1951); a sonatina for organ (pedals alone); etc. —Cf. Robert Evett, The Music of Vincent Persichetti, in the 'Juilliard Review' (Spring, 1955).

Persinger, Louis, American violinist and teacher; b. Rochester, Ill., Feb. 11, 1887. He studied with Hans Becker at the Leipzig Cons., 1900-04, making his début at a Cons. concert on March 23, 1904; then went for further study to Ysaÿe in Brussels (1905-08); also coached with J. Thibaud in Paris; 1909-11, he made successful tours of Germany, Austria, and Scandinavia; 1912-13, first extended American tour; 1913-14, another tour of Germany; 1914-15, concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic; 1915-17, with the San Francisco Symph. Orch.; 1916-28, director and 1st violin of 'The Chamber-Music Society of San Francisco'; 1929-30, prof. of violin at the Cleveland Institute of Music; 1930, succeeded Leopold Auer at the Juilliard Graduate School, N. Y. His pupils include Yehudi Menuhin and Guila Bustabo. He has publ. transcriptions and arrangements for violin. In 1913 he married the pianist Angela Gianelli (d. 1954); remarried in 1956.

Perti, Jacopo Antonio, Italian composer; b. Crevalcore, near Bologna, June 6, 1661; d. there, April 10, 1756. A pupil of Padre Petronio Franceschini, as early as 1680 he brought out a Mass, and next year was elected a member of the Accademia Filarmonica, of which he was five times the president. After spending several years as an opera composer at Parma, he became maestro at San Pietro in Bologna (1690), and in 1696 maestro at San Petronio. He wrote 24 operas, the most successful of which was Il Furio Camillo (Venice, 1692), and 19 oratorios; publ. the oratorio Abramo vincitore de' propri affetti (1687), Cantate morali e spirituali (1688), and Messe e salmi concertati (1735). His MSS were dispersed; Abbate Santini possessed a valuable collection. Extant works include 4 Passions and 8 oratorios at Bologna, an Adoramus Te in the Fitzwilliam Collection, Cambridge, 2 fine choruses in Novello's 'Sacred Music', and other compositions in various collections. —Cf. L. Mancini, J. A. Perti (Bologna, 1813); G. Atti, Orazione in lode di I. A. Perti (1844); an extended biography of Perti is found in L. Busi's Il Padre Giambatt. Martini (Bologna, 1891; vol. I, p. 61 et seq.); F. Giegling, G. A. Perti, in 'Die Musikforschung' (1955, No. 4).

Pessard (pëhs-sahr'), Émile-Louis-Fortuné, French composer; b. Paris, May 29, 1843; d. there, Feb. 10, 1917. Pupil in the Paris Cons. of Bazin (harmony), Laurent (piano), Benoist (organ), and Carafa (composition); won the 1st harmony-prize in 1862, and the Grand Prix de Rome in 1866 with the cantata Dalila (Opéra, 1867). In 1881 he was appointed professor of harmony at the Paris Cons. — Works: La Cruche cassée (Opéra-Comique, 1870); Le Char (Opéra-Comique, 1878); Le Capitaine Fracasse (1878); Tabarin (Opéra, 1885); Tartarin sur les Alpes (1888); Don Quichotte (1889); Les Folies amoureuses (Opéra-Comique, April 15, 1891; his most successful comic opera); Une Nuit de Noël (1893); Mlle. Carabin (1893); Le Muet (1894); La Dame de trèfles (1898); L'Armée des Vierges (1902); L'Épave (1903); etc. Also Masses, orchestral suites, a piano trio, piano pieces, etc. He enjoyed considerable regard as a composer of fine songs. Debussy copied Pessard's song Chanson d'un fou, and the MS in Debussy's handwriting was publ. erroneously as Debussy's own.

Pessl, Yella (real Christian names Gabriella Elsa), harpsichordist, organist, and pianist; b. Vienna, Jan. 4, 1906. She studied with Alexander Wunderer; joined the Vienna Bach Society, of which Wunderer was president, and played the organ at its concerts at an early age; later was engaged as a harpsichordist at various performances in Vienna. She made her first American appearance in 1931; with the exception of a few tours of Europe, established herself in N. Y.; taught at Columbia Univ.; in 1937 founded the Bach Circle in N. Y.; one of her specialties was the integral performance of Bach's Musical Offering.

Pestalozzi, Heinrich, Swiss composer; b. Wädenswil, near Zürich, Aug. 26, 1878; d. Zürich, Aug. 10, 1940. He studied theology and music in Berlin; was singing teacher there (1902-12); then pastor in Arosa, Switzerland; in 1917 was appointed voice teacher at the Zürich Cons. His many songs and choral works have enjoyed great popularity in Switzerland; a full list is found in Refardt's 'Musikerlexikon der Schweiz.' Pestalozzi publ. several manuals on singing: Individuelle Stimmführung; Kehlkopf-gymnastik; Die deutsche Bühnenaussprache im Gesang; Geheimnisse der Stimmführung; Der Weg zu einer schönen Stimme.

Petchnikov, Alexander, violinist; b. Elets, Russia, Feb. 20, 1873; d. Buenos Aires, Nov. 3, 1949. He was a pupil of Hřimalý at the Moscow Cons., where he won the gold medal; then toured Europe and (1906-07) America; lived several years in Berlin; 'royal prof.' in 1910; 1913-21, prof. at the Royal Academy in Munich; then returned to Berlin, where he founded a string quartet in 1924; 1927, made prof. at the Stern Cons. there. He concertized frequently with his wife, Lily, also an excellent violinist.

Peter, Johann Friedrich, organist and composer; b. Heerendijk, Holland (of German parentage), May 19, 1746; d. Bethlehem, Pa., July 13, 1813. Was educated in Holland and Germany; came to America in 1770. A 'Moravian,' he served his church in various capacities in Nazareth, Bethlehem, and Lititz, Pa., and in Salem, N. C. (1779-89), where he married. He spent the rest of his life mostly in Bethlehem as organist of the church. He was the most conspicuous figure among the Moravians in America. His collection of copies of instrumental works by Stamitz, J. C. F. Bach, and J. Ch. Bach, Abel, Boccherini, and Haydn (preserved in the Archives of the Moravian Church) proves his knowledge of contemporary music. He began to compose in 1770. While at Salem he wrote (in 1789) a set of six quintets for 2 violins, 2 violas, and cello (his only secular works), which appear to be the oldest preserved examples of chamber music composed in America; they were publ., under the editorship of H. T. David, in 1955, for the N. Y. Public Library series, 'Music of the Moravians in America.' His anthems (more than 80) for chorus and with strings and organ, or with woodwinds, strings and organ, are well written, often quite expressive, and evidently constitute the finest and most elaborate concerted church music written in America at that time. Those preserved in the Archives of the Moravian Church at Bethlehem are listed in A. G. Rau's and H. T. David's 'A Catalogue of Music by American Moravians' (Bethlehem, Pa., 1938). — Cf. A. G. Rau, J. F. Peters, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1937); H. T. David, Musical Life in the Pennsylvania Settlements of the Moravians, in 'Proceedings' of the Moravian Historical Society (Bethlehem, 1939); H. T. David, Background for Bethlehem: Moravian Music in Pennsylvania, in 'Magazine of Art' (April, 1939). See also 'Dictionary of American Biography' XIV.

Peter, Simon, 'Moravian' composer; brother of Johann Friedrich Peter; b. Heerendijk, Holland (of German parentage), April 2, 1743; d. Salem, N. C., May 29, 1819. With his brother, he was educated at Moravian Brethren's schools in Holland and Germany; came to America in 1770. His ministry was spent in both the Northern and Southern Provinces of the Moravian Church.

From 1784 to 1819 he lived in North Carolina as pastor of several congregations, and was a member of the governing board of the Church. He composed only a few sacred anthems, but one of these, O Anblick, der mirs Herze bricht, may well be one of the most expressive of all Lenten songs written in America. —Cf. H. T. David, Musical Life in the Pennsylvania Settlements of the Unitas Fratrum, in 'Transactions of the Moravian Historical Society' (1942).

Peterkin, Norman, English composer; b. Liverpool, Dec. 21, 1886. He studied piano and violin; lived in China, where he participated in theatrical activities as composer and conductor. From 1925 till 1947, he was on the staff of the music department of the Oxford Univ. Press. He wrote several ballets, a piano concerto, a piano trio, and other music, some of which has been published.

Peters (pā'-tērs), Carl Friedrich, German music publisher; b. Leipzig, March 30, 1779; d. there, Nov. 20, 1827. In 1814 Peters purchased Kühnel & Hoffmeister's 'Bureau de Musique' (established in 1800; Hoffmeister left the firm in 1805; Kühnel was the sole owner from 1805 to his death in 1813). The firm was thenceforward known as 'C. F. Peters, Bureau de Musique.' Its rich catalogue contained the first edition of collected works of J. S. Bach; it also included music by Beethoven, who entrusted to the 'Bureau de Musique' the publication of his 1st symph., piano concerto, op. 19, septet, op. 20, piano sonata, op. 22, and other works. Later on C. F. Peters acquired works by Weber, Spohr, Czerny, Chopin, Schumann, Wagner, Liszt, and Brahms. In more recent times the works of Mahler, Grieg, Hugo Wolf, Max Reger, Richard Strauss (his 7 symph. poems), and others were publ. From 1868, classical works were publ. in the inexpensive and reliable 'Edition Peters.' Its large and important musical library was opened to the public in 1893 as the 'Bibliothek Peters.' Scholarly annual books ('Peters Jahrbuch') were publ. until 1941, containing articles by eminent musicologists, current bibliography, etc. Dr. Max Abraham (q.v.) was sole proprietor from 1880 to 1900. After his death in 1900, his nephew, Heinrich Hinrichsen (b. Hamburg, Feb. 5, 1868; d. Belgium, Sept., 1942), became head of the firm; from 1927 to 1932 he shared the ownership with his son, Max Hinrichsen (b. Leipzig, July 6, 1901); soon afterwards, two other sons joined the firm—in 1933 Walter Hinrichsen (b. Leipzig, Sept. 23, 1907), and in 1934 Hans Hinrichsen

(b. Leipzig, Aug. 22, 1909; d. Perpignan, France, 1941). The Litolf catalogue was acquired by Peters in 1938. Heinrich Hinrichsen was still in charge in 1939, when the Nazi regime finally forced him into exile, and Johannes Petschull was appointed manager in his stead. After World War II the firm was divided into three separate but closely affiliated companies—Peters Edition, London, under the direction of Max Hinrichsen; C. F. Peters Corporation, New York, owned by Walter Hinrichsen; and the German firm, since 1950 in Frankfurt, under the management of Johannes Petschull. See Hinrichsen, Max, and Hinrichsen, Walter.

Peters, Roberta, American soprano; b. New York, May 4, 1930. She studied singing with William Pierce Herman; made her operatic début with the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., as Zerlina in Don Giovanni on Nov. 17, 1950 (as a substitute on short notice) and subsequently remained on the roster, singing with excellent success such roles as Rosina in Il Barbiere di Siviglia, Susanna in Le Nozze di Figaro, and Gilda in Rigoletto. She was married to Robert Merrill in 1952 (divorced); married Bertram Fields in 1955.

Petersen, Wilhelm, composer; b. Athens, March 15, 1890; d. Darmstadt, Dec. 18, 1957. He studied in Germany, at the Munich Academy with Mottl, Klose, and others (1908-12); was opera coach in Lübeck for a season (1913-14); was in the German army during World War I; then music critic in Munich (1919-22); in 1922 settled in Darmstadt; was instructor in music theory at the Akademie der Tonkunst there (1927-35); in 1935 became prof. of theory at the Cons. of Mannheim; then was again in Darmstadt; from 1945, taught privately in Heidelberg. —Works: opera, Der goldne Topf (Darmstadt, March 29, 1941); 4 symphonies: No. 1 (Nuremberg, 1921), No. 2, Ostersinfonie (Kassel, 1923), No. 3 (Darmstadt, 1934), No. 4 (Ludwigshafen, 1941); sinfonietta, after the 1st string quartet (1934); Eine Trauermusik (1913); 3 string quartets; 2 violin sonatas; a Mass (1929); many sacred works; songs.

Petersilea, Carlyle, American pianist and teacher; b. Boston, Jan. 18, 1844; d. Tropic, near Los Angeles, June 11, 1903. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Moscheles, Reinecke, and others, winning a prize. After a tour in Germany, he returned to Boston; established there the 'Petersilea Academy of Music' (1871); after 15 years, he closed his own school to become a teacher at the New England Cons. (1886); in 1892, went to California. He spent the spring of 1884 with Liszt at Weimar. He publ. technical studies and various pieces for piano.

Peterson, Franklin Sivewright, Scottish music pedagogue; b. Edinburgh, Feb. 24, 1861; d. Melbourne, July, 1914. He studied in Germany; returned to Edinburgh in 1884, and taught there; in 1901 went to Australia; was prof. of music at Melbourne Univ. He publ. Elements of Music (1895; 9th ed., 1899); Introduction to the Story of Music (1897); Pianist's Handbook (1899); Catechism of Music (1900).

Peterson-Berger, (Olof) Wilhelm, Swedish composer; b. Ullånger, Feb. 27, 1867; d. Östersund, Dec. 3, 1942. He studied with J. Dente and O. Bolander at the Stockholm Cons. (1886-89); then in Dresden with H. Scholtz (piano) and E. Kretschmer (composition). After 2 years in Dresden as a music teacher, he settled in Stockholm, where he became music critic of 'Dagens Nyheter' (1896). He was stage director for the Wagner repertory at the Stockholm Opera (1908-10); translated into Swedish some of Wagner's literary works. In Sweden he enjoyed a great reputation both as composer of national music and as critic. A symposium of articles was publ. in Stockholm on the occasion of his 70th birthday (1937). —Works: Sveagaldrar, a festival play for the silver jubilee of the accession of Oscar II (1897); a fairy opera, Lyckan (Luck; Stockholm, 1903); the music dramas, all produced at Stockholm, Ran (May 20, 1903), Arnljot (April 13, 1910), Domedagsprofeterna (1919), Adils och Elisiv (Feb. 27, 1927); 5 symphonies with programmatic subtitles: Baneret (Stockholm, Feb. 23, 1904), Sunnanfärd (Göteborg, March 22, 1911), Same-Åtnam (Stockholm, Dec. 11, 1917), Holmia (Stockholm, April 9, 1930), Solitude (Stockholm, April 11, 1934); violin concerto (Stockholm, Feb. 6, 1929); orchestral ballads; Carnival in Stockholm, for orch.; several cantatas; 2 violin sonatas and other chamber music; several song cycles. —Writings: Svensk Musikkultur (1911); Richard Wagner som kulturföreteelse (Wagner as a Phenomenon of Civilization, 1913; in German as Richard Wagner als Kulturerscheinung, 1917). A selection of his essays was publ. in Stockholm in 2 vols. (1923); another, in 1 vol., in Östersund (1951). His reminiscences were publ. posthumously (Upsala, 1943). —Cf. B. Carlberg, Peterson-Berger (Stockholm, 1950).

Petit (pū-tē'), Raymond, French music critic and composer; b. Neuilly-sur-Seine, July 6, 1893. He studied music with Tournemire in Paris; lived there most of his life; contributed numerous articles on modern music to the 'Revue Musicale' and criticism to 'Le Ménestrel' as well as to some American publications. He wrote an opera, La Sulamithe; Suite grave for orch. (1920); 2 Méditations for string quartet (1921); Dialogue for 2 violins; Hymnus for voice and flute (1924); Il Cantic del sole, for voice and wind instruments (Frankfurt Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, July 3, 1927); songs.

Petrassi, Goffredo, outstanding Italian composer; b. Zagorolo, near Rome, July 16, 1904. He worked as a clerk in a music store in Rome, studying musical compositions in his leisure time; began taking lessons at 21, first with Vincenzo di Donato and then with Alessandro Bustini at the S. Cecilia Academy in Rome; in 1939 was appointed prof. there. Despite the late beginning, Petrassi has acquired a solid technique of composition; the chief influence on him was that of Casella; later he became interested in 12-tone procedures. In 1955-56 he made a tour in the U. S. —Works: operas, Il Cordovano (La Scala, Milan, May 12, 1949) and La Morte dell'Aria (Rome, Oct. 24, 1950); ballets, Ritratto di Don Chisciotte (1945) and La Follia di Orlando (La Scala, Milan, April 12, 1947); for orch.: Overture da concerto (1931), Partita (1932), piano concerto (1939), 5 concertos for orch.: No. 1 (1934), No. 2 (1951), No. 3, subtitled Recréation Concertante (1953), No. 4, for strings (1954), No. 5 (commissioned by the Boston Symph. Orch. for its 75th season and performed in Boston, Dec. 2, 1955), Invenzione concertata, for brass, strings, and percussion (1957); chamber music: Introduzione e Allegro for violin and piano (1933; also for violin and 11 instruments), Preludio, Aria e Finale, for cello and piano (1933), Sonata da Camera for cembalo and 10 instruments (1948), Dialogo angelico for 2 flutes (1948), Musica a due for 2 cellos (1952); vocal works: Psalm IX (1936), Magnificat (1940), Coro di Morti, dramatic madrigal (1941), Quattro Inni Sacri for voice and organ (1942; also with orch., 1950), Noche Oscura, cantata with Spanish and Italian words (1950), Nonsense (to words by Edward Lear), for chorus a cappella (1952); also songs; Invenzioni for piano (1944). —See John S. Weissmann, Goffredo Petrassi (Milan, 1957; in English).

Petrauskas, Kipras, Lithuanian tenor; b. Vilna, Nov. 23, 1885. He studied with his brother, the composer Mikas Petrauskas; appeared in his brother's opera, Birutė (Vilna, Nov. 6, 1906); then became a singer at the Imperial Opera, St. Petersburg (1911-20); also appeared in Berlin, Paris, Milan, and made a tour of the U. S. He returned to Lithuania before World War II, and remained there; in 1950 received the Stalin Prize.

Petrauskas, Mikas, Lithuanian composer; b. Kaunas, Sept. 29, 1873; d. there, March 23, 1937. He studied organ with his father; was church organist at the age of 15; then went to St. Petersburg, where he studied with Rimsky-Korsakov at the Cons. During the abortive revolution of 1905 he became implicated in various political activities and was imprisoned; he was briefly in Vilna, where he produced his opera Birutė (Nov. 6, 1906); in 1907 he emigrated to America; settled in Boston in 1914, and founded the Lithuanian Conservatory in South Boston; with the aid of a Lithuanian chorus there, he produced his operas The Devil Inventor (3 acts; South Boston, May 20, 1923) and Egle, Queen of the Snakes (6 acts; South Boston, May 30, 1924; Petrauskas himself sang the part of the King of the Snakes); cantatas; etc. The Lithuanian Conservatory publ. the piano scores of his operas The King of the Forest (1918) and Egle; he also publ. arrangements of Lithuanian songs in the periodical 'Kankles' (Boston, 1917-21); further publ. a brief dictionary of musical terms in Lithuanian (Boston, 1916) and an album of Lithuanian songs (Boston, 1922). In 1930 he went back to Lithuania.

Petrella, Errico, Italian opera composer; b. Palermo, Dec. 1, 1813; d. Genoa, April 7, 1877. He studied at the Naples Cons. (Collegio di S. Sebastiano) as a pupil of Costa, Bellini, Ruggi, and Zingarelli. His first theatrical attempt was the 2-act opera buffa Il Diavolo color di rosa (Naples, 1829). Being successful, it was followed by some 20 operas, both comic and serious; Le Minière di Freiberg (Naples, 1839) was his finest buffo work; Elnava, o l'Assedio di Leida (Milan, March 4, 1856), the best in the serious style. Marco Visconti (Naples, Feb. 9, 1854) obtained immediate popularity in Italy, and La Contessa d'Amalfi (Turin, March 8, 1864) also had a notable success. Other operas were Ione, after Bulwer Lytton's novel, The Last Days of Pompeii (Milan, Jan. 26, 1858), Gio- vanni II di Napoli (Naples, Feb. 27, 1869), I promessi sposi (Lecco, Oct. 2, 1869), and Bianca Orsini (Naples, April 4, 1874). During a quarter of a century he vied with Verdi in Italian favor, but his lack of a true sense of dramatic development and his dependence on Bellini and Donizetti as models caused his operas to appear old-fashioned without a redeeming freshness. Despite his many productions, he died in poverty. —Cf. F. Guardione, Di Errico Petrella e della traslazione della salma da Genova a Palermo (Palermo, 1908); G. Siciliano, Di Errico Petrella, musicista palermitano (Palermo, 1913).

Petrelli, Eleanora, Swedish soprano; b. Simtuna, April 9, 1835; d. Chicago, Feb. 21, 1904. Her maiden name was Wigström; while touring Finland as a member of a small theatrical company, she married a wealthy Russian named Petrov, and Italianized her married name to Petrelli. She studied in Milan with Lamperti, and in Paris with Mme. Viardot-Garcia. After her husband died in 1869, she virtually abandoned the stage, but continued to give concerts in Russia, Germany, and Scandinavian countries. In 1886 she settled in Stockholm, but soon went to Chicago, where she established a school for vocal culture. She publ. a number of songs.

Petri, Egon, distinguished pianist; b. Hanover, March 23, 1881; he was educated in a musical family; his father was the Dutch violinist, Henri Wilhelm Petri (1856-1914). He studied violin before he began to take piano lessons with Teresa Carreño. As a boy he played 2nd violin in a string quartet organized by his father in Dresden. He then went to Berlin, where he became a pupil of Busoni, who influenced Petri's own conception of piano playing as the fullest representation, by a single instrument, of the sonorities of an orchestra; he played with Busoni in London in 1921, in a concert for 2 pianos; made an extensive tour in Russia in 1923. He established himself as an eminent pedagogue in Europe; was teacher of piano at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (1921-26); presented a series of concerts in the U. S. (American début, N. Y., Jan. 11, 1932); then lived in Zakopane, Poland; in 1939 he settled in the U. S.; taught at Cornell Univ. (1940-46); in 1947 became prof. of piano at Mills College, Oakland, Calif. In the autumn of 1957 he returned to Europe, to teach advanced piano classes at the Academy of Music of Basel.

Petridis, Petro, Greek composer; b. Nigdé, Asia Minor, July 23, 1892. He studied at the American College in Constantinople and at the Univ. of Paris (political science); participated in the Balkan war of 1911-12 as a member of the Greek army; then returned to Paris, where he took lessons with Albert Wolff and Albert Roussel. He first essayed composition in 1917, with his songs, Le Rayon and Berceuse; continued to live in Paris, but also visited London and other European centers. In 1939 he went back to Athens; wrote there the oratorio Saint Paul, to celebrate the 1900th anniversary of St. Paul's sojourn in Greece. —Works: opera, Zemphyra (1923-25); oratorio, St. Paul (Athens, June 29, 1951, composer conducting); A Byzantine Requiem (1952); 5 symphonies (1928, 1940, 1941, 1943, 1951); Panighiri, suite of Greek tableaux for orch.; Suite grecque; Suite ionienne; piano concerto; chamber music; a number of songs.

Petrov (pět-rōhv'), Ossip Afanassievitch, Russian basso; b. Elizavetgrad, Nov. 15, 1807; d. St. Petersburg, March 14, 1878. The intendant of the Imperial Opera accidentally heard him in 1830, singing with an inferior company at a fair in Kursk, and immediately engaged him. Petrov made his début in St. Petersburg as Sarastro in The Magic Flute. The enormous compass of his voice, its extraordinary power and beautiful quality, combined with consummate histrionic skill, secured for him recognition as one of the greatest of Russian basses; this place he held throughout his long career (he appeared on the stage for the last time March 10, 1878, 4 days before his death). He created the roles of Sussanin in Glinka's Life for the Tsar (1836), Russlan in Russlan and Ludmilla (1842); the Miller in Dargomyzhsky's Russalka (1856), and Varlaam in Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov (1874). —Cf. Recollections of the 50th Anniversary of O. A. Petrov (St. Petersburg, 1876); V. Stassov, O. A. Petrov, in vol. III of his collected works (St. Petersburg, 1894); A. Kompaneisky, A Great Russian Singer, in 'Russkaya Muzykal'naya Gazeta' (1903, No. 9); E. Lastotchkina, Ossip Petrov (Moscow, 1950).

Petrucchi (pěh-trōōch'-chē), Ottaviano dei, Italian music-publisher, the first to print a complete collection of part-songs from movable type; b. Fossombrone, June 18, 1466; d. there, May 7, 1539. In 1498 he received from the Council of the Republic of Venice the privilege of printing music by this new method for 20 years, and worked there industriously 1501-11, then ceding the business to A. Scotto and N. da Rafael, and removing to Fossombrone, with a 15-year privilege for printing within the Papal States. His editions, printed with great neatness, are rare and highly prized specimens of early press-work. In Fossombrone he labored from 1513-23. His publications appeared at the most flourishing epoch of the Netherlands School, and his first work, Odhecaton (1501), contains 96 numbers (modern ed. by Helen Hewitt, Cambridge, Mass., 1942), Canti B. (1502) and Canti C. (1503), 49 and 137, respectively, by famous composers before 1501. Petrucci's last publications were 3 books of Masses (1520-23) printed in folio as chorus books. Books I and IV of the 9 books of frottole publ. in Venice from 1504-08 by Petrucci were ed. by R. Schwartz in Jg. 8 of Th. Kroyer's 'Publikationen älterer Musik' (Leipzig, 1933-35). —Cf. A. Schmid, O. d. Petrucci . . . (Vienna, 1845; contains full list of works known at the time; Italian by B. Revel, in 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale,' Milan, 1931-33); A. Vernarecci, O. d. Petrucci . . . (Bologna, 2nd ed., 1882); J. B. Weckerlin, Petrucchi Harmonice musices odhecaton (Paris, 1885); E. Vogel, Der erste . . . Notendruck für Figuralmusik, in 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1895; full list of contents of Odhecaton); M. Cauchie, L'Odhecaton, recueil de musique instrumentale, in 'Revue de musicologie' (Nov., 1925) and A propos des trois recueils instrumentaux de la série de l'Odhecaton, ib. (May, 1928); J. Marix, Harmonice Musices Odhecaton, A. ib. (Nov., 1935); K. Jeppesen, Die neuentdeckten Bücher der Lauden des O. d. Petrucci, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (Nov., 1929); G. Reese, The First Printed Collection of Part-Music: The Odhecaton, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1934); A. Catelani, Due stampe ignote di O. Petrucci (1856; reprinted in 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale,' Milan, 1932); C. Sartori, A Little-Known Petrucci Publication, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1948); C. Sartori, Bibliografia delle opere musicali stampate da O. Petrucci (Florence, 1948). A facsimile ed. of the Odhecaton was publ. by the 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale' (Milan, 1932).

Petrus Platensis. See La Rue.

Petrželka (pěh-trzhěhl'-käh), Vilém, noted Czech composer; b. Královo Pole, near Brno, Sept. 10, 1889. He studied in Brno with Janáček and in Prague with Novák. In 1910 he became Janáček's assistant at the School for Organists in Brno; in 1919, was appointed to the faculty of the Cons. of Brno.

In his compositions Petrželka continued the national tradition of modern Moravian music; he was mainly influenced by Janáček; but he expanded his resources, and upon occasion made use of jazz rhythms, quarter-tones, and other modernistic devices. —Works: Věčný Návrat (Eternal Return), symph. poem (Brno, Feb. 10, 1924); Námořník Mikuláš (Mariner Nicholas), symph. drama for recitation, soli, chorus, organ, jazz band, and orch., employing quarter-tones (Brno, Dec. 9, 1930); Dramatic Overture (Brno, March 26, 1933); Partita, for string orch. (Brno, May 3, 1935); Sinfonietta (Brno, Jan. 22, 1942); violin concerto (1942); 4 string quartets; Z intimních chvíl (From Intimate Moments) for violin and piano (1918); Modlitba k slunci (Hymn to the Sun) for chorus and orch. (Brno, Feb. 13, 1922); Cesta (The Way), song cycle for tenor and small orch. (also with piano; 1924); Štáfeta (The Courier), songs with string quartet (1927); an opera, Horník Pavel (1935-38; not performed); a number of choruses; of these, the patriotic part-song for male chorus To Je Má Zem (This Is My Land), written and performed in 1940, is well known; also arrangements of folksongs; piano pieces. —Cf. L. Firkušný, Vilém Petrželka (Prague, 1946).

Petschnikoff. See Petchnikov.

Pettis, Ashley Burnett, American pianist and music scholar; b. Sutter Creek, Calif., Nov. 13, 1892. He studied in San Francisco, New York, and Berlin; taught at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester (1925-31) and later at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y. In 1935 he established in N. Y. the Composers Forum Laboratory, as part of the educational program of the Federal Music Project; as its director for 15 years, he presented periodical concerts, each dedicated to works by one or two American composers. In 1951 he entered the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church; resided in Rome. He publ. a book, Music: Now and Then (N. Y., 1955); collaborated with C. V. Bos in writing The Well-Tempered Accompanist (Bryn Mawr, 1949).

Petryrek, Felix, composer; b. Brno, May 14, 1892; d. Vienna, Dec. 1, 1951. He studied piano with Godowsky and Sauer; composition with Schreker at the Vienna Univ. (graduated in 1919). He taught piano at the Salzburg Mozarteum (1919-21); then at the Orchestral School of the Berlin Hochschule für Musik (1921-23); lived in Italy (1923-26); taught composition at the Odeon Athenon, in Athens (1926-30); from 1930 to 1939, at the Stuttgart Akademie für Musik; then went to Leipzig (until 1944); after 1945, settled in Vienna. Among modern composers, he occupied a fairly advanced position; in his melodic writing, he adopted the scale of alternating whole tones and semitones as a compromise between tonality and atonality. —Works: Der Garten des Paradieses, opera after Andersen (1923-41; Leipzig, Nov. 1, 1942); Die arme Mutter und der Tod, fairy play after Andersen with small orch. (Winterthur, 1923); the pantomimes Tahi and Komödie; Die Litanei, for boys' chorus, 2 trumpets, 2 harps, and percussion (Zürich Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 21, 1926); Sinfonietta; Divertimento for 8 wind instruments; piano trio; Tänze, for 2 flutes; sextet for clarinet, string quartet, and piano (Donauessingen Festival, July 30, 1922); piano trio; songs; piano pieces.

Petz (Pez), Johann Christoph, German composer; b. Munich, Sept. 9, 1664; d. Stuttgart, Sept., 1716. He was employed as a chorister in Munich while still a child (1676-86); then resided in Liège and in Bonn (until 1705); in 1706 was appointed court conductor at Stuttgart, where he remained until his death. He publ. a set of 12 sonatas (Augsburg, 1696) under the title Duplex Genus sive Gallo-italus Instrumentorum Conventus; also a Psalm. Two of his operas were produced in Bonn. Instrumental and vocal works were publ. by B. A. Wallner in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vol. 27-28; 1928).

Petzet, Walter, German pianist, composer, and music editor; b. Breslau, Oct. 10, 1866; d. Dresden, Aug. 13, 1941. He studied with Kleffel in Augsburg; later at the Munich Academy with Rheinberger and others; in 1887 went to Minneapolis, where he taught piano until 1890; from 1891 to 1896 taught piano at the Scharwenka Cons. in N. Y.; in 1896 succeeded Busoni as prof. at the Helsingfors Cons.; from 1898 to 1910, was prof. at the Cons. of Karlsruhe; subsequently taught at the Weimar Cons. (1910-13), at the Klindworth Scharwenka Cons. in Berlin (1913-16), and at the Dresden Cons. (1917-21); lived mostly in Dresden. He wrote 2 piano concertos, numerous piano pieces, etc.; wrote music criticism for the 'Signale für die musikalische Welt.'

Petzold, Rudolf, composer and teacher; b. Liverpool, England (of a German father and English mother), July 17, 1908. He studied with Jarnach in Cologne; in 1946 was appointed teacher at the Hochschule für Musik there. He has written a number of orchestral works; also church music; a string trio; 2 string quartets; song cycles; pedagogical works.

Petzoldt, Richard, German musicologist; b. Plauen, Nov. 12, 1907. He studied in Berlin with Abert, Schering, Moser, Sachs, Hornbostel, Schünemann, and Blume; received his Dr. phil. with the dissertation Die Kirchenkompositionen und weltlichen Kantaten Reinhard Keisers (Düsseldorf, 1935). In 1934 he became editor of the 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung'; in 1939 went to Leipzig; in 1945 joined the faculty of the Univ. there; was editor of the periodical 'Musik in der Schule' (1949-54). —Publications: Beethoven (1938; 4th ed., 1947); Schubert (1940; 2nd ed., 1947); Schumann (1941; 2nd ed., 1947); Mozart (1948); J. S. Bach und Leipzig (1950); Die Oper in ihrer Zeit (1956); compiled iconographies of Bach (1950), Schubert (1953), Beethoven (1953), Tchaikovsky (1953); Handel (1955), Glinka (1955), Schumann (1956), Mozart (1956); wrote numerous articles for German publications.

Peuerl (Peurl, Bäwerl, Bäurl, Beurlin), Paul, Austrian organist; b. c. 1570; d. c. 1624. He was organist at Horn, Lower Austria (1602) and of the Protestant church school in Steyer (1609-24). He is generally acknowledged to be the originator of the German variation-suite; following the example of the lutenists, he expanded the earlier combination of pavane and galliard into a new 4-movement form for string quartet. He edited Neue Padouan, Intrada, Däntz und Galliarda (1611); Weltspiegel, das ist: Neue teutsche Gesänge (1613); Ettliche lustige Padouanen, Intrada, Galliard, Couranten und Däntz sampt zweyen Canzon zu 4 Stimmen (1620); Gantz Neue Padouanen, Aufzüg, Balletten, Couranten, Intradan und Däntz (1625). Selections from his works, ed. by Karl Geiringer, appeared in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 70). —Cf. E. Noack, Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der älteren deutschen Suite, in the 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. II, 2); P. Nettel, Zur Lebensgeschichte Paul Peuerls, in the 'Bulletin de la Société Musicologique' (vol. V, 1); K. Geiringer, Paul Peuerl, in 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (vol. XVI; Vienna, 1929; pp. 32-69); E. Mohr, Die Allemande (Zürich, 1932; p. 70 ff.); H. J. Moser, Die Musik im frühewangelischen Österreich (Kassel, 1953; p. 37 ff.).

Pevernage, Andries, Flemish composer; b. Courtrai, 1543; d. Antwerp, July 30, 1591. He was a boy chorister in Courtrai; then was chorusmaster at Bruges (1563); returned to Courtrai and held the post of chorusmaster at a church there from 1564 until 1585, when he went to Antwerp as master of the choristers at the Cathedral. He was greatly honored there, and was buried in the Cathedral itself. He wrote a number of vocal works, sacred and secular. Three books of his spiritual chansons were publ. in 1589, 1590, and 1591; other collections were publ. posthumously. —Cf. J. A. Stelfeld, Andries Pevernage (Louvain, 1943).

Peyko, Nicolay Ivanovitch, Russian composer; b. Moscow, March 25, 1916. He studied with Miaskovsky at the Moscow Cons., graduating in 1939. He then was commissioned to collect folksong materials in the remote Yakutsk district of Siberia; wrote a Suite on Yakutsk themes for orch. (1941); then investigated Bashkir music, and composed a Bashkir opera, Aykhylyu; also a Tartar ballet, Spring Winds (1950). Other works include 3 symphonies (1944; 1946; 1950) and a Suite on Russian Themes for orch. (1949); Festive Overture on Kabardin themes (1951); a Concert Fantasy on Finnish themes, for violin and orch. (1953); piano concerto (1954); piano pieces; songs. His most successful work is a Moldavian Suite, for orch. (Moscow, Dec. 14, 1950).

Peyser, Ethel Rose, American writer on music; b. New York, March 6, 1887. She was educated at Vassar College, Barnard College, and Teachers College, N. Y.; was a member of the editorial dept. of the N. Y. 'Tribune' (1912-14), N. Y. 'Evening Mail' (1914); music critic of the 'Musical Leader' (1926-34). She wrote How to Enjoy Music (N. Y., 1933), The Book of Culture (1934), and The House That Music Built (on Carnegie Hall; N. Y., 1936). Together with Marion Bauer, she publ. the successful books on music history How Music Grew (N. Y., 1925; 2nd rev. ed., 1946) and Music Through the Ages (N. Y., 1932); also How Opera Grew (N. Y., 1956).

Peyser, Herbert Francis, American music critic, b. New York, Aug. 6, 1886; d. there, Oct. 19, 1953. He studied in Germany and France; returning to America, he took the B. A. degree at Columbia Univ. (1909). From 1909 to 1920 he was music critic of 'Musical America'; then assistant to Henry T. Finck on the N. Y. 'Evening Post' and (from 1924 to 1940) associate music critic of the N. Y. 'World Telegram.' In 1930 he became foreign music correspondent of the N. Y. 'Times' in Berlin, Vienna, and Paris (until 1939). In 1940 he returned to N. Y. For 4 seasons (1949-53) he was program annotator for the N. Y. Philharmonic; collaborated with L. Biancolli in the book Masters of the Orchestra (N. Y., 1953).

Pezel (Petzold, Petzel, Pezelius, etc.), Johann Christoph, German musician; b. Calau, 1639; d. Bautzen, Oct. 13, 1694. He was a municipal trumpeter in Leipzig (1664-81) and Bautzen; publ. several collections of pieces for wind instruments: Musica vespertina Lipsica (1669); Hora decima (1670); Intraden (1676); Deliciae musicales (1678), etc. His most interesting work is Fünfstimmigte blasende Musik (Frankfurt, 1685; 3 pieces arranged for modern brass ensemble by Robert D. King, and publ. in Wakefield, Mass.). Selections from various of his works were ed. by A. Schering in 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 63).

Pfannstiehl, Bernhard, German organist; b. Schmalkalden, Dec. 18, 1861; d. Freiburg, Oct. 21, 1940. He became blind in infancy, and was educated at the Institute for the Blind in Leipzig; studied piano at the Leipzig Cons.; was thrice winner of the Mendelssohn Prize. Following Liszt's advice, he made a specialty of the organ; was church organist in Leipzig (1896-1903), in Chemnitz (1903-11), and at the Kreuzkirche, Dresden (1912-34). He enjoyed a great reputation as an interpreter of Bach. —Cf. K. Hasse, Bernhard Pfannstiehl, in 'Die Orgel' (1910).

Pfatteicher, Karl Friedrich, American specialist in church music and pedagogue; b. Easton, Pa., Sept. 22, 1882; d. Philadelphia, Sept. 29, 1957. He studied theology (Th. D. from Harvard Univ.); then went to Germany (Ph. D. from the Univ. of Freiburg); taught Latin and German at Lafayette College; in 1912 became prof. of music at Phillips Academy, Andover; held this post until 1947; in 1947-48, was lecturer in music, Trinity Univ., San Antonio, Texas; 1948-49, at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.; in 1949, became lecturer in musicology at the Univ. of Pennsylvania. —Publications: John Red- ford (in English; Kassel, 1934); The Christian Church Year in Chorals (1917); The Christian Church Year in Part Songs (1915); Thesaurus musicae sacrae (1920); The Oxford American Hymnal (1930); was co-editor of The Office Hymns of the Church in their Plainsong Settings and The Church Organist's Golden Treasury.

Pfeiffer, Georges-Jean, French composer; b. Versailles, Dec. 12, 1835; d. Paris, Feb. 14, 1908. He began his career as a pianist; then was active as music critic in Paris; was a member of the firm Pleyel, Wolff et Cie., piano makers at Paris. —Works: operetta, Capitaine Roche (1862); 1-act opera, L'Enclume (Paris, 1884); comic opera, Le Légataire universel (Paris, 1901); an oratorio, Hagar; a symph. poem, Jeanne d'Arc; Légende, symph. fantasy for piano and orch.; many pieces of chamber music; also piano pieces.

Pfeiffer, Theodor, German pianist and pedagogue; b. Heidelberg, Oct. 20, 1853; d. Baden-Baden, Nov. 9, 1929. He studied piano with Hans von Bülow at Raff's Cons. in Frankfurt. In 1889 he settled in Baden-Baden as private teacher. He publ. a number of valuable studies: Studien nach Kreutzerschen Violin-Etuden gebildet; Tonleiter-schule; Virtuosen-Studien (in part preparatory studies for Bülow's editions); also wrote a Mass, songs, men's choruses, and piano pieces (Albumblatt, Dryadenspiel, Mazurka-Caprice, Konzert-Etüde, etc.). His recollections of Bülow's remarks in teaching specific works were publ. as Studien bei Hans von Bülow (1894; 6th ed., 1909).

Pfitzner, Hans (Erich), eminent German composer; b. Moscow (of German parents), May 5, 1869; d. Salzburg, May 22, 1949. He studied at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt with James Kwast (piano) and Iwan Knorr (composition); married Kwast's daughter in 1899. He taught piano and theory at the Cons. of Coblenz (1892-93); was assistant conductor of the Municipal Theater in Mainz (1894-96); teacher at Stern's Cons. in Berlin (1897-1906); conductor in the Theater des Westens (1903-06). During the 1907-08 season he led the renowned Kaim Concerts in Munich. From 1908 to 1916 he was in Strasbourg as municipal music director and director of the Cons.; from 1910 to 1916, also 1st conductor at the Strasbourg Opera; conducted some concerts of the Munich Konzertverein (1919-20); then led a master class at the Berlin Academy of Arts (1920-29); prof. of composition at the Akademie der Tonkunst in Munich (1930-33); after that he devoted himself chiefly to composition, appearing frequently as guest conductor of his own works, and accompanist in recitals of his songs. In 1944 he went to Vienna; stricken by poverty and illness, he was taken to a home for the aged in Munich, and later to Salzburg. Charged with active participation in the cultural propaganda of the Nazi regime, he appeared before the Denazification Court in Munich in 1948, but was exonerated. —Pfitzner enjoyed great esteem in Germany as a national composer; his initial successes were considerable. When he presented a concert of his works in Berlin on May 12, 1893, he was hailed by the press as a talent of the first magnitude. After the 1st performance of his opera, Der arme Heinrich, in Mainz on April 2, 1895, the critics (Humperdinck among them) praised the work in extravagant terms; even more successful was his opera Palestrina (to his own libretto), produced in Munich on June 12, 1917. A Pfitzner Society was formed in Munich as early as 1904; and a Hans Pfitzner Association, in Berlin in 1938, with Furtwängler as president. Although his music was traditional in style and conservative in harmony, he was regarded as a modernist, a comrade-in-arms of Richard Strauss; very soon, however, his fame began to dwindle; there were fewer performances of his operas, and still fewer of his instrumental works; he himself bitterly complained of this lack of appreciation. Revivals of some of his best music (Palestrina, songs, etc.) were not supported by public interest. Outside Germany, his compositions are virtually unknown. —Works: operas: Der arme Heinrich (Mainz, April 2, 1895), Die Rose vom Liebesgarten (Elberfeld, Nov. 9, 1901), Das Christelflein (Munich, Dec. 11, 1906; revised version, Dresden, Dec. 11, 1917), Palestrina (Munich, June 12, 1917), Das Herz (Munich, Nov. 12, 1931); for orch.: 3 preludes from Palestrina (1917), symph. no. 1, in C♯ minor (arranged from string quartet no. 2, 1933), Kleine Sinfonie (1939), Elegie und Reigen (1940), symph. no. 2, in C major (1940), Fantasie (1947), piano concerto (1922), violin concerto (1923), 2 cello concertos (1935; 1944); chamber music: cello sonata (1890), piano trio (1896), 3 string quartets (1903; 1925; 1942), piano quartet (1908), violin sonata (1918), sextet for clarinet, violin, viola, cello, double-bass, and piano (1945); vocal works: Der Blumen Rache, ballad for contralto, women's voices, and orch. (1888), Columbus, for chorus a cappella (1905), Gesang der Barden, for men's chorus with instruments (1906), Von deutscher Seele, cantata for soli, chorus, orch., and organ (1921), Das dunkle Reich, for soprano, baritone, chorus, orch., and organ (1929), Fons salutaris for chorus and orch. (1942), Herr Oluf, ballad for baritone and orch. (1891), Die Heinzelmännchen, for baritone and orch. (1903); Zwei deutsche Gesänge, for baritone, men's chorus, and orch. (1916), Lethe, for baritone and orch. (1926), 106 songs for voice and piano. He further publ. arrangements and new editions of musical works by E. T. A. Hoffmann, Schumann, Marschner, and Loewe; also numerous essays and pamphlets, polemical in nature, with virulent attacks against modern ideas in theory; these were publ. as Gesammelte Schriften (Augsburg, 1926; 2 vols.; new ed. in 3 vols., Munich, 1929); also Eindrücke und Erinnerungen (Hamburg, 1947); Über musikalische Inspiration (Berlin, 1940); Philosophie und Dichtung in meinem Leben (Berlin, 1944). A list of Pfitzner's works was publ. by A. Berrsche (Munich, 1919; 2nd ed., 1926). —Bibliography: P. N. Cossmann, Hans Pfitzner (Munich, 1904); R. Louis, Hans Pfitzners 'Die Rose vom Liebesgarten'—Eine Streitschrift (Munich, 1904); R. Louis, Hans Pfitzner (Leipzig, 1907); A. Berrsche, Hans Pfitzners 'Der arme Heinrich' (1910); A. Seidl, Hans Pfitzner (1921); C. Wandrey, Hans Pfitzner, seine geistige Persönlichkeit und das Ende der Romantik (1922); W. Lütge, Hans Pfitzner (1924); E. Kroll, Hans Pfitzner (1924); 'Pfitzner-Festschrift' (1930); W. Abendroth, Hans Pfitzner (1935; basic biography); E. Valentin, Hans Pfitzner: Werk und Gestalt eines Deutschen (Regensburg, 1939); J. Müller-Blattau, Hans Pfitzner (Potsdam, 1940); H. Lindlar, Hans Pfitzners Klavierlied (Würzburg, 1940); W. Abendroth, Hans Pfitzner: sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1941); J. Bahle, Hans Pfitzner und der geniale Mensch (Constance, 1949); Hans Rutz, Hans Pfitzner: Musik zwischen den Zeiten (Vienna, 1949); a symposium of articles, Hans Pfitzner zum 75. Geburtstag (Cologne, 1944); Hans Pfitzner, ein Bild in Widmung, anlässlich seines 75. Geburtstages, ed. by W. Abendroth (Leipzig, 1944); In Memoriam Hans Pfitzner (Vienna, 1950).

Pflughaupt, Robert, German pianist; b. Berlin, Aug. 4, 1833; d. Aix-la-Chapelle, June 12, 1871. He studied with Dehn in Berlin, Henselt in St. Petersburg, and Liszt in Weimar. He wrote a number of agreeable piano pieces (Petite valse, Mazurka, Galop de concert, Invitation à la Polka, etc.). His wife, Sophie Pflughaupt (née Shtchepin; b. Dvinsk, Russia, March 15, 1837; d. Aix-la-Chapelle, Nov. 10, 1867), was also an excellent pianist, a pupil of Henselt and Liszt.

Pfohl, Ferdinand, writer on music; b. Elbogen, Bohemia, Oct. 12, 1862; d. Hamburg, Dec. 16, 1949. He studied law in Prague; in 1885, went to Leipzig, where he took private lessons in music with Oscar Paul. In 1892 he became the music critic of the influential 'Hamburger Nachrichten,' holding this important post until his retirement in 1932; also taught (from 1908) music theory and esthetics at Vogt's Cons. in Hamburg. —Publications: Die moderne Oper (1894); Die Nibelungen in Bayreuth (1897); Arthur Nikisch als Mensch und Künstler (Leipzig, 1900; 2nd ed., 1925); Karl Grammann. Ein Künstlerleben (Berlin, 1910); Richard Wagner. Sein Leben und Schaffen (1911; 4th ed., 1924); Beethoven (1922); also descriptions of African music: Quer durch Afrika (1891) and West-Östliche Fahrten (1902); publ. guides to Wagner's operas. His original compositions include the symph. poems Die versunkene Glocke, Pierrot lunaire, and Frau Holle; a symph. fantasy, Das Meer; male choruses; piano pieces; songs.

Pfordten, Hermann Ludwig von der, German writer on music; b. Munich, July 5, 1857; d. there, Nov. 16, 1933. He was the son of a Bavarian minister; studied in Munich and in Leipzig; became prof. of music history at the Univ. of Munich; he specialized in writing about Wagner's music. —Publications: Handlung und Dichtung der Bühnenwerke Richard Wagners (1893; 8th ed., 1922); Musikalische Essays (2 vols.; 1897; 1899); Deutsche Musik (1917; 3rd ed., 1922); Der Musikfreund, an introductory book on music (1923; 8th ed., 1928); Einführung in Wagners Werke und Schriften (3rd ed., 1925); popular biographies of Beethoven (1907; 4th ed., 1922), Mozart (1908; 3rd ed., 1926), Schubert (1916; 3rd ed., 1928), Weber (1919), Schumann (1920), and Robert Franz (1923).

Pfrogner, Hermann, Austrian musicologist; b. Graz, Jan. 17, 1911; studied law at the Univ. of Vienna; held various positions in financial institutions; studied musicology with E. Schenk (1945-47); in 1948 settled in Stuttgart. He has contributed numerous articles on modern harmony to various periodicals; publ. a fundamental essay dealing with 12-tone composition, Die Zwölf- ordnung der Töne (1953); also Musik, Geschichte ihrer Deutung (1954).

Pfundt, Ernst Gotthold Benjamin, celebrated German timpani player; b. Domnitzsch, near Torgau, June 17, 1806; d. Leipzig, Dec. 7, 1871. He studied theology, and at the same time developed an extraordinary ability as a drummer; was called by Mendelssohn in 1835 to join the Gewandhaus Orch., and remained there as drummer until his death; achieved legendary fame for his rhythmic skill. He was the inventor of the pedal kettledrums; publ. a method for drums (1849; 3rd ed., enlarged to include the snare-drum, by H. Schmidt, 1894).

Phalèse (fāh-leh'z'), Pierre (Petrus Phalesius), Flemish music publisher; b. Louvain, c. 1510; d. there, c. 1573. He established a music publishing business in 1545; the printing was done elsewhere, and it was not until 1553 that Phalèse began to print on the premises in Louvain. From 1570 he worked in association with Jean Bellère of Antwerp. After the death of Pierre Phalèse, the business was moved to Antwerp (1581), and was managed by his sons, Pierre Jr. and Corneille; continued under the management of the heirs until about 1674. Two compositions by Pierre Phalèse, the elder, are found in A. Scherling's Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (No. 134). —Cf. A. Goovaerts, Notice biographique sur Phalèse (1869); A. Goovaerts, Histoire et bibliographie de la typographie musicale dans le Pays-Bas (1880).

Phelps, Ellsworth C., American organist and composer; b. Middletown, Conn., Aug. 11, 1827; d. Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 29, 1913. Self-taught in music, he became organist in New London at the age of 19; settled in Brooklyn in 1857; held various positions as organist and taught in the public schools. He wrote several symphonic works in a programmatic genre, usually on American subjects: Hiawatha (1878), Emancipation (1880), etc.; pieces for military band (performed by Gilmore and Sousa), etc.; more than 200 pieces in all, in every style.

Phile (Fyles, Pfeil, Phyla, etc.), Philip, violinist and teacher; b. Germany, c. 1734; d. Philadelphia, between Aug. 1 and Nov. 9, 1793, in a yellow-fever epidemic. He served in the Pennsylvania German Regiment during the Revolutionary War; was transferred in July 1778 to the Invalid Regiment; discharged on Jan. 4, 1783; pension granted, July 11, 1785. He was active in Philadelphia and New York; gave concerts; played in theater orchestras; conducted the orchestra of the Old American Co. of Comedians. He was probably the composer of the music of the President's March, to which Joseph Hopkinson (son of Francis Hopkinson) wrote the words Hail Columbia. He also wrote a piece entitled Harmony Music for the series of summer concerts at Gray's Gardens in Philadelphia. —Cf. O. G. Sonneck, Report on the 'Star Spangled Banner,' 'Hail Columbia,' etc. (Washington, 1909); J. T. Howard, Our American Music (N. Y., 1931 and later eds.).

Philidor (real name Danican), famous family of French musicians.—(1) Jean Danican-Philidor, d. Paris, Sept. 8, 1679, as 'Phiphre de Grande Écurie' (piper in the King's military band).—(2) André Danican-Philidor (Painé), d. Dreux, Aug. 11, 1730. As a youth, he was cromorne player in the above band, later of the King's private band (oboe, cromorne, trompette marine, and bassoon). As assistant librarian of the Royal Music Library at Versailles, he made a fine MS collection of old instrumental pieces performed at court since the time of François I. A MS copy (35 vols.) of this collection is in the Library of Congress, Washington. He composed masques and ballets for the court, and military music (marches, etc.).—Publ. works: Mascarade des Savoyards (1700); Mascarade du roi de la Chine (1700); Suite de danses pour les violons et hautbois . . . (1699); Pièces à deux basses de viole, basse de violon et basson . . . (1700); Marches et batteries de tambour . . . avec les airs de fifres et de hautbois. — (3) Anne Danican-Philidor, André's eldest son; b. Paris, April 11, 1681; d. there, Oct. 8, 1728. A flute player, he composed pastoral operas (L'Amour vainqueur, 1697; Diane et Endymion, 1698; Danaë, 1701), and publ. music for flutes, violins, and oboes. He founded the Concert Spirituel (1725).—(4) Pierre Danican-Philidor, flute player; b. Paris, Aug. 22, 1681; d. there, Sept. 1, 1731. Publ. 3 books of suites for 2 transverse flutes (1717, 1718), and flute trios. —(5) François André Danican-Philidor, last and greatest of the family, the youngest son of André; b. Dreux, Sept. 7, 1726; d. London, Aug. 24, 1795. Camppra was his teacher in music, but chess was for a long time his master passion, and after vanquishing many celebrated Continental players, he wrote an Analyse du jeu d'échecs, which he publ. in London in 1749, where he commenced a series of victories at the London Chess Club, later receiving a pension from the Club. From 1756 he appeared in the unexpected role of a successful composer of comic operas. His first stage work was Le Diable à quatre, an opera-pot-pourri, in 3 acts, arranged from popular airs. It was produced at the Opéra-Comique on Aug. 19, 1756; there followed the opera-ballet Le Retour du printemps; these were succeeded by several one-act pieces (Blaise le savetier, 1759; L'Huitre et les plaideurs, 1759; Le Quiproquo ou Le Volage fixé, 1760; Le Soldat magicien, 1760; Le Jardinier et son seigneur, 1761); then one of his best, in 2 acts, Le Maréchal ferrant (1761), performed over 200 times; followed by more one-act pieces (Sancho Panga, 1762; Le Bûcheron, ou Les trois souhaits, 1763). Then came Le Sorcier, in 2 acts (Jan. 2, 1764) and Tom Jones, in 3 acts (Feb. 27, 1765); the latter had great vogue, and contained a noteworthy novelty, a quartet a cappella. In 1767 appeared his finest effort, the grand opera Ernelinde, princesse de Norvège (Nov. 24, 1767; revised in 1769 as Sandomir, prince de Danemark). Le Jardinier de Sidon (1768), L'Amant déguisé (1769), La nouvelle école des femmes (1770), Le bon fils (1773), Zémire et Mélide (1773), Berthe (Brussels, 1775, with Gossec and Botson), Les Femmes vengées (1775), Le Puits d'amour (1779), Persée (1780), L'Amitié au village (1785), Thémistocle (1786), La belle esclave (1787), and Le Mari comme il les faudrait tous (1788) close the long list. A posthumous opera, Bélisaire, finished by Berton, was produced in 1796. —Philidor surpassed his rivals Grétry and Monsigny both in skilfulness of orchestration and richness and correctness of harmony, though he was their inferior in dramatic expression and melodic charm. He was adored by the Parisians; but his love for chess caused him to forsake them at frequent intervals for the neighbors across the Channel. He also wrote church music; a set of 12 Ariettes périodiques (in alternation with Trial) for vocal solo with violin, bass, oboe, and horn; L'Art de la modulation, quartets for 2 violins, oboe, and bass; etc. —Cf. J. Lardin, Philidor peint par lui-même (Paris, 1847); G. Allen, The Life of Philidor (Philadelphia, 1858); A. Pougin, Philidor, in 'Chronique musicale' (1874-75); Ch. Piot, Particularités inédites concernant les œuvres musicales de Gossec et de Philidor, in 'Bulletins de l'Académie royale de Belgique' (Brussels, 1875); G. E. Bonnet, L'Œuvre de Philidor, in the 'Revue Musicale' (Oct., 1921); G. E. Bonnet, Philidor et l'évolution de la musique française au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1921); also 'Dictionary of National Biography,' XLV. For details on his operas, see A. Loewenberg's Annals of Opera.

Philipp (fi-lēp'), Isidor, eminent French pianist; b. Budapest, Sept. 2, 1863; d. Paris, Feb. 20, 1958 (as a result of injuries received from a fall in the subway). He was brought to Paris at the age of 3; entered the Paris Cons. at 16 as a pupil of Georges Mathias; won 1st piano prize in 1883; then took lessons with Saint-Saëns, Stephen Heller, and Ritter for about 4 years. He appeared as a soloist with several French orchestras; also in London and elsewhere in Europe; established a concert trio with Loeb and Berthelmer; also was an active participant in the programs of the 'Société des instruments à vent' in Paris. In 1903 he was appointed prof. of piano at the Paris Cons.; as a teacher he met with extraordinary success. After the outbreak of World War II, he went to the U. S., arriving in New York on May 20, 1941; despite his advanced age, he continued to teach privately and in various schools in N. Y. and also in Montreal (until 1955); played the piano part in the Franck violin sonata at his farewell appearance in N. Y. (March 20, 1955); afterwards divided his time between France and N. Y. He composed a Rêverie mélancolique and a Sérénade humoristique for orch. and some piano pieces. Among his technical works for piano that have won high esteem are Exercices journaliers, École d'octaves, Problèmes techniques, Études techniques basées sur une nouvelle manière de travailler, La Gamme chromatique, etc.; also publ. numerous arrangements for 2 pianos of works by Bach, Mendelssohn, Saint-Saëns, and others; La Technique de Liszt (2 vols., Paris, 1932); wrote memoirs, etc. — Cf. Henry Bellmann, Isidor Philipp, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1943).

Philippe de Mons. See Monte.

Philippe de Vitry. See Vitry.

Philips, Peter, important English composer and organist; b. 1561; d. Brussels, 1628. He belonged to a Catholic family; was probably a chorister at St. Paul's Cathedral; was befriended by a Catholic almoner, Sebastian Westcote, and received a bequest upon the latter's death in 1582. In that year, Philips left England; on Aug. 18, 1582 he arrived at Douai, where he presented himself at the English College; then proceeded to Rome, where he entered the service of Cardinal Alessandro Farnese; also was for 3 years organist at the English College in Rome (1582-85). In the autumn of 1585 Philips joined the household of Lord Thomas Paget in Rome, and subsequently traveled with him through Spain, France, and the Netherlands. From early 1587 until June 1588, Philips was with Paget in Paris; then went to Antwerp, remaining there until early 1589; also made visits to Brussels. After Paget's death in 1590, Philips settled in Antwerp, and was active there as teacher of keyboard playing. In 1593 Philips went to Amsterdam, where he met Sweelinck. On his return trip to Antwerp, he was detained at Middelburgh, was charged with planning the assassination of Queen Elizabeth, and was alleged to have participated with Lord Paget in the act of burning the queen in effigy in Paris. He stood trial in The Hague in Sept. 1593, but was released for lack of evidence. Late in 1593 he was back in Antwerp. In 1597 he moved to Brussels, entering the service of the Archduke Albert, as organist of the Royal Chapel. After Albert's marriage to Isabella of Spain (1599) Philips was officially designated as 'Organist to their Serene Highnesses the Archduke Albert and Isabella.' On March 9, 1610 he received a canonry at Soignies, but continued to reside in Brussels. On Jan. 5, 1621 he exchanged his title at Soignies for a chaplainship at Tirlemont; in 1623 he is also described as canon of Béthune. However, he continued to be designated canon of Soignies for many years afterwards, even in posthumous editions of his works, possibly because he was best known in that nominal post. Philips was highly esteemed in his day, and his works were printed in many collections; his music shows mixed Italian and Netherlandish characteristics; he excelled in madrigals and motets; his pieces for the virginals reveal a kinship with Sweelinck. Published works include: 4 madrigals in Melodia Olympica di diversi eccellentissimi musici (Antwerp, 1591); 2 vols. of madrigals for 6 voices (1596; 1603); 1 vol. of madrigals for 8 voices (1598); motets for 5 voices (1612); motets for 8 voices (1613); Gemmulae sacrae, for 2-3 voices, with continuo (1613); Les Rossignols spirituels, for 2-4 voices (1616); Deliciae sacrae, for 2-3 voices (1622); litanies for 4-9 voices (1623); Paradisus sacris cantionibus conditus (1628); other works listed in the catalogue of the library of King João IV of Portugal, publ. by Vasconcellos in 1873. W. B. Squire edited the madrigals Amor che vuoi for 4 voices (London, 1890) and Dispiegate guancie amate, for 8 voices in Ausgewählte Madrigale (Leipzig, 1906), and the motets Hodie Sanctus Benedictus for 5 voices (London, 1899) and Ego sum panis vivus (London, 1902); Sir Richard Terry, who contributed greatly to a revival of the music by Phillips, publ. 4 motets for 5 voices in the collection 'Downside Motets' (London, 1904-05). 19 keyboard pieces are included in the 'Fitzwilliam Virginal Book,' vol. 1 (1889); other keyboard pieces are found in various anthologies. — Cf. P. Bergmans, L'Organiste des archiducs Albert et Isabelle, Peter Philips (Ghent, 1903); C. Hughes, Peter Philips; an English Musician in the Netherlands, in 'Papers of the American Musicological Society, 1940' (Oberlin, 1946).

Phillipps, Adelaide, English contralto; b. Stratford-on-Avon, Oct. 26, 1833; d. Karlsbad, Oct. 3, 1882. When she was a child, her family went to America, settling in Boston; there she appeared as a dancer at the Tremont Theater (Jan. 12, 1842). She showed an early gift as a vocalist, and was introduced to Jenny Lind during the latter's American tour (1850); Lind started a subscription to enable her to study singing. She took lessons with Manuel Garcia in London; made her professional début in Milan, Dec. 17, 1854, as Rosina. Returning to Boston in 1855, she sang in light opera in English; her first appearance on the grand opera stage in America was as Azucena in Verdi's Il Trovatore (Academy of Music, N.Y., March 17, 1856). In 1861 she went to Europe; appeared in Paris, Madrid, Barcelona, and in various cities in Hungary and Holland, singing the Italian repertory. In 1879 she joined the 'Boston Ideal Opera Company,' with which she appeared for the last time on Nov. 30, 1880. Her final stage appearance took place in Cincinnati in Dec., 1881. She was advised to go to Karlsbad for her health in 1882, but died shortly after her arrival there. During her European engagements she sang under the name Signorina Filippi. — Cf. A. C. L. Waterston, Adelaide Phillips (Boston, 1883).

Phillips, Burrill, American composer; b. Omaha, Nov. 9, 1907. He studied music with Edwin Stringham in Denver; and with Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y.; upon graduation, appointed to the faculty of the Eastman School. He held a Guggenheim Fellowship (1942); also received a grant for creative work from the American Academy of Arts and Letters (1944). He writes in a neo-Classical style; successfully exploits American rhythms. In 1958 he was teaching at the University of Illinois. — Works: the ballets: Play Ball (Rochester, April 29, 1938) and Step Into My Parlor (1941); for orch.: Selections from McGuffey's Reader (Rochester, May 3, 1934), Sinfonia Concertante (Rochester, April 3, 1935), American Dance, for bassoon and strings (Rochester, April 25, 1940), 3 Satiric Fragments (Rochester, May 2, 1941), piano concerto (1943), Scherzo (1944), Tom Paine Overture (N. Y., May 15, 1947); chamber music: a trio for trumpets (1937), a string quartet (1939), a violin sonata (1942), a cello sonata (1946), Partita for violin, viola, cello, and piano (Rochester, May 7, 1948), Four Figures in Time, for flute and piano (1953); Declaratives for women's voices and small orch. (1943); for piano: Nine by Nine, a set of 9 variations, each one in a meter of 9 (1942), Toccata (1944), 3 Informalities (1945), 3 Divertimenti (1946), etc.

Phillips, Montague Fawcett, English composer; b. London, Nov. 13, 1885. He studied composition with F. Corder at the Royal Academy of Music; subsequently was active as a church organist; also taught harmony at the Royal Academy of Music. He wrote a light opera, The Rebel Maid (London, 1921), which enjoyed some success; The Song of Rosamund, for soprano and orch.; The Death of Admiral Blake, for baritone, chorus, and orch.; Charles II, overture; a symphony; the orchestral suites, Surrey, The World in the Open Air, In May Time, Dance Revels, etc.; A Shakespearean Scherzo for orch.; 2 piano concertos; chamber music; choruses; piano pieces. Later works included Empire March for orch. (1941) and an overture, In Praise of My Country (1944).

Piastro, Josef, Russian-American violinist; b. Kerch, Crimea, Feb. 17, 1889. He studied with Auer at the St. Petersburg Cons.; then toured in Russia; came to the U. S. in 1920; became a citizen in 1926; was concertmaster of the Los Angeles Philharmonic; conducted children's concerts in Hollywood; also successful as a teacher. In America, he assumed the pseudonym Borissoff, to avoid confusion with his brother, Michel Piastro. He composed a Crimean Rhapsody for violin and piano (1920; orchestrated, and performed by the San Francisco Symph. Orch. Oct. 5, 1938).

Piastro, Michel, Russian-American violinist; brother of Josef Piastro; b. Kerch, Crimea, June 19, 1891; studied with Auer at the St. Petersburg Cons.; was in the Far East from 1914-19; settled in the U. S. in 1920; was concertmaster of the San Francisco Symph. Orch. (1925-31); and of the N. Y. Philharmonic under Toscanini (1931-37). In 1941 he became conductor of the radio orch. 'Longines Symphonette.'

Piatigorsky, Gregor, famous Russian cellist; b. Ekaterinoslav, April 20, 1903. He first studied with his father, a violinist; then took cello lessons with Alfred von Glehn; played in various orchestras in Moscow. In 1921 he left Russia; remained for some time in Warsaw; then went to Berlin, where he took lessons with Julius Klengel. He entered a competition for the first cello desk of the Berlin Philharmonic, and won it; held this position from 1924 to 1928; then devoted himself entirely to the career of a virtuoso; played the solo part in Don Quixote by Strauss under the composer's direction; made his American début with the N. Y. Philharmonic, on Dec. 29, 1929, playing the Dvořák concerto; after that he appeared with virtually every important orchestra in the U. S., in Europe, in South America; gave world premières of several cello concertos commissioned by him (Hindemith, Dukelsky, Castelnuovo-Tedesco, and others). From 1924 he taught advanced classes at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia; in 1957, engaged to teach a master class at Boston University.

Piatti, Alfredo Carlo, Italian cellist and composer; b. Bergamo, Jan. 8, 1822; d. there, July 19, 1901. Son of the violinist Antonio Piatti; pupil at first of Zanetti, and 1832-37 of Merighi at Milan Cons. Concert début at Milan, 1834; in 1838 his concert tours began; he played (1843) with Liszt at Munich, and next year in Paris. The same year he visited London, where he created a profound impression; after playing in Italy and Russia he returned to England in 1846, and met with such enthusiasm that he became an annual visitor; from 1846-49 he was 1st cello at the Italian opera, and from 1859-98 a leading figure in the Monday and Saturday Popular Concerts of chamber music. He combined marvelous technical skill with profound musicianship, and his influence on contemporary cellists may well be compared with that of Joachim on violinists.—Works: op. 18, concertino for cello and orch.; 2 concertos for cello and orch. (op. 24, in B♭; op. 26, in D minor); 6 sonatas for cello and piano (op. 28, C; op. 29, D; op. 30, F; op. 31, G, idillica; 2 others in MS); smaller pieces for cello and piano. Also edited 6 string sonatas by Boccherini and Locatelli, a sonata (op.

2) by B. Marcello, etc., Kummer's method for cello.—Cf. M. Latham, Alfredo Piatti (London, 1901).

Piccinni (Piccini) (pē-chēn'-nē), Niccolò, Italian opera composer; b. Bari, Jan. 16, 1728; d. Paris, May 7, 1800. Piccinni's father was a violinist at the Basilica di San Nicola in Bari, and his maternal uncle, Gaetano Latilla (1713-83), a well-known operatic composer. The innate ability of young Piccinni attracted the attention of the Archbishop of Bari, Muzio Gaeta, who arranged for him to enroll at the Cons. di Sant' Onofrio in Naples; there, at the age of 14, he began studying under the celebrated masters Leo and Durante; continued as a student for 13 years, and then became instructor at the same Cons. His first work, Le Donne dispettose, an opera buffa in the style made popular in Naples by Logroscino, was produced at the Teatro dei Fiorentini in 1754. He wrote 139 operas; in 1761 alone he produced 10 operas; 7 more followed in 1762. An instinct for the theater made him select librettos rich in dramatic content. His melodic invention was fresh, and his arias were written in a pleasing style eminently suitable to the voice. He elaborated the conventional climactic scenes so that dramatic interest was sustained to the end. He varied the tempos and the harmonies in the ensembles, which further contributed to the general effect. After modest successes in Naples with Le Gelosie (1755) and Il Curioso del proprio danno (1756), he went to Rome, where he produced his opera Alessandro nelle Indie (Jan. 21, 1758); later wrote another setting to the same subject (Naples, Jan. 12, 1774). Piccinni's greatest success in Rome was his comic opera La buona figliuola, to Goldoni's libretto based on Richardson's Pamela (Feb. 6, 1760; also produced in Italy as La Cecchina nubile); Piccinni wrote a sequel to it, La buona figliuola maritata (Bologna, June 10, 1761). Other operas produced in Rome were: Le Contadine bizzarre (Feb. 10, 1763); Gli Stravaganti (Jan. 1, 1764; also performed under the title La Schiava riconosciuta); Il Barone di Torreforte (Jan. 10, 1765); La Pescatrice (Jan. 9, 1766); Antigone (1770); and Le finte gemelle (Jan. 2, 1771). Piccinni's fortunes declined with the rising popularity in Rome of a powerful rival, Anfossi; not wishing to compete, Piccinni returned to Naples, where he staged his opera I Viaggiatori with excellent success.—Piccinni's historical role was destined to be played on the international scene in Paris, where he went with his family in

Dec. 1776. His arrival in Paris precipitated one of the most famous controversies in music history, the 'querelle célèbre,' which was in essence a continuation of the 'Guerre des Bouffons' of 1752. In the later case, the Parisian public was sharply divided into two warring factions, one supporting the Italian operatic art as practiced by Piccinni, the other championing the operatic realism of Gluck. Piccinni himself had the highest regard for Gluck, and never encouraged the frenzied outbursts of the "Piccinnists." Gluck left Paris in 1780; at his death in Vienna (1787) Piccinni made plans to organize annual concerts in Paris in Gluck's memory, but failed to find financial support for his project. Piccinni's first opera in French, Roland (Jan. 27, 1778), had considerable success; he continued to use French librettos, producing several operas in close succession, of which the following were fairly well received: Le Fat méprisé (Paris, May 16, 1779); Atys (Paris, Feb. 22, 1780); Iphigénie (Paris, Jan. 23, 1781; fairly successful, despite the fact that Gluck's masterpiece on the same subject was produced 2 years before); Didon (Fontainebleau, Oct. 16, 1783; his most enduring work; separate arias have been reprinted many times); Le Dormeur éveillé (Paris, Nov. 14, 1783); Le faux Lord (Paris, Dec. 6, 1783); and Pénélope (Fontainebleau, Nov. 2, 1785). In 1778 Piccinni became director of the Italian troupe in Paris; in 1784 he was appointed 'maître de chant' at the newly-founded 'École royale de chant et de déclamation lyrique' in Paris, but lost this position after the Revolution and returned to Naples, where he subsisted on a small pension granted him by the King of Naples; went back to Paris in 1798, where he was received with public honors, and given a purse of 5,000 francs for immediate necessities; an honorary position of a 6th inspector was granted to him by the Paris Cons. (formerly 'École royale de chant et de déclamation lyrique'). But Piccinni was too ill for active life; he retired to Passy, where he spent the last months of his life. Piccinni's operas are rarely performed in their entirety: La Cecchina was revived in Bari on his bicentenary, Feb. 7, 1928. —BIBLIOGRAPHY: Ph. Coquéau, Entretiens sur l'état actuel de l'opéra de Paris (Paris, 1779; a discussion of the relative merits of Piccinni and Gluck in dialogue form); P. L. Ginguené, Notice sur la vie et les ouvrages de Nicolas Piccinni (Paris, 1800); G. Desnoiresthes, Gluck et Piccinni (Paris, 1872); E. Thoinan, Notes bibliographiques sur la guerre musicale des Gluckistes et

Piccinnistes (Paris, 1878); H. Curzon, Les dernières années de Piccinni à Paris (Paris, 1890); H. Abert, Piccinni als Buffokomponist, in 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1913); G. de Napoli, Nicola Piccinni nel secondo centenario della nascita in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1928); A. Parisi, Intorno al soggiorno di Nicola Piccinni in Francia (ib., 1928); A. Della Corte, Piccinni (Bari, 1928); P. La Rotella, Niccolò Piccinni (Bari, 1928); N. Pascasio, L'Uomo Piccinni e la 'Querelle célèbre' (Bari, 1951). A complete list of Piccinni's operas is given by A. Cametti under the title Saggio cronologico delle opere teatrali di Niccolò Piccinni in vol. VIII of the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (also separately, Turin, 1901). See also A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera.

Pichl, Wenzel, Bohemian violinist and composer; b. Bechin, Aug. 25, 1741; d. Vienna, June 4, 1804. He studied violin with Pokorny and composition with Seeger in Prague. In 1775 he was appointed chamber composer to Archduke Ferdinand at Milan; went with him to Vienna in 1796; also supplied musical entertainment to Viennese noblemen; he died during a concert at the palace of Prince Lobkowitz. He wrote about 700 works, including 12 operas, some 20 Masses, 89 symphonies (of which 66 are publ.), 13 serenades (3 of which were publ.), a great number of concertos for violin and other instruments with orch., 7 octets, 7 septets, 6 sextets, 21 quintets, 172 string quartets (of which 163 were publ.), 148 works for baryton, piano pieces, etc. His 6 fugues with a fugal prelude for violin alone became fairly popular (reprint, ed. by Kocian and Gardavsky, Prague, 1951).—Cf. R. Kolisko, Wenzel Pichls Kammermusik (Vienna, 1918).

Pick-Mangiagalli, Riccardo, Italian composer; b. Strakonice, Bohemia, July 10, 1882; d. Milan, July 8, 1949. He was of mixed Italian and Bohemian parentage; studied at the Cons. Giuseppe Verdi in Milan with Appiani (piano) and Ferroni (composition). He began his career as a successful concert pianist, but later turned exclusively to composition. In 1936 he succeeded Pizzetti as director of the Cons. Giuseppe Verdi, and held this post until his death.—Works: operas: Basi e Bote (Rome, March 3, 1927), Casanova a Venezia (La Scala, Milan, Jan. 19, 1929; an orchestral suite from it, entitled Scene carnevalesche, was performed in Milan, Feb. 6, 1931), L'ospite inatteso (Milan-Turin-Genoa Radio network, Oct. 25, 1931; the first opera to be given a world première by radio anywhere), Il Notturmo romantico (Rome, April 25, 1936); for the dance: Il Salice d'oro, mmo-drama (Milan, Sept. 18, 1918), Sumitra (Frankfurt, 1922), Mahit, ballet-fable with singing (La Scala, Milan, March 20, 1923), La Berceuse (San Remo, Feb. 21, 1933), Variazioni coreografiche (San Remo, April 13, 1935); for orch.: Sortilegi, symph. poem for piano and orch. (Milan, Dec. 13, 1917), Notturmo e rondo fantastico (Milan, May 6, 1919), Due preludi (Rome, March 1, 1921), Quattro poemi (Milan, April 24, 1925), Piccola suite (Milan, June 12, 1927), Preludio e fuga (Rome, March 11, 1928), Preludio e scherzo sinfonico (Milan, Oct. 22, 1938); a violin sonata; a string quartet; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. G. M. Gatti, Musicisti moderni d'Italia e di fuori (2nd ed., Bologna, 1925); D. de Paoli, in the 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale' (1928).

Picka, František, Czech organist, conductor, and composer; b. Strašice, near Hořovice, May 12, 1873; d. Prague, Oct. 18, 1918. Of a musical family, he received a solid education in Prague; held several posts as chorus master and opera conductor. His opera, Malý Reiner (The Painter Reiner), was produced in Prague (April 28, 1911) without success; the bulk of his works consists of church music, including 9 Masses and many other works in a traditional but effective contrapuntal style.

Pierné (p'yar-nā'), (Henri-Constant-) Gabriel, French composer, conductor, and organist; b. Metz, Aug. 16, 1863; d. Ploujean, near Morlaix, July 17, 1937. He studied at the Paris Cons. (1871-82), where his teachers were Marmontel (piano), César Franck (organ), and Massenet (composition); won 1st piano prize (1879), 1st prize for counterpoint and fugue (1881), and 1st prize for organ (1882); awarded the Grand Prix de Rome (1882) with the cantata Edith; succeeded César Franck as organist at Ste.-Clothilde, where he remained until 1898. In 1903 he was appointed assistant conductor to Colonne, and in 1910 his successor (until 1932); elected a member of the Académie des Beaux-Arts in 1925. He was a prolific composer, but of his many works only the oratorio La Croisade des Enfants and the piano piece, Marche des petits soldats de plomb, became popular. —Works: the operas La Coupe enchantée, (Rohan, Aug. 24, 1895; revised version, Opéra-Comique, Paris, Dec. 26, 1905), Vendée (Lyons, March 11, 1897), La Fille de Tabarin (Opéra-Comique, Paris, Feb. 20, 1901), On ne badine pas avec l'amour (Opéra-Comique, Paris, May 30, 1910), Sophie Arnould, 1-act lyric comedy, based on episodes from the life of the famous singer (Opéra-Comique, Feb. 21, 1927); ballets and pantomimes: Le Collier de saphirs (1891), Les joyeuses commères de Paris (1892), Bouton d'or (1893), Le Docteur Blanc (1893), Salomé (1895), Cydalise et le chœur-pied (1919; Paris Opéra, Jan. 15, 1923; as an orchestral suite, 1926), Impressions de Music-Hall, 'ballet à l'Américaine' (Opéra, April 6, 1927), Giration (1934), Fragonard (1934), Images, 'divertissement sur un thème pastoral' (Opéra, June 19, 1935); the oratorios La Croisade des enfants, for mixed choir of children and adults (Paris, Jan. 18, 1905), Les Enfants à Bethléem, for soloists, children's chorus, and orch. (Amsterdam, April 13, 1907), and Les Fioretti de St. François d'Assise (1912); for orch: Suite de concert (1883), Première suite d'orchestre (1883), Ouverture symphonique (1885), Marche solennelle (1889), Pantomime (1889), Ballet de cour (1901), Paysages franciscains (1920), Gulliver au pays de Lilliput (Paris Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 23, 1937), piano concerto (1887), Scherzo-Caprice for piano and orch. (1890), Poème symphonique for piano and orch. (1901), Konzertstück for harp and orch. (1901), L'An mil, symph. poem with chorus (1897); chamber music: Pastorale variée dans le style ancien, for wind instruments (also for piano), Berceuse for violin and piano, Caprice for cello and piano, Canzonetta for clarinet and piano, Solo de concert for bassoon and piano, Variations libres et Finale for flute, violin, viola, cello, and harp; for piano: 15 Pièces (1883); Étude de concert; Album pour mes petits amis, containing the famous Marche des petits soldats de plomb; Humoresque; Rêverie; Ariette dans le style ancien; Pastorale variée; Sérénade à Colombine; Sérénade vénitienne; Barcarolle for 2 pianos; song cycles: Contes (1897), 3 Adaptations musicales (1902), and 3 Mélodies (1904); 38 other songs; harp music, folksong arrangements, etc. He contributed the section Histoire de l'instrumentation to Lavignac's 'Encyclopédie de la Musique.' —Cf. W. Weber, Gabriel Pierné; H. Eymieu, Gabriel Pierné, in the 'Revue illustrée' (Paris, March 15, 1897); L. Schneider, Gabriel Pierné in 'Le Théâtre' (Paris, March, 1901); O. Séré, Musiciens français d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1921).

Pierné, Paul, French composer, cousin of Gabriel Pierné; b. Metz, June 30, 1874; d. Paris, March 24, 1952. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Lenepveu and Caussade; wrote a number of works, which were occasionally performed in Paris: the operas Le Diable galant (1913), Emilde, and Mademoiselle Don Quichotte; a ballet, Le Figurinaï; 2 symphonies and several symph. poems of a programmatic nature (Jeanne d'Arc, Cléopâtre, De l'ombre à la lumière, Nuit évocatrice, Rapsodie Lorraine, etc.); choral works; organ pieces; a song cycle, Schéhérazade; piano pieces.

Pierre (p'-yâr), Constant, French writer on music; b. Paris, Aug. 24, 1855; d. there, Jan., 1918. He was a pupil at the Paris Cons.; played the bassoon in various Paris orchestras; from 1881 devoted himself mainly to musical journalism; was for many years editor of 'Le Monde musical.' —Writings: essays on Les Noëls populaires (1866) and La Marseillaise (1887); La Fracture instrumentale à l'Exposition universelle de 1889 (1890); Les Facteurs d'instruments de musique, les luthiers (1893); L'École de chant de l'Opéra (1672-1807) . . . (1895); B. Sarrette et les origines du Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation (1895); Notes inédites sur la musique de la Chapelle Royale (1532-1790) . . . (1899); Le Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation (1900); Le Concert Spirituel 1725-1790 (1900; very valuable); Les Hymnes et chansons de la Révolution (1904); compiled Musique des fêtes et cérémonies de la Révolution française . . . (1899; of documentary value).

Pierson, Henry Hugh, English composer; b. Oxford, April 12, 1815; d. Leipzig, Jan. 28, 1873. He was educated at Cambridge; in 1839 went to Germany, where he studied music with Tomaschek and Reissiger; entered the circle of Mendelssohn in Leipzig; after a brief term as prof. of music at the Univ. of Edinburgh (1844), he returned to Germany, where he remained for the rest of his life; married Caroline Leonhardt, who wrote the German librettos for his operas. He changed his name from the original form Pearson to Pierson in order to secure proper pronunciation by Germans; used the pen name Edgar Mansfeldt for his published music. —Works: operas: Leila (Hamburg, Feb. 22, 1848) and Contrarini oder Die Verschwörung zu Padua (Hamburg, April 16, 1872; revived in Dessau, April 24, 1883, under the title Fenice); oratorio Jerusalem (Norwich Festival, Sept. 23, 1852); incidental music to the 2nd part of Goethe's Faust; overtures to Shakespeare's Macbeth, As You Like It, and Romeo and Juliet. His music was totally submerged in Mendelssohn's style. —Cf. H. G. Sear, Faust and Henry Hugo Pierson, in the 'Music Review' (1949).

Pijper (pī'-pěr), Willem, eminent Dutch composer; b. Zeist, Sept. 8, 1894; d. Leidschendam, March 19, 1947. He received rudimentary education from his father, an amateur violinist; then went to the Utrecht Music School, where he studied composition with J. Wagenaar and piano with Mme. H. J. van Lunteren-Hansen; from 1918 to 1923, was music critic of the 'Utrecht Dagblad'; also taught at various schools; from 1925 to 1928, was prof. of composition at the Amsterdam Cons.; in 1930, director of the Rotterdam Cons.; was co-editor of the monthly 'De Muziek' (1926-29); also active in the International Society for Contemporary Music; was president of its Dutch section. In his music, Pijper was influenced from the very first by the new harmonies and melodic patterns of the French Impressionists, but he was able to transmute these elements into a language of his own; adopted a scale of alternating whole tones and semitones in many of his works, and regarded it as his own, not realizing that it was used (independently) by several other modern composers (Ludomir Rogowski, Felix Petyrek, and the Dutch composer Anthon van der Horst); his chamber music is of a very high quality. —Works: the operas: Halewijn (Amsterdam, June 13, 1933) and Merlijn (unfinished; 1939-46); incidental music to Sophocles' Antigone (1920-22), Euripides' Bacchantes (1922) and The Cyclops (1925), Shakespeare's The Tempest (1930), and Vondel's Phaëton (1938); for orch.: symph. No. 1 (1917), symph. No. 2 (1921), symph. No. 3 (his best; Amsterdam, Oct. 28, 1926; many performances abroad), 6 Symphonic Epigrams (1928), 6 Adagios (1940), piano concerto (1927), cello concerto (1936), violin concerto (1938); chamber music: 2 piano trios (1914, 1921), 4 string quartets (1914, 1920, 1923, 1928), septet for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn, double-bass, and piano (1920), sextet for wind instruments and piano (1923), trio for flute, clarinet, and bassoon (1927), quintet, for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and horn (1929), 2 violin sonatas (1919, 1922), 2 cello sonatas (1919, 1924), flute sonata (1925), sonata for violin unaccompanied (1931), sonata for 2 pianos (1935); 3 Aphorisms for piano (1915), 3 piano sonatas, piano sonata (1930), 3 Old Dutch Dances, for piano (1926), etc.; 2 works for voice and orch., to words by Verlaine: Fêtes galantes (1916) and Romance sans paroles (1919); 2 choruses a cappella for 8 voices: Heer Halewijn (1920) and Heer Danielken (1925); for voice and piano: 8 Old Dutch Songs (2 sets; 1924, 1935), 8 Old Dutch Love Songs (1920), 8 Vieilles Chansons de France (1918), 8 Noëls de France (1919); etc. He also publ. two collections of his articles, De Quinten-Cirkel (Amsterdam, 1929) and De Stemvork (Amsterdam, 1930). —Cf. M. D. Calvocoressi, Willem Pijper, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (London, 1924); H. Antcliffe, Two Modern Dutch 'Nationals', in 'Eolus' (Jan., 1929); P. F. Sanders, Moderne Nederlandsche Componisten (The Hague, 1931); Cor Backers, Nederlandse Componisten van 1400 tot op onze tijd (The Hague, 1941; new ed., 1948; pp. 123-31); A. L. Ringer, Willem Pijper and the Netherlands School of the 20th Century, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1955).

Piket, Frederick, composer; b. Constantinople, Jan. 6, 1903; son of an Austrian physician resident in Turkey. He attended the Vienna State Cons., and later studied with Schreker in Berlin; won the Mendelssohn State prize for his Triple Fugue for woodwinds in 1931. In 1940 he came to America and settled in N. Y. —Works: an overture, Curtain Raiser for an American Play (Minneapolis, Dec. 30, 1948); piano concerto; violin concerto; saxophone concerto; concerto for string orch.; orchestral suite, The Funnies (after 'Superman' and 'Little Orphan Annie'); Sea Charm for chorus a cappella; chamber music.

Pilati, Mario, Italian composer; b. Naples, Oct. 16, 1903; d. there, Dec. 10, 1938. He studied at the Naples Cons.; was instructor there (1930-38). —Works: Notturmo for orch. (1923); La Sera for women's voices and orch. (1926); flute sonata (1926); Il Battesimo di Cristo for soli, chorus, and orch. (1927); piano quintet (1928); violin sonata (1929); cello sonata (1929); string quartet (1930); piano pieces; also transcriptions for piano of works by Pizzetti and Casella. —Cf. G. Gavazzeni, M. Pilati, in his Il Suono è stanco (Bergamo, 1950).

Pilger, Karl. See Spazier.

Pilkington, Francis, English composer; b. c. 1562; d. Chester, 1638. He received a

B. Mus. degree at Lincoln College in Oxford; was successively lay clerk (1602), minor canon (1612), curate (1616), and precentor of the Chester Cathedral (1623). He publ. The First Booke of Songs or Ayres of 4 parts (1604), reprinted by Arkwright in the 'Old English Edition' (Nos. 18-20) and by Fellowes in 'The English School of Lutenist Song Writers' (vols. 7, 15); The First Set of Madrigals and Pastorals of 3, 4, and 5 parts (1614) and The Second Set of Madrigals and Pastorals of 3, 4, 5, and 6 parts (1624), reprinted by Fellowes in 'The English Madrigal School' (vols. 25, 26). Pilkington also contributed 2 songs to Sir William Leighton's collection, 'The Teares or Lamentacions of a Sorrowful Soule' (1614). —Cf. E. H. Fellowes, The English Madrigal Composers (London, 1921; 2nd ed., 1948).

Pillois (pîl-wăh'), Jacques, composer; b. Paris, Feb. 14, 1877; d. New York, Jan. 3, 1935. He studied with Widor and Vienne at the Paris Cons.; taught at various schools there; from 1921 to 1929 was on the faculty of the American Cons. at Fontainebleau; wrote articles on music for the 'Revue Musicale' and other journals. He taught at N. Y. Univ. (1927-30); then became acting director of the music dept. at Smith College. He wrote L'Anémone et la rose, lyric scene for soli, chorus, and orch. (1913); Rosène, symph. prelude (1923); Croisière, a Mediterranean rhapsody for small orch. (1927); a number of songs, some with orch. accompaniment; sacred and secular choruses; 5 Hai-kai, for flute, violin, viola, cello, and harp; Bucoliques, for flute and piano; etc. In some of his works he used the pen-name Jacques Desky.

Pilss, Karl, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, April 7, 1902. He studied at the Vienna Music Academy with Franz Schmidt (composition) and with Dirk Fock (conducting). He subsequently filled various positions as chorusmaster in Vienna; also was active as a teacher. —Works: trumpet concerto (1934); piano concerto (1940); 2 wind octets (1941, 1947); Serenade, for wind quintet (1942); trumpet sonata (1935); violin sonata (1945); oboe sonata (1946); sonatina for oboe and guitar (1942); piano pieces and choral works.

Pincherle (păn'-shărl'), Marc, noted French musicologist; b. Constantine, Algiers, June 13, 1888; studied in Paris with Pirro, Laloy, and Rolland. He served in both World Wars; a captain in the second, he was a prisoner of war in Germany from June 1940 to March 1941. Prof. of history of the violin at the École Normale, Paris; he has been president of the Société française de musicologie; artistic director of the Pleyel Piano Co.; music critic of the 'Nouvelles Littéraires.' —His writings include: Les Violonistes compositeurs et virtuoses (Paris, 1922); Feuillets d'histoire du violon (ib., 1927; 2nd ed., 1935); Corelli (Paris, 1933); Les Musiciens peints par eux-mêmes (160 letters of famous composers from his own autograph collection; Paris, 1939); Antonio Vivaldi et la musique instrumentale (2 vols., Paris, 1948); Les Instruments du quatuor (Paris, 1948); L'Orchestre de chambre (Paris, 1948); Jean-Marie Leclair l'aîné (Paris, 1952); Petit lexique des termes musicaux d'usage courant (Paris, 1953); Corelli et son temps (Paris, 1954; English transl. as Corelli, His Life, His Work, N. Y., 1956); Vivaldi (Paris, 1955; English transl., N. Y., 1957); Albert Roussel (Paris, 1957). Pincherle has ed. works by Leclair, Mondonville, Torelli, and others.

Pingoud, Ernest, composer; b. St. Petersburg, Russia, Oct. 14, 1888; d. Helsinki, June 1, 1942. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. and then in Germany at the Leipzig Cons. with Max Reger. In 1918 he settled in Finland, where he served as managing director of the Helsinki Symp. Orch. In his own music, he was influenced by the Russian modern school, particularly by Scriabin; composed 2 symphonies, several symph. poems with characteristically evocative titles (La Flamme éternelle, Le Chant d'espace, etc.); chamber music; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. A. Rudnev, Ernest Pingoud, in Suomen Säveltäjä (Helsinki, 1945; pp. 487-500).

Pinkham, Daniel, American composer; b. Lynn, Mass., June 5, 1923. He studied organ and harmony with Carl F. Pfatteicher at Phillips Academy, Andover (1937-1940); then at Harvard Univ. with A. Tillman Merritt, Walter Piston, and Archibald T. Davison (A.B., 1943; M.A., 1944); also studied harpsichord with Putnam Aldrich and Wanda Landowska, and organ with E. Power Biggs; at Tanglewood he took courses with Aaron Copland, Arthur Honegger, and Nadia Boulanger. He subsequently taught music history at Simmons College and harpsichord at Boston Univ.; visiting lecturer in music at Harvard Univ. (1957-58). In 1950 he received a Fulbright Fellowship; co-founder (with Robert Brink) and conductor of the Cambridge Festival Orch. The formal design of his music is strong; contrapuntal texture and the rhythmic element, rather than considerations of harmony and color, govern his writing. —Works: piano concertino (Cambridge, Mass., May 3, 1950); Concertante No. 1 for violin and harpsichord soli, strings, and celesta (Boston, Dec. 16, 1954); concerto for celesta and harpsichord soli (N. Y., Nov. 19, 1955); violin concerto (Falmouth, Mass., Sept. 8, 1956); Concertante No. 2 for violin and strings (Boston, May 9, 1958); Cantilena and Capriccio, for violin and harpsichord; divertimento for oboe and strings; other chamber music; 2 cantatas: Wedding Cantata (Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 22, 1956) and Christmas Cantata (Sinfonia Sacra; Boston, Dec. 10, 1957); songs to words by William Blake, Ben Jonson, W. H. Auden, etc.; he arranged and supplemented Gay's Beggar's Opera (Cambridge Drama Festival, 1956).

Pinsuti, Ciro, celebrated Italian singing teacher; b. Sinalunga, near Florence, May 9, 1829; d. Florence, March 10, 1888. His talent developed so rapidly that at 11 he was elected an honorary member of the Accademia Filarmonica, Rome. Taken to England soon after by Henry Drummond, he studied the piano under C. Potter, and the violin under Blagrove; returned to Bologna, 1845, and studied at the Liceo, also privately with Rossini, soon becoming assistant teacher of a piano class. In 1848 he went back to England; appointed prof. of singing at the Royal Academy of Music in 1856. He divided his time between London and Italy; brought out an opera, Il Mercante di Venezia, at Bologna (Nov. 9, 1873), another, Mattia Corvino, at Milan (1877), and a third, Margherita, at Venice (1882). In 1871 he represented Italy at the opening of the London Exhibition, for which he composed the hymn O people of this favoured land. As a recipient of the order of the Italian Crown, he was styled 'Cavaliere' Pinsuti. Besides his operas, he wrote some 200 songs to English and Italian texts.

Pinto, Octavio, Brazilian composer; b. São Paulo, Nov. 3, 1890; d. there, Oct. 31, 1950. He was trained as an architect; built apartment houses in Brazil; also studied piano with Isidor Philipp. In 1922 he married the Brazilian pianist, Guiomar Novaes; Villa-Lobos wrote his suite, Prole do Bêbé, for their children. Pinto publ. a number of effective piano miniatures, of which the Scenas Infantis (1932) and Children's Festival (1939) are best known.

Pinza, Ezio (real baptismal name Fortunio), celebrated bass singer; b. Rome, May 18, 1892; d. Stamford, Conn., May 9, 1957. The family moved to Ravenna when he was an infant; he studied engineering; also was active in sports. He began to study voice at the age of 18 with Ruzza and Vizzani, at the Cons. of Bologna; served in the Italian artillery during World War I; made his opera début as King Mark in Tristan und Isolde at the Teatro Reale in Rome (1920); then sang for 3 seasons at La Scala, Milan; was selected by Toscanini for the leading part in the world première of Boito's Nerone (May 1, 1924). He made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera House as Pontifex Maximus in Spontini's La Vestale (1926); remained with the Metropolitan until 1948; appeared also in San Francisco, Chicago, etc.; sang in Europe and in South America; his most celebrated roles were Méphistophélès in Gounod's Faust, Don Giovanni, and Boris Godunov. In 1949 he appeared as a musical comedy star in South Pacific, and immediately became successful in this new career; also appeared in films.

Pipkov, Lubomir, Bulgarian conductor and composer; b. Lovetch, Sept. 6, 1904. He studied piano in Sofia; composition with Paul Dukas in Paris (1926-32). From 1932 till 1947, he was assistant conductor at the State Opera House in Sofia; then prof. of music at the National Academy. —Works: the operas Nine Brothers of Yanina (Sofia, Sept. 19, 1937) and Momtchil (Sofia, April 24, 1948); a cantata, Marriage (1934); piano trio; piano quartet; 2 string quartets; choral works.

Pirani, Eugenio, Italian pianist and composer; b. Bologna, Sept. 8, 1852; d. Berlin, Jan. 12, 1939. A pupil of Colinelli at the Bologna Liceo Musicale, he graduated in 1869; then studied in Berlin with Th. Kullak (piano) and Kiel (composition); taught in Kullak's Academy 1870-80, also touring Italy (1873, 1876), England and Germany, France and Russia. He lived in Heidelberg till 1895, and then settled in Berlin. From 1905, lived in Brooklyn, N. Y., where, with the singer Alma Webster-Powell, he founded the Powell-Pirani Music Institute; returned to Berlin. He publ. concert studies and many pieces for piano solo; songs; duets; etc.; also Die Hochschule des Klavierspiels, op. 88 (in German and English). Author of Secrets of the Success of Great Musicians (Philadelphia, 1922).

Pirro, André, distinguished French musicologist; b. St.-Dizier, Haute-Marne, Feb. 12, 1869; d. Paris, Nov. 11, 1943. Pupil of his father, an organist; from 1896 prof. at the Schola Cantorum, and member of the board of directors; from 1904 also lecturer on the history of the theory of music at the École des Hautes Études Sociales; in 1912 he succeeded R. Rolland as prof. of the history of music at the Sorbonne. —Writings: L'Orgue de J.-S. Bach (1897; won prize of the Académie des Beaux-Arts; preface by Widor; English transl. by J. W. Goodrich, N. Y., 1902); J. S. Bach (1906, in 'Maîtres de musique'; 6th ed., 1924; English transl., N. Y., 1957); Descartes et la musique (1907); L'Esthétique de J.-S. Bach (1907; a most valuable work); Dietrich Buxtehude (1913); Heinrich Schütz (1913; German transl. by W. Gurlitt, 1914); Les Clavecinistes (1925); L'Art des organistes (in Lavignac's 'Encyclopédie du Conservatoire'; Part II, vol. 2); La Musique à Paris . . . 1380-1422 (Strasbourg, 1930); L'Exécution musicale 1380-1450 (1930, in 'Liège Kongress-Bericht'); Musiciens allemands et auditeurs françaises 1350-1422 (1930, in 'Adler-Festschrift'); L'Enseignement de la musique aux universités françaises (1930, in Bulletin of the 'Union musicologique' II, 1); Pour l'histoire de la musique (1931, in 'Acta musicologica' III, 2); Léon X et la musique (Paris, 1934; in English as Leo X and Music, in the 'Mus. Quarterly,' Jan., 1935); Histoire de la musique de la fin du XIV<sup>e</sup> siècle à la fin du XVI<sup>e</sup> (Paris, 1940). For Guilmant's 'Archives des Maîtres de l'Orgue' he wrote a number of biographies of early French organists (Titelouze, Daquin, Coupérin, Marchand, etc.); contributed valuable essays to various musical publications.

Pirrotta, Nino, musicologist; b. Palermo, Italy, June 13, 1908. He studied at the Florence Cons., graduating as organist in 1931; taught history of music at the Cons. of Palermo (1936-48); in 1948 was appointed librarian of Santa Cecilia, Rome; 1954-56, visiting prof. at Princeton Univ. and Columbia Univ.; 1956, appointed prof. at Harvard Univ. His principal fields of specialization are 14th-century polyphony and Baroque opera. —Publications: Il Sacchetti e la tecnica musicale del trecento italiano (with E. Li Gotti; Florence, 1935); Il Codice Estense lat. 568 e la musica francese in Italia al principio dell '400 (Palermo, 1946); numerous valuable articles in the 'Mus. Quarterly,' 'Rivista Musicale Italiana,' etc.; edited 'The Music of 14th-Century Italy' (vol. 1, Amsterdam, 1954).

Pisa, Agostino, Italian music scholar; flourished in Rome c. 1600, in which year he was Dr. jur. there. He publ. the earliest known treatise on conducting, Breve dichiarazione, della battuta musicale (Rome, 1611); a 2nd augmented ed. was publ. in the same year, also in Rome, as Battuta della musica dichiarata. —Cf. R. Schwartz, Zur Geschichte des Taktschlagens, in 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1907); G. Schünemann, Geschichte des Dirigierens (Leipzig, 1913).

Pisador, Diego, Spanish lutenist; b. Salamanca, c. 1508; d. after 1557. In 1526 he entered the priesthood; in 1552 he publ. in Salamanca a Libro de música de vihuela, containing madrigals, a set of Spanish ballads, and transcriptions of secular and sacred works by Josquin Des Prez and others; the collection is reprinted by A. Morphy in 'Les Luthistes espagnols du XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle.'

Pisari (Pizari), Pasquale, Italian composer; b. Rome, 1725; d. there, March 27, 1778. He was a pupil of Giovanni Biordi; in 1752 he was taken into the papal chapel, being a fine bass singer; he wrote most of his sacred works for it, and the MSS are preserved in the archives of the papal chapel; they include several Masses, motets, 2 Te Deums for 8 voices, one Te Deum for 4 voices (his most remarkable work); also a Dixit in 16 parts, for 4 choirs, and a series of motets for the entire year, written for the Lisbon court. Padre Martini called Pisari the 'Palestrina of the 18th century.'

Pischna, Josef, famous Bohemian pianist and pedagogue; b. Erdischowitz, June 15, 1826; d. Prague, Oct. 19, 1896. He was a pupil at the Prague Cons.; taught for many years in Moscow; then at the Prague Cons. His pedagogical work, 60 Exercises for piano, became a standard method in Europe and has been reprinted in many editions; enlarged ed. by W. Rehberg; simplified ed. by B. Wolff.

Pisendel (pē'-zēn-dēl), Johann Georg, German violinist and composer; b. Kadolzburg, Dec. 26, 1687; d. Dresden, Nov. 25, 1755. He studied violin with Torelli at Ansbach, and music theory with Pistocchi; later (1716) took lessons in Venice from Vivaldi, who dedicated several works to him. He held the post of violinist in the Dresden court chapel orch. (1712); traveled with the Elector of Saxony to Paris, Berlin, Italy, and Vienna (1714-18); in 1728 became concertmaster in Dresden; 1731, appointed to a similar post in the orch. of the Dresden Opera. It seems certain that Bach wrote his partitas for unaccompanied violin for Pisendel. In his own works, Pisendel combined characteristics of German, French, and Italian music; many of his MSS are extant in the Dresden archives, among them 8 violin concertos, 3 concertos for 2 oboes and string orch., 2 concerti grossi, a symphony, and 2 solo pieces for violin with bass; a violin concerto is reprinted in 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vols. 29/30). —Cf. A. Moser, Geschichte des Violin-Spiels (p. 316ff.); H. R. Jung, J. G. Pisendel, in 'Musica' (Kassel, Nov., 1955).

Pisk, Paul Amadeus, composer and teacher; b. Vienna, May 16, 1893. He studied there with J. Epstein (piano), Schreker and Schoenberg (theory), Hellmesberger (conducting), and G. Adler (musicology); 1918, Dr. phil., Univ. of Vienna; wrote music criticism for the 'Wiener Arbeiterzeitung'; was co-editor (with Paul Stefan) of 'Musikblätter des Anbruch'; in 1936 emigrated to the U. S.; was prof. of music, Univ. of Redlands (1937-51) and director of the School of Music there (1948-51); in 1951, appointed prof. at the Univ. of Texas, Austin. A prolific composer, he has written about 100 opus numbers in all genres. —Works: for the stage: Schattenseite, monodrama (1931) and American Suite, ballet (Redlands, Calif., Feb. 19, 1948); Die neue Stadt, a 'cantata for the people' (Vienna, Nov. 1926; on the occasion of completion of a workers' settlement); Der grosse Regenmacher, scenic ballad for narrator and orch. (1931); Requiem for baritone and orch. (1942); for orch.: Partita (Prague Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, May 17, 1925), Suite on American Folksongs for 24 instruments (1944), Passacaglia (1944), Bucolic Suite for string orch. (Saratoga Springs, Sept. 10, 1946), Rococo Suite, for viola and orch. (1953), Baroque Chamber Concerto, for violin and orch. (1953); chamber music: 3 songs with string quartet (Salzburg, Aug. 10, 1922), string quartet (1924), 3 violin sonatas (1921, 1927, 1939), Fantasy, for clarinet and piano (1925), Rondo for violin and piano (1932), trio for violin, viola, and guitar (1933), Moresca Figures, for violin, clarinet, and piano (1934), 3 Sonnets for voice and string quartet (1936), piano trio (1939), suite for 4 clarinets (1940), Four Beasts, after Belloc, for voice and string quartet (1942), woodwind quartet (1945), clarinet sonata (1947), suite for oboe and piano (1947), quartet for 2 trumpets, horn, and trombone (1951); organ sonata; piano pieces; etc. Pisk has contributed many musicological essays to German and American publications; ed. Masses by Jacobus Gallus for the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 78). —Cf. Boris Kremenliev, Paul A. Pisk, in 'Music of the West Magazine' (July, 1952).

Pišna, Johann. See Pischna, Josef.

Pistocchi (pis-tōh'-kē), Francesco Antonio, founder of the famous School of Singing at Bologna; b. Palermo, 1659; d. Bologna, May 13, 1726. Taken to Bologna very young, his first work was publ. there in 1667: Capricci puerili saviamente composti e passeggiati in 40 modi sopra un Basso da un balletto, per il clavicembalo ed altri instrumenti, when he was but 8 years old. His teacher in theory was G. A. Perti; he studied singing under Padre Vastamigli and B. Monari. As a lad he became maestro at the church of San Giovanni in Monte; later a priest in the Oratorian order; from 1697-99 was Kapellmeister at the court of Ansbach; and returned to Bologna, via Vienna and Venice, about 1700. There he founded, soon after his return, the first school of music in which vocal instruction was given systematically in the several classes. In this school were trained many eminent singers (Bernacchi, Bertolino da Faenza, Minelli, Pio Fabri, etc.); similar institutions soon sprang up in other Italian cities. Pistocchi was twice elected president of the Accademia Filarmonica (1708 and 1710).

Piston, Walter, outstanding American composer; b. Rockland, Maine, Jan. 20, 1894. The family name was originally Pistone; his grandfather was Italian. He received his education in Boston; first studied painting at the Mass. Normal Art School, graduating in 1916; then took lessons in piano with Harris Shaw, and in violin with Fiumara, Theodorowicz, and Winternitz; played in restaurants and places of public entertainment as a youth; was in the Navy during World War I; after the Armistice, entered Harvard Univ., graduating in musical subjects in 1924, summa cum laude; also conducted concerts of the Univ. orch., the Pierian Sodality. He was awarded a John Knowles Paine Fellowship and went to Paris, where he took a course in composition with Nadia Boulanger (1924-26); upon his return to the U. S., was appointed to the faculty of Harvard Univ.; 1944, prof. of music. In 1934 he received a Guggenheim Fellowship. Both as composer and teacher, Piston occupies a high position in American music. In general, he follows a cosmopolitan course in his style, adhering to classical forms, while extending his harmonic structures towards a maximum within a firmly tonal framework; his counterpoint is masterly; although he never professed the tenets of American nationalism, he employs upon occasion syncopated rhythms of a jazz type. Many American composers have been his pupils (Leonard Bernstein, Harold Shapero, etc.). —Works: ballet The Incredible Flutist (Boston Pops, May 30, 1938); for orch.: symph. No. 1 (Boston, April 8, 1938, composer conducting), symph. No. 2 (Washington, March 5, 1944; received the N. Y. Music Critics Circle Award, 1945), symph. No. 3 (Boston, Jan. 9, 1948; received the Pulitzer Prize), symph. No. 4 (Minneapolis, March 30, 1951), symph. No. 5 (commissioned by the Juilliard School of Music for its 50th anniversary; N. Y., Feb. 24, 1956), symph. No. 6 (Boston, Nov. 25, 1955), Symphonic Piece (Boston, March 23, 1928), Suite (Boston, March 28, 1930, composer conducting), Concerto for Orchestra (Cambridge, Mass., March 6, 1934, composer conducting), Prelude and Fugue (Cleveland, March 12, 1936), Concertino for piano and chamber orch. (N. Y., June 20, 1937), violin concerto (N. Y., March 18, 1940), Sinfonietta (Boston, March 10, 1941), Prelude and Allegro for organ and strings (Boston, Oct. 29, 1943), Fanfare for the Fighting French (Cincinnati, Oct. 23, 1942), Fugue on a Victory Tune (N. Y., Oct. 21, 1944), Symphonic Suite (Dallas, Feb. 29, 1948), Toccata (Orchestre National de France, Munch conducting, Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 14, 1948), Fantasy for English horn, strings, and harp (Boston, Jan. 1, 1954), Serenata (Louisville, Oct. 24, 1956); chamber music: quintet for flute and strings (1942), Partita for violin, viola, and organ (1944), sonatina for violin and harpsichord (1945), Divertimento for 9 instruments (N. Y., May 18, 1946), 3 string quartets, Carnival Song, for men's chorus and 11 brass instruments (Harvard Glee Club, Cambridge, Mass., March 7, 1940); quintet for horn and woodwinds (1956). Piston publ. valuable and practical books: Harmony (N. Y., 1941); Counterpoint (N. Y., 1947); Orchestration (N. Y., 1955). —Cf. N. Slonimsky, Walter Piston in Henry Cowell's American Composers on American Music (1933); Israel Citkowitz, Walter Piston—Classicist, in 'Modern Music' (Jan.-Feb., 1936); E. Carter, Walter Piston, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1946); Madeleine Goss, Modern Music Makers (N. Y., 1952); W. Austin, Piston's Fourth Symphony, in 'Mus. Review' (May, 1955).

Pitfield, Thomas Baron, English composer; b. Bolton, April 5, 1903. He studied at the Royal Manchester College of Music; became instructor there in 1947; also studied engineering and painting; was a book illustrator; wrote verse. In his music, he adopts a simple style, in folksong manner. His works include a cantata, The Rhyming Shopman; a piano concerto; various pieces of chamber music; a set of piano pieces under the general title Ballet in Education; also humorous pieces for piano (Limusicks, etc.). —Cf. A. K. Holland, T. B. Pitfield, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (May, 1939).

Pitoni, Giuseppe Ottavio, Italian composer of church music; b. Rieti, March 18, 1657; d. Rome, Feb. 1, 1743. He began music studies at 5, under Pompeo Natale in Rome; at 8 was chorister at S. Giovanni de' Fiorentini, later at the S. S. Apostoli, and studying counterpoint under Foggia. In 1673, maestro di cappella at Terra di Rotondo; in 1674, at Assisi; in 1676, at Rieti; finally, in 1677, he became maestro at the Collegio di S. Marco, Rome, retaining this post until death, though simultaneously engaged at San Apollinare (1686), San Lorenzo in Damaso (1686), San Giovanni in Laterano (1708-19), and also at St. Peter's (1719), also in some minor Roman churches. He was an excellent teacher, and taught after the same method by which he himself rose to eminence as a composer, e.g., the writing out in score of Palestrina's works to study his style. Durante, Leo, and Feo were his greatest pupils. As a composer, he cultivated a distinct feature of the Roman school, the writing in many parts; his finest works are a Dixit a 16 (for 4 choirs), still sung yearly at St. Peter's during Holy Week, and 3 Masses based on popular airs, Li Pastori a Maremma, Li Pastori a Montagna, and Mosca. Of Masses and psalms he composed over 40 a 12 (for 3 choirs) and over 20 a 16 (for 4 choirs), psalms and motets a 24 and 36; and left an unfinished Mass a 48. He also wrote for St. Peter's a set of Masses, vespers, etc., for the entire year, besides motets a 3-8, hymns, etc. Only one book of motets, a 2, was publ. (Rome, 1697) during his lifetime, probably because he insisted that music written for one church should not be performed in any other. Proske, in his 'Musica divina' (1855, et seq.), printed a Mass, a Requiem, 6 motets, a psalm, a hymn, and a Christus factus est. In the Vatican Library is a MS work by Pitoni, Notizie dei maestri di cappella sì di Roma che oltramontani . . . from 1500-1700; and a fragmentary Guida armonica (108 printed pages). —Cf. M. Tiberti, G. O. Pitoni, in 'Musica d'oggi' (1941).

Pitt, Percy, English conductor and composer; b. London, Jan. 4, 1870; d. there, Nov. 23, 1932. He went to France as a youth; studied music in Germany, at the Leipzig Cons. (with Jadassohn and Reincke) and at the Akademie der Tonkunst in Munich (with Rheinberger). He returned to England in 1893; held various subordinate positions at London opera houses; in 1907 became conductor and musical director of the Grand Opera Syndicate, at Covent Garden (until 1915); then conductor of the Beecham Opera Co. (1915-18) and, subsequently, artistic director of the British National Opera Co. (1920-24). In 1922 he was appointed musical director of the British Broadcasting Co., and held this post until 1930. He composed a number of works, of which a Ballade for violin and orch. (1900) was performed by Ysaÿe; a clarinet concerto (1897); several orchestral suites; choruses; incidental music for several plays. —Cf. J. D. Chamier, Percy Pitt of Covent Garden and the B.B.C. (London, 1938).

Pittaluga, Gustavo, Spanish composer; b. Madrid, Feb. 8, 1906. He studied law at the Univ. of Madrid and composition with Oscar Esplá; participated in the Paris group of modern musicians, 'Triton' (1935); from 1936 to 1939 was a member of the staff of the Spanish Embassy in Washington (for the Loyalist Government); then remained in the U. S.; was in charge of the film library at the Museum of Modern Art, N. Y. (1941-43). —Works: La Romería de los Cornudos, ballet, after F. G. Lorca (Madrid, 1933); a zarzuela, El Loro (Madrid, 1933); Concerto militaire for violin and orch. (Barcelona, 1933); Petite suite for 10 instruments (Paris, 1935); also for piano as 3 Pièces pour une espagnolade; Capriccio alla romantica, for piano and orch. (Paris, 1936); 6 Danses espagnoles en suite for piano (1935); Vocalise-étude, for voice and piano (1932); Berceuse for violin and piano (1935); Ricercare, for violin, clarinet, bassoon, and trumpet (1934); 5 Canciones populares for chorus and 10 instruments (1939); Habanera for violin and piano (1942); Lament for Federico Garcia Lorca, for narrator and orch. (1942).

Pittrich, George Washington, German composer; b. Dresden, Feb. 22 (Washington's birthday), 1870; d. Nuremberg, April 28, 1934. He studied at the Dresden Cons. with Draeseke and others; was active as conductor in Dresden (1890-98), Hamburg (1898), Cologne (1899-1901), Frankfurt (1901-04), Dresden (1904-12), and Berlin (from 1912). He wrote a 1-act opera, Marga (Dresden, Feb. 8, 1894); incidental music to Shakespeare's As You Like It and to several classical German plays; Christmas musical plays Der Stern von Bethlehem, Der Zauberschleier, Mäusekönigin; a clarinet concerto; a fantasia for piano with string orch.; many songs.

Pitzinger, Gertrude, mezzo-soprano; b. Krasna Hora, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 15, 1904. She studied general musical subjects at the Vienna Singakademie, with Joseph Marx; singing with various teachers; made a prolonged tour of Czechoslovakia in 1930; then gave recitals in Berlin; was coached for interpretation by Julia Culp; in 1938 received her first American engagement; gave a N. Y. recital on Jan. 17, 1938 with excellent success; acquired a fine reputation as a singer of German lieder. Her repertoire includes about 400 songs and the leading parts of all the major oratorios.

Piutti, Karl, German composer; b. Elgersburg, April 30, 1846; d. Leipzig, June 17, 1902. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; in 1880 became organist at the Thomaskirche. He wrote a great number of organ works, including a Hochzeit Sonata; about 200 organ preludes; psalms and motets a cappella; songs. He also publ. Regeln und Erläuterungen zum Studium der Musiktheorie.

Pixis, Johann Peter, German pianist; b. Mannheim, Feb. 10, 1788; d. Baden-Baden, Dec. 22, 1874. Of a musical family (his father and his brother were good musicians), he received his primary education at home; went to Munich in 1809, and to Paris in 1825; established himself as a teacher, and was greatly esteemed in the Paris musical world. In 1845 he settled in Baden-Baden, where he continued to teach. He wrote several operas: Almazinde, oder Die Höhle Sesam (Vienna, April 11, 1820), Bibiana, oder Die Kapelle im Walde (Aachen, Oct. 8, 1829), etc.; a piano concerto; a piano quartet; a piano quintet; a string quintet; 7 piano trios; sonatas, variations, transcriptions, etc. for piano solo; altogether about 150 opus numbers. Together with Liszt, Chopin, Thalberg, Czerny, and Herz, he wrote Hexaméron (a series of brilliant variations on the march from Bellini's opera, I Puritani). —Cf. R. Batka, Aus J. P. Pixis's Memoiren, in Kranz. Gesammelte Blätter über Musik (Leipzig, 1903).

Pizzetti, Ildebrando, prominent Italian composer; b. Parma, Sept. 20, 1880. He studied piano with his father; at the age of 15 entered the Parma Cons., where his teacher was Telesforo Righi; graduated with honors in 1901; then devoted himself to composition and teaching; was on the faculty of the Cons. of Parma (1907-09); prof. of composition at the Istituto Musicale in Florence; in 1917 became its director; in 1925, left Florence, and was appointed director of the Cons. G. Verdi in Milan; in 1936, became prof. of composition at the Santa Cecilia Academy in Rome; was its director from 1948 to 1951. In 1914 he founded (with G. Bastianelli) in Florence the magazine 'Dissonanza' as an organ for contemporary Italian music; was also critic, for several years, of the 'Secolo' (Milan) and 'Nazione' (Florence); co-ed. of the 'Raccolta nazionale delle musiche italiane.' Pizzetti made his first visit to the U. S. in 1930, when Toscanini conducted his Rondo veneziano with the N. Y. Philharmonic; in 1931 Pizzetti conducted his opera Fra Gherardo at the Teatro Colón in Buenos Aires. Pizzetti's music represents the Romantic trend in modern Italy; in his many works for the theater, he presents the modern counterpart of medieval mystery plays; the mystical element is very strong in his own texts for his operas. He employs astringent chromatic harmony, but the mainstream of his melody flows along pure diatonic lines. —Works: operas: Fedra (Milan, March 20, 1915), Debora e Jaele (1915-21; Milan, Dec. 16, 1922), Lo Straniero (1922-25; Rome, April 29, 1930), Fra Gherardo (1925-27; Milan, May 16, 1928; his most famous work; N. Y., March 21, 1929, at the Metropolitan Opera), Orsèolo (Florence, May 5, 1935), L'Oro (1938-42; Milan, Jan. 2, 1947), Vanna Lupa (Florence, May 4, 1949), Ifigenia (1950; Turin Radio, Sept. 18, 1950; 1st stage performance, Florence, May 4, 1951), Cagliostro (La Scala, Milan, Jan. 24, 1953), La Figlia di Jorio (Naples, Dec. 4, 1954); Assassinio nella cattedrale, after T. S. Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral (Milan, La Scala, March 1, 1958; highly acclaimed); incidental music: to the tragedy by Gabriele d'Annunzio La Nave (1905), to d'Annunzio's La Pisanella (Paris, June 11, 1913), La sacra rappresentazione di Abram e d' Isaac, mystery play (Florence, 1917; expanded and produced at Turin, March 11, 1926), to Agamemnon, by Aeschylus (Greek Theater at Syracuse, 1930), The Trachiniae, by Sophocles (Greek Theater, Syracuse, 1936), As You Like It by Shakespeare (Florence, May, 1938); choral works: Requiem (1922), De Profundis (1983), Cantico di gloria, for a treble chorus, 24 wind instruments, 2 pianos, and percussion (1948); for orch.: Overture per una farsa tragica (1911), Concerto dell'estate (N. Y., Toscanini conducting; Feb. 28, 1929), Rondo veneziano (N. Y., Feb. 27, 1930; as a ballet, La Scala, Milan, Jan. 8, 1931), cello concerto (Venice, Sept. 11, 1934), symph. in A (1940), violin concerto (Rome, Dec. 9, 1945), Canzone di beni perduti (Venice, Sept. 4, 1950); chamber music: 2 string quartets (1906; 1933), piano trio (1925), violin sonata (1919), cello sonata (1921); for piano: Da un autunno già lontano (1911; 3 pieces), Sonata 1942; songs: Tre liriche (1904), Sera d'inverno (1906), I Pastori (his most remarkable song; poem by Gabriele d'Annunzio; 1908), La Madre al figlio lontano (1910), Erotica (1911), Due canti popolari greci (1912), Tre sonetti di Petrarca (1922), E il mio dolore io canto (1940); transcriptions of madrigals by Gesualdo, of Veracini's sonatas for violin and continuo, etc.; books: La Musica dei Greci (Rome, 1914), Musiciستي contemporanei (Milan, 1914), Intermezzi critici (Florence, 1921), Paganini (Turin, 1940), Musica e dramma (Rome, 1945), La Musica italiana dell'800 (Turin, 1946); numerous articles in Italian magazines. —Bibliography: R. Fondi, I. Pizzetti e il dramma musicale italiano d'oggi (Rome, 1919); G. M. Gatti, I. Pizzetti, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., April, 1923); M. Pilati, 'Fra Gherardo' di Pizzetti (Milan, 1928); M. Rinaldi, L'Arte di Pizzetti e 'Lo Straniero' (Rome, 1930); G. Tebaldini, I. Pizzetti (Parma, 1931); G. M. Gatti, I. Pizzetti (Turin, 1934; in English, London, 1951; a basic biography, with a list of works; new Italian ed., 1955); G. Bastianelli, Pizzetti, in 'Il Convegno' (March-April, 1921); M. Castelnovo-Tedesco, I. Pizzetti e la sua musica corale, in 'Il Pianoforte' (Aug. 15, 1921; a Pizzetti issue); G. Gavazzeni, Tre studi su Pizzetti (Como, 1937); a special Pizzetti number of the 'Rassegna Musicale' (Oct. 1940); M. Castelnovo-Tedesco, I. Pizzetti, in David Ewen's The Book of Modern Composers (N. Y., 1945); a symposium, Firenze a I. Pizzetti (Florence, 1947).

Pizzi (pit'sē), Emilio, Italian composer; b. Verona, Feb. 1, 1861; d. Milan, Nov. 27, 1940. He studied at the Istituto Musicale of Bergamo and at the Cons. of Milan (with Ponchielli and Bazzini); received 1st prize for his 1-act opera, Lina (1885); in 1897, was appointed director of the Istituto Musicale at Bergamo; from 1900 lived for some time in London. —Operas: Guglielmo Ratcliff (Bologna, Oct. 31, 1889), Gabriella (world première, Boston, Nov. 25, 1893, with Adelina Patti in the title role), La Rosalba (Turin, May 31, 1899), Vendetta (in German, Cologne, Dec. 1, 1906; in Italian, as Ivanina, Bergamo, Sept. 14, 1926); also a comic opera in English, Bric-à-Brac Will (London, 1895); he further wrote a Messa solenne for soli, chorus, and orch.; a Requiem; violin pieces; piano pieces; songs.

Pizzini, Carlo Alberto, Italian composer; b. Rome, March 22, 1905. He studied with Respighi at the Rome Cons. (graduated in 1929); remained in Rome as composer and teacher. —Works: opera Dardanio (Rome, 1928); for orch.: Sinfonia in stile classico (1930); Il Poema delle Dolomiti (1931); Strapaese, a symph. suite (1932); Al Piemonte, symph. triptych (1941); Grotte di Postumia, divertimento in variation form (1941); chamber music; piano pieces.

Plaidy (plā'-dē), Louis, famous German piano teacher; b. Wermsdorf, Nov. 28, 1810; d. Grimma, March 3, 1874. He began his professional career as a violinist, and performed in public in Dresden and Leipzig; at the same time he took piano lessons from Agthe, and became greatly proficient as pianist, so that Mendelssohn engaged him in 1843 as piano teacher at the Leipzig Cons. Plaidy concentrated on the technical problems of piano pedagogy; taught at the Leipzig Cons. until 1865; then continued to give private lessons. He publ. a number of instructive piano studies which are still widely used; his Technische Studien für das Pianoforte-Spiel is a standard manual; he also publ. a booklet, Der Klavierlehrer (1874; British ed. as The Pianoforte Teacher's Guide; American ed., transl. by J. S. Dwight, as The Piano-Teacher).

Plamenac (plāh'-mēh-nāts), Dragan, eminent musicologist; b. Zagreb, Croatia, Feb. 8, 1895. He began his studies in composition, piano, and violin in his native city; then studied law at the Univs. of Zagreb and Vienna; LL.D. (Zagreb); took composition lessons with Franz Schreker at the State Academy of Music in Vienna, and with Novák in Prague. In 1919 he went to Paris under a French Government Scholarship; studied musicology with André Pirro at the Sorbonne; then in Vienna under Guido Adler; received his Ph.D. from Vienna Univ. in 1925, with the dissertation Joh. Ockeghem als Motetten- und Chansonkomponist. From 1925 to 1927 he was coach and assistant conductor at the Berlin City Opera; 1928 to 1939, taught musicology at the Univ. of Zagreb; in Sept., 1939, came to the U. S. as a representative of Yugoslavia at the International Musicological Congress; remained in the U. S.; American citizen, 1946; taught at the St. Louis Institute of Music (1940-43); then was connected with the Office of War Information; was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1947; in 1955 appointed prof. of musicology at the Univ. of Illinois. He edited the collected works of Ockeghem (vol. 1, 1927, publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel; vol. 2, 1947, publ. by the American Musicological Society); and Odabrani Moteti (selected motets) by Ivan Lukačić (Zagreb, 1935).—Important writings: La Chanson de l'Homme armé . . . in 'Rapport sur le congrès archéologique et historique,' Bruges, 1925; Autour d'Ockeghem, in the 'Revue Musicale' (Feb., 1928); Zur l'Homme armé-Frage, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1928-29); Tomaso Cecchini, a bio-bibliographical study (Bulletin of the Yugoslav Academy of Sciences and Arts, 1938); Music of the 16th and 17th centuries in Dalmatia in 'Papers Read at the International Congress of Musicology . . . New York . . . 1939' (N. Y., 1944); New Light on the Last Years of C.P.E. Bach, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1949); A Reconstruction of the French Chansonnier in the Biblioteca Colombina, Seville, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1951, and Jan., 1952); Keyboard Music of the 14th Century in Codex Faenza 117, in the 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (1951); Deux pièces de la Renaissance tirées de fonds florentins, in the 'Revue Belge de Musicologie' (1952); An Unknown Composition by Dufay? in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1954); numerous other articles in European and American publications. He contributed the section 'Music in the Adriatic Coastal Areas of the Southern Slavs' to G. Reese's Music in the Renaissance.

Planchet (plähn - shä'), Dominique-Charles, French composer and pedagogue; b. Toulouse, Dec. 25, 1857; d. Versailles, July 19, 1946. He studied at the École Niedermeyer in Paris; was for many years organist at the Cathedral in Versailles; in 1898 appointed organist at the Ste.-Trinité, Paris; taught at the École Niedermeyer; was active as general secretary of the Société des Compositeurs; in 1905, won the Prix Chartier for chamber music. He wrote an opera, Le Fils du Croisé (privately performed in Versailles, 1885); 2 cello concertos; Esclavage africain, cantata for male voices; much sacred music; organ pieces; a piano trio; a violin sonata; songs; contributed the section 'L'Art du maître de chapelle' to Lavignac's 'Encyclopédie de la Musique.' On his chamber music, see the entry in 'Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music' (London, 1930).

Plançon (plähn-söhn'), Pol (-Henri), famous French bass singer; b. Fumay, June 12, 1851; d. Paris, Aug. 12, 1914. He was destined by his parents for a commercial career in Paris, but showed a natural vocal ability, and began to study singing with Sbriglia; made his operatic début in Lyons (1877); then appeared in Paris (Feb. 11, 1880); after a season in Monte Carlo, he made a highly successful appearance at the Paris Opéra as Méphistophélès in Gounod's Faust (June 23, 1883); sang that role more than 100 times during his 10 seasons at the Opéra, and was regarded as unrivaled in his dramatic delivery and vocal power. On June 3, 1891, he sang Méphistophélès in London; his American début, in the same role, took place at the Metropolitan Opera House on Nov. 29, 1893. He then resigned from the Paris Opéra and remained a member of the Metropolitan Opera until his retirement in 1906. He had an imposing physique, mobile features, and an innate acting ability. His repertory consisted of about 50 roles in French, Italian, German, and English. In some operas he sang more than 1 part, as in Roméo et Juliette (Capulet and Friar), Aida (Ramfis and King), Les Huguenots (St.-Bris and Marcel), etc. Of Wagnerian roles, he sang the Landgrave, King Henry, and Pogner.

Planquette (plähn-kéht'), Jean-Robert, French composer of operettas; b. Paris, July 31, 1848; d. there, Jan. 28, 1903. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Duprato; wrote chansonnettes and 'saynètes' for the cafés-concerts in Paris; then composed a 1-act operetta, Paille d'avoine (1874); and others. He achieved his first great success with the production of Les Cloches de Corneville, a comic opera in 3 acts (Folies-Dramatiques, April 19, 1877); it was performed for the 1000th time there in 1886, and became one of the most popular works of its genre; in English, given as The Chimes of Normandy (N. Y., Oct. 22, 1877; London, Feb. 23, 1878). Other operettas were Le Chevalier Gaston (Monte Carlo, Feb. 8, 1879), Rip Van Winkle (London, Oct. 14, 1882; very successful), Nell Gwynne (1884), Surcouf (1887; in English as Paul Jones), La Cocarde tricolore (1892), Le Talisman (1893), Panurge (1895), Mam'zelle Quat'Sous (1897). A posthumous operetta, Le Paradis de Mahomet (orchestrated by Louis Ganne), was produced at the Variétés in Paris in 1906.

Plantade, Charles-Henri, French composer; b. Pontoise, Oct. 14, 1764; d. Paris, Dec. 18, 1839. As a child, he studied singing and the cello in the Royal School for the 'pages de musique'; afterwards he took lessons with Honoré Langlé (theory), Hüllmandel (piano), and Petrini (harp). In 1797 he became singing teacher at the Campan Institute at St.-Denis, where Hortense de Beauharnais, the future queen of Holland, was his pupil. He subsequently was in the service of Queen Hortense as her representative in Paris; was prof. at the Paris Cons. from 1799 to 1807, and again in 1815-16 and 1818-28. From 1812 he also held the post of maître de chambre at the Paris Opéra. He received the ribbon of the Legion of Honor from Louis XVIII (1814). Losing his various positions after the revolution of 1830, he retired to Batignolles. He wrote several operas, of which Le Mari de circonstances (Opéra-Comique, March 18, 1813) was the most successful; 2 other operas, Palma, ou Le Voyage en Grèce (1798) and Zoé, ou La Pauvre Petite (1800), were also performed. He further composed Masses, motets, etc. for the Chapelle Royale; publ. 20 sets of romances, 3 books of vocal duets (nocturnes), and a harp sonata.

Planté (plähn-tä'), Francis, French pianist; b. Orthez, Basses-Pyrénées, March 2, 1839; d. St. Avit, near Mont-de-Marsan, Dec. 19, 1934. From 1849 he was a pupil of Marmontel at Paris Cons.; won 1st prize after 7 months' tuition. After a course in harmony in Bazin's class (1853), he retired for private study during ten years, and then reappeared as a pianist of finished technique and style. About 1900 he suddenly vanished from concert life, vowing that he should 'never be seen again in public.' He created a sensation in 1915 when he was heard again in several concerts in Paris; but, in order to keep his strange vow, he was hidden from the view of the audience by a screen. Made excellent transcriptions of classic pieces (Gluck, Mozart), but publ. no original compositions.—Cf. O. Comettant, Francis Planté (Paris, 1874); A. Dandelot, Francis Planté (Paris, 1920; 3rd ed., 1930); A. Lenoir and Jean de Nahuque, Francis Planté: Doyen des pianistes (Paris, 1931).

Plass, Ludwig, German trombonist and historian of military music; b. Osterode, March 13, 1864; d. Berlin, Sept. 16, 1946. He studied trombone at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; in 1893 became solo trombonist of the Royal Chapel; in 1905, court bandleader; collected materials on military music in Germany; wrote 28 pieces for wind instruments; publ. interesting historical essays on the German post-horn; also Bachs Clarintrompeter (1927); Was bliesen unsere Reiter? (1934); etc.

Platania, Pietro, Italian composer; b. Catania, April 5, 1828; d. Naples, April 26, 1907. He studied with P. Raimondi at the Naples Cons.; was director of the Palermo Cons. (1863); later maestro di cappella at Milan, and director of the Royal College of Music at Naples (1888).—Operas: Matilde Bentivoglio (Palermo, 1852); Piccarda Donati (Palermo, March 3, 1857); La Vendetta slava (Palermo, Feb. 4, 1865); Spartaco (Naples, March 29, 1891). He also wrote a symphony, L'Italia; a festival symphony with choruses to welcome King Umberto in 1878; Pensiero sinfonico; a Requiem; Psalm 67 for chorus and orch.; etc.; and Trattato d'Armonia (1872).—Cf. F. Guardione, Pietro Platania (Milan, 1908).

Plato, the great Greek philosopher (427-347 B.C.); formulated in his 'Timaeus' a system of musical harmony, eruditely interpreted by Th.-Henri Martin in his Études sur le Timée de Platon (Paris, 1841). R. von Westphal, in his Harmonik und Melopöie der Griechen (Leipzig, 1865), von Jan in Die Harmonie der Sphären (in 'Philologus,' vol. LII), and H. Abert's Die Lehre vom Ethos in der griechischen Musik (Leipzig, 1899) may also be consulted. Plato's thoughts on music are collected in an essay by Deyk in Weber's 'Cäcilia' (1828). Plato likened the movements of music to those of the soul, whose development may therefore be influenced by musical art.—Cf. J. Regner, Platos Musik-Theorie (Halle, 1923).

Platti, Giovanni, Italian composer; b. Venice, 1690; d. Würzburg, Jan. 11, 1763. He was attached to the Würzburg court in 1724; was active there as tenor, violinist, composer, and teacher; regarded by some music historians as the first composer to employ the classical sonata form, but this contention is debatable. 12 keyboard sonatas by Platti were edited by L. Hoffmann-Erbrecht (Leipzig, 1953-54); one is included in W. S. Newman, '13 Keyboard Sonatas of the 18th and 19th Centuries' (Chapel Hill, N. C., 1947); a Miserere was transcribed by Molinari and performed in Rome (March 15, 1936); a flute sonata was edited by Jarnach (1936). —Cf. F. Torrefranca, La Creazione della sonata drammatica moderna rivendicata all'Italia: Giovanni Platti, il grande, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (XVII, 309); O. Kaul, Geschichte der Würzburger Hofmusik im 18. Jahrhundert (Würzburg, 1924).

Playford, John, English music publisher; b. Norfolk, 1623; d. London, Nov., 1686. He was in business for 36 years (1648-84); publ. 'The Dancing Master' (1651; 12th ed., 1703; modern ed. by M. Dean-Smith, London, 1958); Hilton's 'Catch that catch can' (1652); 'Select Musical Ayres and Dialogues' (1653); 'Musick's Recreation on the Lyra Violl' (1652; in a collection); 'Briefe Introduction to the Skill of Musick for Song and Violl' (1654; enlarged ed. 1655, with an essay on The Art of Descant by Dr. Thos. Campion, which was revised by Purcell in the 10th ed. of 1683; this very popular work, written by John Playford himself, ran through 19 numbered eds. up to 1730, besides 6 or more unnumbered eds.); 'Psalms and Hymns in Solemn Musick of four parts . . .' (1671); 'The Whole Book of Psalms, with the usual Spiritual Songs' a 3 (1673; 20th ed., 1757); 'The Musical Companion' (1673; Book I, catches and rounds a 3; Book II, dialogues, glees, ayres, and songs a 2-4); 'Choice Ayres, Songs and Dialogues to be sung to the theorbo . . .' (5 books; 1676-84); 'Musick's Delight on the Cithern' (1666); 'The Division Violin' (variations for violin over a basso ostinato; 2nd ed., 1685); etc.—His son and successor, Henry Playford (b. May 5, 1657; d. 1720), publ. 'The Theatre of Musick' (with R. Carr; 4 books; 1685-87; 'the newest and best songs'); 'Banquet of Musick' (6 books; 1688-1692); Purcell's 'Orpheus Britannicus' (1698-1702) and 'Ten Sonatas' with Te Deum and Jubilate for St. Cecilia's Day (1697); Blow's 'Amphion Anglicus' (1700) and Ode on Purcell's death; etc. —Cf. F. Kidson, J. Playford and 17th Century Music Publishing, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1918); J. Pulver, J. Playford, in the 'Mus. News and Herald' (May, 1927); C. L. Day and Eleanor Murrie, English Song-Books, 1651-1702, and Their Publishers (London, 1936; reprint from 'Transactions of the Bibliographical Society,' March, 1936).

Plessis, Hubert du, South African composer; b. Cape Province, June 7, 1922. He studied composition with W. H. Bell, and later at the Rhodes Univ. College in Cape Town; in 1946, was appointed instructor there; in 1951, he went to London. Many of his works are based on South African themes; he writes mostly in smaller forms; among his compositions is a serenade for strings (1952); a string quartet (1953); piano pieces; songs.

Pleyel (plä-yēl'), Camille, French pianist, son of Ignaz Pleyel; b. Strasbourg, Dec. 18, 1788; d. Paris, May 4, 1855. He was a pupil of his father, had some success as a composer, but is chiefly noteworthy as a piano manufacturer, entering his father's firm in 1821. Kalkbrenner was his partner for a time; Auguste Wolff, his successor. —His wife, Marie-Félicité-Denise (b. Paris, Sept. 4, 1811; d. St.-Josse-ten-Noode, March 30, 1875), was a pianist; pupil of Henri Herz, Moscheles, and Kalkbrenner. In her fifteenth year, as Mlle. Moke, her virtuosity created a sensation in Belgium, Austria, Germany, and Russia. Before her marriage, Berlioz was in love with her (1830). From 1848-72 she was prof. of piano at the Brussels Cons.

Pleyel, Ignaz Joseph, pianist, composer, and piano manufacturer; b. Ruppertsthal, near Vienna, June 1, 1757; d. on his estate near Paris, Nov. 14, 1831. His piano teacher till his 15th year was Wanhal; Count Erdödy, his patron, then placed him under Haydn's care, with whom he lived 5 years. The count then appointed him his private Kapellmeister, but granted leave of absence for further study in Rome, together with means of maintenance. Pleyel remained in this congenial atmosphere until 1781, then making a brief visit to Vienna, and returning to Rome, departing for the second time, in 1783, to become 2d Kapellmeister at the Strasbourg Cathedral. He was advanced to 1st Kapellmeister in 1789; lost his position owing to the Revolution, and went to London in the winter of 1791-92 on an invitation to conduct the Professional Concerts, a rival enterprise (though Pleyel did not know it) to his old teacher Haydn's concerts under Salomon's management. These Professional Concerts were successful in themselves, but did not overwhelm the rival enterprise; after conducting them for a few years, Pleyel returned to his property near Strasbourg, but was subjected to such annoyances from the revolutionists that he sold his place in 1795 and went to Paris. There he began business as a music seller, and in 1807 founded a piano factory, the growing prosperity of which gradually absorbed his attention and caused him to give up composition. The firm, now known as 'Pleyel et Cie.,' is one of the most important in France. Pleyel was an extremely prolific instrumental composer; he publ. 29 symphonies; a quantity of chamber music (5 books of string quintets; 45 string quartets; 6 quartets for flute and strings, etc.); 2 violin concertos; 4 cello concertos; 2 piano concertos; 6 grand sonatas for piano solo; etc. His music is entirely in the style of Haydn, whose disciple and admirer he was. —Cf. L. de Fourcaud, La Salle Pleyel (Paris, 1893).

Plotnikov, Eugene, Russian conductor; b. Odessa, Aug. 29, 1877; d. New York, Sept. 28, 1951. He studied at the Moscow Cons.; was coach and assistant conductor at the Moscow Opera; also conducted at the Paris Opéra (1921). In 1922 he settled in the U. S.; conducted Russian operas in N. Y. and other American cities with Shaliapin; in 1934 became conductor of the N. Y. Federal Symph. Orch.

Plüddemann, Martin, German composer; b. Kolberg, Sept. 29, 1854; d. Berlin, Oct. 8, 1897. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; later took singing lessons with Hey in Munich; in 1889 was engaged as singing teacher at the Styrian Music School in Graz. He wrote a number of popular male choruses and ballads; publ. pamphlets of Wagnerian tendency. —Cf. R. Batka, M. Plüddemann und seine Balladen (Prague, 1896); L. Schemann, M. Plüddemann und die deutsche Ballade (1930).

Plutarch, famous Greek writer; b. Chæronea, Boeotia, 50 A. D.; d. there, 120. Among his treatises ('Moralia') one, De musica, contains important historical data concerning music (Latin transl. by R. Volkmann; German transl., with parallel Greek text, and commentary, by R. Westphal, 1865; also by Weil and Reinach, with commentary, 1900).

Pocci (pöch'-chē), Franz, Graf von, composer; b. (of an old Italian noble family) Munich, March 7, 1807; d. there, May 7, 1876. Possessing versatile talents, he wrote plays with music for a puppet theater in Munich, for which he also designed the scenery. He was at his best in pieces for children (Blumenlieder, Bildertöne für Klavier, Soldatenlieder, Jägerlieder, Alte und neue Kinderlieder, etc.). His 2 piano sonatas were praised by Schumann for their poetic expression and fine romantic spirit. An opera, Der Alchemist, was produced in Munich (1840); his grandson F. Pocci publ. a collection: Franz Pocci's Lustiges Komödienbüchlein (Munich, 1921). —Cf. K. Pastor, Franz Pocci als Musiker (Munich, 1932); L. Hirschberg, F. Pocci, der Musiker, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1918).

Pochon (poh-shohn'), Alfred, Swiss violinist; b. Yverdon, July 30, 1878. At the age of 11 he appeared in public concerts; at the recommendation of Joachim, he went to the Liège Cons. to study with César Thomson; in 1898 became a teacher there; also played 2nd violin in Thomson's string quartet. In 1902 he was requested by the philanthropist E. de Coppet to organize a string quartet, which became famous as the Flonzaley Quartet, so named after Coppet's summer residence near Lausanne; Pochon remained a member (as 2nd violin) throughout its existence; traveled with it all over Europe, and gave notable concert cycles in the U. S., until its disbandment in 1929; after that he became a member of the Stradivarius Quartet of N. Y. In 1938 he returned to Switzerland; in 1941 was elected director of the Cons. of Lausanne, retiring in 1957. —Publ. A Progressive Method of String-Quartet Playing (N. Y., 1924) and several essays on musical subjects.

Poglietti, Alessandro, Italian composer; from 1661 court organist in Vienna; killed in July 1683 at the siege of Vienna by the Turks. His compositions include 12 ricercari, suites for harpsichord (On the Hungarian Rebellion, Nightingale Suite, etc.), and other instrumental pieces, some of which appear in Toccatas et Suites, publ. by Roger (Amsterdam); also church music. H. Bötstiber publ. some reprints in the Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich (vol. 27); some dance music publ. ibid., vol. 56. —Cf. A. Koczirz, Zur Lebensgeschichte Alexander Pogliettis, in the 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (1916; pp. 116-27).

Pohl, Karl Ferdinand, German writer on music; b. Darmstadt, Sept. 6, 1819; d. Vienna, April 28, 1887, where he had been archivist and librarian to the 'Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde' from 1866. During 3 years' residence in London (1863-66) he gathered all available facts concerning the residence there of Mozart and Haydn, embodying them in his Mozart und Haydn in London (1867; 2 vols.). Pohl also began an extended biography of Haydn, but publ. only one vol. (in 2 parts: 1875, 1882); the work was finished by Hugo Botsch. Other publications: International Exhibition of 1862. Cursory Notices on the . . . History of the Glass Harmonica (London, 1862); an interesting historical review, Die Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde . . . und ihr Conservatorium (1871); Denkschrift aus Anlass des 100 jährigen Bestehens der Tonkünstler-Sozietät in Wien (1871); Bibliographie der Musiksammlerwerke des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts (with R. Eitner and A. Lagerberg; 1877).

Pohl, Richard, German writer on music; b. Leipzig, Sept. 12, 1826; d. Dec. 17, 1896, at Baden-Baden, where he had lived since 1846. Study at Göttingen and Leipzig, and a long friendship with Liszt at Weimar, showed their influence in Pohl's sturdy advocacy of neo-German tendencies, both in the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik,' of which he was joint editor for some years, and in his writings: Akustische Briefe für Musiker und Musikfreunde (1853); Bayreuther Erinnerungen (1877); Autobiographisches (1881); Richard Wagner (1883; in Walderssee's 'Vorträge'); Richard Wagner, Studien und Kritiken (1883); Franz Liszt (1883); Hector Berlioz, Studien und Erinnerungen (1884); Die Höhenzüge der musikalischen Entwicklung (1888). He also publ. Gedichte (1859; 2nd ed., 1883); a comedy, Musikalische Leiden (1856); a German transl. of Berlioz's Collected Writings; wrote connecting text for Schumann's Manfred and Liszt's Prometheus; and wrote the melodrama Die Wallfahrt nach Kevelaar, an Abendlied for string orch., a Wiegenlied for violin with piano, ballads, songs, men's choruses, etc. —From his notes and collected materials his second wife, Luise, compiled Hector Berlioz' Leben und Werke (1900) and a novel, Richard Wiegand. Episoden aus dem Leben eines grossen Meisters (1904; modeled closely after the life of Richard Wagner). —His first wife, Johanna Pohl (née Eyth; b. Karlsruhe, March 19, 1824; d. Baden-Baden, Nov. 25, 1870), was a harp virtuoso.

Pohlig, Karl, German conductor; b. Tepitz, Feb. 10, 1858; d. Brunswick, June 17, 1928. A pupil of Liszt in Weimar, Pest, and Rome, he began his career as a pianist, touring Germany, Austria, Russia, Scandinavia, and Italy; became 1st Kapellmeister at Graz, then assistant conductor to Mahler at the Vienna court opera, and conductor at Covent Garden (1897, 1898); until 1900 1st Kapellmeister at the Hoftheater in Coburg; 1900-07, at the Hoftheater in Stuttgart, and conductor of the symph. concerts; in 1907, engaged as conductor of the Philadelphia Orch.; directed it for 5 seasons, emphasizing the German repertory, and particularly Wagner, of whom he was an impassioned admirer. In 1912 he returned to Germany, and became conductor of the Brunswick Opera. He wrote a symph. poem, Per Aspera ad Astra (Stuttgart, 1902), several choral works, and songs.

Poirée (pwäh-rä'), (Élie-Émile-) Gabriel, French writer on music; b. Villeneuve-St.-Georges, near Paris, Oct. 9, 1850; d. Paris, May 25, 1925. Wrote for various papers, was librarian of the Ste. Geneviève library, and publ. L'Évolution de la musique (1884); an essay on Tannhäuser (1895; with Alfred Ernst); Essais de technique et d'esthétique musicales (No. 1, Wagner's Meistersinger, 1898; No. 2, Étude sur le discours musical, 1899; new ed. 1922); Le Chant gnosticomagique des sept voyelles (1901; with Ch.-E. Ruelle); Une nouvelle interprétation du second hymne delphique (1901); Chopin (1907); R. Wagner (1921); also publ. a string quartet (1908).

Poise (pwäz), (Jean Alexandre) Ferdinand, French composer of comic operas; b. Nîmes, June 3, 1828; d. Paris, May 13, 1892; studied at the Paris Cons. with A. Adam and Zimmerman, taking 2nd Grand Prix de Rome in 1852. He composed a number of light operas, all produced in Paris: Bonsoir, voisin (Sept. 18, 1853); Le Thé de Polichinelle (May 4, 1856); Don Pèdre (April 30, 1858); Le Jardinier galant (March 4, 1861); Le Corricolo (Nov. 28, 1868); Les deux billets (Feb. 19, 1870); Les trois Souhais (Oct. 29, 1873); La Surprise de l'amour (Oct. 31, 1877); L'Amour médecin (Dec. 20, 1880); Joli Gilles (Oct. 10, 1884).

Poissl, Johann Nepomuk, German composer; b. Haukenzell, Bavaria, Feb. 15, 1783; d. Munich, Aug. 17, 1865. He was a pupil of Danzi in Munich; from 1825 to 1848 was in charge of the court music. He wrote about 12 operas; of these the following had a modicum of success: Athalia (Munich, June 3, 1814), Der Wettkampf zu Olympia (Munich, April 21, 1815), and Nittetis (Darmstadt, June 29, 1817); also several oratorios, a Mass, and other works for the church. —Cf. E. Reipschläger, Schu- baur, Danzi und Poissl (Berlin, 1911); also L. Schrott in 'Die Musik' (1940; pp. 299-303).

Pokrass (pöh-krähs'), Dimitri Yakovlevitch, Russian composer of popular music; b. Kiev, Nov. 7, 1899. He studied piano at St. Petersburg Cons. (1913-17); in 1919 he joined the Soviet Cavalry during the Civil War, and wrote the song, The Red Cavalry. This was the first of a series of many songs that have acquired great popularity, among them If War Comes Tomorrow (1938), March of the Tank Brigade, Farewell, etc. He also wrote music for films.

Polacco, Giorgio, conductor; b. Venice, April 12, 1875. Taught at first in St. Petersburg, he continued in Venice at the Liceo B. Marcello, and graduated from the Cons. G. Verdi in Milan. After conducting in various Italian cities, he was 4 seasons at the Teatro Colón in Buenos Aires, and 7 in Rio de Janeiro; then in Italy again; in 1906 appeared for the first time in the U. S. (San Francisco). On Nov. 11, 1912, he made his début at the Metropolitan Opera House (with Puccini's Manon Lescaut); following Toscanini's resignation (1915), Polacco was principal conductor of the Italian, French, and Russian works until 1917; 1918-30, chief conductor of the Italian repertory of the Chicago Opera Co.; then settled in N. Y., where he was still living in 1958.

Poldini, Ede (Eduard), Hungarian composer; b. Budapest, June 13, 1869; d. Vevey, Switzerland, June 29, 1957. He studied at the Budapest Cons., and later with Mandy-czewski (theory) and Julius Epstein (piano) in Vienna. In 1908 he went to live at Vevey. In 1935 he received the order of the Hungarian Cross; in 1948 was awarded the Hungarian Pro Arte Prize. He composed the comic operas The Vagabond and the Princess (Budapest, Oct. 17, 1903), The Carnival Marriage (Budapest, Feb. 16, 1924; produced in London under the title, Love Adrift, 1926), and Himfy (Budapest, 1938); wrote in all 156 opus numbers, most of them for piano; his Poupée valsante became an international favorite; other popular piano pieces are Arlequinades, Morceaux pittoresques, Images, Moments musicaux, Marionnettes, etc.

Poldowski (pen name of Irene Regine Wieniawska; by marriage, Lady Dean Paul), composer; b. Brussels, May 16, 1880; d. London, Jan. 28, 1932. She was a daughter of the Polish violinist Henryk Wieniawski; her mother was an Englishwoman. She studied at the Brussels Cons. with Gevaert, and later in London with Percy Pitt; married Sir Aubrey Dean Paul; took additional courses in composition with Gedalge and Vincent d'Indy in Paris; began writing songs to French words, in the Impressionist style; set 21 poems by Paul Verlaine, and 8 poems by others; her songs have been frequently performed at recitals; other compositions are: Caledonian Market, a suite of 8 pieces for piano; Berceuse de l'enfant mourant for violin and piano; Tango for violin and piano; Suite miniature de chansons à danser for woodwind instruments; 2 symph. sketches (Nocturnes and Tenements); and an opera, Laughter.

Pole, William, English writer on music; b. Birmingham, April 22, 1814; d. London, Dec. 30, 1900. He was a prof. of civil engineering at University College, London; also a student of music (Mus. Doc., Oxon., 1864), and examiner in music for London Univ., 1876-90. Publ. Philosophy of Music (1879; 6th ed., 1924). Also contributor to the original ed. of Grove's 'Dictionary.'

Polignac (poh-lē-ñak'), Armande de, French composer; b. Paris, Jan. 8, 1876. She studied with Gabriel Fauré and Vincent d'Indy; married the Comte de Chabannes; her salon in Paris became a center of artistic and musical activities. She composed the operas Morgane and L'Hypocrite sanctifié; a dramatic scene, Judith de Béthulie (Paris Opéra, March 23, 1916); La Source lointaine, Persian ballet (Paris, 1913); Les mille et une nuits, Arabian ballet (Paris, 1914); Chimères, Greek ballet (Paris Opéra, June 10, 1923); Urashima, Japanese ballet; also a Chinese ballet for small orch., La Recherche de la vérité; Petite suite pour le clavecin (1939); etc. In 1958 she was living on her country estate at Neaufles le Vieux (Seine-et-Oise).

Polinski, Alexander, Polish music historian; b. Włostow, June 4, 1845; d. Warsaw, Aug. 13, 1916. He was a pupil of Noskowski, Zelenski, and Minchejmer in Warsaw; 1899, music critic for the 'Warsaw Courier'; from 1904, prof. of history of music at the Warsaw Cons. Publ. (in Polish) Concerning Church-music and Its Reform (1890), The Song 'Bogorodzica' from the Viewpoint of Music (1903), History of Polish Music (1907).

Polivka, Vladimir, Czech pianist and composer; b. Prague, July 6, 1896; d. there, May 11, 1948. He studied at the Prague Cons., and became a successful pianist; traveled in Europe and America with a chamber music group; from 1923 to 1930 taught piano in Chicago. Returning to Prague (1939), he was appointed prof. at the Cons. there. He wrote many picturesque piano pieces: Days in Chicago (1926); Landscapes in the Years of Occupation (1941); etc., also several collections of children's pieces; publ. a book of travels, describing his world tour (Prague, 1945).

Polko (né Vogel), Elise, German singer and writer on music, b. Leipzig, Jan. 13, 1822; d. Munich, May 15, 1899. Gifted with a fine mezzo-soprano voice, she studied under García at Paris for the stage; but after a few appearances at Frankfurt, she married the railway engineer Eduard Polko (d. 1887), and thenceforward sang only occasionally on the concert stage. In musical circles she became widely known by the Musikalische Märchen (publ. in the 'Signale'; later in book-form, 3 vols., 1852; also in English); then followed Faustina Hasse (a novel in 2 vols., 1860; 2nd ed., 1870); Die Bettleroper (3 vols., 1864); Alte Herren (1865; Bach's 6 predecessors at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig); Verklungene Akkorde (1868; 3rd ed., 1873); Erinnerungen an F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (1868; in English, 1869); Niccolo Paganini und die Geigenbauer (1876; also Italian transl.); Vom Gesange (1876); Aus der Künstlerwelt (1878); Die Klassiker der Musik (1880); Meister der Tonkunst (1897).

Pollack, Egon, Czech conductor; b. Prague, May 3, 1879; d. (of a heart attack during a performance) there, June 14, 1933. Pupil of K. Knittl at the Cons. in Prague; began his career as chorus master at the Landestheater there; in 1905 he was called to the Bremen Opera as 1st Kapellmeister; went to Leipzig in 1910 in the same capacity; 1912-17, 1st Kapellmeister at the Frankfurt Opera; from 1915, conductor of the Wagner works with the Chicago Opera Co.; 1917-32, 1st Kapellmeister at the Hamburg Opera; 1932, conductor at Cairo, Egypt; also guest-conductor at the Vienna State Opera (1933) and in other European cities. In Germany he was regarded as one of the foremost interpreters of R. Strauss.

Pollak, Robert, violinist; b. Vienna, Jan. 18, 1880; studied there and in Leipzig; teacher of violin in Geneva and Lausanne (1905-14), Moscow (1919), Vienna (1919-24); 1926, teacher at the San Francisco Cons.; 1929, went to Japan; 1930-37, prof.

at the Imperial Cons. of Tokyo; 1937, returned to California; became an American citizen in 1943. In 1941 he was appointed prof. of violin at the Los Angeles Cons.

Pollaroli, Antonio, Italian composer; son of Carlo Francesco Pollaroli; b. Venice, 1680; d. there, May 4, 1746. He studied with his father, and became his assistant at San Marco in Venice, 1702; in 1723 he was 2nd maestro di cappella there; in 1740, 1st maestro. He wrote the operas Aristeo (Venice, 1700) and Leucippo e Teonoe (1719), among others.

Pollaroli, Carlo Francesco, Italian organist and composer; b. Brescia, 1653; d. Venice, 1722. He was a pupil of Legrenzi. In 1665 he became a chorister at San Marco, Venice; in 1690, 2nd organist; in 1692, 2nd maestro di cappella. He wrote the oratorios Jefté, La Rosinda, and Jesabel, and many operas for Venice: La Forza della virtù (1693), Ottone (1694); GFinganni felici (1695), Faramondo (1699), Semiramide (1714), and Ariodante (1716). His Sonata per organo o cembalo is reprinted in Torchi's 'L'Arte musicale in Italia' (vol. III).

Pollini, Bernhard (real name Baruch Pohl), German impresario; b. Cologne, Dec. 16, 1838; d. Hamburg, Nov. 27, 1897. A tenor singer, he made his début at Cologne, 1858, as Arturo in Bellini's I Puritani; later sang baritone roles in an Italian opera-troupe, of which he subsequently became manager and artistic director. He then undertook the management of the Lemberg Theater, later of the Italian opera at St. Petersburg and Moscow. His fame dates from his assumption, in 1874, of the directorship of the Hamburg City Theater; in 1876 he also became manager of the Altona Theater and in 1894 of the Thalia Theater in Hamburg.

Pollini, Cesare, Cavaliere de', Italian writer on music; b. Padua, June 13, 1858; d. there, Jan. 26, 1912. After legal studies at the Univ. of Padua, he took a 2-year course in music with Bazzini in Milan (1881-83); from 1883-85 director of the chief Cons. at Padua; resigned to devote himself to writing and composition. Publ. a Terminologia musicale tedesco-italiana; a Teoria generale della musica; La Musica italiana nelle sue principali fasi storiche; etc. —Cf. G. Sacerdoti, C. Pollini (Padua, 1912); S. Leoni, C. Pollini nella vita e nell'arte (Padua, 1917).

Pollini, Francesco (Giuseppe), Austrian pianist; b. Laibach (Ljubljana), of Italian parents, 1763; d. Milan, Sept. 17, 1846. He was a pupil of Mozart (who dedicated a violin rondo to him) at Vienna, later of Zingarelli at Milan, where he was appointed prof. of piano shortly after the opening of the Cons. (1809). He was the first to write piano music on 3 staves, imitated therein by Liszt, Thalberg, and others; a specimen of this style being one of his 32 Esercizi in forma di toccata (op. 42), a central melody surrounded by passagework for both hands; publ. a method and many pieces for piano; wrote an opera buffa, La Casetta nei boschi (Milan, Feb. 25, 1798).

Pollitt, Arthur W., English organist; b. Liverpool, Nov. 27, 1878; d. there, Feb. 3, 1933. He studied at the Royal College of Music in Manchester, where he became assistant organist at the Cathedral; 1900-17, organist at the Liverpool Church, and at the School for the Blind; 1918, chorus director of the Liverpool Philharmonic Society. Publ. The Necessity of Music in a School Curriculum; The Self-reliant Musician; The Enjoyment of Music; etc.

Polovinkin, Leonid, Russian composer; b. Kurgan, Aug. 13, 1894; d. Moscow, Feb. 2, 1949. He studied at the Moscow Cons. with Glière and Vassilenko; began his career as a composer by writing theater music in Moscow after the revolution of 1917; adopted a modernistic idiom; emphasized the element of humor. Later, however, he devoted more time to instrumental music; wrote 9 symphonies, 4 string quartets, 2 piano trios, several overtures on folk themes; 5 piano sonatas; 24 postludes for piano; songs.

Ponce (pöhn'-sëh), Manuel María, distinguished Mexican composer; b. Fresnillo, Dec. 8, 1882; d. Mexico City, April 24, 1948. He studied piano with his older sister; in 1905, went to Europe, where he took lessons in composition with Enrico Bossi at Bologna and in piano with Martin Krause in Berlin. Upon his return to Mexico, he taught piano at the National Cons. He gave a concert of his compositions in Mexico on July 7, 1912, which included a piano concerto. During World War I he lived in N. Y. and in Havana; then went to Paris for additional study, and took lessons with Paul Dukas. His contact with French music wrought a radical change in his style of composition; his later works are more polyphonic in structure and more economical in form. He possessed a great gift of melody; one of his songs, Estrellita, became a universal favorite, often mistaken for a folksong. In 1941 he made a tour in South America, conducting his own works. He was the first Mexican composer of the 20th century to employ an identifiably modern musical language; his place in the history of Mexican music is a very important one. His works are often performed in Mexico; a concert hall was named after him in the Instituto de Bellas Artes. —Works: for orch.: Estampas nocturnas (1923), Canto y danza de los antiguos Mexicanos (1933), Chapultepec, symph. triptych (Mexico, Aug. 25, 1929; revised version, Mexico, Aug. 24, 1934), Suite en estilo antiguo (1935), Poema elegiaco (Mexico, June 28, 1935), Ferial (Mexico, Aug. 9, 1940), Concierto del Sur, for guitar and orch. (Montevideo, Oct. 4, 1941), violin concerto (Mexico, Aug. 20, 1943); piano trio (1911), 4 Miniaturas, for string quartet (1929), Pequeña suite en estilo antiguo, for violin, viola, and cello (1933), sonata for violin and viola (1935), cello sonata (1922); numerous piano pieces, some based on Mexican rhythms; about 30 songs; 34 arrangements of Mexican folksongs. A collection of his articles was publ. posthumously in 1948. —Cf. Otto Mayer-Serra, Música y músicos de Latinoamérica (Mexico, 1947; vol. 2, pp. 782-86); D. López Alonso, Manuel M. Ponce: ensayo biográfico (Mexico, 1950); J. C. Romero, Efemérides de Manuel Ponce in 'Nuestra Música' (No. 2, 1950).

Ponchielli (pöhn-kyëhl'-lë), Amilcare, Italian composer; b. Paderno Fasolaro, Cremona, Aug. 31, 1834; d. Milan, Jan. 16, 1886. He studied at the Milan Cons. (1843-54); his first dramatic work (written with 3 other students) was the operetta Il Sindaco Babbeo (Milan, March 3, 1851). Leaving the Cons., he was organist at S. Ilario in Cremona; then became bandmaster. He brought out the opera I promessi sposi at Cremona (Aug. 30, 1856), followed by La Savoiarda (Cremona, Jan. 19, 1861; revised as Lina, Milan, Nov. 17, 1877), and Roderico, re de' Goti (Piacenza, Dec. 26, 1863). His first striking success was achieved with a revised version of I promessi sposi (Milan, Dec. 5, 1872); continuous good fortune attended the production of his operas I Li-tuani (La Scala, March 7, 1874; revised and revived in 1884 as Aldona), La Gioconda (his most famous work; Milan, April 8, 1876), Il Figliuol prodigo (Milan, Dec. 26, 1880), and Marion Delorme (Milan, March 17, 1885). An unfinished opera, I Mori di Venezia, in the orchestration by A.

Cadore, was produced posthumously in Monte Carlo (March 17, 1914). Ponchielli also brought out a musical farce, Il Parlatore eterno (Lecco, Oct. 18, 1873) and the ballets Le due gemelle and Clarina (both in 1873); a cantata in honor of Donizetti; a funeral march, Il 29 Maggio, for Manzoni; a fine patriotic hymn, Inno in memoria di Giuseppe Garibaldi. Of his operas, La Gioconda established itself in the repertory everywhere; the ballet number from it, Dance of the Hours, is extremely popular at concerts of light orchestral music. Ponchielli also wrote sacred music, for use at the Cathedral of Bergamo, where he was maestro di cappella from 1881 to 1886. —Cf. A. Mandelli, Le Distrazioni di A. Ponchielli (Cremona, 1897); G. Cesari, A. Ponchielli nell' arte del suo tempo (Cremona, 1934); G. de Napoli, A. Ponchielli (Cremona, 1936); A. Damerini, A. Ponchielli (Turin, 1940).

Pond, Sylvanus Billings, American music publisher and composer; b. Milford, Vt., April 5, 1792; d. Brooklyn, March 12, 1871. He was a prominent musician of his time; conducted the N. Y. Sacred Musical Society and the N. Y. Academy of Sacred Music; wrote songs for Sunday School; ed. and publ. Union Melodies (1838), The U. S. Psalmody (N. Y., 1841), and The Book of Praise, for the Reformed Dutch Church in America (N. Y., 1866); composed the hymn tunes Armenia (1835) and Franklin Square (1850). Early in life, he went to Albany; established a piano workshop; from 1820, was partner of the publishing house of Meacham and Pond there; in 1832 he joined Firth & Hall of N. Y., and the firm's name became Firth, Hall & Pond; 1848, reorganized as Firth, Pond & Co., one of the principal publishers of Stephen Foster's songs; in 1850, S. B. Pond retired, and his son, William A. Pond, became the owner; upon the withdrawal of Firth in 1863, the firm became known as William A. Pond & Co.; W. A. Pond's elder son, William A. Pond, Jr., was taken into partnership, but died in 1884; William A. Pond Sr. died the following year, and his 2 sons, Albert Edward and George Warren Pond, succeeded him. In 1934, Joseph Fletcher acquired the catalogue; in 1946, it was purchased by Carl Fischer, Inc. For the dealings of Firth, Pond & Co. with Stephen Foster, see J. T. Howard, Stephen Foster, America's Troubadour (N. Y., 1934); consult also H. Dichter and E. Shapiro, Early American Sheet Music, Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768-1889 (N. Y., 1941).

Poniatowski, Josef (Michał Xawery Franciszek Jan), Prince of Monte Rotondo, Polish composer; b. Rome, Feb. 20, 1816; d. Chislehurst, England, July 3, 1873. He was a member of the Polish nobility; his uncle was a marshal in Napoleon's army. He studied in Florence, and appeared on the stage as a tenor; then wrote operas (to Italian and French librettos); in 1848 he went to Paris and was elevated to the rank of Senator by Napoleon III; after the fall of the Second Empire, he went to England. —Operas: Giovanni da Procida (Florence, 1838); Don Desiderio (Pisa, Dec. 26, 1840); Ruy Blas (Lucca, 1843); Malek-Adel (Genoa, June 20, 1846); Esmeralde (Florence, June 27, 1847); Pierre de Médicis (Paris, March 9, 1860); Au travers du mur (Paris, May 9, 1861); L'Aventurier (Paris, Jan. 26, 1865); La Contessina (Paris, April 28, 1868); Gelmina (London, June 4, 1872). Also composed a Mass in F.

Poniridis, Georges, Greek composer and violinist; b. Constantinople, of Greek parents, Oct. 8, 1892. He studied violin at the Brussels Cons., winning 1st prize; composition with Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum in Paris. After that he lived mostly in France; returned to Greece at the outbreak of World War II, and was appointed head of the music dept. of the Ministry of Education. —Works: Triptyque symphonique (Athens, Nov. 22, 1937); symph. No. 2 (Athens, Feb. 1, 1948); incidental music to ancient Greek plays; arrangements of Greek folksongs.

Pons (pohns), Charles, French composer; b. Nice, Dec. 8, 1870; d. Paris, April, 1957. He studied organ, and earned his living as church organist in his youth; then turned to theater music, and produced a long series of operas: L'Épreuve (Nice, 1904), Laura (Paris, 1906), Mourette (Marseille, 1909), Le Voile du bonheur (Paris, April 26, 1911), Françoise (Lyons, 1913), Loin du bal (Paris, 1913), Les Fauves (Paris, 1917), Le Drapeau (Paris, 1918), Le Passant de Noël (Nice, 1935), L'Envol de la Marseillaise (Marseille, 1947); further wrote an overture, Pyrrhus; a symph. poem, Heures vendéennes; a Symphonie tragique; several orchestral suites; an oratorio, La Samaritaine (Nice, 1900), and other vocal works with orch.: La Mort de Démosthène (Paris, 1928) and Dans la forêt normande (1934); chamber music; songs. He wrote music criticism for 'Paris-Presse' and other publications.

Pons, Lily (baptismal names, Alice Joséphine), famous coloratura soprano; b. Draguignan, France, April 12, 1904. She entered the Paris Cons. at the age of 13; first studied piano; appeared at the Théâtre des Variétés in Paris as a singer at 15; made her operatic début in Lakmé at Mulhouse; subsequently studied in Paris with Alberto de Gorostiaga; was engaged at the Metropolitan Opera, and sang Lucia (Jan. 3, 1931) with excellent success; while in N. Y., continued her vocal studies, with Maria Gay and G. Zenatello. She became one of the most celebrated stars; her most brilliant roles were Lakmé, Lucia, Gilda, Rosina, and Marie in La Fille du Régiment; also appeared in motion pictures. She was married to August Mestritz, a publisher, in 1923; divorced, 1933; in 1938 she married the conductor André Kostelanetz; toured with him all over the world, making their home at Silvermine, Conn.

Ponselle (real name, Ponzillo), Carmela, American mezzo-soprano, sister of Rosa Ponselle; b. Schenectady, N. Y., June 7, 1892. She began to study singing rather late in life; made her professional début in 1923; first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House as Amneris in Aida (Dec. 5, 1925); remained on its roster until 1928; was re-engaged for the seasons 1930-35; then devoted most of her time to teaching.

Ponselle (real name, Ponzillo), Rosa, American soprano; b. Meriden, Conn., Jan. 22, 1897. She sang in various entertainment places in New Haven; then appeared with her sister Carmela in vaudeville in Pittsburgh. She made her first appearance as an opera singer at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., in the role of Leonora in La Forza del Destino, opposite Caruso (Nov. 15, 1918); remained with the Metropolitan Opera until 1936; received praise for her opulent voice, with fine low tones; her interpretations of the Italian roles were particularly impressive. —Cf. O. Thompson, The American Singer (N. Y., 1937; pp. 335-46).

Ponte, Lorenzo da. See Da Ponte.

Pontécoulant (pöhn-tä-köo-län'), Louis-Adolphe de Doucet, Comte de, French writer on music; b. Paris, 1794; d. Bois-Colombe, near Paris, Feb. 20, 1882. After an adventurous career, he began the study of music history and the construction of instruments; publ. the following: Essai sur la facture musicale considérée dans ses rap- ports avec l'art, l'industrie, et le commerce (1857; 2nd augmented ed., as Organo-graphie in 2 parts, 1861); Musée instrumental du Conservatoire de musique (1864); La Musique à l'Exposition universelle de 1867 (1868); and Les Phénomènes de la musique (1868).

Pontoglio (pöhn-töhl'-yö'h), Cipriano, Italian composer; b. Grumello del Piano, Dec. 25, 1831; d. Milan, Feb. 22, 1892. He was a pupil of Ant. Cagnoni in Milan, and P. Serrao in Naples; then opened a music school in Milan. He composed 5 operas: Lamberto Malatesta (Pavia, 1857), Tebaldo Brusato (Brescia, 1865; rewritten as L'Assedio di Brescia, Rome, June 15, 1872), La Schiava greca (Bergamo, 1868), La Notte di Natale (Bergamo, Aug. 29, 1872), and Edoardo Stuart (Milan, May 21, 1887); publ. songs, piano pieces, etc.

Poole, Elizabeth, English mezzo-soprano; b. London, April 5, 1820; d. Langley, Bucks, Jan. 14, 1906. She made her début at Drury Lane in 1834; sang in Italian opera in the U. S. (appearing with Malibran). Until her retirement in 1870 she was immensely popular as a ballad singer. Balfe wrote for her 'Tis gone, the past is all a dream, which she introduced into The Bohemian Girl.

Poot (pöht), Marcel, Belgian composer; b. Vilvorde, near Brussels, May 7, 1901. He received his first musical training from his father; then studied at the Brussels Cons. and at the Flemish Cons. of Antwerp; later took courses with Paul Gilson; was an original member (1925) of a group of Belgian composers, the 'Synthétistes,' dedicated to propaganda of new musical ideas. In 1930 he received the Rubens prize, which enabled him to study with Paul Dukas in Paris. Returning to Belgium, he held several teaching posts; also wrote music criticism; taught at the Brussels Cons.; became its director in 1949. The most striking element of his music is its rhythmic vivacity; he generally adheres to a basic tonal design, pursuing the aim of artistic utilitarianism. —Works: opera Moretus (1943); ballets: Paris et les trois divines (1933), Camera (1937), Pygmalion (1952); 3 symphonies (1929; 1938; 1952); symph. sketches Charlot (inspired by Charlie Chaplin's films; 1926); Poème de l'espace for large orch. (glorifying the Lindbergh flight; Liège Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Sept. 4, 1930); Jazz Music (Brussels, Feb. 21, 1932); Ouverture joyeuse (1934); Danse laudative for orch. (1937); Légende épique for piano and orch. (1938); Sinfonietta (Chicago, Oct. 22, 1946); Mouvement perpétuel for orch. (1953); oratorio Icare (1945); piano quartet (1932); scherzo for 4 saxophones (1941); octet for wind and string instruments (1948); string quartet (1952); also music for radio and for films. A catalogue of his works, with a biographical sketch, was publ. by the Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale in 1953.

Popov (põh-pohff'), Gavril Nikolayevitch, Russian composer; b. Novotcherkask, Sept. 12, 1904. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Nikolayev (piano) and Vladimir Shtcherbatchev (composition). From his student days, he adopted the procedures of modern music; his septet (Moscow, Dec. 13, 1927) was written in a system of dissonant counterpoint then fashionable in Western Europe; his 1st symph. (1927-34) was in a similar vein. When modern music became the target of attack in Russia, Popov modified his style towards a more popular conception, following the tenets of 'socialist realism'; wrote several film scores, among them Communist Youth Union, Leader of Electrification (1932; also as a symph. suite). —Other works: symph. No. 2, subtitled Fatherland (Moscow, Feb. 15, 1944); symph. No. 3, for string orch., on Spanish themes (Moscow, Jan. 31, 1947); symph. No. 4, Glory Be to the Fatherland (1949); choral works; film music.

Popper, David, famous cellist and composer; b. Prague, June 16, 1843; d. Baden, near Vienna, Aug. 7, 1913. He was a pupil of Goltermann at the Prague Cons.; made his first appearance as soloist at the Karlsruhe Music Festival (March 29, 1865), and in subsequent years played with great success in many European music centers. From 1868 to 1873 he was 1st cellist of the Vienna Court Orch. In 1872 he married the pianist Sophie Menter (divorced, 1886). From 1896 until the year of his death he taught at the Budapest Cons. The diploma making him a 'Hofrat' of the Austro-Hungarian Empire reached him on the morning of his death. Many of his compositions for his instrument have become great favorites with cello players; while not strikingly original, they are melodious, pleasing, and eminently idiomatic. —Works: 4 cello concertos; solo cello pieces: Sérénade orientale, op. 18, Gavotte in D, op. 23, Tarentelle, op. 33, Elfen Tanz, op. 39, Im Walde, suite, op. 50, Ungarische Rhapsodie, op. 68; Requiem for 3 cellos (performed by him with Delsart and Howell, London, Nov. 25, 1891); publ. the cello methods, Hohe Schule des Violoncellspiels (40 studies), op. 73; 10 mittelschwere grosse Etüden (preparatory studies to op. 73), op. 76.

Poradowski, Stefan Boleslaw, Polish composer; b. Wloclawek, Aug. 16, 1902. He studied at the Cons. of Poznan with Opieski; in 1930, appointed instructor there. He wrote 5 symphonies; an oratorio, Odkupienie (Redemption); a Concerto antico, for viola d'amore and strings; a double-bass concerto; a Polish Rhapsody, for violin and orch.; several string quartets and string trios; violin sonata; piano pieces; publ. textbooks on harmony, composition, and orchestration.

Porges, Heinrich, writer on music; b. Prague, Nov. 25, 1837; d. Munich, Nov. 17, 1900. He was a pupil of Cölestin Müller (piano) and Zwonar (theory). In 1863 he became co-editor with Brendel of the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik,' and was in close intercourse with Wagner and Cornelius; lived for a time in Vienna, and in 1867 was called to Munich by King Ludwig II, for whom he had written a study on Tristan und Isolde (publ. 1906 by Hans von Wolzogen). There he was literary editor of the 'Süddeutsche Presse'; from 1880, music critic for the 'Neueste Nachrichten.' He organized the 'Porges'scher Gesangverein' in 1886. —Writings: Die Aufführung von Beethovens 9. Symphonie unter Richard Wagner in Bayreuth (1872), Die Bühnenproben zu den 1876er Festspielen (1877), and other essays on Wagner in German periodicals.

Porpora, Nicola Antonio, Italian composer; b. Naples, Aug. 17, 1686; d. there, March 3, 1768. The son of a bookseller, he entered the Cons. dei Poveri at Naples at the age of 10 and studied with Gaetano Greco, Matteo Giordano, and Ottavio Campanile. Porpora's first opera, Agrippina, was presented at the Royal Palace of Naples (Nov. 4, 1708); Cardinal Grimani attended the performance and wrote a libretto on the same subject for Handel. This episode gave rise to the incorrect statement (by Fétis and others) that Handel heard Porpora's opera in Rome in 1710. Porpora produced in Naples 2 more operas: Flavio Anicio Olibrio (1711) and Basilio, re d'oriente (1713). From 1711 until 1725, he held the title of maestro di cappella to Philip, Landgrave of Hesse-Darmstadt. He gained a great reputation as a singing teacher, and numbered among his pupils the famous castrati Fari-nelli, Caffarelli, Antonio Uberti (who called himself 'Porporino' out of respect for his teacher), and Salimbeni. Metastasio, who wrote librettos for several of Porpora's operas, was also his pupil. Porpora's career as a singing teacher was divided between Naples and Venice. In Naples he taught at the Conservatories of Sant' Onofrio (1715-22 and 1760-61) and Santa Maria di Loreto (1739-41 and 1758-60); in Venice he gave lessons at the Ospedali degli Incurabili (1726-33 and 1737-39), the Ospedali della Pietà (1742-46), and the Ospedaletto (1746-47). In 1718 Porpora collaborated with Domenico Scarlatti in the writing of the opera Berenice, regina d'Egitto, produced in Rome (1718). At about this time he succeeded in obtaining support from the Austrian court. His opera Temistocle was produced in Vienna on the Emperor's birthday (Oct. 1, 1718); his next opera, Faramondo, was staged in Naples (Nov. 19, 1719). He continued to write operas for theaters in Naples and Rome: Eumene (Rome, 1721); Adelaide (Rome, 1723); Semiramide, regina dell' Assiria (Naples, 1724); Didone abbandonata (his first opera to a libretto by Metastasio; produced at Reggio, 1725). In 1725 Porpora was in Vienna; in 1726 he settled in Venice. He wrote the following operas during the next 8 years: Meride e Selinunte (Venice, 1726); Siroe, re di Persia (Rome, 1727); Semiramide riconosciuta (Venice, 1729); Mitridate (Rome, 1730); Tamerlano (1730); Poro (Turin, 1731); Germanico in Germania (Rome, 1732); Issipile (Rome, 1733). In 1733 he applied for the post of maestro di cappella at San Marco in Venice, but failed to obtain it. In the same year he was engaged by the directors of the 'Opera of the Nobility' in London (organized as a rival company to that of Handel). For this venture Porpora wrote 5 operas: Arianna in Nasso (Dec. 29, 1733); Enea nel Lazio (May 11, 1734); Polifemo (Feb. 1, 1735); Ifigenia in Aulide (May 3, 1735); and Mitridate (Jan. 24, 1736; a different score from the earlier opera of the same title). For a while he competed successfully with Handel, but soon the 'Opera of the Nobility' began to falter, and Porpora left London on the eve of the company's collapse. From 1747-51, he was in Dresden as singing teacher to the Electoral Princess. There he became Hasse's competitor for the position of musical director. Although Hasse himself conducted Porpora's 'pastoral drama' Filandro (Dresden, July 18, 1747), their relationship was made difficult by the intrigues of Hasse's wife, the singer Faustina Bordoni. In 1751 Porpora left Dresden for Vienna, where he became the teacher of Haydn, who paid for his lessons by serving Porpora as accompanist and personal helper. Porpora returned to Naples in 1758. His last stage work, Il Trionfo di Camilla (Naples, May 30, 1760; a revision and adaptation to a new text of an earlier opera of the same title produced in Naples on Jan. 20, 1740), was unsuccessful; nor could he regain his former teaching positions. His last years were spent in poverty. —Porpora wrote 44 operas in all, 11 oratorios, and numerous Masses and motets. His instrumental music includes 6 sinfonie da camera (London, 1735), 12 violin sonatas (Vienna, 1754), a cello concerto, and a cello sonata (the latter two exist in modern reprints). The fugues in Clementi's Practical Harmony are from Porpora's violin sonatas, some of which have been publ. by A. Schering, F. David, D. Alard, and A. Moffat. A trio sonata was publ. in Riemann's Collegium Musicum (no. 23). —Bibliography: Marchese di Villarosa, Memorie dei compositori di musica del regno di Napoli (Naples, 1840); F. Clément, Les Musiciens célèbres depuis le XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1868); S. Fasini, Il Melodramma italiano a Londra (Turin, 1914); S. di Giacomo, I quattro antiche Conservatorii di musica di Napoli (Palermo, 1925); F. Walker, A Chronology of the Life and Works of Nicola Porpora, in 'Italian Studies' (vol. 6, Cambridge, 1951); U. Prota-Giurleo, Per una esatta biografia di Nicolo Porpora, in 'La Scala' (Jan., 1957; establishing for the first time his dates of birth and death).

Porporino. See Uberti.

Porporino, Ennio, Italian composer; b. Cagliari, Sardinia, Jan. 20, 1910; studied at the Santa Cecilia in Rome with Mulé, and later took an additional course with Respighi. He subsequently taught at Santa Cecilia; in 1954 became prof. of composition at the Naples Cons. —Works: 1-act opera Gli Orazi (Milan, 1941); the ballet Altair (Naples, 1942); for orch.: Tartarin de Tarascon, overture (Rome, 1933), Sardegna, symph. poem, based on Sardinian folk themes (Rome, 1933; his most popular work), 3 Canzoni italiane; Sonata drammatica for piano and orch.; I Canti della Sardegna for voice and orch. (1948); songs.

Porro, Pierre-Jean, famous French guitar virtuoso; b. Béziers, 1750; d. Montmorency, 1831. Through his influence the guitar became a fashionable instrument in Paris; he had a class of pupils there; also was editor and publisher of 'Journal de Guitarre' (1787-1803). He publ. a guitar method, Tableau Méthodique, numerous divertissements, sonatas, canzonets, for guitar solo and with other instruments; also a 'Collection de musique sacrée' for 4 mixed voices and organ. —Cf. F. Donnadieu, Porro, compositeur et éditeur de musique (Béziers, 1897).

Porsile, Giuseppe, Italian composer; b. Naples, 1680; d. Vienna, May 29, 1750. He served as maestro di cappella in Naples and later in Barcelona; from 1720 to 1740, was singing master at the Vienna court, and composer to the Austrian Empress Amalia. He wrote the operas Meride e Selinunte (performed at Laxenburg, near Vienna, Aug. 28, 1721), Spartaco (Vienna, Feb. 21, 1726), and 4 others; 12 oratorios, various cantatas; instrumental pieces.

Porta, Costanzo, important Italian composer; b. Cremona, c. 1529; d. Padua, May 26, 1601. He studied with Willaert in Venice; was chorismaster at Osimo, near Ancona, from 1552 to 1564. In 1564 he became choirmaster at the Basilica of St. Anthony in Padua; in 1567, received a similar post at the Cathedral of Ravenna; in 1575 was in Loreto, returning to Padua in 1585. He was highly esteemed as a master contrapuntist; wrote not only sacred music but also madrigals; combined great technical skill with a characteristically Italian grace of melodic line. —Works: books of motets a 4 (1559), a 5 (1555), a 6 (1585), a 4-8 (1580); 1 book of Masses for 4, 5, 6 voices (1578); 2 books of Introits for 5 voices (1566, 1588); 4 books of madrigals for 4, 5 voices (1555-85); hymns for 4 voices (posthumous, 1602); vesper psalms and canticles for 8 voices (1605); in MS are various madrigals, Lamentations, a treatise on counterpoint, etc. Reprints are in Torchi's L'Arte musicale in Italia (vol. 1), Einstein's The Golden Age of the Madrigal (N. Y., 1942), etc. —Cf. G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 493-95); A. Garbelotto, Il Padre Costanzo Porta da Cremona (Rome, 1955; a documented biography).

Porter, Cole, American composer of popular music; b. Peru, Ind., June 9, 1893. He was educated at Yale Univ. (B.A. 1913); then took an academic course at the Harvard Law School, and later at the Harvard School of Music. While at Yale Univ., he wrote football songs (Yale Bull Dog Song, Bingo Eli Yale, etc.); also composed music for college functions. His first production in N. Y. was See America First (N. Y., 1916). In 1916 he joined the Foreign Legion, but later was transferred to the French Army. After the armistice he remained in Paris and studied music at the Schola Cantorum. Returning to America, he devoted himself entirely to the writing of musical comedies, of which the following are notable: Hitchy-Koo (1919), 50 Million Frenchmen (1929), Gay Divorcee (1932), Anything Goes (1934), Jubilee (1935), Red, Hot, and Blue (1936), Leave It to Me (1938), Dubarry was a Lady (1939), Panama Hattie (1940), Let's Face It (1941), Something for the Boys (1943), Mexican Hayride (1944), Kiss Me, Kate (1948), Out of This World (1950), Can-Can (1953), and Silk Stockings (1955). Of his many songs, at least a dozen became great favorites: Begin the Beguine, It's De-Lovely, Night and Day, My Heart Belongs to Daddy, Don't Fence Me In, Wunderbar, etc.

Porter, Quincy, American composer; b. New Haven, Conn., Feb. 7, 1897. He was brought up in an intellectual atmosphere; his father and his grandfather were professors at Yale Univ. He studied with David Stanley Smith and Horatio Parker at the Yale School of Music (Mus. Bac., 1921); submitted a violin concerto for the American Prix de Rome, received an honorable mention; also won the Steinert and Osborne prizes. After graduation he went to Paris, where he took courses with Lucien Capet (violin) and Vincent d'Indy (composition). Returning to America, he earned a living as a violinist in theater orchestras in N. Y.; then took an additional course in composition with Ernest Bloch. He taught at the Cleveland Institute of Music (1922-28 and 1931-32); played the viola in the Ribaupierre String Quartet there; spent 3 years in Paris on a Guggenheim Fellowship (1928-31); was prof. at Vassar College, and conductor of the Vassar Orch. (1932-38); in 1938, succeeded Frederick Converse as dean of the New England Cons., Boston; from 1942 to 1946, was its director. In 1946 he was appointed prof. at Yale Univ. His music is built on strong contrapuntal lines, with incisive rhythms; his harmonic procedures often reach stridently polytonal sonorities; the general idiom combines the influences of both the modern German and the modern French styles. —Works: Ukrainian Suite, for string orch. (Rochester, N. Y., May 1, 1925); Suite in C minor for orch.

(1926); Poem and Dance, for orch. (Cleveland, June 24, 1932, composer conducting); Dance in Three-Time, for chamber orch. (St. Louis, July 2, 1937); symph. no. 1 (N. Y., April 2, 1938, composer conducting); Music for Strings (1941); Fantasy on a Pastoral Theme, for organ and string orch. (1942); viola concerto (Columbia Univ. Festival, N. Y., May 16, 1948); Fantasy for cello and small orch. (1950); The Desolate City, for baritone and orch. (1950); Concerto Concertante for 2 pianos and orch. (Louisville, March 17, 1954; awarded the Pulitzer Prize); New England Episodes, symph. suite (commissioned for the Inter-American Music Festival, Washington, D. C., April 18, 1958); 8 string quartets (1923, 1925, 1930, 1931, 1935, 1937, 1943, 1950); In Monasterio, for string quartet (1927); quintet for clarinet and strings (1929); Quintet on a Childhood Theme, for flute and strings (1940); string sextet on Slavic folk tunes (1947); 2 violin sonatas (1926, 1929); Little Trio, for flute, violin, and viola (1928); suite for viola alone (1930); sonata for French horn and piano (1946); 4 pieces for violin and piano (1947); duo for violin and viola (1954); duo for flute and harp (1957); piano sonata (1930); Canon and Fugue for organ (1941); 6 Miniatures for piano (1943); Day Dreams for piano (1957); several songs. —Cf. H. Elwell, Quincy Porter, in 'Modern Music' (vol. 23, no. 1); H. Boatwright, Quincy Porter, in the 'Bulletin of American Composers Alliance' (No. 3, 1957).

Portnoff, Mischa, composer; b. Berlin (of Russian parents), Aug. 29, 1901. He studied with his father, Leo Portnoff; toured in Scandinavia as pianist; settled in N. Y. in 1924, and devoted himself to teaching piano and composition. He has written mainly for piano; also many works for 2 pianos. His piano concerto was performed by the N. Y. Philharmonic on Feb. 23, 1941.

Portugal (Portogallo), Marcos Antonio da Fonseca (real name, Ascensão), Portuguese composer; b. Lisbon, March 24, 1762; d. Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 7, 1830. A pupil at the ecclesiastical seminary at Lisbon, his musical education was continued under the operatic singer Borselli (singing and composition), by whose influence he was appointed cembalist at the Madrid opera in 1782. Between 1784 and 1791 he wrote for Lisbon 17 stage works, mostly ephemeral. His reputation was made in Italy, where, with the exception of a short visit to Lisbon, he lived from 1793 to 1799, bringing out 22 Italian operas. From 1799 to 1810 he acted as conductor at the San Carlos Theater, Lisbon, producing Italian and Portuguese operas. His Il Filosofo seducente, ossia Non irritar le donne (Venice, Dec. 27, 1798), was selected by Napoleon for opening the Théâtre Italien at Paris in 1801. In 1807 the royal family fled to Brazil before the French invasion; Portugal remained until the San Carlos Theater was closed in 1810, and then followed the court to Rio de Janeiro, where he was made general music director. The royal theater of São João, after its inauguration in 1813, produced several new operas by Portugal. In that year he became director of the new Cons. at Vera Cruz, jointly with his brother Simão; visited Italy in 1815, returned to Rio de Janeiro, and passed his last years there as an invalid. His masterpiece is generally assumed to be Fernando nel Messico (Venice, Jan. 16, 1798; written for the famous English singer Elizabeth Billington; produced in London, in Italian, March 31, 1803); other Italian operas that had a favorable reception were Demofoonte (Milan, Feb. 8, 1794); Le Donne cambiate (Venice, Oct. 22, 1797); of Portuguese operas, A Castanheira (The Chestnut Seller), produced in Lisbon in 1790, enjoyed considerable popular success. He further wrote about 100 sacred works. —Cf. Manoel Carvalhães, Marcos Portugal na sua musica dramatica (Lisbon, 1910).

Posselt, Ruth, American violinist; b. Medford, Mass., Sept. 6, 1914. She studied with Emanuel Ondricek; has given numerous recitals in America and Europe; gave the world premières of violin concertos by Walter Piston, Vladimir Dukelsky, Edward Burlingame Hill, and others. On July 3, 1940 she married Richard Burgin (q.v.).

Poston, Elizabeth, English pianist and composer; b. Highfield, Hertfordshire, Oct. 24, 1905. She studied piano with Harold Samuel; in 1940 she became director of music in the European service of the British Broadcasting Corporation; after 1945 devoted herself mainly to composition. In her music she shows a strong predilection for the Elizabethan period; her stylizations of old song patterns are made adroitly and preserve an archaic flavor.

Pothier (poh-t'yā'), Dom Joseph, learned authority on Gregorian chant, b. Bouzémont, near Saint-Dié, Dec. 7, 1835; d. Conques, Belgium, Dec. 8, 1923. He became a Benedictine monk in 1859 at Solesmes; 1862, sub-prior; 1866, prof. of theology at the Solesmes Monastery; 1895, prior at the Benedictine monastery of St.-Wandrille; 1898, abbot there. When the religious orders were banned from France, he moved to Belgium. In 1904 he was appointed by Pius X president of the publication committee of the 'Editio Vaticana.' —Writings: Les Mélodies grégoriennes (highly important source book, based on the study of original MSS; Tournai, 1880; 3rd ed., 1890; in German, 1881; in Italian, 1890); Méthode du chant grégorien (Paris, 1902). Was a chief editor of Liber Gradualis (Tournai, 1883); Hymni de Tempore et de Sanctis (Solesmes, 1885); Processionale Monasticum (Solesmes, 1888); Liber Antiphonarius (Solesmes, 1891); Liber Responsorialis (Solesmes, 1895); Cantus Mariales (Paris, 1902). He contributed many valuable articles to the 'Revue du Chant Grégorien.' —Cf. F. Velluz, Étude bibliographique sur les mélodies grégoriennes de Dom Joseph Pothier (Grenoble, 1881); N. Rousseau, L'École grégorienne de Solesmes (Tournai, 1911); A. Le Guennant, Précis de rythmique grégorienne d'après les principes de Solesmes (Paris, 1948); M. Blanc, L'Enseignement musical de Solesmes (Paris, 1953; chap. 2).

Potter, Philip Cipriani Hambly, English pianist and composer; b. London, Oct. 2, 1792; d. there, Sept. 26, 1871. He studied music first with his father; then with Attwood, Callcott, and Crotch; also took piano lessons with Woelffl during the latter's sojourn in England. In 1817 he went to Vienna, where he studied composition with Aloys Föörster; he met Beethoven, who gave him good advice. He traveled in Germany and Italy; returned to London in 1821; the following year he became piano teacher at the Royal Academy of Music; succeeded Crotch as principal in 1832; retired in 1859. From 1855 to 1870 he was conductor of the Madrigal Society. He frequently appeared in London as pianist; introduced 3 of Beethoven's concertos (Nos. 1, 3, 4) to England. He publ. a number of piano pieces, including a set of variations under the title The Enigma comprising 'variations in the style of 5 eminent artists.' This early anticipation of the famous work by Elgar was not known to Elgar himself. In MS are 9 symphonies, 4 overtures, 3 piano concertos, and other pieces. Wagner conducted one of Potter's symphonies during his engagement with the London Philharmonic Society in 1855. Potter ed. for Novello a series of Mozart's piano works. —Cf. 'Dictionary of National Biography' (vol. 46).

Pouëigh (pöô-ä'), Jean (Marie-Octave-Géraud), French composer and writer on music; b. Toulouse, Feb. 24, 1876. After music study in his native city, he entered the Paris Cons. as a student of Caussade, Lenepveu, and Gabriel Fauré; also received advice from Vincent d'Indy; settled in Paris. He harmonized and edited a number of folk-songs of Languedoc and Gascogne in 'Les Chansons de France' (1907-8), 3 Chansons des Pays d'Oc, and 14 Chansons anciennes; also ed. the collection Chansons populaires des Pyrénées françaises (vol. 1, 1926). His original compositions include the operas Les Lointains (1903), Le Meneur de louves (1921), Perkin, a Basque legend (Bordeaux, Jan. 16, 1931), Le Roi de Camargue (Marseille, May 12, 1948), Bois-brûlé (1956); ballets: Fünf (1906), Friolant (Paris Opéra, May 1, 1922), and a Moroccan ballet, Chergui; a symph. tableau, La Basilique aux vainqueurs; piano pieces and songs. Under the pen-name of Octave Séré he publ. Musiciens français d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1911; 7th ed., 1921); contributed numerous articles to various French periodicals.

Pougin (poo-zhän'), Arthur (pen name of François-Auguste-Arthur Parioise-Pougin), French writer and critic; b. Châteauroux, Indre, Aug. 6, 1834; d. Paris, Aug. 8, 1921. He was a pupil of Alard (violin) and Reber (harmony) at the Paris Cons.; 1855, conductor of the Théâtre Beaumarchais; 1856-59, assistant conductor of the Folies-Nouvelles; till 1863, violinist in the Opéra-Comique orch.; then devoted himself to letters. Active contributor to leading French musical papers; and music critic for 'Le Soir,' 'La Tribune,' 'L'Événement,' and the 'Journal Officiel.' He started the 'Revue de la Musique' in 1876, but it appeared only 6 months. Publ. many biographical sketches and essays: André Campra (1861), Gresnick (1862), Dezèdes (1862), Floquet (1863), Martini (1864), Devienne (1864; all six are collected as Musiciens français du XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle), Meyerbeer (1864), F. Halévy, écrivain (1865), William Vincent Wallace (1866), Léon Kreutzer (1868), Ballini (1868), A. Grisar (1870), Rossini (1871), Auber (1873), Notice sur Rode (1874), Boieldieu (1875), Rameau (1876), Adolphe Adam (1876), Verdi (1886; in English, 1887); further, an Almanach de la musique (1866, 1867, 1868; the last two with necrological supplements); De la littérature musicale en France (1867); De la situation des compositeurs de musique et de l'avenir de l'art musical en France (1867); Figures de l'Opéra-Comique: Elleviou, Mme. Dugazon, la tribu des Gavaudan (1875); Les vrais créateurs de l'opéra français (1881); Dictionnaire historique et pittoresque du théâtre (1885); Viotti et l'école moderne de violon (1888); Méhul (1889; 2nd ed., 1893); L'Opéra-Comique pendant la Révolution (1891); Essai historique sur la musique en Russie (1896; 2nd ed., 1904; in English, 1915); Acteurs et actrices d'autrefois (1897); J.-J. Rousseau, musicien (1901); Pierre de Jélyotte et les chanteurs de son temps (1905); Hérold (1906); Monsigny et son temps (1908); Musiciens du XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle (1911); Marie Malibran (in English, 1911); Marietta Alboni (1912); Madame Favart (1912); Massenet (1914); Un Directeur d'opéra au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1914); Giuseppina Grassini (1920); Le Violon, les violonistes, et la musique de violon du XVI<sup>e</sup> au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (posthumous, 1924). Pougin wrote for Larousse's 'Grand Dictionnaire Universel' all the articles on music. He likewise edited the supplement to Fétis' 'Biographie universelle' (2 vols., 1878-80), and the new edition of the 'Dictionnaire lyrique, ou histoire des opéras' of Félix Clément and P. Larousse (Paris, 1898; with supplement up to 1904).

Poulenc (poo-lank), Francis, brilliant French composer; b. Paris, Jan. 7, 1899. He studied piano with Ricardo Viñes and composition with Koechlin; at the age of 18 he joined a group of progressive French musicians, which presented concerts as 'Nouveaux Jeunes,' out of which developed the 'Groupe des Six.' Poulenc was mainly influenced by Satie and Ravel; his early works pursued the aim of sophisticated entertainment; a professional pianist himself, he developed in his piano pieces a highly idiomatic style in a modern vein; like Ravel, he successfully revived the classical keyboard style in a new guise. His songs are also notable; the melodic line is always lucid, while the accompaniments, although elaborate, are never obtrusive. He frequently appeared in joint recitals with the tenor Pierre Bernac, in Europe and in America; first tour in the U. S., 1948-49. —Works: Le Gendarme incompris, comédie-bouffe (1920); Les Mamelles de Tirésias, opéra-bouffe (Opéra-Comique, June 10, 1947); Les Dialogues des Carmélites, religious opera (La Scala, Milan, Jan. 26, 1957); Les Biches, ballet (Diaghilev's Ballets Russes, Monte Carlo, Jan. 6, 1924); Animaux modèles, ballet (Paris Opéra, Aug. 8, 1942); Figure humaine, cantata (London, March 25, 1945);

Rapsodie nègre, for small orch. (1917); Aubade, for piano and 18 instruments (Paris, June 19, 1929); Deux Marches et un Interimède, for chamber orch. (BBC, London, June 6, 1938); Concert champêtre, for harpsichord and small orch. (Paris, May 3, 1929); concerto for 2 pianos and orch. (1932); concerto for organ, string orch., and kettledrums (Paris, June 10, 1941); piano concerto (Boston, Jan. 6, 1950, composer soloist); chamber music: sonata for 2 clarinets (1918), Le Bestiaire, for voice, flute, clarinet, bassoon, and string quartet (1919); sonata for clarinet and bassoon (1922), sonata for horn, trumpet, and trombone (1922), trio for oboe, bassoon, and piano (1926), sextet for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn, and piano (1930-32), Le Bal masqué, for voice with instruments (1932), string quartet (1946), violin sonata (1943); choral works: Mass (1937), 4 motets (1939), Exultate Deo (1941), Salve Regina (1941), Un Soir de neige, for chorus a cappella (1945), 2 books of traditional French songs, arranged for chorus a cappella (1945), Stabat Mater, for chorus a cappella (Strasbourg Festival, June 13, 1951); incidental music for plays; film scores; many piano pieces, of which the earliest, Mouvements perpétuels (1918), is the most popular; other piano pieces are Promenades, 12 Improvisations, Suite française, etc.; sonata for 2 pianos (1918); song cycles: Le Bestiaire (1919), Cocardes (1919), Poèmes de Ronsard (1925), Chansons gaillardes (1926), Airs chantés (1928), 8 Chansons polonaises (1934), 4 Chansons pour enfants (1935), Tel Jour telle nuit (1937), Fiançailles pour rire (1939), Banalités (1940), Chansons villageoises (1942); separate songs: Épithaphe, Ronsard à sa guitare, Miroirs brûlants, Le Portrait, La Grenouillère, Priez pour paix, Ce donc petit visage, Bleuet, Les Chemins d'amour, Montparnasse et Hyde Park; Histoire de Babar le petit éléphant, for narration and piano (1940); etc. —Cf. L. Durey, Francis Poulenc, in the 'Chesterian' (1922); A. Georges, Francis Poulenc, in the 'Chesterian' (1925); D. Milhaud, Études (Paris, 1927); H. Prunières, Francis Poulenc, in the 'Sackbut' (1928); J. Bruyr, L'Écran des musiciens (Paris, 1930); A. Schaeffner, Francis Poulenc, musicien français, in 'Contrepoints' (1946, No. 1); Henri Hell, La Musique religieuse de Francis Poulenc, in the 'Revue Musicale' (April, 1952); I. Vein, Francis Poulenc, in the 'Chesterian' (1954); C. Rostand, Francis Poulenc: Entretiens avec Claude Rostand (Paris, 1954); Henri Hell, Poulenc, musicien français (Paris, 1958).

Poulet (pöö-lä'), Gaston, French violinist and conductor; b. Paris, April 10, 1892. He studied violin at the Paris Cons., gaining 1st prize; organized a string quartet, and gave concerts in Europe; from 1927 to 1936 conducted the Concerts Poulet at the Théâtre Sarah-Bernhardt in Paris; also taught at the Paris Cons.; in 1932 became director of the Cons. of Bordeaux and conducted the Orchestre Philharmonique there; from 1940 to 1945 conducted the Concerts Colonne in Paris; guest conductor with the London Symph. (1947) and in Germany (1948); also in South America. He played the violin in the 1st performance of Debussy's violin sonata with Debussy himself at the piano.

Poulet, Gérard, French violinist, son of Gaston Poulet; b. Bayonne, Aug. 12, 1938. He entered the Paris Cons. at the age of 11 in the class of André Asselin, and won 1st prize at 12; in the same year (1950) he played 3 violin concertos with the Orchestre Colonne, under his father's direction; then appeared with other Paris orchestras; subsequently gave concerts and played with orchestras in England, Holland, Germany, Italy, Austria, and Holland. In 1956 he won 1st Grand Prix at the Paganini competition of Geneva, and was given the honor of performing on Paganini's own violin, the famous Guarneri del Gesù.

Pouplinière. See La Pouplinière.

Pourtalès, Guy de, French writer on music; b. Geneva, Aug. 4, 1881; studied in Bonn, Berlin, and Paris; was in the French army during World War I; then settled in Paris as a music critic. He publ. a number of successful biographies of composers: La Vie de Franz Liszt (1925); Chopin, ou le poète (1927; 2nd ed., 1946; in English, as Chopin: a Man of Solitude, London, 1930); Wagner, histoire d'un artiste (1932; revised and augmented ed., 1942); Berlioz et l'Europe romantique (1939).

Powell, John, American pianist and composer; b. Richmond, Va., Sept. 6, 1882. His father was a schoolmaster, his mother an amateur musician; he acquired elementary musical education at home, taking lessons with an elder sister; then studied piano with a Liszt pupil, F. C. Hahr; entered the Univ. of Virginia (B. A., 1901) and then went to Vienna, where he became a pupil of Leschetizky (1902-07) and studied composition with Navrátil (1904-07); made a successful début as pianist in Berlin (1908); then played in Paris and London; returning to America, he gave a piano recital in N. Y. (1912) and then toured the country. In 1917 he was commissioned by Modest Altshuler, conductor of the Russian Symph. Orch. in N. Y., to write a work for piano and orch.; this proved to be his most famous composition, Rapsodie Nègre (inspired by Joseph Conrad's Heart of Darkness); Powell played the piano part in its world première, with the Russian Symph. Orch. (N. Y., March 23, 1918), and afterwards performed it with many orchestras in the U. S.; in 1920 went with the N. Y. Symph. Orch. (under Walter Damrosch) to Europe as soloist in this piece. The titles of many of his works disclose a whimsical state of mind (Sonate Virginianesque, Sonate psychologique, Sonata Teutonica, etc.); folksongs, particularly from the South, underlie much of his music. He was the organizer of the Virginia State Choral Festival; also active in the annual White Top Mountain Folk Music Festival; collector of folklore materials; an amateur astronomer (discovered a comet). —Works: Symphony in A (commissioned by the National Federation of Music Clubs in 1932, but not completed until 1947; première at the Music Clubs Convention, Detroit, April 23, 1947); 2 piano concertos; violin concerto; Rapsodie Nègre, for piano and orch.; In Old Virginia, overture (1921); Natchez on the Hill, 3 Virginian country dances (1932); A Set of Three, for orch. (1935); numerous vocal and choral arrangements of folksongs; a string quartet; Variations and Double-Fugue on a Theme of F. C. Hahr, for piano; Sonata Virginianesque, for violin and piano (1919); another sonata for violin and piano; 3 piano sonatas: Sonate psychologique, Sonate noble, Sonata Teutonica; In the South, suite for piano; At the Fair, suite for piano (also for orch., 1925); In the Hammock, for 2 pianos 8 hands; Dirge, for 2 pianos; a number of songs; also an opera, Judith and Holofernes.

Powell, Laurence, composer and conductor, b. Birmingham, England, Jan. 13, 1899. He studied at Ratcliffe College, Leicester (1909-15), Ushaw College, Durham (1915-17); was in the British Army and the Royal Air Force during World War I; in 1923, came to the U. S. (citizen, 1936); studied at the Univ. of Wisconsin (M. A., 1926); held various teaching positions: at the Univ. of Wisconsin (1924-26), Univ. of Arkansas (1926-34), Little Rock Junior College (1934-39); also conducted the Little Rock Symph. Orch. (1934-39), the Grand Rapids WPA Symph. Orch. (1939-41), etc. In 1947 he became director of music at St. Joseph's High School in Victoria, Texas. —Works: for orch.: The Ogre of the Northern Fastness (1921), Keltic Legend (Bournemouth, England, Aug. 27, 1924, composer conducting; revised version, Madison, Wis., May 20, 1931), Charivari, suite (1925), 2 symphonies (1929, 1943), Deirdre of the Sorrows (1933; Little Rock, March 18, 1937, composer conducting), The County Fair, suite (1936), Suite, for string orch. (1931; Grand Rapids, May 9, 1940, composer conducting), Picnic, an 'Arkansas pastoral' for string orch. (Oklahoma City, March 21, 1936), Variations (Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1941), Duo Concertante for recorders and orch. (1941), The Santa Fe Trail, for baritone, narrator, and orch. (Rio Grande Symph. Orch., Santa Fe, New Mexico, April 22, 1958); Halcyone, dramatic poem for chorus and orch. (1923), Alleluia, cantata for chorus and orch. (1926); The Seasons (after poems by Blake) for chorus a cappella (1928); 2 Masses; songs; piano quartet (1933); quartet for clarinets (1936); piano pieces; etc.

Powell, Maud, American violinist; b. Peru, Ill., Aug. 22, 1868; d. Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 8, 1920. Her father, a writer of English-Welsh stock, and her mother, an amateur musician of Hungarian parentage, settled in Aurora, Ill., in 1870. Maud Powell received her primary instruction at home; then studied with William Lewis of Chicago, with Schradieck in Leipzig, and with Charles Dancla at the Paris Cons. She then played in England and Germany. Returning to America in 1885, she toured the country for a number of seasons; when the N. Y. Arion Society went to Germany in 1892 for the quadricentennial celebration of the discovery of America, she went along as a 'representative American violinist'; also played at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. In 1894 she organized the Maud Powell String Quartet, with which she made a transcontinental tour; from 1898, resumed her career as a concert violinist; traveled in Europe and in South Africa (1905-06); in 1910 settled definitely in the U. S. She was considered the leading woman virtuoso on the violin; introduced to American audiences the violin concertos by Dvořák and Sibelius; also was the first violinist to make recordings in America (for the Victor Talking Machine Co.).

Powell, Mel, American composer; b. New York, Feb. 12, 1923; studied piano with Nadia Reisenberg; played in dance bands and in radio orchestras; was a member of the Army Air Force Band. In 1948 he entered the Yale School of Music, and studied with Hindemith (B. M., 1952); subsequently taught at the Mannes Music School in N. Y. and at Queens College; 1958, appointed instructor at Yale. His works include music for documentary films; a string quartet; sonata for harpsichord; 2 piano sonatas; divertimento for violin and harp.

Power, Lionel (Lionel, Leonell Polbero, Powero, etc.), English composer; date of birth unknown; d. Winchester, June 5, 1445. He was a contemporary of Dunstable, whose style he so closely approximated that authorship of works of the two composers has often been confused (some authorities claim, without foundation, that Power and Dunstable were identical). Details of his life are unknown. He wrote a treatise 'Upon the Gamme' (c. 1450, transcribed by J. Wylde, in the British Museum; reprinted by Hawkins in 'History of the Science and Practice of Music' vol. 2; also by S. B. Meech in 'Speculum,' July, 1935; pp. 242-58; and in part by M. Bukofzer, Geschichte des englischen Diskants und des Fauxbourdons . . . 1936); 2 Ave Reginas, a Salve Regina, a Mater ora filium and 21 pieces (mostly parts of Masses) for 3-4 voices appear in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 14-15), 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. 2, p. 378), Stainer's 'Early Bodleian Music,' and 'The Old Hall Manuscript' (3 vols., ed. by A. Ramsbotham; Burnham, Bucks, 1933-38); see also A. Schering, Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (no. 37) and Davison and Apel, Historical Anthology of Music (vol. 1, no. 63). Other pieces preserved in MS at Bologna, Modena, Oxford, Vienna, and London (British Museum), include a Missa Rex Saeculorum (with Kyrie), a 4-voiced Ave Regina and part of a Kyrie. 2 Masses attributed to Power were publ. in the 'Documenta polyphoniae liturgicae S. Ecclesiae Romanae' (ser. 1, nos. 2 and 9). —Cf. H. Riemann, Geschichte der Musiktheorie, p. 143; W. Korte, Die Harmonik des 15. Jahrhunderts (1929; p. 23).

Pownall, Mary Ann, English actress and singer, b. 1751; d. Charleston, S. C., Aug. 11, 1796. She was known first as Mrs. Wrightson (her 1st husband was a prompter in a London theater); made her début in 1770 in The Recruiting Officer, in London; from 1776 to 1788 was a Vauxhall favorite. In 1792 she first appeared in Boston with the Old American Co., of which she was a leading artist; later she sang in subscription concerts in N. Y., and joined John Henry's New York Co. She composed the text and music of numerous songs—including Advice to the Ladies of Boston, Washington (in honor of George Washington), and Primroses—some of which appeared in a book of songs that she compiled with J. Hewitt (publ. in N. Y.). Her 2nd husband was A. Pownall. —Cf. J. T. Howard, Our American Music (N. Y., 1931; and later eds.).

Pozniak, Bronislaw, pianist and pedagogue; b. Lwow, Aug. 26, 1887; d. Halle, April 20, 1953. He studied at the Cons. of Cracow; then in Berlin with Barth; established a trio, and traveled in Germany; then settled in Breslau as piano teacher; in 1946 moved to Leipzig, and eventually to Halle. He publ. ABC des Klavierspielers (1939; 2nd ed., 1948); Praktische Anweisungen für das Studium der Chopinschen Werke (Halle, 1949); was editor of a new edition of Chopin's piano works for Peters.

Praetorius, Ernst, German musicologist; b. Berlin, Sept. 20, 1880; d. Ankara, March 27, 1946. He studied violin in Breslau and Halle; history and theory in Berlin with Friedlaender, Fleischer, and Stumpf; 1905, Dr. phil. with his dissertation, Die Mensuraltheorie des Franchinus Gafurius (publ. Leipzig, 1905); in 1906, appointed director of the famous Heyer Museum in Cologne; held this post until 1909, when he joined the staff of the Cologne Opera, first as coach, then as conductor. Subsequently, he held similar positions in Bochum (1912), Leipzig (1913), Lübeck (1914), Breslau (1915), and Berlin (1922). From 1924 until 1933 he was general musical director in Weimar; in 1934, went to Turkey, where he was active in the educational field and on the radio; remained in Ankara until his death.

Praetorius (Latinized from Schulz or Schulze), Hieronimus, German composer, b. Hamburg, Aug. 10, 1560; d. there, Jan. 27, 1629. He studied with his father, Jacobus Schulze, organist of the Jacobikirche; then in Cologne. He became town cantor in Erfurt in 1580; assistant organist to his father in 1582, and his successor in 1586. He brought out a Hamburger Melodeyen-Gesangbuch (1604; with his son Jacobus, J. Decker, and D. Scheidemann). His works were publ. in 5 collections in 1622-25, under the general title, Opus musicum novum et perfectum: I, Cantiones sacrae a 5-12; II, Magnificats a 8-12; III, Liber missarum, 6 Masses a 5-8; IV, Cantiones variae, a 5-20, containing Latin and German motets; V, Cantiones novae officiosae, a 5-15, also containing Latin and German motets. A selection of his works (a Mass, a Magnificat, and some motets) was publ. by Hugo Leichtentritt in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' vol. 23). —Cf. Hugo Leichtentritt, Geschichte der Motette (1908; page 309 ff.); B. Friedrich, Der Vokalstil des Hieronymus Praetorius (Hamburg, 1932).

Praetorius, Jacobus, German composer and organist; son of Hieronymus Praetorius; b. Hamburg, Feb. 8, 1586; d. there, Oct. 22, 1651. He studied with Sweelinck in Amsterdam; in 1603 was appointed organist at the Peterskirche in Hamburg. He contributed several motets to his father's collection, Hamburger Melodeyen-Gesangbuch.

Praetorius, Michael, great German musician, composer, and theorist; b. Kreuzberg, Thuringia, Feb. 15, 1571; d. Wolfenbüttel, Feb. 15, 1621. His real family name was Schultheiss (German for magistrate, or praetor), which he Latinized as Praetorius; He was the son of a preacher; attended the Latin school of Torgau; studied organ in Frankfurt; then was in the service of the Duke of Brunswick (from 1604); was also prior of the Ringelheim monastery, although without actual residence there. In 1612 he succeeded Mancinus as Kapellmeister in Wolfenbüttel and remained there until his death. —Compositions: Musae Sioniae, a collection of 1244 vocal numbers in 9 parts, in note-against-note counterpoint (1605-10; 2nd ed. of Part IX, as Bicinia et tricinia, 1611); Musarum Sioniarum motetae et psalmi 4-16 vocae (1607); Eulogodia Sionia (1611); 60 motets a 2-8 for the 'close of the Divine Service'; Missodia Sionia (1611), Hymnodia Sionia (1611; hymns a 2-8); Megalynodia (1611; madrigals and motets a 5-8); Terpsichore (1612; dance pieces a 4-6, by Praetorius and some French composers); Polyhymnia caduceatrix et panegyrica (1619; songs of peace and rejoicing a 1-21); Polyhymnia exercitatrix (1620; a 2-8); Uranodia or Uranochordia (1613; 19 songs a 4); Kleine und grosse Litaney (1613); Epithalamium (1614); Puericinium (1621; 14 church songs a 3-12). —Writings: Syntagma musicum . . . , his major work, of which 3 volumes were printed: vol. I (1615), in 2 parts, is a historical and descriptive treatise in Latin on ancient and ecclesiastical music, and ancient secular instruments; vol. II (1618), written in German, in 5 parts and an Appendix (1620), is the most important extant source of information on musical instruments of the period, describing their form, compass, tone quality, etc., the organ, in particular, being treated at great length; the Appendix contains 42 woodcuts of the principal instruments enumerated (vol. II has been reprinted as vol. XIII of the publications of the 'Gesellschaft für Musikforschung'; facsimile reprint, with introduction by W. Gurlitt, Kassel, 1929); vol. III (1619) contains a valuable and interesting account of secular composition at that time, and a treatise on solmisation, notation, etc., etc. A reprint of vol. III was publ. by E. Bernoulli (1916). Other reprints: organ works by W. Gurlitt, in the 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1921); also by K. Matthäi (Brunswick, 1930); Psalm 116, by R. Holle (Mainz, 1933); 2 pieces by A. Schering in Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (Nos. 161, 162); various numbers reprinted by G. Tucher, L. Schöberlein, F. Riegel, K. Ameln, etc. A complete ed. of Praetorius' works was issued in 20 vols. under the editorship of Friedrich Blume (1927-42). — Cf. W. Gurlitt, Michael Praetorius (Creuzburgensis), sein Leben und seine Werke (Leipzig, 1915); F. Blume, Michael Praetorius Creuzburgensis (Wolfenbüttel, 1929); P. Zimmermann, Zur Biographie des Michael Praetorius, in 'Braunschweiger Geschichtsverein Jahrbuch' (1930); R. Unger, Die mehrchörige Aufführungspraxis bei Michael Praetorius und die Feiargestaltung der Gegenwart (Wolfenbüttel, 1941); G. Ilgner, Die lateinischen liturgischen Kompositionen von Michael Praetorius Creuzburgensis (Kiel, 1944).

Pratella, Francesco Balilla, Italian composer and writer of radical tendencies; b. Lugo, Romagna, Feb. 1, 1880; d. Ravenna, May 18, 1955. He studied with Ricci-Signorini, then at the Liceo Rossini in Pesaro with Cicognani and Mascagni; taught in Cesana (1908-09); director of the Istituto Musicale, Lugo (from 1910), of the Liceo Musicale G. Verdi, Ravenna (1927-45); co-editor of the 'Raccolta nazionale delle musiche italiane.' — Writings: Cronache e critiche (1905-17); Evoluzione della musica (1910-18); Saggio di gridi, canzoni, cori e danze del popolo italiano (1919); Il Canzoniere dei canterini romagnoli (1923); Scritti vari di pensiero, di arte e di storia musicale (Bologna, 1932); Luci ed ombre (1933); Il Vino e la musica (1937); Linee di storia della musica (1946). He joined the Italian futurist movement in 1910 (Rus-solo's manifesto of 1913 was addressed to 'Balilla Pratella, grande musicista futurista'), and in 1913 wrote his first composition in this idiom, the choral Inno alla vita. — Works: operas: Lilia (won honorable mention in the Sonzogno Contest, 1903; performed in Lugo, Nov. 13, 1905), La Sina d'Vargöun, to his own libretto (Bologna, Dec. 4, 1909); L'Aviatore Dro (also to his own libretto; Lugo, Sept. 4, 1920); La Ninna nanna della bambola, children's opera (Milan, May 21, 1923); Dono primavera, comedy with music (Bologna, Oct. 17, 1923); Fabiano, opera (Bologna, Dec. 9, 1939); incidental music; for orch.: Romagna, La Guerra, 5 Poemi musicali; chamber music; etc. — Cf. A. Toni, La Sina d'Vargöun di Francesco Balilla Pratella, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1910); G. Bastianelli, Musicisti d'oggi e di ieri (Milan, 1914); G. M. Gatti, Musicisti moderni d'Italia e di fuori (Bologna, 1920); A. Ghigi, F. B. Pratella (Ravenna, 1929); F. B. Pratella, Appunti biografici e bibliografici (Ravenna, 1931).

Pratt, Silas Gamaliel, American composer, b. Addison, Vt., Aug. 4, 1846; d. Pittsburgh, Oct. 30, 1916. Both his parents were church singers. The family moved to Chicago when he was a child, and he received his primary music education there; at 22 he went to Berlin, where he studied piano with Kullak and theory with Kiel (1868-71). He then returned to Chicago, where he served as organist of the Church of the Messiah; in 1872, established the Apollo Club. In 1875 he went to Germany once more; studied orchestration with Heinrich Dorn, and also took some piano lessons with Liszt. On July 4, 1876, he conducted in Berlin his Centennial Overture, dedicated to General Grant; also at the Crystal Palace in London, when General Grant was visiting there; another work that he presented in London was a Homage to Chicago March. Returning to Chicago, he conducted his opera, Zenobia, Queen of Palmyra (to his own libretto) in concert form, on June 15, 1882 (stage performance, Chicago, March 26, 1883; New York, Aug. 21, 1883). The opera was received in a hostile manner by the press, partly owing to the poor quality of the music, but mainly as a reaction to Pratt's exuberant and immodest proclamations of its merit in advance of the production. Nothing daunted, Pratt unleashed a vigorous campaign for native American opera; organized the Grand Opera Festival of 1884, which had some support. The following year he visited London again, and conducted there his symph. work, The Prodigal Son (Oct. 5, 1885). Returning to Chicago, he revised his early lyric opera An- tonio, renamed it Lucille, and produced it on March 14, 1887. In 1888 he moved to N. Y.; there he presented, during the quadricentennial of the discovery of America, his opera, The Triumph of Columbus (in concert form, Oct. 12, 1892); also produced a scenic cantata America, subtitled Four Centuries of Music, Picture, and Song (Nov. 24, 1894; with stereopticon projections). Other works were a Lincoln Symphony; a symph. poem, The Tragedy of the Deep (1912; inspired by the Titanic disaster), and a cantata, The Last Inca; also pub. a manual, Pianist's Mental Velocity (N. Y., 1903). In 1906 he settled in Pittsburgh; established there the Pratt Institute of Music and Art, and remained its director until his death. —Pratt was a colorful personality; despite continuous and severe setbacks, he was convinced of his own significance. The story of his salutation to Wagner at their meeting: 'Herr Wagner, you are the Silas G. Pratt of Germany' may be apocryphal, but is very much in character. —Gf. E. E. Hipsher, American Opera and Its Composers (Philadelphia, pp. 361-63); see also 'Dictionary of American Biography' (vol. 15).

Pratt, Waldo Selden, distinguished American music historian and pedagogue; b. Philadelphia, Nov. 10, 1857; d. Hartford, Conn., July 29, 1939. Graduate of Williams College (1878); then spent 2 years in post-graduate work at Johns Hopkins, specializing the first year (1878-79) in Greek and classical archæology, the second as Fellow in esthetics and art; studied music with B. C. Blodgett in Pittsfield, Mass., but chiefly self-taught. From 1880-82 he was assistant director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, N. Y.; from 1882 on faculty of Hartford Theological Seminary (now Hartford Seminary Foundation). Hartford, Conn.; from 1889, as prof. of music and hymnology, and from 1917, as prof. of public worship and allied subjects; 1891-1906, instructor in elocution at Trinity College, Hartford; also lecturer on music history at Smith College (1895-1908), Mt. Holyoke College (1896-99), Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (1905-20), and Y. W. C. A. Training School (1908-12); organist and choirmaster in North Adams, Mass. (1873-76), Williams College (1876-78), and Hartford (1882-90); president of the Music Teachers National Association, 1906-08; ed. of its 'Proceedings,' 1906-15; 1882-90, conductor of the Hosmer Hall Choral Union, Hartford; made Mus. Doc. by Syracuse Univ. in 1898, L. H. D. by Williams College in 1929. —Publ. Musical Ministries in the Church (1901; 4th enlarged ed., 1915), The History of Music (1907; enlarged eds., 1927 and 1935), Class Notes in Music-History (1908; enlarged, 1915), The Music of the Pilgrims (1921; concerning Ainsworth's Psalter [1612] as brought to Plymouth in 1620, with the tunes in full), The Importance of the Early French Psalter in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1935); publ. The Music of the French Psalter of 1562 (1939); ed. 'St. Nicholas Songs' (1885), 'Aids to Common Worship' (1887), 'Songs of Worship for the Sunday School' (1887), music section of 'Century Dictionary' (1892; also of the supplement, 1909), American supplement to Grove's 'Dictionary' (with Chas. N. Boyd, 1920; enlarged, 1928), 'New Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians' (1924; enlarged, 1929); contributor to 'Parish Problems' (1887; 5 chapters), 'International Encyclopedia' (1891; article Music), 'Standard Bible Dictionary' (1908; rev. 1925). —Cf. Otto Kinkeldey, Waldo Selden Pratt, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1940).

Predieri, Antonio, Italian composer; b. Bologna, Sept. 13, 1688; d. there, 1767. He was maestro di cappella at San Petronio in Bologna and a member of the Accademia dei Filarmonici there; in 1739 was appointed 2nd Kapellmeister at the court chapel in Vienna; in 1746 became 1st Kapellmeister there; retired in 1751. His opera Il Sogno di Scipione was performed at the Emperor's palace in Laxenburg, near Vienna, on Oct. 1, 1735. He also wrote oratorios and instrumental works for festive occasions.

Preger, Leo, Corsican composer; b. Ajaccio, Jan. 27, 1907. He studied composition with Nadia Boulanger in Paris; acquired a considerable mastery of counterpoint in the old style; has devoted himself mainly to choral music on religious subjects. —Works: cantatas, La Reine Isaure; Cantate de Parc; Arrestation de Jésus; Cantique de St. Jean de la Croix; psalms, etc.

Preindl, Joseph, Austrian composer; b. Marbach, Jan. 30, 1756; d. Vienna, Oct. 26, 1823. He was a pupil of Albrechtsberger; in 1809 was appointed cantor at St. Stephen's. He publ. 5 Masses and other church works; brought out a Gesanglehre (singing manual) and a book of melodies by old German composers; wrote pieces for organ. His method Wiener Tonschule was publ. after his death, ed. by Seyfried (Vienna, 1827; 2nd ed., 1832).

Preiss, Cornelius, Austrian writer on music; b. Troppau, May 20, 1884; d. Linz, April 1, 1944. He studied in Olmütz and Graz (Dr. phil., 1907); taught in Graz (1908-24) and Linz (from 1924). He publ. the valuable survey, Zur Geschichte der Operette (1908); the monographs, K. Millocker (1905), L. C. Seydler (1908), Meyerbeer-Studien (1907-14), J. Drechsler (1910), R. Volkmann (1912), R. Stöhr (1914), K. Zeller (1928), F. X. Süßmayr (1933); a collection of Austrian folksongs, Österreichischer Liederquell (3 vols., 1930-32); and the manual, Sing- und allgemeine Musiklehre (1933). Preiss was also a composer; wrote mainly vocal music.

Preobrazhensky, Anton Viktorovitch, Russian musicologist; b. 1870; d. Leningrad, Feb. 17, 1929. Educated in Kazan; 1898-1902, teacher in Moscow; from 1902 librarian of the Court Chapel in St. Petersburg and prof. at the Cons. there. — Publications: Dictionary of Russian Hymns (Moscow, 1897); Bibliography of Hymns (Moscow, 1900); The Monodic Hymn in the Russian Church of the 17th Century (St. Petersburg, 1904); Ecclesiastical Music (1924), and numerous studies on Russian church music.

Presser, Theodore, American music publisher; b. Pittsburgh, Pa., July 3, 1848; d. Philadelphia, Oct. 27, 1925. He studied music at the New England Cons. in Boston with S. Emery, G. E. Whiting, J. C. D. Parker, and B. Lang; then at the Leipzig Cons. with Zwintscher and Jadassohn; in 1883 he founded in Philadelphia 'The Etude,' a well-known music monthly of which he was the editor until 1907; James F. Cooke was its editor from 1908 to 1949; it discontinued publication in 1957. Shortly after the foundation of 'The Etude' Presser established a publishing house, 'Theo. Presser Co.,' for music and books about music, which has come to be one of the important firms in the U. S. In 1906 he founded the 'Presser Home for Retired Music Teachers,' which in 1908 moved to fine new quarters in Germantown (accommodations for 65 guests). In 1916 he established the 'Presser Foundation' to administer this Home, also to provide for the relief of deserving musicians and to offer scholarships in more than 75 colleges and universities in the U. S. James Francis Cooke was president of the Foundation from 1918. — Presser wrote instructive pieces and studies for piano, and transl. several foreign textbooks on music; was a co-founder of the Music Teachers National Association (1876). — Cf. 'Dictionary of American Biography' (vol. 15).

Previtali, Fernando, Italian conductor; b. Adria, Feb. 16, 1907. He studied cello, piano, and composition at the Cons. of Turin; 1928-36, was conductor in Florence; then radio conductor in Rome; 1953, appointed artistic director of the Santa Cecilia Orch.; made annual appearances with various European orchestras; American début with the Cleveland Orch. (Dec. 15, 1955); N. Y. début with the N. Y. Philharmonic (Dec. 5, 1957). He has written a ballet, Allucinazioni (1945), and other music; publ. Guida allo studio della direzione d'orchestra (Rome, 1951).

Prévost (prā-vōh'), Eugène-Prosper, conductor and composer; b. Paris, April 23, 1809; d. New Orleans, Aug. 19, 1872. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Lesueur, winning the Grand Prix de Rome in 1831 with the cantata, Bianca Cappello. He conducted theatrical music in Le Havre (1835-38), then went to New Orleans, where he conducted until 1862; was active in Paris (1862-67) before returning to New Orleans as a singing master. He produced several operas in Paris, of which Cosimo (Opéra-Comique, Oct. 13, 1835) was the most successful, and one (Blanche et René) in New Orleans; also wrote oratorios and Masses.

Preyer, Carl Adolph, pianist, composer, and teacher; b. Pforzheim, Baden, July 28, 1863; d. Lawrence, Kansas, Nov. 16, 1947. He studied at the Stuttgart Cons.; then with Navrátil in Vienna, and with H. Urban and H. Barth in Berlin. In 1893 he settled in the U. S.; became piano teacher at the School of Fine Arts, Univ. of Kansas, and remained with that institution throughout his life. He publ. several instructive collections for piano, 20 Progressive Octave Studies, Melodious Pieces in the Form of Etudes, 12 Wrist Studies, 16 Studies for Rhythm and Expression, 12 Etudes for the Left Hand; also some character pieces. — Cf. Howard F. Gloyne, Carl A. Preyer; the Life of a Kansas Musician (Lawrence, Kansas, 1949).

Preyer (prī'ehr), Gottfried von, Austrian organist and composer; b. Hausbrunn, March 15, 1807; d. Vienna, May 9, 1901. He studied with Sechter; in 1835 became organist of the Lutheran Church in Vienna; in 1838, prof. of music theory at the Vienna Cons., of which he was director from 1844 to 1848. In 1853 he became music director at St. Stephen's; pensioned in 1876. He wrote 3 operas; the oratorio, Noah (often performed in Vienna); a symph.; several Masses and other church music.

Price, Enrique (Henry), conductor and composer; b. London, May 5, 1819; d. New York, Dec. 12, 1863. He settled in Colombia, and established the Philharmonic Orch. of Bogotá (Nov. 11, 1846); was its first conductor. He wrote numerous pieces making use of native melodies.

Price, Jorge Wilson, Colombian musician, son of Enrique Price; b. Bogotá, May 20, 1853; d. there, Oct. 9, 1953 (at the age of 100). He was educated in New York; returning to Colombia, he founded the National Academy (1882) and taught violin. —Cf. J. I. Perdomo Escobar, Historia de la Música en Colombia (Bogotá, 1945).

Příhoda, Váša, noted Czech violinist; b. Vodnany, Aug. 24, 1900. He received his first instruction from his father, a professional violinist; made his public début at the age of 13 in Prague; made a successful Italian tour in 1920; in 1921 appeared in the U. S.; in 1927, in England; then played in recitals throughout Europe. During World War II he taught at the Mozarteum in Salzburg; after the war, resumed his career as a concert artist, giving recitals in Paris and London.

Prill, Emil, eminent German flutist; brother of Karl and Paul Prill; b. Stettin, May 10, 1867; d. Berlin, Feb. 28, 1940. He studied with his father; finished his musical education at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; in 1888 taught in Kharkov, Russia; then played 1st flute with the Hamburg Philharmonic; in 1892 became 1st flutist at the Berlin Opera; in 1903 was appointed instructor at the Hochschule. He publ. the methods Schule für die Böhm-Flöte and Flötenschule; also a valuable practical collection of flute passages from orchestral works, Orchesterstudien (7 books).

Prill, Karl, German violinist; brother of Emil and Paul Prill; b. Berlin, Oct. 22, 1864; d. Vienna, Aug. 18, 1931. He studied violin with Joachim at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik; played in various orchestras, including that of the Gewandhaus (1891-97); in 1897 became concertmaster of the court opera in Vienna; also taught violin at the Vienna Academy. He organized the Prill String Quartet, which was famous in his day.

Prill, Paul, German cellist and conductor, brother of Emil and Karl Prill; b. Berlin, Oct. 1, 1860; d. Bremen, Dec. 21, 1930. He studied with Mancke (cello) and Sturm (theory); was solo cellist in various German orchestras; conducted opera in Rotterdam (1886-89), in Hamburg (1889-92), in Nuremberg (1892-1901), and in Schwerin (1901-6); conducted the Mozart Orch. in Berlin (1906-08); then settled in Munich as conductor of the Konzertverein.

Primrose, William, eminent viola virtuoso; b. Glasgow, Aug. 23, 1903. He studied violin in Glasgow with Camillo Ritter; then at the Guildhall School of Music, London, and in Belgium with Eugène Ysaÿe (1925-27), who advised him to become a viola player; from 1930 to 1935, traveled in Europe, the U. S., and South America as violist of the London String Quartet; also appeared as soloist. In 1937 he was engaged by Toscanini as a first violist in the N.B.C. Symph. Orch., and held that post until 1942; in 1939 he established the William Primrose Quartet; also made numerous appearances as soloist with major symph. orchestras in Europe and America; was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II (Feb. 24, 1953). He commissioned a viola concerto from Béla Bartók, but the work was not completed at the time of Bartók's death. In 1956 he became violist in the Festival String Quartet (with Babin, Goldberg, and Graudan).

Pringsheim, Klaus, German conductor and composer; b. Munich, July 24, 1883. He studied in Munich with Stavenhagen and Thuille, and in Vienna with Gustav Mahler; became operatic coach in Vienna; then conducted opera in Geneva, Prague, Breslau, and Bremen (1907-17); in 1918 was appointed music director at the Grosses Schauspielhaus, Berlin, during the artistic directorship of Max Reinhardt; wrote music criticism in the Berlin 'Vorwärts' (1927-31). He left Germany in 1931 and transferred his activities to Japan; was prof. of composition and choral director at the Ueno Academy of Music in Tokyo (1931-37); musical adviser to the Royal Dept. of Fine Arts, Bangkok, Thailand (1937-38); director of the Tokyo Chamber Symph. Orch. (1941-46). In 1947-51 he was in Hollywood; also toured the U. S. as lecturer; in 1951 returned to Tokyo, and was appointed music director of the Musashino Academy of Music. As a composer, he endeavored to combine Japanese melodic material with European harmonic and contrapuntal resources; wrote a Symphonic Concert Piece (Tokyo, Sept. 27, 1936, composer conducting); piano concerto in C (Tokyo, Oct. 13, 1935); chamber music; contributed numerous articles on Japanese and Siamese music to publications in German and English.

Printz, Wolfgang Kaspar, German composer and writer; b. Waldthurn, Oct. 10, 1641; d. Sorau, Oct. 13, 1717. Originally a theological student, he later led a roving life, and then was cantor successively at Promnitz, Triebel, and (from 1665) Sorau. He brought out a Historische Beschreibung der edelen Sing- und Kling-Kunst (Dresden, 1690), a work of some importance for the history of music of the 17th century. His other theoretical writings include Anweisung zur Singkunst (1666; 2nd ed., 1671; 3rd ed., 1685); Compendium ad Oden componendam (1668); Musica modulationis vocalis (1678); Exercitationes . . . de concordantiis (1687-89); also a curious satire on music theory, Phrynis Mytilenaeus oder Satyrischer Componist (1676-77; 2nd ed., 1696); also wrote 3 musical stories, characterizing different types of musicians. According to his own statement, the MSS of his numerous compositions were destroyed in a fire. —Cf. E. Schmitz, Studien über W. Printz als Musikschriststeller, in 'Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte' (1904).

Proch (pröh), Heinrich, Austrian conductor, composer, and singing teacher; b. Böhmisch-Leipa. July 22, 1809; d. Vienna. Dec. 18, 1878. He studied law and at the same time took violin lessons; became conductor of the Josephstadt Theater, Vienna, in 1837; from 1840 to 1870 conducted at the Vienna Opera; pensioned in 1870. Among his voice pupils were Materna, Tietjens, and Peschka-Leutner. He wrote many songs that were popular for a time; his set of variations for coloratura soprano with flute obbligato was particularly well known. Also brought out in Vienna a comic opera, Ring und Maske (Dec. 4, 1844), and 3 one-act operas, Die Blutrache (Dec. 5, 1846), Zweiter und dritter Stock (Oct. 5, 1847), and Der gefährliche Sprung (Jan. 5, 1849).

Procházka (pröh-hähz'-käh), Rudolf, Freiherr von, Bohemian writer on music and composer; b. Prague, Feb. 23, 1864; d. there, March 23, 1936. While pursuing the study of jurisprudence at the Univ. of Prague, he studied violin with Wittich and composition with Grünberger and Fibich; in Prague he was music inspector, and archivist of the 'Verein zur Beförderung der Tonkunst in Böhmen' and of the Cons. In May, 1911, he arranged an important musical exposition in Prague in commemoration of the centenary of the founding of the Cons., and wrote its official catalogue, Aus fünf Jahrhunderten. In the same year he brought about the establishment of a commission for the examination and licensing of all music teachers in Bohemia, and was appointed its head. —Writings: Die böhmischen Musikschulen (1890); Mozart in Prag (very valuable; 1892; revised by Paul Nettel in 1938 as Mozart in Böhmen); Robert Franz (1894); Arpeggien: Musikalisches aus alten und neuen Tagen (1897; 2nd ed. as Musikalische Streiflichter, 1901); Johann Strauss (1900; 2nd ed., 1903); Das romantische Musik-Prag (1914); Der Kammermusikverein in Prag (1926); also ed. the 8th (1909; practically rewritten) and 11th (1920) editions of Kothe's Musikgeschichte. —Compositions: an allegorical opera, Das Glück (Prague, 1898); oratorio, Die Palmen; Haffner-Variationen über ein Thema von Mozart, for orch.; Sinfonische Lieder, for orch.; Deutsch-böhmische Reigen, for piano 4 hands; pieces for solo piano; many choruses and songs. —Cf. C. Hunnius, Rudolf von Procházka, Ein deutscher Tondichter Böhmens (Leipzig, 1902); E. Janetschek, Rudolf von Procházka, in the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik' (Dec., 1915).

Prod'homme, Jacques-Gabriel, French writer on music; b. Paris, Nov. 28, 1871; d. there, June 18, 1956. Having completed his course at the Lycée Condorcet, he studied philology and history of music at the École des Hautes Études Sociales (1890-94). In 1895 he began his career as music critic of 'L'Enclos', and until 1912 held similar positions with 'La Revue Socialiste', 'Droits de l'Homme', 'Messidor', 'Paris-Journal', etc. From 1897 to 1900 he lived in Munich as ed. of the 'Deutsch-französische Rundschau'. From 1898 to 1916, was secretary of the French section of the International Musical Society; archivist of the Paris Opéra Museum (from 1931); librarian of the Paris Cons. (from 1934); etc. In 1917, with La Laurencie, he founded the Société Française de Musicologie. —Publications: Le Cycle Berlioz, in 2 vols.: La Damnation de Faust (1896) and L'Enfance du Christ (1898); Hector Berlioz. Sa vie et ses œuvres (1905; in German, 1906); Les Symphonies de Beethoven (1906; 15th ed., 1938; awarded prize by the French Academy); Paganini (1907; in English, 1911); Écrits de musiciens . . . (1912); La Jeunesse de Beethoven (1921); Richard Wagner et la France (1921); L'Opéra, 1669-1925 (1925); Pensées sur la musique et les musiciens (1926); Beethoven raconté par ceux qui l'ont vu (1927); Mozart raconté par ceux qui l'ont vu (1928); Schubert raconté par ceux qui l'ont vu (1928); Wagner raconté par ceux qui l'ont vu (1929); Les Sonates pour piano de Beethoven (1937; in German, 1948); L'Immortelle bien-aimée de Beethoven (1946); Gluck (1948); Gossec (1949); contributed a number of articles to the 'Mus. Quarterly.' In collaboration with Ch. Bertrand, he publ. Guide musical et étude analytique de la Götterdämmerung (1902); with A. Dandelot, Gounod. Sa Vie et ses œuvres d'après des documents inédits (2 vols., 1911); with E. Crauzat, Les Menus plaisirs du roi; l'École royale et le Conservatoire de Paris (1929). Together with Fr. Holl, F. Caille, and L. van Vassenhove he transl. Wagner's prose works, Œuvres en prose, in 13 vols. (1908-25); also transl. A. Schurig's Mozart (1925); ed. Souvenirs de voyage de Berlioz (1932); transl. and ed. Cahiers de conversation de Beethoven, 1819-1827 (1946).

Profe, Ambrosius, German organist and music editor; b. Breslau, Feb. 12, 1589; d. there, Dec. 27, 1661. He studied theology at Wittenberg; then was cantor in Silesia; from 1633, he was church organist in Breslau. He edited important collections of German sacred music: Geistliche Concerte und Harmonien, for 1-7 voices (1641-46), Corollarium geistlicher Collectaneorum (a supplement to the previous vol.; 1649); a collection of Christmas songs, Cunis solennibus Jesuli recens-nati sacra genethliaca (1646); also brought out Heinrich Albert's Arien (1657).

Prohaska, Felix, Austrian conductor, son of Karl Prohaska; b. Vienna, May 16, 1912. He studied theory with his father and Hanns and Egon Kornauth, violin with G. Feist, piano with F. Wührer and E. Steuermann, and musicology at the University of Vienna. Since 1936 he has been conductor at various opera houses, including Graz (1936-39), Duisberg (1939-41), Strasbourg (1941-43), Vienna (from 1945), and Frankfurt (since 1955).

Prohaska, Karl, Austrian composer; b. Mödling, near Vienna, April 25, 1869; d. Vienna, March 28, 1927. He was a pupil in Vienna of Anny Assmayer (piano) and Franz Krenn (composition); then in Berlin of Eugen d'Albert (piano) and H. von Herzogenberg (composition); from 1901 to 1905, was conductor of the Warsaw Philharmonic; in 1908, appointed prof. at the Akademie der Tonkunst in Vienna. — Works: opera, Madeleine Guimard; oratorio, Frühlingsfeier; Passacaglia, for orch.; chamber music; 6 songs to Giraud's Pierrot Lunaire; motet Aus dem Buch Hiob; some fine choruses.

Prokofiev (prōh-kōh'-fyēf), Sergey Sergeyevitch, outstanding Russian composer; b. Sontzovka, near Ekaterinoslav, April 23, 1891; d. Moscow, March 5, 1953. His mother was an amateur pianist, and he received his first training from her. He improvised at the piano; in June 1900, at the age of 9, he completed the piano score of an opera, The Giant; then wrote an overture and 3 tableaux for an opera entitled On Desert Islands (1902). He was taken to Taneyev in Moscow, who referred him to Glière for serious study. Under Glière's guidance he wrote a symphony in G major, and 2 operas, Feast During the Plague, after Pushkin (1903), and Ondine (1904). At the age of 13 he entered the St. Petersburg Cons., where he studied composition with Rimsky-Korsakov, Wihtol, and Liadov; piano with Mme. Essipova, and conducting with Nicolas Tcherepnin. He graduated from the Cons. in 1914; received the Anton Rubinstein Prize (a grand piano) as a pianist, for his performance of his 1st piano concerto. Even before graduation, he appeared before various modern music societies in St. Petersburg, playing his own piano pieces, and soon earned a reputation as a youthful 'futurist.' He developed a novel piano idiom, explicitly demonstrated in his Sarcasms and Visions Fugitives, percussive and sharp, yet not without a lyric charm. Grotesquerie and irony animated Prokofiev's early works; he also felt a strong attraction towards subjects of elemental or primitive character. His first important orchestral composition, the Scythian Suite, or Ala and Lolly, draws upon the ancient Russian sun-worship. While a parallel with Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps may exist, there is no similarity between the styles of the two works. Another score, primitivistic in its inspiration, was Seven, They Are Seven, an incantation from an old Sumerian ritual. During the same period, Prokofiev wrote his famous Classical Symphony, which he completed at the age of 26. In it he successfully recreated the formal style of the 18th century; while the structure was indeed classical, the sudden modulatory shifts and a subtle element of grotesquerie betrayed a 20th-century hand. He conducted the first performance of the Classical Symphony in the spring of 1918, and then left Russia, proceeding through Siberia and Japan to America; gave concerts of his music in New York, Chicago, and other cities. In 1920 he went to Paris, where he became associated with Diaghilev, who produced Prokofiev's ballets Chout (French transliteration of the Russian word for buffoon), Le Pas d'acier, and L'Enfant prodigue. Koussevitzky, who became Prokofiev's publisher, commissioned several works from him for his concerts in Paris, and subsequently in Boston. In 1921 Prokofiev again visited the U. S. for the production by the Chicago Opera Co. of his opera, Love for Three Oranges. In 1927 he played a series of concerts in Russia; then lived in Europe (mostly in Paris); late in 1933 he returned to Russia, establishing himself as a Soviet citizen; however, he continued to make occasional tours in Europe and America; he visited the U. S. for the last time in 1938. In Russia he wrote some of his most popular works: the symph. fairy-tale, Peter and the Wolf (for a children's theater in Moscow), the cantata Alexander Nevsky (originally for a film), the ballet Romeo and Juliet, the opera War and Peace, the 5th, 6th, and 7th symphonies; several piano sonatas; songs; etc. Although Prokofiev was the target of sharp criticism on the part of the Soviet press for his 'decadent' practices in adopting certain modernistic procedures, his status on the whole remained very high; virtually all of his works were published; his music became a major influence on the young generation of Soviet composers. Outside Russia, too, Prokofiev enjoyed enduring fame; his Classical Symphony, his 3rd piano concerto, Peter and the Wolf, the march from Love for Three Oranges, the suite from Lieutenant Kijé, and many of the piano works have become repertory pieces all over the world. —Prokofiev never departed from the tonal system despite occasional excursions into modernistic practices (polytonality, atonality). He had an innate sense of sharp rhythm, often in asymmetrical patterns; in his melodic writing, he was equally adept in simple lyricism, along modal lines, and in a modern manner spanning large intervals; he was a master of instrumentation, developing an individual method of treating orchestral sonorities. Above all, his music shows a professional care for the performer, never reaching beyond the practicable limits of execution. —Works: Operas: Magdalena, op. 13 (1913); The Gambler, op. 24, after Dostoyevsky (1915-16; revised 1927; première, Brussels, April 29, 1929); Love for Three Oranges, op. 33, after Carlo Gozzi (Chicago, Dec. 30, 1921, composer conducting); The Flaming Angel, op. 37 (1919; 2 fragments performed at a Koussevitzky concert, Paris, June 14, 1928; complete performance in concert form was given over the Paris Radio, Jan. 13, 1954); Simeon Kotko, op. 81 (1939; Moscow, June 23, 1940); Betrothal in a Con- vent, op. 86, after Sheridan's Duenna (1940; Leningrad, Nov. 3, 1946); War and Peace, op. 91, after Tolstoy (1941-52; 1st version, Leningrad, June 12, 1946; 2nd version, Leningrad, April 1, 1955); A Tale about a Real Man, op. 117 (1947-48; privately performed, Leningrad, Dec. 3, 1948; severely censured by Soviet critics and not produced in public). Ballets: A Tale of a Buffoon Who Outwitted Seven Buffoons, op. 21 (usually performed outside Russia as Chout; 1920; Paris, May 17, 1921); Le Pas d'acier, op. 41 (1924; Paris, June 7, 1927); L'Enfant prodigue, op. 46 (1928; Paris, May 21, 1929); Sur le Boristhène, op. 50 (1930; Paris, Dec. 16, 1932); Romeo and Juliet, op. 64 (1935-36; Leningrad, Jan. 11, 1940); Cinderella, op. 87 (1940-44; Moscow, Nov. 21, 1945); A Tale of the Stone Flower, op. 118 (1948-50; Moscow, Feb. 12, 1954). Incidental music to Boris Godunov, op. 70-bis (1936), Eugene Onegin, op. 71 (1936), Hamlet, op. 77 (1937-38). Music for films: Lieutenant Kijé (1933); The Queen of Spades, op. 70 (1938); Alexander Nevsky (1938); Ivan the Terrible, op. 116 (1942-45). Choral works: 2 poems for women's chorus with orch., op. 7, The White Swan and The Wave (1909); Seven, They Are Seven, cantata for tenor, chorus, and orch., op. 30 (1917-18; Paris, May 29, 1924); cantata for the 20th anniversary of the October Revolution, for 2 choruses, military band, accordions, percussion, to texts by Marx, Lenin, and Stalin, op. 74 (1937; not performed); Songs of Our Days op. 76, suite for solo voices, mixed chorus, and orch. (Moscow, Jan. 5, 1938); Alexander Nevsky, op. 78, cantata for mezzo-soprano, mixed chorus, and orch. (Moscow, May 17, 1939); Salute, op. 85, cantata for mixed chorus and symph. orch., for Stalin's 60th birthday (Moscow, Dec. 21, 1939); Ballad of a Boy Who Remained Unknown, op. 93, cantata for soprano, tenor, chorus, and orch. (Moscow, Feb. 21, 1944); Hymn to the Soviet Union, op. 98 (1943; submitted to the competition for a new Soviet anthem but failed to win; a song by Alexander Alexandrov was selected); Flourish, Powerful Land, op. 114, cantata for the 30th anniversary of the October Revolution (Moscow, Nov. 12, 1947); Winter Bonfire, op. 122, suite for narrators, boys' chorus, and symph. orch. (Moscow, Dec. 19, 1950); On Guard for Peace, op. 124, oratorio for mezzo-soprano narrators, mixed chorus, boys' chorus, and symph. orch. (Moscow, Dec. 19, 1950). For orch.: Sinfonietta, op. 5 (1914; Petrograd, Nov. 6, 1915); Rêves, op. 6, symph. tableau

PROKOFIEV

PROKOFIEV

(St. Petersburg, Dec. 5, 1910); Autumn, op. 8, symph. tableau (Moscow, Aug. 1, 1911); 1st piano concerto, op. 10 (Moscow, Aug. 7, 1912, composer soloist); 2nd piano concerto, op. 16 (Pavlovsk, Sept. 5, 1913, composer soloist; 2nd version, Paris, May 8, 1924, composer soloist); 1st violin concerto, op. 19 (1916-17; Paris, Oct. 18, 1923); Scythian Suite, op. 20 (1914; Petrograd, Jan. 29, 1916); Chout, op. 21-bis, symph. suite from the ballet (Brussels, Jan. 15, 1924); Classical Symphony, op. 25 (1916-17; Petrograd, April 21, 1918, composer conducting); 3rd piano concerto, op. 26 (1917-21; Chicago, Dec. 16, 1921, composer soloist); Love for Three Oranges, op. 33-bis, symph. suite from the opera (Paris, Nov. 29, 1925); symph. no. 2, op. 40 (1924; Paris, June 6, 1925; 2nd version, op. 136; not completed); Le Pas d'acier, op. 41-bis, symph. suite from the ballet (1926; Moscow, May 27, 1928); overture for chamber orch., op. 42 (Moscow, Feb. 7, 1927; also for large orch., 1928; Paris, Dec. 18, 1930); Divertissement, op. 43 (1925-29; Paris, Dec. 22, 1929); symph. no. 3, op. 44 (1928; Paris, May 17, 1929); L'Enfant prodigue, op. 46-bis, symph. suite from the ballet (1929; Paris, March 7, 1931); symph. no. 4, op. 47 (Boston, Nov. 14, 1930; 2nd version, op. 112, not performed); Sinfonietta, op. 48, a new version of op. 5 (1929; Moscow, Nov. 18, 1930); 4 Portraits, op. 49, symph. suite from the opera, The Gambler (1931; Paris, March 12, 1932); On the Dnieper, op. 51-bis, symph. suite from the ballet (1933); 4th piano concerto, op. 53, for left hand alone (1931; Berlin, Sept. 5, 1936); 5th piano concerto, op. 55 (Berlin, Oct. 31, 1932, composer soloist); Symphonic Song, op. 57 (Moscow, April 14, 1934); 1st cello concerto, op. 58 (1933-38; Moscow, Nov. 26, 1938); Lieutenant Kije, op. 60, symph. suite from film music (1934; Paris, Feb. 20, 1937, composer conducting); Egyptian Nights, op. 61, symph. suite (1934; Moscow, Dec. 22, 1938); 2nd violin concerto, op. 63 (1935; Madrid, Dec. 1, 1935); Romeo and Juliet, op. 64-bis, 1st suite from the ballet (Moscow, Nov. 24, 1936); Romeo and Juliet, op. 64-ter, 2nd suite from the ballet (Leningrad, April 15, 1937); Peter and the Wolf, op. 67, symph. fairy-tale (Moscow, May 2, 1936); 4 Marches, op. 69, for military band (1935-37); Russian Overture, op. 72 (Moscow, Oct. 29, 1936); Hamlet, op. 77, symph. suite from the film score (1938; Moscow, Nov. 25, 1954); Symphonic March, op. 88 (1941); The Year 1941, op. 90 (1941; Sverdlovsk, Jan. 21, 1943);

March for military orch., op. 99 (Moscow, April 30, 1944); symph. no. 5, op. 100 (1944; Moscow, Jan. 13, 1945); Romeo and Juliet, op. 101, 3rd suite from the ballet (Moscow, March 8, 1946); Ode on the End of the War, op. 105, for 8 harps, 4 pianos, military band, percussion ensemble, and double-basses (1945; Moscow, Nov. 12, 1945); Cinderella, op. 107, 108, 109, 3 suites from the ballet (1946); Waltzes, op. 110, suite for orch. (1946; Moscow, May 13, 1947); symph. no. 6, op. 111 (1945-47; Leningrad, Oct. 11, 1947); Festive Poem, op. 113 (Moscow, Oct. 3, 1947); Ivan the Terrible, op. 116, suite for orch. (1942-45); Pushkin Waltzes, op. 120 (1949); Summer Night, op. 123, symph. suite on themes from the opera, Betrothal in a Convent (1950); 2nd cello concerto, op. 125 (1950-52; Moscow, Feb. 18, 1952); Wedding Scene, op. 126, suite from the ballet, A Tale of the Stone Flower (Moscow, Dec. 12, 1951); Gypsy Fantasy, op. 127, from the ballet, A Tale of the Stone Flower (Moscow, Nov. 18, 1951); Ural Rhapsody, op. 128, from the ballet, A Tale of the Stone Flower (1951); The Mistress of the Copper Mountain, op. 129, suite from the ballet, A Tale of the Stone Flower (incomplete); The Meeting of the Volga with the Don River, op. 130 (for the completion of the Volga-Don Canal; 1951; Moscow, Feb. 22, 1952); symph. no. 7, op. 131 (1951-52; Moscow, Oct. 11, 1952); Concertino for cello and orch., op. 132 (1952); concerto for 2 pianos and string orch., op. 133 (1952; incomplete). Chamber music: Humorous Scherzo for 4 bassoons, op. 12-bis (1912; London, Sept. 2, 1916); Ballade for cello and piano, op. 15 (1912); Overture on Hebrew Themes, op. 34, for clarinet, 2 violins, viola, cello, and piano (N. Y., Jan. 26, 1920); quintet for oboe, clarinet, violin, viola, and double-bass, op. 39 (1924; Moscow, March 6, 1927); 1st string quartet, op. 50 (Washington, April 25, 1931); sonata for 2 violins, op. 56 (Moscow, Nov. 27, 1932); 1st violin sonata, op. 80 (1938-46; Moscow, Oct. 23, 1946); 2nd string quartet, op. 92 (1941; Moscow, Sept. 5, 1942); sonata for flute and piano, op. 94 (Moscow, Dec. 7, 1943); 2nd violin sonata, op. 94-bis (transcription of the flute sonata; Moscow, June 17, 1944); sonata for violin unaccompanied, op. 115 (1947); cello sonata, op. 119 (1949; Moscow, March 1, 1950). Piano music: 10 sonatas: no. 1, op. 1 (1909); no. 2, op. 14 (1912); no. 3, op. 28 (1917); no. 4, op. 29 (1917); no. 5, op. 38 (1923); no. 6, op. 82 (1940); no. 7, op. 83 (1942); no. 8, op. 84 (1944); no. 9, op. 103 (1947); no. 10 (incomplete), op.

137 (1953); 2 sonatas, op. 54 (1931-32); 4 études, op. 2 (1909); 4 pieces, op. 3 (1911); 4 pieces, op. 4 (1912); toccata, op. 11 (1912); 10 pieces, op. 12 (1913); Sarcasms, op. 17, a suite of 5 pieces (1912-14); Visions fugitives, op. 22, a suite of 20 pieces (1915-17); Tales of an old Grandmother, op. 31, 4 pieces (1918); 4 pieces, op. 32 (1918); Schubert's Waltzes, transcribed for 2 pianos (1911); March and Scherzo from the opera, Love for Three Oranges, op. 33-ter (1922); Things in Themselves, op. 45 (1928); 6 pieces, op. 52 (1930-31); 3 pieces, op. 59 (1934); Pensées, op. 62 (1933-34); Children's Music, op. 65, 12 easy pieces (1935); Romeo and Juliet, op. 75, 10 pieces from the ballet (1937); 3 pieces from the ballet Cinderella, op. 95 (1942); 3 pieces, op. 96 (1941-42); 10 pieces from the ballet Cinderella, op. 97 (1943); 6 pieces from the ballet Cinderella, op. 102 (1944). Songs: 2 poems, op. 9 (1911); The Ugly Duckling, op. 18, after Andersen (1914); 5 poems, op. 23 (1915); 5 poems, op. 27 (1916); 5 Songs Without Words, op. 35 (1920); also for violin and piano, op. 35-bis; 5 poems, op. 36 (1921); 6 songs, op. 66 (1935); 3 Children's Songs, op. 68 (1936); 3 poems, op. 73 (1936); 3 songs from the film Alexander Nevsky, op. 78 (1939); 7 songs, op. 79 (1939); 7 mass songs, op. 89 (1941-42); 6 transcriptions of folksongs, op. 104 (1944); 2 duets, op. 106 (1945); Soldiers' March Song, op. 121 (1950). — Bibliography: M. Montagu-Nathan, S. Prokofiev, in the 'Mus. Times' (Oct., 1916); M. Montagu-Nathan, Prokofiev's First Pianoconcerto, in the 'Mus. Times' (Jan., 1917); M. Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers (N. Y., 1917); L. Sabaneyev, Modern Russian Composers (N. Y., 1927); N. Slonimsky, S. Prokofiev, in the 'Quarterly on the Soviet Union' (N. Y., April, 1939); Gerald Abraham, 8 Soviet Composers (London, 1943); S. Prokofiev, The War Years, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1944); I. Nestyev, S. Prokofiev (Moscow, 1946; in English, N. Y., 1946; enlarged Russian ed., Moscow, 1957); Rena Moisenko, Realist Music: 25 Soviet Composers (London, 1949; pp. 173-87); N. Nabokov, Old Friends and New Music (Boston, 1951; pp. 141-83); S. I. Schlifstein, ed., S. Prokofiev, Materials, Documents, Reminiscences (Moscow, 1956; of prime documentary value; contains Prokofiev's autobiography and a complete catalogue of Prokofiev's works, with exhaustive commentaries and dates of composition and performance).

Proksch, Josef, Bohemian pianist and pedagogue; b. Reichenberg, Aug. 4, 1794; d. Prague, Dec. 20, 1864. He studied with Koželuch; in 1811, he lost his eyesight, but still learned Logier's system, and in 1830 founded a 'Musikbildungsanstalt' (school of piano playing) in Prague. He publ. a useful piano manual, Versuch einer rationellen Lehrmethode im Pianofortespiel; also a Musikalisches Vademecum; Aphorismen über katholische Kirchenmusik; Allgemeine Musiklehre; made for his pupils transcriptions, for 2, 3, 4, and even 8 pianos, of orchestral works; composed a concerto for 3 pianos, sonatas and other works; also vocal music. His son, Theodor Proksch (1843-1876), and a daughter, Marie Proksch (1836-1900), managed the school after his death; the last director of the Proksch school was Robert Franz Proksch, a great-grand-nephew of Josef Proksch; he died in 1933. — Cf. R. Müller, Josef Proksch (Prague, 1874); H. P. Kraus, Musikbibliothek Josef Proksch (Vienna, 1934).

Prony, Gaspard-Claire-François-Marie-Riche, Baron de, French harpist and music theorist; b. Chamelot, Rhône, July 12, 1755; d. Paris, July 29, 1839. As a member of the Académie, he was in charge of educational information; publ. a report on Érard's double-pedal harp, Rapport sur la nouvelle harpe à double mouvement (1815); other reports are: Note sur les avantages du nouvel établissement d'un professorat d'harpe à l'école royale de musique (1825); Instruction élémentaire sur les moyens de calculer les intervalles musicaux (1832; employing Euler's system of logarithms).

Proske, Karl, German authority on sacred music; b. Gröbnig, Feb. 11, 1794; d. Regensburg, Dec. 20, 1861. He was a medical student, regimental physician during the war of 1813-15; took the degree of M. D. at Halle in 1817, and practiced at Oberglogau and Oppeln. In 1823 he renounced medicine for theology, and studied at Regensburg; was ordained in 1826, became vicar-choral in 1827, and canon and Kapellmeister of the Church of Our Lady at Regensburg in 1830. After diligent research in Germany and Italy, he began his life-work, the publication of sacred classics, the first being Palestrina's Missa Papae Marcelli (Palestrina's original version, and arrangements by Anerio a 4 and Suriano a 8), followed by the famous collection 'Musica divina,' containing chiefly Italian masterworks of the 16th-17th centuries: vol. I, 12 Masses a 4 (1853); vol. II, motets for the entire church-year (1855); vol. III, fauxbourdons, psalms, Magnificats, hymns, and antiphons (1859); vol. IV, Passions, Lamentations, responses, Te Deums, litanies (1863; edited by Wesselack); publication continued by Schrems and Haberl; also a 'Selectus novus missarum' a 4-8 (1855-59). His valuable library was purchased for the Episcopal Library at Regensburg; in 1909, when Dr. Karl Weinmann was appointed librarian, it was opened to musicians and music students. —Cf. Dom. Mettenleiter, Karl Proske (Regensburg, 1868; 2nd ed., 1895); K. Weinmann, Karl Proske, der Restaurator der klassischen Kirchenmusik (Regensburg, 1909); K. Weinmann, Die Proskesche Musikbibliothek in Regensburg, in the 'Riemann Festschrift' (Leipzig, 1909); O. Ursprung, Restauration und Palestrina-Renaissance in der katholischen Kirchenmusik (Augsburg, 1924; p. 32 ff.).

Prosniz, Adolf, Austrian pianist and pedagogue; b. Prague, Dec. 2, 1829; d. Vienna, Feb. 23, 1917. He was a pupil of Proksch and Tomaschek; 1869-1900, prof. of piano at the Vienna Cons.; then retired and lived in Vienna. — Publications: Kompedium der Musikgeschichte (vol. I, 1889; 3rd ed., 1920; vol. II, 1900; vol. III, 1915); Handbuch der Klavierliteratur (vol. I, 1450-1830, 1884; 2nd ed., 1908; vol. II, 1830-1904, 1907); Elementarmusiklehre (6 eds.); Historische Klavierliteratur aus dem 16., 17. und 18. Jahrhundert. Ausgewählte Beispiele zu jedem Handbuch der Klavierliteratur (9 vols.).

Prota-Giurleo, Ulisse, Italian musicologist; b. Naples, March 13, 1886; living in Ponticelli, near Naples. At first an art critic, he took up the study of musicology and devoted himself chiefly to Neapolitan music. His publications (all printed in Naples) are valuable for their new documentation; they include: Musicisti napoletani alla corte di Portogallo (1923); Musicisti napoletani in Russia (1923); Paisiello ed i suoi primi trionfi a Napoli (1923); Nicola Logroscini, 'il dio dell' opera buffa' (1927); La grande orchestra del R. Teatro San Carlo nel settecento (1927); La Famiglia e la giovinezza di Salvator Rosa (containing 52 unpublished documents; 1929); Notizie sul musicista belga Jean Macque, in the 'Report of the First Congress of the International Society for Musical Research' (Burnham, 1930); Sacchini non nacque a Pozzuoli (1952); Nuovi contributi alla biografia di Domenico Cimarosa and Nuovi contributi alle biografie di Nicola Porpora e Giuseppe Porcile (both published serially in 'La Scala' during 1955-56); numerous essays publ. in the Italian periodicals 'Samnium,' 'Vita Musicale Italiana,' 'Nostro Tempo,' etc.

Protheroe, Daniel, American conductor and composer; b. Ystradgynlais, S. Wales, Nov. 24, 1866; d. Chicago, Feb. 24, 1934. From 1884-86, conductor of the Choral Society at Ystradgynlais; choral conductor in Scranton, Pa., 1886-94; singer and teacher in Milwaukee, 1894-1909; then lived in Chicago as mus. director of the Central Church. —Publ. a symph. poem, In the Cambrian Hills, op. 59; a string quartet in A minor, op. 52; works for men's chorus; songs. Author of a Course in Harmony and Choral Conducting.

Prout, Ebenezer, eminent English theorist and teacher; b. Oundle, Northamptonshire, March 1, 1835; d. London, Dec. 5, 1909. Excepting some piano lessons as a boy, and a later course with Charles Salaman, he was wholly self-taught. His father had him trained for a school-teacher, and he took the degree of B. A. at London Univ. in 1854; but in 1859 went over definitely to music; was organist at Union Chapel, Islington, 1861-73; prof. of piano at the Crystal Palace School of Art, 1861-85; prof. of harmony and composition at the National Training School from 1876, and took Sullivan's class at the Royal Academy of Music in 1879; also conducted the Hackney Choral Association 1876-90, bringing it to a high state of efficiency; edited the 'Monthly Mus. Record' 1871-74, was critic on the 'Academy' 1874-79, and on the 'Athenæum' 1879-89. To Grove's 'Dictionary' he contributed 53 articles. In 1894 he was called to Dublin Univ. as prof. of music, succeeding Sir R. Stewart; in 1895 both Dublin and Edinburgh Universities conferred on him the degree of Mus. Doc. (hon. c.). His valuable theoretical works are the following: Instrumentation (Novello primer, 1876; German transl.; 3rd ed., 1904); Harmony, Its Theory and Practice (1889; 20th ed., entirely rewritten, 1903); Counterpoint, Strict and Free (1890); Double Counterpoint and Canon (1891); Fugue (1891); Fugal Analysis (1892); Musical Form (1893); Applied Forms (1895); all of which have passed through two or more editions; The Orchestra (2 vols., 1898-99; in German, 1905-06); and Some Notes on Bach's Church-Cantatas (1907). He reorchestrated Handel's Messiah, and this version is still in use. Besides, he wrote a number of compositions: 4 symphonies; 2 overtures; 2 organ concertos; a piano quintet; 2 string quartets; 2 piano quartets; clarinet sonata; the cantatas Hereward, Alfred, The Red Cross Knight; a considerable amount of church music; Freedom, ode for baritone solo and orch.; organ arrangements.

Provenzale, Francesco, one of the founders of the Neapolitan Opera School; b. Naples, 1627; d. there, Sept., 1704. From 1663 he was maestro at the Cons. di Santa Maria di Loreto; 1673-1701, director of the Cons. della Pietà de' Turchini; c. 1680 associate conductor of the Royal Chapel; 1686-1699, conductor at the Tesoro di San Gennaro, Naples. Romain Rolland believed him to be identical with Francesco della Torre. —Works: operas (all performed in Naples): Ciro (1653), Seise (1655), Artemisia (1657), Teseo o L'Incostanza trionfante (1658), L'Eritrea (1659), Lo Schiavo di sua moglie (1671), La Stellidaura vendicata, or Diffendere l'offensore (1678), and Candaule re di Lidia (1679); also oratorios; motets; a 9-voiced hymn with instrumental accompaniment, Pange lingua; and cantatas. —Cf. R. Rolland, Histoire de l'Opéra avant Lully et Scarlatti (1895); H. Riemann, 'Handbuch der Musikgeschichte' II, 2, p. 385 ff.; H. Goldschmidt, F. Provenzale als Dramatiker, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' VII, 4; G. Pannain, F. Provenzale e la lirica del suo tempo, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1925).

Prudent (prü-dähn), Émile, French pianist; b. Angoulême, Feb. 3, 1817; d. Paris, May 13, 1863. Early orphaned, he was adopted by a piano-tuner; studied at the Paris Cons. with Zimmerman (piano) and Laurent (harmony), taking 1st prize in 1833. He made tours as a pianist in France, Belgium, England, and Germany; then settled in Paris, and was greatly esteemed there as a teacher. He wrote a number of piano works; contemporary critics ranked him between Thalberg and Döhler; his paraphrase of Lucia di Lammermoor enjoyed considerable success; he publ. 6 études de salon, and other effective piano pieces (L'Hirondelle, La Berceuse, Chanson sicilienne, Le Réveil des fées, etc.).

Prüfer, Arthur, German musicologist; b. Leipzig, July 7, 1860; d. Würzburg, June 3, 1944. He was a law student; then turned to music; studied at the Leipzig Cons. (1887-88), also attending the lectures on musicology of Paul and Kretschmar at the Univ.; studied further in Berlin (1888-89) with Spitta and Bargiel; took the degree of Dr.

phil. (Leipzig, 1890), with the dissertation Über den ausserkirchlichen Kunstgesang in den evangelischen Schulen des 16. Jahrhunderts; qualified 1895 as lecturer at Leipzig Univ. with the essay Johann Hermann Schein; 1902 as associate prof., with the lecture J. S. Bach und die Tonkunst des 19. Jahrhunderts. Further publications: Briefwechsel zwischen K. von Winterfeld und Ed. Krüger (1898); Die Bühnenfestspiele in Bayreuth (1899; 2d ed., completely rewritten and greatly enlarged, as Das Werk von Bayreuth, 1909); Joh. Herm. Schein und das weltliche deutsche Lied des 17. Jahrhunderts (1908); R. Wagner in Bayreuth (1910); Einführung in R. Wagners 'Feen' (1912); R. Wagner und Jakob Grimm (1913); Liszt und das Schiller-Goethe-Denkmal in Weimar (1917); Die Musik als tönende Faust-Idee (1920); Tristan und Isolde (3rd ed., 1928); Deutsches Leben im Volkslied und Wagners Tannhäuser (1929); Tannhäuser und der Sängerkrieg (1930); many other essays on Wagner. Ed. of the first collected ed. of Schein's works, publ. 1901-23 by Breitkopf & Härtel (8 vols. appeared); publ. separately selections of 20 'weltliche Lieder' and instrumental pieces of Schein. —Cf. Paul Bülow, A. Prüfer, in 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik' (1930).

Prume, F. H. See Jehin-Prume.

Prumier (prü-myä'), Antoine, French harpist; b. Paris, July 2, 1794; d. there, Jan. 20, 1868. He studied at the Paris Cons.; played the harp in the orch. of the Opéra-Comique (from 1835); succeeded Nadermann as harp prof. at the Cons. He wrote about 100 fantasies, rondos, and airs with variations, for harp. His son, Ange-Conrad Prumier (b. Paris, Jan. 5, 1820; d. there, April 3, 1884), succeeded him at the Opéra-Comique, and became prof. at the Cons. in 1870. He publ. études for harp; nocturnes for harp and horn; sacred songs.

Prunières (prü-ñär'), Henry, eminent French musicologist; b. Paris, May 24, 1886; d. Nanterre, April 11, 1942. He studied history of music with R. Rolland; Dr. ès lettres, 1913; 1909-14, instructor at the École des Hautes Études Sociales in Paris; 1919, founded the important journal 'La Revue Musicale,' of which he was editor-in-chief until 1939; 1921, organized the concerts at the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier; was head of the French section of the International Society for Contemporary Music. —Publications: Lully (1910; 2nd ed., 1927), L'Opéra italien en France avant Lully (1913; important), Le Ballet de cour en France avant Benesrade et Lully (1914), Monteverdi (1924, enlarged 1926; 2nd ed., 1931; also in English, valuable), La Vie illustre et libertine de J.-B. Lully (1929), Cavalli et l'opéra vénitien au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1931), Nouvelle histoire de la musique (2 vols., 1934, 1936; in English, 1 vol., 1943); and the following valuable essays: La Musique de la Chambre et de l'Écurie sous le règne de François I, in the 'Année musicale' (I, 1911), Jean de Cambeford, Surintendant de la musique de la chambre du roi, ib. (II, 1913); Notes sur la vie de Luigi Rossi, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (XII, 1), Notes sur l'origine de l'ouverture, ib. (XII, 4), Les Représentations du 'Palazzo d'Atlante' de Luigi Rossi, ib. (XIV, 2); Lecerf de Viéville et le classicisme musical, in 'Bulletin de la Société Internationale de Musique' (June, 1908), La Jeunesse de Lully (with L. de La Laurencie), ib. (March-April, 1909), Lully fils de meunier, ib. (June, 1912); Recherches sur les années de jeunesse de J.-B. Lully, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (XVII, 3); Lully and the Académie de Musique et de Danse, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1925); Albert Roussel and the 80th Psalm, ib. (Jan., 1930), Opera in Venice in the 17th Century, ib. (Jan., 1931), Musical Symbolism, ib. (Jan., 1933); etc. Publ. a new ed. of Stendhal's Vie de Rossini (1922). He was general editor of a complete ed. of Lully's works (10 vols., Paris, 1930-39). —Cf. the special issue of the 'Revue Musicale' dedicated to Prunières (1952-53).

Prüwer (prü'-vër), Julius, Austrian conductor; b. Vienna, Feb. 20, 1874; d. New York, July 8, 1943. He studied in Vienna with A. Friedheim and M. Rosenthal (piano), also profited greatly from his association with Brahms. He began his career as conductor at Bielitz; then was conductor at the Cologne Opera (1894-96); conductor at the Municipal Theater in Breslau (1896-1923), where he distinguished himself by producing many modern works; conductor of the Weimar Opera (1923-24); prof. at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik and conductor of the popular concerts of the Berlin Philharmonic (1924-33). In 1933 he was compelled to leave Germany; conducted opera in Russia; then was in Austria; in 1939, settled in New York. He publ. with O. Röse a guide to Elektra by Richard Strauss (Berlin, 1909).

Ptolemy, Claudius, the celebrated Alexandrian astronomer, geographer, and mathematician, early in the 2nd century wrote a very important treatise on music, a poor Latin version of which was made by Gogavinus (1562); Wallis publ. the original Greek text in 1682; O. Paul gives a fragment in Greek, with German transl., in his 'Boëtius.' A new ed. of this work was publ. by Ingemar Düring (Göteborg, 1930), with excellent commentary and explanation. —Cf. I. Düring, Ptolemaios und Porphyrios über die Musik (Göteborg, 1934); M. Shirlaw, Claudius Ptolemy as Musical Theorist, in the 'Music Review' (Aug., 1955).

Puccini (pööch-chë-në), Giacomo, celebrated Italian composer; b. Lucca, Dec. 22, 1858; d. Brussels, Nov. 29, 1924. Beginning with his great-great-grandfather, Giacomo (1712-81), all his ancestors in the direct line were musicians of local prominence: Antonio (1747-1832), Domenico (1771-1815), Michele (1813-64). As a child Puccini showed neither inclination nor special talent for music; but his mother, determined to continue the family tradition, sent him to the Istituto Musicale of Lucca (founded by Pacini), where Carlo Angeloni, a pupil of Michele Puccini, became his teacher. After Angeloni's untiring patience had aroused interest, and then enthusiasm, in his pupil, progress was rapid, and Puccini soon was a good pianist and organist. About 1875 he became organist at the church in a near-by village, Muligliano, and soon after was also appointed organist at San Pietro in Somaldi. In 1877 he submitted a cantata, Juno, to a competition held at Lucca, but failed to win the prize. Nevertheless, he produced the work, which won considerable local success, so that the young composer brought out, also with success, a motet for the feast of Santa Paolina. These successes fired his ambition, and when he became acquainted about that time with Aida he resolved to win laurels as a dramatic composer. Assistance from a grand-uncle and a stipend granted by Queen Margherita enabled him to enter the Milan Cons., where he spent 3 years (1880-83) in serious study with Antonio Bazzini and Amilcare Ponchielli. For his graduation he wrote a Capriccio sinfonico, which at its performance at one of the Cons. concerts, and later by Faccio, elicited unstinted praise from the critics. In the same year Ponchielli introduced Puccini to the librettist Fontana, who furnished him the text of a 1-act opera; in a few weeks the score was finished and sent to the Sonzogno competition. It did not win the prize, but on May 31, 1884, Le Villi was produced at the Teatro dal Verme, in Milan, with gratifying success. Ricordi, who was present, considered the work sufficiently meritorious to commission the young composer to write a new opera for him; but 5 years elapsed before this work, Edgar (3 acts, text by Fontana), was produced at La Scala on April 21, 1889, scoring only a moderate success. By this time Puccini had become convinced that, in order to write a really effective opera, he needed a better libretto than Fontana had provided. Accordingly, he commissioned Domenico Oliva to write the text of Manon Lescaut; during the composition, however, Puccini and Ricordi practically rewrote the entire book, and in the publ. score Oliva's name is not mentioned. With Manon Lescaut (4 acts), first produced at the Teatro Regio in Turin on Feb. 1, 1893, Puccini won a veritable triumph, which was even surpassed by the next work, La Bohème (4 acts; text by Illica and Giacosa), produced at the same theater on Feb. 1, 1896. These two works not only carried their composer's name throughout the world, but also have found and maintained their place in the repertory of every opera-house. With fame came wealth, and in 1900 he built at Lago del Torre, where he had been living since 1891, a magnificent villa. The next opera, Tosca (3 acts; text by Illica and Giacosa), produced at the Teatro Costanzi in Rome on Jan. 14, 1900, is Puccini's most dramatic work; it has become a fixture of the standard repertory and contains some of Puccini's best-known arias. At its première at La Scala on Feb. 17, 1904, Madama Butterfly (2 acts; text by Illica and Giacosa) was hissed. Puccini thereupon withdrew the score and made some slight changes (division into 3 acts, and addition of the tenor aria in the last scene). This revised version was greeted with frenzied applause in Brescia on May 28 of the same year. Puccini was now the acknowledged ruler of the Italian operatic stage, his works rivaling those of Verdi in the number of performances. The first performance of Madama Butterfly at the Metropolitan Opera House (Feb. 11, 1907) took place in the presence of the composer, whom the management had invited specially for the occasion. It was then suggested that he write an opera on an American subject, the première to take place at the Metropolitan Opera House. He found his subject when he witnessed a performance of Belasco's The Girl of the Golden West; he commissioned C. Zangarini and G. Civinini to write the libretto, and in the presence of the composer the world première of La Fanciulla del West occurred, amid much enthusiasm, at the Metropolitan Opera House on Dec. 10, 1910. But the enthusiasm subsided quickly; the following season the work had a few more performances, and then disappeared from the repertory; it shared the same fate in Italy (1st Italian performance Teatro Costanzi, Rome, June 12, 1911) and other European countries. Puccini then brought out La Rondine (3 acts; Monte Carlo, March 27, 1917) and the 3 1-act operas Il Tabarro (after Didier Gold's La Houppelande), Suor Angelica, and Gianni Schicchi (all performed at the Metropolitan Opera House, Dec. 14, 1918). His last opera, Turandot (after Gozzi), was left unfinished; the final scene was completed by Franco Alfano and the work first performed at La Scala, Milan, on April 25, 1926; it was also given at the Metropolitan Opera House, Nov. 16, 1926.—All operas but Edgar have been performed in the U. S.: Le Villi (Metropolitan Opera House, Dec. 17, 1908); Manon Lescaut (Hinrichs Co., Philadelphia, July 29, 1894); La Bohème (Los Angeles, Oct. 18, 1897); Tosca (Metropolitan Opera House, Feb. 4, 1901); Madama Butterfly (Washington, Oct. 15, 1906). Puccini also composed the Inno a Roma (1919), for use in the schools of Rome.—BIBLIOGRAPHY: M. Virgilio, Della Decadenza dell' opera in Italia (Milan, 1900); A. Brüggemann, Madama Butterfly e Parte di G. Puccini (Milan, 1904); Wakeling Dry, G. Puccini (London, 1906); F. Torrefranca, G. Puccini e l'opera internazionale (Turin, 1912); D. C. Parker, A View of G. Puccini, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1917); A. Weissmann, G. Puccini (Munich, 1922); A. Cœuroy, La Tosca (Paris, 1924); A. Bonaventura, G. Puccini: L'Uomo, l'artista (Leghorn, 1924); A. Fraccaroli, La Vita di G. Puccini (Milan, 1925; also in German); G. Marotti and F. Pagni, G. Puccini intimo (Florence, 1926); A. Neisser, Puccini (Leipzig, 1928); F. Salerno, Le Donne pucciniane (Palermo, 1928); G. M. Gatti, The Works of G. Puccini, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1928); R. C. Merlin, Puccini (Milan, 1930); R. Specht, Puccini (Berlin, 1931; in English, N. Y., 1933); W. Maisch, Puccinis musikalische Formgebung (Neustadt, 1934); G. Adami, Puccini (Milan, 1935; in German, 1943); M. Carner, The Exotic Element in Puccini, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1936); K. G. Fellerer, G. Puccini (Potsdam, 1937); V. Seligman, Puccini Among Friends (correspondence; N. Y., 1938); G. Marotti, Giacomo Puccini intimo (Florence, 1942); F. Thiess, Puccini, Versuch einer Psychologie seiner Musik (Berlin, 1947); A. Bonaccorsi, Giacomo Puccini e i suoi antenati musicali (Milan, 1950);

PUCCINI

PUCCITTA — PUGNANI

G. Marek, Puccini: a Biography (N. Y., 1951); Dante del Fiorentino, Immortal Bohemian: an Intimate Memoir of Giacomo Puccini (N. Y., 1952); V. Terenzio, Ritratto di Puccini (Bergamo, 1954); A. Machard, Une Vie d'amour: Puccini (Paris, 1954); L. Ricci, Puccini interprete di se stesso (Milan, 1954). G. Adami publ. letters of Puccini (Milan, 1928; in English, London, 1931).

Puccitta, Vincenzo. See Pucitta.

Puchalsky, Vladimir Viatcheslavovitch, Russian pianist and composer; b. Minsk, April 2, 1848; d. Kiev, Feb. 23, 1933. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Leschetizky (piano) and Zarembo (theory); in 1876 appointed instructor at the Kiev Cons.; remained in Kiev until his death. He wrote an opera, Valeria; piano pieces and songs.

Puchat (pöc'-häht), Max, German composer and pianist; b. Breslau, Jan. 8, 1859; d. (killed in a fall in the Karwendel Alps) Aug. 12, 1919. He studied with Kiel in Berlin, winning the Mendelssohn prize in 1884. From 1886 to 1903 he was active as choral conductor in German provinces; then went to Milwaukee, where he conducted the local Musikverein (1903-05); returned to Germany; lived in Munich; in 1910, settled in Breslau, where established his own music school. He wrote several symph. works: Euphorion (1888), Leben und Ideal (1892), Tragödie eines Künstlers (1894), Ouverture über ein nordisches Thema, etc.; a piano concerto; a string quartet; songs.

Pucitta, Vincenzo, Italian composer; b. Civitavecchia, 1778; d. Milan, Dec. 20, 1861. He studied with Fenaroli in Naples; traveled through Europe, and was successful as an opera composer in Italy, Austria, France, and England; wrote about 30 operas, of which the best were La Burla fortunata (Venice, April 9, 1804) and La Vestale (London, May 3, 1810).

Puente, Giuseppe Del, baritone; b. Naples, Jan. 30, 1841; d. Philadelphia, May 25, 1900. He first studied cello at the Naples Cons. but later began to cultivate his voice, making his operatic début at Jassy; was then engaged for the Teatro San Carlo in Naples, and for appearances in France, Germany, Russia, Spain, and England (début at Covent Garden, 1873; became very popular there); first American engagement under Strakosch at the N. Y. Academy of Music in 1873-74; became a member of the first Metropolitan Opera company and sang the role of Valentin in the inaugural performance of Faust on Oct. 22, 1883. In 1885 he returned to the Academy of Music under Mapleson's management, taking part in the American première of Manon on Dec. 23 of that year; he was also a member of the opera troupes of Patti and Hinrichs; with the latter's company he sang in the American première of Cavalleria Rusticana (Philadelphia, Sept. 9, 1891). He married the mezzo-soprano Helen Dudley Campbell.

Puget (pü-zhâ'), Louise, French composer of songs; b. Paris, Feb. 11, 1810; d. Pau, 1889. She was an amateur, whose songs acquired an extraordinary vogue in Paris; particularly popular were Ave Maria, Le Soleil de ma Bretagne, Mon pays, Les Rêves d'une jeune fille; she also wrote a 1-act opera, Le mauvais œil (Paris, Oct. 1, 1836), and an operetta, La Veilleuse (Paris, Sept. 27, 1869). She was married to the song writer Lemoine.

Puget (pü-zhâ'), Paul-Charles-Marie, French composer; b. Nantes, June 25, 1848; d. Paris, March 14, 1917. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Marmontel (piano) and Massé (composition); won 1st Grand Prix de Rome in 1873 with the cantata Mazeppa; wrote much theater music; his opera Beau-coup de bruit pour rien, after Shakespeare (Paris, March 24, 1899), had a moderately good reception.

Pugnani (pöc'-ñah'-nē), Gaetano, celebrated Italian violinist and composer; b. Turin, Nov. 27, 1731; d. there, July 15, 1798. He studied with Somis; on April 19, 1748, was appointed violinist in the Royal Chapel of Turin; in 1749 was sent to Rome for additional study; then traveled in Europe; was in London in 1768 as concertmaster of the Italian Opera there; also played in Paris at the Concert Spirituel. In 1770 he was back in Turin, as teacher and conductor; had a school of his own; among his violin pupils were Viotti, Conforti, Bruni, and Polledro. His style approaches that of Tartini; he wrote effective music for the violin; Fritz Kreisler publ. a purported arrangement for violin of a piece by Pugnani, Preludio e Allegro e Tempo di Minuetto, but this is actually an original work by Kreisler himself.—Pugnani composed 9 violin concertos; 12 octets (sinfonie) for strings, 2 oboes, and 2 horns; 6 quintets for 2 violins, 2 flutes, and cello; 6 string quartets; 3 sets of trios for 2 violins and cello;

PUGNI — PUJOL

2 sets of violin duets; 14 violin sonatas (one is reprinted in Jensen's 'Klassische Violin-Musik'). He also wrote several operas: Nanetta e Lubino (London, 1769), Issea (Turin, 1771), Aurora (Turin, 1775), Adone e Venere (Naples, 1784), Demetrio a Rodi (Turin, 1789); his last opera was Werther, after Goethe (Vienna, March 22, 1796).—Cf. F. Fayolle, Notices sur Corelli, Tartini, Gaviniès, Pugnani et Viotti (Paris, 1810); Dom. Carutti, Della famiglia di Gaetano Pugnani, in 'Miscellanea di storia italiana' (3rd series, vol. II, Turin, 1895); S. Cordero di Pamparato, Gaetano Pugnani (Turin, 1930); A. Della Corte, Notizie di Gaetano Pugnani, musicista torinese (Turin, 1931); E. M. von Zschinsky-Troxler, Gaetano Pugnani (Berlin, 1939; contains a thematic catalogue); A. Müry, Die Instrumentalwerke Gaetano Pugnani (Basel, 1941).

Pugni (pöö'-ñe), Cesare, Italian composer; b. Milan, 1805; d. St. Petersburg, Jan. 26, 1870. He studied violin with Alessandro Rolla and composition with Asioli at the Cons. of Milan; began his career as composer for the stage with the ballet Elerz e Zulmida (Milan, May 6, 1826) and the opera Il Disertore svizzero (Milan, May 28, 1831), followed by several other operas: La Vendetta (Milan, Feb. 11, 1832), Ricciarda di Edimburgo (Trieste, Sept. 29, 1832), Il Contrabbandiere (Milan, June 13, 1833), Un Episodio di S. Michele (Milan, June 14, 1834), etc.; also wrote an ingenious Sinfonia a canone for 2 orchestras playing the same music, but with the 2nd orch. coming in one measure later than the first (this musical legerdemain enchanted Meyerbeer); he then lived in Paris, where he produced the ballets La Fille de marbre (Oct. 20, 1847), Le Violon du diable (Jan. 19, 1849), etc. In 1851 he was appointed ballet composer for the Imperial Theater in St. Petersburg; wrote about 300 ballet scores; of these, Esmeralda (originally produced in Milan, 1845) and Konyok-Gorbunok (Le Cheval enchanté, St. Petersburg, 1864) still retain their popularity in Russia.

Pugno (pöö'-ñoh), Raoul, celebrated French pianist; b. (of an Italian father) Montrouge, Seine, June 23, 1852; d. (while on a concert tour) Moscow, Jan. 3, 1914. From early childhood he showed unusual talent for the piano and appeared in public at an early age. Prince Poniatowski was impressed by his talent, and procured for him a scholarship at the Ecole Niedermeyer; afterwards (1866-69) he studied at the Paris

Cons. with G. Mathias (piano) and Ambroise Thomas (composition); won several prizes, but his Italian citizenship barred him from competition for the Prix de Rome. He began a career as organist at the St. Eugène Church in 1871; maître de chapelle there in 1878; taught harmony at the Paris Cons. (1892-96) and subsequently was prof. of piano there (1896-1901). In the meantime he gave numerous recitals, and gradually rose to the rank of a great virtuoso; appeared in England in 1894; in America, in 1897-98. He was equally remarkable as an ensemble player; his sonata recitals with Ysaÿe became world-famous. He was responsible for making the name of César Franck known to a wide public. Pugno was also a composer; wrote several operas: Ninetta (Paris, Dec. 23, 1882), Le Sosie (1887), Le Valet de cœur (1888), Le Retour d'Ulysse (Paris, Feb. 1, 1889), La Vocation de Marius (1890), etc.; ballet, La Danseuse de corde (Paris, Feb. 5, 1892); piano pieces; songs. His score for La Ville morte (after Gabriele d'Annunzio), left incomplete at his death, was finished by Nadia Boulanger.

Pujol, Francesc, Catalan composer; b. Barcelona, May 15, 1878; d. there, Dec. 24, 1945. He studied at the Barcelona Cons., also with Millet; assistant conductor (1900-41), then musical director (1942-45) of the Orfeo Català, Barcelona. Composer of 40 sardanas, church music, orchestral works, etc. Publ. valuable studies on Catalan songs: On the Chant de la Sibila; L'Œuvre du 'Chansonnier populaire de la Catalogne' (Report of the International Musicological Congress, Vienna, 1927); Observacions, apéndix i notes al Romancerillo catalán de Manuel Miliá y Fontanals (with Joan Puntí; 1927 ff.); Catalan folksongs with piano accompaniment (Madrid, 1921).

Pujol, Juan, Catalan church musician; b. Barcelona, c. 1573; d. there, May, 1626. From 1593 to 1595 he was maestro de canto in Tarragona; 1595-1612, maestro at Nuestra Señora del Pilar in Saragossa; then at Barcelona Cathedral until his death. His Masses, motets, Passions, psalms, and 'villancicos' are preserved in MS. A collected ed. of Pujol's works was undertaken by H. Anglés, of which 2 vols. appeared: I, biography, and Office of St. George's Day (1926); II, Offices and Masses (1932). An Introit (1614) was publ. in Schering's Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (No. 179).

Puliti, Leto, Italian scholar; b. Florence, June 29, 1818; d. there, Nov. 15, 1875. He publ. valuable essays in the Proceedings of the Royal Institute of Music in Florence, especially Cenni storici della vita del serenissimo Ferdinando de' Medici (1884; printed separately), with information concerning Cristofori, the inventor of the piano.

Pulver, Jeffrey, English violinist and musicologist; b. London, June 22, 1884; studied with Ševčík (Prague), Heermann (Frankfurt), Marteau (Geneva), and A. Moser (Berlin). He made a specialty of old English music, and played the viola d'amore, the tenor viola, and other old string instruments. — Publications: A Dictionary of Musical Terms (1913); A Dictionary of Old English Music and Musical Instruments (1923); Johannes Brahms (1926); A Biographical Dictionary of Old English Music (1927); Paganini, the Romantic Virtuoso (1936); etc.; articles in the 'Monthly Mus. Record,' 'Sackbut,' 'Strad,' the 'Mus. Quarterly,' etc. His lectures before the Mus. Association, London, are printed in their 'Proceedings': The Ancient Dance Forms (2 parts; 1912, 1914); The Intermezzi of the Opera (1917); The Viols in England (1920); The Music of Ancient Egypt (1921); etc.

Punto, Giovanni. See Stich.

Puppo, Giuseppe, Italian violinist; b. Lucca, June 12, 1749; d. Florence, April 19, 1827. He was a successful violin virtuoso at an early age; traveled in Spain; was in England until 1784, when he settled in Paris; was a fashionable teacher there; in 1811, abandoned his family in Paris, went to Naples, and then to Florence, dying in poverty. He publ. 3 violin concertos, 8 études for the violin, and 6 piano fantasias.

Purcell (pur'-səl), Daniel, brother of Henry Purcell; b. London, c. 1660; d. there, Dec. 12, 1717. He became organist of Magdalen College, Oxford, in 1688; took his brother's place as dramatic composer in 1695, and was organist of St. Andrew's, Holborn, from 1713. — Works: incidental music to 30 dramas; several odes (e.g., funeral ode for his brother); publ. The Psalm Tunes set full for the Organ or Harpsichord . . .; also songs in collections. Six anthems are in the choirbooks of Magdalen College chapel.

Purcell (pur'-səl), Henry, one of the greatest of English composers; b. London

(?), c. 1659; d. Dean's Yard, Westminster, Nov. 21, 1695. Until recently it was believed that his father was Henry Purcell (d. 1664), Gentleman of the Chapel Royal and Master of the choristers at Westminster Abbey. But the latest evidence indicates that he was the son of Henry's brother, Thomas Purcell, who was also a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal and held other important posts at the court. From 1669 he was a chorister of the Chapel Royal under Cooke and Humfrey, also receiving instruction from Dr. Blow. When his voice broke in 1673, he was appointed assistant 'Keeper of the Instruments.' In 1677 he was appointed composer to the King's band, and in 1679 he succeeded Blow as organist of Westminster Abbey. In 1682 he became one of the 3 organists of the Chapel Royal as Lowe's successor; in 1683, Keeper of the King's wind-instruments. His first printed composition is a song in vol. I (1675) of Playford's 'Choice Ayres'; vol. II (1679) contains several other songs, and an elegy on the death of Matthew Locke. In 1680 Purcell wrote the first of 29 'Odes' and 'Welcome Songs.' His first publ. chamber music dates from 1683, Sonatas of III Parts: two violins and bass: to the Organ or Harpsichord (with engraved portrait), 12 numbers, based on Italian models, each having an Adagio, a Canzone (fugue), a slow movement, and an air. The Yorkshire Feast Song, called by D'Urfey, the author, 'one of the finest compositions he ever made,' was composed and produced in 1690. This is one of the 29 'Welcome Songs,' which he wrote (on an average of 2 annually) in his capacity of 'composer-in-ordinary.' Although the texts are almost invariably stupid or bombastic, Purcell wrote some of his finest music for these occasional odes. During the last five years he developed extraordinary activity in theatrical composition, to which he had given some attention since 1680, when he began to write some incidental dances and occasional airs for various dramas. In spite of this close connection with the stage, he wrote only one opera, Dido and Aeneas, produced in 1689. He lies in the north aisle of Westminster Abbey, and his burial-tablet well expresses contemporary estimation of his worth: 'Here lyes Henry Purcell, Esq.; who left this life, and is gone to that blessed place where only his harmony can be exceeded.' His church music shows an original melodist, and a master of form, harmony, and all contrapuntal devices; his music for the stage is equally rich in invention, dramatic instinct, and power of characterization; his chamber works surpass those of his predecessors and contemporaries. —Works: Besides the compositions mentioned there were publ. during Purcell's life a theoretical treatise, The Art of Descant, in the 10th ed. of Playford's 'Briefe Introduction of the Skill of Musick' (1683); Playford also publ. several airs and 'symphonies' (written for various dramas) in 'The Theatre of Musick' (1685), anthems and sacred songs in 'Harmonia Sacra' (1688), and pieces for harpsichord in 'Musick's Handmaid' (part II, 1689); of the incidental music to plays there appeared Amphitryon (1690); the airs in the text, the instrumental pieces in 'Ayres for the Theatre', Dioclesian (1691), and 'Select ayres' from the Fairy Queen (1692). The stage pieces for which Purcell wrote music include the following: 1680, Lee's Theodosius, D'Urfeys's The Virtuous Wife (1694?); 1681, Tate's arrangement of Shakespeare's Richard II, D'Urfeys's Sir Barnaby Whigg; 1682, Beaumont and Fletcher's The Double Marriage (1685?); 1685, Davenant's Circe, Lee's Sophonisba; 1688, D'Urfeys's A Fool's Preferment; 1689, Betterton's Dioclesian, Settle's Distressed Innocence, Southerne's Sir Anthony Love, Dryden's Amphitryon, Lee's The Massacre of Paris; 1691, Dryden's King Arthur, The Gordian Knot Untied (author unknown), Dryden's The Indian Emperor, Southerne's The Wives' Excuse; 1692, Dryden's Cleomenes, The Fairy Queen (an arrangement of the Midsummer Night's Dream), D'Urfeys's The Marriage-hater Matched, Crowne's Regulus, Shadwell's The Libertine, Bancroft's Henry II, Dryden's Aureng-Zebe, Dryden and Lee's Oedipus; 1693, Congreve's The Old Bachelor, D'Urfeys's The Richmond Heiress, Southerne's The Maid's Last Prayer, Wright's The Female Virtuosos (after Molière), Congreve's The Double Dealer, Shadwell's Epsom Wells, Fletcher's Rule a Wife and Have a Wife; 1694, D'Urfeys's Don Quixote (part I), Dryden's Love Triumphant, Crowne's The Married Beau, Southerne's The Fatal Marriage, Ravenscroft's The Canterbury Guests, D'Urfeys's Don Quixote (part II), Shadwell's arr. of Timon of Athens, Dryden's The Spanish Friar, Dryden's Tyrannic Love; 1695, Behn's Andræaz, Beaumont and Fletcher's Bonduca, Howard and Dryden's Indian Queen, Scott's The Mock Marriage, Norton's Pausanias, Gould's The Rival Sisters, Southerne's Oroonoko, Davenant and Dryden's arrangement of The Tempest, D'Urfeys's Don Quixote (part III). In this list only Dioclesian, The Fairy Queen, The Indian Queen, and King Arthur are provided with sufficient music to be possibly classed as 'semi-operas'; the music for other dramas usually includes overtures, airs, and instrumental dances. Purcell's widow, who survived him till 1706, publ. A Choice Collection of Lessons for the Harpsichord or Spinnet (1696), Ten Sonatas in Four Parts (1697), Orpheus Britannicus: A Collection of the choicest Songs . . . with Symphonies for Violins or Flutes . . . (Part I, 1698, 2nd ed., 1706; Part II, 1702; 2nd ed., 1711; both parts in 1 vol., with the addition of several new numbers, 1721). Many compositions were publ. in Playford's 'Harmonia Sacra' (1688-93), Walsh's 'The Catch Club, or Merry Companions' (c. 1730), Boyce's 'Cathedral Music' (3 vols., 1760-73), Arnold's continuation of the same (4 vols., 1790), Page and Sexton's 'Harmonia Sacra' (3 vols., 1800). Vincent Novello collected all services, anthems, hymns, and sacred songs, and publ. them as Purcell's Sacred Music (4 vols., 1829-32; very inaccurate). The Musical Antiquarian Society publ. Dido and Aeneas (ed. G. A. Macfarren, 1840), Bonduca (ed. E. F. Rimbault, 1842; with historical sketch of dramatic music in England), King Arthur (ed. E. Taylor, 1843), Ode for St. Cecilia's Day (ed. E. F. Rimbault, 1847). In 1876 the Purcell Society was formed in London for the purpose of publishing the first complete ed. of Purcell's works; 26 vols. were brought out from 1878-1928; a 27th in 1957; 4 final vols. were in preparation in 1958. The Purcell Society also began to publ. a 'Popular Edition of Selected Works' (vol. 1: 15 Songs and Airs; London, 1939). Various selections have been publ. by P. Warlock (Fantasias in 3, 4, and 5 parts; some publ. for the 1st time; London, 1927), G. Jensen, A. Egidi, A. Moffat and H. David (trio sonatas), W. Barclay Squire (harpsichord pieces), A. Schering in Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (Nos. 246-48a), F. Blume in Das Chorwerk (5 sacred choruses), E. Dent (Let the Dreadful Engines), W. Gillies Whitaker (22 sonatas; Eds. de l'Oiseau-Lyre, Paris), etc.—The so-called Trumpet Voluntary, ascribed to Purcell, and made popular through an orchestral transcription by Sir Henry Wood, is not by Purcell but by Jeremiah Clarke (q.v.); for details, see C. L. Cudworth, Some New Facts About the Trumpet Voluntary, in the 'Mus. Times' (Sept., 1953).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: W. H. Cummings, Purcell (London, 1881; 3rd ed., 1911; pop. ed., 1923); W. Barclay Squire, Purcell's Dramatic Music, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' V, 4 (1904); J. F. Runciman, Purcell (London, 1909); G. E. Arkwright, Purcell's Church Music, in the 'Mus. Antiquary' (July, 1910); P. A. Scholes, H. Purcell: Sketch of a Busy Life, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1916); W. Barclay Squire, Purcell's 'Dido and Aeneas', in the 'Mus. Times' (June, 1918); H. Dupré, Purcell (Paris, 1927; in English, N. Y., 1928); D. Arundell, H. Purcell (London, 1927; in German, 1929); E. Dent, Foundations of the English Opera (1928); A. K. Holland, H. Purcell, the English Musical Tradition (London, 1932); F. de Quervain, Der Chorstil H. Purcells (Leipzig, 1935); J. A. Westrup, Purcell (London, 1937); S. Favre-Lingorow, Der Instrumentalstil von Purcell (Bern, 1950); S. Demarquez, Purcell (Paris, 1951); G. van Ravenzwaay, Purcell (Haarlem, 1954); R. Sietz, Henry Purcell: Zeit, Leben, Werk (Leipzig, 1955).

Puschmann, Adam, German meistersinger; b. Görlitz, 1532; d. Breslau, April 4, 1600. He was a pupil of Hans Sachs; brought out Gründlicher Bericht des deutschen Meistersanges (1571; new ed., Halle, 1888); his songs were publ. by Georg Münzer in 1906. His brother Zacharias Puschmann (with whom he is often confused) was a cantor in Görlitz.

Pustet, Friedrich, German publisher; b. Hals, near Passau. In 1826 he founded a publ. firm for church music in Regensburg. For 30 years he had the exclusive right of printing, with privilege of the Pope, the chant books according to the 'Editio Medicea.' In 1921 Pustet's firm merged with the publ. house of Kösel, retaining, however, the original name. Pustet publ. Prose's Musica divina; Peter Wagner's Elemente des gregorianischen Gesanges; Johnner's Cantus ecclesiastici; 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (from its founding in 1886 through the vol. for 1935); etc.

Pyamour, John, English composer; date of birth unknown; d. 1431. He was a clerk of the Chapel Royal in 1419, and Master of Children in 1420; was commissioned to find boys with good voices for the royal service; traveled with King Henry V and the chapel on the Continent, and probably remained in Normandy for several years. His motet Quam pulchra es is extant in MS.—Cf. John Harvey, Gothic England (London, 1947).

Pycard, English singer and composer, who flourished c. 1400. The 'Old Hall Manuscript' contains 6 works by him; his contrapuntal skill was out of the ordinary, and he used complicated canonic forms in sections of the Mass.—Cf. M. Bukofzer, Studies in Medieval and Renaissance Music (N. Y., 1950).

Pykkänen, Tauno Kullervo, Finnish composer; b. Helsinki, March 22, 1918. He studied at the Helsinki Cons., and for a brief time in France and Italy. Returning to Finland, he edited the periodical, 'Musikki' (1947-50); was active on the Finnish Radio.—Works: operas: Jaakko Ilkka (1937), Bathsheba Saarenmaalla (1940), Mare ja hänen poikansa (1945), Simo Hurtta (1948), Varjo (1952); a symphony (1945); symph. poems, Sommar i Lappland (1941) and Ultima Thule (1949); Marathon Overture (1947); Bilder från Lappland (1948); songs. His radio opera, Suden Morsian (The Wolf Bride), won a prize in Turin (1950).—Cf. Suomen Säveltäjiä (Helsinki, 1945; pp. 726-31).

Pyne, James Kendrick, English organist; b. Bath, Feb. 5, 1852; d. Ilford, Essex, Sept. 3, 1938. Pupil of his father, James K. Pyne (for 53 years organist at Bath Abbey); then of Dr. S. S. Wesley, organist at Winchester Cathedral. He held positions as church organist from the age of 11; was engaged as organist at St. Mark's, Philadelphia for a year (1875); returning to England was organist at the Manchester Cathedral (1876-98); in 1877 became organist of Town Hall Corporation, Manchester; celebrated his 50 years of tenure (1927) by giving 3 organ recitals on the jubilee day. He also lectured on church music at the Univ. of Manchester (from 1901); prof. of organ at the Royal College of Music, Manchester (from 1893). He composed organ music; also a Communion Service and other sacred works.—Cf. S. Lucas, J. K. Pyne, in 'Mus. Opinion' (Nov., 1927).

Pythagoras, the Greek philosopher and mathematician; b. Samos, c. 582 B. C.; d. Metapontum, c. 500 B. C. His doctrines on the musical ratios are preserved in the writings of his followers, no books by Pythagoras himself having come down to us. The Pythagoreans (Archytas, Didymos, Eratosthenes, Euclid, Ptolemy, etc.) reckoned only the fifth and octave as pure consonances (the fourth being the fifth below); their system recognized only intervals reached by successive skips of pure fifths, the major third being the 4th fifth above (ratio 64:81, instead of the modern 64:80, or 4:5), their minor third the 3rd fifth below; etc. Their thirds and sixth were, consequently, dissonant intervals.

Q

Quagliati (quähl-yah'tē), Paolo, Italian composer and excellent cembalist; b. Chioggia, c. 1555; d. Rome, Nov. 16, 1628. He publ. Carro di fedeltà d'amore, one of the earliest mus. dramas, containing not only monodies, but ensemble numbers up to 5 voices (Rome, 1611); also motets and 'dialogues' a 2-8 (3 vols.; 1612, 1620, 1627); etc. Reprints are found in H. Riemann's Musikgeschichte in Beispielen and L. Torchi's 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' III. —Cf. A. Cametti, Paolo Quagliati, organista e compositore, in the 'Rassegna dorica' (Dec. 20, 1930; pp. 28-34); 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 13, p. 558).

Quaile, Elizabeth, piano pedagogue; b. Omagh, Ireland, Jan. 20, 1874; d. South Kent, Conn., June 30, 1951. She came early to N. Y., where she was educated; studied with Franklin Robinson; for 5 years taught at the Music School Settlement, N. Y.; from 1916-19, was head of the piano dept. of the David Mannes School; studied with Harold Bauer in Paris, and from 1916 was his assistant for about 10 years; 1921, founded, with Angela Diller (q.v.), the Diller-Quaile School of Music, N. Y., of which she was also co-director. She publ. much valuable teaching material, some of it written by her alone, and some in collaboration with Angela Diller. In the former group are: First Book of Technical Exercises and A Czerny Book (2 vols.).

Quantz, Johann Joachim, famous German flutist and composer; b. Oberscheden, Hanover, Jan. 30, 1697; d. Potsdam, July 12, 1773. Naturally musical, at 8 he played the double-bass at village festivals. His father died when he was but 10, and Quantz was apprenticed to an uncle, then 'Stadtmusikus' at Merseburg, in 1708, learning various instruments, among them the harpsichord with Kiesewetter. His apprenticeship ended, he went to Radeburg, Pirna, and in 1716 joined the town orch. of Dresden, under Heine. In 1717, during 3 months' leave of absence, he studied counterpoint with Zelenka and Fux at Vienna; in 1718 he became oboist in the Royal Polish orch. of Warsaw and Dresden, but soon took up the flute, which he studied under Buffardin. In 1724 he was sent to Italy in the suite of the Polish ambassador; studied counterpoint under Gasparini at Rome; went to London via Paris in 1726; and returned to Dresden in 1727, resuming his position as orchestral flute-player in 1728. In this year he played before Frederick the Great (then Crown Prince) at Berlin, and so pleased him that he engaged Quantz to teach him the flute, and to make two long yearly visits to Berlin for that purpose. Frederick ascended the throne in 1740, and next year called Quantz to Berlin and Potsdam as chamber musician and court composer at a salary of 2,000 Thaler, besides an honorarium for each composition furnished, and 100 ducats for each flute supplied by Quantz. Here he remained until his death. He left in MS 300 concertos for one and two flutes, and some 200 other flute pieces (solos, duets, trios, and quartets). —Publ. Sei sonate with bass (1734); Sei duetti (1759); Neue Kirchenmelodien (1760; settings of 22 odes by Gellert as chorales); Versuch einer Anweisung, die Flöte traversiere zu spielen (1752; this famous flute method also contains valuable information on 18th-century performance practices; 2nd and 3rd eds., 1780, 1789; French, 1752; Dutch, 1755); and Application pour la flûte traversière à deux clefs (an account of his invention of a 2nd key applied to the flute for just intonation, and also of the tuning barrel for the instrument). —Cf. A. Quantz, Leben und Werke des Flötisten J. J. Quantz (Berlin, 1877); R. Schäfke, Quantz als Ästhetiker. Eine Einführung in die Musikästhetik des galanten Stils, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' VI, 2 (1924). His autobiography is found in Marburg's Historisch-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik (Berlin, 1755); reprinted in Willi Kahl, Selbstbiographien deutscher Musiker des XVIII. Jahrhunderts (Cologne, 1948).

Quarenghi, Guglielmo, Italian cellist; b. Casalmaggiore, Oct. 22, 1826; d. Milan, Feb. 4, 1882. Pupil at Milan Cons., 1839-42; from 1850, 1st cello at La Scala Theater; 1851, prof. of cello-playing at the Cons.; from 1879, maestro di cappella at Milan Cathedral. —Works: an excellent cello method, and original pieces and transcriptions for cello; church music; and an opera, Il Di di S. Michele (Milan, 1863).

Quarles, James Thomas, American organist and educator; b. St. Louis, Nov. 7, 1877; d. Saugus, Calif., March 4, 1954. He studied organ with local teachers; then with Widor in Paris. He was church organist in St. Louis (1897-1913); then taught at Cornell Univ. (1913-23) and at the Univ. of Missouri (1923-43). He gave nearly 1000 organ recitals in various parts of the U. S.; composed anthems, organ pieces, and songs.

QUATREMÈRE DE QUINCY—QUITTARD

Quatremère de Quincy (kăht'r-măr' dū kăn-sē'), Antoine-Chrysostome, French writer; b. Paris, Oct. 28, 1755; d. there, Dec. 28, 1849. Secretary of the Académie des Arts. Publ. De la nature des opéras bouffons italiens (Paris, 1789; pamphlet) and eulogies of Catel, Boieldieu, Gossec, Méhul, Monsigny, Paisiello, and other deceased members of the Académie (in Recueil de notices historiques . . . 1834-37, 2 vols.; also printed separately).

Quef, Charles, French organist and composer; b. Lille, Nov. 1, 1873; d. there, July 2, 1931. He studied at the Lille Cons. and at the Paris Cons. with Guiraud, Th. Dubois, Guilman, and Widor (1898, won 1st prize for organ and improvisation); organist in Paris at Ste. Marie, St. Laurent, and (from 1901) of La Trinité, succeeding Guilman; concertized in France and England. Publ. sacred choruses and other works.

Querol Gavalá, Miguel, Spanish musicologist; b. Uldecona, Tarragona, April 22, 1912. He studied music at the Benedictine Monastery of Monserrat (1926-36) and later in Barcelona with Juan Lamote de Grignon. —Publications: La Música en las obras de Cervantes (Barcelona, 1948), La Escuela estética catalana contemporánea (doctoral dissertation; Madrid, 1953); edited the Cancionero musical de la casa de Medinaceli (2 vols.; Barcelona, 1949-50); also wrote some church music; chamber music; a Sonata romántica catalana for piano; etc.

Quilter, Roger, English composer; b. Brighton, Nov. 1, 1877; d. London, Sept. 21, 1953. He studied at Eton College, later in Frankfurt with Iwan Knorr. He is principally known for his artistic settings of Shakespearian lyrics. —Works: for orch.: Serenade (1907); 3 English Dances, for small orch. (1910); A Children's Overture (1920); incidental music to Where the Rainbow Ends, fairy-play (1911) and Shakespeare's As You Like It (1922) (both also as orchestral suites); The Sailor and his Lass, for soprano, baritone, chorus, and orch. (1948); part-songs; several sets of piano pieces; numerous songs and song cycles (To Julia, 7 Elizabethan Lyrics, Songs of Sorrow, 3 Songs of the Sea, 4 Shakespeare Songs, etc.). He also wrote a light opera, Julia (London, Dec. 3, 1936). —Cf. L. Woodgate, Roger Quilter, in the 'Mus. Times' (Nov., 1953).

Quinault (kē-noh'), Jean-Baptiste-Maurice, singer and actor at the Théâtre Français, Paris, 1712-33, then retiring to Gien, where he died 1744. He set to music over 20 intermèdes, ballets, etc.; also a grand 4-act ballet Les Amours des déesses (Paris Opéra, 1729).

Quinault (kē-noh'), Philippe, b. Paris, June 3, 1635; d. there, Nov. 26, 1688; French dramatic poet; was Lully's librettist. —Cf. G. A. Crapelet, Notice sur la vie et les ouvrages de Quinault (Paris, 1824); E. Richter, Philippe Quinault. Sein Leben, seine Tragödien, seine Bedeutung für das Theater Frankreichs und des Auslandes (Leipzig, 1910); Etienne Gros, Philippe Quinault, sa vie et son œuvre (Paris, 1926); J. B. A. Buijtendorp, Philippe Quinault, sa vie, ses tragédies et ses tragi-comédies (Amsterdam, 1928).

Quinet (kē-nā'), Fernand, Belgian cellist and composer; b. Charleroi, Jan. 29, 1898; studied there with Biarent (composition), later with Dubois at the Brussels Cons. (won 2 prizes for cello playing); 1921, won the Belgian Prix de Rome with his cantata, La Guerre; for a time was cellist of the Pro Arte Quartet; wrote incidental music to Le Conte d'été; a suite for 3 clarinets; a string quartet and songs. In 1938 he was appointed director of the Liège Cons.

Quinet, Marcel, Belgian composer; b. Binche, July 6, 1915. He studied at the Cons. of Mons, and later at the Brussels Cons. (with Léon Jongen and Jean Absil). In 1943 he was appointed instructor at the Brussels Cons. —Works: cantata, La Vague et le sillon (1945); received the Belgian Grand Prix de Rome; 3 Esquisses concertantes, for violin and orch. (1946); 3 Pièces pour orchestre (Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Salzburg, June 21, 1952).

Quiroga (kē-roh'-gah), Manuel, Spanish violinist; b. Pontevedra, April 15, 1890; studied at the Royal Cons. in Madrid and at the Paris Cons.; toured Western Europe and the U. S. with success, appearing also as soloist with leading symph. orchestras. After a street accident in N. Y. in 1937, he abandoned his career; went to a sanitarium in Madrid, where he was still living in 1958. He composed some violin pieces and a 'sainete,' Los Amos del Barrio (Madrid, Sept. 7, 1938).

Quittard (kē-tahr'), Henri Charles Étienne, French musicologist; b. Clermont-Ferrand, May 13, 1864; d. Paris, July 21, 1919. He was a pupil of César Franck, then turned to musicology and made a specialty of 16th- and 17th-century French music; wrote music criticism in 'Le Matin' and 'Le Figaro' (from 1909); from 1912 archivist at the Opéra. —Publ.: Henry du Mont: un musicien en France au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1906); Les Couperins (1913); and many studies in musical periodicals; left a work on Guillaume de Machault, incomplete. He ed. Méhul's Uthal and works of Carissimi, Couperin, etc. —Cf. the 'Bulletin' of the Société Française de Musicologie (vol. 3, 1919, pp. 242-45).

R

Raabe, Peter, German writer on music and conductor; b. Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, Nov. 27, 1872; d. Weimar, April 12, 1945. He studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (with Bargiel); in 1894, began a career as theater conductor, in Königsberg, Zwickau, and Elberfeld; in 1899 appointed conductor of the Netherlands Opera in Amsterdam; held this post until 1903; then conducted the Kaim Orch. in Munich (1903-06) and the newly established Kaim Orch. in Mannheim (1906-07); in 1907 became 1st Kapellmeister in Weimar; in 1910, custodian of the Liszt Museum there; from 1920 till 1934, conductor of the Municipal Orch. at Aachen; in 1935, became head of the Reichsmusikkammer and the Deutscher Tonkünstlerverein. He held these posts until his death. He received his Dr. phil. at the Univ. of Jena (1916) with the thesis Entstehungsgeschichte der ersten Orchesterwerke Franz Liszts.—Publications: Festschrift zum Jubiläum des 50-jährigen Bestehens der Abonnementskonzerte der Grossherzoglichen Hofkapelle in Weimar (1909); Grossherzog Karl Alexander und Liszt (Leipzig, 1918); Franz Liszt: Leben und Schaffen (Stuttgart, 1931; 2 vols.; vol. 2 contains an annotated catalogue of Liszt's works); Die Musik im dritten Reich (Berlin, 1935; an exposition of the musical ideology of the Third Reich); Kulturwille im deutschen Musikleben (Berlin, 1936); Deutsche Meister (Berlin, 1937); Wege zu Weber (Regensburg, 1942); Wege zu Liszt (Regensburg, 1943); Wege zu Bruckner (Regensburg, 1944); edited Liszt's songs and Hungarian Rhapsodies for the collected ed.; wrote some songs and piano pieces of his own. —Cf. Festschrift zu Peter Raabes 70. Geburtstag (Leipzig, 1942).

Raaff, Anton, German singer, a friend of Mozart; b. Gelsdorf, near Bonn, May 6, 1714; d. Munich, May 27, 1797. He studied with Ferrandini in Munich and Bernacchi in Bologna; sang in Italy; then in Bonn, Vienna, and at various German courts (1742-52); in Lisbon (1753-55), Madrid (1755-59), and Naples, returning in 1770 to Germany, where he was attached to the court of the Elector Karl Theodor at Mannheim. In 1778 he went to Paris with Mozart; in 1779 was in Munich. Mozart wrote the role of Idomeneo for him, and also the aria, Se al labbro mio non credi, K. 295. —Cf. H. Freiburger, Anton Raaff: sein Leben und Wirken (Cologne, 1929).

Raalte, Albert van, Dutch conductor; b. Amsterdam, May 21, 1890; d. there, Nov. 23, 1952. He studied at the Cologne Cons. with Bram Eldering (violin) and Walde-mar von Bausnern (theory); later in Leipzig with Nikisch and Max Reger; was theater conductor in Brussels (1911) and Leipzig (1912); conducted Wagner's operas at the Municipal Opera in Leipzig (1914-15); then at the Dutch National Opera in The Hague (1915-22); then formed his own opera enterprise there. He remained in Holland during the German Occupation, conducted the radio orch. at Hilversum; was sent to a concentration camp as a person with Jewish associations; after the Liberation in 1945, he returned to his post at Hilversum, building the radio orch. to a high degree of efficiency.

Raasted, Niels Otto, Danish organist and composer; b. Copenhagen, Nov. 26, 1888. He studied at the Copenhagen Cons. (1909-12); then at the Cons. of Leipzig, with Max Reger, Karl Straube, and R. Teichmüller (1913-14); returning to Denmark, he became cathedral organist; also conducted the Bach Society (1925-46). —Works: 3 symphonies (1914, 1938, 1944); several orch. suites, among them Pictures from Finland (1928) and Hans Christian Andersen Suite (1940); Sinfonia da chiesa (1944); 3 string quartets (1914, 1918, 1920); 5 violin sonatas; 6 organ sonatas; an oratorio, Saul (1923); cantatas (all performed on the Copenhagen Radio); Sangen om København (June 27, 1934), Thylands pris (May 12, 1941); Kong Vaar (Oct. 20, 1947).

Rabaud (răh-bôh'), Henri, French composer and conductor; b. Paris, Nov. 10, 1873; d. there, Sept. 11, 1949. The son of Hippolyte Rabaud (1839-1900), professor of cello at the Paris Cons., he was a pupil of Gedalge and Massenet; won the Premier Grand Prix de Rome in 1894 with his cantata Daphné; in 1908 he became conductor at the Paris Opéra and at the Opéra-Comique; from 1914 to 1918, director of the Opéra. In 1918 he was engaged to conduct the Boston Symph. Orch., succeeding Karl Muck; conducted only one season (1918-19) and was followed by Pierre Monteux; returned to Paris and was appointed director of the Paris Cons. in 1922 (following Gabriel Fauré's resignation); he held this post until 1941. —Works: the operas La Fille de Roland (Opéra-Comique, March 16, 1904), Le premier glaive (Béziers, 1908), Marouf, Savetier du Caire (Opéra-Comique, May 15, 1914; his most successful opera), Antoine et Cléopâtre, after Shakespeare (1916-17), L'Appel de la mer (1 act; Opéra-Comique, April 10, 1924; in German, Leipzig, May 6, 1927), Le Miracle des loups (Opéra-Comique, Nov. 14, 1924), Rolande et le mauvais garçon (Opéra, May 28, 1934), Le Jeu de l'Amour et du Hasard (1948; produced posthumously at Monte Carlo, 1954); an oratorio, Job (1900); Psalm 4 for soli, chorus, and orch.; Hymne à la France éternelle (1916); L'Été, for 4-voice choir; also for orch.; 2 symphonies; La Procession nocturne, symph. poem after Lenau's Der nächtliche Zug (his most famous orchestral work; first performed Paris, Jan. 15, 1899); Églogue, 'poème virgilien'; Divertissement sur des chansons russes; Suite anglaise, for string quartet; Concertino for cello and piano; Allegro de concert, for cello and piano; piano pieces; songs; etc. — Cf. Max d' Ollone, Rabaud (Paris, 1958).

Rabich (rah'-biyh), Ernst, German choral conductor and composer; b. Herda, May 5, 1856; d. Gotha, Feb. 1, 1933. After study with local teachers, he became in 1880 church organist and conductor of the Liedertafel (900 singers) in Gotha; from 1897, editor of 'Blätter für Haus- und Kirchenmusik' and later of the 'Musikalisches Magazin' (a large collection of excellent monographs to which he contributed); retired in 1918. He composed several choral works with orch.: Die Martinswand; Die Frühlingsfeier; Des Volkes Gruss; Das hohe Lied der Arbeit; Dornröschen; etc.; brought out 'Psalter und Harfe,' a collection of motets (5 books); 'Thüringer Liederkrantz.'

Rabin, Michael, American violinist; b. New York, May 2, 1936. His father was a violinist in the N. Y. Philharmonic; his mother, a pianist. He studied with Ivan Galamian; progressed rapidly; made his professional début at the age of 14; appeared with a number of American orchestras; also made several European tours and played in Australia.

Rabl, Walter, Austrian conductor and composer; b. Vienna, Nov. 30, 1873; d. Klagenfurt, July 14, 1940. He was a pupil of J. F. Hummel, the director of the Mozarteum at Salzburg, and later of Navrátil in Vienna; studied musicology with Guido Adler in Prague (Dr. phil., 1897). He conducted at the Düsseldorf Opera (1903-06), and at the Municipal Theaters in Essen, Dortmund, and Magdeburg (1915-24); wrote an opera, Liane (Strasbourg, 1903); a symphony; a quartet for clarinet, violin, cello, and piano (1st prize of the Vienna Tonkünstlerverein, 1897); a violin sonata; several song cycles. — Cf. A. Eccarius-Sieber, Walter Rabl, in vol. II of 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1907).

Rachmaninoff (răh-măh'-nē-nôhf), Sergey Vassilievitch, famous Russian composer; b. on his father's estate at Oneg, district of Novgorod, April 1, 1873; d. Beverly Hills, Calif., March 28, 1943. He was of a musical family; his grandfather was an amateur pianist, a pupil of John Field; his father also played the piano; Rachmaninoff's Polka was written on a theme improvised by his father. After financial setbacks, the family estate was sold, and in 1882 Rachmaninoff was taken to St. Petersburg; became a piano pupil of Demiansky at the Cons. there (1882-85); acting on the advice of his cousin, the well-known pianist and conductor Alexander Siloti, Rachmaninoff went to Moscow and studied piano with Zverev (1885-88) at the Moscow Cons.; in 1888 he began to study piano with Siloti and composition with Taneyev and Arensky. He met Tchaikovsky, who appreciated Rachmaninoff's talent, and gave him friendly advice. At the age of 19 he wrote his Prelude in C# minor (op. 3, No. 2), which became one of the most celebrated piano pieces in the world. He graduated as pianist in 1891, and as composer in 1892, receiving the gold medal for his opera in one act, Aleko, after Pushkin (1892). His 1st symph. was given in Moscow in 1897, with little success. Discouraged, Rachmaninoff destroyed the MS; however, the orchestral parts were preserved, and after Rachmaninoff's death the score was restored and performed in Moscow (1945). He toured with the Italian violinist Teresina Tua in Russia (1895); gave his own piano recitals, and soon became known as a piano virtuoso; in 1899 he gave a concert of his orchestral works with the Philharmonic Society of London. He continued to compose for orch., for piano, and for voice; in 1901 he gave the 1st performance of his 2nd piano concerto in Moscow, at a concert conducted by Siloti; this concerto became the most celebrated work of its genre written in the 20th century, and its singular charm has never abated since; it is no exaggeration to say that it became a model for piano concertos by a majority of modern Russian composers, and also of semi-popular virtuoso pieces for piano and orch. written in America. In 1902 Rachmaninoff married his cousin Natalie Satina; they spent some months in Switzerland; then returned to Moscow. Rachmaninoff was engaged to conduct opera at the Bolshoy Theater for two seasons (1904-06), and proved himself a very efficient conductor. From 1906 to 1909 he lived mostly in Dresden; spent the summers in his Russian country home near Novgorod. In 1909 he made his 1st American tour; his initial public appearance in the U. S. took place at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., on Nov. 4, 1909. His fame was such that the Boston Symph. Orch. offered him the post of permanent conductor, but he declined; the offer was repeated in 1918, but then, too, Rachmaninoff decided against acceptance. From 1910 to 1917 he lived in Moscow; conducted the Philharmonic Society Orch. there (1911-13). After the October Revolution of 1917, he left his native country, never to return; lived on his small estate on Lake Lucerne, Switzerland; made annual tours in Europe and in the U. S.; in 1935 made N. Y. his home; later settled in Los Angeles. He became an American citizen a few weeks before his death. —Among Russian composers Rachmaninoff occupies a very important place. The sources of his inspiration lie in the Romantic tradition of 19th-century Russian music; the link with Tchaikovsky's lyrical art is very strong; melancholy moods prevail, and minor keys predominate in Rachmaninoff's compositions, as in Tchaikovsky's; but there is an unmistakable stamp of Rachmaninoff's own individuality in the broad, rhapsodic sweep of the melodic line, and particularly in the fully expanded sonorities and fine resonant harmonies of his piano writing; its technical resourcefulness is unexcelled since Liszt. Despite the fact that Rachmaninoff was an émigré, and stood in avowed opposition to the Soviet regime (until the German attack on Russia in 1941 impelled him to modify his stand), his popularity never wavered in Russia; his works were constantly performed; after his death Russian musicians paid spontaneous tribute to him. Rachmaninoff's music is much less popular in Germany, France, and Italy; on the other hand, in England and America it constitutes a potent factor on the concert stage. —Works: Operas: Aleko, after Pushkin's The Gypsies (Moscow, May 9, 1893); The Miserly Knight (Moscow, Jan. 24, 1906, composer conducting); Francesca da Rimini (Moscow, Jan. 24, 1906, composer conducting). For orch.: symph. No. 1 (St. Petersburg, March 27, 1897); symph. No. 2 (St. Petersburg, Feb. 8, 1908, composer conducting); symph. No. 3 (Philadelphia, Nov. 6, 1936); Andante and Scherzo for string orch. (Moscow, Feb. 24, 1891); Prince Rostislav, symph. poem (1891); Intermezzo (Moscow, Oct. 31, 1892); The Rock, symph. fantasy (1893; Moscow, March 20, 1896); Caprice bohémien, for orch. (1894); The Isle of the Dead, symph. poem, inspired by Böcklin's painting (Moscow, May 1, 1909, composer conducting); Symph. Dances (Philadelphia, Jan. 3, 1941); 4 piano concertos: No. 1, in F# minor (1890-91; revised, 1917); No. 2, in C minor, one of his most famous works (Moscow, Oct. 27, 1901, composer soloist); No. 3, in D minor (N. Y., Nov. 28, 1909, composer soloist); No. 4, in G minor (Philadelphia, March 18, 1927); Rhapsody on a Theme by Paganini, for piano and orch. (Baltimore, composer soloist with the Philadelphia Orch., Nov. 7, 1934). Chamber music: Trio élégiaque, in memory of Tchaikovsky (1893); Romance and Danse hongroise, for violin and piano (1893); cello sonata (1901). Choral works: The Spring, for baritone, chorus, and orch. (Moscow, March 24, 1902); Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom, for chorus a cappella (Moscow, Nov. 25, 1910); The Bells, after Edgar Allan Poe, for orch., chorus, and soloists (St. Petersburg, Dec. 13, 1913, composer conducting); Vesper Mass, for chorus a cappella (Moscow, March 10, 1915); 3 Russian Songs, for chorus and orch. (Philadelphia, March 18, 1927). For piano: 5 Morceaux de fantaisie, op. 3: Élégie, Prélude (the famous one, in C# minor), Mélodie, Polichinelle, Sérénade (1892); 7 Morceaux de salon, op. 10 (1894); 6 Moments musicaux, op. 16 (1896); Variations on a theme by Chopin, op. 22 (1903); 10 Preludes, op. 23 (1904); sonata No. 1, in D minor, op. 28 (1907); 13 Preludes, op. 32 (1910); 6 Études-Tableaux, op. 33 (1911); Polka V.R., on a theme by the composer's father, Vassily Rachmaninoff (1911); sonata No. 2, in Bb minor (1913); 9 Études-Tableaux, op. 39 (1916-17; orchestrated by Respighi, 1931); 6 Duets for piano, 4 hands, op. 11 (1894); Fantasy (suite No. 1) for 2 pianos, op. 5 (1893); suite No. 2, op. 17 (1901); arrangements for piano of Prelude, Gavotte, and Gigue from Bach's violin partita in E major; of Mendelssohn's Scherzo from A Midsummer Night's Dream, Mussorgsky's Hopak, Rimsky-Korsakov's Flight of the Bumble-Bee, Fritz Kreisler's Liebesfreude and Liebeslied, and of his own song, Lilacs. Several sets of songs (all written before 1916): 6 songs, op. 4; 6 songs, op. 8; 12 songs, op. 14, of which Spring Waters is well known; 12 songs, op. 21 (including Fate, on Beethoven's 5th symph., and Lilacs); 15 songs, op. 26 (including Christ is Risen); 14 songs, op. 34 (including Vocalise); 6 songs, op. 38. —Bibliography: Ivan Lipayev, S.R. (in Russian; Saratov, 1913); M. Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers (N. Y., 1917); V. Belaiev, R. (Moscow, 1924); V. Belaiev, S.R., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1927); Oskar von Riesemann, R.'s Recollections (N. Y., 1934); Eric Brewerton, R.'s Songs, in 'Music & Letters' (1934); Watson Lyle, R.: a Biography (London, 1939); Alfred and Katherine Swan, R.: Personal Reminiscences, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan. and April, 1944); A. Gronowicz, S.R. (N. Y., 1946); Sophie Satin, ed., In Memory of R. (N. Y., 1946, in Russian); Igor Boelza, ed., R. and Russian Opera (Moscow, 1947); J. Culshaw, S. R. (London, 1949); J. Andriessen, R. (Amsterdam, 1950); V. Seroff, R. (N. Y., 1950; in French, Paris, 1953); A. Alexeyev, S. R. (Moscow, 1954); S. Bertenson and J. Leyda, S. R. (N. Y., 1956); Z. Apetian, ed., Reminiscences about R. (Moscow, 1957). See also the Rachmaninoff issue of 'Tempo' (London, Winter, 1951-52).

RACHMANINOFF

Rachmilovich, Jacques, conductor; b. Odessa, Russia, Oct. 8, 1895. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons.; came to America in 1925; settled in California. He made numerous appearances as guest conductor, specializing in modern music. In 1945 he organized the Santa Monica Symp. Orch.

Radecke, Ernst, German musicologist, son of Robert Radecke; b. Berlin, Dec. 8, 1866; d. Winterthur, Switzerland, Oct. 8, 1920. He studied with his father, with Bussler, and others; took the degree of Dr. phil. at the Univ. of Berlin with the dissertation, Das deutsche weltliche Lied in der Lautenmusik des 16. Jahrhunderts (publ. Leipzig, 1891); in 1893 settled in Winterthur, as teacher; from 1908 lectured at the Univ. of Zürich. He publ. a monograph on Robert Kahn (Leipzig, 1894); wrote an analysis of Beethoven's Eroica for Schlesinger's 'Musikführer,' etc.

Radecke, Robert, German conductor and composer; b. Dittmannsdorf, Oct. 31, 1830; d. Wernigerode, June 21, 1911. He studied violin, piano, and organ at the Leipzig Cons.; held various posts as player; then established himself in Berlin as choral conductor and teacher; from 1871 to 1887 was music director of the court opera; from 1892 till 1907 taught at the Institute for Church Music. On the occasion of his 75th birthday his friends and former students established the 'Robert Radecke Stiftung' (7000 marks) for scholarships. Radecke wrote a 1-act 'Liederspiel,' Die Mönkgüter (Berlin, May 1, 1874); a symphony; 2 overtures, König Johann and Am Strande; 2 piano trios; many excellent choruses and songs; particularly successful was his song Aus der Jugendzeit, op. 22, which attained such popularity in Germany that it was commonly mistaken for a folksong.

Radecke, Rudolf, German conductor, pedagogue, and composer; brother of Robert Radecke; b. Dittmannsdorf, Sept. 6, 1829; d. Berlin, April 15, 1893. He studied in Breslau; then at the Leipzig Cons.; settled in Berlin in 1859; taught at the Stern Cons. (1864-71); founded the Radecke Choral Society (1868) and a music school (1869). He wrote a number of part-songs.

Radiciotti (räh-dē-chöht'-tē), Giuseppe, Italian writer on music; b. Jesi, Le Marche, Jan. 25, 1858; d. Tivoli, April 4, 1931. He was a music pupil of his uncle, G. Faini; after finishing a course of studies at the Univ. of Rome, he taught in secondary schools there; in 1895 appointed prof. at the Liceo in Tivoli. He made a specialty of the music and musicians of his native region, Le Marche. —Publications: Teatro, musica e musicisti in Sinigaglia (1893); Contributi alla storia del teatro e della musica in Urbino (1899); Il Teatro e la musica in Roma nel secondo quarto del secolo XIX (1904); Teatro, musica e musicisti in Recanati (1904); L'Arte musicale dei Marchigiani (1905); L'Arte musicale in Tivoli nei secoli XVI, XVII e XVIII (1907); G. B. Pergolesi (1910; in German, 1954); Rossini (1914); La Cappella musicale del duomo di Pesaro (1914); G. Rossini: Vita documentata, opere ed influenza sull'arte (a monumental biography in 3 vols., 1927-29); Aneddoti rossiniani autentici (Rome, 1929); also numerous essays in various journals. —Cf. L. Parigi, G. Radiciotti, in 'Critica musicale' (1918); V. Scotti, G. Radiciotti in the 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale' (1931).

Radnai, Miklós, Hungarian critic and composer; b. Budapest, Jan. 1, 1892; d. there, Nov. 4, 1935. He studied violin, piano, and composition at the Academy of Music; then traveled in Europe. In 1925 he was appointed director of the Budapest Opera. He wrote a ballet, The Birthday of the Infanta, after Oscar Wilde (Budapest, April 26, 1918); a Symphony of the Magyars, for chorus and orch.; a violin concerto; some chamber music; a textbook of harmony; contributed critical essays to Hungarian publications.

Radó, Aladár, Hungarian composer; b. Budapest, Dec. 26, 1882; killed in battle near Belgrade, Sept. 7, 1914. He studied in Budapest and Berlin; wrote 2 operas: The Black Knight (1911) and Golem (1912); a symphony (1909); Hungarian Concerto for cello and orch. (1909); 2 string quartets and a string quintet; publ. several albums of piano pieces and song cycles.

Radoux (răh-döô'), Charles, Belgian composer, writer on music, and pedagogue; son of Jean-Théodore Radoux; b. Liège, July 30, 1877; d. there, April 30, 1952. He studied with his father; in 1907 received the Belgian Prix de Rome with the cantata Geneviève de Brabant; in 1911, appointed prof. at the Liège Cons.; wrote music criticism for the 'Journal de Liège'; was active in folksong research. —Works: the operas Les Sangliers des Ardennes (Liège, 1905) and Oudelette (Brussels, April 11, 1912); choral compositions with orch.: Adieu-Absence-Retour, Chanson d'Halewyn, Les Fées; orch. sketches: Danse tzigane, Burlesque, Vision, Triptique champêtre; Scène grecque for cello and orch.; Variations for violin and orch.; Lamentation (on a Bach prelude) for English horn and piano; piano pieces; folksong albums (5 Noëls liégeois, 7 Chansons populaires de l'ancien Hainaut, Cramignons liégeois, etc.). He used the surname Radoux-Rogier in his works.

Radoux, Jean-Théodore, Belgian composer and pedagogue; b. Liège, Nov. 9, 1835; d. there, March 21, 1911. He studied bassoon with Daussoigne-Méhul at the Cons. of Liège, where he became teacher of bassoon in 1856; won the Belgian Prix de Rome with the cantata Le Juif errant (1859); then went to Paris for additional study with Halévy. In 1872 he was appointed director of the Cons. of Liège. —Works: the operas Le Béarnais (Liège, March 14, 1866) and La Coupe enchantée (Brussels, 1872); oratorio, Cain (1877); symph. poems, Ahasvère and Le Festin de Balhasar; a patriotic overture, Épopée nationale; church music; publ. a monograph, Vieutemps. Sa vie, ses œuvres (1891).

Radoux-Rogier, Charles. See Radoux, Charles.

Radziwill, Prince Anton Heinrich, musical amateur and excellent singer; b. Vilna, June 13, 1775; d. Berlin, April 8, 1833. He was governor of Posen and a patron of art. —Works: incidental music to Goethe's Faust (publ. 1835); Complainte de Maria Stuart, with cello and piano; French romances (1802), vocal duets (1804), men's quartets (for Zelter's 'Liedertafel'), etc. To him Beethoven dedicated the Namensfeier overture, op. 115; he was also Chopin's patron.

Raeli, Vito, Italian writer and editor; b. Tricase, July 8, 1880; educated in Naples; studied music privately; since 1905 living in Rome; 1920, founded the 'Rivista Nazionale di Musica,' of which he is editor. Publ.: Collezioni e archivi romani di stampe a manoscritti musicale (Tricase, 1919); La Collezione Corsini di antichi codici musicali, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1918-19); Nel secolo di P. L. Palestrina; alla cappella della Basilica Liberiana 1550-1600 (Rome, 1920); Da V. Ugolini ad O. Benvenuti, 1630-46 (1920); Maestri Compositori pugliesi (Tricase, 1925); etc.

Raff, Joseph Joachim, composer; b. Lachen, Lake of Zürich, May 27, 1822; d. Frankfurt, June 25, 1882. The son of an organist, he was educated at Wiesenstetten, Württemberg, and at the Jesuit Lyceum in Schwyz; being too poor to take a University course, he then became a school teacher, but continued the study of composition, and of the piano and violin by himself. In 1843 he sent some MS works to Mendelssohn; the latter recommended them to Breitkopf & Härtel, who publ. Raff's op. 2-14, all piano pieces. Thus encouraged, he gave up school teaching for the career of a composer, and worked hard, though without improving his material condition for some time. Liszt invited him to accompany him on a concert tour; Raff went as far as Cologne (1846), where he remained for a time, writing reviews for Dehn's 'Cäcilia,' and composing industriously. His hopes of remunerative employment by the Viennese publisher, Mechetti, were dashed by the latter's death; Raff returned to Wiesenstetten, but often visited Stuttgart, and there met von Bülow, who greatly aided his reputation by publicly playing his Konzertstück; Raff's opera, König Alfred, was also accepted for performance at the court theater; but the Revolution of 1848 again frustrated his hopes. In 1850 he joined Liszt at Weimar; entered heart and soul into the new German movement, which he championed in the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik,' and had the satisfaction of seeing his opera, König Alfred, brought out in revised form at Weimar (March 9, 1851) by Liszt; though it never got any further. Until his death he always remained in close contact with Liszt, and rendered very material assistance in the instrumentation of several of Liszt's symphonic poems. He published (1854) a book, Die Wagnerfrage. In 1856 he followed the actress, Doris Genast, to Wiesbaden, and married her in 1859. In Wiesbaden he was in great demand as a piano teacher. In 1863 his first symphony, An das Vaterland, won the prize of the Viennese 'Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde' over 32 competitors; on April 9, 1870 a second opera, Dame Kobold (comic), was produced at Weimar; and in 1877 he was appointed director of Hoch's Cons. at Frankfurt, where he remained till his death (from apoplexy). —Raff was a composer of prodigious fertility of invention, an inexhaustible vein of melody, and thorough mastery over the technical and formal requirements of composition. He wrote over 230 works of very unequal value; they include 11 symphonies, of which the 3rd (Im Walde; 1869; Weimar, April 17, 1870) and 5th (Lenore; Sondershausen, Dec. 13, 1872) are the best; 5 overtures; 2 violin concertos; a cello concerto; a piano concerto; 8 string quartets; 4 piano trios; 5 violin sonatas; many choruses, songs, and piano pieces. The finest of these won him a leading place among contemporary composers. But soon after his death his popularity began to wane rapidly; by the end of the century even the best of the orchestral works had fallen into complete oblivion. —Cf. A. Schäfer, Chronologisch-systematisches Verzeichnis der Werke Joachim Raff's (Wiesbaden, 1888); R. Gandolfi, La Musica di G. Raff, in 'Note illustrative di due accademie . . .' (Florence, 1904); Helen Raff, Joachim Raff. Ein Lebensbild (Regensburg, 1925).

Rahlwes, Alfred, German conductor and composer; b. Wesel, Oct. 23, 1878; d.

Halle, April 20, 1946. From 1893-99 pupil of Wüllner, G. Hollaender, and W. Hess at the Cologne Cons.; was Kapellmeister in Stuttgart, Liegnitz, and Königsberg; in 1913 succeeded O. Reubke as Univ. music-director in Halle; 1917, prof. there.

Raida, Karl Alexander, composer; b. (of German parents) Paris, Oct. 4, 1852; d. Berlin, Nov. 26, 1923. He studied at the Conservatories of Stuttgart and Dresden; was Kapellmeister from 1878-92 at the Viktoria Theater in Berlin, where he founded an 'Akademie für dramatischen Gesang' (1882) and the 'Gesellschaft der Opernfreunde' (1887); 1895-97 director of the new 'Deutsches Theater' in Munich; a successful composer of light operas, operettas, ballets, farces, etc.

Raimann, Rudolf, Hungarian composer; b. Veszprem, May 7, 1861; d. Vienna, Sept. 26, 1913. He entered the service of Prince Esterházy as music director; wrote an opera, Enoch Arden, after Tennyson (Budapest, May 8, 1894), and about a dozen operettas, produced in Vienna: Das Waschermädel (April 19, 1905); Paula macht alles (March 27, 1909); Die Frau Grell (April 7, 1911); Unser Stammhalter (Nov. 15, 1912), etc.

Raimondi, Ignazio, Italian composer; b. Naples, c. 1737; d. London, Jan. 14, 1813. He left Italy about 1770; conducted concerts in Amsterdam; then went to Paris, and eventually (1790) to London, where he remained until the end of his life. —Works: a symphony titled Les Aventures de Télémaque (Amsterdam, Jan. 15, 1777); opera, La Muta (Paris, Nov. 12, 1789); a symphony titled The Battle (1785; very popular in England); several string quartets; string trios; various other instrumental pieces.

Raimondi, Pietro, Italian composer; b. Rome, Dec. 20, 1786; d. there, Oct. 30, 1853. For six years he studied under La Barbara and Tritto at the Cons. della Pietà de' Turchini, Naples; lived for a time at Rome and Florence, and in 1807 brought out an opera buffa, Le Bizzarie d'amore, at Genoa, where he had established himself as a teacher and composer. It was followed by about 60 other dramatic works, which were generally successful, and 21 ballets, for whose production he went from place to place (Florence, Naples, Rome, Messina, Milan, etc.); from 1824-32 he was director of the royal theaters at Naples, also, from 1825, prof. of counterpoint at the Cons.; from 1832-52, prof. of counterpoint at Palermo Cons.; on Dec. 12, 1852, he succeeded Basili as maestro di cappella at St. Peter's, Rome. —Raimondi was a contrapuntist of remarkable originality, and of a skill in combination rivaling that of the masters of the contrapuntal epoch; he publ. 4 fugues a 4, which could be combined as a quadruple fugue a 16; 6 fugues a 4, to be combined as a sextuple fugue a 24; in the 24 Fughe a 4, 5, 6 e 8 voci publ. by Ricordi, there is one such quadruple fugue a 16, and a quintuple fugue a 20; further, 6 fugues a 4, performable as a sextuple fugue a 24; and a fugue a 64, for 16 choirs a 4. His most astounding feat in combination, however, was the sacred trilogy Giuseppe (Joseph), comprising 3 oratorios, Putifar, Giuseppe, Giacobbe, performed at the Teatro Argentina, Rome, Aug. 7, 1852, at first separately, and then simultaneously, the ensemble of 400 musicians on the stage and in the orchestra presenting a most striking effect, and arousing great curiosity among professional musicians. —Cf. F. Cicconetti, Memorie intorno a Pietro Raimondi (Rome, 1867); Cecil Gray, Pietro Raimondi, in the 'Mus. Review' (Jan., 1940).

Rainier, Priaulx, South African composer; b. Howick, Natal, Feb. 3, 1903. She studied at the South African College of Music; in 1920, went to London, where she took courses with McEwen at the Royal Academy of Music; in 1942, was appointed prof. there. —Works: Incantation for clarinet and orch. (1933); Sinfonia da camera for strings (1947); viola sonata (1945); Barbaric Dance Suite for piano (1949); 3 string quartets. —Cf. John Amis, Priaulx Rainier, in the 'Mus. Times' (July, 1955).

Rains, Leon, American operatic bass; b. New York, Oct. 1, 1870; d. Los Angeles, June 11, 1954. He studied with Saenger in N. Y. (1891-96) and with Bouhy in Paris; made a concert tour with Melba in the U. S. (1898); then was a member of the court opera at Dresden (from 1899); made his first appearance with the Metropolitan Opera Company in 1908; then returned to Dresden, and continued to sing there for several years, eventually returning to America.

Raisa, Rosa, soprano; b. Bialystok, Poland, May 30, 1893. In order to escape the horrors of anti-Semitic persecutions she fled to Naples at the age of 14; on Lombardi's advice she entered the Cons. San Pietro a Maiella, where she studied under Barbara Marchisio; début at Parma, Sept. 6, 1913, in Verdi's Oberto, Conte di San Bonifacio (revived for the Verdi centenary); then sang 2 seasons at the Costanzi in Rome; 1914 at Covent Garden; 1914-15, with the Chicago Opera Co.; sang with increasing success in Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, São Paulo, and Milan; on her reappearance with the Chicago company she scored a triumph as Aida (Nov. 13, 1916); was leading soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. for many seasons.

Raison, André, French composer and organist, active in Paris c. 1687-1714. He received instruction at Nanterre; was organist of the Jacobins and at the church of Ste. Geneviève in Paris; apparently the teacher of L. N. Clérambault; publ. 2 books of organ pieces (1688, 1714), of which the first was reprinted by Guilman ('Archives des Maîtres de l'Orgue,' vol. 2, Paris, 1899).

Raitio, Väinö, Finnish composer; b. Sortavala, April 15, 1891; d. Helsinki, Sept. 10, 1945. He studied in Helsinki with Melartin and Furuhielm and in Moscow with Ilynsky; also in Berlin (1921) and Paris (1925-26). He wrote 5 operas to Finnish librettos: Jephtha's Daughter (1931), Princess Cecilia (1931), Väinämöinen's Courtship (1935), The King of Lydia (1938), and Two Queens (1944; Helsinki, 1945); symph. poems, Fantasia estatica and Fantasia poetica; a symph. tableau, Moonlight on Jupiter; a piano concerto; a double concerto for violin and cello with orch.; chamber music. His style of composition combines the elements of German Romanticism and French Impressionism. —Cf. Sulho Ranta, ed., Suomen Säveltäjiä (Helsinki, 1945; pp. 514-21).

Rajičić (rī'-ih-chich), Stanojlo, Serbian composer; b. Belgrade, Dec. 16, 1910. He studied music in Vienna, Berlin, and Prague; has appeared as a pianist but has devoted most of his time to composing and teaching. He has written 5 symphonies, 2 overtures, a piano concerto, a cello concerto, 2 string quartets, a piano trio; also ballet music, miscellaneous piano pieces, and songs. His early works are in a radical idiom of atonal music; later he adopted a more traditional style with emphasis on national folksongs.

Ralf, Torsten, Swedish tenor; b. Malmö, Jan. 2, 1901; d. Stockholm, April 27, 1954. He studied at the Stockholm Cons. and in Berlin. Made his début as Cavaradossi in Stettin (1930); then sang in Frankfurt (1933-35), Dresden (1935-44), London (1935-39), New York (Metropolitan Opera House, 1945), and Buenos Aires (1946).

Ramann, Lina, German writer on music; b. Mainstockheim, near Kitzingen, June 24, 1833; d. Munich, March 30, 1912. She was a pupil of Franz and Frau Brendel at Leipzig; founded (1858) a music seminary for women teachers, at Glückstadt, Holstein; in 1865, with Ida Volkmann, a music school at Nuremberg, which they sold in a most flourishing condition to August Göllerich (q.v.) in 1890. From then until her death she lived in Munich, devoting herself entirely to literary work.—Publ. Die Musik als Gegenstand der Erziehung (1868); Aus der Gegenwart (1868); Allgemeine Erzieh- und Unterrichtslehre der Jugend (1869; 3rd ed., 1898); Bach und Händel (1869); Fr. Liszt's Oratorium 'Christus'; eine Studie zur zeit- und musikgeschichtlichen Stellung desselben (1880); Franz Liszt als Künstler und Mensch (3 vols., 1880-94; vol. 1 in English, 1882); Franz Liszt als Psalmsänger (1886); she transl. and ed. Liszt's literary works, 'Gesammelte Schriften' (6 vols., 1880-83); also wrote a Grundriss der Technik des Klavierspiels, in 12 books. Composed 4 sonatinas (op. 9) and other piano music; ed. 'Liszt-Pädagogium' (5 vols. of Liszt's piano compositions with Liszt's own changes, additions, remarks, etc.). —Cf. M. Ille-Beeg, Lina Ramann (1914).

Rameau (räh-moh'), Jean-Philippe, the creator of the modern science of harmony, and a distinguished dramatic composer, was baptized at Dijon, Sept. 25 (probably born the same day), 1683; died Paris, Sept. 12, 1764. Of a musical family, at 7 he could play at sight, on the harpsichord, any music given him; from 10 to 14 he attended the Jesuit College at Dijon; then devoted himself to music, and in 1701 was sent to Italy; but after a brief stay at Milan he joined the orchestra of a traveling French opera-troupe as violinist. In 1702 he was assistant organist at Notre-Dame in Avignon; in June of that year he became organist at Clermont-Ferrand. In 1706 he publ. his first Livre de pièces de clavecin in Paris, where he probably had been living since the spring of 1705. Until 1708 he remained in Paris as church organist. In 1709 he became his father's successor at the Cathedral in Dijon; in 1714 he was organist in Lyons. Then he became organist of the Cathedral at Clermont-Ferrand, where he wrote his famous Traité de l'Harmonie (Paris, 1722). This epoch-making work, though little understood at the time, attracted considerable attention and roused opposition, so that when he settled definitely in Paris (1723) he was by no means unknown. The fact that he failed in 1727 in a competition for the position of organist at St-Vincent-de-Paul did not injure his reputation, for it was generally known that Marchand (probably out of jealousy) had exerted his powerful influence in favor of Daquin, who was in every respect inferior to Rameau. He became organist at Sainte-Croix-de-la-Bretonnerie, and soon was recognized as the foremost organist in France. In 1726 appeared his Nouveau système de musique théorique, an introduction to the Traité. The leading ideas of his system of harmony are (1) chord-building by thirds; (2) the classification of a chord and all its inversions as one and the same, thus reducing the multiplicity of consonant and dissonant combinations to a fixed and limited number of root-chords; (3) his invention of a fundamental bass ('basse fondamentale'), which does not correspond to our thoroughbass, but is an imaginary series of root-tones forming the real basis of the varied chord-progressions employed in a composition. The stir that these novel theories occasioned, and his reputation as the foremost French organist, by no means satisfied Rameau's ambition; his ardent desire was to bring out a dramatic work at the Opéra. He had made a modest beginning with dramatic music in 1723, when he wrote some dances and divertissements for Alexis Piron's fairy burlesque L'Endriague, which was produced at the Théâtre de la Foire St-Germain. In 1726 he brought out at the same theater two light operas by the same poet, L'Enrôlement d'Arlequin (Feb. 28) and La Robe de dissension, ou le Faux Prodiges (autumn). He then became music-master to the wife of the 'fermier-général' La Pouplinière, and the latter obtained of Voltaire a libretto on Samson, which Rameau set to music; but it was rejected on account of its biblical subject. A second libretto, by Abbé Pellegrin, was accepted, and Hippolyte et Aricie was produced at the Opéra in 1733; its reception was cool, despite undeniable superiority (over the operas of Lully and his following) in the rich and varied harmony and instrumentation, and Rameau almost renounced dramatic composition. But the persuasions of his friends, who also influenced public opinion in his favor, were effective; in 1735 he brought out the successful opera-ballet Les Indes galantes, and in 1737 his masterpiece, Castor et Pollux, a work that for years held its own beside the operas of Gluck. A career of uninterrupted prosperity commenced; he was recognized as the leading theorist of the time, and his instruction was eagerly sought; for the next 30 years his operas dominated the French stage; he was named composer of the King's chamber music, and just before his death he was granted a patent of nobility.—From the beginning of his dramatic career Rameau roused opposition, and at the same time found ardent admirers. The first war of words was waged between the 'Lullistes' and the 'Ramistes.' This had scarcely been ended by a triumphant revival of Pygmalion in 1751, when the production of Pergolesi's La Serva padrona (1752) caused a more prolonged and bitter controversy between the adherents of Rameau and the 'Encyclopédistes,' a struggle known as 'La Guerre des Bouffons,' in which Rameau participated by writing numerous essays defending his position. Practically the same charges were made against him as a century later against Wagner: unintelligible harmony, lack of melody, preponderance of discords, noisy instrumentation, etc. But when 25 years later the war between Gluckists and Piccinists was raging, Rameau's works were praised as models of beauty and perfection. It is a matter for regret that Rameau was indifferent to the quality of his librettos; he relied so much upon his musical inspiration that he never could be brought to a realization of the importance of a good text; hence the inequality of his operas. Nevertheless, his operas mark a decided advance over Lully's in musical characterization, expressive melody, richness of harmony, variety of modulation, and individuality of instrumentation. —WRITINGS: Traité de l'harmonie . . . (1722); Nouveau système de musique théorique (1726); Plan abrégé d'une nouvelle méthode d'accompagnement (1730); Les différentes méthodes d'accompagnement pour le clavecin ou pour l'orgue (1732); Génération harmonique (1737); Démonstration du principe de l'harmonie (1750); Nouvelles réflexions de M. Rameau sur sa démonstration . . . (1752); Réflexions . . . sur la manière de former la voix . . . (1752); Observations sur notre instinct pour la musique (1754); Code de musique pratique . . . (1760); also numerous pamphlets, polemical or otherwise, and 3 works in MS.—WORKS: Theatrical entertainments to which Rameau contributed music: L'Endriague (Paris, Feb. 3, 1723); L'En- rôlement d'Arlequin (Paris, Feb., 1726); La Robe de dissension (1726); Les Jardins de l'Hymen ou la Rose (1726; Paris, March 5, 1744); Les Courses de Tempé (1734). Operas: Hippolyte et Aricie (Paris, Oct. 1, 1733); Les Indes galantes, 'ballet héroïque' (Paris, Aug. 23, 1735); Castor et Pollux (Paris, Oct. 24, 1737); Les Fêtes d'Hébé, ballet (Paris, May 21, 1739); Dardanus (Paris, Nov. 19, 1739); La Princesse de Navarre, ballet (Versailles, Feb. 23, 1745); Platée (Versailles, March 31, 1745); Les Fêtes de Polymnie, ballet (Paris, Oct. 12, 1745); Le Temple de la Gloire, ballet (Versailles, Nov. 27, 1745); Les Fêtes de l'Hymen et de l'Amour, 'ballet héroïque' (Versailles, March 15, 1747); Zaïs, 'pastorale héroïque' (Paris, Feb. 29, 1748); Pygmalion, ballet (Paris, Aug. 27, 1748); Les Surprises de l'Amour, ballet (Versailles, Nov. 27, 1748); Nais, 'pastorale héroïque' (Paris, April 22, 1749); Zoroastre (Paris, Dec. 5, 1749); La Guirlande, ballet (Paris, Sept. 21, 1751); Acante et Céphise, 'pastorale héroïque' (Paris, Nov. 9, 1751); Daphnis et Eglé (Fontainebleau, Oct. 30, 1753); Les Sybarites, ballet (Fontainebleau, Nov. 13, 1753); La Naissance d'Osiris, ballet (Fontainebleau, Oct. 12, 1754); Anacréon, ballet (Fontainebleau, Oct. 23, 1754); Les Paladins (Paris, Feb. 12, 1760); Abaris ou les Boréades (1764). Most of the above were publ. in short score (voice, violin, and bass, with the ritornelli in full).—Other publ. music: Premier livre de pièces de clavecin (1706); Pièces de clavecin avec une méthode pour la mécanique des doigts (n. d.; with important notes); Pièces de clavecin avec une table pour les agréments (1731); and Nouvelles suites de pièces pour clavecin avec des remarques sur les différents genres de musique (n. d.; Farrenc publ. these last two in his 'Trésor des pianistes,' 1861); Pièces de clavecin en concerts (1741; with accomp. of violin, flute, and viola or 2nd violin); detached numbers of the above are in Pauer's 'Old French Composers' and 'Popular Pieces by Rameau'; Hugo Riemann edited a complete ed. of the clavecin compositions (publ. by Steingraber). —In 1895 Durand & Cie. began the publication of a monumental edition under the editorship of C. Saint-Saëns and Ch. Malherbe; after the latter's death (1911) his part of the work was divided between M. Emmanuel and M. Teneo. 18 vols. appeared up to 1914: I, Pièces de clavecin; II, Musique instrumentale; III, Cantates; IV, Motets (1st series); V, Motets (2nd series); VI, Hippolyte et Aricie; VII, Les Indes galantes; VIII, Castor et Pollux;

IX, Les Fêtes d'Hébé; X, Dardanus; XI, La Princesse de Navarre, Les Fêtes de Ramire, Nélée et Myrthis, Zéphire; XII, Platée; XIII, Les Fêtes de Polymnie; XIV, Le Temple de la Gloire; XV, Les Fêtes de l'Hymen et de l'Amour; XVI, Zaïs; XVII, Pygmalion, Les Surprises de l'Amour; XVIII, Nais, Anacréon, Les Sybarites. No vols. have been added since 1914.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: A. BIOGRAPHY: Ch. Poissot, Notice biographique sur J.-P. Rameau (Paris, 1864); Th. Nisard, Monographie de J.-P. Rameau (Paris, 1867); A. Pougin, Rameau (Paris, 1876); R. Garraud, Rameau (Paris, 1876); H. Grigne, Rameau (Dijon, 1876); M. Brenet, Notes et croquis sur J.-P. Rameau, in the 'Guide Musical' (1899) and La Jeunesse de Rameau, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1902-03); H. Quittard, Les Années de jeunesse de Rameau, in 'Revue d'histoire et de critique musicale' (1902); L. de La Laurencie, Quelques documents sur J.-P. Rameau et sa famille (Paris, 1907) and Rameau (Paris, 1908); L. Laloy, Rameau (Paris, 1908); L. de La Laurencie, Rameau et ses descendants, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1911); M. M. Mayer, J.-P. Rameau; J. S. Bach (Chambéry, 1946); Y. Tiénot, J.-P. Rameau, esquisse biographique (Paris, 1954); H. Charlier, J.-P. Rameau (Lyons, 1955); P. Berthier, Rameau (Paris, 1957); C. Girdlestone, Rameau (London, 1957). —B. CRITICISM AND HISTORY: L. Danjou, Rameau, son influence sur l'art musical (Paris, 1866); J. Carlez, Grimm et la musique de son temps (Paris, 1872); R. de Récy, La Critique musicale au siècle dernier; Rameau et les Encyclopédistes, in 'Revue des Deux Mondes' (July, 1886); A. Jullien, La Musique et les philosophes au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1873); E. Newman, Gluck and the Opera (London, 1895); H. Imbert, L'Œuvre de J.-P. Rameau, in the 'Guide Musical' (1896); H. Riemann, Geschichte der Musiktheorie (2nd ed., 1921; p. 459 et seq.); E. Dacier, L'Opéra au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle, in the 'Revue Musicale' (1902); E. Hirschberg, Die Encyclopädisten und die französische Oper im 18. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1903); R. Rolland, Musiciens d'autrefois (Paris, 1908); A. Jullien, Musiciens d'hier et d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1910); P.-M. Masson, Lullistes et Ramistes, in 'L'Année Musicale' (1911); J. Rivière, Études (Paris, 1911); J.-G. Prod'homme, Écrits de musiciens, XV<sup>e</sup> au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1912); L. Striffling, Le Goût musical en France au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1913); G. Cucuel, La Poupinière et la musique de chambre au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1913); M. Shirlaw, The Theory of Harmony (London, 1917); J. Tiersot, Rameau, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1928); P. Lasserre, Philosophie de goût musical (Paris, 1928; new ed., 1931); P. M. Masson, L'Opéra de Rameau (1930; 2nd ed., 1932), Rameau et Beethoven, in the Liège 'Kongressbericht' (1930), and Rameau and Wagner, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1939); G. Migot, Rameau et le génie de la musique française (Paris, 1930); J. Gardien, J.-P. Rameau (Paris, 1949); P. M. Masson, Les deux versions du 'Dardanus' de Rameau, in 'Acta Musicologica' (Jan.-July, 1954). —A comprehensive bibliography was publ. by M. Brenet in 'Le Courrier musical' (1908).

Ramin, Günther, German conductor, organist, and composer; b. Karlsruhe, Oct. 15, 1898; d. Leipzig, Feb. 27, 1956. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Karl Straube (organ), Robert Teichmüller (piano), and Stephan Krehl (theory). In 1918 he was appointed organist at the Thomaskirche; conducted choral groups in Leipzig; in 1939 succeeded Straube as cantor at the Thomasschule; from 1933 to 1942 conducted the Philharmonic Chorus in Berlin; from 1945 to 1951, the Gewandhaus Chorus in Leipzig; remained in Leipzig as choral conductor, teacher, and composer. His works include an Orgelchoral-Suite and many other organ pieces; a violin sonata; etc. He edited several collections of organ works and publ. the manual Gedanken zur Klärung des Orgelproblems (1929). —Cf. L. von Koerber, Der Thomanerchor und sein Kantor (Hamburg, 1954).

Ramos (Ramis) de Pareja (rah'mohs dēh pah-rēh'hāh), Bartolomé, Spanish theorist; b. Baeza, c. 1440; d. after 1491. After lecturing at Salamanca, he went to Bologna (but he did not occupy a chair of music there, as is often stated), where in 1482 he publ. his Latin treatise Musica practica (modern ed. by Joh. Wolf, Leipzig, 1901; extract in English in O. Strunk, Source Readings in Music History, N. Y., 1950), one of the important landmarks in the science of harmony. In 1491 he was in Rome. He established the mathematical ratios 4:5 and 5:6 for the intervals of the major and minor third, thus completing the definition of the consonant triad and laying the basis of our harmonic system. He was also the first to set forth the theory of equal temperament, probably based on the practice of the early Spanish guitarists (vihuelistas), since the frets on the guitar were placed a semitone apart, and the scale was composed of equal semitones (cf. the treatises of Bermudo, Milán, etc.). The Bolognese theorist Giovanni Spataro was Ramos's pupil. —Cf. H. Riemann, Handbuch der Musikgeschichte, 2, I, p. 429.

Randegger, Alberto, conductor; b. Trieste, April 13, 1832; d. London, Dec. 18, 1911. A pupil of Lafont (piano) and Ricci (composition); after conducting in various Italian theaters, about 1854 settled in London, where he became famous as a singing teacher. In 1868 he was appointed prof. of singing at the Royal Academy of Music. From 1879-85 he conducted with the Carl Rosa Company; 1887-98 at Drury Lane and Covent Garden. He composed operas, etc.

Randegger, Alberto, Jr., nephew of the preceding; b. Trieste, Aug. 3, 1880; d. Milan, Oct. 7, 1918. In 1896 he appeared in London as a violinist at an orchestral concert conducted by his uncle; then studied at the Royal Academy of Music; 1897-1901, pupil at the Milan Cons.; lived for some years in London as a composer; then resided in Trieste, later in Milan. —His works include the 1-act opera L'Ombra di Werther (Trieste, 1899), a violin concerto (London, 1902), many piano pieces and songs.

Randegger, Giuseppe Aldo, pianist and pedagogue; b. Naples, Feb. 17, 1874; d. New York, Nov. 30, 1946. From 1888-93 pupil at the Cons. in Naples; 1893-97, appeared as pianist in Atlanta, Ga., and other Southern cities; after a year in England and 2 years in Italy, he returned to the U. S.; was director of music at Hamilton College, Lexington, Ky., and Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn.; then settled in New York, as pianist and teacher. Composed a 1-act opera, The Promise of Medea, songs, etc.

Randolph, Harold, American pianist and educator; b. Richmond, Va., Oct. 31, 1861; d. Northeast Harbor, Me., July 6, 1927. He studied at the Peabody Cons. of Music, Baltimore; début at Baltimore, 1885, with the Peabody Symph. Orch., then appeared with the principal orchestras and in numerous recitals throughout the U. S.; also gave recitals for 2 pianos with Ernest Hutcheson; in 1898 he succeeded Asger Hamerik as director of the Peabody Cons., which under his administration came to be one of the foremost music schools in the U. S. —Cf. D. Leedy, H. Randolph, the Man and Musician, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1944).

Rangström, Ture, remarkable Swedish composer; b. Stockholm, Nov. 30, 1884; d.

there, May 11, 1947. He studied singing in Berlin and Munich with Julius Hey (1905-7); then composition with Lindegren in Stockholm and Pätzner in Munich. Returning to Sweden, he became music critic of the 'Stockholms Dagblad' (1910-14) and the 'Svenska Dagbladet' (1907-09, and after 1927). From 1922 to 1925 he was conductor of the Göteborg Symph. Orch.; then became stage director at the Stockholm Opera. His music is permeated with a lyrical sentiment, and his forms are rhapsodic; in his symphonies he achieves great intensity by a concentrated development of the principal melodic and rhythmic ideas; his songs are also appreciated. —Works: operas: Kronbruden (The Crown Bride), after Strindberg (première, Stuttgart, in German, as Die Kronbraut, Oct. 21, 1919), Middelhälsderlig (Stockholm, 1921), Gilgamesh (left incomplete; finished and orchestrated by John Fernström; Stockholm, Nov. 20, 1952); for orch.: 4 symphonies (I, In memoriam A. Strindberg, 1915; II, My Country, 1919; III, Song Under the Stars, 1931; IV, Invocatio, 1936); the symph. poems Dithyramb (1909; revised in 1949 by Atterberg), En höstsång (Ode to Autumn, 1912), Havet sjunger (The Sea Sings, 1914), Gamla Stockholm (1939); Festpreludium 1944, for the 50th anniversary of the Stockholm Opera Theater (1944); Divertimento elegiaco, for strings (1918); Un petit rien, for string orch. (1937); Ballad for piano and orch. (1937); Poem-Capriccio amoroso, for violin and orch. (1944); Ein Nachtstück in E.T.A. Hoffmanns Manier, for string quartet (1909); other chamber music; piano pieces; about 60 fine songs, to Swedish texts. —Cf. the special issue of 'Musikrevy' (vol. 5, no. 2; Stockholm, 1950).

Ranki, György, Hungarian composer; b. Budapest, Oct. 30, 1907. He studied with Kodály at the Academy of Music in Budapest (1926-30); then worked at the Ethnographic Museum. He presented his first work, a piano quintet, in 1929, at the Budapest Academy of Music; his ballet Snowmen was performed at London in 1939; other works are a cantata, On The Edge of the City (1947); 2 piano sonatas; chamber music; many film scores. His music derives its inspiration chiefly from Hungarian folk-song.

Rankl, Karl, conductor and composer; b. Gaaden, near Vienna, Oct. 1, 1898. He studied in Vienna with Schoenberg and Anton von Webern; was opera coach at the Vienna Volksoper (1921) and chorusmaster there (1922); subsequently served as conductor at the Stadtheater in Reichenberg (1924), at the East Prussian Broadcasting Co., Königsberg (1926), assistant to Klempner at the Kroll Opera House, Berlin (1928-31), opera conductor at Graz (1932-37), and conductor at the German Theater in Prague (1937-39). In 1939 he went to England, and became successful there; was conductor at Covent Garden, London (1946-51); in 1952, appointed conductor of the Scottish Orch., Glasgow. He wrote an opera, Deirdre of the Sorrows, which received a prize at the Festival of Britain in 1951; 4 symphonies; many choruses. —Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (London, 1951; pp. 140-44).

Ranta, Sulho, eminent Finnish composer and writer on music; b. Peräseinäjoki, Aug. 15, 1901. He studied at the Helsinki Cons. and later in Germany, France, and Italy. Since 1934 he has taught at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki; is also active as a music critic. He edited a comprehensive biographical dictionary of 90 Finnish composers, Suomen Säveltäjiä (Helsinki, 1945), and a general biographical survey of performers, Sävelten Taitureita (Helsinki, 1947); also a compendium of music history in Finnish. —Works: Sinfonia programmatica (1931); Sinfonia piccola (1932); symph. poem, Images boréales (1933); cantata, Kalevala (1935); symph. poem, En Folksaga (1940); Sinfonia dell'arte (1947); chamber music; piano pieces.

Rapee (räh-pä'), Erno, conductor, b. Budapest, June 4, 1891; d. New York, June 26, 1945. He studied piano with Emil Sauer at the National Academy in Budapest; gave concerts as pianist; appeared as conductor with various European orchestras; in 1912 came to America as accompanist; in 1913 was engaged as musical director of the Hungarian Opera Co., N. Y.; then became conductor for S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) at his motion picture theaters in N. Y.; after several years at the Roxy Theater (1926-31) he became music director of the N.B.C.; then at the Radio City Music Hall, again under Rothafel's management. He introduced classical works into his programs, mostly in the form of potpourris, but upon occasion also in full version; ed. collections of mood music for silent motion pictures (N. Y., 1924, 1925).

Raphael, Günther, German composer; b. Berlin, April 30, 1903. He was a son of the organist and choral conductor Georg Raphael; studied in Berlin with Max Trapp (piano), Walter Fischer (organ), and Robert Kahn (composition). He was on the faculty of the Leipzig Cons. (1926-34); then lived in Meiningen (1934-44); in Laubach (1945-48); in 1949 appointed teacher of theory at the Duisburg Cons. —Works: 4 symphonies; violin concerto; cello concerto; organ concerto; a number of sacred works for chorus a cappella; clarinet quintet; piano quintet; 5 string quartets; sonata for viola unaccompanied; piano trio; 2 violin sonatas; viola sonata; cello sonata; other chamber music; several piano sonatas and other pieces for piano.

Raphling, Sam, American composer; b. Fort Worth, Texas, March 19, 1910. He studied piano in Chicago and, as an exchange fellowship student, in Germany. Returning to the U. S., he was active in Chicago as a teacher and pianist; publ. a number of compositions in various genres: Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight, for orch.; Cowboy Rhapsody, for violin and orch.; American Album, for two pianos (1946); sonatina, for 2 clarinets (1948); Prelude and Toccata, for trumpet and trombone (1949); Lyrical Prelude, for trombone and piano (1950); Dance Suite, for 2 trumpets (1950); Variations for 2 flutes unaccompanied (1955; also for flute and clarinet); sonatina for 2 trombones (1955; also for 2 bassoons); Sonata, Variations, Introduction and Workout, for French horn unaccompanied (1955); Nocturnal Prelude, for piano (1955); Duograms, for 2 oboes (1955); trio for 3 oboes (1955); Pastorale, for oboe and piano (1955); etc.

Rappold, Marie (née Winterroth), dramatic soprano; b. London, of German parents, c. 1873; d. North Hollywood, Calif., May 12, 1957. She appeared on the London stage as a child entertainer at the age of 5; shortly afterwards the family moved to America, settling in Brooklyn. As a young girl she sang with various local groups in and around N. Y.; studied with Oscar Saenger; later was a member of the Amberg German Opera Co., N. Y. She made her opera debut at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., on Nov. 22, 1905; remained on the roster until 1919; also appeared in Europe. She was married to Dr. Julius Rappold; when he objected to her stage career, she divorced him; married the tenor Rudolf Berger in 1913; she appeared with him at the Metropolitan Opera.

Rappoldi, Eduard, Austrian violinist and composer; b. Vienna, Feb. 21, 1831; d. Dresden, May 16, 1903. He studied at the Vienna Cons.; then played violin in opera orchestras in Vienna and Rotterdam; conducted opera in Lübeck and Prague; was 2nd violinist in the Joachim Quartet in Berlin (1871-77); concertmaster of the Court Opera in Dresden (1878-98); from 1893 till his death, prof. of violin at the Dresden Cons. He publ. 2 violin sonatas; chamber music; piano pieces; songs. His wife, Laura Rappoldi-Kahrer (b. Mistelbach, near Vienna, Jan. 14, 1853; d. Dresden, Aug. 17, 1925), was an excellent pianist, a pupil of Liszt; from 1890 taught piano at the Dresden Cons.

Rasbach, Oscar, American composer; b. Dayton, Ky., Aug. 2, 1888. He studied academic subjects in Los Angeles; music with Ludwig Thomas, Julius Albert Jahn, José Anderson, and A. J. Stamm. He was first engaged in business; then went to Vienna, where he took piano lessons with Leschetizky and studied theory with Hans Thornton. He returned to the U. S. in 1911 and settled in San Marino, Calif. He wrote 2 operettas, Dawn Boy and Open House, and a number of songs, of which Trees, to Joyce Kilmer's poem, became enormously popular.

Rascher, Sigurd M., German saxophone virtuoso; b. Elberfeld, May 15, 1907. He studied at the Stuttgart Cons.; gave concerts as saxophone soloist; taught at the Cons. of Copenhagen (1933-38); in 1939 went to the U. S.; taught at the Manhattan School, N. Y. (1940-42); was soloist with orchestras in special works written for him by Jacques Ibert, Frank Martin, and others. Publ. studies for his instrument.

Raselius (Rasel), Andreas, German composer and theorist; b. Hahnbach, near Amberg, c. 1563; d. Heidelberg, Jan. 6, 1602. Son of a Lutheran preacher; from 1581-84 studied at Leipzig Univ.; then appointed cantor at the Gymnasium in Regensburg; remained there till 1600, when he returned to Heidelberg as Hofkapellmeister to the Elector Palatine Frederick IV. In 1589 he publ. a music instruction book, Hexachordum seu Quaestiones musicae practicae. Other publ. works: Teutsche Sprüche (2 vols.: a 5, 1594; a 5-9, 1595); Regensburger Kirchenkontrapunkt (5-voiced Lutheran chorales; 1599); in MS: motets and Magnificats. A selection of his Latin and German motets was ed. by L. Roselius in the Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern (vol. 29-30). —Cf. J. Auer, A. Raselius (1892); L. Roselius, A. Raselius als Motettenkomponist (Berlin, 1924).

Rasse, François, Belgian composer; b. Helchin, near Ath, Jan. 27, 1873; d. Brussels, Jan. 4, 1955. He studied violin with Eugène Ysaÿe at the Brussels Cons., winning the Belgian Grand Prix de Rome in 1899; from 1925 to 1938 was director of the Liège Cons. —Works: operas, Déidamia (1905) and Sœur Béatrice (1938); ballet, Le Maître à danser (1908); for orch.: Symphonie romantique (1901), Symphonie mélodique (1903), Symphonie rythmique (1908), tone poems, Douleur (1911), Joie (1925), Aspiration (1946), a violin concerto (1906), La Dryade for clarinet and orch. (1943), Lamento for cello and orch. (1952); 2 string quartets (1906; 1950); a piano quartet (1941); numerous piano pieces; choral works; songs. A catalogue of his works was publ., with a biographical sketch, by the 'Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale' (1954).

Rastrelli, Joseph, German composer and conductor; b. Dresden, April 13, 1799; d. there, Nov. 15, 1842. He was a pupil of his father, the Italian musician Vincenzo Rastrelli (1760-1839); then studied with Mattei in Bologna. In 1830 he was appointed court conductor in Dresden; was Wagner's predecessor in this post. His opera, Salvator Rosa, oder Zwey Nächte in Rom (Dresden, July 22, 1832), was the first new German opera produced in Dresden after the disbanding of the Italian Opera Co. there.

Rasumovsky. See Razumovsky.

Ratez (räh-tä'), Émile-Pierre, French composer; b. Besançon, Nov. 5, 1851; d. Lille, May 19, 1934. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Bazin and Massenet (1872-81); played the viola in the orch. of the Opéra-Comique; in 1891 was appointed director of the Lille branch of the Paris Cons.; also conducted popular concerts there (1893-1906). He wrote the operas Lydéric (Lille, 1895) and Paula (Besançon, 1904); a ballet, La Guivre (Paris, 1925); a cantata, Scènes héroïques (1899); chamber music; publ. Traité élémentaire de contrepoint et de fugue and Traité d'harmonie théorique et pratique.

Rath (raht), Felix vom, German composer; b. Cologne, June 17, 1866; d. Munich, Aug. 25, 1905. He studied piano with Reinecke in Leipzig and composition with Thuille in Munich, where he settled. A composer of more than ordinary abilities, he publ. a piano concerto, a piano quartet, a violin sonata, and a number of piano pieces.

Rathaus, Karol, composer; b. Tarnopol, Poland, Sept. 16, 1895; d. New York, Nov. 21, 1954. He studied composition with Schreker in Berlin and in Vienna; taught in Berlin; in 1932 went to Paris, and in 1934 to London. In 1938 he settled in New York; in 1940 was appointed to the faculty of Queens College, and remained in that capacity until his death. His music is distinguished by a firm sense of contrapuntal development; the harmonies are maintained within a general tonal framework; the esthetic attitude is that of late Romanticism. Several of his works were performed at festivals of the International Society for Contemporary Music.—Works: ballet, Der letzte Pierrot (Berlin, May 7, 1927); opera, Fremde Erde (Berlin, Dec. 10, 1930); 3 symphonies (1922; 1923; 1942); Suite for Orch. (Liège Festival, Sept. 6, 1930); piano concerto (Berkeley, Calif., Festival, Aug. 1, 1942); Jacob's Dream for orch. (1941); Adagio for strings (1941); Polonaise symphonique (N. Y., Feb. 26, 1944); Vision dramatique, a symph. movement (Tel Aviv, April 4, 1948); 5 string quartets; Serenade for clarinet, violin, viola, cello, and piano; Eine kleine Serenade for 4 wind instruments and piano; clarinet sonata; violin sonata; 4 piano sonatas; Psalm 23; Diapason, for mixed chorus, baritone solo, and orch., to texts by Dryden and Milton. In 1953 he was commissioned to revise Mussorgsky's original orchestration of Boris Godunov for production at the Metropolitan Opera, which took place in March, 1953.—Cf. Boris Schwarz, Karol Rathaus, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1955).

Ratzenberger, Theodor, German pianist; b. Grossbreitenbach, April 14, 1840; d. Wiesbaden, March 8, 1879. He was a pupil of Liszt (piano) and Cornelius (composition); publ. some salon pieces for piano.

Raucheisen, Michael, German pianist; b. Rain-on-the-Lech, Bavaria, Feb. 10, 1889. He was educated in Munich; studied piano with Bussmeyer, and theory with Thuille. In 1913 he began to appear in Germany as accompanist; toured in the U. S. (1922-24); was accompanist to Fritz Kreisler. He married the American soprano Marion Talley on June 30, 1932 (marriage annulled, Jan. 28, 1933); he then married the Austrian soprano Maria Ivogün (1933).

Rauchenecker, Georg Wilhelm, German violinist and composer; b. Munich, March 8, 1844; d. Elberfeld, July 17, 1906. He studied violin with Joseph Walter; filled various posts as a theater violinist in France; then lived in Switzerland; conducted the Berlin Philharmonic for a season (1884). In 1889 he established a music school in Elberfeld, and conducted an orchestral society there until his death. He wrote the operas (all produced in Elberfeld): Die letzten Tage von Thule (1889), Ingo (1893), Don Quixote (1897), Sanna (1898), Zlatorog (1903), Der Florentiner (posthumous; Strasbourg, 1910); a symphony; Orientalische Fantasie for solo violin with string quintet; 6 string quartets; a string sextet; an octet for woodwind instruments.

Raudenbush, George King, American conductor; b. Jersey Shore, Pa., March 13, 1899; d. San Diego, Calif., May 26, 1956. He studied at the Detroit Cons., the New England Cons. and the American Institute of Applied Music; also in Germany; pupil of Chadwick, R. Huntington Woodman, M. Wilson, Schradieck, Volpe, Ysaÿe, and Th. Spiering; he made his début as a violinist in 1921 at Aeolian Hall, N. Y.; music director of the Theater Guild, and for Winthrop Ames and Walter Hampden; 1922-29, member of the N. Y. Symph. Orch.; 1929, founded the Harrisburg Symph. Orch. and conducted it until 1950; also founder (1939) and conductor (until 1943) of the Toledo Symph. Orch., and of the York, Pa., Symph. Orch.

Raugel (roh-zhél'), Félix, French musicologist; b. Saint-Quentin, Nov. 27, 1881. While attending the Lycée at Lille he studied music with Ch. Queste and F. Lecocq; continued his studies in 1900 in Paris with H. Libert and at the Schola Cantorum with Vincent d'Indy. Together with E. Borrel he founded in 1908 the 'Société Haendel' for the cultivation of early music.—Writings: Les Orgues de l'abbaye de St. Mihiel (1919); Recherches sur quelques maîtres de l'ancienne facture d'orgues française; Le Cantique français (Tourcoing, 1920); Les Organistes (1923); Les grandes orgues des églises de Paris et du département de la Seine (1927); Palestrina (1930); Les grandes orgues de Notre Dame (1934); Le Chant choral (1948); L'Oratorio (1948); ed. organ works of Handel, Scarlatti, Buxtehude, etc.

Ravanello, Oreste, Italian composer; b. Venice, Aug. 25, 1871; d. Padua, July 1, 1938. Pupil of P. Agostini and A. Girardi, and later at the Liceo Benedetto Marcello; 1893, 2nd organist at San Marco; 1895, 1st organist; 1898, maestro di cappella at San Antonio, Padua; 1902, prof. of organ at the Liceo Benedetto Marcello; 1914 again in Padua as director of the Istituto musicale; was for 3 years ed. of 'Il Repertorio pratico dell' Organista liturgico.' He composed more than 30 Masses a 1-6 (some with orch.), numerous motets a 2-8; 2 cantatas; a string quartet; a piano trio; a sonata for violin and organ; many pieces for organ and for piano; also publ. Il Ritmo del Canto Gregoriano, Cento Studi ed Esercizi per il Organo, etc.

Ravasenga, Carlo, Italian composer; b. Turin, Dec. 17, 1891; pupil of Cravero (composition), Navone (violin), and Vogliazzo (piano); composer and teacher in Turin; ed. of 'L'Araldo mus.' (Milan).— Works: the operas Una Tragedia fiorentina, after O. Wilde (Turin, 1916) and Il Giudizio di Don Giovanni (1916); Un Giorno di festa, orchestral suite (1916); Giuditta e Oloferno, symph. suite; Variazioni pittorresche for string quartet; Contrasto burlesco-sentimentale, for piano; violin sonata; piano sonata; etc.

Ravel (răh-věhl'), Maurice (Joseph), famous French composer; b. Ciboure, Basses-Pyrénées, March 7, 1875; d. Paris, Dec. 28, 1937. His father was a Swiss engineer, and his mother of Basque origin; Ravel was able to speak the Basque language fluently. The family moved to Paris when he was an infant. He began to study piano at the age of 7 with Henri Ghis (q.v.) and harmony at 12 with Charles-René. In 1889 he entered the Paris Cons.; studied piano with Anthiome; won 1st medal in 1891, and passed to the advanced class of Charles de Bériot; studied harmony with Émile Pessard. Still as a student he wrote and publ. a Menuet antique for piano and Habanera for 2 pianos (later included in the Rapsodie espagnole for orch.); these pieces, written at the age of 20, already reveal great originality in the treatment of old modes and of Spanish motifs; however, he continued to study; in 1897 he entered the classes of Gabriel Fauré (composition) and Gedalge (counterpoint and fugue); his well-known Pavane pour une Infante défunte for piano was written during that time (1899). On May 27, 1899, he appeared in public as conductor, in a performance of his overture Shéhérazade with the Société Nationale in Paris. The work was never published, but some elements were incorporated in Ravel's song cycle of the same title (1903). In 1901 he won the 2nd Prix de Rome with the cantata Myrrha; but the ensuing attempts to win the Grand Prix de Rome were unsuccessful; at his last try (1905) he was eliminated in the preliminaries, and so was not allowed to compete; the age limit then set an end to his further effort to enter. Since 6 prizes all went to pupils of Lenepveu, suspicion was aroused of unfair discrimination; Jean Marnold publ. an article, Le Scandale du Prix de Rome, in the 'Mercure de France' (June, 1905) in which he brought the controversy into the open; this precipitated a crisis at the Paris Cons.; its director, Théodore Dubois, resigned, and Gabriel Fauré took his place. By that time, Ravel had written a number of his most famous compositions, and was regarded by most French critics as a talented disciple of Debussy. No doubt Ravel's method of poetic association of musical ideas paralleled that of Debussy; his employment of unresolved dissonances and the enhancement of the diatonic style into pandiatonicism were techniques common to Debussy and his followers; but there were important differences: whereas Debussy adopted the scale of whole tones as an integral part of his musical vocabulary, Ravel resorted to it only occasionally; similarly, augmented triads appear much less frequently in Ravel's music than in Debussy's; in his writing for piano Ravel actually anticipated some of Debussy's usages; in a letter addressed to Pierre Lalo and publ. in 'Le Temps' (April 9, 1907) Ravel pointed out that at the time of the publication of his piano piece Jour d'eau (1902) Debussy had brought out only his suite Pour le Piano which had contained little that was novel. In Paris, in France, and soon in England and other European countries, Ravel's name became well known, but for many years he was still regarded as an ultra-modernist. A curious test of audience appreciation was a 'Concert des auteurs anonymes' presented by the Société Indépendante de Musique on May 9, 1911; the program included Ravel's Valses nobles et sentimentales, a set of piano pieces in the manner of Schubert; yet Ravel was recognized as the author. Inspired evocation of the past was but one aspect of Ravel's creative genius; in this style are written the Pavane pour une Infante défunte, Le Tombeau de Couperin, and La Valse; luxuriance of exotic colors marks his ballet Daphnis et Chloé, his opera L'Heure espagnole, the song cycles Shéhérazade and Chansons madécasses and his virtuosos pieces for piano,

RAVEL

Miroirs and Gaspard de la nuit; other works are deliberately austere, even ascetic in their pointed Classicism: the piano concertos, the piano sonatina, and some of his songs with piano accompaniment. His association with Diaghilev's Ballets Russes was most fruitful; for Diaghilev he wrote one of his masterpieces, Daphnis et Chloé; another ballet, Boléro, commissioned by Ida Rubinstein and performed at her dance recital at the Paris Opéra on Nov. 22, 1928, became Ravel's most spectacular success as an orchestral piece. —Ravel never married, and lived a life of semi-retirement, devoting most of his time to composition; he accepted virtually no pupils, although he gave friendly advice to Vaughan Williams and to others; he was never on the faculty of any school. As a performer, he was not brilliant; he appeared as pianist only in his own works, and often accompanied singers in programs of his songs; although he accepted engagements as conductor, his technique was barely sufficient to secure a perfunctory performance of his music. When the war broke out in 1914, he was rejected because of his frail physique, but he was anxious to serve; his application for air service was denied, but he was received in the ambulance corps at the front; his health gave way, and in the autumn of 1916 he was compelled to enter a hospital for recuperation. In 1922 he visited Amsterdam and Venice, conducting his music; in 1923 he appeared in London; in 1926 he went to Sweden, England, and Scotland; in 1928 he made an American tour as conductor and pianist; in the same year he received the degree of D. Mus. honoris causa at Oxford Univ. In 1929 he was honored at his native town of Ciboure by the inauguration of the Quai Maurice Ravel. Shortly afterwards, he began to experience difficulties in muscular coordination, and suffered from attacks of aphasia, symptoms indicative of a cerebral malady; a brain operation was performed on Dec. 19, 1937, but was not successful, and he died 9 days later. —Works: 1-act opera, L'Heure espagnole, text by Franc-Nohain (Paris, Opéra-Comique, May 19, 1911; Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., Nov. 7, 1925); the 'fantaisie lyrique' L'Enfant et les sortilèges, libretto by Colette (Monte Carlo, March 21, 1925); the ballets Daphnis et Chloé (Paris, June 8, 1912), Adélaïde ou le langage des fleurs, after the Valses nobles et sentimentales (Paris, April 22, 1912), Ma Mère l'Oye, elaborated from the piano suite (Paris Opéra, March 11, 1915), Le Tombeau de Couperin, choreographic poem from the orchestral suite (Ballets Suédois, Paris, Nov.

8, 1920); La Valse (Paris, Dec. 12, 1920), Boléro (Ida Rubinstein's dance recital, Paris, Nov. 22, 1928). For orch.: overture Shéhérazade (1898); Pavane pour une infante défunte (1899); Alborada del gracioso (Serenade of a Clown; 1905); Rapsodie espagnole (Paris, March 19, 1908); Daphnis et Chloé, 2 suites from the ballet (1909-11); Ma Mère l'Oye, after the piano duet (1912); Le Tombeau de Couperin (1917); La Valse (1920); Tzigane, for violin and orch. (also with piano accompaniment; 1924); Boléro (1928; 1st American performance, N. Y., Nov. 14, 1929); piano concerto in D for left hand alone, written for the one-armed pianist Paul Wittgenstein, who gave its first performance (Vienna, Nov. 27, 1931); piano concerto in G (Paris, Jan. 14, 1932, Ravel conducting, Marguerite Long, pianist). Chamber music: string quartet in F (1903); Introduction et Allegro, for harp, string quartet, flute, and clarinet (Paris, Feb. 22, 1907); piano trio (1914); sonata for violin and cello (1920-22); Berceuse sur le nom de Faure, for violin and piano (1922); violin sonata (1923-27); Tzigane, for violin and piano (London, April 26, 1924, Jelly d'Aranyi, violinist; Ravel at the piano, in a concert of Ravel works). Vocal works: Shéhérazade, song cycle for solo voice and orch. (Paris, May 17, 1904); Trois Poèmes de Mallarmé, for voice, piano, 2 flutes, 2 clarinets, and string quartet (1913); Trois chansons, for mixed chorus a cappella (1916); Chansons madécasses, for voice, flute, cello, and piano (1926); Don Quichotte à Dulcinée, 3 songs with orchestral accompaniment (Paris, Dec. 1, 1934). Songs: Ballade de la Reine morte d'aimer (1894); Un grand sommeil noir (1895); Sainte (1896); Deux Épigrammes de Clément Marot (1896); Si morne (1899, unpublished); Manteau de fleurs (1903); Le Noël des jouets, text by Ravel (1905); 5 Mélodies populaires grecques (1905; another Greek melody was publ. in the 'Revue Musicale,' Dec., 1938); Les grands vents venus d'outre-mer (1906); Histoires naturelles (1906); Sur l'herbe (1907); Vocalise en forme d'habanera (1907); 4 Chants populaires (1910); 2 Mélodies hébraïques (1914); Ronsard à son âme (1924); Rêves (1927). For piano: Sérénade grotesque (1894); Menuet antique (1895); Pavane pour une infante défunte (1899); Jeux d'eau (1901); Miroirs (5 pieces); Nocuelles, Oiseaux tristes, Une Barque sur l'océan, Alborada del Gracioso, La Vallée des cloches (1905); Sonatine (1903-5); Gaspard de la nuit; Ondine, Le Gibet, Scarbo (1908); Menuet sur le nom d'Haydn

(1909); Valses nobles et sentimentales (1911); Prélude (1913); A la manière de . . . Borodine, Chabrier (1913); Le Tombeau de Couperin (1914-17); Les Sites auriculaires, for 2 pianos (1895-96); Habanera and Entre cloches; Ma Mère l'Oye, 5 'pièces enfantines' for piano 4 hands, written for Christina Verger, age 6, and Germaine Duramy, age 10, and performed by them (Paris, April 20, 1920). Ravel was commissioned by Koussevitzky to make an orchestration of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition; it was first performed by Koussevitzky at one of his concerts (Paris, Oct. 19, 1922) and subsequently became one of the most popular orchestral suites; Ravel also orchestrated Chabrier's Menuet pompeux, arranged Debussy's Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune for 2 pianos, etc. —Bibliography: O. Séré, Musiciens français d'aujourd'hui (1911); Roland-Manuel, Maurice Ravel et son œuvre (1914; rev. ed., 1926; in English, London, 1941); M. O. Morris, Maurice Ravel, in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1921); A. Cœuroy, La Musique française moderne (1922); E. Vuillermoz, Musiques d'aujourd'hui (1923); E. B. Hill, Modern French Music (N. Y., 1924); F. H. Shera, Debussy and Ravel (London, 1925); Cecil Gray, A Survey of Contemporary Music (London, 1925); Roland-Manuel, Ravel et son œuvre dramatique (1928); M. D. Calvocoressi, Music and Ballet (London, 1933); Roland-Manuel, À la gloire de Ravel (1938); V. Jankélévitch, Maurice Ravel (Paris, 1939); R. Wild, ed., Ravel par quelques-uns de ses familiers (Paris, 1939); P. Landormy, Maurice Ravel, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1939); M. Goss, Bolero: The Life of Maurice Ravel (N. Y., 1940); M. D. Calvocoressi, Ravel's Letters to Calvocoressi, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1941); K. Akeret, Studien zum Klavierwerk von Maurice Ravel (Zürich, 1941); H. Jourdan-Morhange, Ravel et nous (Geneva, 1945); A. Machabey, Maurice Ravel (Paris, 1947); N. Demuth, Ravel (London, 1947); Roland-Manuel, Ravel (Paris, 1948; a new work); W.-L. Landowski, Maurice Ravel, sa vie, son œuvre (Paris, 1950); L. La Pégna, Ravel (Brescia, 1950); José Bruyer, Maurice Ravel, ou le Lyrisme et les sortilèges (Paris, 1950); W. Tappolet, Maurice Ravel: Leben und Werk (Olten, 1950); V. Perlemuter, Ravel d'après Ravel (Lausanne, 1953); V. Seroff, Maurice Ravel (N. Y., 1953); Marcelle Gerrard and René Chalupt, eds., Ravel au miroir de ses lettres (Paris, 1956). See also the special Ravel issues of the 'Revue Musicale' (April, 1925; Dec., 1938).

Ravenscroft, John, English composer; b. London; d. there, c. 1708. In 1695 he was in Rome, where he publ. a set of 'sonate a trè' under the Italianized name Giovanni Ravenscroft. He apparently was a pupil of Corelli, whose style he imitated. His op. 2, containing 6 sonatas for 2 violins with continuo, was publ. posthumously in London. —Cf. W. S. Newman, Ravenscroft and Corelli, in 'Music & Letters' (Oct., 1957).

Ravenscroft, Thomas, English composer and music editor; b. c. 1590; d. c. 1633. He was a chorister at St. Paul's Cathedral under Edward Pearce; in 1607 received his Mus. B. at Cambridge; from 1618 to 1622 he was music master at Christ's Hospital, London. —Publications: Pammelia: Musick's Miscellanie: or Mixed Varietie of Pleasant Roundelays and Delightful Catches of 3-10 Parts in one (1609; the first collection of rounds, catches, and canons printed in England; 2nd ed., 1618); Deuteromelia: or the Second Part of Musick's Melodie . . . (1609); Melismata: Muscical Phansies, Fitting the Court, Citie, and Countrey Humours, to 3, 4 and 5 Voyces (1611); A Briefe Discourse of the true (but neglected) use of Charactering the Degrees by their Perfection, Imperfection, and Diminution in Mensurable Musicke . . . (1614); and The Whole Booke of Psalmes: With the Hymnes Evangelicall and Songs Spirituall Composed into 4 parts by Sundry Authors . . . (1621; 2nd ed., newly corrected and enlarged, 1633; his best-known and most valuable work, containing numbers by 15 leading British composers, and some by Ravenscroft himself). —Cf. G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; p. 832 ff.).

Ravina, Jean-Henri, French composer; b. Bordeaux, May 20, 1818; d. Paris, Sept. 30, 1906. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Zimmerman (piano) and Laurent (theory); taught at the Cons. (1834-36); then made a concert tour as pianist in Russia (1858); later traveled in Spain; lived chiefly in Paris. He wrote elegant and attractive salon pieces for piano, which enjoyed considerable vogue, and eventually became part of the piano repertory: Nocturne in D♭, op. 13; Douce pensée, op. 41; Jour de bonheur, op. 55; Petit boléro, op. 62; Câlinaire, op. 86; also Études de style et de perfectionnement, op. 14; Études harmonieuses, op. 50; etc.; a piano concerto. He publ. 4-hand arrangements of all of Beethoven's symphonies.

Rawsthorne, Alan, English composer; b. Haslingden, May 2, 1905. He went to a dentistry school; did not begin to study music until he was 20, when he entered the Royal Manchester College of Music; later studied piano with Egon Petri in Berlin. Returning to England in 1932, he occupied various teaching posts; then devoted himself mainly to composition; settled in London. In 1935 he married the violinist, Jessie Hinchliffe. His music is essentially a revival of the contrapuntal style of the past, without much harmonic elaboration; but the rhythm is vigorous, and the melodic patterns are extremely fluid, often departing from the tonal center. —Works: Symphonic Studies (Warsaw Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, April 21, 1939); Cortèges, fantasy overture (London, July 23, 1945); concerto for strings (1949); symphony (1950); Concertante pastorale, for flute, horn, and strings (1951); A Canticle of Man, for baritone, chorus, flute, and strings (1952); clarinet concerto (1936); violin concerto (1947); oboe concerto (1947); piano concerto no. 1 (London, Dec. 7, 1946); piano concerto no. 2 (London, June 17, 1951); trio for flute, oboe, and piano (1936); Theme and Variations for 2 violins (1937); Theme and Variations for string quartet (1939); clarinet quartet (1948); viola sonata (1938); cello sonata (1949); several song cycles, to French and English words; Practical Cats, 'an entertainment for children,' for speaker and orch., to a text by T. S. Eliot (Edinburgh, Aug. 26, 1954); Madame Chrysanthème, ballet suite (London, Aug. 31, 1957); Overture Hallé, for the centennial of the Hallé Orch. (Manchester, Feb. 16, 1958). —Cf. K. Avery, Alan Rawsthorne, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (Feb., 1948); H. Howells, A Note on Alan Rawsthorne, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1951); A. E. F. Dickinson, The Progress of Alan Rawsthorne, in the 'Music Review' (May, 1951); A. Frank, Modern British Composers (London, 1954; pp. 74-79).

Razumovsky, Count (from 1815, Prince) Andrey Kyrillovitch, Russian diplomat and music lover; b. St. Petersburg, Nov. 2, 1752; d. Vienna, Sept. 23, 1836. He was the Russian ambassador at Vienna from 1793 to 1809; from 1808 to 1816 he maintained the celebrated Razumovsky Quartet (1st violin, Schuppanzigh; 2nd violin, Razumovsky; viola, Weiss; cello, Lincke), later known as the Schuppanzigh Quartet, with Sina as 2nd violin. Razumovsky's name was immortalized through the dedication to him of Beethoven's 3 string quartets, op. 59, and (with Prince Lobkowitz) Fifth and Sixth Symphonies. He was a munificent and prodigal patron of art, but after the destruction by fire of his Vienna palace in 1815, he gave up the quartet, and disappeared from musical history.

Read, Daniel, American composer; b. Attleboro, Mass., Nov. 16, 1757; d. New Haven, Dec. 4, 1836. He worked on a farm as a youth; studied mechanics, and was employed as surveyor at 18; began to compose at 19. He served in the Continental army as a private; at 21 he settled at New Stratford, then going to New Haven. In 1782-83, he maintained a singing school on the North River. He also was a comb-maker. At his death, he left a MS collection of some 400 tunes by him and other composers. —Publications: The American Singing Book, or a New and Easy Guide to the art of Psalmody, devised for the use of Singing Schools in America (New Haven, 1785; subsequent eds., 1786, 1792, 1793, 1795); The American Musical Magazine (with Amos Doolittle, New Haven, 12 numbers, May, 1786 to Sept., 1787); Supplement to The American Singing Book (New Haven, 1787); The Columbian Harmonist, in 3 books: no. 1 (New Haven, 1793), no. 2 (New Haven, 1794; 2nd ed., with numerous additions, 1798; 3rd ed., with further additions, 1801), no. 3 (New Haven, 1795); all 3 books in 1 vol. (New Haven, 1795; 2nd ed. completely revised, Dedham, 1804; 3rd ed., Boston, 1807; 4th ed., Boston, 1810). Shortly before his death he completed the compilation, Musica Ecclesia, or Devotional Harmony, but it remained unpublished. Many of his tunes—e.g., Sherburne, Windham, and Lisbon—achieved great popularity. —Cf. G. Hood, Daniel Read, in the 'Musical Herald' (N. Y., Oct., 1882); F. J. Metcalf, American Composers and Compilers of Sacred Music (N. Y., 1925); I. Lowens, Daniel Read's World, in 'Notes' (March, 1952). See also the 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Read, Gardner, American composer; b. Evanston, Ill., Jan. 2, 1913. He studied theory at the Northwestern Univ. School of Music; conducting with Bakaleinikoff, and composition at the Eastman School of Music with Paul White, Bernard Rogers, and Howard Hanson (Mus. Bac., 1936; M.M., 1937); traveled in Europe on a Cromwell Fellowship (1938-39) for study with Pizzetti in Rome and Sibelius in Finland, the latter cut short owing to the imminence of war. Returning to the U. S. he studied with Aaron Copland at the Berkshire Music Center; taught composition at the St. Louis Institute of Music (1941-43), at the Kansas City Cons. of Music (1943-45), and at the Cleveland Institute of Music (1945-48); appointed composer-in-residence and prof. of composition, Boston Univ. College of Music, in 1948. He was awarded a State Dept. grant in 1957 for lecturing and conducting in Mexico. A prolific composer (more than 100 op. numbers), he has written in every genre except opera. —Works: For orch.: The Lotus-Eaters (Interlochen, Mich., Aug. 12, 1932); Sketches of the City, symph. suite after Carl Sandburg (Rochester, April 18, 1934); The Painted Desert (Interlochen, Mich., July 28, 1935); symph. No. 1 (1936; N. Y., Nov. 4, 1937; awarded 1st prize of $1,000 in the American Composer's Contest sponsored by the N. Y. Philharmonic); Fantasy, for viola and orch. (Rochester, April 22, 1937); Prelude and Toccata (Rochester, April 29, 1937); Suite for string orch. (N. Y., Aug. 5, 1937); Passacaglia and Fugue (Chicago, June 30, 1938); The Golden Journey to Samarkand, for chorus, soloists, and orch. (1936-39); Pan e Dafni (1940); American Circle (Evanston, March 15, 1941); First Overture (Indianapolis, Nov. 6, 1943); symph. No. 2 (awarded 1st prize of $1,000, Paderewski Fund Competition, 1942; Boston, Nov. 26, 1943, composer conducting); Night Flight, tone-poem after Antoine de St.-Exupéry (Rochester, April 27, 1944); cello concerto (1945); Threnody, for flute and strings (Rochester, Oct. 21, 1946); A Bell Overture (Cleveland, Dec. 22, 1946); Partita for small orch. (Rochester, May 4, 1947); Pennsylvaniana Suite (Pittsburgh, Nov. 21, 1947); symph. No. 3 (1948); Quiet Music for Strings (Washington, May 9, 1948); Dance of the Locomotives (Boston, June 26, 1948); Sound Piece, for brass and percussion (Boston, May 11, 1949); The Temptation of St. Anthony, dance-symph. after Flaubert (Chicago, April 9, 1953); Toccata Giocosa (Louisville, March 13, 1954); Vernal Equinox (Brockton, Mass., April 12, 1955); symph. No. 4 (1958). Vocal works: 4 Nocturnes for voice and orch. (Rochester, April 3, 1935); From a Lute of Jade, for voice and orch. (Rochester, March 15, 1937); Songs for a Rainy Night, for voice and orch. (Rochester, April 27, 1942); many songs and choruses. Chamber music: Suite for string quartet (1936); piano quintet (1945); Sonata Brevis, for violin and piano (1948); Nine by Six for wind sextet (1951); string quartet No. 1 (1957); Sonoric Fantasia, for celesta, harp, and harpsichord (1958). For organ: Passacaglia and Fugue (1937); Suite for Organ (co-winner, 1st prize of $1,000, Penn. College for Women, Pittsburgh, 1950); 8 Preludes on Old Southern Hymns (1951). Piano music: 3 Satirical Sarcasms (1941); Driftwood Suite (1943); Dance of the Locomotives (1944); Sonata da Chiesa (1948); Touch Piece (1949). He has publ. a valuable and unique reference work, Thesaurus of Orchestral Devices (N. Y., 1953).

Reading, John, English organist; d. Winchester, 1692. Lay-vicar of Lincoln Cathedral, 1667, and Master of the Choristers, 1670; organist of Winchester Cathedral, 1675-81; then of Winchester College, for which he composed the well-known song 'Dulce Domum' (publ. in Hayes' 'Harmonia Wiccamica').

Reading, John, son of preceding; b. 1677; d. London, Sept. 2, 1764. Chorister of the Chapel Royal, under Blow; organist of Dulwich College, 1700-02; lay-vicar at Lincoln Cathedral 1702, and Master of the Choristers, 1703; later organist in several London churches. —Publications: A Book of New Anthems and A Book of New Songs with Symphonies and a Thorough Bass fitted to the Harpsichord.

Rebel, François, French composer; b. Paris, June 19, 1701; d. there, Nov. 7, 1775. He became an excellent violinist under the tutelage of his father, Jean-Féry Rebel. He was in charge of the '24 violins' of the King and master of the royal chamber-music. From 1757 to 1767 Rebel and his lifelong friend and collaborator, François Francœur, were directors of the Académie Royale de Musique (the Opéra). The operas composed jointly by Rebel and Francœur and produced at Paris include Pirame et Thisbé (Oct. 17, 1726) and Scanderberg (Oct. 27, 1735). — Cf. L. de La Laurencie, Une Dynastie de musiciens aux XVII<sup>e</sup> et XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècles: Les Rebel, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. 7).

Rebello, João Lourenço (João Soares), Portuguese composer; b. Caminha, 1609; d. San Amaro, Nov. 16, 1661. He was maestro to King John IV of Portugal, who dedicated to Rebello his Defensa de la música moderna (1649). Psalms a 16, Magnificats, Lamentations, and Misereres by Rebello were publ. at Rome (1657).

Reber (rû-bär'), Napoléon-Henri, French composer; b. Mulhouse, Alsace, Oct. 21, 1807; d. Paris, Nov. 24, 1880. Pupil of Reicha and Le Sueur at the Paris Cons.; became prof. of harmony in 1851, succeeded Halévy as prof. of composition in 1861 (being succeeded in turn by Saint-Saëns in 1880), and was also inspector of the branch conservatories from 1871. —Works: ballet, Le Diable amoureux (1840); the comic operas La Nuit de Noël (1848), Le Père Gaillard (1852), Les Papillottes de M. Benoist (1853), and Les Dames capitaines (1857), all produced at the Opéra-Comique; also 4 symphonies; chamber music; piano pieces for 2 and 4 hands; 33 songs; vocalises for soprano or tenor (op. 16), etc.; and a Traité d'harmonie (1862, and several later eds.). —Cf. Saint-Saëns, Notice sur H. Reber (Paris, 1881).

Řebíček (r'zhā'-bī-chěhk), Josef, Czech conductor and composer; b. Prague, Feb. 7, 1844; d. Berlin, March 24, 1904. He studied violin at the Prague Cons.; was violinist in the court orch. in Weimar; then played in theater orchestras in Prague and Wiesbaden; conducted opera in Warsaw, Budapest, etc.; from 1897 till 1903 was conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic, succeeding Franz Mannstädt. He wrote Huldigungsfestklänge (on old Dutch themes) for orch.; a symphony; a violin sonata; many pieces for violin.

Rebikov (rēh'-bē-kōhv), Vladimir Ivanovitch, Russian composer; b. Krasnoyarsk, Siberia, May 31, 1866; d. Yalta, Dec. 1, 1920. He studied at the Moscow Cons. with Klenovsky; then in Berlin and Vienna. He then went to Odessa, where his first opera, In the Thunderstorm, was produced in 1894. In 1898 he moved to Kishinev, Bessarabia, where he organized a branch of the Imperial Russian Musical Society. In 1901 he settled in Moscow, remaining there until 1919; he spent his last year of life in the Crimea. His early works (op. 1-9) are very much under the influence of Tchaikovsky; but beginning with op. 10 (Esquisses for piano) he made a decisive turn towards a modern style; he became particularly fond of the whole-tone scale and its concomitant, the augmented triad; claimed priority in this respect over Debussy and other European composers; his piano piece, Les Démons s'amuse, is based entirely on the whole-tone scale. He declared that music is a language of emotion, and therefore could not be confined to set forms, or to arbitrarily defined consonances. An entirely new departure is represented by his Méломимiques (op. 11, 15, 17), short lyric pieces for piano, in which mimicry and suggestion are used in an Impressionistic manner. He also wrote several vocal 'melomimics' (op. 1, 16, 19, 20), 3 'rhythmo-declamations' for piano (op. 32), and 20 for voice and piano. In these compositions he abandoned cohesive form in favor of a free association of melodic and rhythmic phrases, scantily harmonized; prevalence of esthetic theories over musical substance made his experiments ephemeral. A melodious waltz from his children's opera, The Christmas Tree, is his most popular composition. —Works: the operas In the Thunderstorm (Odessa, Feb. 27, 1894) and The Christmas Tree (Moscow, Oct. 31, 1903); a musico-psychological pantomime, Little Snow White (Tiflis, 1909); a 2-act fairy opera, Prince Charming; scenic fables after Krylov: The Grasshopper and the Ant, A Dinner with a Bear, The Ass and the Nightingale, The Funeral, The Liar (Moscow, Dec. 27, 1903); several 'musico-psychological tableaux': Slavery and Freedom, Songs of the Harp, The Nightmare, etc.; numerous piano pieces (Scènes bucoliques, Silhouettes, Dans la Forêt, Chansons blanches, Idylles, Les Danses, Les Démons s'amuse, etc.); a suite for 4 hands; etc. He publ. numerous articles on musical esthetics, particularly relating to modern music; translated into Russian Gevaert's Traité d'Instrumentation. —Cf. M. Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers (N. Y., 1917); N. Nabokov, Old Friends and New Music (Boston, 1951; pp. 148-50).

Rebling, Gustav, German organist; b. Barby (Magdeburg), July 10, 1821; d. Magdeburg, Jan. 9, 1902. He was a pupil of Fr. Schneider at Dessau, 1836-39; then organist of the French church, Magdeburg, and teacher in the seminary in 1847; 1853, conductor of the cathedral choir, and singing teacher at the Gymnasium; 1856, 'Royal Music-Director'; 1858, organist of the Johannisikirche; retired in 1897. —Works: Psalms a 4-8; motets; pieces for organ and piano; choruses and songs; 2 cello sonatas; etc.

Rebner, Adolf, Austrian violinist; b. Vienna, Nov. 21, 1876. Pupil of Grün at the Cons. there, graduating in 1891 as winner of the 1st prize; continued his studies under Marsick in Paris. Settled in 1896 in Frankfurt, where he was for some years concertmaster at the opera, succeeded Heermann in 1904 as professor of violin at Hoch's Cons. He became especially renowned as leader of his own quartet; with it, he made successful tours of Germany, France, Spain, and England. In 1934 he left Germany and went to Vienna. —His son Edward Wolfgang Rebner (b. Frankfurt, Dec. 20, 1910), an excellent pianist and accompanist (toured with E. Feuermann), settled in the U. S. in 1939. He has written some chamber music and piano pieces.

Rechid, Djemal. See Rey, Cemal Reshid.

Redford, John, English organist, composer, and poet; d. London, 1547. He was one of the vicars-choral of St. Paul's Cathedral in London. Surviving in MS are a number of fantasias on plainsong melodies (2 of which are printed in Davison and Apel, Historical Anthology of Music, vol. I, Cambridge, Mass., 1946) and 3 motets. —Cf. C. F. Pfatteicher, John Redford (Kassel, 1934) and 'Grove's Dictionary' 5th ed.

Redhead, Richard, English composer of church music; b. Harrow, March 1, 1820; d. Hallingey, April 27, 1901. He served as organist in various churches in London; wrote much vocal music; edited the collections 'Cathedral and Church Choir Book,' 'Parochial Church Tune Book,' and 'The Universal Organist.'

Redlich, Hans Ferdinand, musicologist; b. Vienna, Feb. 11, 1903. He received his higher education at the universities of Vienna, Munich, and Frankfurt; Dr. phil., Frankfurt, with the dissertation, Das Problem des Stilwandels in Monteverdis Madrigalwerk (publ. Leipzig, 1931); conducted opera in Charlottenburg-Berlin (1924-25) and at the Municipal Theater of Mainz (1925-29). In 1939 he went to England, settling at Letchworth (British subject, 1947). He was engaged as conductor at various provincial schools, and also in London; lectured at Cambridge Univ. (from 1942); was also active in radio work for the BBC, while continuing his main work, musicology; edited compositions by Monteverdi; composed a Concerto grosso (1927), Hölderlin Trilogy for tenor and orch. (1946), etc. In 1955 he was appointed lecturer at Edinburgh Univ. —Books: Gustav Mahler: eine Erkenntnis (1919); Claudio Monteverdi, I: Das Madrigalwerk (1932); Claudio Monteverdi: Leben und Werk (Olten, 1949; in English, London, 1952); Bruckner and Mahler (N. Y., 1955); Alban Berg: The Man and His Music (London, 1957).

Redman, Harry Newton, American organist and composer; b. Mount Carmel, Ill., Dec. 26, 1869. He studied organ and composition with Chadwick; from 1897 taught at the New England Cons., Boston; publ. 2 string quartets, 2 violin sonatas, an Octave Method and studies for piano; 2 albums of songs, etc. About 1925 he abandoned music and devoted himself chiefly to painting; exhibited in Boston as late as 1957.

Rée (râ), Anton, Danish pianist and pedagogue; b. Aarhus, Oct. 5, 1820; d. Copenhagen, Dec. 20, 1886. He studied with Karl Krebs in Hamburg; had a few lessons with Chopin in Paris. In 1842 he returned to Denmark and settled in Copenhagen as a teacher. He publ. Musikhistoriske Momenter and a book of exercises, Bidrag til Klavierspillet Teknik; Danses caractéristiques for piano; etc.

Rée, Louis, pianist; cousin of Anton Rée; b. Edinburgh, Oct. 15, 1861; d. Vienna, Feb. 28, 1939. He was a pupil of Leschetizky in Vienna; settled there as a teacher; gave duo-piano concerts with his wife, Susanne Pilz-Rée (1865-1937). He wrote a concerto for 2 pianos (1925); publ. transcriptions for 2 pianos and various other works.

Reed, Herbert Owen, American composer and teacher; b. Odessa, Mo., June 17, 1910. He studied at the Univ. of Missouri and Louisiana State Univ.; subsequently entered the Eastman School of Music, under Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers (Ph. D., 1939). In 1939 he was appointed instructor at Michigan State Univ., and later became chairman of the theory dept. there. —Works: a 'folk opera,' Michigan Dream (1955); ballet-pantomime, The Masque of the Red Death, after Poe (1936); symph. poem, Evangeline (Rochester, March 30, 1938); symph. No. 1 (Rochester, April 27, 1939); Overture (Rochester, Oct. 27, 1941); Spiritual, for band (1947); a cello concerto (1949); a string quartet (1937); Scherzo for clarinet and piano (1947); La Fiesta Mexicana, a folk-song symph. for concert band (1956); several piano pieces; songs and choruses. He publ. A Workbook in the Fundamentals of Music (N. Y., 1946); Basic Music (N. Y., 1954).

Reed, Thomas German, versatile English musician; b. Bristol, June 27, 1817; d. London, March 21, 1888. Under the guidance of his father, he appeared in Bath as a child of 10 in the various capacities of singer, pianist, and actor. After the family moved to London (1832), he was active as teacher and arranger. In 1838 he succeeded his father as conductor of the Haymarket Theatre, remaining at that post until 1851. In 1844 he married Priscilla Horton (b. Birmingham, Jan. 1, 1818; d. Bexley Heath, March 18, 1895), an actress and a singer. Together they started the celebrated series 'Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's Entertainment' (1855), which included productions of operettas by Offenbach, Balfe, Clay, Sullivan, etc. These entertainments enjoyed great success, and were continued by his son Alfred German Reed, who died in London on March 10, 1895, a few days before the death of his mother.

Reed, William Henry, English violinist and composer; b. Frome, July 29, 1876; d. Dumfries, July 2, 1942. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London; was a violinist in the London Symph. Orch. at its foundation in 1904; then taught violin at the Royal College of Music; was concertmaster of the London Symph. Orch. from 1912 to 1935. He was a close friend of Elgar, and publ. a book, Elgar as I Knew Him (1936). His works include the orchestral sketches The Lincoln Imp (Hereford Festival, 1921) and Aesop's Fables (Hereford Festival, 1924); a violin concerto; Rhapsody for violin and orch.; 5 string quartets; violin pieces; songs; etc.

Reed, William Leonard, English composer; b. London, Oct. 16, 1910. He studied at the Royal College of Music in London with Herbert Howells; received the degrees of M. A. and D. Mus. at Oxford. He toured in the U. S. in 1947. —Works for orch.: Recitative and Dance (1934); Jig (1935), Pantomime (1935), Scherzo (1937), Hornpipe (1939), Doctor Johnson's Suite, for strings (1944), Suite for clarinet and strings (1942); various pieces for piano quintet, string quartet, and other chamber groups; suites for violin and piano, and viola and piano; piano pieces; songs.

Reese, Gustave, eminent American musicologist; b. New York, Nov. 29, 1899; studied at N. Y. Univ. (LL.B. and Mus. Bac.), where he has taught, with varying titles, since 1927 (except in the season 1933-34 and from the season 1937-38 to that of 1944-45), full prof., 1955; from 1933 to 1944 associate editor, 1944-45 editor, of the 'Mus. Quarterly'; 1935, co-founder of the American Musicological Society (secretary, 1935-46; vice-president, 1946-50; president, 1950-52); 1954, was one of the organizers of the Renaissance Society of America;

1940-45, head of publication dept., G. Schirmer, Inc.; 1945-55, director of publication of Carl Fischer, Inc., with which firm he is still (1958) connected in an advisory capacity. Mus. Doc. (hon.c.), Chicago Musical College, 1947; guest teacher at Univ. of Southern California (1953), Univ. of Michigan (1951, 1952), Harvard Univ. (1958). Author of Music in the Middle Ages (N. Y., 1940); Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954); Fourscore Classics of Music Literature (N. Y., 1957); publ. valuable articles in the 'Mus. Quarterly,' 'Notes,' 'Journal of the American Musicological Society,' etc.; contributor to the 4th ed. of Grove's 'Dictionary of Music and Musicians' and Thompson's 'International Cyclopaedia of Music and Musicians.'

Reeve, William, English composer; b. London, 1757; d. there, June 22, 1815. Pupil of Richardson; organist at Totness, Devon, 1781-83; returned to London, and composed operettas, pantomimes, and incidental music for plays, for Astley's Circus and Covent Garden (1791); in 1792, organist of St. Martin's, Ludgate Hill; from 1802, part-proprietor of Sadler's Wells Theatre. Besides music to some 40 plays, he composed glees and songs; the song 'I am a friar in orders grey,' in the play of Merry Sherwood, was very popular.

Reeves, John Sims, English tenor; b. Shooter's Hill, Kent, probably Sept. 26 (baptized Oct. 25), 1818; d. Worthing, London, Oct. 25, 1900. Learned to play several instruments; had lessons with J. B. Cramer (piano) and W. H. Callcott (harmony). Début (as a baritone) at Newcastle-on-Tyne, in the role of Rodolfo (Son-nambula), in 1839. Studied further and sang minor tenor parts at Drury Lane, 1842-3; studied in Paris under Bordogni, and in Milan under Mazzucato, appearing at La Scala, 1846, as Edgardo (Lucia). He retired in 1891, but reappeared in concerts in 1893, and even made a successful tour in South Africa in 1896. Publ. Sims Reeves; His Life and Recollections Written by Himself (London, 1888); My Jubilee, or Fifty Years of Artistic Life (London, 1889); Sims Reeves On the Art of Singing (1900). —Cf. H. S. Edwards, The Life and Artistic Career of Sims Reeves (London, 1881); Ch. E. Pearce, Sims Reeves: Fifty Years of Music in England (1924). See also 'Modern English Biography' vol. VI.

Refardt, Edgar, eminent Swiss musicologist and bibliographer; b. Basel, Aug. 8, 1877. He studied law; obtained the degree of Dr. jur.; in 1915 was appointed librarian and cataloguer of the musical collection of the Municipal Library of Basel; publ. valuable bibliographical works on Swiss music; also essays on various literary and musical subjects. — Publications: Verzeichnis der Aufsätze zur Musik in den nichtmusikalischen Zeitschriften der Universitätsbibliothek Basel . . . (Leipzig, 1925); Historisch-biographisches Musikerlexikon der Schweiz (1928); Hans Huber: Leben und Werk eines Schweizer Musikers (1944; definitive biography of Huber; superseded Refardt's previous writings on Huber); Johannes Brahms, Anton Bruckner, Hugo Wolf: drei Wiener Meister des 19. Jahrhunderts (1949); Musik in der Schweiz (collection of articles; 1952); Thematischer Katalog der Instrumentalmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts in den Handschriften der Universitätsbibliothek Basel, ed. by Hans Zehntner (Basel, 1957); etc.

Refice (rēh-fē'-chēh), Licinio, Italian composer of sacred music; b. Patrica, near Rome, Feb. 12, 1883; d. Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 11, 1954 (while conducting his mystery play, Santa Cecilia). He studied with Falchi and Renzi at Santa Cecilia in Rome; in 1910 became teacher of church music at the Scuola Pontifica Superiore di Musica Sacra. In 1947 he toured the U. S. as director of the Roman Singers of Sacred Music (99 concerts). His works include the operas Cecilia (Rome, 1934) and Margherita da Cortona (Milan, 1938); the cantatas La Vedova di Naim (1912), Maria Magdalena (Rome, 1917), and Il Martirio di S. Agnese (Rome, 1919); Stabat Mater (1917); Te Deum (1918); Missa Jubilaei (1925), Missa Italica (1944); the choral symph. poems Dantis poetae transitus (Ravenna, 1921) and Il Tristito francescano (Assisi, 1925); a Requiem; the sacred play ('azione sacra') Santa Cecilia (Rome, Feb. 15, 1934); the oratorios Cananea and La Samaritana (very successful); hymns; motets; etc.

Regamey, Constantin, composer; b. Kiev, Jan. 28, 1907. He studied at the Warsaw Cons. (philology), and taught Sanskrit at the Univ. of Warsaw; edited the periodical 'Muzyka polska' (1937-39); in 1944 settled in Lausanne as prof. of Slavonic languages at the Univ. As a composer, he adopted the advanced technique of atonal music. — Works: Chansons persanes, for baritone and orch. (1943); quintet for violin, clarinet, bassoon, cello, and piano (1944); other chamber music. — Cf. H. Jaccard, Initiation à la musique contemporaine: trois compositeurs vaudois: Raffaele d'Alessandro, Constantin Regamey, Julien-François Zbinden (Lausanne, 1955).

Reger (rā'-gēr), Max, eminent German composer; b. Brand, Bavaria, March 19, 1873; d. Leipzig, May 11, 1916. In 1874 his father, a school teacher and good organist (d. 1905 in Munich), removed to Weiden, where Reger attended the Realschule. Although he was intended for the schoolmaster's career, he received thorough instruction on the piano and harmonium from his father, and on the organ and in theory from Lindner. At an early age he began to write piano pieces and chamber music, and after hearing Die Meistersinger and Parsifal in Bayreuth (1888) he gave expression to the emotions created in him by those masterpieces in an ambitious symphonic poem, Héroïde funèbre (score lost). In 1889 he passed the entrance examination for the teachers' seminary. But by that time music had taken such complete possession of him that he submitted a number of MSS to H. Riemann, who immediately recognized the young man's unusual talent. Accordingly, Reger became Riemann's pupil at the Sondershausen Cons. in April, 1890, and in 1891 followed him to the Wiesbaden Cons., where he continued his studies till 1895, and also taught piano and organ (till 1896). Having served a year in the army, he settled in Weiden as composer, writing the works up to about op. 50. However, he did not attract general attention until 1901, when he removed to Munich, whence he undertook pianistic tours through Germany, Austria, and Switzerland. During 1905-06 he was prof. of counterpoint at the Königliche Akademie der Tonkunst, and conductor of the 'Porges'scher Gesangsverein'; in 1907 he was called to Leipzig as Musikdirektor at the Univ. (also conductor of the Univ. chorus 'St. Pauli') and prof. of composition at the Cons.; the former post he resigned in 1908, but the latter he retained till his death; 1911-15, Hofkapellmeister in Meiningen; then in Jena and Leipzig. He died suddenly of paralysis of the heart. In 1908 he was made Dr. phil. (hon. c., Univ. of Jena); in 1911 Hofrat, and in 1913 General-Musikdirektor. — Reger won the greatest number of admirers through his remarkably fine works for organ. A German Max Reger Society was founded in 1920, with branches in many cities; another society was established in Austria. The Max Reger Archives (containing most of his MSS) are at Weimar. A complete ed. of Reger's works was begun in 1954 by Breitkopf & Härtel. WORKS: For orch.: Op. 90, Sinfonietta; op. 95, Serenade; op. 100, Variationen und Fuge über ein lustiges Thema von J. A. Hiller; op. 108, Symphonischer Prolog zu einer Tragödie; op. 120, Eine Lustspielouvertüre; op. 123, Konzert im alten Stil; op. 125, Romantische Suite; op. 128, Vier Tondichtungen nach Böcklin; op. 130, Ballet-Suite; op. 132, Variationen und Fuge über ein Thema von Mozart; op. 140, Eine vaterländische Ouvertüre; op. 50, Zwei Romanzen for violin and orch.; op. 101, violin concerto in A; op. 114, piano concerto in F minor. —Vocal works with orch.: Op. 21, Hymne an den Gesang (men's chorus); op. 71, Gesang der Verklärten (mixed chorus a 5); op. 106, Psalm 100 (mixed chorus and organ); op. 112, Die Nonnen (mixed chorus and organ); op. 119, Die Weihe der Nacht (alto solo and mixed chorus); op. 124, An die Hoffnung (also solo); op. 126, Römischer Triumphgesang (men's chorus). —Chamber music: Op. 118, string sextet in F; op. 64, piano quintet in C minor; op. 113, piano quartet in D minor; 5 string quartets: op. 54 (G minor and A), op. 74 (D minor), op. 109 (E $\flat$ ), op. 121 (F $\sharp$  minor); 2 piano trios: op. 2 (B minor, for piano, violin, and viola), op. 102 (E minor); op. 77a, Serenade for flute, violin, and viola; op. 77b, trio for flute, violin, and viola; op. 103a, Suite for flute and piano (A minor); 9 violin sonatas: op. 1 (D minor), op. 3 (D), op. 41 (A), op. 72 (C), op. 84 (F $\sharp$  minor), op. 103b (Zwei kleine Sonaten, D minor and A), op. 122 (E minor), op. 139 (C minor); op. 93, Suite im alten Stil for violin and piano; 4 cello sonatas: op. 5 (F minor), op. 28 (G minor), op. 78 (F), op. 116 (A minor); 3 clarinet sonatas: op. 49 (A and F minor), op. 107 (B $\flat$ ); op. 42, 4 sonatas for violin solo; op. 117, Präludien und Fugen for violin solo; op. 131, 3 suites for cello solo.—For organ: Op. 16, Suite in E minor; op. 27, Fantasy on Ein' feste Burg; op. 29, Fantasie und Fuge in C minor; op. 30, Fantasy on Freu dich sehr, o meine Seele; op. 33, Sonata in F $\sharp$  minor; op. 40, 2 Fantasies on Wie schön leucht' uns der Morgenstern and Straf mich nicht in deinem Zorn; op. 46, Fantasie und Fuge über BACH; op. 52, 3 Fantasies on Alle Menschen müssen sterben, Wachet auf! ruft uns die Stimme, and Hallelujah! Gott zu loben; op. 57, Symphonische Phantasie und Fuge; op. 60, Sonata in D minor; op. 67, 52 Vorspiele to the chorales in general use; op. 73, Variationen und Fuge über ein Originalthema; op. 92, Suite in G minor; op. 127, Introduktion, Passacaglia und Fuge in E minor; numerous minor pieces: op. 7, 56, 59, 63, 65, 69, 79, 80, 85, 129.—For piano: 4 hands: op. 9, Walzer-Capricen; op. 10, Deutsche Tänze; op. 22, Sechs Walzer; op. 34, Cinq pièces pittoresques; op. 58, Sechs Burlesken; op. 94, Sechs Stücke; op. 96, Introduktion, Passacaglia und Fuge; for piano solo: op. 17, Aus der Jugendzeit (20 pieces); op. 18, Improvisationen (8 pieces); op. 20, Fünf Humoresken; op. 24, Six Morceaux; op. 25, Aquarellen; op. 26, Sieben Fantasiestücke; op. 32, Sieben Charakterstücke; op. 36, Bunte Blätter (9 pieces); op. 44, Zehn kleine Vortragsstücke; op. 45, Sechs Intermezzi; op. 53, Silhouetten (7 pieces); op. 81, Variationen und Fuge über ein Thema von Bach; op. 82, Aus meinem Tagebuche (22 pieces); op. 89, 2 Sonatinen (F, A); op. 99, Sechs Präludien und Fugen; op. 115, Episoden (2 books); op. 134, Variationen und Fuge über ein Thema von Ph. Telemann; for 2 pianos: op. 86, Variationen und Fuge über ein Thema von Beethoven.—Mixed choruses a cappella, op. 6, 39 (a 6); men's choruses do., op. 38, 83; women's choruses do., op. 111b; duets, op. 14, 111a; about 300 songs, op. 3, 4, 5, 12, 15, 23, 31, 35, 37, 43, 48, 51, 55, 62, 66, 68, 70, 75, 76 (60 Schlichte Weisen), 88, 97, 98, 104.—Sacred music: Op. 19, Zwei geistliche Gesänge; op. 61, Leicht ausführbare Kompositionen zum gottesdienstlichen Gebrauch in der katholischen Kirche (38 motets for mixed voices); op. 105, Zwei geistliche Lieder; op. 110, Motets for mixed chorus a cappella (a 5); op. 137, Zwölf geistliche Lieder.—Without opus number: Der evangelische Kirchenchor (I. 40 mixed choruses for all festivals [4 series]; II, Cantata O wie selig for mixed chorus, string orch., and organ; III, Cantata, O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden (for alto and tenor soli, mixed chorus, violin and oboe soli, and organ). Men's and mixed choruses, and songs (sacred and secular).—For piano: 2 books of canons in all major and minor keys; 4 Spezialstudien für die linke Hand allein; minor pieces.—Transcriptions: For organ: Schule des Triospiels (with K. Straube; Bach's 2-part Inventions); 15 clavier compositions of Bach. For piano 4 hands: Bach's Prelude and Fugue (D), Toccata and Fugue (D minor); Fantasia (G), Prelude and Fugue (G), Prelude and Fugue (A minor), Fantasia and Fugue (G minor), Toccata and Fugue (E), Prelude and Fugue (E minor); Bach's orchestral Suites and Brandenburg Concertos.—For piano solo: H. Wolf's overture to Penthesilea and Italienische Serenade; d'Albert's overture to Esther; songs of Jensen, Brahms, H. Wolf, and R. Strauss.—Arrangements: 5 Spezialstudien (Chopin); 12 madrigals for men's chorus (Hassler, Lully, Donati, Morley, Praetorius, Meyland); 6 madrigals for mixed chorus (Gastoldi, Morley, Lully).—He also wrote Beiträge zur Modulationslehre (1903).—BIBLIOGRAPHY: R. Braungart, Max Reger, in vol. II of 'Monographien modern-er Musiker' (Leipzig, 1907); G. Robert-Tornow, Max Reger und Karl Straube (Göttingen, 1907); V. Junk, Max Reger als Orchesterkomponist (Leipzig, 1910); W. Fischer, Über die Wiedergabe der Orgelkompositionen Max Regers (Cologne, 1911); M. Hehemann, Max Reger. Eine Studie über moderne Musik (Munich, 1911; 2nd ed., 1917); F. Rabich, Regelieder: Eine Studie (Langensalza, 1914); H. Grace, The Late Max Reger as Organ Composer, in the 'Mus. Times' (June, 1916); H. Poppen, Max Reger (1917); E. Isler, Max Reger (Zürich, 1917); R. Würz, ed., Max Reger: eine Sammlung von Studien (4 vols.; Munich, 1920-23); H. Unger, Reger (1921 and 1924); K. Hasse, Max Reger (1921); E. Segnitz, Max Reger (1922); E. Brennecke, The Two Reger-Legends, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1922); A. Lindner (his teacher), Max Reger. Ein Bild seines Jugendlebens und künstlerischen Werdens (Stuttgart, 1922; 3rd ed., 1938); G. Bagier, Reger (Stuttgart, 1923); A. Spemann, Max Reger-Brevier (1923); H. Unger, Max Reger (Bielefeld, 1924); E. Gatscher, Die Fugentechnik Regers in ihrer Entwicklung (Stuttgart, 1925); S. Kallenberg, Max Reger (1929); E. C. Ebert-Stockinger, Max Reger (1930); G. R. Dejmek, Der Variationszyklus bei Max Reger (Essen, 1930); P. Coenen, Max Regers Variations-schaffen (Berlin, 1935); R. Huesgen, Der junge Max Reger und seine Orgelwerke (Schramberg, 1935); H. E. Rahner, Regers Choralfantasien für die Orgel (Kassel, 1936); E. Brand, Max Reger im Elternhaus (Munich, 1938); F. W. Stein, Max Reger (Potsdam, 1939); F. W. Stein, Max Reger, Sein Leben in Bildern (1941); E. H. Müller von Asow, Max Reger und seine Welt (Berlin, 1945); K. Hasse, Max Reger: Entwicklungsgang eines deutschen Meisters (Leipzig, 1946); H. M. Poppen, Max Reger (Leipzig, 1947); R. Braungart, Freund Reger; Erinnerungen (Regensburg, 1949); A. Kalkoff, Das Orgelschaffen Max Regers (Kassel, 1950); G. Wehmeyer, Max Reger als Liederkomponist (Regensburg, 1955); E. Otto, Max Reger: Sinnbild einer Epoche (Wiesbaden, 1957). A collection of articles about Reger (Max Reger. Festschrift) was publ. at Leipzig in 1953; see also the special Reger issue of the 'Zeitschrift für Musik' (March, 1953). His widow, Elsa Reger, wrote Mein Leben für und mit Max Reger (1930). Reger's letters were publ. by Else von Hase-Koehler under the title Briefe eines deutschen Meisters (1928). W. Altmann publ. a complete catalogue of Reger's works in 1917 (2nd ed., 1926); Fritz Stein ed. a Thematic Catalogue (Leipzig, 1934).

REGER

Regis, Johannes, noted composer and organist; b. in Flanders; d. Soignies, May 16, 1502. He was 'magister puerorum' at the Cathedral of Antwerp (1460-64); then was clerk to Dufay at Cambrai, and finally canon at Soignies. He wrote 2 Masses on the melody of L'Homme armé; a 5-part motet, O admirabile commercium, and other choral pieces. His collected works were publ. in 2 vols. by the American Institute of Musicology in Rome (1956), under the editorship of C. W. H. Lindenburg.—Cf. C. W. H. Lindenburg, Het Leven en de werken van Johannes Regis (Amsterdam, 1938).

Regli (rèh-lyè), Francesco, Italian lexicographer; b. Milan, 1802; d. Turin, March 10, 1866. He founded a theatrical publication, 'Il Pirata', in 1835; publ. a Dizionario biografico dei più celebri poeti ed artisti melodrammatici che fiorirono in Italia dal 1800 al 1860 (Turin, 1860); Storia del violino in Piemonte (Turin, 1863); Elogio a G. Rossini (Turin, 1864); Elogio a Felice Romani (Turin, 1865).

Réginal, Frédéric. Pen-name of Frédéric d'Erlanger.

Regnart (or Regnard) (rèh-ñahr'), Jacob, one of five brothers active as musicians; b. probably in or near Douai, c. 1540; d. Prague, Oct. 16, 1599. He was trained as a chorister and alumnus at the Imperial Chapel in Vienna, and was a tenor singer there from 1564; in 1568-70 he was in Italy; from 1576 second Kapellmeister at the Imperial Court in Prague; from 1582-95 Vice Kapellmeister to the Archduke Ferdinand of Innsbruck, and then in Prague again as Vice-Kapellmeister. Publ. (1574-1611) a great number of Masses, motets, canzone, villanelle, and German songs (many books of these last went through 7 editions; in a collection of 1590 are some songs by his brothers, Franz, Karl, and Pascasius). In the 'Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte' (vol. XII, p. 97) is a full list of his works. Reprints have been publ. by L. Lechner (villanelle), R. Eitner (do., in 'Publikation älterer . . . Musikwerke,' vol. 19), H. Ost-hoff (5-voiced German songs), A. Schering in Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (No. 139), A. Einstein (a madrigal), etc.—Cf. H. Osthoff, Die Niederländer und das deutsche Lied (Berlin, 1938, pp. 343-422).

Rehberg, Walter, Swiss pianist and writer; b. Geneva, May 14, 1900; d. Zürich, Oct. 22, 1957. He studied with his father, Willy Rehberg (1863-1937); then in Berlin with Ernst Toch and Eugen d'Albert; began a career as pianist; in 1934 appointed prof. at the Music Academy in Zürich. Publ. (with his wife Paula Rehberg) popular biographies of Brahms (1944), Schubert (1946), Chopin (1949), and Schumann (1954).

Reich, Willi, Austrian writer on music; b. Vienna, May 27, 1898. He studied at the Univ. of Vienna; Ph. D. (1934) with the dissertation Padre Martini als Theoretiker und Lehrer; also studied privately with Alban Berg; ed. a modern music magazine, '23.' In 1938 he settled in Switzerland; in 1948, became music critic of the 'Neue Zürcher Zeitung.' —Books: Alban Berg (Vienna, 1937; basic biography); Bekenntnis zu Mozart (Lucerne, 1945); Joseph Haydn (Lucerne, 1946); Hugo Wolf-Rhapsodie (Zürich, 1947); Richard Wagner (Olten, 1948); Anton Bruckner: ein Bild seiner Persönlichkeit (Basel, 1953).

Reicha, Anton, Czech composer; b. Prague, Feb. 26, 1870; d. Paris, May 28, 1836. Nephew and pupil of Joseph Reicha (recte Rejcha; composer and violinist, leader and later Kapellmeister, of the Electoral orch. at Bonn). From 1788, flutist in the Bonn orch., in which Beethoven was a violaplayer; 1794-99, piano teacher in Hamburg, writing an opera, and going to Paris in hopes of producing it; but had to content himself with the successful performance of two symphonies. From 1801-08 he lived in Vienna, intimate with Beethoven, and associating with Haydn, Albrechtsberger, and Salieri. After the French invasion he went to Paris; brought out the moderately successful comic operas Cagliostro (1810), Natalie (1816), and Sapho (Dec. 16, 1822); but gained a high reputation as a theorist and teacher (some of his pupils were Liszt, Elwart, Gounod, Lefebvre, and Dancla), also as an instrumental composer. Among his best works are 4 sets of 6 woodwind quintets each (op. 8, 91, 99, 100). In 1818 he succeeded Méhul as prof. of counterpoint and fugue at the Cons.; was naturalized in 1829; and succeeded to Boieldieu's chair in the Institute in 1835.—Writings: Études ou théories pour le piano-forte, dirigées d'une manière nouvelle (1800); Traité de mélodie, abstraction faite de ses rapports avec l'harmonie (1814; 2nd ed., 1832); Cours de composition musicale . . . (1818); Traité de haute composition musicale (1824, 1826; 2 vols.; edited 1834 by Czerny together with the Cours de composition musicale in German as Vollständiges Lehrbuch . . ., 4 vols.); Art du compositeur dramatique . . . (1833); Petit traité d'harmonie pratique (n. d.).—Cf. J. A. Delaire, Notice sur Reicha (Paris, 1837); E. Bücken, Anton Reicha; sein Leben und Kompositionen (Munich, 1912) and Beethoven und A. Reicha, in 'Die Musik' (March, 1913); A. Hnilička, Portraits (Prague, 1922); J. G. Prod'homme, From the Unpublished Autobiography of A. Reicha, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1936); M. Emmanuel, A. Reicha (Paris, 1937).

Reichardt, Johann Friedrich, German composer and writer; born Königsberg, Nov. 25, 1752; d. Giebichenstein, near Halle, June 27, 1814. A pupil of C. G. Richter (piano and composition) and Veichtner (violin), he later studied philosophy at the Univs. of Königsberg and Leipzig; in 1775 obtained the post of Kapellmeister to Frederick the Great. He founded (1783) the 'Concerts spirituels' for the performance of new works, for which he wrote short analytical programs. Dismissed in 1794 because of his sympathy with the French Revolution, Reichardt lived in Altona till 1797; was then appointed inspector of the salt works at Giebichenstein. The French invasion drove him to Königsberg in 1806, and on Jerome Napoleon's threat to confiscate his property Reichardt joined him at Kassel, and became his court conductor. On account of disagreements with the authorities, Reichardt was soon granted leave of absence, which he extended by visiting Vienna to produce his operas and Singspiele; the trip was unsuccessful, and he returned to Giebichenstein, where he remained until his death.—For Berlin and Potsdam Reichardt composed numerous Italian and German operas, incidental music to plays, and German Singspiele, the latter exercising considerable influence on the development of German opera. As a song-composer (cf. Lindner, Geschichte des deutschen Liedes) he ranks high (he set about 60 of Goethe's lyrics to music); his instrumental music includes 7 symphonies, 14 piano concertos, 2 piano quartets, 6 string trios, a violin concerto, 11 violin sonatas, 12 piano sonatas, etc. An extremely diligent writer, he edited a number of musical periodicals; and publ.

the books Über die deutsche komische Oper (1774), Über die Pflichten des Rapierviolinisten (1776), Briefe eines aufmerksamen Reisenden, die Musik betreffend (2 parts; 1774, 1776), Schreiben über die Berlinische Musik (1775), Vertraute Briefe aus Paris (1804, 1805; 3 parts), Vertraute Briefe, geschrieben auf einer Reise nach Wien (2 vols.; 1810). Autobiography in the 'Berlinische musikalische Zeitung' (1805; Nos. 55-89).—His wife Juliane (née Benda; b. Berlin, 1752; d. there, May 9, 1783) was a fine pianist, who also publ. a number of songs.—Cf. H. M. Schletterer, J. F. Reichardt, Sein Leben und seine musikalische Tätigkeit (Augsburg, 1865; only vol. I publ.); C. Lange, J. F. Reichardt (Halle, 1902); W. Pauli, J. F. Reichardt, Sein Leben und seine Stellung in der Geschichte des deutschen Liedes (Berlin, 1902); M. Faller, Reichardt und die Anfänge der musikalischer Journalistik (Kassel, 1929); P. Sieber, Reichardt als Musikästhetiker (Strasbourg, 1930); H. Dennerlein, Reichardt und seine Klavierwerke (Münster, 1930); J. Müller-Blattau, Musik zur Goethezeit, in 'Euphoriön' (1930); F. Flössner, Beiträge zur Reichardt-Forschung (Frankfurt, 1933); E. Neuss, Das Giebichensteiner Dichterparadies; J. F. Reichardt und die Herberge der Romantik (Halle, 1949).

Reichardt, Luise, daughter of the preceding; b. Berlin, April 11, 1779; d. Hamburg, Nov. 17, 1826. She composed a number of beautiful songs, of which a selection was publ. by G. Rheinhardt (Munich, 1922).—Cf. M. G. W. Brandt, Leben der Luise Reichardt (Karlsruhe, 1858).

Reichel, Friedrich, German composer; b. Oberoderwitz, Jan. 27, 1833; d. Dresden, Dec. 29, 1889. He studied with Wieck and Rietz in Dresden. Chief among his 32 publ. works is a Frühlingsymphonie; he also wrote an operetta, Die geängsteten Diplomaten; part-songs for men's voices; and some motets.

Reicher-Kindermann, Hedwig, German dramatic soprano; b. Munich, July 15, 1853; d. Trieste, June 2, 1883. Daughter of the baritone A. Kindermann; sang in the Court Theater, then in the Gärtnerplatz Theater at Munich; later at Hamburg; from 1880-82 at Leipzig; then in A. Neumann's Wagner troupe. She married the opera singer Reicher.—Cf. A. Neumann, Erinnerungen an R. Wagner (Leipzig, 1907; in English, N. Y., 1908).

Reichert, Arno Julius, German writer on music; b. Dresden, May 31, 1866; d. there, Feb. 10, 1933. After studying at the Dresden Cons. he was appointed teacher of music at the Freimaurer-Institut, Dresden; 1894-1904, at R. L. Schneider's Musikschule; from 1904 head of the music division of the Dresden Royal Library. He arranged about 450 folksongs for men's and mixed chorus; publ. 50 Jahre Sinfonie-Konzerte (a record of the works produced in Dresden from 1858-1908) and Die Original-Musik-Handschriften der sächsischen Landesbibliothek (Leipzig, 1923).

Reichert, Johannes, German conductor and composer; b. Dresden, June 19, 1876; d. Teplitz, Feb. 15, 1942. Pupil of Draeske (1893), and of Nicodé and Buchmayer (1894-98). From 1896-1900, conductor of the orch. class at the Dresden Musikschule; 1902-06, also répétiteur at the court theater; founded in 1899 the 'Volkssingakademie' (a mixed chorus recruited exclusively from the working classes); 1905-13, private teacher of the crown prince of Saxony; 1906-22, municipal Musikdirektor in Teplitz-Schönau, then living in retirement in Teplitz.—He arranged Handel's Samson and Belshazzar.

Reichmann, Theodor, German baritone; b. Rostock, March 15, 1849; d. Marbach, on Lake Constance, May 22, 1903. Pupil of Mantius and Elsler (Berlin), Ress (Prague), and Lamperti (Milan). After singing in various theaters, he was at the Court Opera, Vienna (1882-89); in 1882 he created the role of Amfortas at Bayreuth. Sang in German opera at the Metropolitan Opera House, 1889-91; made extended tours; and was re-engaged at Vienna in 1893.

Reichwein, Leopold, Austrian conductor; b. Breslau, May 16, 1878; d. (suicide) Vienna, April 8, 1945. He was theater conductor in Breslau, Mannheim, and Karlsruhe; then on the staff of the Vienna Opera (1913-21); music director of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna (1921-26); music director in Bochum (1926-38); returned to Vienna in 1938; conducted at the State Opera, and taught conducting at the Vienna Academy. He committed suicide at the end of the war, when he was accused of Nazi affiliations. He was also a composer; wrote the operas Vasantasena (Breslau, 1903) and Die Liebenden von Kandahar (Breslau, 1907); incidental music to Goethe's Faust; songs.

Reid, General John, b. Straloch, Perthshire, Feb. 13, 1721; d. London, Feb. 6, 1807. A musical amateur, he left £52,000 to found a chair of music in Edinburgh Univ., also providing that an annual concert of his own compositions should be given. The 'Reid' professors since the foundation (1839) have been John Thomson; Sir Henry Bishop, 1842; Henry Hugh Pearson, 1844; John Donaldson, 1845; Sir Herbert Stanley Oakeley, 1865; Frederick Niecks, 1891; and Donald Francis Tovey, from 1914 until his death in 1940.

Reimann, Heinrich, German writer on music, son of Ignaz Reimann; b. Regersdorf, Silesia, March 14, 1850; d. Berlin, May 24, 1906. He was taught by his father; attended the Glatz Gymnasium, and studied philology at Breslau Univ. (1870-74), also conducted the academic Gesangverein 'Leopoldina.' From 1887 he lived in Berlin, where he was assistant librarian at the Royal Library, organist to the Philharmonic Society, teacher of organ and theory at the Scharwenka-Klindworth Cons.; critic for the 'Allgemeine Musikalische Zeitung'; composed organ sonatas and studies, etc. He publ. a biography of Schumann (1887); Zur Theorie und Geschichte der byzantinischen Musik (in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft,' 1889); Joh. Brahms (1897; 3rd ed., 1903; in 'Berühmte Musiker,' of which series he was ed.); Musikalische Rückblicke (2 vols., 1900); H. von Bülow (1909, posth.); J. S. Bach (1912; completed by B. Schrader). He revised vol. II of Ambros' Musikgeschichte for a new ed. (1892); publ. a collection of old songs, arranged for concert performance, 'Das deutsche Lied' (4 vols.; originally collected for Amalie Joachim), and the collections 'Internationales Volksliederbuch' (3 vols.) and 'Das deutsche geistliche Lied' (6 vols.); also ed. Bach's St. John Passion (1903). His 'program books' for the Berlin Philharmonic concerts were models for all similar analyses.

Reimann, Ignaz, German church-composer; b. Albendorf, Silesia, Dec. 27, 1820; d. Regensburg, June 17, 1885. Publ. 18 Masses, 4 Requiems, 3 Te Deums, 48 offertories, 40 graduals; many others, also instrumental works, in MS.

Reimers (rī'mers), Paul, tenor; b. Lunden, Schleswig-Holstein, March 14, 1878; d. New York, April 14, 1942. He studied with Prof. Spengel in Hamburg, Georg Henschel and Raymund von zur Mühlen in London, and Jean Criticos in Paris. Début as Max (Freischütz) in Hamburg, 1902; then devoted himself to oratorio and lieder-singing; after his first tour of the U. S. (1913) he was a regular visitor; then settled in New York; taught singing at the Juilliard Graduate School.

Rein (rīn), Walter, German composer and pedagogue; b. Stotternheim, near Erfurt, Dec. 10, 1893; d. Berlin, June 18, 1955. He studied composition with Erwin Lendvai; joined the Jöde youth movement in music, and wrote many instructive choral works; in 1935 became prof. at the Hochschule für Musik-Erziehung in Berlin (until 1945). His folksong arrangements were publ. in Jöde's Musikant and the Lobeda-Chorbuch.

Reinach, Théodore, French musicologist; b. St. Germain-en-Laye, July 3, 1860; d. Paris, Oct. 28, 1928. Was first a lawyer, then turned to musicology and specialized in old Greek music. He was a prof. at the École du Louvre, a member of the Institut, and from 1888 ed. of 'Revue des études grecques.' —Works: Le second hymne delphique à Apollon (with L. Boëllmann; 1897); a study of Plutarch's treatise on music (with H. Weil; Paris, 1900); on pseudo-Aristotelian musical problems, in 'Revue des études grecques' (with Eichthal; 1902); La Musique grecque (Paris, 1926); the article, Musica, in 'Dictionnaire des antiquités grecques' (Paris); etc. He also wrote the libretto for the opera-ballet, La Naissance de la lyre (after Sophocles; music by A. Roussel; Paris Opéra, 1925) and for the lyric tragedy Salamine (after Aeschylus; music by M. Emmanuel; ibid., June 19, 1929).

Reinagle, Alexander, b. Portsmouth, England (of Austrian parents), baptized April 23, 1756; d. Baltimore, Sept. 21, 1809. He studied in Edinburgh with Raynor Taylor; in London for a time; also visited Lisbon and other Continental cities. From his correspondence he appears to have been an intimate friend of K. P. E. Bach. Came to New York early in 1786, settling in the same year in Philadelphia, where he taught, managed subscription concerts (also in N. Y.), and was active as singer, pianist, conductor, and composer; 1787, introduced 4-hand piano music to America; associated, possibly as harpsichordist, with the Old American Co., and most likely took part in their 1788-89 season in N. Y.; in 1793, he was engaged as musical director of a stock company for the production of plays and comic operas, with Thomas Wignell as general director; also built the New Theatre, which opened on Feb. 2, 1793, with Reinagle acting as composer, singer, and director; later also managed a company in Baltimore. — Wrote: 'Collection of Most Favorite Scots Tunes with Variations for Harpsichord' (London; probably issued in Glasgow); 6 Sonatas . . . with Accompaniment for Violin (London, c. 1780); Miscellaneous Quartets (Philadelphia, 1791); Concerto on the Improved Pianoforte with Additional Keys (1794); Preludes (1794); accompaniments and incidental music to The Sicilian Romance (1795), The Witches of the Rock, pantomime (1796), and various English plays; Masonic Overture (1800); sonatas (in Library of Congress, Washington; Sonata No. 2 publ. in abridged form by J. T. Howard in A Program of Early American Piano-Music, N. Y., 1931); also 'Collection of Favorite Songs'; and music to Milton's Paradise Lost (incomplete). — Cf. J. R. Parker's Musical Reminiscences, in 'Euterpeiad' (Jan. 19, 1822); O. G. Sonneck, Early Concert Life in America (Leipzig, 1907; in English); id., Early Opera in America (N. Y., 1915); E. C. Krohn, A. Reinagle as Sonatist, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1932); J. T. Howard, Our American Music (N. Y., 1939 and later eds.); O. G. Sonneck and W. T. Upton, Bibliography of Early Secular American Music (Washington, 1945); 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' XI; 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Reinecke, Carl (Heinrich Carsten), German pianist and composer; b. Altona, June 23, 1824; d. Leipzig, March 10, 1910. He was a pupil of his father, a music teacher. His first concert tour was to Denmark and Sweden in 1843; he then went to Leipzig, learned much through meetings with Mendelssohn and Schumann, made a second tour through North Germany, and was from 1846-48 court pianist to Christian VIII at Copenhagen. Then, after spending some years in Paris, he became teacher at the Cologne Cons. in 1851, music director at Barmen 1854-59, at Breslau, 1859-60, and from 1860-95 conductor of the Gewandhaus Concerts at Leipzig. At the same time he was prof. of piano playing and free composition at the Leipzig Cons. An eminent pianist, he excelled as an interpreter of Mozart, made concert tours almost yearly, and was enthusiastically welcomed in England, Holland, Scandinavia, Switzerland, and throughout Germany; among his pupils were Maas, Kwast, and Joseffy. As a composer, and teacher of composition, Reinecke was the leader in Leipzig for a quarter of a century; his numerous works, classic in form and of a refined workmanship, do not entirely escape from the influence of Wagner and Brahms. In his writings he showed himself an extreme conservative. Besides the Leipzig letters for the 'Monthly Musical Record' and essays for various journals, he wrote Was sollen wir spielen? (1886), Zur Wiederbelebung der Mozartschen Klavierkonzerte (1891), Die Beethovenschen Klavierkonzerte (1896; 9th ed., 1924; in English, 1898), Und manche liebe Schatten steigen auf (1900), Meister der Tonkunst (1903), Aus dem Reich der Töne (1907). He composed a great many works in every genre: the operas König Manfred (Wiesbaden, July 26, 1867); Ein Abenteuer Händels (Schwerin, 1874); Auf hohen Befehl (Hainburg, 1886); Der Gouverneur von Tours (Schwerin, 1891); several musical fairy tales, for solos, chorus, and piano: Nussknacker und Mausekönig, Schneewittchen, Dornröschen, Aschenbrödel, Die wilden Schwäne, Glückskind und Pechvogel, etc.; the oratorio Belsazar; several choral works with orch.: Sommertagsbilder, Schlachtlied, Der deutsche Sang, etc.; numerous choruses for mixed voices; for orch.: 3 symphonies, 9 overtures, smaller works; 4 piano concertos; a violin concerto; a cello concerto; a harp concerto; a flute concerto; chamber music: octet for wind instruments; sextet for wind instruments; 6 string quartets; piano quintet; 2 piano quartets; 6 piano trios; trio for piano, oboe, and horn; trio for piano, clarinet, and horn; violin sonata; 3 violin sonatinas; 3 cello sonatas; a sonata for flute and piano; numerous character pieces for piano; a sonata for piano, left hand; a suite, Biblische Bilder; 3 sonatas for 2 pianos; altogether about 300 op. numbers. He wrote cadenzas to 42 movements of piano concertos by Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, and Weber; some of these cadenzas are often used. — Cf. J. von Wasielewski, Carl Reinecke. Ein Künstlerbild (Leipzig, 1892); E. Segnitz, Carl Reinecke (Leipzig, 1900); M. Steinitzer, Das Leipziger Gewandhaus im neuen Heim unter Carl Reinecke (Leipzig, 1924); N. Topusov, Carl Reinecke; Beiträge zu seinem Leben (dissertation; Berlin, 1943).

Reiner, Fritz, eminent conductor; b. Budapest, Dec. 19, 1888; studied there with Koessler and Thomann at the Music Academy; also law at the Univ.; 1909, coach at the Comic Opera, Budapest; then operatic conductor in Laibach (1910) and at the Budapest People's Opera (1911-14); 1914-21, music director of the Dresden Opera, also appearing in guest engagements in Hamburg, Berlin, and Vienna; 1921-22, guest conductor in Rome and Barcelona; 1922-31, conductor of the Cincinnati Symph. Orch.; from 1931, he taught conducting at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia; has appeared as guest conductor of many major orchestras in the U. S. and Europe; has conducted opera at San Francisco (1935-38), Covent Garden (1936-37), and in Philadelphia; 1938-48, conductor of the Pittsburgh Symph. Orch.; from 1949 conductor at the Metropolitan Opera House; since 1953 conductor of the Chicago Symph. Orch. He is especially admired by musicians as a master of the technique of conducting.

Reiner, Karel, Czech composer; b. Žatec, June 27, 1910. He studied law; then applied himself to music, taking courses with Suk and a seminar with Alois Hába (quarter-tone music). During World War II he was interned at the Dachau concentration camp. After his release, he became active in the Union of Czech Composers. —Works: opera, Tale of an Enchanted Song (1949); piano concerto (1937); violin concerto (1947); nonet (1946); 2 piano sonatas; etc.

Reinhardt (rīn'-hart), Heinrich, operetta composer; b. Pressburg, April 13, 1865; d. Vienna, Jan. 31, 1922. Pupil of M. Mocker and A. Bruckner in Vienna; was music critic for several papers. —Works: the operettas Das süsse Mädel (Vienna, Oct. 25, 1901, his greatest success), Der liebe Schatz (Vienna, Oct. 30, 1902), Der General-Konsul (Vienna, Jan. 28, 1904), Krieg im Frieden (Vienna, Jan. 20, 1906), Die süssen Grisetten (Vienna, 1907), Ein Märchen für alles (Munich, 1908), Die Sprudelfee (Vienna, 1909), Napoleon und die Frauen (Vienna, April 28, 1911), Prinzessin Gretl (Berlin, 1914), Des Königs Gäste (Vienna, 1916), Die erste Frau (Munich, 1918); also wrote 2 operas, Die Minnekönigin and Der Schuster von Delft; author of Die Entwicklung der Operette and Virtuosentum und Künstlerschaft.

Reinhold (rīn'hölt), Hugo, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, March 3, 1854; d. there, Sept. 4, 1935. Choir-boy in the Hofkapelle; then pupil of J. Epstein (piano), O. Dessoff and A. Bruckner (composition) at the Vienna Cons., graduating in 1874 as winner of the silver medal; until 1925, prof. of piano at the Akademie der Tonkunst. A composer of pronounced melodic gift and highly poetic conception. —Works: Präludium, Menuett und Fuge for string orch.;

Symph. in C; Konzert-Ouvertüre; violin sonata; piano pieces (2 and 4 hands); men's choruses and songs.

Reinken, Jan Adams, organist; b. Wils-hausen, Alsace, April 27, 1623; d. Ham-burg, Nov. 24, 1722. Pupil of Sweelinck in Amsterdam. In 1658 he became assistant, and in 1663 successor, to Scheidemann, organist at the Katharinenkirche, Hamburg. One of the foremost among North German organists; J. S. Bach several times walked the 30 miles from Lüneburg to Hamburg to hear him. —Works: Hortus musicus for 2 violins, viola, and bass (1687), and Partite diverse (both republ. by Riemsdijk in the 'Maatschappij tot bevordering der Toon-kunst'; vols. 13 and 14). Some of his com-positions have been published by R. Buch-mayer, Seiffert in 'Organum,' A. Schering in Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (No. 207), etc. —Cf. A. Pirro, Notes pour servir, éventuellement, à la biographie de Reinken, in the 'Schœuerleer-Festschrift' (1925); id., Reinken et la musique en Alsace au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle, in 'Annuaire' of the Club vosgien (Strasbourg, vol. 3, 1935).

Reinthal (rīn'tah-ler), Karl (Martin), German composer; b. Erfurt, Oct. 13, 1822; d. Bremen, Feb. 13, 1896. He studied with G. A. Ritter and Marx in Berlin, and for 3 years in Rome; taught singing at the Cologne Cons. (1853); from 1857, municipal music director in Bremen. —Works: 2 operas, Edda (Bremen, 1875) and Käthchen von Heilbronn (Frankfurt, 1881); an oratorio, Jephtha, repeatedly performed in Germany and elsewhere; the famous Bismarck-Hymne; choral works; a symph.; songs; psalms.

Reisenauer (rī'-zehn-ow-ähr), Alfred, German pianist; b. Königsberg, Nov. 1, 1863; d. (on a concert tour) Liebau, Oct. 3, 1907. Pupil of L. Köhler and Liszt. Début at Cardinal Hohenlohe's palace, Rome, with Liszt (1881); after a concert tour (Lon-don, Leipzig), he studied law at Leipzig Univ. 1881-82, but in 1886 resumed his career of pianist, and visited almost every region of the globe (even Siberia and Cen-tral Asia); 1900-06 prof. at the Leipzig Cons. —He publ. a number of fine songs: 6 Gesänge aus Wilhelm Meister, 5 Traurige Lieder (Heine), Wanderlieder (Uhland), Sieben Gedichte (op. 12); 6 Balladen und Romanzen (op. 13); Reisebilder (op. 14; for piano 4 hands); 50 Übungsstücke for piano. —Cf. J. Schwerin, Erinnerungen an A. Reisenauer (Königsberg, 1909).

Reiser, Alois, composer; b. Prague, April 6, 1887. He attended the Univ. of Prague and also studied with Dvořák. He toured Europe as a cellist; then came to the U. S.; was a cellist with the Pittsburgh Symph. Orch. and the N. Y. Symph.; conducted the orch. at the Strand Theater, N. Y. (1918-29); in 1929 settled in Hollywood as studio conductor and composer for films.—Works: for orch.: Evening of Summer, symph. idyll (Prague, 1911); Slavic Rhapsody (Los Angeles, March 8, 1931, composer conducting); cello concerto (Los Angeles, March 23, 1933); Erewhon (Los Angeles, Jan. 24, 1936, composer conducting); chamber music: piano trio (1910); string quartet in E minor (E. S. Coolidge Prize; Pittsfield Festival, 1918); string quartet in C major (NBC Prize); piano trio; violin sonata; songs; light operas; etc.

Reiss (ris), Albert, German dramatic tenor; b. Berlin, Feb. 22, 1870; d. Nice, June 19, 1940. He was an actor before making his début as a singer in Königsberg (Sept. 28, 1897); then sang in various German towns; on Dec. 23, 1901, made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera House in the minor roles of the Sailor and Shepherd in Tristan und Isolde; then sang more important parts in Wagner's operas. In 1919 he returned to Berlin; in 1938 retired from the stage and lived in Nice.

Reiss, Józef Władysław, Polish musicologist; b. Dembica, Aug. 4, 1879. He studied musicology with Guido Adler at the Univ. of Vienna; Dr. phil. with a dissertation on the Polish composer Gomółka (1912); in 1922 he became prof. of musicology at Cracow Univ., remaining at that post for 30 years.—Publications: (in Polish) The Psalm Melodies of Nicolaus Gomółka, 1580 (1912; a German version in Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft, vol. 13); The Problem of Meaning in Music (1915; 2nd ed., 1922); A History of Music (1919); Beethoven (1920); Henryk Wieniawski (1931); several school manuals; a Formenlehre appeared in German (Leipzig, 1917).

Reisserová, Julie, Czech composer; b. Prague, Oct. 9, 1888; d. there, Feb. 25, 1938. She studied with J. B. Foerster; also with Albert Roussel in Paris. Among her works are Pastorale maritime for orch. (1933); Esquisses for piano; several albums of songs.—Cf. J. Vacková, Julie Reisserová (Prague, 1948).

Reissiger, Karl Gottlieb, German composer; b. Belzig, near Wittenberg, Jan. 31, 1798; d. Dresden, Nov. 7, 1859. A pupil of Schicht at the Thomasschule, Leipzig, from 1811; went to Vienna in 1821 and thence to Munich (1822), pursuing the study of dramatic composition under Winter; taught at the Berlin Royal Institute for Church Music, and in 1826 was invited to The Hague to organize a conservatory. In the same year he succeeded Marschner as music director of the German Opera at Dresden, and soon after was appointed court Kapellmeister as Weber's successor.—Reissiger was a prolific composer (over 200 op. numbers), writing with great facility, but with little originality.—The waltz for piano, Weber's Last Thought, long misattributed to Weber, was proved to be a composition by Reissiger; many of his songs also became popular.—Cf. H. Pfiel, K. G. Reissiger (1879); K. Kreiser, K. G. Reissiger (Dresden, 1918).

Reissmann, August, German writer on music; b. Frankenstein, Silesia, Nov. 14, 1825; d. Berlin, July 13, 1903. Pupil there of H. Jung, and in Breslau of Mosewius and Baumgart (theory), E. L. Richter (piano and organ), Lüstner (violin), and Kahl (cello). His first compositions were well received; but two years' residence in Weimar with Liszt (1850-52) developed a strong literary vein. He lived in Halle, and from 1863-80 in Berlin, lecturing 1866-74 at the Stern Cons. on the history of music; then in Leipzig (where the Univ. conferred on him the degree of Dr. phil. in 1875), in Wiesbaden, and again in Berlin.—Writings: Katechismus der Gesangkunst (1853; after Sieber); Von Bach bis Wagner (1861); Das deutsche Lied in seiner historischen Entwicklung (1861; rev. ed., 1874, as Geschichte des deutschen Liedes; considered his best and most original work); Allgemeine Geschichte der Musik (3 vols., 1863-64); Allgemeine Musiklehre (1864; 2nd ed., 1864); Robert Schumann (1865; 3rd ed., 1879; in English, 1886); Grundriss der Musikgeschichte (1865); Lehrbuch der musikalischen Komposition (3 vols., 1866-71); Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (1867; 2nd ed., 1871); Schubert (1873); Die königliche Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (1875); Klavier- und Gesangsschule für den ersten Unterricht (1879); Joseph Haydn (1879); Zur Ästhetik der Tonkunst (1879); Illustrierte Geschichte der deutschen Musik (1881); J. S. Bach (1881); Händel (1882); Gluck (1882); Die Hausmusik (1884); Weber (1886); Die Oper in ihrer kunst- und kulturhistorischen Bedeutung (1885); edited Gathy's 'Musikalisches Conversationslexikon' (1870), and vols. VII-XI of Mendel's ditto (1876; also Supplement of 1881, and an epitome, Handlexikon der Tonkunst, in 1882). He wrote 3 operas, Guhrun (Leipzig, 1871), Die Bürgermeisterin von Schorndorf (Leipzig, 1880), and Das Gralspiel (Düsseldorf, 1895); several cantatas; a violin concerto; chamber music; and many songs. —Cf. J. Göllich, A. Reissmann als Schriftsteller und Komponist (Leipzig, 1884).

Reiter (rī'-ter), Josef, Austrian composer; b. Braunau, Jan. 19, 1862; d. Vienna, June 2, 1939. He received his first instruction from his father, who was the schoolmaster and organist of the little town; after that entirely self-taught; from 1886-1907 he lived in Vienna as teacher in the elementary schools; 1908-11, director of the Mozarteum in Salzburg; then lived again in Vienna. In 1899 a number of admirers formed the 'J. Reiter Verein' for the propagation of his works. His reputation rests chiefly on his numerous, and mostly excellent, men's choruses. —Cf. M. Morold, J. Reiter (1904); L. Etzmannsdorfer, J. Reiter (Vienna, 1924).

Reizenstein, Franz, pianist and composer; b. Nuremberg, June 7, 1911. He studied with Leonid Kreutzer (piano) and Hindemith (composition); in 1934 settled in London, where he took a course with Vaughan Williams. He has written 2 radio operas: Men Against the Sea (1949) and Anna Kraus (1952); Jolly Overture (1952); a cello concerto (1936); a piano concerto (1941); a violin concerto (1953); much chamber music; piano sonata; etc.

Relfe, John, English theorist and composer; b. Greenwich, 1763; d. London, c. 1837. Member of the King's Band, 1810; also an esteemed teacher of piano and harmony. —Works: airs, sonatas, lessons, divertimentos, etc., for harpsichord or piano; songs; Guida Armonica . . . (3 parts, 1798; 2nd ed. as The Principles of Harmony . . . 1817); Remarks on the Present State of Musical Instruction (1819); Lucidus ordo . . . (1821). He proposed a reformed thorough-bass figuring, marking the root-chord r., and the inversions ' and ''.

Reilstab, Johann Karl Friedrich, German writer on music; b. Berlin, Feb. 27, 1759; d. there, Aug. 19, 1813. Pupil of Agricola and Fasch; succeeded his father as head of a printing establishment, adding a music printing and publishing department and a circulating library of music; founded short-lived amateur concerts in 1787; lost his property in the war of 1806, and gave music lessons, lectured on harmony, and wrote criticisms for the 'Vossische Zeitung.' Compositions unimportant. —Writings: Versuch über die Vereinigung der musikalischen und oratorischen Deklamation (Vienna, 1785); Anleitung für Klavierspieler, den Gebrauch der Bach'schen Fingersetzung, die Manieren und den Vortrag betreffend (1790); and a polemical pamphlet, Über die Bemerkungen eines Reisenden [Reichardt], die Berlinischen Kirchenmusiken, Konzerte, Opern und die königliche Kammermusik betreffend (1789). —Cf. O. Guttman, J. K. F. Reilstab (Berlin, 1910).

Reilstab, (Heinrich Friedrich) Ludwig, the noted novelist, son of the preceding; b. Berlin, April 13, 1799; d. there, Nov. 27, 1860. Artillery officer, teacher of mathematics and history in the Brigade School, Berlin, retired from the army in 1821, and lived as a writer in Berlin from 1823. Editor and music critic of the 'Vossische Zeitung' from 1826. Publ. the satirical pamphlets Henriette, oder die schöne Sängerin, eine Geschichte unserer Tage von Freimund Zuschauer (1826; on Henriette Sontag's triumphs), and Über mein Verhältniss als Kritiker zu Herrn Spontini als Komponisten und General-Musikdirector in Berlin, nebst einem vergnüglichen Anhang (1827; directed against Spohr's truckling to virtuosity in Agnes von Hohenstaufen), for each of which he suffered a period of imprisonment, though his opinions were eventually upheld both in official circles and by the public. From 1839-41 Reilstab edited a musical periodical, 'Iris im Gebiet der Tonkunst'; he also contributed to several other papers. In his 'Gesammelte Schriften' are biographies of Liszt, Ludwig Berger, Bernhard Klein, Nanette Schechner, and others; vol. I contains criticisms, on opera and concert, which came out in the 'Vossische Zeitung' 1826-48. He wrote an autobiography, Aus meinem Leben (1861, 2 vols.). —Cf. L. R. Blengert, L. Reilstab (Leipzig, 1918).

Reményi (rēh'-mā-fā), Eduard, eminent violinist; b. Miskolcz, Hungary, July 17, 1830; d. San Francisco, May 15, 1898. Pupil of Böhm at the Vienna Cons. (1842-45). Banished from Austria for participation in the Hungarian Revolution of 1848, he began the career of a wandering violinist in America; returned to Europe in 1853, profited by Liszt's counsels, and in 1854 became solo violinist to Queen Victoria. In 1860 he was amnestied, and appointed solo violinist to the Emperor of Austria; in 1865, commenced a brilliant tour, visiting Paris, Germany, Belgium, and Holland; then proceeded to London (1877), and to America in 1878, traveling in the U. S., Canada, and Mexico; in 1886 he began a new concert tour around the world, visiting Japan, China, South Africa, etc. Some MS notes on his trip to the Far East are in the N. Y. Public Library. He died of apoplexy on his last American tour. —His technique was prodigious; in vigor, passion, and pathos he was unexcelled. He made skilful transcriptions of Field's Nocturnes, Chopin's Waltzes, Polonaises, and Mazurkas, and pieces by Bach, Schubert, etc.; these are united under the title of 'Nouvelle École du violon.' He composed a violin concerto, and some solos for violin. —Cf. G. Kelley and G. Upton, Eduard Reményi. Musician, Littérateur, and Man (Chicago, 1906); E. Sas, Reményi (Budapest, 1934).

Remoortel, Edouard van, Belgian conductor; b. Brussels, May 30, 1926; was a pupil at the Brussels Cons. (1945-49); studied conducting at the Cons. of Geneva, and privately with Josef Krips. Returning to Belgium, he started an auspicious career by conducting the Concerts Populaires in Brussels; subsequently was guest conductor in Paris, Rome, and London. In 1951 he was appointed chief conductor of the Belgian National Orch. He made a successful American début in Washington (Dec., 1956). In 1958 he was appointed permanent conductor of the St. Louis Symph. Orch. He is a nephew of the Belgian statesman, Paul-Henri Spaak.

Rémusat (rā-mū-zāh'), Jean, French flutist; b. Bordeaux, May 11, 1815; d. Shanghai, Sept. 1, 1880. He studied with Tulou. After successful concert giving, he became 1st flutist at the Queen's Theatre, London; from 1853 was flutist at the Théâtre-Lyrique, Paris. He publ. a flute method and solo pieces for flute.

Remy, Alfred, writer on music and editor; b. Elberfeld, March 16, 1870; d. New York, Feb. 26, 1937. Came to the U. S. in 1882; attended the College of the City of N. Y. (graduated 1890); then studied piano with Bruno Oscar Klein from 1890-96, and violin with C. Palm; 1895-97, music critic of 'Vogue' and the 'Looker-On'; lectured on history of music at N. Y. College of Music (1896-98), and on modern languages at the Brooklyn Commercial High School (1899-1911); 1905, M.A. at Columbia Univ., where he was extension lecturer on musicology from 1906-15. 1901, was staff member of the 'International Encyclopedia'; 1907, assisted in the preparation of the 'International Yearbook.' He was the editor of the 3rd ed. of Baker's Biographical Dictionary of Musicians (N. Y., 1919).

Remy, W. A. See Mayer, Wilhelm.

Renaud (rū-nōh'), Maurice, French baritone; b. Bordeaux, July 24, 1861; d. Paris, Oct. 16, 1933. He studied in Paris and Brussels; sang at the Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels (1883-90); at the Opéra-Comique, Paris (1890-91); and the Paris Opéra (1891-1902). He made his American début in New Orleans, on Jan. 4, 1893. From 1906 till 1909 he sang at the Manhattan Opera House, where he became a favorite; then appeared in Chicago for a season, and at the Metropolitan Opera House (1910-12); thereafter, was active chiefly in France. He sang baritone and bass parts in some 60 operas.

Renié (rū-nyā'), Henriette, French harpist and composer; b. Paris, Sept. 18, 1875; d. there, March 1, 1956. She studied with Alphonse Hasselmans at the Paris Cons.; received 1st prize for harp at the age of 11; then entered the classes of Lenepveu and Dubois in harmony and composition. She performed her concerto for harp and orch. at the Concerts Lamoureux, Paris, on March 24, 1901; further wrote Pièce symphonique, for harp and orch.; Légende et Danse caprice, for harp and orch.; publ. numerous pieces for harp solo: Promenades matinales, Feuilles d'automne, Ballade fantastique, Légende, Contemplation, Défilé liliputien, Danse des lutins, etc.; also works for the harp sextet she formed in Paris; a trio for harp, violin, and cello; a trio for harp, flute, and bassoon; several songs. She taught for many years at the Paris Cons.; among her students was Marcel Grandjany.

Renner, Josef, German choral conductor; b. Schmatzhausen, near Landshtut, Bavaria, April 25, 1832; d. Regensburg, Aug. 11, 1895. Taught by his father; later by Mettenleiter and Proske. From 1858-92, choral conductor and teacher at the Aula Scholastica, Regensburg; founder, about 1865, and until 1882 director, of a Music Institute. To revive the German part-songs of the 16th-17th centuries, he organized the Regensburg Madrigal Quartet. Edited and publ. 'Auswahl deutscher Madrigale von Meistern des 16. Jahrhundert,' 'Neue Regensburger Sängerkirche,' 'Regensburger Oberquartette,' 'Mutter Donau,' 'Männerquartette von der Donau' (242 numbers), etc.

Rensburg, Jacques E., Dutch cellist; b. Rotterdam, May 22, 1846; d. Bonn, Dec. 1910. A pupil of J. Giese, D. de Lange, and E. Hegar, he took up music relatively late; made a successful début as soloist at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig in 1872, and then toured Germany; shortly afterwards a nervous affection compelled him to abandon his concert career; returned to Rotterdam in 1874; in 1880 he established himself in business in Bonn. —His works include several pieces for cello and orch. and some for cello and piano.

Resinarius, Balthasar (possibly identical with Balthasar Harzer or Hartzer), b. Jessen, c. 1480. Was chorister in the Emperor's Chapel and pupil of Isaac; 1543, became bishop of Leipa, Bohemia. He was one of the finest of early Protestant composers. —Publ. 118 'Responsories' (Wittenberg, 1543; 80 printed by Rhaw and reprinted by Bärenreiter and Concordia, 1957); 30 choral pieces in Rhaw's Neue deutsche geistliche Gesenge für die gemeinen Schulen (1544; ed. by J. Wolf in 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' vol. 39); 4 motets, in Offices collected by Rhaw; 3 bicinia, in Rotenbuecher's Diphona amoena et florida (Nuremberg, 1549). —Cf. I. M. Schröder, Die Responsorienvertonungen des B. Resinarius (Kassel, 1954).

Resnik, Regina, American soprano; b. New York, Aug. 30, 1922. She studied in New York; made her concert début at the Brooklyn Academy of Music (Oct. 27, 1942); sang in opera in Mexico (1943); won an annual audition at the Metropolitan Opera in 1944, and appeared there in Il Trovatore (Dec. 6, 1944); sang the leading part in Beethoven's Fidelio (March 17, 1945). In 1953 she appeared in Bayreuth as Sieglinde. Later, she sang mezzo-soprano parts; appeared as Marina in Boris Godunov at the Metropolitan Opera, on Feb. 15, 1956. She married Harry W. Davis, a lawyer, in New York, on July 16, 1946.

Respighi (rĕh-spĕ'gĕ), Ottorino, eminent Italian composer; b. Bologna, July 9, 1879; d. Rome, April 18, 1936. He studied violin with F. Sarti at the Liceo Musicale of Bologna; composition with L. Torchi and G. Martucci. In 1900 he went to Russia, and played 1st viola in the orch. of the Imperial Opera in St. Petersburg; there he took lessons with Rimsky-Korsakov, which proved a decisive influence in Respighi's coloristic orchestration. In 1902 he studied with Max Bruch in Berlin. From 1903 to 1908 he was active as a concert violinist; also played the viola in the Mugellini Quartet of Bologna. In 1913 he was engaged as prof. of composition at the Santa Cecilia in Rome; in 1923, appointed its director, but resigned in 1925, retaining only a class in advanced composition; subsequently devoted himself to composing and conducting. He was elected a member of the Italian Royal Academy on March 23, 1932. In 1925-26 and again in 1932 he made tours of the U. S. as pianist and conductor. —His style of composition is a highly successful blend of songful melodies with full and rich harmonies; he was one of the best masters of modern Italian music in orchestration. His power of evocation of the Italian scene and his ability to sustain interest without prolixity is incontestable. Although he wrote several operas, he achieved his greatest success with 2 symph. poems, Le Fontane di Roma and I Pini di Roma, each consisting of 4 tone paintings of the Roman landscape. —Works: Operas: Re Enzo (Bologna, March 12, 1905); Semirama, lyric tragedy in 3 acts (Bologna, Nov. 20, 1910); La bella addormentata nel bosco, musical fairy tale (Rome, April 13, 1922, performed by Vittorio Podrecca's marionettes, Teatro dei Piccoli, with singers off stage); Belfagor, lyric comedy (Milan, April 26, 1923); La Campana sommersa, after Hauptmann's Die versunkene Glocke (Hamburg, Nov. 18, 1927); Maria Egiziaca, mystery play in 1 act (N. Y., March 16, 1932); La Fiamma (Rome, Jan. 24, 1934); a free transcription of Monteverdi's Orfeo (Milan, March 16, 1935); Lucrezia (posthumous, Milan, Feb. 24, 1937). Ballets: La Boutique Fantasque, on themes by Rossini (London, June 5, 1919); Scherzo veneziano (Rome, Nov. 27, 1920); Belkis, regina di Saba (Milan, Jan. 23, 1932). For orch.: Notturmo (1905); Sinfonia drammatica (1915); Fontane di Roma, symph. poem in 4 movements (Rome, March 11, 1917); Antiche arie e danze per liuto, 3 sets, the 3rd for string orch. (1916; 1923; 1931); Ballata delle gnomidi (Rome, April 11, 1920); Pini di Roma, symph. poem in 4 movements (Rome, Dec. 14, 1924); Rossiniana, suite from Rossini's piano pieces (1925); Vetrare di chiesa, symph. impressions in 4 movements (Boston, Feb. 25, 1927); Impressioni brasiliane (1927); Trittico Botticelliano, for chamber orch. (commissioned by E. S. Coolidge; 1927); Gli Uccelli, suite for small orch. on themes by Rameau, B. Pasquini, and others (1927); Feste romane, symph. poem in 4 movements (N. Y. Philharmonic, Toscanini conducting, Feb. 21, 1929); Metamorphoseon modi XII, theme and variations (commissioned by the Boston Symph.; Boston, Nov. 7, 1930); Concerto gregoriano, for violin and orch. (Rome, Feb. 5, 1922); Concerto in modo misolidio, for piano and orch. (N. Y., Dec. 31, 1925, composer soloist); Concerto a cinque, for violin, oboe, trumpet, double-bass, piano, and strings (1932). Choral works: La Primavera, cantata for soloists, chorus, and orch. (Rome, March 4, 1923) and Lauda per la Natività del Signore, for soloists, chorus, and orch. (1930). Chamber music; 11 pieces for violin and piano (1904-07); string quartet in D major (1907); Quartetto dorico, for string quartet (1924); Il Tramonto, after Shelley, for mezzo-soprano and string quartet (1917); violin sonata (1917). Also Huntingtower Ballad, for band (Sousa memorial concert, Washington, April 17, 1932); 45 songs; 3 vocalises without words; arrangements of works by Monteverdi, Vitali, Pergolesi, Cimarosa, Marcello, etc., and of several Études-Tableaux by Rachmaninoff; co-author, with S. A. Luciani, of Orpheus: iniziazione musicale, storia della musica (Florence, 1925). —His wife, Elsa Olivieri Sangiacomo Respighi (b. Rome, March 24, 1894), was his pupil; wrote a fairy opera, Fior di neve, the symph. poem Serenata di maschere, and numerous songs; was also a concert singer herself. She publ. Respighi's biography, Ottorino Respighi: Dati biografici ordinati (Milan, 1954). —Cf. S. A. Luciani, in the 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale' (1926); M. Saint-Cyr, Ottorino Respighi, in 'Musicisti contemporanei' (1932); M. Mila, Probleme di gusto ed arte in Ottorino Respighi, in the 'Rassegna Musicale' (1933); R. de Renzis, Ottorino Respighi (Turin, 1935).

Restori, Antonio, Italian musicologist; b. Pontremoli, Massa Carrara, Dec. 10, 1859; d. Genoa, June 30, 1928. Studied philology at the Univ. of Bologna, and taught in secondary schools in various Italian cities; from 1897 prof. of Romance languages at the Univ. of Messina. He publ. Notazione musicale dell' antichissima Alba bilingue (1892), Musica allegra di Francia nei secoli XII e XIII (1893), La Gaité de la Tor, aubade del secolo XIII (1904); La Musique des chansons françaises, in Juleville's 'Histoire de la langue et de la littérature françaises' (1895), etc.

Reszke, Édouard. See De Reszke.

Reszke, Jean de. See De Reszke.

Rethberg, Elisabeth (real name Elisabeth Sattler), soprano; b. Schwarzenberg, Saxony, Sept. 22, 1894; studied piano at the Dresden Royal Cons.; later trained her voice. 1915-22, member of the Dresden State Opera; on Nov. 22, 1922, made her début as Aida at the Metropolitan Opera House, of which she remained a leading member until 1942. She also sang, in opera and in recital, in many American and European cities; in 1936 she toured in joint recital with Ezio Pinza, appearing throughout America, Europe, and Australia; in 1938 they toured South America together. She created the title role of Strauss' Die Aegyptische Helena at the world première in Dresden, 1927. —Cf. Henschel and Friedrich, E. Rethberg (Schwarzenberg, 1928).

Réti (reh'tē), Rudolf, pianist and composer; b. Užice, Serbia, Nov. 27, 1885; d. Montclair, N. J., Feb. 7, 1957; studied at the Cons. in Vienna, where he lived as music critic of 'Echo' and composer; Dr. phil. He was one of the founders of the International Society for Contemporary Music (Salzburg, 1922); came to the U. S. in 1938; in 1943 married the Canadian pianist, Jean Sahlmark (b. Saltcoats, Saskatchewan, May 19, 1911); in 1950 settled in Montclair. Publ. The Thematic Process in Music (N. Y., 1951); another book, Tonality, Atonality, Pantonality, was publ. posthumously (N. Y., 1958). His works include the opera, Ivan and the Drum (after Tolstoy; not performed); ballet-opera David and Goliath (1935); piano concerto (Detroit, 1948; Jean Réti soloist); a string quartet; piano pieces; songs.

Rettich, Wilhelm, German composer and conductor; b. Leipzig, July 3, 1892; studied at Leipzig Cons. with Max Reger; was a prisoner of war in Siberia during World War I; then was in China. Returning to Leipzig in 1921, he became music director of the local synagogue, occupied various posts as theater conductor until 1933, when he left Germany and settled in Amsterdam. An exceptionally industrious composer; his works total some 110 opus numbers, including 3 symphonies, many choral works, chamber music, and songs.

Reubke (roib'kē), Adolf, German organ builder at Hausneindorf, near Quedlinburg; b. Halberstadt, Dec. 6, 1805; d. there, March 3, 1875. Built the organs in the cathedral (88 stops) and the Jacobikirche (53 stops) at Magdeburg. —His son Emil (b. Hausneindorf, March, 1836; d. there 1885) succeeded his father, and introduced various improvements (pneumatic tubes). — Julius Reubke, son of Adolf (b. Hausneindorf, March 23, 1834; d. Pillnitz, June 3, 1858), was a pupil of Kullak and Marx, in Berlin, and later of Liszt; a fine pianist, whose few compositions show great talent (a piano sonata, an organ sonata entitled 'The 94th Psalm,' other piano pieces, and songs). — Otto Reubke, the youngest son of Adolf (b. Hausneindorf, Nov. 2, 1842; d. Halle, May 18, 1913), was a pupil of von Bülow and Marx, lived in Halle as a music teacher; conductor of the Robert Franz Singakademie, 1867-1911; from 1892, musical director at the University.

Reuchsel, Amédée, French organist; b. Lyons, March 21, 1875. Pupil at the Brussels Cons. of J. Dupont (organ), A. Maily (harmony), and E. Tinel (composition); then of G. Fauré in Paris, where he was organist at St.-Denis for a number of years; won the Prix Chartier for chamber music in 1908. Wrote Théorie abrégée de la musique and L'Education musicale populaire, and ed. the collection 'Solfège classique et moderne' for the Paris Cons. (18 books).

Reuchsel, Maurice, French violinist and composer, brother of the preceding; b. Lyons, Nov. 22, 1880. Pupil of his father and at the Paris Cons. Made successful tours of France, England, and Italy; 1903, ed. of the 'Express musical de Lyon'; 1915, won the Institute prize for chamber music. — Wrote La Musique à Lyon (2nd ed., 1903), L'Ecole classique du violon (1905; 3rd ed., 1906), Un Violoniste en voyage (3rd ed., 1907), etc.

Reuling (roi'-link), (Ludwig) Wilhelm, German conductor and composer; b. Darmstadt, Dec. 22, 1802; d. Munich, April 19, 1879. He studied with Rinck and Seyfried; was theater conductor in Vienna (1829-54). He composed 37 operas and operettas, and 17 ballets, produced mostly in Vienna; in addition, he wrote overtures, chamber music, and songs. A complete list of his operas produced in Vienna, with dates of premières, is found in Anton Bauer, Opern und Operetten in Wien (Vienna, 1955).

Reusner (Reussner), Esajas, German lute player and composer; b. Löwenberg, Silesia, April 29, 1636; d. Berlin, May 1, 1679. He was a pupil of his father, a lutenist, and at the age of 15 was engaged as musician to Countess Radziwill in Breslau; at 19, lutenist at Brieg; in 1674 became lutenist at the court of the Elector of Brandenburg in Berlin. He publ. several suites for the lute: Deliciae testudinis (1667; new ed., 1697, as Erfreuliche Lautenlust); Neue Lautenfrüchte (1676); a book of 100 religious melodies arranged for the lute, and publ. in tablature (1678). Reprints of suites and chorale settings by Reusner are in the 'Reichsdenkmale,' vol. XII. — Cf. A. Sparmann, Esajas Reusner und die Lautensuite (dissertation, Berlin, 1926); K. Koletschka, E. Reussner der Jüngere und seine Bedeutung für die deutsche Lautenmusik des XVII. Jahrhunderts, in 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 15; 1928).

Reuss (rois), August, composer; b. Lillendorf, Moravia, March 6, 1871; d. Munich, June 18, 1935. Pupil of L. Thuille in Munich; after a brief activity as Kapellmeister in Augsburg (1906) and Magdeburg (1907) he lived in Berlin; then in Munich; 1927, co-director of the Trapp Music School; 1929, prof. at the Akademie der Tonkunst. — His works include a comic opera, Herzog Philipps Brautfahrt (Graz, 1909); a piano concerto; a string quartet; etc.

Reuss, Eduard, pedagogue; b. New York, Sept. 16, 1851; d. Dresden, Feb. 18, 1911. From 1862-69 pupil of E. Krüger in Göttingen; then went to Liszt, and also studied with Savard (1876-77) in Paris; 1880-96, teacher in Karlsruhe; 1896-1902 in Wiesbaden, where in 1899 he was director of the Cons.; accompanied his wife, Luise Royce-Belce (q. v.), on her American tour (1902-03), and then settled in Dresden as prof. at the Cons. Publ. Franz Liszt. Ein Lebensbild (1898), Lissts Lieder (1906), and Franz Liszt in seinen Briefen (1911).

Reuss, Wilhelm Franz, German conductor; son of Eduard Reuss and Luise Reuss-Belce; b. Karlsruhe, March 17, 1886; d. in a Russian prison, in Königsberg, May 15, 1945. He was a pupil of Dracseke and Max von Schillings; conducted in Berlin (1923-27) and Kassel (1927-33); in 1935 went to Königsberg.

Reuss-Belce, Luise, soprano; b. Vienna, Oct. 24, 1860; d. Aibach, Germany, March 5, 1945 (was found dead in a refugee train). Pupil of J. Gänsbacher in Vienna and Fritz Planck in Karlsruhe; début as Elsa at the Hoftheater in Karlsruhe in 1881; from 1882, at Bayreuth; 1896-99, in Wiesbaden; 1900 at Covent Garden; 1902-03, in the Wagner parts at the Metropolitan Opera House; 1903-11 in Dresden. In 1885 she married Eduard Reuss (q. v.), after whose death (1911) she removed to Berlin, where she established a singing-school. In 1913 she was stage manager at the festival performances in Nuremberg (the first woman to act in that capacity on a German stage).

Reuter (roi'-ter), Florizel von, violinist and composer; b. Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 21, 1890; studied with M. Bendix (Chicago), Sauret (London), C. Thomson (Brussels), and Marteau (Geneva); toured successfully throughout Europe and the U. S.; 1931-33, prof. of violin at the Vienna Academy of Music; settled in Munich, 1934. Author of Führer durch die Solo-Violinmusik (Berlin, 1926); Psychical Experiences of a Musician (London, 1928). His opera Postmaster Wynn, after Pushkin, was produced at the Berlin Staatsoper in 1947.

Reuter, Rudolph Ernest, American pianist; b. New York, Sept. 21, 1888; studied at the Royal Academy of Music, Berlin (1908, won the Mendelssohn Prize); 1909, made his début with the Hamburg Philh. Orch.; 1910-13 prof. at the Imperial Academy of Music, Tokyo, which he reorganized on western academic lines; 1913-21, teacher at the Chicago Musical College. Toured Europe twice, also appearing throughout the U. S. in recital and as soloist with leading orchs.; 1935-37, president of the Society of American Musicians.

Reutter (roi'-tër), Georg von, Sr., Austrian organist and composer; b. Vienna, 1656; d. there, Aug. 29, 1738. He was a pupil of Johann Kaspar Kerll; in 1686, became organist at St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna; from 1697 to 1703, theorbo player at the Imperial Court Chapel. In 1700 he became court and chamber organist, and in 1715, 1st Kapellmeister at St. Stephen's Cathedral, a post that he held until his death. A ricercar and 6 capriccios publ. under his name in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. XIII, 2), are really by Strungk. —Cf. N. Hofer, Die beiden Reutter als Kirchenkomponisten (Vienna, 1915); G. Frotscher, Geschichte des Orgelspiels (Berlin, 1934-35; vol. I).

Reutter, Hermann, outstanding German composer; b. Stuttgart, June 17, 1900. He studied with Walter Courvoisier (composition) and Franz Dorfmeier (piano) in Munich; in 1932, appointed prof. at the Hochschule für Musik in Frankfurt; in 1945, returned to Stuttgart. In his music Reutter follows the line of neo-Classicism, and in his technical procedures comes close to Hindemith. The basic thematic material of many of his compositions is inspired by German folk music. —Works: operas: Saul (Baden-Baden, July 15, 1928), Der verlorene Sohn, after André Gide (Stuttgart, March 20, 1929), Doktor Johannes Faust (Frankfurt, May 26, 1936), Odysseus (Frankfurt, Oct. 7, 1942), Don Juan und Faust (Stuttgart, June 11, 1950), Ballade der Landstrasse (Stuttgart, July 21, 1952), The Bridge of San Luis Rey, after Thornton Wilder's novel (Frankfurt Radio, June 20, 1954); Die Witwe von Ephesus (Cologne, June 23, 1954); choral works: oratorio, Der grosse Kalender (1933; very successful), Der glückliche Bauer, cantata (1944), Pandora (1949), Die Rückkehr des verlorenen Sohnes, chamber oratorio after André Gide, a new version of the opera Der verlorene Sohn (Munich, Feb. 15, 1952); Der Himmlische Vagant, a lyrical portrait of François Villon, for 2 voices and instruments (Donauessingen Music Festival, Oct. 6, 1951); Prozession, for cello and orch. (Wiesbaden, Dec. 6, 1957); 4 piano concertos; violin concerto; a string quartet; a violin sonata; a cello sonata; Fantasia apocalyptica, for piano; Antagonismus, for 2 pianos; 3 vols. of Russian songs, arranged and harmonized; other minor pieces. —Cf. Karl Laux, Musik und Musiker der Gegenwart (Essen, 1949; pp. 203-15).

Reutter (roi'-tër), Johann Adam Karl Georg von, Jr., Austrian composer; son of Georg von Reutter, Sr.; b. Vienna, April 6, 1708; d. there, March 11, 1772. He studied with his father, and upon the latter's death (1738) succeeded him as Kapellmeister at St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna. He became 2nd court Kapellmeister in 1746 (the 1st being Antonio Predieri), and acting 1st Kapellmeister in 1751 (after Predieri's retirement). In 1740 he was ennobled by Maria Theresa with the title 'Edler von Reutter.' He wrote several operas, oratorios, and much church music (a Mass, a Requiem, etc. were publ. in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich,' vol. 88; 1952; a symphony, Servizio di tabula, in vol. 31; 1908). Reutter was the choir leader who engaged young Haydn as a chorister at St. Stephen's and who, according to some accounts, treated him harshly. —Cf. N. Hofer, Die beiden Reutter als Kirchenkomponisten (Vienna, 1915).

Révész, Géza, Hungarian psychologist; b. Siófok, Dec. 9, 1878; first studied law (1901, LL.D.) then experimental psychology at Göttingen (1905, Dr. phil.) and Budapest (1908); 1910, teacher of psychology at the Univ. of Budapest; 1921, director of the Psychological Institute of the Univ. of Amsterdam. —Books: Zur Grundlegung der Tonpsychologie (Leipzig, 1913); Erwin Nyiregyházi. Psychologische Analyse eines musikalisch hervorragenden Kindes (Leipzig, 1916; in English, as The Psychology of a Musical Prodigy, London, 1925); Das frühzeitige Auftreten der Begabung und ihre Erkennung (Leipzig, 1921); Musikgenuss bei Gehörlosen (with Prof. Katz; Leipzig, 1926); Inleiding tot de musiekpsychologie (Amsterdam, 1944; in German, Bern, 1946; in English, as Introduction to the Psychology of Music, N. Y., 1953); numerous articles on psychological aspects of music.

Revueltas, Silvestre, Mexican composer; b. Santiago Papasquiaro, Dec. 31, 1899; d. Mexico City, Oct. 5, 1940. He studied violin at the Mexico Cons.; with Felix Borowski in Chicago (1916) and with Ševčík in N. Y. (1922); conducted theater orchestras in Texas (1926-28); in 1929 returned to Mexico City and became assistant conductor to Carlos Chávez of the Orquesta Sinfónica de Mexico; only then did he begin to compose. In 1937 he went to Spain, where he was active in the cultural affairs of the Loyalist Government during the civil war. His health was ruined by exertions and irregular life, and he died of pneumonia. He possessed an extraordinary natural talent and intimate understanding of Mexican music, so that despite a lack of academic training in composition, he succeeded in creating works of great originality, melodic charm, and rhythmic vitality. —Works: the ballets El Renacuajo paseador (Mexico City, Oct. 4, 1940) and La Coronela (left unfinished at his death; completed by Galindo and Huizar; produced posthumously, Nov. 20, 1941); for orch.: Esquinas (Mexico City, Nov. 20, 1931), Ventanas (Nov. 4, 1932); Cuauhnahuac (June 2, 1933), Janitzio (Oct. 13, 1933), Colorines (N. Y., Nov. 4, 1933), Homenaje a Federico García Lorca (Madrid, Sept. 22, 1937, composer conducting); 7 scores of film music; of these, Redes (Barcelona, Oct. 7, 1937) was arranged as a symph. suite; 2 string quartets; for piano: Canción and Allegro; songs.—Cf. O. Mayer-Serra, Silvestre Revueltas, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1941); N. Slonimsky, Music of Latin America (N. Y., 1945; pp. 247-51); G. Contreras, S. Revueltas (Mexico, 1954).

Revutsky (rā-vōōt'-skē), Lev Nikolayevitch, Ukrainian composer; b. near Poltava, Feb. 20, 1889. He studied in Kiev with Lisenko and Glière; then was engaged as instructor at the Musico-Dramatic Institute in Kiev (1924-41); during the occupation of Kiev by the Germans, he went to Tashkent, where he taught at the Cons.; in 1944 resumed his post in Kiev. His works include 2 symphonies (1915; 1926); 2 piano concertos (1914; 1934); a number of choral pieces to Ukrainian words; arrangements of Ukrainian folksongs.

Rey, Cemal Reshid, Turkish composer; b. Istanbul, Oct. 25, 1904. Son of a poet who was also twice Minister of the Interior, he studied in Paris with Laparra (composition) and Marguerite Long (piano); gave piano recitals in Paris, returning to Istanbul in 1923, where he taught at the Cons. He was the 1st conductor of the Istanbul Municipal Orch. in 1934; from 1938 to 1940, was musical director of Radio Ankara; in 1949, appointed musical director of Radio Istanbul. —Works: Faire sans dire, 1-act opera (1920); Yann Marek, 3-act opera (1922); Sultan Cem, 5-act opera (1923); Zeybek, 3-act opera (1926); La Légende du Bebek, for orch. (Paris, Dec. 15, 1929); Karagövez, symph. poem (Paris, Feb. 14, 1932; composer conducting); Scènes turques, for orch. (Paris, March 6, 1932); Concerto chromatique, for piano and orch. (Paris, March 12, 1933, composer soloist); violin concerto (1939); symphony in D minor (1941; Ankara, April 2, 1948, composer conducting); L'Appel, symph. poem (1950; Paris, April 3, 1952, composer conducting); chamber music; military marches; choruses.

Rey, Jean-Baptiste, French conductor and composer; b. Tarn-et-Garonne, Dec. 18, 1734; d. Paris, July 15, 1810. He studied at Toulouse and became a theater conductor in the provinces. In 1776 he was appointed court musician to Louis XVI, as 'surintendant de la chapelle.' He conducted the Concert Spirituel (1782-86); then was in charge of the musical performances at the Paris Opéra. In 1799 he became prof. at the Paris Cons. He taught according to the principles of Rameau and became embroiled in an academic controversy with the followers of the more modern method of Catel. He played an important role in producing operas by Gluck, Grétry, and others; wrote some stage music himself.

Rey, Louis Charles Joseph, French composer and cellist; brother of Jean-Baptiste Rey; b. Lauzerte, Oct. 26, 1738; d. Paris, May 12, 1811. He was trained as a cellist, and was in the orch. of the Paris Opéra from 1766 until 1806; composed music for cello and other instruments.

Reyer (rā-yār') (real name, Rey), Louis-Étienne-Ernest, French composer; b. Marseilles, Dec. 1, 1823; d. Le Lavandou, near Hyères, Jan. 15, 1909. From 6 to 16 he studied in the free municipal school of music; then took a place in the government financial bureau at Algiers, and while there composed a solemn Mass (for the arrival of the French governor in Algiers; performed 1847) and publ. several songs. He definitely embarked upon a musical career in 1848, studying at Paris with his aunt, the wife of Aristide Farrenc (q.v.). In 1866 he became librarian at the Opéra, and followed d'Ortigue as music critic of the 'Journal des Débats'; his collected essays were publ. in 1875 as Notes de musique; also in Quarante ans de musique (posthumous, 1909). He was elected to David's chair in the Institut in 1876; chevalier of the Legion of Honor, 1862; Grande-Croix, 1906. Although Reyser was an avowed admirer of Wagner, his music does not betray specific Wagnerian influences; both in form and in harmonic progressions Reyser adheres to the classical French school of composition, with a certain tendency towards exoticism in his choice of librettos. —Works: for the stage: Le Sélam, text by Gautier (labeled a 'symphonie orientale' but actually a 4-act opera; Paris, April 5, 1850), Maître Wolfram, 1-act opera (Paris, May 20, 1854), Sacountale, ballet pantomime (Paris, July 14, 1858), La Statue, opera (in 3 acts, Paris, April 11, 1861; recast in 5 acts, Feb. 27, 1903), Erostate, opera (Baden-Baden, Aug. 21, 1862, by the Paris Opéra troupe), Sigurd, opera (Brussels, Jan. 7, 1884; his most popular work; 300 performances up to 1925 in Paris and many abroad), Salammbô, opera (Brussels, Feb. 10, 1890); a cantata, Victoire (1859); a hymn, L'Union des arts (1862); men's choruses (L'Hymne du Rhin, Le Chant du paysan, Chœur des buveurs, Chœur des assiégés); a dramatic scene, La Madeleine au désert (1874); also some church music. —Cf. A. Jullien, E. Reyser (Paris, 1909); H. Roujon, Notice sur la vie et les travaux de E. Reyser (Paris, 1911); H. de Curzon, E. Reyser, sa vie et ses œuvres (Paris, 1923).

Reznicek (rězh'-nī-chěhk), Emil Nikolaus von, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, May 4, 1860; d. Berlin, Aug. 2, 1945. He studied law at Graz and music with Wilhelm Mayer (W. A. Rémy); later took a brief course with Reinecke and Jadassohn at the Leipzig Cons. He was subsequently engaged as theater conductor in Graz, Zürich, Berlin, Jena, Mainz, Stettin, and Weimar; was Kapellmeister at the court theater in Mannheim (1896-99). After a short residence in Wiesbaden, he settled in Berlin, and in 1902 established there a very successful series of concerts for chamber orch., 'Orchester-Kammerkonzerte'; in 1906 he was appointed prof. at the Scharwenka Cons. in Berlin; conducted the Warsaw Opera during the 1907-08 season; then became conductor of the Komische Oper, Berlin (1909-11); from 1920 to 1926, he taught at the Hochschule für Musik; retired from teaching in 1919. —Works: operas: Donna Diana, to his own libretto (Prague, Dec. 16, 1894; very successful; the overture frequently performed in concerts); Till Eulenspiegel (Karlsruhe, Jan. 12, 1902); Ritter Blaubart (Darmstadt, Jan. 29, 1920); Holofernes (Berlin, Oct. 27, 1923); Spiel oder Ernst (Dresden, Nov. 11, 1930); Der Gondoliere des Dogen (Stuttgart, Oct. 29, 1931). He wrote 5 symphonies; 3 symph. poems; a Symphonietta (also known as the Ironische Symphonie; Berlin, March 30, 1905, composer conducting); violin concerto (Berlin, Feb. 26, 1925); Nachtstück, for cello, harp, 4 horns, and string quartet; piano pieces; songs. —Cf. O. Taubmann, Emil Nikolaus von Reznicek (Leipzig, 1907); Max Chop, E. N. von Reznicek: sein Leben und seine Werke (Vienna, 1920); R. Specht, E. N. von Reznicek: eine vorläufige Studie (Leipzig, 1923).

Rhaw (Rhau), Georg, German publisher and composer; b. Eisfeld, Franconia, 1488; d. Wittenberg, Aug. 6, 1548. Cantor of the Thomasschule, Leipzig, from 1518 to 1520, bringing out a Mass a 12 and a Te Deum at the disputation of Luther and Eck, then settled in Eisleben as a schoolmaster; later, went to Wittenberg, where in 1524 he established a publishing business, issuing many first eds. of Luther's writings and numerous collections of musical works, mostly Protestant, including Sacrorum Hymnorum Liber Primus (1542; modern ed. by R. Gerber in 'Das Erbe deutscher Musik,' vols. 21, 25); Neue deutsche Gesenge für die gemeinen Schulen (1544; reprinted by Joh. Wolf as vol. 34 of the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst'), Bicinia gallica, latina et germanica (1545, contains the earliest known version of the Ranz des vaches; selections were republ. in F. Jöde's 'Musikantengilde,' 1926; also ed. by K. Ameln, Kassel, 1934), etc. Wrote an Enchiridion musices (Part I, 1518, on Musica choralis; Part II, 1520, on Musica mensuralis). —Cf. W. Wölbing, G. Rhaw (diss., Berlin, 1922); W. Gossiau, Die religiöse Haltung in der Reformationsmusik . . . (Kassel, 1933).

Rheinberger, Josef (Gabriel), pedagogue; b. Vaduz, Liechtenstein, March 17, 1839; d. Munich, Nov. 25, 1901. He played piano at 5, and was a good organist at 7. In 1851 he entered the Munich Cons., where until 1854 he studied piano with J. E. Leonhard, organ with J. G. Herzog, and composition with J. J. Maier. After graduating with the highest honors he studied further with Franz Lachner, earning his livelihood with private lessons and acting as accompanist of the Munich Gesangverein, of which he became conductor in 1864. From 1860-66 he was organist at St. Michael's, and from 1865-67 répétiteur at the court opera. In 1859 he succeeded his teacher Leonhard as professor of piano at the Cons.; 1860, appointed prof. of composition (later also of organ). When Bülow completely reorganized the institution (1867) as the 'Königliche Musikschule,' Rheinberger retained his professorship, and also was made inspector of the instrumental and theory classes. In 1877 he declined an invitation to become director of Hoch's newly founded Cons. in Frankfurt. For this act of loyalty he was appointed Willner's successor as conductor of the 'Kgl. Kapellchor,' celebrated for its performances of early music, and King Ludwig made him Knight of St. Michael; the bestowal of the 'Zivilverdienstorden' in 1894 raised him to the rank of the nobility, and the Univ. of Munich made him Dr. phil. (hon. c.) in 1899; he also was elected member of the Berlin Akademie. —As a teacher Rheinberger's reputation was second to none; pupils flocked to him from all parts of the world. As a composer, his dignity, formal finish, and consummate technical mastery compel respect and admiration. The 20 organ sonatas are undoubtedly his highest achievement, and must be ranked among the greatest works in organ literature. —Cf. Th. Kroyer's necrology in Bettelheim's 'Jahrbuch' (1901); P. Molitor, J. Rheinberger und seine Kompositionen für die Orgel (Leipzig, 1904); T. Kroyer, J. Rheinberger (Regensburg, 1916); Harvey Grace, The Organ Works of Rheinberger (London, 1925; 2nd ed., 1932).

Rhené-Baton (real name René Baton), French conductor; b. Courseulles-sur-Mer, Calvados, Sept. 5, 1879; d. Le Mans, Sept. 23, 1940. He attended for 2 years the advanced class for piano at the Paris Cons.; then studied composition as a private pupil with A. Bloch and A. Gedalge. He began his career as chef du chant at the Opéra-Comique (1 year), then was conductor at various concert-series in Paris and Bordeaux; 1918-32, conductor of the Padeloup Concerts; also of Diaghilev's Russian Ballet, etc.; many tours; also active as composer.—Cf. D. Sourdet, Douze chefs d'orchestre (Paris, 1924).

Riadis, Emile, Greek composer; b. Salonica, May 13, 1890; d. there, July 17, 1935. He studied in Munich with Felix Mottl; in 1910, went to Paris, where he appeared as composer under the name Riadis, formed from the ending of his mother's maiden name, Elefteriadis (his father's real name was Khu). In 1915 he became piano teacher at the Cons. of Salonica. He wrote a number of songs, distinguished by an expressive melodic line, somewhat Oriental in its intervallic pattern; his harmonizations are in the French manner. He composed a Byzantine Mass; an orch. suite; Biblical Dances; a symph. poem, Sunset in Salonica; a string quartet; a piano quartet; a cello sonata; 3 Greek Dances, for piano; and several sets of songs: Jasmins et minarets, Les étranges pèlerinages, etc.

Riaño, Juan Facundo, an authority on Spanish art; b. Granada, Nov. 24, 1828; d. Madrid, Feb. 27, 1901. He was the founder and director of the 'Museo de reproducciones artísticas.' He publ. (in English) Critical and Bibliographical Notes on Early Spanish Music (London, 1887), a valuable work containing many reproductions of old Spanish instruments, descriptions of medieval musical MSS, etc. He developed the theory that the neumes of the Mozarabic notation were derived from the characters of the Visigothic alphabet.

Ribera (Maneja) (rē-beh'rah), Antonio, Spanish conductor; b. Barcelona, May 3, 1873; d. Madrid, March 4, 1956; studied with Riemann and Mottl in Leipzig and Munich; conducted the Wagner Society in Barcelona (1901-04); then theater conductor in Lemberg (1905-12); again in Barcelona (1912-25), and finally in Madrid (from 1925).

Ribera (y Tarragó) (rē-beh'rah), Julián, Spanish scholar and musicologist; b. Carcagente, near Valencia, Sept. 19, 1858; d. Madrid, 1936. For many years prof. of Hispanic-Arabic literature at the Univ. of Madrid; member of the Spanish Royal Academy and of the Academy of History. He is known chiefly for his study of the Cantigas of Alfonso the Wise, the famous collection of songs to the Virgin Mary dating from the 13th century. Ribera maintained that the key to the musical interpretation of the Cantigas was to be found in the music and the metrical forms of the Arabs. Under the auspices of the Spanish Academy he publ. La Música de las Cantigas. Estudio sobre su origen y naturaleza (Madrid, 1922; English version published as Music in Ancient Arabia and Spain, London, 1929). Another important work is La Música andaluza medieval en las canciones de Trovadores, Trovados y Minnesinger (3 vols., Madrid, 1923-25), containing 356 transcriptions from medieval MSS (51 harmonized). Other writings: Historia de la Música árabe medieval y su influencia en la española (Madrid, 1927); La Música de la jota aragonesa (1928), etc. —Cf. H. Spanke, Die Theorie Riberas über Zusammenhänge zwischen frühromanischen Strophenformen und andalusisch-arabischer Lyrik des Mittelalters, in Volkstum und Kultur der Romanen, III, pp. 258-78; V. Castañeda, Don J. Ribera y Tarragó, in 'Boletín de la Academia de la Historia' (Madrid, 1934; vol. 104, pp. 401-16).

Ricci (řich-chē), Corrado, Italian writer; b. Ravenna, April 18, 1858; d. Rome, June 5, 1934. From 1906-19, general director of the dept. of Fine Arts in the Ministry of Education at Rome; it was through his efforts that the Augusteo was transformed into a concert hall. Besides several opera librettos, he wrote I Teatri di Bologna nei secoli XVII e XVIII (Bologna, 1888); Mozart a Bologna (with unpubl. documents), in the 'Gazzetta Musicale' (Aug., 1891; reprinted, with other essays, in Ricci's Figure e figure del mondo teatrale, Milan, 1920); Arrigo Boito (Milan, 1919); Burney, Casanova e Farinelli in Bologna (ib., 1890); Claudio Monteverdi e la Corte di Mantova, in 'Cronaca Bizantina' (June, 1886); etc.

Ricci (řich-chē), Federico, Italian composer; b. Naples, Oct. 22, 1809; d. Conegliano, Dec. 10, 1877. Pupil of Furno, Zingarelli, and Raimondi at the Royal Cons. di San Sebastiano. He produced 19 operas, at least 4 of which were written in collaboration with his elder brother Luigi; these 4 were his first, Il Colonnello (Naples, March 14, 1835), Il Disertore per amore (Naples, Feb. 16, 1836), L'Amante di richiamo (Turin, 1846), and Crispino e la comare (Venice, Feb. 28, 1850). On March 13, 1838 his La Prigione d'Edimburgo had great success in Trieste; Corrado d'Altamura was well received at La Scala, Milan (Nov. 16, 1841). He was invited to St. Petersburg in 1853 as musical director of the imperial theaters; in 1869 Una Follia a Roma (as Une Folie à Rome) had 77 consecutive representations at the Fantaies-Parisiennes, so that Ricci went to Paris in hopes of further good fortune; but his subsequent dramatic ventures failed, and in 1876 he retired to Conegliano. 6 Masses, a cantata, and numerous smaller vocal works, were also written by him. —Cf. F. de Villars, Notice sur Luigi et Federico Ricci . . . (Paris, 1866); L. de Rada, I Fratelli Ricci (Florence, 1878).

Ricci, Luigi, Italian composer; brother of Federico Ricci; b. Naples, July 8, 1805; d. Prague, Dec. 31, 1859. Eminent dramatic composer; pupil of Furno and Zingarelli at the Cons. di S. Sebastiano, Naples, also taking private lessons with Generali. His first stage work was the opera buffa L'Impresario in angustie (Cons. theater, 1823); he wrote in all about 30 operas, several in collaboration with his brother. In 1836 he was appointed maestro di cappella of the cathedral at Trieste, and chorusmaster at the theater. In 1844 he married the singer Lidia Stolz, of Prague. Shortly after producing his last opera, Il Diavolo a quattro (Trieste, 1859), symptoms of insanity developed, and he was sent to an asylum in Prague, where he died. Among his operas may be mentioned Il Colombo (Parma, June 27, 1829), L'Orfanella di Ginevra (Rome, 1829), Chiara di Rosenberg (Milan, Oct. 11, 1831), Il nuovo Figaro (Parma, Feb. 15, 1832), Chi dura vince (Rome, Dec. 27, 1834), Il Birraio di Preston (Florence, Feb. 4, 1847), Crispino e la comare (with Federico; Venice, Feb. 28, 1850; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Jan. 18, 1919), La Festa di Piedigrotta (Naples, 1852), and Il Diavolo a quattro (Trieste, 1859). —His son (by his wife's identical twin sister Francesca Stolz), Luigi Ricci, Jr. (b. Trieste, Dec. 27, 1852; d. Milan, Feb. 10, 1906), was also a composer of operas.

Ricci, Ruggiero, American violinist; b. San Francisco, July 24, 1920. He studied with Louis Persinger; made his 1st public appearance in San Francisco at the age of 8, playing the Mendelssohn concerto; N. Y. debut, Oct. 20, 1929; in 1932 he made a European tour, playing with excellent success in London, Berlin, and Vienna; returned to America in 1934. He successfully negotiated the transition from a child prodigy to a serious artist; became a virtuoso violinist; in 1957 made a world tour.

Riccitelli (rĕch-chĕ-tehl'-lĕ), Primo, Italian composer; b. Campi, Aug. 9, 1875; d. Giulianova, March 27, 1941; pupil of Mascagni at the Liceo Rossini, Pesaro. He wrote the operas Maria sul Monte (1911; Milan, July 8, 1916), I Compagnacci (1-act; Rome, April 10, 1923; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Jan. 2, 1924), and Madone Oretta (Rome, Feb. 3, 1932); also songs.

Riccus (rĭ-tsyöös), August Ferdinand, German composer; b. Bernstadt, Feb. 26, 1819; d. Karlsbad, July 5, 1886. He was conductor of the Euterpe Concerts in Leipzig (from 1849); then at the City Theater there (1854-64); in 1864 went to Hamburg, where he conducted opera, and wrote music criticism for the 'Hamburger Nachrichten.' He composed an overture to Schiller's Bräut von Messina; a cantata, Die Weihe der Kraft; piano music; choruses; songs.

Riccus, Karl August, German violinist, conductor, and composer, nephew of August Ferdinand Riccius; b. Bernstadt, July 26, 1830; d. Dresden, July 8, 1893. He studied in Dresden with Wieck, and in Leipzig with Mendelssohn, Schumann, and Ferdinand David. In 1847 he became violinist in the Dresden Court Orchestra, and later also conductor. He wrote a comic opera, Es spukt (Dresden, 1871); several ballets; music to various plays; publ. piano pieces and songs.

Rice, William Gorham, American writer on music; b. Albany, N. Y., Dec. 23, 1856; d. there, Sept. 10, 1945. His writings include Carillons of Belgium and Holland; The Carillon in Literature; Tower Music of Belgium and Holland in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1915); etc.

Richafort, Jean, Flemish composer; b. c. 1480; d. 1548. Probably a pupil of Josquin, he was chapelmaster at St. Rombaut, in Mechlin, from 1507 to 1509; in 1531, in the service of Mary of Hungary, regent of the Netherlands; 1542-47, chapelmaster at St. Gilles in Bruges. Surviving are Masses, Magnificats, motets, and chansons. —Cf. G. Van Doorslaer, Jean Richafort, in 'Bulletin' of the Académie royale d'archéologie de Belgique, 1929 (1930; p. 103ff.). See also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954).

Richards, (Henry) Brinley, British composer and pianist; b. Carmarthen, Wales, Nov. 13, 1817; d. London, May 1, 1885. Pupil of the Royal Academy of Music, winning the King's Scholarship in 1835 and 1837. He resided in London, highly esteemed as a concert pianist and teacher. —Wrote the popular hymn God bless the Prince of Wales (1862), etc.

Richards, Lewis Loomis, American pianist, harpsichordist, and music educator; b. St. Johns, Mich., April 11, 1881; d. East Lansing, Mich., Feb. 15, 1940. Studied at the Brussels Cons.; concert tours in Europe, 1908-14; returned to the U. S. in 1923, and in 1927 became head of the dept. of music, Michigan State College; was also director of Michigan State Institute of Music and Allied Arts.

Richardson, Alfred Madeley, organist; b. Southend-on-Sea, Essex, England, June 1, 1868; d. New York, July 23, 1949. He received his classical education at Keble College, Oxford (A.M., 1892), and studied at the Royal College of Music under Sir C. H. H. Parry, Sir W. Parratt, and E. Pauer; Mus. Doc., Oxon., 1897; 1897-1908, organist and choirmaster at Southwark Cathedral. From 1909 to 1910 he was organist and choirmaster at St. Paul's, Baltimore; from 1912 in New York as instructor in theory at the Institute of Musical Art. —Publ. Choir Training Based on Voice Production (1897); The Psalms; Their Structure and Musical Rendering (1903); Church Music (1904); The Southwark Psalter (1904); Modern Organ Accompaniment (1907); The Choir-Trainer's Art (1914); The Southwark Canticles (1918); Extempore Playing (1922); Helps to Fugue Writing (1930); The Medieval Modes (1933); Fundamental Counterpoint (1936).

Richault (rĕ-shoh'), Charles-Simon, French publisher, b. Chartres, May 10, 1780; d. Paris, Feb. 20, 1866. In 1805 he founded a well-known music-publishing house, the first issues of which were Mozart's concertos and Beethoven's symphonies in score. His sons Guillaume-Simon (1806-77) and Léon (1839-95) carried on the business, publishing works by eminent French composers, and also excellent editions of German classics. Later the stock was bought by the publisher Costallat of Paris.

Riche, Antoine le. See Divitis.

Richter, Alfred, German pedagogue, son of Ernst Friedrich Richter; b. Leipzig, April 1, 1846; d. Berlin, March 1, 1919. Teacher in the Leipzig Cons., 1872-83; then lived in London, but returned to Leipzig in 1897; 1898-99, conductor of the choral society 'Arion'; later went to Berlin. —Publ. an Aufgabenbuch (English ed. as Additional Exercises, N. Y., 1882) supplementary to his father's Lehrbuch der Harmonie; a supplement to his father's Lehrbuch des Kontrapunkts (English transl., N. Y.); Die Elementarkenntnisse der Musik (1895; 6th ed., 1920); Die Lehre von der thematischen Arbeit (1896); Das Klavierspiel für Musikstudierende (1898; 2nd ed., 1912); Die Lehre von der Form in der Musik (1904; 2nd ed., 1911). He also brought out numerous new editions of his father's books. Composed piano pieces, songs, and choruses.

Richter, Ernst Friedrich (Eduard), German theorist and composer; b. Gross-Schönau, Saxony, Oct. 24, 1808; d. Leipzig, April 9, 1879. Son of a schoolmaster, and educated in the Zittau Gymnasium; matriculated 1831 as student of theology at Leipzig Univ., but gave his chief attention to musical study under Weinlig, and on the foundation of the Cons. (1843) became Hauptmann's coadjutor as teacher of harmony and composition; from 1843-47, conductor of the Singakademie; 1851, organist of the Petrikirche; 1862, of the Neukirche, going in a short time to the Nikolaikirche, and in 1868 succeeding Hauptmann as music director of the Nikolai- and Thomaskirche, and cantor of the last-named. —He is best known by his eminently practical and very popular Lehrbuch der Harmonie (1853; 26th ed., 1910; in English, N. Y., 1867; transl. by Th. Baker from the 25th German ed., N. Y., 1912; also in Swedish, Russian, Polish, Italian, French, Spanish, Dutch); its continuations are the Lehrbuch des einfachen und doppelten Kontrapunkts (1872; 13th ed., 1913; in English, London, 1874 and N. Y., 1884); and Lehrbuch der Fuge (1859; 7th ed., 1911; in English, London, 1878). Richter was a skilful contrapuntist, and his vocal music, more especially the a cappella motets, psalms, etc., is pleasing; he also composed string quartets, organ music, violin sonatas, piano sonatas, etc.

Richter, Ferdinand Tobias, Austrian organist and composer; b. Würzburg, 1649; d. Vienna, 1711. He was court organist in Vienna from 1683, and enjoyed a great reputation as a theorist and composer. The following works are extant at Vienna in MS: 2 stage pieces: L'Istro ossequioso (Vienna, Jan. 6, 1694) and Le Promesse degli dei (Vienna, June 9, 1697); 5 Sepulcri (a special type of Viennese oratorio performed in semi-operatic manner during Holy Week); 4 oratorios; sonata for 7 instruments; 2 sonatas for 8 instruments; etc. Modern reprints of his suites, toccatas, and versets are found in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 27).

Richter, Francis William, American organist; nephew of Hans Richter; b. Minneapolis, Feb. 5, 1888; d. Los Angeles, Dec. 25, 1938. He became blind at the age of 3; showed musical ability, and was sent to Vienna, where he studied with the blind pianist Joseph Labor; also took lessons with Leschetizky (piano) and Karl Goldmark (theory); subsequently studied organ with Guilmant in Paris. Returning to the U. S., he was active as church organist and teacher. In 1930 he settled in Portland, Oregon; then moved to Los Angeles.

Richter, Franz Xaver, composer; b. Hollerschau, Moravia, Dec. 1, 1709; d. Strasbourg, Sept. 12, 1789. In 1740 member of the chapel of the Prince-Abbot at Kempten; in 1747 he joined the electoral orch. at Mannheim; 1769 till his death Kapellmeister at Strasbourg Cathedral. A prolific composer of decided originality, one of the chief representatives of the new instrumental style of the Mannheim school. —In the library of Strasbourg Cathedral are the MSS of 28 Masses, 2 Requiems, 16 psalms, 38 motets, 2 cantatas, 2 Passions, Lamentations for Holy Week, etc. (the greater part with orch.). An oratorio, La Deposizione della Croce, was produced in Mannheim (1748). Publ. works: 69 symphonies (4 reprinted by Riemann in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' III, 1 and VII, 2), 6 string quartets (reprinted by Riemann, ib., XV, 1); 8 trios for flute (or violin), cello, and piano (G minor reprinted by Riemann, ib., XVI, 2; A in 'Collegium musicum'); 12 trio sonatas for 2 violins with basso continuo; 6 duets for flute; 6 sonatas for flute with basso continuo; 6 piano concertos with string orch. Almost all the chamber music was originally publ. in London. A treatise, Harmonische Belehrung oder gründliche Anweisung zur musikalischen Tonkunst (MS in library of Brussels Cons.), was publ. in transl. by Ch. Kalkbrenner as Traité d'harmonie et de composition (1804). —Cf. F. X. Mathias, Thematischer Katalog der im Strassburger Münsterarchiv aufbewahrten kirchenmusikalischen Werke Fr. X. Richters, in 'Riemann Festschrift' (Leipzig, 1909).

Richter, Hans, conductor; b. Raab, Hungary, April 4, 1843; d. Bayreuth, Dec. 5, 1916. In 1853, choirboy in the Court Chapel, Vienna; from 1860-65 he studied composition under Sechter, violin under Heissler, and the French horn under Klein-ecke at the Cons. From 1862-66, horn-player in the orch. at the Kärnthner-Theater; from 1866-67 in Lucerne (Tribschen) with Wagner, making for him a fair copy of the Meistersinger score and recommended by him for the position of chorusmaster at the Munich Opera (Dec., 1867); from Aug. 25, 1868, to Sept. 1, 1869, court conductor under Bülow. Conducted rehearsals and initial performances of Lohengrin at Brussels, March 22, 1870; Kapellmeister at the Pest National Th. 1871-75, then at the Imperial Opera, Vienna, becoming 1st Kapellmeister in 1893. From 1875-97 he conducted, concurrently with the opera, the concerts of the Vienna Philh. Society, and from 1880-95 he also conducted the concerts of the 'Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde,' excepting the season of 1883-84. He was chosen by Wagner to conduct the Ring des Nibelungen at Bayreuth in 1876, and at the close of the festival was decorated with the Maximiliansorden by the King of Bavaria and the Falkenorden by the Grand Duke of Weimar. In 1877 (May 7-19) he conducted, alternately with the master himself, the great Wagner Festival at Albert Hall, London. The success of a second festival (May 5-12, 1879), conducted by Richter alone, led to the establishment of an annual series in May, known at first as 'Orchestral Festival Concerts,' later simply as 'Richter Concerts,' which were given regularly until 1897. In that year Richter settled definitely in Manchester as conductor of the Symph. (Hallé) Orch., but did not by any means limit his activity to that city; he still gave occasional 'Richter Concerts' in London, and was regular conductor of the Birmingham Festival (1885-1911) and of the season of Wagner opera at Covent Garden (1903-10); in 1882 he conducted at Drury Lane the English premières of Meistersinger (May 30) and Tristan und Isolde (June 20). Throughout his life he remained in closest touch with Bayreuth, spending a part of every summer there as conductor-in-chief of the festivals. The last concert he conducted was his farewell concert with the Manchester Symph. Orch. on April 11, 1911, having bidden farewell to London the day before at a special concert of the London Symph. Orch.; he then directed a few performances at the Hofoper in Vienna, and after directing with all the fire of youth the superb

Meistersinger performances at Bayreuth in the summer of 1912 he retired from all activities, spending his last years in Bayreuth. Among the world's conductors the figure of Richter is one of the most imposing. A pioneer and unsurpassed interpreter of Wagner's art, he espoused with equal devotion the cause of Brahms, the majority of whose orchestral works had their first performance in Vienna (and later also in England) under Richter's baton. A musician of universal sympathies and master of all styles, his interpretation of classic or modern works was equally convincing and authoritative. —Cf. F. Klickmann, Dr. H. Richter in 'Windsor Magazine' (Sept., 1896); also L. Karpath, Wagners Briefe an Hans Richter (Vienna, 1924); W. Kienzl, in Bettelheim's 'Nekrolog' (1930).

Richter, Sviatoslav Teofilovitch, outstanding Russian pianist; b. Zhitomir, March 20, 1914. The family moved to Odessa when he was a child; he grew up in a musical atmosphere (his father was a pianist); studied symph. literature, and developed exceptional skill in playing orchestral scores at the piano; gave his 1st concert as pianist at 20, at the Sailors' Collective Circle in Odessa. He entered the Moscow Cons. in 1937, studying piano with H. Neuhaus; graduated in 1947; but even before graduation, he won 1st prize at the national contest in 1945; was awarded the Stalin Prize in 1949; was soloist in Prokofiev's 5th piano concerto in Leningrad with the Philadelphia Orch. during its Russian tour, in the spring of 1958. His virtuoso technique and extraordinary interpretative powers, in a wide repertory, place him in the front rank among Russian pianists.

Ricordi & Co., G., famous music-publishing firm of Milan; founded by Giovanni Ricordi, b. Milan, 1785; d. there, March 15, 1853. As first violinist and conductor at the old Fiando theater, he also earned small sums as a music copyist, and in 1807 went to Leipzig to learn music engraving in Breitkopf & Härtel's establishment. Returning, he opened a little shop, and began publishing in 1808, the first works being engraved by himself. He was an intimate of Rossini, whose operas he published; also recognized Verdi's genius when the latter was still unknown. His son Tito Ricordi (b. Milan, Oct. 29, 1811; d. there, Sept. 7, 1888) succeeded to the business. In 1845 he established the 'Gazzetta Musicale,' one of the most important Italian musical papers; also introduced the 'Edizioni economiche,' and under his able administration the house became the largest music-publishing firm in Italy. With Verdi he was on terms of intimate friendship, and that composer's works (especially Aida) made a fortune for both publisher and author. Owing to ill health he withdrew from active management in 1887. —His successor was his son Giulio Ricordi (b. Milan, Dec. 19, 1840; d. there, June 6, 1912), a man of extraordinary business ability, who continued the policy of expansion. In 1888 he bought, and consolidated with his own, the important firm of Francesco Lucca. It was he who discovered Puccini. A trained musician, he publ. under the pseudonym of J. Burgmein, much elegant salon-music (160 opus numbers). Until his death (when it ceased publication) he was ed. of the 'Gazzetta Musicale.' Cf. E. di S. M. Valperga, Ricordi (Rome, 1943); G. Adami, G. Ricordi, l'amico dei musicisti italiani (Milan, 1945). —His son Tito (b. 1865; d. Milan, March 30, 1933), a remarkable pianist, was the subsequent head of the house. The present administrators (1958) are Eugenio Clausetti and Guido Valcarengi. The catalogue contains over 120,000 numbers, and in the archives are the autograph scores of more than 550 operas by the most famous Italian composers. The firm has branches in New York (established 1897), several European countries, Canada, Australia, Mexico, and South America. —Cf. O. Vergani, Piccolo viaggio in un archivio (Milan, 1953).

Rider-Kelsey, Mme. Corinne, American soprano; b. on a farm near Batavia, N. Y., Feb. 24, 1877; d. Toledo, Ohio, July 10, 1947. She attended Oberlin College; then studied voice in Chicago and N. Y.; made her professional debut in Handel's Messiah (St. Louis, Nov. 24, 1904); then appeared in the same work with the N. Y. Oratorio Society almost every season from 1905. She made her 1st operatic appearance as Micæla in Carmen, at Covent Garden, London, on July 7, 1908. In 1926 she married the violinist Lynell Reed, who wrote her biography under the title Be Not Afraid (N. Y., 1955).

Ridout, Godfrey, Canadian composer; b. Toronto, May 6, 1918. He studied with H. Willan; in 1939 was engaged as a teacher at the Royal Cons., Toronto, and since 1948, also at the Univ. of Toronto. —Works: a dramatic symphony, Esther, for soli, chorus, and orch. (Toronto, April 29, 1952); Balade, for viola and string orch. (Toronto, May 29, 1939); Festal Overture (1939); Comedy Overture (1941); Folksong Fantasy for violin, cello, and piano (1951); songs.

Riechers (rē'hěrs), August, German violin-maker; b. Hanover, March 8, 1836; d. Berlin, Jan. 4, 1893. He was trained in the making and repairing of violins by Bausch of Leipzig; Joachim entrusted his violins to Riechers' hands. He publ. a valuable pamphlet, Die Geige und ihr Bau (1893; in English as The Violin and the Art of its Construction; a Treatise on the Stradivarius Violin, 1895), with 4 plates of full-size diagrams exhibiting the structure and exact dimensions of the model Stradivarius violin.

Riedel, Karl, German choral conductor; b. Kronenberg, near Elberfeld, Oct. 6, 1827; d. Leipzig, June 3, 1888. He was a silk-dyer by trade; the Revolution of 1848 upset his business and turned his thoughts to the serious study of music. He became a pupil of Carl Wilhelm at Krefeld, and entered the Leipzig Cons. in 1849. In 1854 he organized the 'Riedelverein,' a singing society which later became famous for the performance of ancient church music. The first public concert was given in 1855; in 1868, Riedel was elected president, of the 'Allgemeiner deutscher Musikverein,' and founded the Leipzig branch. A powerful advocate of the Wagner Festivals, he also became president of the 'Wagnerverein.' —Even after its founder's death the 'Riedelverein' maintained its reputation as one of the finest choral organizations in Germany; successive conductors were H. Kretzschmar (1888-97), G. Göhler (1897-1907 and 1909-13), R. Hagel (1907-09), R. Wetz (1913-15), F. Mayerhoff (1915), M. Ludwig (1919). —Publ. the collections, 'Altböhmische Hussiten- und Weihnachtslieder' and '12 altddeutsche Lieder'; a skilful reduction of Schütz's 4 Passions to one; and editions of Schütz's Sieben Worte, J. W. Franck's Geistliche Melodien, Eccard's Preussische Festlieder, Praetorius's Weihnachtslieder. —Cf. A. Göhler, Der Riedelverein zu Leipzig (Leipzig, 1904; includes a brief biographical sketch of Riedel).

Riedt, Friedrich Wilhelm, German flutist; b. Berlin, Jan. 24, 1712; d. there, Jan. 5, 1784. He studied with Graun; in 1741 became chamber musician to Frederick the Great; 1750, director of the 'Musikalische Gesellschaft' in Berlin. He wrote 6 trios for 2 flutes and continuo; sonatas for 2 flutes; a sonata for flute and cello; publ. a Versuch über die musikalischen Intervalle (1753); contributed various articles (critical and polemical) to Marburg's 'Historisch-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik.'

Riegel (rē'gēl), Heinrich (Henri) Joseph, composer; b. Wertheim, Franconia, Feb. 9, 1741; d. Paris, May, 1799. Pupil of F. X. Richter in Mannheim and Jommelli in Stuttgart; settled in Paris in 1768; from 1782-86 conductor of the Concert Spirituel. On the title page of several works publ. in Paris his name appears as Rigel (which form his son [q.v.] adopted). He is one of the earliest composers who wrote ensemble music with piano (e.g., piano quartets; and 'symphonies' for 2 violins, cello, 2 horns, and piano); also composed the operas (all produced in Paris) Le Savetier et le financier (1778), L'Automat (1779), Rosanie (1780), Blanche et Vermeille (1781), Lucas (1785), Les Amours du Gros-Caillou (1786), Alix de Beaucaire (1791). A 'symphony' in D was republ. by R. Sondheim in 1923. —Cf. G. de Saint-Foix, Rigel, in the 'Revue Musicale' (June, 1924); R. Sondheim, H. J. Rigel, in the 'Music Review' (Aug., 1956).

Riegger, Wallingford, outstanding American composer; b. Albany, Georgia, April 29, 1885. He received his primary education at home; his mother was a pianist; his father a violinist. The family moved to New York in 1900, and Riegger began serious study with Percy Goetschius (theory) and Alwin Schroeder (cello) at the Institute of Musical Art; after graduation (1907), he went to Berlin, where he took courses at the Hochschule für Musik; conducted opera in Würzburg and Königsberg (1915-16); also led the Bluethner Orch. in Berlin (1916-17). He returned to America in 1917 and became teacher of theory and cello at Drake Univ., Des Moines (1918-22); in 1922 received the Paderewski Prize for his piano trio; in 1924 he was awarded the E. S. Coolidge Prize for his setting of Keats' La Belle Dame sans Merci; in 1925 he was given the honorary degree of Dr. of Music by the Cincinnati Cons. He taught at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (1924-25) and at the Ithaca Cons. (1926-28); then settled in N. Y., where he became active as composer and participant in various modern music societies; took part in the development of electronic instruments (in association with Theremin), and learned to play an electronic cello. His music is of a highly advanced nature; a master craftsman, he wrote in disparate styles with an equal degree of proficiency; used numerous pseudonyms for certain works (William Richards, Walter Scotson, Gerald Wilfring Gore, John H. McCurdy, George Northrup, Robert Sedgwick, Leonard Gregg, Edwin Farrell, Edgar Long, etc.). After a long period of non-acceptance on the part of the public and the critics, he began to receive recognition; his 3rd symph. was the choice of the N. Y. Music Critics Circle (1948); member of The National Institute of Arts and Letters (1953). —Works: for orch.: American Polonaise (1923), Rhapsody (N. Y., Oct. 29, 1931), Fantasy and Fugue for organ and orch. (1931), Passacaglia and Fugue (Washington, March 19, 1944), Symph. No. 1 (1935), Symph. No. 2 (1946), Symph. No. 3 (N. Y., May 16, 1948), Symph. No. 4 (Univ. of Illinois, April 12, 1957), Scherzo (N. Y., Jan. 30, 1933), Dichotomy (Berlin, March 10, 1932), concerto for piano and woodwinds (Washington, Feb. 19, 1954), Dance Rhythms (Atlanta, March 4, 1955), Music for Orchestra (Cleveland, March 22, 1956), Overture (1956), Preamble and Fugue (1956), La Belle Dame sans Merci, for 4 solo voices and chamber orch. (Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 19, 1924); Study in Sonority, for 10 violins or multiples of 10 (1927); suite for solo flute (1929); 3 canons for flute, oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1930); Divertissement for flute, harp, and cello (N. Y., Dec. 11, 1933); Music for Brass Choir; duos for 3 woodwind instruments; 2 string quartets; Whimsy, for cello and piano; sonatina for violin and piano; piano quintet (1950); nonet for brass (1951); New and Old, 12 pieces for piano in various styles; several stage works for dance, scored for various instrumental ensembles (Theater Piece, Chronicle, Case History, Trojan Incident, etc.); a 'Suite for Younger Orchestras'; The Dying of the Light, song to words by Dylan Thomas (1956); etc. —Cf. H. Cowell, ed., American Composers on American Music (1933); R. F. Goldman, The Music of Wallingford Riegger, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1950; with a list of works).

Riehl, Wilhelm Heinrich von, German writer on music; b. Biebrich-on-Rhine, May 6, 1823; d. Munich, Nov. 16, 1897. He studied at the Univ. of Munich, where he became (1854) prof. of political economy; also lectured on music history. He publ. the valuable compendium, Musikalische Charakterköpfe (3 vols., 1853-61; 6th ed., 1879; 3rd vol. contains the essays Die Kriegsgeschichte der deutschen Oper and Die beiden Beethoven), and 2 vols. of original songs, Hausmusik (1856; 1877). Posthumous publications: Zur Geschichte der romantischen Oper (Berlin, 1928); Musik im Leben des Volkes, a collection of Riehl's articles, compiled and ed. by J. Müller-Blattau (Kassel, 1936). —Cf. H. Simonsfeld, Heinrich Riehl als Kulturhistoriker (Munich, 1899).

Riem (rēm), Friedrich Wilhelm, German organist and composer; b. Kölleda, Thuringia, Feb. 17, 1779; d. Bremen, April 20, 1857. He was a pupil of J. A. Hiller in Leipzig; organist at the Thomaskirche (1807-14), then in Bremen. He wrote an oratorio, Der Erlöser; a string quintet, a piano quartet, 3 string quartets, 4 violin sonatas, 6 piano sonatas; also publ. a collection of organ pieces for concert and church.

Riemann, (Karl Wilhelm Julius) Hugo, distinguished German musicologist; b. Grossmehlra, near Sondershausen, July 18, 1849; d. Leipzig, July 10, 1919. He was trained in theory by Frankenberger at Sondershausen, studying the piano with Barthel and Ratzenberger; took the gymnasial course in the Rossleben 'Klosterschule,' 1865-68, and studied at first law, then philosophy and history, at Berlin and Tübingen; and, after passing through the campaign of 1870-71, entered the Leipzig Cons. In 1873 he took the degree of Dr. phil. at Göttingen with the dissertation Musikalische Logik (publ.); was active as a conductor and teacher at Bielefeld until 1878, when he qualified as University lecturer on music at Leipzig; taught music at Bromberg 1880-81, then at the Hamburg Cons. till 1890, at the Sondershausen Cons. for a short time, and at the Wiesbaden Cons. until 1895, when he resumed his lectures at Leipzig. In 1905 he was made prof.; in 1908 director of the newly established 'Collegium Musicum,' and in 1914 also director of the newly established 'Forschungsinstitut für Musikwissenschaft.' He was made Mus. Doc. (hon. c.) by the Univ. of Edinburgh (1899). On his 60th birthday he was honored by the publication of a 'Festschrift' (ed. by Karl Menckner) containing contributions from the world's foremost scholars, many of whom were Riemann's pupils. The second Riemann 'Festschrift' was publ., after his death, in 1919. —The mere bulk of Riemann's writings, covering every branch of musical science, constitutes a monument of indefatigable industry, and is proof of enormous concentration and capacity for work. When one takes into consideration that much of this work is the result of painstaking research and of original, often revolutionary, thinking, one must share the great respect and admiration in which Riemann was held by his contemporaries. Although many of his ideas are now seen in a different light, his works treating of harmony were considered to constitute the foundation of modern musical theory. His researches in the field of music history have solved a number of vexed problems, and thrown light on others. And, finally, in formulating the new science of musicology, the labors of Riemann have been a most important factor. —Works (a partial list): Theory: Musikalische Syntax (1877); Skizze einer neuen Methode der Harmonielehre (1880); rewritten as Handbuch der Harmonielehre (1887; 8th ed., 1920); Elementarmusiklehre (1882); Neue Schule der Melodik (1883); Vergleichende Klavierschule (1883); Musikalische Dynamik und Agogik (1884); Praktische Anleitung zum Phrasieren (1886; rewritten as Vademecum der Phrasierung, 1900); Systematische Modulationslehre (1887); Lehrbuch des einfachen, doppelten und imitierenden Kontrapunkts (1888; 6th ed., 1921; in English, 1904); Die Elemente der musikalischen Ästhetik (1900); Grosse Kompositionslehre (vol. I, Der homophone Satz, 1902; vol. II, Der polyphone Satz, 1903; vol. III, Der Orchestersatz und der dramatische Vokalstil, 1913); System der musikalischen Rhythmik und Metrik (1903); Grundriss der Musikwissenschaft (1908; 4th ed. edited by J. Wolf, 1928); Analyse von Beethovens Klaviersonaten (3 vols., 1915-19). —History: Studien zur Geschichte der Notenschrift (1878); Die Entwicklung unserer Notenschrift (1881); Die 'Martyria' der byzantinischen liturgischen Notation (1882); Notenschrift und Notendruck (1896); Geschichte der Musiktheorie im 9-19. Jahrhundert (1898); Epochen und Helden der Musikgeschichte (1900); Geschichte der Musik seit Beethoven (1901); Handbuch der Musikgeschichte (5 vols., 1904-13); as supplement to this, a Musikgeschichte in Beispielen (1912); a collection of 150 compositions, 13th-18th century; 4th ed., with introduction by A. Schering, 1929); Die byzantinische Notenschrift im 10-15. Jahrhundert (vol. I, 1909; vol. II, 1915); Kompendium der Notenschriftkunde (1910); Folkloristische Tonalitätsstudien (1916). —Lexicography: Musiklexikon (1882; revised and largely rewritten periodically, it has long been recognized as one of the world's standard reference-works on music; 9th to 11th eds. by A. Einstein, 1919-29; in English, 1893-96 [4th ed., 1908]; also in Danish [1888-92; abridged], French [1896 ff.], Russian [1902 ff.]); Opernhandbuch (1884; with 2 supplements, 1887, 1893). —To Schlesinger's 'Meisterführer' he contributed analyses of Beethoven's string quartets (vol. XII, 1910), and some of the orchestral works of Brahms (vol. III, 1908), Schumann (vol. XIII, 1911), and Tchaikovsky (vol. XIV, 1911); revised Marx's Lehre von der musikalischen Komposition (4 vols.; 1887-90); ed. vols. IV (1907) and V (1908) of Deiters' transl. of Thayer's Beethoven, and revised vols. II and III (1910, 1911). He publ. in various journals innumerable (many very important) articles and essays; of these some were collected and publ. as Präludien und Studien (3 vols., 1895, 1900, 1901). —He ed. numerous works of early composers in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' and in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst'; also the collections 'Alte Kammermusik' (4 vols.); 'Collegium musicum' (50 books), 'Hausmusik aus alter Zeit' (96 madrigals, canzone, etc., of the 14th and 15th centuries), etc. —He composed many instructive piano pieces; also chamber music, choruses, and songs. —Cf. the biographical sketch by K. Mennicke in 'Riemann-Festschrift' (Leipzig, 1909); R. Heuler, Dr. H. Riemann als Volksschulgesangspädagog, in 'Sonde' (Würzburg, 1910); Riemann issue of the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (July, 1919); H. Grabner, Die Funktionstheorie Riemanns (Munich, 1923); H. L. Denecke, Die Kompositionslehre Hugo Riemanns (Kiel, 1937); W. Gurlitt, H. Riemann (Wiesbaden, 1951). A new revised ed. of the Musiklexikon, prepared under the editorship of W. Gurlitt, was publ. in 3 vols. in 1958-59.

Riemann, Ludwig, German writer on music; b. Lüneburg, March 25, 1863; d. Essen, Jan. 25, 1927. Pupil of his father; also of O. von Königsłow and H. Schröder (violin), H. Grüters and A. Löschorh (piano), J. Alsleben, A. Haupt, and W. Bargiel (composition) at the Königliche Institut für Kirchenmusik in Berlin; from 1889, teacher of singing at the Gymnasium in Essen; 1918, prof. Publ. Populäre Darstellung der Akustik in Beziehung zur Musik (1896), Über eigentümliche, bei Natur- und orientalischen Kulturvölkern vorkommende, Tonreihen und ihre Beziehungen zu den Gesetzen der Harmonie (1899), Das Wesen des Klavierklanges und seine Beziehungen zum Anschlag (1911; valuable), Das Erkennen der Ton- und Akkordzusammenhänge in Tonstücken klassischer und moderner Literatur (1925), Kurzgefasste praktische Modulationsübungen (2nd ed., 1924), etc.

Riemenschneider, Albert, American organist; b. Berea, O., Aug. 31, 1878; d. Akron, O., July 20, 1950; studied at Baldwin Wallace College (B.A., 1899), in Cleveland with Ch. Clemens and J. H. Rogers, in Vienna with R. Fuchs and H. Reinhold, and in Paris with Widor and Guilmant; 1905-17, conductor of the chorus and orch. of Baldwin Wallace Cons.; 1933, president of the Music Teachers National Association; director of the Baldwin-Wallace Cons.; 1949, acting pres. of the College. He was a Bach specialist.—Publ. the following eds. of Bach: Liturgical Year (the Orgelbüchlein; 1933); Chorales (120 chorales in original clefs and with the original orchestral parts; 2 vols., 1939; with Ch. N. Boyd); 371 Harmonized Chorales and 69 Chorale Melodies with Figured Bass (1941); 'Schübeler' Chorales (1942).

Riepel, Joseph, Austrian composer and theorist, b. Hörschlag, Jan., 1709 (baptized Jan. 23); d. Regensburg, Oct. 23, 1782. Principal work: De rhythmpoeia (1752). —Cf. W. Twittenhoff, Die musiktheoretischen Schriften J. Riepels (Halle, 1935); E. Schwarzmaier, Die Takt- und Tonordnung J. Riepels (Wolfenbüttel, 1936); J. Merkl, J. Riepel als Komponist (Kallmünz, 1937).

Ries (rēs), Ferdinand (eldest son of Franz 'der alte Ries' [1775-1846], concert-master and music director to the Elector Max Franz at Bonn), b. Bonn, Nov. 29, 1784; d. Frankfurt, Jan. 13, 1838. Piano pupil of Beethoven, his father's friend at Bonn, from 1801-05 at Vienna; studied theory with Albrechtsberger. He lived 2 years in Paris, made pianistic tours in North Germany, Scandinavia, and Russia, and resided in London 1813-24, prominent as a player, teacher, and composer. He then retired to an estate at Godesburg, near Bonn; and from 1830 resided in Frankfurt, though he was town music director at Aix, 1834-36. He is best known by his Biographische Notizen über L. van Beethoven (1838; reprinted by A. Kalischer, 1906), which his intimacy with the great man renders extremely valuable. He was an excellent pianist, and a prolific composer; among his works are 52 well-written piano sonatas (in which the method, but not the spirit, of Beethoven is apparent). —Cf. L. Überfeldt, F. Ries' Jugendentwicklung (Bonn, 1915).

Ries, Franz, German publisher; son of Hubert Ries; b. Berlin, April 7, 1846; d. Naumburg, June 20, 1932. Violin-pupil of his father, and of Massart at the Paris Cons. (1866-68); excellent concert violinist, but gave up playing in 1875 on account of nervousness, and entered the music-publishing business; co-founder and director, from 1882-1924, of the firm of Ries & Erler, Berlin. In 1924 his son, Robert, became the proprietor. —As a composer (pupil of Kiel), he wrote fine orchestral and chamber music.

Ries, Hubert, German violinist; brother of Ferdinand Ries; b. Bonn, April 1, 1802; d. Berlin, Sept. 14, 1886. Studied at Kassel under Spohr (violin) and Hauptmann (composition); in 1836, concertmaster of the royal orch., Berlin; in 1851 teacher at the Royal 'Theaterinstrumentalschule'; pensioned 1872. Publ. excellent instructive works for violin: Violinschule (also in English); Erzählungen aus alter Zeit (30 instructive duets); 15 Violinstudien von mässiger Schwierigkeit, op. 26; 30 Violinstudien für den ersten Unterricht, op. 28; 50 Intonationsübungen, 12 Violinstudien in Form von Konzertstücken, op. 9; duets, exercises, etc.; also 2 violin concertos (op. 13 and 16).

Riesemann, (Bernhard) Oskar von, musicologist; b. Reval, Feb. 29, 1880; d. St. Niklausen, near Lucerne, Sept. 28, 1934. Studied music and musicology in Munich (Lipps, Riehl, Sandberger, Thuille); Moscow (1899-1900), Berlin (Fleischer, Friedlaender), and Leipzig (Riemann); 1907, Dr. phil., Leipzig; 1912-13, traveled in South America, then lived, until 1915, in Moscow as music critic and conductor (Koussevitzky concerts, 1913-14); fled during the Revolution to Munich, where he lived for a time. —Publ. Die Notation des alt-russischen Kirchengesanges (1908); Monographien zur russischen Musik (I, 1923; II, 1928, Musorsky [in English, N. Y., 1929]); Rachmaninoff's Recollections . . . (N. Y., 1934); translated into German Scriabin's Promethische Phantasien (1924), Sabaneiev's Geschichte der russischen Musik (1926), Rimsky-Korsakov's Chronik meines musikalischen Lebens (1928), etc.

Rieter-Biedermann, J. Melchior, Swiss publisher; b. Winterthur, May 14, 1811; d. there, Jan. 25, 1876. He founded a successful music-publishing house in 1849 in Winterthur, with a branch at Leipzig in 1862, which gradually became more important than the original house, so that the latter was dissolved in 1884. After the death of the last proprietor, Robert Astor (d. Leipzig, April 14, 1917), the firm was bought by C. F. Peters. Brahms was the most famous composer in their catalog (see Brahms' Briefwechsel, vol. 14).

Rieti (rē-yēh'-tē), Vittorio, composer; b. Alexandria, Egypt (of Italian parents), Jan. 28, 1898. He studied with Frugatta in Milan and Respighi in Rome. After 1925 he lived mostly in France; in 1939 came to the U. S.; became an American citizen (June 1, 1944); was instructor at the Peabody Cons. in Baltimore (1948-49); then at Roosevelt College, Chicago (1950); in 1958 at Queens College, N. Y.; also made prolonged sojourns in Europe. His style of composition represents an effective synthesis of cosmopolitan modern ideas; he is particularly successful in his ballet music. —Works: Orfeo, a lyric tragedy (1928); Teresa nel bosco, chamber opera (Venice Festival, Sept. 15, 1934); Don Perlimplin, opera in 1 act (1949; première, Univ. of Illinois, March 30, 1952); The Pet Shop, opera in 1 act (N. Y., April 14, 1958); ballets: L'Arca di Noè (1922), Barabau, with chorus (Ballets Russes, London, Dec. 11, 1925), Le Bal (Monte Carlo, 1929); David triomphant (Paris, 1937), Waltz Academy (Boston, 1944), The Mute Wife, on themes by Paganini (N. Y., 1944), Trionfo di Bacco e Arianna (N. Y., 1948), Unicorn (1950); oratorio, Viaggio d'Europa (Rome, 1954); 5 symphonies; of these No. 4 is subtitled Sinfonia Tripartita (St. Louis, Dec. 16, 1944); Concerto du Loup (named after the Loup River in Southern France) for chamber orch. (Los Angeles, Aug. 8, 1942); concerto for 5 wind instruments and orch. (Prague Festival, May 31, 1924); 2 piano concertos (1926; 1937); violin concerto (1928); harpsichord concerto (1930); cello concerto (1935); concerto for 2 pianos and orch. (Cincinnati, 1952); quintet for woodwinds (N. Y., 1958); sonata for flute, oboe, bassoon, and piano (1924); 3 string quartets (1926; 1942; 1953); Madrigal for 12 instruments; songs; piano pieces. —Cf. G. Rossi Doria, in 'Il Pianoforte' (1924).

Rietsch (rēch), Heinrich, musicologist and composer, b. Falkenau-on-Eger, Sept. 22, 1860; d. Prague, Dec. 12, 1927. Studied in Vienna under F. Krenn, E. Mandyczewski, R. Fuchs (composition) and E. Hanslick, G. Adler (musicology). 1895, Privatdozent for musicology at Vienna Univ.; 1900, succeeded G. Adler at the German Univ. in Prague; 1909, full prof. and director of the Institute for Musicology. In the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' he ed. G. Muffat's Florilegium (I, 2 and II, 2), songs of Frauenlob, Reinmar von Zweter, and Alexander (XX, 2), and J. J. Fux's Concentus musico-instrumentalis (XXIII, 2). Author of Die Mondsee-Wiener Liederhandschrift und der Mönch von Salzburg (1886; with F. A. Mayer), Die Tonkunst in der 2. Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts (1900; 2nd ed., 1906), Die deutsche Liedweise (1904), Die Grundlagen der Tonkunst (1907; 2nd ed., 1918), etc.

—Cf. autobiographical sketch in 'Neue Musikzeitung' (1915); P. Nettl, Verzeichnis der wissenschaftlichen und künstlerischen Arbeiten von Rietsch bis 1920, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' II (p. 736); see also ib. X (p. 193; valuable).

Rietschel (rēt'shēl), Georg Christian, German theologist; b. Dresden, May 10, 1842; d. Leipzig, June 13, 1914. Studied theology and after filling several pastorates in various cities became prof. of theology at Leipzig Univ. in 1899. Wrote Die Aufgabe der Orgel im Gottesdienste bis in das 18. Jahrhundert (1892; valuable), and Lehrbuch der Liturgik (2 vols., 1900, 1909).

Rietz, Julius, German conductor and editor; b. Berlin, Dec. 28, 1812; d. Dresden, Sept. 12, 1877. His father was the royal chamber-musician Johann Friedrich Rietz (d. 1828); his brother Eduard (1802-32) was Mendelssohn's intimate friend, a talented violinist, and the founder of the Berlin Philharmonic Society. —Julius was a cello pupil of Schmidt, B. Romberg, and M. Ganz; in 1828 he joined the orch. of the Königsstädt'sches Theater in Berlin. In 1834 he became 2nd conductor at the Düsseldorf opera under Mendelssohn, whom he succeeded as 1st in 1835, next year becoming town music director. In 1847 he was called to Leipzig as theater-Kapellmeister (resigned 1854) and conductor of the Singakademie; in 1848 also conductor of the Gewandhaus Concerts, and prof. of composition at the Cons. He became court Kapellmeister at Dresden in 1860; later he was made artistic director of the Cons., and received the title of 'General-Musikdirektor' in 1874. A conductor of great ability, and a scholarly musician, Rietz's editorial work was of high value; his last work was the complete edition of Mendelssohn for Breitkopf & Härtel (1874-77); he also edited the St. Matthew Passion and the B minor Mass in the complete ed. of Bach, Mozart's operas and symphonies, Beethoven's symphonies and overtures, etc. As a composer he belonged to the Mendelssohn school. —Cf. Pauline Viardot-Garcia to J. Rietz, Letters of Friendship, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1915, to Jan., 1916); P. A. Merbach, Briefwechsel zwischen Eduard Devrient und J. Rietz, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' III (1921).

Riezler (rēts'lēr), Walter, German musicologist; b. Munich, Oct. 2, 1878; studied music with Max Reger and Felix Mottl (1904-06). He was at first interested principally in art; he was director of the Stettin Museum of Fine Arts (1910-33); in 1934 he returned to Munich; since 1946, prof. of music history at the Univ. of Munich. He publ. an excellent monograph on Beethoven (1936) which went through 7 German editions up to 1951 and was also translated into English (N. Y., 1938).

Rigel (rē-zhēl'), Henri-Jean, French composer; son and pupil of Heinrich Joseph Riegel (q.v.); b. Paris, May 11, 1772; d. Abbeville, Dec. 16, 1852. From 1798-1800, chef d'orchestre of the French Opera in Cairo; 1808, chamber pianist to Napoleon. Composed operas, oratorios, chamber music, etc.

Righini, Vincenzo, Italian composer; b. Bologna, Jan. 22, 1756; d. there, Aug. 19, 1812. Pupil of Bernacchi (singing) and Padre Martini (counterpoint). Stage-début as a tenor singer at Parma, 1775; went to Prague in 1776, where he also began composing; in 1780 he became singing-master to the Archduchess Elizabeth at Vienna, and conductor at the Opera Buffa; from 1788-92, Electoral Kapellmeister at Mainz; and in 1793, after the successful production of his opera Enea nel Lazio at Berlin, he was appointed Kapellmeister at the Court Opera. —Works: some 20 operas, including Il Convitato di pietra (Vienna, Aug. 21, 1777; one of the early settings of the Don Giovanni story) and Gerusalemme liberata and La Selva incantata (a single work consisting of 2 2-act operas; Berlin, Jan. 17, 1803); a series of very fine vocal exercises (1806).

Rignold, Hugo, English conductor; b. Kingston-on-Thames, May 15, 1905. His father was a theatrical conductor; his mother an opera singer. He was taken to Canada as a child, and studied violin in Winnipeg; in 1920 he returned to England on a scholarship to the Royal Academy of Music. During World War II he was stationed in Cairo, where he trained a radio orch. in performances of symph. music. Returning to England, he was a ballet conductor at Covent Garden (1947); from 1948 to 1950 was conductor of the Liverpool Philharmonic. —Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (Bristol, 1951; pp. 151-54).

Riisager, Knudage, Danish composer; b. Port Kunda, Estonia, March 6, 1897. He studied economics at the Univ. of Copenhagen; then music with Peder Gram and Otto Malling; subsequently took lessons with Albert Roussel and Paul Le Flem in Paris. In 1937 he was elected president of the Danish Composers' Union. —Works: opera buffa, Susanne (Copenhagen, Jan. 7, 1950); ballets: Benzin (Copenhagen, Dec. 26, 1930), Qarrtsiluni, on Eskimo themes (Copenhagen, Feb. 21, 1942), Phoenix (Copenhagen, May 12, 1946), Étude, based on Czerny's studies (Copenhagen, Jan. 15, 1948); incidental music to 2 plays by Munk: Niels Ebbesen (Copenhagen, Sept. 1, 1945) and Pilatus (Copenhagen, Feb. 20, 1947); Danish Psalm, for chorus and orch. (Copenhagen, Sept. 18, 1945); 4 symphonies (1925, 1927, 1935, 1940); orchestral suite Tivoli-Tivoli (Copenhagen, Aug. 15, 1943); concerto for trumpet and strings (London Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 20, 1938); concertino for saxophone and orch. (1939); several overtures; Sinfonia serena, for strings and percussion (1950); Suite dionysiaque, for chamber orch. (1924); wind quintet (1921); Divertimento, for 5 wind instruments and string quartet (1925); 6 string quartets (1918, 1920, 1922, 1926, 1932, 1943); concertino for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1932); Serenade, for flute, violin, and cello (1936); 2 violin sonatas (1917, 1923); piano sonata (1931); Quatre épigrammes, for piano (1921); and other pieces. He publ. a collection of essays, Det usynlige Mønster (Copenhagen, 1957). —Cf. S. Berg, Knudåge Riisager (Copenhagen, 1950; contains a list of works).

Rimbault, Edward Francis, English writer and editor; b. London, June 13, 1816; d. there, Sept. 26, 1876. Son of Stephen Francis Rimbault, organist and composer (1773-1837); pupil of his father, of Samuel Wesley and Dr. Crotch; organist of the Swiss Church, Soho, in 1832. He began giving lectures on English musical history in 1838; in 1840 he founded, with E. Taylor and W. Chappell, the Musical Antiquarian Society; received the degree of Dr. phil. from Göttingen. He composed various songs, of which Happy Land became a popular favorite. —His writings include: Bibliotheca Madrigaliana (1847); English poetry and compositions publ. during the reigns of Elizabeth and James I; The Organ, Its History and Construction (1855 and other eds.; it is the first part of the Appendix to Hopkins' The Organ: its History); The Pianoforte; Its Origin, Progress and Construction (1860); The Early English Organ-builders and Their Works (1864); J. S. Bach (after Hilgenfeldt and Forkel; 1869); a Singing Tutor (after Lablache), etc. He edited many collections of sacred and secular music, especially by English composers of the 16th-18th centuries.

Rimsky-Korsakov, Andrey Nikolayevitch, son of the composer; b. St. Petersburg, Oct. 17, 1878; d. there (Leningrad), May 23, 1940. He studied philology at the Univ. of St. Petersburg, and later in Strasbourg and Heidelberg (Dr. phil., 1903); returning to Russia, he undertook his important investigations of Russian music history and biography. In 1915 he began the publication of the illustrated magazine, 'Musikalny Sovremennik' ('The Musical Contemporary'); it was suspended in 1917. He was subsequently active in various bibliographical and lexicographical pursuits. He was married to the composer Julia Weissberg. —Publications: N. A. Rimsky-Korsakov; Life and Works, in 5 issues (Moscow, 1933, 1935, 1936, 1937; vol. 5, 1946, ed. by Vladimir Rimsky-Korsakov); Maximilian Steinberg (Moscow, 1928); edited M. P. Mussorgsky, Letters and Documents (1932; extremely valuable); edited and annotated his father's Chronicle (Moscow, 1935); compiled Musical Treasures of the Manuscript Dept. of the Leningrad Public Library (1938); contributed numerous articles to Russian and foreign journals.

Rimsky-Korsakov, Georgy Mikhailovitch, grandson of the composer and nephew of Andrey Rimsky-Korsakov; b. St. Petersburg, Dec. 26, 1901. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons.; in 1923, founded a society for the cultivation of quarter-tone music; composed some works in that system; publ. the articles Foundations of the Quarter-Tone System (Leningrad, 1925) and The Deciphering of the 'Luce' Part in Scriabin's Prometheus, in the Russian magazine 'De musica' (1927); then became active in work on electronic musical instruments; was co-inventor of the 'Emeriton' (1930), capable of producing a complete series of tones at any pitch and of any chosen or synthetic tone color; wrote solo pieces for it; also an octet for 2 emeritons, 2 clarinets, bassoon, violin, viola, and cello (1932). In 1953 he was appointed prof. of orchestration at the Leningrad Conservatory.

Rimsky-Korsakov, Nikolay Andreyevitch, celebrated Russian composer; b. Tikhvin, near Novgorod, March 18, 1844; d. Liubensk, near St. Petersburg, June 21, 1908. He remained in the country until he was 12 years old; in 1856 he entered the Naval School in St. Petersburg, graduating in 1862. As a child he took piano lessons with provincial teachers, and later with a professional musician, Théodore Canillé, who introduced him to Balakirev; he also met Cui and Borodin. In 1862 he was sent on the clipper Almaz on a voyage that lasted 2½ years; returning to Russia in the summer of 1865, he settled in St. Petersburg, where he remained most of his life. During his travels he maintained contact with Balakirev, and continued to report to him the progress of his musical composition. He completed his 1st symphony (which was also the earliest work in this form by a Russian composer), and it was performed in St. Petersburg under Balakirev's direction on Dec. 31, 1865, at a concert of the Free Music School in St. Petersburg. In 1871 Rimsky-Korsakov was engaged as prof. of composition and orchestration at the St. Petersburg Cons., even though he was aware of the inadequacy of his own technique. He remained on the faculty until his death, with the exception of a few months in 1905, when he was relieved of his duties as prof. for his public support of the rebellious students during the revolution of that year; the roster of his pupils testifies to his importance as a teacher: Glazunov, Liadov, Arensky, Ippolitov-Ivanov, Gretchaninov, N. Tcherepnin, Steinberg, Stravinsky, etc. In 1873 he abandoned his naval career, but was appointed to the post of inspector of military orchestras of the Russian Navy, until it was abolished in 1884. From 1883 to 1894 he was also assistant director of the Court Chapel, and led the chorus and the orchestra there. Although he was not a gifted conductor, he gave many performances of his own orchestral works; made his début at a charity concert for the victims of the Volga famine, in St. Petersburg, March 2, 1874; the program included the 1st performance of his 3rd symph. From 1886 until 1900 he conducted the annual Russian Symphony concerts organized by the publisher Belaiev; in June 1889 he conducted 2 concerts of Russian music at the World Exposition in Paris; in 1890 he conducted a concert of Russian music in Brussels; led a similar concert there in 1900. His last appearance abroad was in the spring of 1907, when he conducted in Paris 2 Russian historic concerts arranged by Diaghilev; in the same year he was elected corresponding member of the French Academy to succeed Grieg. These activities, however, did not distract him from his central purpose as a national Russian composer. His name was grouped with those of Cui, Borodin, Balakirev, and Mussorgsky as the 'Mighty Five'

and he maintained an intimate friendship with most of them; at Mussorgsky's death he collected his manuscripts and prepared them for publication; he also revised Mussorgsky's opera Boris Godunov; it was in Rimsky-Korsakov's version that the opera became famous. In the 20th century, strong criticism was voiced against Rimsky-Korsakov's reduction of Mussorgsky's original harmonies and melodic lines to an academically acceptable standard. He had decided influence in the affairs of the Belaiev publ. firm, and was a permanent member of the Belaiev Prize Jury. He thus helped publish a great number of works by Russian composers of the St. Petersburg group; only a small part of these sumptuously printed scores represents the best in Russian music, but culturally Rimsky-Korsakov's solicitude was of great importance. Although he was far from being a revolutionary, he freely expressed his disgust at the bungling administration in Czarist Russia; he was particularly indignant about the attempts of the authorities to alter Pushkin's lines in his own last opera, Le Coq d'or, and refused to compromise; he died, of angina pectoris, with the situation still unresolved; the opera was produced posthumously, with the censor's changes; the complete text was not restored until the revolution of 1917. —Rimsky-Korsakov was one of the greatest masters of Russian music. His source of inspiration was Glinka's operatic style; he made use of both the purely Russian idiom and coloristic Oriental melodic patterns; such works as his symph. suite Scheherazade and Le Coq d'or represent Russian Orientalism at its best; in the purely Russian style the opera Snow Maiden and the Russian Easter Overture are outstanding examples. The influence of Wagner and Liszt in his music was small; only in his opera, The Legend of the Invisible City of Kitezh are there perceptible echoes from Parsifal. In the art of orchestration Rimsky-Korsakov had few equals; his treatment of instruments, in solo passages and in ensemble, was invariably idiomatic. In his treatise on orchestration he selected only passages from his own works to demonstrate the principles of practical and effective application of registers and tone colors. Although Rimsky-Korsakov was an academician in his general esthetics, he experimented boldly with melodic progressions and ingenious harmonies that pointed towards modern usages. He specifically favored the major scale with the lowered submediant; in Mlada he had a part for an ocarina tuned in a scale of alternating semitones and whole tones; in Le Coq d'or and Kashchey the

Immortal he applied dissonant harmonies in unusual superpositions; but he set for himself a definite limit in innovation, and severely criticized Richard Strauss, Debussy, and Vincent d'Indy for their practices. — Works: Operas: Pskovityanka (The Maid of Pskov; 1868-72; revised, 1891; St. Petersburg, Jan. 13, 1873; last version, St. Petersburg, April 18, 1895); Maiskaya Notch (May Night; St. Petersburg, Jan. 21, 1880); Snieguotchka (Snow Maiden; St. Petersburg, Feb. 10, 1882); Mlada (St. Petersburg, Nov. 1, 1892); Notch pored Rozhdestvom (Night Before Christmas; St. Petersburg, Dec. 10, 1895); Sadko (Moscow, Jan. 7, 1898; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Jan. 29, 1929); Mozart i Salieri, on Pushkin's play dealing with Salieri's supposed poisoning of Mozart (Moscow, Dec. 7, 1898); Boyarynia Vera Sheloga (Moscow, Dec. 27, 1898; originally written as a prologue to Pskovityanka; N. Y., May 9, 1922); Tsar'skaya Nevesta (The Tsar's Bride; Moscow, Nov. 3, 1899); Tsar Saltan (Moscow, Nov. 3, 1900); Servilia (St. Petersburg, Oct. 14, 1902); Kashey Bezmeriny (Kashchey the Immortal; Moscow, Dec. 25, 1902); Pan Voyevoda (The Commander; St. Petersburg, Oct. 16, 1904); Skazanie o nevidimom gradie Kitezhie (The Legend of the Invisible City of Kitezh; St. Petersburg, Feb. 20, 1907); Zolotoy Pietushok (The Golden Cockerel; usually performed under the French title, Le Coq d'or; posthumous; Moscow, Oct. 7, 1909; the only opera of Rimsky-Korsakov often produced abroad). For orch.: op. 1, symph. no. 1 in E minor (originally in E $\flat$  minor; later rewritten and transposed); op. 5, Sadko, symph. poem (1867; revised 1869 and 1891); op. 6, Fantasy on Serbian themes (1867; revised 1888); op. 9, symph. no. 2, Antar (1868; revised 1876 and 1897; also as a symph. suite); op. 28, Overture on Russian Themes (1866; revised 1880); op. 29, Conte féerique (1880); op. 30, piano concerto in C $\sharp$  minor (1882-83); op. 31, Symphoniette in A minor (on Russian themes; 1879); op. 32, symph. no. 3 in C major (1873-74; revised 1885-86); op. 33, Fantaisie de concert sur des thèmes russes for violin and orch. (1886); op. 34, Capriccio espagnol (1887); op. 35, Scheherazade, symph. suite (St. Petersburg, Nov. 3, 1888); op. 36, Grande p $\acute$ aque russe (Russian Easter Overture; 1888); suite from the opera, Tsar Saltan (1903; includes the famous musical tableau, The Flight of the Bumblebee); op. 59, Pan Voyevoda, suite from the opera (1903); op. 61, Nad mogiloi (At the Grave; in memory of Belaiev; 1904); op. 62, Chanson russe (Dubinushka, 1905, with chorus ad lib.); without op. numbers: Night on Mount Triglav, from the opera, Mlada (1907); suite from the opera, Le Coq d'or (1907). Chamber music: op. 12, string quartet in F (1875); op. 37, Serenade for cello and piano (1903); without op. numbers: string sextet in A (1876); quintet in B $\flat$  for flute, clarinet, horn, bassoon, and piano (1876); first movement of a string quartet on B-la-f (Belaiev; other movements by Liadov, Borodin, and Glazunov; 1886); string quartet in G (1897); trio in C minor, for violin, cello, and piano (1897). Vocal works with orch.: op. 20, Stikh ob Alexeye (Poem about Alexis), folksong for mixed chorus (1877); op. 21, Slava (Glory), for mixed chorus (1876-80); op. 44, Svitezyanka, cantata for soprano and tenor solo and mixed chorus (1897); op. 53, Strekozy (Dragonflies) for women's voices (1897); op. 58, Piesnia o veshchem Olegye (Poem of Oleg the Wise), for men's chorus; op. 60, From Homer, for women's voices (1899); op. 49, 2 ariosos for bass, Antchar (The Upas Tree) and Prorok (The Prophet) (1897); choruses a cappella, op. 13, 14, 16, 18, 19, 23; 77 songs; 5 vocal duets; a vocal trio. Piano pieces: op. 10, 6 variations on BACH; op. 11, 4 pieces; op. 15, 3 pieces; op. 17, 6 fugues. He edited a collection of 100 Russian folksongs, op. 24 (1876); harmonized 40 folksongs. After Dargomyzhsky's death, he orchestrated his posthumous opera, Kamennyi Gost (The Stone Guest); also orchestrated Borodin's Prince Igor; his greatest task of musical reorganization was the preparation for publication and performance of Mussorgsky's works; he reharmonized the cycle, Songs and Dances of Death, the symph. picture, Night on the Bald Mountain; orchestrated the opera, Khovanshchina; revised Boris Godunov (in melody and harmony, as well as in orchestration). Among his pedagogical works, the book on harmony (St. Petersburg, 1884; numerous subsequent eds. in Russian; in English, N. Y., 1930) is widely used in Russian music schools; publ. Foundations of Orchestration (2 vols., St. Petersburg, 1913; ed. by Maximilian Steinberg; also available in French and in English); collected articles were publ. in 1911, ed. by M. Gnessin. His autobiographical book, The Chronicle of My Musical Life (posthumous, 1909; 5th ed. by his son Andrey, supplemented and annotated, 1935) is a valuable document of the most important period of Russian music; it is publ. also in English (N. Y., 1924; new ed., 1942), in French (Paris, 1938), etc. The centennial of his birth (1944) was marked by the inauguration of a complete edition of his works (about 50 vols. planned). —Bibliography: V. Yastrebtzev, R.-K. (1900; 2nd ed. with a complete list of works, 1908); N. Findeisen, R.-K. (1908); I. Lapshin, Philosophical Motives in the Works of R.-K. (1911); N. van Gilse van der Pals, R.-K. (Leipzig, 1914); M. Montagu-Nathan, History of Russian Music (London, 1915; pp. 179-236); Rosa Newmarch, The Russian Opera (London, 1915; pp. 281-333); M. Montagu-Nathan, R.-K. (London, 1916); Igor Glebov, R.-K. (1922); E. Istel, R.-K., the Oriental Wizard, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1929); N. van Gilse van der Pals, R.-K.'s Opernschaffen (Leipzig, 1929); A. Rimsky-Korsakov, R.-K., Life and Works (fundamental biography; 5 fascicles; Moscow, 1933, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1946; last vol. ed. by Vladimir Rimsky-Korsakov); Igor Markevitch, R.-K. (Paris, 1935); G. Abraham and M. D. Calvocoressi, Masters of Russian Music (London, 1936); G. Abraham, R.-K.; a Short Biography (London, 1949); D. Brook, 6 Great Russian Composers (London, 1946); M. O. Yankovsky, R.-K. and the Revolution of 1905 (Moscow, 1950); A. Solovtsov, Symphonic Works of R.-K. (Moscow, 1953); D. Kabalevsky, ed., R.-K., Materials and Letters (Moscow, 2 vols., 1953 and 1954); M. F. Gnessin, Reflections and Reminiscences about N.A. R.-K. (Moscow, 1956); A. Gozenpud, N.A. R.-K., Sources and Ideas of his Operas (Moscow, 1957); numerous brochures and papers dealing with individual compositions by Rimsky-Korsakov. Correspondence is found in V. A. Kiselev, R.-K. (Moscow, 1951).

Rinaldo di Capua, Italian opera composer; b. Capua, c. 1710; d. Rome, after 1770. He came from the vicinity of Naples and seems to have been active chiefly in Rome, where Burney knew him in 1770, and where most of his operas were given (others were produced in Florence, Venice, London, and Paris). His career as a dramatic composer probably began in 1737. Thereafter he produced about 30 theatrical works with varying success, among them, Ciò riconosciuto (Rome, 1737), Vologeso re de' Parti (Rome, 1739), and La Zingara (Paris, June 19, 1753; his best work). He also composed a Cantata per la Natività della Beata Vergine (1747). —Cf. Charles Burney, Present State of Music in France and Italy (1771); Ph. Spitta's study of Rinaldo di Capua in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. III, 1887); G. Radiciotti, in 'Musica d'oggi' (July, 1925). See also A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; p. 113).

Rinck, Johann Christian Heinrich, famous German organist; b. Elgersburg, Feb. 18, 1770; d. Darmstadt, Aug. 7, 1846. He studied under Bach's pupil Kittel in Erfurt (1786-89); was town organist at Giessen (1790), and at Darmstadt (1805); became court organist there in 1813, and chamber musician in 1817. One of the foremost players of the time, he made frequent concert tours. He wrote many organ works. —Cf. his Selbstbiographie (Breslau, 1833); M. J. Fölsing, Züge aus dem Leben und Wirken des Dr. C. H. Rinck (Erfurt, 1848); F. Clément, Musiciens célèbres (Paris, 1868; 4th ed., 1887); F. W. Donat, C. H. Rinck und die Orgelmusik seiner Zeit (1933).

Ringwall, Rudolph, American violinist and conductor; b. Bangor, Maine, March 19, 1891; studied at the New England Cons.; graduated in 1913; later studied in Vienna. From 1913 to 1915 and from 1917 to 1920 he was a violinist in the Boston Symph. Orch.; taught at the New England Cons. (1916-20). In 1926 he was appointed assistant conductor, in 1934 associate conductor of the Cleveland Orch.; resigned in 1956.

Rinuccini (rē-nōōch-chē-nē), Ottavio, great Italian poet and librettist; b. Florence, Jan. 20, 1562; d. there, March 28, 1621. He wrote several librettos for the Florentine creators of opera: the text of the intermezzo Apollo e il pitone, set to music by Marenzio in 1589, and subsequently the famous Dafne, set to music by Peri, Caccini, and Corsi in 1594; the latter is considered the first 'opera.' Rinuccini's Euridice, with music by Peri, was performed in 1600; another setting, by Caccini, in 1602. He also wrote the libretto of Monteverdi's Arianna (1608). These texts were republished by A. Solerti in vol. II of Gli Albori del melodramma (Milan, 1905). —Cf. F. Meda, Ottavio Rinuccini (Milan, 1894); A. Civita, Ottavio Rinuccini ed il sorgere del melodramma in Italia (Mantua, 1900); F. Raccamadoro-Ramelli, Ottavio Rinuccini, studio biografico e critico (1900); A. Solerti, Le Origini del melodramma (Turin, 1903); A. Solerti, Musica, ballo e drammatica alla corte medicea dal 1600 al 1637 (Florence, 1905); O. G. Sonneck, Dafne, the First Opera, in 'Sammelbände der internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1913); A. Della Corte, Ottavio Rinuccini librettista (Turin, 1925); U. Rolandi, Didascalie sceniche in un raro libretto dell' Euridice del Rinuccini, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1926); M. Schild, Die Musikdramen O. Rinuccinis (Würzburg, 1933).

Riotte, Philipp Jakob, German conductor and composer; b. St. Mendel, Trier, Aug. 16, 1776; d. Vienna, Aug. 20, 1856. He studied with André in Offenbach; in 1808 settled in Vienna, where he conducted at the Theater an der Wien; produced there 48 works of his own, including operas, ballets, and minor pieces; also wrote a symphony, 9 piano sonatas, 6 violin sonatas, etc. He was the author of the 'tone picture,' Die Schlacht bei Leipzig (The Battle of Leipzig) for piano, which achieved extraordinary popularity in Germany.

Ripa, Alberto da (called Alberto Mantovano), Italian lutenist; b. Mantua; d. there, 1551. Little is known about his life; from 1529 he was in the service of Francis I of France. —Works: Tablature de Luth in 6 books publ. by his pupil Guillaume Morlaye (1553-58); pieces in Phalèse's publications of 1546 and 1574; also in Francesco da Forlì's 'Intavolatura di liuto' (1536). —Cf. M. Brenet, in 'L'Année musicale' (1911); J. G. Prod'homme, Guillaume Morlaye, éditeur d'Albert de Ripe, in 'Revue de musicologie' (1925).

Rischbieter, Wilhelm Albert, German music theorist and pedagogue; b. Brunswick, July 20, 1834; d. Dresden, Feb. 11, 1910. He studied with Hauptmann; was violinist in Leipzig, Bremen, Nuremberg, and Liegnitz. In 1862 he was appointed teacher of harmony and comp. at the Dresden Cons. and held this position for nearly 40 years, until 1900. He publ. Über Modulation, Quartsextakkord und Orgelpunkt (1879); Erläuterungen und Aufgaben zum Studium des Kontrapunkts (1885); and Die Gesetzmässigkeit der Harmonik (1888).

Riseley, George, English organist and conductor; b. Bristol, Aug. 28, 1845; d. there, April 12, 1932. He was a chorister at the Bristol Cathedral from the age of 7, and studied with the cathedral organist, John Davis Corfe; in 1876 succeeded him at that post; in 1877 he organized a series of orchestral concerts in Bristol which contributed greatly to Bristol's musical life; also conducted the Bristol festival (1896-1911). In 1898 he was appointed conductor of the Queen's Hall Choral Society in London. He wrote a Jubilee Ode (Bristol, 1887), part-songs, and pieces for organ. For an account of his career see the 'Mus. Times' (Feb., 1899).

Risler (rēs-lär'), Édouard, pianist; b. Baden-Baden (of a German mother and Alsatian father), Feb. 23, 1873; d. Paris, July 21, 1929. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Diémer (piano) and Dubois (theory). After graduation, he continued his piano studies with Klindworth, Stavenhagen, and Eugène d'Albert. In 1906 he was appointed member of the 'Conseil supérieur' of the Paris Cons. He continued to make tours in Europe, where he acquired a very high reputation as a fine musician as well as virtuoso pianist; he made a specialty of cycles of one composer's works (Beethoven's 32 sonatas, both books of Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier, Chopin's complete works, etc.). He was also greatly esteemed as teacher.

Rist, Johann, German poet and composer; b. Ottensen, near Hamburg, March 8, 1607; d. Wedel-on-Elbe, Aug. 31, 1667. He studied theology at the universities of Hamburg and Bremen; later became a pastor in Mecklenburg and Wedel. In 1644 he was made poet-laureate by the Emperor, and in 1653 elevated to the rank of nobleman. He organized in Hamburg a 'Liederschule,' for which he secured the cooperation of many important composers of the day, among them Schiedemann and Thomas Selle. He has been described as the 'organizer of the German Parnassus' and indeed his role in the development of a purely national type of secular song, of German folk inspiration, was historically significant. He also wrote a number of sacred songs: O Ewigkeit, du Donnerwort; O Traurigkeit; O Herzeleid; Werde munter, mein Gemüte; etc., which are still sung in Lutheran churches in Germany. He compiled valuable collections of German sacred songs. —Cf. Th. Hansen, Johann Rist und seine Zeit (Halle, 1872); W. Krabbe, Johann Rist und das deutsche Lied (Bonn, 1910); O. Kern, Johann Rist als weltlicher Lyriker (Marburg, 1919); O. Heins, Johann Rist und das niederdeutsche Drama des 17. Jahrhunderts (1930).

Ristori, Giovanni Alberto, Italian composer; b. Bologna, 1692; d. Dresden, Feb. 7, 1753. He received his education from his father, a violinist in an Italian opera company; with him he went to Dresden (1715) and obtained the post of director of the Polish chapel there; then was appointed chamber organist to the court of Saxony (1733), church composer (1746), and assistant conductor (1750). He wrote a number of operas for the Italian Opera in Dresden. His Calandro, staged at Pillnitz, near Dresden, on Sept. 2, 1726, was one of the earliest Italian comic operas produced in Germany, and so possesses historical significance beyond its intrinsic worth; other operas produced in Dresden and in court theaters near Dresden were Don Chisciotte (Feb. 2, 1727), Cleonice (Aug. 15, 1718), Le Fate (Aug. 10, 1736), Arianna (Aug. 7, 1736), etc. He also wrote 3 oratorios, 16 cantatas, 11 Masses; some instrumental music; many of his MSS were destroyed during the siege of Dresden (1760). — Cf. C. R. Mengelberg, G. A. Ristori (Leipzig, 1916).

Ritter, Alexander, German composer and poet, b. Narva, Estonia (of German parents), June 27, 1833; d. Munich, April 12, 1896. He was taken to Dresden in 1841; there he studied violin with Franz Schubert (namesake of the great composer), who was concertmaster of the Dresden opera; then studied at the Leipzig Cons. (1849-51) with Ferdinand David (violin) and E. F. Richter (theory). In 1854 he married Wagner's niece, Franziska Wagner, and settled in Weimar, where he entered into a close association with Liszt, von Bülow, Cornelius, Raff, and others. He was conductor at the opera in Stettin (1856-58), where his wife was engaged as soprano; he then lived in Dresden (1858-60), Schwerin (1860-62), and Würzburg (1863-82). When Bülow became conductor at the Hofkapelle in Meiningen (1882) Ritter settled there and played the violin in the orch.; after Bülow's departure from Meiningen in 1886, Ritter moved to Munich. He wrote 2 operas, Der faule Hans (Munich, Oct. 15, 1885) and Wem die Krone? (Weimar, June 8, 1890), to his own librettos, and several symph. poems in an intensely Romantic manner (Seraphische Phantasie,  Erotische Legende, Karfreitag und Frohnleichnam, and Kaiser Rudolfs Ritt zum Grabe); a string quartet; about 60 songs; piano pieces. Ritter's significance derives, however, not from these well-made but ephemeral compositions, but from his profound influence on young Richard Strauss; it was Ritter who encouraged Strauss in the creation of a new type of philosophical tone-poem along the lines of 'Musik als Ausdruck' (music as expression), a modern development of the art of Liszt, Wagner, and Berlioz. Ritter wrote the poem printed in the score of Tod und Verklärung. — Cf. S. von Hausegger, Alexander Ritter. Ein Bild seines Charakters und Schaffens (Berlin, 1907).

Ritter, August Gottfried, German organist; b. Erfurt, Aug. 25, 1811; d. Magdeburg, Aug. 26, 1885. He was a pupil of Fischer at Erfurt, Hummel at Weimar, and Runge-hagen at Berlin; filled various posts as organist at Erfurt, Merseburg, and Magdeburg; edited the 'Urania' (1844-48); co-editor of the 'Orgelfreund' and 'Orgelarchiv'; publ. a valuable book, Zur Geschichte des Orgelspiels . . . im 14. bis zum Anfange des 18. Jahrhunderts (1884; new ed. by Frottscher, 1933ff.), and Die Kunst des Orgelspiels, (2 vols.; 9 eds.; in English, N. Y., 1874); also organ pieces; 4 books of chorales; a piano concerto, a piano quartet, 2 symphonies, 3 overtures, etc.

Ritter, Frédéric Louis, music historian and choral conductor; b. Strasbourg, June 22, 1834; d. Antwerp, July 4, 1891. He was of Spanish extraction, his original family name being Caballero, which was translated into German as Ritter (knight). He studied in Strasbourg with Schletterer and in Paris with J. G. Kastner. In 1856 he went to Cincinnati, where he organized the Philharmonic Orch., but left for New York in 1861; was active mainly as a choral conductor; in 1867 became prof. of music at Vassar College. He publ. several manuals and music histories; History of Music (2 vols.; Boston, 1870, 1874; 2nd ed., 1880); Music in England (N. Y., 1883); Music in America (N. Y., 1883; 3rd ed., 1893); Music in Its Relation to Intellectual Life (N. Y., 1891); etc. His wife, Fanny Raymond Ritter (b. Philadelphia, 1840; d. Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 26, 1890), was the author of Woman as a Musician, an Art-Historical Study (1876), Some Famous Songs (1878), etc.; transl. into English Schumann's Music and Musicians.

Ritter, Hermann, the inventor of the viola alta; b. Wismar, Sept. 16, 1849; d. Würzburg, Jan. 25, 1926. He studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; attended courses at the Univ. of Heidelberg; turning his attention to musical instruments, he began a series of experiments for the purpose of improving the muffled tone of the ordinary viola; profiting by some practical hints in A. Bagatella's book, Regole per la Costruzione di Violini (Padua, 1786), he constructed a slightly larger model possessed of better resonance and a more brilliant tone. Exhibiting this new 'viola alta' in 1876, he attracted the attention of Wagner, who invited his cooperation for the Bayreuth festival; after that engagement he made successful tours of all Europe as viola virtuoso; from 1879, prof. of viola and history of music at the Musikschule in Würzburg; in 1905 he founded the 'Ritterquartett' (violin, W. Schulze-Prisca; viola alta, Ritter; viola tenore, E. Cahnbley; viola bassa, H. Knöchel).—Publications: Die Viola Alto: ihre Geschichte, ihre Bedeutung und die Prinzipien ihres Baues (1876; 3rd ed., 1885); Repetitorium der Musikgeschichte (1880); Aus der Harmonielehre meines Lebens (1883); Elementartheorie der Musik (1885); Ästhetik der Tonkunst (1886); Studien und Skizzen aus Musik- und Kulturgeschichte, sowie Musikästhetik (Dresden, 1892); Katechismus der Musikästhetik (2nd ed., 1894); Katechismus der Musikinstrumente (1894); Volkslied in alter und neuer Zeit (1896); Schubert (1896); Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven (1897); Die fünfsaitige Geige und die Weiterentwicklung der Streichinstrumente (1898); Allgemeine illustrierte Encyclopädie der Musikgeschichte (6 vols., 1901-02). Also publ. numerous original compositions and transcriptions for viola and piano, and Elementartechnik der Viola alta. —Cf. G. Adema, Hermann Ritter und seine Viola alta (Würzburg, 1881; 2nd ed., 1894).

Ritter, Peter, German composer; b. Mannheim, July 2, 1763; d. there, Aug. 1, 1846. He studied violin and cello with his father; completed his theoretical studies under Abbé Vogler. He entered the Mannheim court orch. as a cellist, but later became its concertmaster, and, in 1803, conductor. He brought out in Mannheim his first opera, Der Eremit auf Formentera (Dec. 14, 1788; text by the celebrated poet A. von Kotzebue), which attained considerable vogue in Germany; some 20 more operas and Singspiele followed, but were not successful. In 1787 he married the famous actress Katharina Baumann (to whom Schiller had proposed); in 1790 both were employed at the Hoftheater; his wife retired on a pension in 1819, and Ritter himself in 1823. Besides his operas, he wrote a fine chorale, Grosser Gott dich loben wir (1792); an oratorio, Das verlorene Paradies; and much chamber music (selections publ. by Riemann in vol. XVI, 2, of the Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern). 24 autograph scores, including 2 symphonies, several concertos, etc., are in the Library of Congress in Washington.—Cf. W. Schulze, Peter Ritter (Berlin, 1895).

Ritter (real name Bennet), Théodore, French pianist and composer; b. near Paris, April 5, 1841; d. Paris, April 6, 1886. He was a pupil of Liszt; made successful European tours; publ. numerous solo pieces for piano, of which Les Courriers was a favorite; his operas, Marianne (Paris, 1861) and La Dea risorta (Florence, 1865), were unsuccessful.

Rivé-King, Julie, American pianist; b. Cincinnati, Oct. 31, 1857; d. Indianapolis, July 24, 1937. She received her primary instruction from her mother; then studied in New York with William Mason and in Leipzig with Reinecke; also was for a time a pupil of Liszt. She played Liszt's piano concerto No. 1 at her American début, with the N. Y. Philharmonic (April 24, 1875); this was the beginning of an active career; she gave about 4,000 concerts in the U. S., retiring only a year before her death. In 1876 she married Frank King of Milwaukee. From 1905 till 1936 she was piano instructor at the Bush Cons. in Chicago. She wrote some attractive piano pieces (Impromptu, Polonaise héroïque, Bubbling Spring, etc.).

Rivier (rē-viā'), Jean, French composer; b. Villemonble, July 21, 1896. He was in the French army in World War I, and did not begin his musical studies until 1918, when he entered the Paris Cons. and studied with Caussade; participated in various modern music societies in Paris; formed a style of composition that combined the elements of French Classicism and Impressionism. His music, always logical and attractive in its fluid development, has had numerous performances in France. —Works: opera, Vénitienne (Paris, July 8, 1937); for orch.: 5 symphonies: No. 1 (Paris, Jan. 29, 1933); No. 2, for strings (1937); No. 3 (1937); Paris, Nov. 25, 1940; No. 4 (Paris, 1947); No. 5 (Strasbourg, June 24, 1951); piano concerto (1941); violin concerto (1942); 3 Pastorales (Paris, Feb. 7, 1929); Adagio, for string orch. (Paris, March 1, 1931); Ouverture pour une opérette imaginaire (Paris, Dec. 13, 1931); Concertino for alto and orch. (Paris, Feb. 15, 1936); Jeanne d'Arc à Domrémy, symph. tableau (Paris, Jan. 31, 1937); Ballade des amants désespérés, for orch. (1945); Rapsodie provençale (Aix-en-Provence, July 22, 1949); 2 string quartets; Petite Suite, for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon; violin pieces; piano pieces; several song cycles.

Robertson, Sir Hugh S., Scottish composer and choral conductor; b. Glasgow, Feb. 23, 1874; d. there, Oct. 7, 1952. In 1906 he founded the Glasgow Orpheus Choir, which contributed to a large extent to the cultivation of choral music in Scotland. He disbanded it in 1951. He publ. about 300 vocal pieces, including The Faux Bourdon Series of Psalm Tunes; Songs of the Isles, and a Concert Edition of Scottish Songs; also a pamphlet, Prelude to the Orpheus (London, 1947).

ROBERTSON — ROBLES

Robertson, Leroy, American composer; b. Fountain Green, Utah, Dec. 21, 1896. He studied in Provo; then in Boston with Chadwick and Converse at the New England Cons.; subsequently went to Europe, where he took courses with Ernest Bloch in Switzerland and with Hugo Leichtentritt in Berlin. Returning to America, he became instructor of music at Brigham Young Univ. at Provo; in 1948, was appointed head of the music dept., Univ. of Utah. In 1947 his symph. work Trilogy received the 1st prize of $25,000 in a contest sponsored by Henry H. Reichhold of Detroit; it was performed by the Detroit Symph. Orch. on Dec. 11, 1947, but despite the attendant publicity, the work was not successful, and there were few subsequent performances. Other works: The Book of Mormon, oratorio (Salt Lake City, Feb. 18, 1953); Prelude, Scherzo, Ricercare, for orch. (1940); Rhapsody, for piano and orch. (1944); Punch and Judy Overture (1945); violin concerto (1948); piano quintet (1933); string quartet (1940); N. Y. Music Critics Circle Award, 1944); American Serenade, for string quartet (1944); other chamber music; piano pieces; songs.

Robertson, Rae, pianist; b. Ardersier, Scotland, Nov. 29, 1893; d. Los Angeles, Nov. 4, 1956. He studied with F. Niecks at Edinburgh Univ.; then at the Royal Academy of Music, London, with Matthay and F. Corder; married Ethel Bartlett, pianist, with whom he gave numerous concerts in Europe and America as duo-pianists. With her he edited an Oxford Univ. Press series of works for 2 pianos.

Robeson, Lila, American contralto; b. Cleveland, April 4, 1880. She studied singing with Isidor Luckstone and Oscar Saenger in N. Y.; made her operatic début as Ortrud with the Aborn Opera Co. (Boston, April 4, 1911); from 1912 till 1920 she was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Co.; then devoted herself mainly to teaching; in 1953 taught voice at Western Reserve Univ., Cleveland.

Robeson, Paul, Negro bass singer; b. Princeton, N. J., April 9, 1898. He first studied law (1919, B.A., Rutgers Univ.; 1923, LL.B., Columbia Univ.); when his talent for singing and acting was discovered, he appeared in plays in the U. S. and England; acted the part of Emperor Jones in Eugene O'Neill's play and of Porgy in the Negro folk play by Du Bose and Dorothy Heyward. In 1925 he gave his first

Negro spiritual recital in N. Y.; then toured in Europe. In 1930, he appeared in the title role of Shakespeare's Othello in London. Returning to the U. S., he continued to give recitals, but his radical political beliefs interfered with the success of his career. In 1952 he was awarded the International Stalin Peace Prize ($25,000). During the summer of 1958 he made an extensive European tour.—Cf. E. G. Robeson, Paul Robeson, Negro (N. Y., 1930); S. Graham, Paul Robeson (N. Y., 1946); Marie Seton, Paul Robeson (London, 1958); autobiography, Here I Stand (London, 1958.)

Robinson, Earl, American composer; b. Seattle, Wash., July 2, 1910; studied at the Univ. of Washington (B.M., 1933); then took lessons with Aaron Copland. In 1934 he joined the Federal Theater, for which he wrote incidental music for several plays; his Ballad for Americans from the revue Sing for Your Supper became nationally famous (1939). He received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1940; in 1943 went to Hollywood to compose film music.

Robinson, Franklin Whitman, American organist and teacher; b. New York, June 27, 1875; d. Northeast Harbor, Maine, Sept. 16, 1946. He studied with MacDowell and Rybner at Columbia Univ. (M.A., 1907); in 1908 became instructor at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y.; publ. Anthems and Chant Forms (1908-14) and Aural Harmony (N. Y., 1914; revised ed., 1936).

Robinson, Stanford, English conductor; b. Leeds, July 5, 1904. He played piano in hotel orchestras in London before entering the Royal College of Music; there he studied conducting under Sir Adrian Boult; at the age of 20 he became an assistant conductor with the B.B.C. (1924); organized the London Wireless Chorus, and conducted its programs for many years. In 1936 he became a director of the opera dept. of the B.B.C.; was conductor of the B.B.C. Theatre Orch. until 1946; in 1949 he was put in charge of the BBC Opera Orch. for broadcasting symph. music.—Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (Bristol, 1951; pp. 155-58).

Robles (rôh'-blēs), Daniel Alomias, Peruvian composer and folksong collector; b. Huánuco, Jan. 3, 1871; d. Chosica, near Lima, July 17, 1942. He was of Indian blood; traveled through Indian villages of Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador and collected many hundreds of melodies, of which the Himno al Sol was notated by him as sung by a 117-year-old Indian. From 1919 to 1934 he lived mostly in the U. S.; then returned to Lima. He had no formal education and little musical technique; his melodic and rhythmic material was arranged by various composers for performances. In this manner he brought out an operetta, El Condor Pasa; several orchestral suites (El Resurgimiento de los Andes, El Indio, Danza Huanca, etc.). 5 melodies collected by Robles are reproduced in La Musique des Incas et ses survivances by Raoul and Marguerite d'Harcourt (Paris, 1925). —Cf. N. Slonimsky, Music of Latin America (N. Y., 1945; p. 275).

Robyn, Alfred George, American pianist, organist, and composer; b. St. Louis, April 29, 1860; d. New York, Oct. 18, 1935. He studied with his father, an organist; traveled with Emma Abbott at the age of 16, as pianist and accompanist; filled numerous posts as church organist in N. Y. He wrote the light operas, The Yankee Consul (1903), The Gypsy Girl (1905), The Yankee Tourist (1907), Fortune Land (1907), All for the Ladies (1912), etc.; the oratorios The Ascension, Love Unending, Praise and Thanksgiving; a symph. poem, Pompeii; a piano concerto; a piano quintet; 4 string quartets; numerous piano pieces; songs. Some of his songs and piano pieces sold extremely well.

Rocca, Lodovico, Italian composer; b. Turin, Nov. 29, 1895. He studied with Oréfice at the Cons. of Milan; also attended the Univ. of Turin; then taught at Verona. In 1940 he was appointed director of the Cons. of Turin. —Works: operas: In Terra di leggenda (Milan, Sept. 28, 1933), Il Dibuc (Milan, March 24, 1934), La Morte di Frine (Milan, April 24, 1937), Monte Ivnor (Rome, Dec. 23, 1939), L'Uragano (Milan, Feb. 8, 1952); for orch.: Contrasti (1919), Aurora di morte (1920), La Foresta delle samodive (1921), L'Alba del malato (1922), Le Luci (1923), Chiaroscuro (1924), La Cella azzurra (1925); Biribù, occhi di rana, for voice and string quartet (1937); Schizzi francescani, for tenor and 8 instruments (1942); other songs with piano accompaniment. —Cf. G. Bas, in 'Musica d'oggi' (1925 and 1927); M. Castelnovo-Tedesco in 'Il Pianoforte' (1925); A. Damerini, in 'Il Pianoforte' (1927).

Rochberg, George, American composer; b. Paterson, N. J., July 5, 1918. He studied piano with George Szell and Leopold

Mannes (1939-41) in N. Y.; then at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, with Scalero and Menotti (1945). He received a Fulbright Fellowship (1950-51) and spent a year at the American Academy in Rome; also a Guggenheim Fellowship (1956). His symph. poem Night Music won the George Gershwin Memorial Award in 1953, and was performed by Mitropoulos and the N. Y. Philharmonic in the same year. From 1948 to 1954, he taught at the Curtis Institute; in 1955, appointed editor for the Theodore Presser Company. He has elaborated a system of composition with 12 tones that differs considerably from orthodox dodecaphony. —Works: Capriccio for 2 pianos (1949); symph. No. 1 (1949-55; Philadelphia, March 28, 1958); Cantio Sacra, for chamber orch. (1953); Fantasia for violin and piano (1955); Sinfonia Fantasia (1956); Waltz Serenade for orch. (Cincinnati, Feb. 14, 1958); string quartet; clarinet sonata (1958); 2 piano sonatas; a number of small piano pieces; songs. He publ. The Hexachord and Its Relation to the 12-Tone Row (1955).

Rochlitz, Johann Friedrich, German writer on music; b. Leipzig, Feb. 12, 1769; d. there, Dec. 16, 1842. A pupil of Doles in the Thomasschule, he entered the Univ. of Leipzig as a theological student; publ. some novels and sketches; his 2 pamphlets, Blicke in das Gebiet der Kunst . . . and Einige Ideen über Anwendung des guten Geschmacks (both 1796), treat in part of music. In 1798 he founded the 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung,' which he edited till 1818, and contributed to until 1835. From 1805 he was a director of the Gewandhaus Concerts. His best-known work is Für Freunde der Tonkunst (4 vols., 1824-32; 3rd ed., 1868), which contains biographies, essays, analyses of compositions, etc.; vol. IV has an outline Geschichte der Gesangsmusik, which Rochlitz supplemented by a 'Sammlung vorzüglicher Gesangstücke' in 3 vols., from Dufay to Vallotti. Müller-Blattau compiled Rochlitz's essays on Bach under the title Wege zu Bach (1926). Rochlitz composed songs for men's chorus; also a setting of the 23rd Psalm; wrote texts for operas, oratorios, cantatas, etc. —Cf. Ernst Rychnovsky, L. Spohr und F. Rochlitz (Prague, 1904); J. Gensel, Aus Rochlitz Briefen an Henriette Voigt (Leipzig, 1906); H. Ehinger, J. F. Rochlitz als Musikschriststeller (Leipzig, 1929).

Röckel, August, Austrian writer on music; b. Graz, Dec. 1, 1814; d. Budapest, June 18, 1876. He was a pupil of his father, the impresario Joseph August Röckel, and of J. N. Hummel (his uncle); was for some years Kapellmeister in Weimar and Bamberg; then music director in Dresden (1843-48). There his opera Farinelli was to have been produced, but his admiration for Wagner's music, and the realization of his own inferiority, caused him to withdraw the score and abandon composition forever. Condemned to death for participation in the revolution of 1848, his sentence was commuted, and he spent 13 years in the prison in Walkheim; after his release he lived in Frankfurt, Munich, and Vienna, engaged in literary activity. — Cf. La Mara, Richard Wagners Briefe an August Röckel (Leipzig, 1894; 2nd ed., 1912; in English, Bristol, 1897).

Rockstro (real name Rackstraw), William Smyth, English music scholar; b. North Cheam, Surrey, Jan. 5, 1823; d. London, July 2, 1895. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. under Mendelssohn, Plaidy, and Hauptmann. Returning to London, he taught piano and singing; wrote a popular ballad, Queen and Huntress; publ. piano arrangements of numerous operas; devoted himself to a close study of ecclesiastical music, and became an acknowledged authority on plainchant; became a Roman Catholic in 1876. — Publications: History of Music for Young Students (1879); Practical Harmony (1881); Rules of Counterpoint (1882); Life of G. F. Handel (1883); Mendelssohn (1884); General History of Music (1886; 3rd ed., 1897); Jenny Lind, the Artist (1891; with Canon Scott Holland); Jenny Lind, her Vocal Art and Culture (1894; with Otto Goldschmidt); also publ. 'Festival Psalter, Adapted to the Gregorian Tones'; 'Accompanying Harmonies to the Ferial Psalter'; and 'Harmonies for Additional Chants and the Ambrosial Te Deum.'

Roda y López, Cecilio de, Spanish writer on music; b. Albuñol, near Granada, Oct. 24, 1865; d. Madrid, Nov. 27, 1912. From 1904 he was president of the music division of the Ateneo in Madrid; elected member of the Academy in 1906. He was the author of Los Instrumentos, las Danzas y las Canciones en el Quijote (1905), La Evolución de la Música (1906), Un Quaderno di autografi di Beethoven del 1825 (Turin, 1907), etc.

Rode (röhd), (Jacques-) Pierre (-Joseph), French violinist; b. Bordeaux, Feb. 26, 1774; d. Château-Bourbon, near Damazan, Nov. 25, 1830. He was a pupil of Fauvel; from 1787, of Viotti at Paris; made his début in 1790 in a concerto by Viotti, at the Théâtre Feydeau; after tours in Holland and Germany and a short visit to London he was appointed prof. of violin at the newly opened Paris Cons. During a visit to Spain in 1799 he met Boccherini, who wrote concertos for him. In 1800 he was solo violinist to Napoleon; from 1803 to 1808 was in Russia with Boieldieu; became 1st violinist to the court of Alexander I; then spent 3 years in Paris, after which he toured Germany and Austria (at Vienna Beethoven wrote for him the Romance, op. 50); lived for a time in Berlin, where he married in 1814; then retired and lived in Bordeaux. His final appearance in Paris (1828) was a disheartening failure. — Works: 13 violin concertos; the famous 24 Caprices en forme d'études, dans les 24 tons de la gamme; 12 études; 3 books of violin duos; etc.; and a Méthode du violon (with Baillot and Kreutzer). — Cf. A. Pougin, Notice sur Rode (Paris, 1874); H. Ahlgrimm, Pierre Rode (Vienna, 1929).

Röder, Carl Gottlieb, German printer of music; b. Stötteritz, near Leipzig, June 22, 1812; d. Gohlis, Oct. 29, 1883. He founded the great Leipzig establishment for engraving and printing music, starting in 1846 with one engraver's apprentice; the business became one of the largest in the world. A book printing department was added later. In 1872 Röder's sons-in-law C. L. H. Wolff and C. E. M. Rentsch became partners in the firm; Röder himself retired in 1876. After Rentsch's death (Feb. 19, 1889) his heirs withdrew from the firm, but a son-in-law of Wolff, Karl Johannes Reichel (b. Aug. 15, 1853; d. Leipzig, Sept. 9, 1927), became a partner, and after Wolff's death (1915), head of the firm. On the 50th anniversary of its foundation the firm issued a 'Festschrift,' to which Hugo Riemann contributed a valuable essay, Notenschrift und Notendruck; a second 'Festschrift' (on the 75th anniversary), took the form of a study by W. von zur Westen entitled Musiktitel aus 4 Jahrhunderten (1921).

Röder, Martin, composer and singing teacher; b. Berlin, April 7, 1851; d. Boston, June 7, 1895. After studying music in Berlin, he went to Milan, where he organized the 'Società del Quartetto Corale' (1875), giving performances of vocal quartets; then occupied various posts as singing teacher in Berlin (1881-87), Dublin (1887-92), and finally at the New England Cons. in Boston (1892). He wrote 3 operas, of which only one, Vera, was performed (Hamburg, 1881); 2 symph. poems, Azorenfahrt and Leonore; the overture Attila; chamber music; publ. Studi, critici, raccolti (Milan, 1881) and Dal Taccuino di un direttore di orchestra (1881; in German as Aus dem Tagebuche eines wandernden Kapellmeisters, 1884).

Rodgers, Richard, American composer of popular music; b. New York, June 28, 1902; studied at Columbia Univ. (1919-21) and at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (1921-23). He collaborated for 18 years with the lyricist Lorenz Hart in highly successful musical comedies: The Girl Friend (1926), A Connecticut Yankee (1927), On Your Toes (1936), Babes in Arms (1937), I Married an Angel (1938), The Boys From Syracuse (1938), Pal Joey (1940), and By Jupiter (1942). The Rodgers and Hart Song Book (N. Y., 1951) contains their most famous tunes. After Hart's death in 1943, Rodgers was associated with Oscar Hammerstein II (q.v.). Together they wrote the greatly celebrated musical play Oklahoma! (1943; Pulitzer Prize, 1944; 2,248 performances); this was followed by many productions, scarcely less successful: Carousel (1945), Allegro (1947), South Pacific (1948; enormously popular; Pulitzer Prize, 1950), The King and I (1951), Me and Juliet (1953), Pipe Dream (1955); and The Flower Drum Song (1958). In 1952 Rodgers wrote the musical score for the documentary film, Victory at Sea (arranged as a symph. suite by Robert Russell Bennett), for which he was awarded the Distinguished Public Service Award by the U. S. Navy in 1953. —Cf. Deems Taylor, Some Enchanted Evenings: The Story of Rodgers and Hammerstein (N. Y., 1953); David Ewen, Richard Rodgers (N. Y., 1957; contains a full list of productions and a bibliography of magazine articles).

Rodio, Rocco, contrapuntist of the early Neapolitan school; b. Calabria, c. 1530; date of death unknown. He publ. Regole per far contrapunto solo e accompagnato nel canto fermo (1st ed., 1600; 3rd ed., 1626); also a collection (Naples, 1580) of 9 Masses; the last, Missa di Beata Vergine (a 5) is remarkable, because it can be sung by 4 or 3 voices by omitting the quintus or that voice and the superius (soprano), and also by the 3 highest voices if quintus and bassus are omitted.

Rodolphe, Jean Joseph, French composer; b. Strasbourg, Oct. 14, 1730; d. Paris, Aug. 18, 1812. He studied the French horn with his father; then the violin with Leclair in Paris; composition with Traetta in Parma, and with Jommelli in Stuttgart; wrote ballet music for Jommelli's productions there. In 1764 he was in Paris once more; brought out his 1st opera, Le Mariage par capitulation (Comédie-Italienne, Dec. 3, 1764); another opera, L'Aveugle de Palmyre (Comédie-Italienne, March 5, 1767), obtained considerable success. The famous balletmaster Noverre produced several of Rodolphe's ballets at the Paris Opéra. Mozart met Rodolphe in Paris in 1778, and spoke of him highly. 3 of Rodolphe's ballets are printed in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 43/44). From 1784 to 1802 Rodolphe taught composition and solfège at the Paris Cons.; publ. the manuals, Solfèges and Théorie d'accompagnement.

Rodrigo, Joaquín, Spanish composer; b. Sagunto, Nov. 22, 1902. He studied in Valencia, and in Paris with Dukas; in 1939 settled in Madrid. —Works: for orch.: Juglares (1923); 5 Piezas infantiles (1924); Preludio para un poema a la Alhambra (1926); 2 Miniaturas andaluses (1939); Concierto de Aranjuez, for guitar (Barcelona, Nov. 9, 1940); Concierto heroico, for piano and orch. (Lisbon, April 5, 1943); Concierto de estio, for violin and orch. (Lisbon, April 11, 1944); Concierto in modo galante, for cello and orch. (Madrid, Nov. 4, 1949); concerto for harp and orch. (1954); Fantasia para un gentilhombre for guitar and orch. (1955). —Cf. F. Sopeña, Joaquín Rodrigo (Madrid, 1946).

Rodrigo de Ledesma, Mariano, Spanish composer; b. Zaragoza, Dec. 14, 1779; d. Madrid, March 28, 1848. He served as a chorister at the Cathedral of Zaragoza; was organist and chorumaster at Vinaroz (1799-1802); then tenor singer in Madrid; in 1807 he was appointed conductor of the Madrid opera theater, but the French invasion forced him to flee, and he took refuge in Seville. In 1812 he was in Cádiz; there he composed an anti-Bonaparte hymn, En tan infausto día, while Joseph Bonaparte was king of Spain; fled to England, where he established himself as a singing teacher in London. With the restoration of legitimate monarchy in Spain, he returned there, and received a court appointment; publ. 40 Ejercicios de vocalización (Madrid, 1820; Paris, 1827; also in English). He was again in England from 1823 to 1831; heard Weber conduct his operas in London, and was profoundly impressed; thenceforth he tried to emulate Weber, writing music in a Romantic manner. Back in Spain once more, he became maestro to Queen María Cristina. He wrote chiefly church music: 3 solemn Masses, 9 Lamentations, a Stabat Mater; also some secular songs and instrumental pieces. Eslava reprinted 5 motets for 4 voices and orch. by Rodrigo in the 'Lira sacro-hispana.' —Cf. R. Mitjana, El Maestro Rodrigo de Ledesma y sus Lamentaciones de Semana Santa (Málaga, 1909).

Rodriguez, Augusto, Puerto Rican composer; b. San Juan, Feb. 9, 1904. He studied literature at the Univ. of Puerto Rico; music at Harvard with E. B. Hill and Walter Piston; since 1934, professor at the Univ. of Puerto Rico; organized a chorus, which achieved a high degree of excellence; gave a concert with it in New York in 1949. He published several songs, and dance suites.

Rodriguez, Felipe, Catalan composer; b. 1759; d. 1814. He was a member of the Monserrat School; ordained priest, 1778; served as organist in Madrid. He wrote organ pieces, some of which are printed in Música instrumental, ed. by D. Pujol (vol. 2, Montserrat, 1946), and church music; his Rondo for piano is printed by J. Nin in the collection 17 Sonates et pièces anciennes d'auteurs espagnols (Paris, 1929).

Rodriguez, Vicente, Spanish organist and composer; b. Valencia, about 1685; d. there, 1761. He was a cleric, served as organist of the Valencia Cathedral from 1716 to his death; wrote several Masses; also keyboard music; his Sonata in F (1744), printed by Joaquín Nin in his collection, 17 Sonates et pièces anciennes (Paris, 1929), is in the style of Domenico Scarlatti.

Rodríguez de Hita (rôh-drê'-geth deh ē'täh), Antonio, Spanish composer; date of birth unknown; d. Madrid, Feb. 21, 1787. In 1757 he was chorusmaster at the Cathedral of Palencia, where he publ. a book of advice to his pupils, Consejos que a sus discípulos da don Antonio Rodríguez de Hita. Then he became music director at the Convent of the Incarnation in Madrid. From 1768 he collaborated with the dramatist Ramón de la Cruz in a series of notable stage works impregnated with Spanish atmosphere; the best are the comic operas (zarzuelas) Las Segadoras de Vallecas (Madrid, Sept. 3, 1768) and Las Labradoras de Murcia (Madrid, Sept. 16, 1769). He also composed the Spanish opera Briseida (Madrid, July 11, 1768), various hymns for 4 and 8 voices; etc. —Cf. E. Cotarelo y Mori, Don Ramón de la Cruz (with music examples); E. Cotarelo y Mori, Historia de la Zarzuela (Madrid, 1934).

Rodzinski (roh-dzhin'-skē), Artur, eminent conductor; b. Spalato, Dalmatia, Jan. 2, 1894; studied law at the Univ. of Vienna (LL.D.); later at the Vienna Academy of Music. During World War I he served in the Austrian army; was wounded in action in 1917. He made his conducting début in Lwow in 1921; was for 5 seasons conductor of Polish operas in Warsaw; also conducted concerts of the Warsaw Philharmonic. In 1926 he was engaged as assistant conductor to Leopold Stokowski with the Philadelphia Orch.; also became head of the opera and orch. departments of the Curtis Institute. In 1929 he was appointed permanent conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic; after 4 seasons there he became conductor of the Cleveland Orch. (1933); introduced the novel custom of staging operas in concert form (Parsifal, Elektra, etc.); gave the American première of Shostakovitch's opera, Lady Macbeth of Mzensk (Cleveland, Jan. 31, 1935). In 1936 he conducted at the Salzburg Festival; in the spring of 1937, was guest conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic for 8 weeks; in the same year he organized and trained the N.B.C. Symph. Orch. for Toscanini; also conducted a number of its concerts. In 1943 he was engaged as permanent conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic, obtaining excellent success; but after a series of conflicts with the management on account of Rodzinski's independent artistic policy, he was forced to resign in the middle of his 4th season (Feb. 3, 1947). A few days later he was engaged as conductor of the Chicago Symph. Orch.; but there too a conflict rapidly developed between him and the management, and he was dismissed during his first season (Jan. 13, 1948). Rodzinski subsequently conducted mostly in Europe and South America; was particularly successful in Italy; settled in Rome. He was engaged to conduct 2 productions for the Lyric Opera in Chicago in the autumn of 1958, his first American appearance after 10 years of absence. —Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (Bristol, 1951; pp. 159-64).

Roeckel. See Röckel.

Roentgen. See Röntgen.

Roesgen-Champion, Marguerite, Swiss harpsichordist and composer; b. Geneva, Jan. 25, 1894. She studied at the Cons. of Geneva with Ernest Bloch and Jaques-Dalcroze, graduating in 1913. She settled in Paris; appeared as a pianist; then made a specialty of the harpsichord; gave numerous recitals on that instrument in France and elsewhere; also wrote harpsichord pieces. —Works: Nymphes chasseresses, for chorus and orch. (Geneva, 1926); Faunesques, 3 symph. poems (Paris, 1929); Concerto moderne for harpsichord and orch. (Paris, Nov. 15, 1931, composer soloist); symph. suite Aquarelles (Paris, Nov. 26, 1933); harp concerto (1944; Paris, March 28, 1954).

Rogatis, Pascual de, Italian-Argentine composer; b. Teora, May 17, 1881. He was taken to Buenos Aires as an infant; studied piano and composition with Alberto Williams at the Cons. there; violin with Pietro Melani and Rafael Albertini; taught violin at the Cons. —Works: operas (all first performed in Buenos Aires): Anfion y Zeto, Greek tragedy (Aug. 18, 1915), Huémac, to a story of ancient Mexico (July 22, 1916), La Novia del hereje (The Heretic's Bride; June 13, 1935); symph. poem, Atipac (Buenos Aires, April 7, 1928); Canciones Argentinas, a cycle of 5 songs in the native vein; piano pieces.

Rogel (röh-hël'), José, Spanish composer of light opera; b. Orihuela, Alicante, Dec. 24, 1829; d. Cartagena, Feb. 25, 1901. At a very early age he was taught music by the organist J. Cascales, and at 10 composed a Mass, which he conducted himself. After he finished his law studies in Valencia, he studied counterpoint with Pascual Pérez; subsequently conducted at various theaters in Madrid, and in 1854 began his unusually successful career as composer of zarzuelas, of which he wrote about 75 (some in collaboration). Among his best works are El joven Telémaco, Las Amazonas del Tormes, El Rey Midas, Los Infernos de Madrid, Genoveva de Brabante, Pablo y Virginia.

Roger (röh-zhâ'), Gustave-Hippolyte, famous French tenor; b. La Chapelle St.-Denis, near Paris, Dec. 17, 1815; d. Paris, Sept. 12, 1879. He was a pupil of Morin at the Paris Cons.; made his début at the Opéra-Comique in 1838; then at the Paris Opéra, where he created the role of the Prophète in Meyerbeer's opera (1848); later toured in Germany. While hunting in the fall of 1859 the accidental discharge of his gun injured his right arm so severely that it had to be amputated. An artificial arm proved unsuccessful, and he was obliged to retire from the stage in 1861, when he settled in Paris as a singing teacher. From 1868 until his death he was prof. of singing at the Cons. —Cf. his memoirs, publ. as Le Carnet d'un Ténor (Paris, 1880); also A. Laget, G.-H. Roger (Paris, 1865).

Roger (roh-zhâ'), Victor, French composer of operettas; b. Montpellier, July 21, 1854; d. Paris, Dec. 2, 1903. He studied at the École Niedermeyer; wrote light music; composed some 30 operettas, of which the following were fairly successful: Sa Majesté l'Amour (1896), l'Auberge du Tohu-Bohu (1897), Les Fêtards (1897), L'Agence Crook & Co. (1898), La petite Tâche (1898), and Poule blanche (1899). After his death 3 completely finished scores were found: La Fille de Fra Diavolo, La Princesse de Babylone, and Adélaïde.

Roger-Ducasse (röh-zhâ'-dü-kähs'), Jean-Jules Aimable, French composer; b. Bordeaux, April 18, 1873; d. Le-Tailan-Médoc, near Bordeaux, July 20, 1954. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Fauré (composition), Pessard (harmony), Gedalge (counterpoint) and with de Bériot. In 1902 he won the 2nd Prix de Rome for the cantata Alycône; in 1909, appointed inspector of singing in the Paris schools; subsequently prof. of ensemble at the Paris Cons.; from 1935 to 1940 taught composition there; then retired to Bordeaux. His 1st work to be played in public was a Petite Suite for orch. (Paris, March 5, 1898). He adopted a pleasing style of Impressionism; his symph. pieces enjoyed considerable success, without setting a mark for originality. —Works: comic opera, Cantegril (Opéra-Comique, Feb. 9, 1931); a mimodrama, Orphée (St. Petersburg, Jan. 31, 1914); for orch.: Variations plaisantes sur un thème grave (Paris, Jan. 24, 1909), Suite française (1909), Prélude d'un ballet (1910), Le joli jeu de furet, orchestral scherzo (1911), Nocturne de printemps (Paris, Feb. 14, 1920), Symphonie sur la Cathédrale de Reims, Le petit faune (Bordeaux, May 22, 1954), etc.; Sarabande, symph. poem with voices (1911); Au Jardin de Marguerite, for soloists, chorus, and orch. (1901-05); Sur quelques vers de Virgile, for chorus and orch.; piano quartet (1899-1912); string quartet (1900-09); piano pieces (Le Cœur de l'eau, Noëls des roses, 7 Préludes, études, arabesques, etc.); pedagogic works (Solfèges, 3 vols.; Dictée musicale, 4 vols.; Exercices de piano, 3 vols.; etc.). His autobiography was publ. in L'Écran des musiciens (1930). —Cf. L. Ceillier, Roger-Ducasse (Paris, 1920); A. Cœuroy, La Musique française moderne (Paris, 1922).

Rogers, Bernard, American composer; b. New York, Feb. 4, 1893. He studied architecture before devoting himself to music. His first teacher was Arthur Farwell; he subsequently studied with Ernest Bloch in Cleveland. His symph. composition, To the Fallen, was performed by the N. Y. Philharmonic on Nov. 13, 1919; on the strength of it, he won a Pulitzer Traveling Scholarship and went to Europe for further study; in 1927 he received a Guggenheim Fellowship; took courses with Nadia Boulanger in Paris and Frank Bridge in London. When he returned from Europe in 1929 he was engaged as instructor at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester; he has remained there, teaching orchestration and composition. His lyric drama, The Marriage of Aude, was brought out in a festival of American music at the Eastman School, on May 22, 1931. The Metropolitan Opera Co. produced his 1-act opera, The Warrior (to the story of Samson and Delilah), on Jan. 11, 1947, but it was not successful; another opera, The Veil, was produced at the Univ. of Indiana on May 18, 1950. Other works: for orch.: The Faithful (1918), Adonais (Rochester, April 29, 1927), Prelude to Hamlet (1928), symph. No. 2 (Rochester, Oct. 24, 1930), 3 Japanese Dances (Rochester, May 3, 1934), Once Upon a Time, 5 fairy tales for small orch. (Rochester, April 4, 1935), The Supper at Emmaüs (Rochester, April 29, 1937), symph. No. 3 (Rochester, Oct. 27, 1937), The Colors of War (Rochester, Oct. 25, 1939), The Song of the Nightingale (Cincinnati, March 21, 1940), The Dance of Salome (Rochester, April 25, 1940), The Plains, 'landscapes for orch.' (N. Y., May 3, 1941), Invasion (N. Y., Oct. 17, 1943); Characters from Hans Christian Andersen (Rochester, April 28, 1945), In Memory of Franklin Delano Roosevelt (N. Y., April 11, 1946), Amphitryon, symph. overture (N. Y., March 10, 1947), symph. No. 4 (Rochester, May 4, 1948), Dance Scenes (Louisville, Oct. 28, 1953), Fantasy, for flute, viola, and orch. (Rochester, April 25, 1938), Soliloquy, for flute and strings (1922), Soliloquy, for bassoon and string orch. (Rochester, Oct. 18, 1938), The Silver World, for flute, oboe, and strings (1950), Leaves from the Tale of Pinocchio, suite for narrator and small orch. (1950); vocal works: The Passion, oratorio in 6 scenes, for soloists, mixed chorus, and orch. (Cincinnati, May 12, 1944; his most significant work), The Raising of Lazarus, for soloists, chorus, and orch. (1928), The Exodus, sacred poem, for soloists, chorus, and orch. (1932); a string quartet and other chamber music. He publ. a valuable manual, The Art of Orchestration (N. Y., 1951). —Cf. E. E. Hipsher, American Opera and Its Composers (Philadelphia, 1934; pp. 369-70); David Diamond, Bernard Rogers, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1947).

Rogers, Clara Kathleen (née Barnett); English soprano; b. Cheltenham, Jan. 14, 1844; d. Boston, March 8, 1931. She was the daughter of the composer John Barnett; studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Moscheles and Plaidy (piano), Papperitz and Richter (theory), David and Rietz (ensemble playing); singing with Goetz in Berlin and with Sangiovanni in Milan. She made her début in Turin (1863) as Isabella in Robert le Diable (stage name 'Clara Doria'); came to America in 1871 with the Parepa-Rosa Co.; début, N. Y., in Bohemian Girl (Oct. 4, 1871); later settled in Boston as a teacher; from 1902 was prof. of singing at the New England Cons.; married a Boston lawyer, Henry M. Rogers, in 1878. She publ. The Philosophy of Singing (1893); Dreaming True (1899); My Voice and I (1910); English Diction in Song and Speech (1912); The Voice in Speech (1915); Memories of a Musical Career (Boston, 1919) and its sequel, The Story of Two Lives (Norwood, Mass., 1932); also a number of songs and violin pieces.

Rogers, Francis, American baritone; b. Roxbury, Mass., April 14, 1870; d. New York, May 15, 1951. He studied singing with W. L. Whitney in Boston, Vannuccini in Florence, Bouhy in Paris, and Luckstone in N. Y.; appeared in concert and oratorio throughout the U. S.; from 1924 member of the faculty of the Juilliard Graduate School, N. Y. He publ. Some Famous Singers of the 19th Century (N. Y., 1914).

Rogers, James Henderson, American organist and song composer; b. Newark, N. Y., 1852; d. St. Petersburg, Fla., May 30, 1933. He studied music in N. Y.; was a church organist; composed a quantity of anthems and other church pieces, later collected in a book under the title, 'The Church Chorus Series.'

Rogers, James Hotchkiss, American organist and composer; b. Fair Haven, Conn., Feb. 7, 1857; d. Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 28, 1940. He studied with Clarence

Eddy in Chicago; in Berlin under Loeschhorn and Ehrlich (piano), Rohde (theory), and Haupt (organ); in Paris under Fissot (piano), Guilmant (organ), and Widor (theory). Returning to the U. S., he settled in Cleveland (1883) as organist; eventually retired to California. He publ. about 150 works: a Lenten cantata, The Man of Nazareth; an Easter cantata, The New Life; anthems, secular part-songs, songs, piano pieces, studies for piano and organ. Among his most popular songs are The Star and At Parting.

Roget (röh-zhā'), Henriette, French composer and organist; b. Bastia, Corsica, Jan. 9, 1910; studied at the Paris Cons.; received the Premier Second Prix de Rome in 1933. — Works: Montanyas del Rosello, for organ and orch. (Paris, April 6, 1933, composer soloist); Cathérinettes, ballet (1937); Hymne à l'aviation (1937); awarded a prize at the Paris Exhibition; 3 Ballades françaises (Paris, Jan. 11, 1936); Rythmes for orch. (Paris, Jan. 23, 1937); Sinfonia andorrana (1939); Symphonie pour rire (1947); Concerto classique for cello and orch. (1944); Concerto sicilien for piano and orch. (1945); chamber music; organ pieces; choral works; songs. — Cf. A. Machabey, Portraits de trente musiciens français (Paris, 1949).

Rogowski (röh-göv'-skē), Ludomir, Polish composer; b. Lublin, Oct. 3, 1881; d. Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, March 14, 1954. Of a musical family, he received his early training at home; in 1906 went to Leipzig and took a course with Hugo Riemann. Returning to Poland, he conducted the Vilna Symph. Orch., which he founded (1910); in 1911 was in Paris; from 1912 to 1914, was a theater conductor in Warsaw. He was again in France (1917-19); in Poland (1919-26), finally settling in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia (1927), where he remained for the rest of his life, with only occasional engagements as conductor in Warsaw (1935 and 1938). — Works: operas: Tamara (1918), Un grand chagrin de la petite Ondine (1919), La Sérénade inutile (1921), Królewicz Marko (1930); the ballets Bajka (1922) and Kupala (1925); 6 symphonies: no. 1, Offering (1921), no. 2, Rejoicing (1936), no. 3 (1940), no. 4 (1943), no. 5 (1947), no. 6 (1949); other symphonic works: Images ensoleillées (1918), Villafraña (1919), Les Saisons (1933), Les Sourires (1933), Poème du travail (1936), Fantômes (1937), 4 rhapsodies on Slavonic themes (1945), Dubrovnik Impressions (1950); 6 works for violin and orch.; 2 string quartets; short pieces for various instruments; numerous arrangements of Slavonic songs for chorus. In some of his works he made use of the so-called Slavonic scale (Lydian mode with the lowered 7th) and the scale of alternating whole tones and semitones.

Roguski, Gustav, Polish composer and pedagogue; b. Warsaw, May 12, 1839; d. there, April 5, 1921. He studied in Germany with Kiel; then went to Paris, where he became a pupil of Berlioz. Returning to Warsaw in 1873, he was appointed prof. at the Cons. He wrote a symphony, 2 string quartets, a quintet for wind instruments and piano, many piano pieces, choruses, and songs; publ. a manual of harmony in Polish (with L. Zelenski). He was greatly esteemed as a teacher of composition; Padrewski was his pupil.

Rohde, (Friedrich) Wilhelm, Danish violinist and composer; b. Altona, Dec. 11, 1856; d. Gentofte, near Copenhagen, April 6, 1928; pupil at the Leipzig Cons. of H. Schrädieck and F. David (violin), J. Röntgen (piano), E. F. Richter (composition), and H. Kretzschmar. He lived in Chicago (1878-85) as teacher; after one season as violist in the Boston Symph. Orch. and prof. at the New England Cons., he returned to Germany; lived in Schwerin; from 1914, in Copenhagen. He composed several symph. poems; a serenade for strings; Höller-Galopp for violin, cello, flute, horn, and piano; a number of male choruses; piano pieces.

Rohloff, Ernst, German music historian; b. Graudenz, April 17, 1899. He studied in Leipzig with Straube (organ), Schering and Abert (musicology); received his Dr. phil. for the dissertation Studien zum Musiktraktat des Johannes de Grocheo (publ. Leipzig, 1925); settled in Weissenfels as teacher and organist. Publ. several papers on medieval music.

Röhr, Hugo, German conductor and composer; b. Dresden, Feb. 13, 1866; d. Munich, June 7, 1937. He was a pupil at the Dresden Cons. of A. Blassmann (piano) and F. Wüllner (composition); began his career as Kapellmeister in Augsburg; after filling similar positions in Prague and Breslau he was called in 1892 as Hofkapellmeister to Mannheim; appointed Hofkapellmeister at the court opera in Munich (1896), and (from 1912) also conductor of the Lehrer-gesangverein; 1924-34, teacher of conducting at the Munich Academy of Music; then retired. He wrote several 1-act operas: Das

Vaterunser (Munich, 1904), Frauenlist (Leipzig, 1917), Cœur-Dame (1927); a dramatic poem Ekkehard, for soli, chorus, and orch.; chamber music; songs.

Röhrig, Emil, German composer; b. Rettert, Oct. 31, 1882; d. Aachen, July 22, 1954. After studying violin in Chemnitz, he became engaged as violinist and conductor in Krefeld and Aachen. He wrote much music for brass; also concertos for double-bass, viola, trumpet, etc.; cantatas and other choral works.

Rojo (röh'-hōh), Casiano, Spanish authority on Gregorian Chant; b. Acinas, near Burgos, Aug. 5, 1877; d. at the monastery of Santo Domingo de Silos, Burgos, Dec. 4, 1931. He entered the monastery school at Silos in 1890; ordained priest in 1901; taught organ until 1913; was chorus leader until 1922. He studied music with Dom Pothier; devoted himself to the study of Gregorian Chant. He publ.: Le Chant grégorien en Espagne, in the Strasbourg 'Kongressbericht' (1905); Método de canto gregoriano (Valladolid, 1906); Antiphonarium Mozarabicum de la Catedral de León (with G. Prado; León, 1928); El Canto mozárabe. Estudio histórico-crítico de su antigüedad y estado actual (with G. Prado; Barcelona, 1929); articles in 'Revue du chant grégorien,' etc.

Rokseth, Yvonne (née Rihouët), French musicologist and organist; b. Maisons-Lafitte, near Paris, July 17, 1890; d. Paris, Aug. 23, 1948. She studied at the Paris Cons.; with d'Indy and Roussel at the Schola Cantorum; and with Pirro at the Sorbonne; Dr. ès lettres (dissertation: La Musique d'orgue au XV<sup>e</sup> siècle et au début du XVI<sup>e</sup>; Paris, 1930); held various positions as organist in Paris (1920-25); was later librarian at the Paris Cons. and in the music division of the Bibliothèque Nationale; prof. of musicology at the Univ. of Strasbourg (from 1937); publ. a biography of Grieg (Paris, 1933); edited Deux livres d'orgue parus chez P. Attaignant en 1531, in the 'Publications de la Société française de musicologie' (1925); Treize motets et un prélude pour orgue, ib. (1930); Poliphonies du XIII<sup>e</sup> siècle: Le Manuscrit Montpellier H 196 (facsimile, transcription, and commentary, 4 vols., 1935-39); also organ works of Marc Antonio da Bologna of 1523; etc.; co-editor of Trois Chansonniers français du XV<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1927). —Cf. G. Thibault, Yvonne Rokseth, in 'Revue de Musicologie' (1948).

Roland-Manuel, Alexis (real name Roland Alexis Manuel Lévy), French composer and writer; b. Paris, March 22, 1891. He was a pupil of Albert Roussel and Vincent d'Indy; also studied privately with Ravel; was engaged as music critic of the 'Eclair.' In 1947 he became prof. at the Paris Cons. In his compositions he adopted the French neo-Classical style, close to Roussel's manner; however, it is not as a composer but as a perspicacious critic that he is chiefly known. He publ. 3 books on Ravel: Maurice Ravel et son œuvre (1914), Maurice Ravel et son œuvre dramatique (1928), Maurice Ravel (1938; in English, London, 1947); also monographs on Honegger (1925) and Manuel de Falla (1930). —Works: Isabelle et Pantalón, opéra-bouffe (Paris, Dec. 11, 1922); Le Diable amoureux, light opera (1929); L'Écran des jeunes filles, ballet (Paris Opéra, May 16, 1929); Elvire, ballet on themes of Scarlatti (Paris Opéra, Feb. 8, 1937); piano concerto (1938); Cantique de la sagesse, for chorus and orch. (1951); chamber music; songs.

Roldán, Amadeo, Cuban violinist and composer; b. Paris (of Cuban parents), July 12, 1900; d. Havana, March 2, 1939. He studied violin at the Madrid Cons. with Fernández Bordas, graduating in 1916; won the Sarasate violin prize; subsequently studied composition with Conrado del Campo in Madrid and with Pedro Sanjuán. In 1921 he settled in Havana; in 1924, became concertmaster of the Orquesta Filarmónica there; 1925, assistant conductor; from 1932, conductor. In his works he employed with signal success the melorhythms of Afro-Cuban popular music; as a mulatto, he had an innate understanding of these elements. Of his works, the most powerful is the ballet, La Rebambaramba, employing a number of Cuban percussion instruments in the score; a suite from this ballet was performed in Havana on Aug. 12, 1928. Other works: Overtura sobre temas cubanos (Havana, Nov. 29, 1925); El Milagro de Anaquillé (Havana, Sept. 22, 1929); Danza Negra, for voice and 7 instruments (1929); Motivos de Son, for voice and 9 instruments (1930); 3 Toques for chamber orch. (1931); and 6 Rítmicas for a percussion ensemble.

Rolla, Alessandro, Italian violinist, Paganini's teacher; b. Pavia, April 6, 1757; d. Milan, Sept. 15, 1841. He was a pupil of Renzi and Conti; from 1782 till 1802 he was concertmaster of the ducal orch. in Parma; Paganini studied with him there. In 1805 he was appointed violinist to the French Viceroy Eugène Beauharnais, in Milan; prof. at the Cons. of Milan from its foundation in 1807. He wrote several ballets: Adelasia (Milan, 1779), Iserbeck (Padua, 1802), Eloisa e Roberto or Il Conte d'Essex (Rome, 1805), Pizzarro (Milan, 1807), Abdul (Vienna, 1808), Achilles auf Skyros (Vienna, 1808); symphonies; 3 violin concertos; 4 viola concertos; 6 string quartets; trios for violin, viola, and cello, also for 2 violins and cello; duos for violin, also for violin and viola, etc.

Rolla, Antonio, Italian violinist; son of Alessandro Rolla; b. Parma, April 18, 1798; d. Dresden, May 19, 1837. He studied with his father; was concertmaster of the orch. of the Italian Opera Co. in Dresden (1823-35); composed a number of violin pieces.

Rolland (röh-lahn'), Romain, famous French author and musicologist; b. Clamecy, Nièvre, Jan. 29, 1866; d. Vézelay, Yonne, Dec. 30, 1944. He was educated at the École de Rome; Dr. ès lettres (1895) with two theses, Cur ars picturae apud Italos XVI saeculi deciderit and the very valuable Les Origines du théâtre lyrique moderne (Histoire de l'opéra en Europe avant Lully et Scarlatti); 3rd ed., 1931); the latter was awarded the Prix Kastner-Bourgault by the Academy in 1896, and at the same time won him the professorship in the history of music at the École Normale. In 1900 he organized the 1st international congress for the history of music in Paris, and read a paper on Les Musiciens italiens en France sous Mazarin et 'l'Orfeo' de Luigi Rossi (publ. 1901); with J. Combarieu he ed. the transactions and the papers read as Documents, mémoires et vœux (1901). In Oct., 1901, he founded, with J. Combarieu (editor), P. Aubry, M. Emmanuel, L. Laloy, and himself as principal contributors, the fortnightly 'Revue d'Histoire et Critique musicales.' In 1903 the Univ. of Paris commissioned him to organize the music section of the newly founded École des Hautes Études Sociales, of which he was the 1st president, and where he lectured on the history of music; resigned in 1909, devoting his entire time to literary work. From 1913 he resided in Switzerland, but in 1938 returned to France and took up his residence at Vézelay. —Rolland's writings exhibit sound scholarship, broad sympathy, keen analytical power, well-balanced judgment, and intimate acquaintance with the works of the composers. The book by which he is most widely known is Jean-Christophe, a musical novel remarkable for its blending of historical accuracy, psychological and esthetic speculation, subtle psychological analysis, and romantic interest; for it he received the Nobel prize (1915). The 1st volume was publ. in 1905, the last (10th) in 1912; English transl. by G. Cannan, N. Y., 1910-13; German transl. by E. Grautoff, Frankfurt, 1913-15 (new ed., 1931). Rolland's other works include Paris als Musikstadt (1904; in Strauss' series 'Die Musik'; rewritten and publ. in French as Le Renouveau in Musiciens d'aujourd'hui); Beethoven (1903; English transl. by B. Constance Hull, with brief analyses of the symphs., quartets, and sonatas by A. E. Hull, 6th ed., 1927; in German, Zürich, 1918); Haendel (1910; English transl. by A. E. Hull, 1916); Voyage musical au pays du passé (1920; in English, 1922); Beethoven: Les grandes époques créatrices (1928; English transl. by Ernest Newman entitled Beethoven the Creator, 1929; in German, 1930); Goethe et Beethoven (1930; in English, 1931); Beethoven: Le Chant de la Résurrection (1937; on the Missa solemnis and the last sonatas); essays in various journals he collected and publ. in 2 vols. as Musiciens d'autrefois (1908; 6th ed., 1919; in English, 1915) and Musiciens d'aujourd'hui (1908; 8th ed., 1947; in English, 1914); Essays on Music (a selection from some of the above books; N. Y., 1948); contributed the chapters on Italian, French, English, and German opera in the 17th century to Lavignac's 'Encyclopédie de la Musique' (1913). —Cf. P. Seippel, Romain Rolland: l'Homme et l'œuvre (Paris, 1913); Stefan Zweig, Romain Rolland: der Mann und das Werk (Frankfurt, 1921; in English, N. Y., 1921); J. Bonnerot, Romain Rolland, sa vie, son œuvre (Paris, 1921); E. Lerch, Romain Rolland und die Erneuerung der Gesinnung (Munich, 1926); M. Lob, Un grand Bourguignon, Romain Rolland (Auxerre, 1927); Chr. Sénéchal, Romain Rolland (Paris, 1933); M. Doisy, Romain Rolland (Brussels, 1945); R. Argos, Romain Rolland (Paris, 1950); W. T. Starr, A Critical Bibliography of the Published Writings of Romain Rolland (Evanston, Ill., 1950).

Rolle, Johann Heinrich, German composer; b. Quedlinburg, Dec. 23, 1716; d. Magdeburg, Dec. 29, 1785. He played the viola and the organ in the Berlin court orch. (1741); went to Magdeburg in 1746 as church organist; in 1752 became his father's successor as town music director there. He wrote 4 Passions, 20 oratorios, several church services for the entire year; Odes of Anacreon for voice and harpsichord; other secular pieces. —Cf. W. Kawerau, J. H. Rolle. Ein musikalisches Charakterbild (Magdeburg, 1885); H. von Hase, J. H. Rolle, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 2); R. Kaestner, J. H. Rolle (Kassel, 1932).

Röllig, Karl Leopold, Austrian composer and inventor; b. Vienna, c. 1735; d. there, March 4, 1804. He was a harmonica player; invented the 'Orphika' and 'Xänorphika' (pianos with bows instead of hammers), and made many tours, in an attempt to popularize them. In 1797 he settled in Vienna. He wrote a comic opera, Clarisse (Hamburg, Oct. 10, 1771); publ. the pamphlet Über die Harmonika (1787) and Über die Orphika (1795).

Rolón, José, Mexican composer; b. Ciudad Guzmán, Jalisco, June 22, 1883; d. Mexico City, Feb. 3, 1945. He studied in Paris with Moszkowski, and later with Nadia Boulanger and Dukas. In Mexico he was active as a teacher. —Works: symph. poem Cuauhtémoc (Mexico City, Jan. 10, 1930); symph. suite Zapotlán (Mexico City, Nov. 4, 1932); piano concerto (Mexico City, Sept. 4, 1942); many effective piano pieces.

Roman, Johan Helmich, important Swedish composer; b. Stockholm, Oct. 26, 1694; d. Haraldsmåla, near Kalmar, Oct. 19, 1758. At 16, violinist in the court orch. in which his father was concertmaster; studied composition with Ariosti and Pepusch in London (1714) and entered the service of the Duke of Newcastle (1717), winning a high reputation; returned to Stockholm in 1720; became court conductor in 1729; lived in Italy, France, and England (1735-37); elected member of the Swedish Academy in 1740; retired in 1745. Of his numerous compositions, only 2 sets were published during his life, 12 Sonate a flauto traverso, violone e cembalo (1727) and Assaggio a violino solo (1740). In MS in various libraries are preserved a Swedish Mass, motets, hymns, and about 80 psalms; 21 sinfonie, 2 sinfonie da chiesa, 6 overtures, 5 suites, 2 concerti grossi, 5 violin concertos, about 20 violin sonatas, 17 trio sonatas, etc. Modern editions of Roman's instrumental works were brought out by P. Vretblad, H. Rosenberg, and V. Söderholm. Roman is called 'the father of Swedish music,' for he was the first in Sweden to write choral and instrumental music that could compare favorably with German and Italian products. His style shows the influence of Handel, whom he knew personally in England. —Cf.

P. Vretblad, J. H. Roman Svenska musikens fader (2 vols., Stockholm, 1914; vol. II contains complete thematic catalogue); C. A. Moberg, J. H. Roman (Stockholm, 1944); I. Bengtsson, J. H. Roman och hans Instrumentalmusik . . . (Upsala, 1955).

Romani, Carlo, Italian composer; b. Avelino, May 24, 1824; d. Florence, March 4, 1875. He studied with Palafuti (piano) and Picchianti (composition); completed his studies under his uncle, Pietro Romani; set to music the recitatives of Der Freischütz for its first Italian performance (Florence, Feb. 3, 1843); wrote the operas (all produced at Florence): Tutti amanti (1847), Il Mantello (1852; successful), I Baccanali di Roma (1854), Ermellina ossia Le Gemme della corona (1865); an oratorio, San Sebastiano (1864); various patriotic songs.

Romani, Felice, Italian librettist; b. Genoa, Jan. 31, 1788; d. Moneglia, Jan. 28, 1865. Abandoning the legal profession, he turned to literature, becoming the foremost librettist of his time. He wrote about 100 librettos for Mayr, Winter, Vaccai, Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti, Pacini, Ricci, etc. —Cf. F. Regli, Elogio a Felice Romani (Turin, 1865); L. Lianovosani, Saggio bibliografico relativo ai melodrammi di Felice Romani (Milan, 1878); E. Branca (Romani's wife), Felice Romani ed i più riputati maestri di musica del suo tempo (Turin, 1882); C. Paschetto, Felice Romani monografia (Turin, 1907).

Romani, Pietro, Italian composer; b. Rome, May 29, 1791; d. Florence, Jan. 6, 1877. He studied with Fenaroli; became conductor at the Teatro della Pergola in Florence; taught singing at the Istituto Musicale there. He wrote 2 operas, Il Qui pro quo (Rome, 1817) and Carlo Magno (Florence, 1823); also ballet music; but he is remembered chiefly for his aria Manca un foglio for Bartolo in Il Barbiere di Siviglia which he wrote for the production of the opera in Florence in 1816, as a substitute for Rossini's original aria A un dottor della mia sorte, which presented some vocal difficulties. Romani's aria was long retained in many productions of the opera.

Romano, Giulio. See Caccini.

Romberg, Andreas (Jacob), German violinist and composer; b. Vechta, near Münster, April 27, 1767; d. Gotha, Nov. 10, 1821. He was the son of the clarinetist and music director Gerhard Heinrich Romberg (1745-1819); played in public at 7; in 1784 made a concert tour with his cousin Bernhard Romberg through Holland and France, remaining in Paris as soloist for the Concert Spirituel during that season. From 1790 to 1793 he played in the Electoral orch. at Bonn with Bernhard; toured in Italy with him; lived many years in Hamburg (1801-15), and then succeeded Spohr as court Kapellmeister at Gotha. His numerous compositions include the operas: Der Rabe (Hamburg, April 7, 1794), Die Ruinen zu Paluzzi (Hamburg, Dec. 27, 1811), Die Grossmut des Scipio (Berlin, March 4, 1818); Singspiele; choral works with orch.; church music; 10 symphonies (4 published); 23 violin concertos (4 published); 33 string quartets (25 published), 8 flute quintets with strings, 1 clarinet quintet, 2 string quintets, 1 piano quartet, 3 violin sonatas, 11 rondos and caprices for violin, a concertante for violin and cello with orch., etc. His Toy Symphony was popular for a time, as was his setting of Schiller's Lied von der Glocke. —Cf. Rochlitz's Für Freunde der Tonkunst (vol. 1, Leipzig, 1824); K. Stephenson, Andreas Romberg (Hamburg, 1938).

Romberg, Bernhard, German cellist and composer; b. Dinklage, Nov. 11, 1767; d. Hamburg, Aug. 13, 1841. He was the son of Anton Romberg, famous bassoonist (1742-1814), who took him to Paris in 1781; he remained there for 2 years; played in the court orch. at Bonn (1790-93); then traveled in Spain; was the constant companion of his cousin Andreas Romberg; in 1796 they played at a concert with Beethoven in Vienna. Romberg was appointed prof. of cello playing at the Paris Cons. in 1801, but resigned in 1803. He was then in Hamburg and Berlin; in 1807 toured in Russia; paid a visit to England (1814); then was court Kapellmeister in Berlin (1815-19); was subsequently in Vienna (1822-25) and again in Russia (1825); lived in Paris (1839-40) before retiring to Hamburg. For the cello he wrote 9 concertos, 3 concertinos, and a fantasia with orch., 4 sets of Russian airs with orch., caprices and fantasias on Swedish, Spanish, and Rumanian airs, and polonaises. In Paris he publ. a cello method (1840); also brought out several operas: Ulysses und Circe (Berlin, July 27, 1807), Rittertreue (Berlin, Jan. 31, 1817), Alma (Copenhagen, May 15, 1824), etc.; 11 string quartets; other chamber music. —Cf. H. Schäfer, Bernhard Romberg (Münster, 1931).

Romberg, Sigmund, famous operetta composer; b. Szeged, Hungary, July 29, 1887;

d. New York, Nov. 9, 1951. He studied at the Univ. of Bucharest and in Vienna (with Heuberger); in 1909 came to the U. S. as an engineer, later turning to composition; settled in N. Y. in 1913. He composed over 70 operettas, including The Midnight Girl (Feb. 23, 1914; his first success); The Blue Paradise (with E. Eysler; N. Y., Aug. 5, 1915); Maytime (N. Y., Aug. 16, 1917); Blossom Time (on Schubert's melodies; N. Y., Sept. 29, 1921); The Rose of Stamboul (March 7, 1922); The Student Prince (N. Y., Dec. 2, 1924); The Desert Song (N. Y., Nov. 30, 1926); My Maryland (N. Y., Sept. 12, 1927); The New Moon (Sept. 19, 1928); Up in Central Park (N. Y., Jan. 27, 1945). —Cf. E. Arnold, Deep in My Heart (a biography in the form of a novel, but containing a list of shows and songs; N. Y., 1949).

Romero, Mateo, Spanish composer; date and place of birth unknown; d. Madrid, May 10, 1647. He was a soldier (called 'El Maestro Capitán'). After serving with the army in Flanders, he became a cantor in the Chapel Royal, Madrid (1594), and was maestro from 1598 till his retirement in 1633 (succeeded by Patiño). He was ordained in 1609; in 1638 he went to Portugal as emissary to the Duke of Braganza (the future João IV). He was esteemed highly as a composer of both sacred and secular music. 22 works by Romero for 3 and 4 voices are included in the 'Cancionero de Sablonara' (modern ed. by J. Arco, Madrid, 1918); other compositions in Diego Pizarro's collection, Libro de tonos humanos (MS in the Madrid Library), and in Pedrell's 'Teatro lírico español' III (La Coruña, 1896-98); a motet, Libera me, was included by Esclava in his collection 'Lira sacro-hispana.'

Romeu, Luis, Spanish composer; b. Vich, near Barcelona, June 21, 1874; d. there, Sept. 23, 1937. A priest, he was first choir-master, then organist, at the cathedral in Vich. His works, which show the influence of Catalan folksong, include a Mass for the Mare de Deu de Nuria and Cants catequístics et Marianes (3 collections). He publ. a book on Catalan church music, La Versió autèntica dels Goigs del Roser de tot l'any (vol. I of Obra del Cançoner popular de Catalunya; Barcelona, 1928). The total number of his works, secular and sacred, is 331.

Römhildt, Johann Theodor, German organist and composer; b. Salzgungen, Sept.

23, 1684; d. Merseburg, Oct. 26, 1757. He studied with Schelle and Kuhnau at the Thomasschule in Leipzig; was cantor at Spremberg, Freystadt, and Merseburg; in 1735, was appointed cathedral organist at Merseburg. He wrote about 250 church cantatas, numerous works for chorus and for organ; also a St. Matthew Passion, which was publ. by Paulke in 1922. — Cf. Karl Paulke, J. Th. Römheldt, in the 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 1, 1919).

Ronald, Sir Landon (real name L. R. Russell; son of the composer, Henry Russell, Sr.; brother of the impresario Henry Russell, Jr.), English conductor; b. London, June 7, 1873; d. there, Aug. 14, 1938. He was a pupil at the Royal College of Music of Franklin Taylor (piano), Henry Holmes (violin), and Sir Charles Parry (composition); also attended for a time the classes of Sir Charles Stanford and Sir Walter Parratt. He made a successful début as pianist in London in 1890, but soon abandoned that career to conduct comic operas in the provinces; toured the U. S. in 1894 with Mme. Melba as her accompanist. From 1898 to 1902 he was conductor at the Lyric Theatre in London, and during that time began his series of summer symphony concerts at Blackpool; also conducted in Germany, Austria, and Holland. In 1908 he was appointed permanent conductor of the New Symp. Orch. (later the Royal Albert Hall Orch.) in London; instituted a series of Promenade Concerts in Birmingham; in 1910 was appointed principal of the Guildhall School of Music and held that position almost until his death. He was knighted in 1922. At various times he acted as music critic for 'The Artist,' 'The Onlooker,' 'The Tatler,' 'Musical News,' 'The News Chronicle.' — Works: an operetta, A Capital Joke; 2 dramatic scenes, Adonais and The Lament of Shah Jehan; 2 ballets, Britannia's Realm (1902; for the coronation of Edward VII) and Entente cordiale (1904); symph. poem, A Winter's Night; about 300 songs; was the editor of 'Who's Who in Music' (London, 1937); publ. 2 autobiographical books, Variations on a Personal Theme (London, 1922) and Myself and Others (London, 1931).

Roncaglia (rohn-cal'-yah), Gino, Italian musicologist; b. Modena, May 7, 1883. He studied with Sinigaglia; devoted himself to music history and biography. — Publications: Giuseppe Verdi (Naples, 1914); La Rivoluzione musicale italiana (Milan, 1928); Rossini l'Olimpico (Milan, 1946); Invito alla musica (Milan, 1947; 4th ed., 1958); Invito all'opera (Milan, 1949; 2nd ed., 1954); L'Ascensione creatrice di Giuseppe Verdi (Florence, 3rd ed., 1951); La Cappella musicale del Duomo di Modena (Florence, 1957).

Ronconi, Domenico, famous Italian tenor and singing teacher; b. Lendinara, July 11, 1772; d. Milan, April 13, 1839. He was a successful opera tenor; sang in Italy, France, Germany, and Russia. In 1829 he opened a singing school in Milan; publ. vocal exercises that were widely used. His son, Giorgio Ronconi (b. Milan, Aug. 6, 1810; d. Madrid, Jan. 8, 1890), was a well-known baritone; spent some years in New York (from 1867).

Ronga, Luigi, eminent musicologist; b. Turin, June 19, 1901. He studied at the Univ. of Turin and in Dresden; in 1926 became prof. at the Cons. of Palermo; later joined the faculty of Santa Cecilia, Rome. He publ. an excellent monograph on Frescobaldi (Turin, 1930); also one on Rossini (Florence, 1939) and essays on other Italian composers; Bach, Mozart, Beethoven; tre problemi critici (Venice, 1956); Arte e gusto nella musica, dell'ars nova a Debussy (Milan, 1956); The Meeting of Poetry and Music (N. Y., 1956).

Rongé (rohn-zhā'), Jean-Baptiste, Belgian composer and translator; b. Liège, April 1, 1825; d. there, Oct. 28, 1882. He was a pupil at the Liège Cons.; won the 2nd Belgian Prix de Rome (1851); wrote occasional cantatas and other pieces; a meeting with the poet André van Hasselt directed his interests towards literary work; in collaboration they translated into French the librettos of Don Giovanni, Zauberflöte, Freischütz, Barbiere di Siviglia, and other famous operas. After van Hasselt's death (1874), Rongé returned to composing, producing a comic opera, La Comtesse d'Albany (Liège, 1877); also wrote some choruses and songs, and 24 Études rythmiques (for voice).

Ronger, Florimond. See Hervé.

Röntgen, Julius, pianist and composer; b. Leipzig, May 9, 1855; d. Utrecht, Sept. 13, 1932. He studied music with his father, Engelbert Röntgen (1829-97); later with Plaidy and Reinecke in Leipzig and Fr. Lachner in Munich. In 1878 he settled in Amsterdam as teacher; was conductor of the Society for the Promotion of Music (1886-98); was a co-founder (1885) of the Amsterdam Cons., and its director from 1914 to 1924. He was a friend of Brahms and Grieg; edited the letters of Brahms to Th. Engelmann (1918); publ. a biography of Grieg (1930). An astonishingly industrious composer, he wrote an enormous amount of music in every genre, cast in an expansive Romantic style: 12 symphonies; 3 piano concertos; 3 operas (Agnete, Samum, and Der lachende Kavalier); much chamber music; etc.; edited old Dutch keyboard compositions (vol. 37 of the publs. of the Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziek-geschiedenis) and 14 songs by Adrianus Valerius. His correspondence was publ. by his widow (1934).

Roos, Robert de, Dutch composer; b. The Hague, March 10, 1907. He studied with Johan Wagenaar; then in Paris with Milhaud, Monteux, and Koechlin; later worked with Sem Dresden in Holland. In 1948 he was named attaché at the Netherlands Embassy in Paris. His works include the ballet Kaartspel (Card Game; 1934); Cinq Études for piano and small orch. (1929); Mouvement symphonique (1930); Chant funèbre (1931); a chamber oratorio after Omar Khayyám (1928); violin concerto (1939); viola concerto (1941); Sinfonia romantica (1943); piano concerto (1944); 4 string quartets.

Root, Frederick Woodman, American organist and writer on music, son of George Frederick Root; b. Boston, June 13, 1846; d. Chicago, Nov. 8, 1916. He was taught by his father, then by Dr. B. C. Blodgett and William Mason in New York. In 1863 became organist of the Third Presbyterian Church, Chicago; in 1865, of the Swedenborgian Church. In 1869-70, traveled and studied in Europe, studying singing with Vannuccini in Florence. Returning, he wrote for 'The Song Messenger,' which he edited for some years; publ. The Technique and Art of Singing, Methodical Sight-Singing, Introductory Lessons in Voice Culture, The Polychrome Lessons in Voice Culture, Resources of Musical Expression, A Study of Musical Taste, The Real American Music; composed anthems, cantatas, songs.

Root, George Frederick, American composer and publisher; b. Sheffield, Mass., Aug. 30, 1820; d. Bailey's Island, Maine, Aug. 6, 1895. He was a pupil of George J. Webb in Boston; then lived in New York; was organist of the 'Church of the Strangers.' He went to Paris for a year's study in 1850. Going to Chicago in 1859, he joined the music publishing firm of Root and Cady established in 1858 by his elder brother, E. T. Root, and C. M. Cady; it was dissolved in 1871. He wrote many popular songs (Battlecry of Freedom, Tramp, tramp, tramp, Just before the battle, Mother); publ. numerous collections of church music and school songs. For some of his earlier compositions he used the German transl. of his name, 'Friedrich Wurzel,' as a pseudonym. —Cf. his autobiography, The Story of a Musical Life (Cincinnati, 1891); D. J. Epstein, Music Publishing in Chicago before 1871: The Firm of Root and Cady, 1858-1871, in 'Notes' (June, 1944 through June, 1946).

Rootham, Cyril Bradley, English organist and composer; b. Bristol, Oct. 5, 1875; d. Cambridge, March 18, 1938. He studied music with his father, Daniel Rootham (1837-1922); won classical and musical scholarships at St. John's College (Mus. Bac., 1900; A. M., 1901; Mus. Doc., 1910); finished at the Royal College of Music under Sir Charles Stanford and Sir Walter Parratt. From 1901 till his death he was organist at St. John's College, Cambridge; also conductor of the Univ. Musical Society there (1912-36); lectured at the Univ. from 1913. His career as composer was also bound with the musical life in Cambridge; he brought out there his opera The Two Sisters, on Feb. 14, 1922; For the Fallen for chorus and orch. (1919); Brown Earth (performed by the musical societies of Oxford and Cambridge Universities, Albert Hall, London, March 14, 1923); Ode on the Morning of Christ's Nativity (Milton), for soli, chorus, and orch. (1930); etc. A 2nd symph. (with a choral ending) was performed posthumously by the B. B. C., March 17, 1939. Other works include Pan, rhapsody for orch. (1912); a string quintet (1909); a string quartet (1914); a septet for viola, flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn, and harp (1930); piano trio (1931).

Ropartz (rö'h-pärhts'), (Joseph) Guy (Marie), French composer; b. Guingamp, Côtes du Nord, June 15, 1864; d. Lanloup, Nov. 22, 1955. He studied law at Rennes and was admitted to the bar, but decided against a legal career; entered the Paris Cons. as pupil of Dubois and Massenet; then took lessons in organ and composition from César Franck, who remained his chief influence in composition; from 1894 until 1919, director of the Cons. and conductor of the symph. concerts at Nancy; from 1919 to 1929 conducted the Municipal Orch. in Strasbourg; after that lived in retirement in Paris. He received the Prix Cressent (for opera) in 1906, and the Prix Chartier (for chamber music) in 1919. His most important stage work is the 3-act opera Le Pays (Nancy, Feb. 1, 1912; Paris Opéra, April 14, 1913); other stage works: incidental music for Pierre Loti's Pêcheur d'Islande (1889-91) and Le Miracle de St.-Nicolas, legend in 13 scenes (1905); for orch.: 5 symphonies: No. 1 (1895), No. 2 (1900), No. 3, with chorus (1906), No. 4 (1910), No. 5 (1945), La Cloche des morts (1887), Les Landes (1888), Marche de Fête (1888), 5 Pièces brèves (1889), Carnaval (1889), Sérénade (1892), Dimanche breton (1893), À Marie endormie (1912), La Chasse du prince Arthur (1912), Soir sur les Chaumes (1913), Divertissement (1915), Sérénade champêtre (Paris, Feb. 24, 1934), Pastorale et danse, for oboe and orch. (1907), Romanza e scherzino, for violin and orch. (1926), Rapsodie for cello and orch. (Paris, Nov. 3, 1928); sacred music for chorus: 5 motets a cappella (1900), 3 Masses, Requiem for soloists, chorus, and orch. (Paris, April 7, 1939), De Profundis for solo voice, chorus, and orch. (1942), etc.; chamber music: 5 string quartets (1893, 1912, 1925, 1934, 1940), piano trio (1918), string trio (1935), 3 violin sonatas, 2 cello sonatas; for piano: Dans l'ombre de la montagne (1913), Musiques au jardin (1917), Croquis d'été (1918), Croquis d'automne (1929), Jeunes filles (1929); 3 Nocturnes, etc.; many organ pieces; songs (Chrysanthèmes, La Mer, Paysage, Tes yeux, De tous les temps, Poème d'adieu, En mai, Chanson de bord, Il pleut, Au Bord d'un ruisseau, Douloureux mensonge, La vieille maison, etc.); pedagogic works: Enseignement du Solfège, Leçons d'harmonie, etc.; Notations artistiques (essays; Paris, 1891); also 3 vols. of poems and a play, La Batte. —Cf. A. Cœuroy, La Musique française moderne (1922); M. Boucher, Guy Ropartz, in the 'Revue Musicale' (1924); F. Lamy, J. G. Ropartz, l'homme et l'œuvre (Paris, 1948); L. Kornprobst, J. G. Ropartz (Strasbourg, 1949).

Roquet (roh-kā'). See Thoinan.

Rore, Cipriano de, celebrated composer; b. Mechlin or Antwerp, 1516; d. Parma, 1565. He was a pupil of Willaert, maestro at San Marco, Venice; and in 1542 publ. his 1st book of madrigals a 5. From about 1547 to 1558 he was in the service of the Duke of Ferrara, Ercole II; visited Antwerp in 1558, and in 1561 was appointed maestro di cappella to Duke Ottavio Farnese at Parma. Upon Willaert's death in 1562, Rore was appointed his successor, but soon resigned and returned to the court of Parma (July, 1564). —Publications: 8 books of madrigals, 3 of motets, a Passion according to St. John, 'Fantasie e ricercari.' Motets and madrigals are in collections by Susato, Phalèse, and others. —In MS (Munich Library) are 3 Masses: Vivat Felix Hercules a 5, Praeter rerum seriem a 7, and a Missa a note nere a 5; also motets and madrigals. Reprints in A. Einstein's The Italian Madrigal (5 madrigals in vol. 3); A. Schering's Vier Meister-Madrigale aus dem 16. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1916); Davison's and Apel's Historical Anthology of Music (vol. 1, no. 131); F. Blume's Das Chorwerk (madrigals ed. by W. Wiora in vol. 5, 1930); Madrigals a 3 and a 4, ed. by Gertrude P. Smith (Northampton, Mass., 1943); G. Tagliapietra's Antologia di musica antica e moderna per pianoforte (Milan, 1931); Ph. de Monte's complete works: vols. 4 (1928), 8 (1929), 23 (1933); A. Schering's Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (no. 106); A. Einstein's The Golden Age of the Madrigal (1942); reprints of motets by Commer, Burney, Hawkins, Kiesewetter, Dehn, etc. —Cf. R. van Aerde, Notice sur la vie et les œuvres de Cipriano de Rore (Mechlin, 1909); J. Musiol, Cipriano de Rore, ein Meister der venezianischen Schule (Breslau, 1932); A. Einstein, The Italian Madrigal (Princeton, 1949; vol. 1, p. 384 ff.); A. Johnson, The Masses of Cipriano de Rore, in 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (Fall, 1953).

Rorem, Ned, American composer; b. Richmond, Ind., Oct. 23, 1923. He received his musical training in Chicago; won a scholarship at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, in 1942; studied there and later at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood; also at the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., with Wagenaar, obtaining his M. M. degree in 1948; studied privately with Aaron Copland and Virgil Thomson. In 1948 he received the Gershwin Memorial Award; in 1950, the Lili Boulanger Award; in 1951, a Fulbright Fellowship; from 1951 to 1955 lived in Europe; in 1955, returned to the U. S.; living mostly in N. Y. —Works: opera, A Childhood Miracle, for 6 voices and 13 instruments (N. Y., Punch Opera Co., May 10, 1952); opera, The Robbers (N. Y., April 14, 1958); symph. No. 1 (Vienna, 1951); symph. No. 2 (La Jolla, Calif., Aug. 5, 1956); Design, for orch. (Louisville, May 28, 1953); 2 piano concertos (1950; 1951); Sinfonia for woodwinds and percussion (Pittsburgh, July 14, 1957); The Poets' Requiem, for chorus, soprano solo, and orch., on 8 contemporary poems (1954-55; N. Y., Feb. 15, 1957); 2 string quartets; 2 piano sonatas; A Quiet Afternoon, a set of 9 piano pieces; Sicilienne, for 2 pianos; From an Unknown Past, a cycle of 7 choruses; 5 Prayers for the Young, for chorus; many songs.

ROSA — ROSE

Rosa, Carl (real name Karl Rose), famous opera impresario; b. Hamburg, March 21, 1842; d. Paris, April 30, 1889. At 12 he made tours as violinist in England, Denmark, and Germany; studied further in the Conservatories of Leipzig (1859) and Paris; was concertmaster at Hamburg (1863-65); gave a concert at the Crystal Palace, London (March 10, 1866), and toured in the U. S. with Mr. Bateman, meeting the singer Euphrosyne Parepa (see Parepa-Rosa) and marrying her at New York in 1867. They organized an English opera company, and toured America until 1871, then returned to London. After his wife's death in 1874, he produced opera in English in various London theaters, forming the Carl Rosa Opera Co., which under various managements continued to be an important factor in English musical life for many years.

Rosa, Salvatore, Italian painter, poet, and musician; b. Arenella, near Naples, June 21, 1615; d. Rome, March 15, 1673. He studied music and became an expert lute player; from 1635 to 1640 he divided his time between Rome and Naples, and from 1640 to 1649 was court painter to the Medici at Florence; then lived in Rome. The pieces credited to Rosa by Burney and others have been proved to be spurious; it is doubtful whether Rosa ever composed music. His Satire, written about 1640 and containing sharp criticism of Italian church music of his day, was publ. posthumously in 1695, and was reprinted several times; Matheson attacked Rosa's views in his Mithridat, wider den Gift einer welschen Satyre des Salvator Rosa. . . (1749). — Cf. N. d'Arienzo, S. Rosa musicista, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1894); D. Battesti, Saggio sulla vita e le satire di Salvatore Rosa (Bourges, 1913); F. Gerra, Salvatore Rosa e la sua vita romana dal 1650 al 1672. . . (a summary of 200 letters written by Rosa; Rome, 1937); Frank Walker, Salvatore Rosa and Music, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (Oct., 1949 and Jan.-Feb., 1950).

Rosbaud, Hans, eminent Austrian conductor; b. Graz, July 22, 1895. He studied at the Hoch Cons. in Frankfurt; was director of the municipal music school in Mainz (1923-30); then radio conductor in Frankfurt and Münster; was active in Strasbourg during World War II; in 1945 was appointed director of the Munich Konzertverein; in 1948 he became music director of Baden-Baden; also conducted concerts in Switzerland and elsewhere in Europe; he particularly distinguished himself as a conductor of modern works.

Rösch, Friedrich, German composer; b. Memmingen, Dec. 12, 1862; d. Berlin, Oct. 29, 1925. He was a law student at Munich; studied music with Rheinberger; lived in Berlin, St. Petersburg, and Munich. In 1898 he, with Hans Sommer and Richard Strauss, organized the 'Genossenschaft deutscher Tonsetzer' (dissolved in 1937). — Works: Antonius, a burlesque oratorio; numerous choral pieces in a humorous vein; 4-part madrigals for men's chorus; songs; a book, Musikästhetische Streitfragen (Leipzig, 1897).

Rosé (roh-zä'), Arnold (Josef), distinguished violinist; b. Jassy, Rumania, Oct. 24, 1863; d. London, Aug. 25, 1946. He studied under Karl Heissler at the Vienna Cons.; made his professional début at the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, Oct. 30, 1879; in 1881 was appointed concertmaster of the Vienna Philh. and Opera orch.; held this post for 57 years, until 1938, when he was forced to leave Vienna; spent his last years in London. In 1882 he founded the Rosé Quartet (Rosé, P. Fischer, A. Ruzitska—later, Morawetz—and F. Buxbaum, who was succeeded by J. Walther in 1921), which won a high reputation throughout Europe; the Quartet made its American début at the Library of Congress, Washington, on April 28, 1928. In 1902 Rosé married Justine Mahler, a sister of Gustav Mahler.

Rose, John, British composer; b. London (of Dutch parents), Sept. 23, 1928. His family moved to South Africa in 1940, and he studied in Cape Town. In 1946 he went back to England for a course at the Royal Academy of Music in London; later studied with Rubbra and Wellesz. — Works: Slow Music for strings and harp (1951); a choral symph. (1952).

Rosé, Leonard, American cellist; b. Washington, D. C., July 27, 1918. He studied at the Curtis Institute of Music with Felix Salmond; was subsequently a member of the N. B. C. Orch. under Toscanini, in the Cleveland Orch., and then 1st cellist of the N. Y. Philharmonic. Since 1951 he has devoted himself to solo performances. He is also a member of the faculty of the Juilliard School and head of the cello department at the Curtis Institute.

Roseingrave, Thomas, English organist and composer; b. Winchester, 1690; d. Dunleary, June 23, 1766. He was the son and pupil of the organist Daniel Roseingrave (1650-1727); went to Italy in 1710 on a stipend from the Chapter of St. Patrick's Cathedral in Dublin and at Venice met Alessandro and Domenico Scarlatti; traveled with the latter to Rome and Naples. In 1720 he was at London, where he produced Domenico Scarlatti's opera Narciso; from 1725 to 1737 he was organist of St. George's, Hanover Square; then lived at Hampstead, and about 1749 returned to Dublin. —Publ. works: 15 Voluntaries and Fugues, made on Purpose for the Organ or Harpsichord (1730); 12 Solos for the German Flute, with a Thorough Bass for the Harpsichord; 8 Suites of Lessons for Harpsichord; 6 Double Fugues for organ or harpsichord (1750); etc. —Cf. V. Butcher, Thomas Roseingrave, in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1938).

Rösel, Artur, German violinist and composer; b. Münchenbernsdorf, Aug. 23, 1859; d. Weimar, April 3, 1934. He studied violin and composition in Weimar; was violinist in various theater orchestras in Hamburg, Lugano, and Rotterdam. In 1888 he became concertmaster of the Weimar court orch. —Works: 'lyric stage play' Halimah (Weimar, 1895); symph. poem, Frühlingstürme; 2 violin concertos; viola concerto; 2 string quartets; violin pieces.

Roselius, Ludwig, German composer; b. Kassel, Aug. 2, 1902; studied in Berlin with Abert and Wolf (musicology) and with Georg Schumann (composition); then settled in Bremen as music critic and teacher. —Works: the operas Doge und Dogaresa (Dortmund, Nov. 14, 1928), Godiva (Nuremberg, Aug. 17, 1933), Gudrun (Graz, April 29, 1939); choruses; piano pieces; songs. Edited motets by Andreas Raselius in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vol. 29/30).

Rosellen, Henri, French pianist and composer; b. Paris, Oct. 13, 1811; d. there, March 18, 1876. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Zimmerman (piano) and Halévy (composition); later became a pupil of Henri Herz, under whose influence he began to compose salon music for piano. His Réverie was fantastically popular for many years; he further composed Nocturne et Tarentelle; 12 Études brillantes; 76 fantasias on operatic airs; variations for piano; chamber music. He was a highly successful teacher in Paris, and publ. a Manuel des pianistes.

Rosen, Jerome, American composer; b. Boston, July 23, 1921; studied with Roger Sessions and William Denny at the Univ. of California, Berkeley; took courses with Darius Milhaud in Paris (1949-51). Upon his return to the U. S., he became instructor at the Univ. of California. He has written mostly chamber music (sonata for clarinet and cello; string quartet, etc.).

Rosen, Max, American violinist; b. Dorohei, Rumania, April 11, 1900; d. New York, Dec. 17, 1956. Before he was a year old, his parents settled in New York. His father, an amateur violinist of some ability, was his 1st teacher; he then studied with David Mannes at the Music School Settlement, N. Y. In 1912 he began taking lessons with Leopold Auer in Germany; made his début in Dresden, Nov. 16, 1915; this was followed by a successful tour of Scandinavia (1916-17); his American début was with the N. Y. Philharmonic (Jan. 12, 1918); he subsequently toured the U. S. (until 1921); 1921-25, in Europe; 1926, returned to the U. S.

Rosenberg, Hilding (Constantin), eminent Swedish composer; b. Bosjökloster, June 21, 1892. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music in Stockholm; then in Dresden with Buchmayer and K. Striegler. Returning to Sweden, he assumed the post of assistant conductor at the Stockholm Opera. In 1948 he visited the U. S. to conduct the American première of his 4th symphony, The Revelation of St. John. He employs the neo-Classical idiom in an individual manner, occasionally introducing elements of melodic atonality. —Works: operas: Resan till America (Journey to America); Stockholm, Nov. 24, 1932), Marionettes (1933; Stockholm, Feb. 14, 1939), De två Kungadöttrarna (The Two Princesses); Stockholm Radio, Sept. 19, 1940), Lycksalighetens (Isle of Felicity), Stockholm, Feb. 1, 1945); 5 symphonies: No. 1 (1919), No. 2, Sinfonia grave (1928-35), No. 3, De fyra tidsåldrarna (The Four Ages of Man), 1939), No. 4, Johannes Uppenbarelse (The Revelation of St. John), with chorus (1940), No. 5, Örtagårdsmästaren (The Keeper of the Garden); 1944); Sinfonia da chiesa No. 1 (1923); Sinfonia da chiesa No. 2 (1924); Sinfonia concertante (Paris Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 22, 1937); Overtura piccola (1942); Overtura bianca-nera, for strings (1948); The Louisville Concerto (Louisville, March 12, 1955); violin concerto (1924); trumpet concerto (1928); cello concerto (1939); viola concerto (1942); 5 string quartets; sonata for unaccompanied violin; songs and minor pieces. —Cf. M. Pergament, Hilding Rosenberg: a Journey in Modern Swedish Music, in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1947).

Rosenbloom, Sydney, British pianist and composer; b. Edinburgh, June 25, 1889; studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London; after teaching in the English provinces, he went to South Africa (1920); in 1921 was appointed prof. at the Harrison Cons. in Johannesburg. In 1930 he visited the U. S., and gave piano recitals in California. Upon returning to South Africa, he settled in East London. His works are mostly for piano, written in an ingratiating and highly pianistic manner, along Romantic lines: Caprice Impromptu, Valse-Etude, 3 Concert Studies, 6 Preludes, 2 Scherzos, Romance Triste, Etchings, From My Sketch Book, Falling Snow, etc.; 2 violin sonatas; Variations and Fugue for 2 pianos; songs.

Rosenfeld, Leopold, Danish composer and writer on music; b. Copenhagen, July 21, 1850; d. there, July 19, 1909. He studied at the Copenhagen Cons. and was for some years music critic of 'Musikbladet'; wrote several choral works with orch., of which Henrik og Else (Copenhagen, Feb. 7, 1885) had considerable success; he also publ. a number of piano pieces and about 200 songs to German and Danish texts.

Rosenfeld, Paul, American author and music critic; b. New York, May 4, 1890; d. there, July 21, 1946. He studied at Yale Univ. (B. A., 1912) and at Columbia Univ. School of Journalism (Lit. B., 1913). He then associated himself with progressive circles in literature and music; wrote music criticisms for 'The Dial' (1920-27); contributed also to other literary and music magazines. Although not a musician by training, Rosenfeld possessed a penetrating insight into musical values; he particularly championed the cause of modern American music; his incisive literary style enhanced the influence of his articles; he collected the most significant of them in his books: Musical Portraits (on 20 modern composers; 1920); Music Chronicle, covering the New York seasons 1917-23 (1923); An Hour with American Music (1929); Discoveries of a Music Critic (1936). —Cf. J. Mellquist and L. Wiese, ed., Paul Rosenfeld, Voyager in the Arts (N. Y., 1948).

Rosenhain, Jacob (Jacques), German pianist and composer; b. Mannheim, Dec. 2, 1813; d. Baden-Baden, March 21, 1894. He was a child prodigy; made his 1st public appearance at the age of 11 in Mannheim; studied there with Schmitt, and in Frankfurt with Schnyder von Wartensee. In 1837 he went to Paris and London; continued to travel until 1870, when he settled as a teacher in Baden-Baden. —Works: the operas Der Besuch im Irrenhause (Frankfurt, Dec. 29, 1834), Le Démon de la nuit (Paris, March 17, 1851), Le Volage et jaloux (Baden-Baden, Aug. 3, 1863); 3 symphonies; 3 string quartets; 4 piano trios; many piano pieces; 12 Études caractéristiques for piano; etc. He publ. Erinnerungen an Paganini (1893). —Cf. E. Kratt-Harvang, Jacques Rosenhain (Baden-Baden, 1891). —His brother Eduard Rosenhain (b. Mannheim, Nov. 16, 1818; d. Frankfurt, Sept. 6, 1861) was also a noteworthy pianist and teacher; publ. a serenade for cello and piano, and piano pieces.

Rosenmüller, Johann, German composer; b. Ölsnitz, c. 1620; d. Wolfenbüttel, Sept. 10, 1684. He graduated from the Univ. of Leipzig in 1640; from 1642 was master at the Thomasschule; later deputy cantor for Tobias Michael; in 1651 he was appointed organist of the Nicolai-Kirche. Imprisoned for a moral offense in 1655, he escaped and fled to Hamburg, thence to Venice; but in 1674 he was appointed ducal Kapellmeister at Wolfenbüttel. —Publ. Kernsprüche mehrenteils aus Heiliger Schrift, for 3 to 7 parts with continuo (2 vols., 1648, 1652); Studentenmusik mit 3 und 5 Violon (dance music; 1654); 12 Sonate da camera a 5 stromenti (Venice, 1670; reprinted by Karl Nef in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst,' vol. 18); Sonate a 2-5 stromenti d'arco (Nuremberg, 1682); 6 Mass-sections; 2 Magnificats; many sacred choruses. Rosenmüller's setting of Welt ade was used by Bach in his church cantata No. 27, Wer weiss wie nahe mir mein Ende. —Cf. A. Horneffer, Johann Rosenmüller (Berlin, 1898); F. Hamel, Die Psalmkompositionen Johann Rosenmüllers (Strasbourg, 1933).

Rosenstock, Joseph, conductor; b. Cracow, Jan. 27, 1895. He studied at the Cracow Cons.; then with Schreker in Vienna; graduated from the Vienna Academy of Music in 1920; conducted opera in Darmstadt

ROSENTHAL — ROSETTI

(1922-25), Wiesbaden (1925-27), and Mannheim (1930-33); in 1933 he was disqualified in Germany as a Jew; conducted operatic performances of the Jewish Kulturbund in Berlin until 1936, when he was appointed conductor of the Nippon Philharmonic Orch. in Tokyo; was successful there until 1941; then went to the U. S.; conducted in Tokyo again in 1945-46; in 1948 was engaged as conductor and music director of the N. Y. City Opera (till 1955); 1958, appointed music director of the Cologne Opera.

Rosenthal, Manuel, French composer and conductor; b. Paris, June 18, 1904, of a Russian mother and French father. He studied violin and composition at the Paris Cons., graduating in 1924; also took some lessons with Ravel. He was mobilized in 1939, and taken prisoner of war; remained in Germany for a year, returning to France in March, 1941. After conducting various orchestras in Europe, he made a tour of the U. S. in the autumn of 1946; in 1948, appointed instructor in composition at the College of Puget Sound, Tacoma, Wash. In 1949, he was engaged as conductor of the Seattle Symph. Orch.; was dismissed summarily for moral turpitude in Oct., 1951 (the soprano who appeared as soloist with the Seattle Symph. Orch. under the name of Mme. Rosenthal was not his legal wife). He has written a number of works in an entertaining manner, expertly orchestrated: Bootleggers, a satirical operetta (Paris, May 2, 1933); La Poule noire, 1-act operetta (Paris, 1937); Les petits métiers, for orch. (St. Louis, March 3, 1936); La Fête du vin, choreographic poem (1937; N. Y., Dec. 5, 1946, composer conducting); St. Francis of Assisi, for chorus, orch., and vibraphone (Paris, Nov. 1, 1944, composer conducting); Musique de table, symph. suite (N. Y., Oct. 10, 1946). He arranged for L. Massine, choreographer, a ballet, Gaité Parisienne (from Offenbach; Monte Carlo, April 5, 1938; highly successful).

Rosenthal, Moriz, famous pianist; b. Lwow, Dec. 19, 1862; d. New York, Sept. 3, 1946. He received his 1st instruction on the piano from a local teacher, Galath; Karl Mikuli, Chopin's pupil and director of the Lwow Cons., undertook his further musical education; in 1872 the two played in public Chopin's Rondo in C for 2 pianos. In 1875, after his parents moved to Vienna, Rosenthal became a pupil of R. Joseffy, who taught him according to Tausig's method. His début at Vienna in 1876 was eminently successful, and he was accepted by Liszt as a pupil, studying with him in Weimar and Rome (1876-78). He then withdrew from the concert stage and studied philosophy and esthetics at the Univ. of Vienna; reappeared as pianist in 1884 and thereafter toured regularly, establishing a reputation as one of the world's greatest virtuosos; nicknamed (because of his small stature and great power) 'little giant of the piano.' Beginning in 1887 he made 12 tours of the U. S.; in 1938 he took up permanent residence in the U. S. He publ. (with L. Schytte) a Schule des höheren Klavierspiels. —His wife, Hedwig Kanner-Rosenthal (q.v.), is a distinguished piano teacher.

Rosenwald, Hans, musicologist, b. Bünde, Germany, Jan. 14, 1907. He studied in Berlin with Arnold Schering and Johannes Wolf, and at the Univ. of Heidelberg with H. J. Moser and Besseler, receiving his Ph.D. in 1929 with the dissertation Geschichte des deutschen Liedes zwischen Schubert und Schumann (Berlin, 1930). In 1936 he emigrated to the U. S.; was appointed instructor of music history at the Chicago Musical College; in 1943 became dean; in 1953, moved to New York. —Publications: Handbook of Music History (Chicago, 1940; 5 subsequent eds.); ed. Who Is Who In Music (Chicago, 1940); from 1944 to 1953, publ. the periodical 'Music News.'

Rosetti, Francesco Antonio (real name Franz Anton Rössler), composer; b. Niemes, Bohemia, Oct. 26, 1746; d. Ludwigslust, Germany, June 30, 1792. He was a theological student; in 1773, became a string player in the orch. of Prince Öttingen-Wallenstein; in 1785, Kapellmeister; from 1789, court Kapellmeister in Ludwigslust. Rosetti, who has been described as 'a German Boccherini,' was a prolific composer; wrote some fine chamber music. —Works: a Requiem (1776); 2 oratorios, Der sterbende Jesus (publ.) and Jesus in Gethsemane; several operas, including Das Winterfest der Hirten (1789); more than 30 symphonies and other orchestral works; 9 string quartets; 4 flute concertos; 5 oboe concertos; 3 clarinet concertos; 4 bassoon concertos; 5 horn concertos; 5 concertos for 2 horns; etc. Oskar Kaul publ. 5 symphonies in vol. 12, and chamber music in vol. 25, of the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern.' —Cf. W. Riehl, in 'Musikalische Charakterköpfe' (vol. 1, 1853, p. 191 ff.); Oskar Kaul, Die Vokalwerke Anton Rosettis (Cologne, 1911); L. Schiedermair, in the 'Sammelbände der internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (IX; p. 92 ff.).

Rösler, Johann Josef, Hungarian composer; b. Schemnitz, Aug. 22, 1771; d. Prague, Jan. 25, 1813. He served as Kapellmeister for Prince Lobkowitz in Prague; brought out an opera, Elisene, Prinzessin von Bulgarien (Prague, Oct. 18, 1807), which was the 1st original stage work to be produced at the German opera theater in Prague; wrote a great amount of instrumental music. A movement from one of his piano concertos was erroneously attributed to Beethoven. — Cf. H. Engel, Der angeblich Beethovensche Klavierkonzertsatz, in 'Neues Beethovenjahrbuch' (1925).

Ross, Hugh, choral conductor and organist; b. Langport, England, Aug. 21, 1898. He studied at the Royal College of Music, where he won 1st prize in organ and was made a Fellow in 1915; went to Canada; became conductor of the Winnipeg Male Voice Choir (1921); organized and conducted the Winnipeg Symph. Orch. (1923-27); in 1927, appointed conductor of the Schola Cantorum, N. Y.; choral director at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood (since 1941); gave performances of many choral works. In 1958 he was appointed musical director of the National Chorus of America.

Rossellini, Renzo, Italian composer; b. Rome, Feb. 2, 1908. He studied composition with Sallustio and Setaccioli; taught at the Liceo Musicale in Pesaro (1940-42); in 1942 appointed prof. at the Cons. in Rome. — Works: Alcassino e Nicoletta, a 4-act opera (1928-30); La Danza di Dâsine, ballet (San Remo, Feb. 24, 1935); Suite in tre tempi, for orch. (1931); Roma cristiana, cantata (1940); Stornelli della Roma bassa, for orch. (1946); wrote film music.

Rossi, Abbate Francesco, Italian composer; b. Bari, about 1645; canon there, 1680. — Works: the operas Bianca di Castiglia (Milan, 1674), Il Sejano moderno della Tracia (Venice, 1680), La Pena degli occhi and La Clorilda (both in Venice, 1688), Mitrane (Venice, 1689); oratorio La Caduta degli angeli; Requiem; psalms; etc.

Rossi, Giovanni Gaetano, Italian composer; b. Borgo S. Donnino, Parma, Aug. 5, 1828; d. Genoa, March 30, 1886. He studied at the Milan Cons.; from 1851 was concertmaster at the Teatro Regio, Parma; also court organist and (1864-73) director of the Istituto Musicale. From 1873 to 1879 he conducted at the Teatro Carlo Felice in Genoa; then was director of the Liceo Musicale. — Works: 4 operas; an oratorio, Le sette pa- role; overture, Saul; a Requiem, 3 Masses, etc.

Rossi, Giulio, Italian bass singer; b. Rome, Oct. 27, 1865; d. Milan, Oct. 9, 1931. He had a tenor voice until he was 19, when an unintentional plunge into the Tiber in December induced an illness, after which his voice lowered to the range of basso profondo. He then began vocal study under Oreste Tomassoni; made his début at Parma, Oct. 20, 1887. In 1889 he toured South America with Adelina Patti, and also appeared in London; sang 3 seasons at La Scala, Milan; 3 seasons at Madrid, 2 at Barcelona, and 4 at St. Petersburg; 6 in South America; 3 in Mexico; made a tour of the U. S. and 2 tours of Mexico and California with Luisa Tetrazzini; from 1908 till 1913 sang at the Metropolitan Opera. His repertory included about 80 Italian operas.

Rossi, Lauro, Italian dramatic composer; b. Macerata, Feb. 19, 1810; d. Cremona, May 5, 1885. He was a pupil of Furno, Zingarelli, and Crescentini at Naples, bringing out a comic opera, Le Contesse villane there (1829) with fair success. He became maestro at the Teatro Valle, Rome, in 1832; with his tenth opera, La Casa disabitata o I falsi monetari, produced at La Scala, Milan, Aug. 16, 1834, he won a veritable triumph; it made the rounds of Italy, and was given in Paris. In 1835 he went to Mexico as conductor and composer to an Italian opera troupe, becoming its director in 1837, and going to Havana (1839) and New Orleans (1842), returning to Italy in 1844. He brought out a new opera, Il Borgomastro di Schiedam (Milan, June 1, 1844), with indifferent success; his opera Il Domino nero (Milan, Sept. 1, 1849) fared a little better. His most successful opera was La Contessa di Mons (Turin, Jan. 31, 1874). He wrote 29 operas in all. In 1850 he was given the post of director of the Milan Cons.; in 1870 he succeeded Mercadante as director of the Naples Cons.; resigned in 1878, and retired to Cremona in 1882. — Cf. F. Florimo, La Scuola musicale di Napoli (1882).

Rossi, Luigi (Latinized as Aloysius Rubeus), Italian composer and singer; b. Torremaggiore, Foggia, 1597; d. Rome, Feb. 19, 1653. He studied in Naples with J. de Macque; then went to Rome, where his opera Il Palazzo d'Atlante incantato was produced (Feb. 22, 1642). In 1646 he was called by Mazarin to Paris with 20 other singers, and there staged his most important work, Orfeo (March 2, 1647), the 1st Italian opera expressly written for a Paris production. He wrote besides the oratorio Giuseppe and some 100 cantatas; reprints of some of these appear in Gevaert's Les Gloires de l'Italie, Riemann's Kantatenfrühling and Landshoff's Alte Meister des Bel Canto. Riemann also publ. several da capo arias by Rossi in the 'Handbuch der Musik-Geschichte' (Vol. II, 2). — Cf. A. Wotquenne, Étude bibliographique sur Luigi Rossi (Brussels, 1909); Henry Prunières, Notes sur la vie de Luigi Rossi, in 'Sammelbände der internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. XII); Henry Prunières, Les Représentations du Palazzo d'Atlante, ibid. (vol. XIV); Henry Prunières, Notes bibliographiques sur les cantates de Luigi Rossi au Conservatoire de Naples, in the 'Zeitschrift der internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. XIV); Henry Prunières, L'Opéra italien en France avant Lulli (Paris, 1913; pp. 86-150); Romain Rolland, Le premier opéra joué à Paris: l'Orfeo de Luigi Rossi, in Musiciens d'autrefois (1912); A. Cametti, Alcuni documenti inediti su la vita di Luigi Rossi, in 'Sammelbände der internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. XIV); A. Cametti, Luigi Rossi: Organista a S. Luigi dei Francesi, in 'La Critica Musicale' (1919); A. Ghislanzoni, Luigi Rossi (Rome, 1954).

Rossi, Michel Angelo, Italian composer; b. Rome, c. 1600. He was a pupil of Frescobaldi; among his compositions are an opera, Erminia sul Giordano (Rome, 1635), and a set of Toccate e Correnti per organo o cembalo (2nd ed., Rome, 1657). The complete keyboard works of Rossi were publ. by A. Toni (Milan, 1920); the 1657 ed. of Toccate etc. by L. Torchi, in 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. 3; faulty); 10 correnti by F. Boghen (Milan, 1923); 2 toccatas and 3 correnti by Béla Bartók (N. Y., 1930); etc. — Cf. Alceo Toni, M. A. R., in 'Bollettino Bibliografico Musicale' (June, 1927).

Rossi, Salomone (Salamone), Italian composer of Jewish origin (called himself Ebreo); b. Mantua, 1587; d. there, c. 1630. Nothing is known of the circumstances of his life, except that he was in the service of the court of Mantua, and publ. 13 books of madrigals and instrumental works. He also wrote some synagogue music. As composer of instrumental works, he demonstrated technical procedures in advance of his time; particularly notable are his variations on popular Italian melodies. — Works: canzonettas for 3 voices (1589); madrigals (5 books; 1600, 1602, 1603, 1610, 1622); sonatas (4 books: I, II, Sinfonie e gagliarde a 3-5, 1607, 1608; III, IV, Varie sonate, sinfonie, etc. 2nd ed., 1623; 1622, 2nd ed., 1636); madrigals for 4-5 voices (1614); cantici, psalms, hymns, and laudi for 3-8 voices (1620); madrigaletti for 2-3 voices, with basso continuo (1628). He also wrote an intermezzo to the drama L'Idropica (1608) and music to a sacred play, Maddalena. Naumbourg and Vincent d'Indy prepared a new ed. of selected sacred and secular works by Rossi (2 vols.; Paris, 1877); examples of Rossi's instrumental music appear in Riemann's Alte Kammermusik, Musikgeschichte in Beispielen (no. 81), and 'Handbuch der Musikgeschichte' (II, 2). Six duets are reprinted in Landshoff's Alte Meister des Bel Canto. Lazare Saminsky remodelled Rossi's Adon Olam in conformity with modern choral sonorities, retaining his harmonic texture, as part of his Sabbath Evening Service (N. Y., 1930). — Cf. D. Maggid, Die Dreihundertjahrfeier des Salomon de Rossi (1887); E. Birnbaum, Jüdische Musiker am Hofe zu Mantua von 1542-1628 (1893); Paul Nettl, Alte jüdische Spielleute und Musiker (Prague, 1923); B. Selwyn, The Gonzaga Lords of Mantua (London, 1927); A. Einstein, S. Rossi as Composer of Madrigals, in 'Hebrew Union College Annual' (vol. 23; Cincinnati, 1950/51).

Rossi-Lemeni, Nicola, Italian bass singer; b. Constantinople, Nov. 11, 1922, of an Italian father and a Russian mother. He was educated in Italy; studied law and planned a diplomatic career. In 1943 he decided to become a professional singer, but the war interfered with his plans, and his début did not take place until 1946. He first appeared in America as Boris Godunov, with the San Francisco Opera (Oct. 2, 1951); also sang Mefistofele (Boito), William Tell, etc.; in 1955, he was engaged at La Scala, Milan.

Rossini, Gioacchino (Antonio), great Italian composer; b. Pesaro, Feb. 29, 1792; d. Paris, Nov. 13, 1868. His father was a town trumpeter at Pesaro, and also played the horn and trumpet in provincial theaters, his mother singing opera as seconda donna. For a time Rossini was left in a home in Bologna while his parents performed in various theaters in Italian cities; there he acquired some knowledge of music, and learned to play the harpsichord and to sing; he studied with Angelo Tesei; at the age of 15 he entered the Liceo Comunale of Bologna, where he took courses with Padre Mattei (theory) and Cavedagni (cello); at that time he had already written a number of pieces of chamber music, and on Aug. 8, 1808, his cantata Il Pianto d'armonia per la morte d'Orfeo was performed at the Liceo, and also won a prize. He abandoned his study of counterpoint with Mattei when an opportunity presented itself for the composition of an opera commissioned by the San Moisè theater in Venice, for which he wrote his first opera buffa, La Cambiale di matrimonio; after its production in Venice (Nov. 3, 1810) he returned to Bologna, and brought out there a 2-act opera buffa, L'Equivoco stravagante. Two more comic operas were ordered by the San Moisè theater in Venice, and produced there in 1812, and there were further commissions from other theaters. In 1813 he obtained his first grand success, with the opera Tancredi at the Fenice Theater in Venice, followed by L'Italiana in Algeri, another opera buffa, produced at the San Benedetto Theater in Venice. Encouraged by a steady demand, Rossini ventured to set to music an Italian version of the famous play of Beaumarchais, Le Barbier de Séville, despite the fact that an opera on the same subject by Paisiello, Il Barbiere di Siviglia, produced as early as 1782, was still enjoying great success. Rossini's opera was brought out at the Argentina Theater in Rome on Feb. 20, 1816, under the title Almaviva ossia l'inutile precauzione; he himself stated that he wrote the score in 13 days, using the overture from his earlier opera, Elisabetta, regina d'Inghilterra. Rossini himself conducted; the opera was hissed on the first night, but the second performance was very favorably received, and the opera became Rossini's greatest triumph. From 1815 to 1823 he was under contract to write 2 operas annually for the famous impresario Barbaja, who managed the theaters of Naples, La Scala of Milan, and the Italian opera in Vienna. During these 8 years he composed no fewer than 20 operas, beginning with Elisabetta, regina d'Inghilterra; in that opera he replaced the traditional recitativo secco (that is, recitative accompanied by the cembalo) by recitativo stromentato (accompanied by strings). On March 16, 1822, he married Barbaja's mistress, the Spanish soprano Isabella Colbran. He spent the next season in Vienna; then returned with his wife to Bologna. In 1823, disappointed at the cool reception in Venice of his opera Semiramide, in which his wife sang, he accepted a favorable offer from Benelli, the manager of the King's Theatre in London. After a brief stay in Paris, Rossini arrived in London, and was received by the king. Although the manager Benelli failed to keep the terms of his contract, Rossini earned during 5 months in London the sum of about £7,000, from concerts given for the nobility at generous fees. He then agreed to undertake the management of the Théâtre-Italien in Paris, and produced several operas of his own as well as one by Meyerbeer. After the expiration of his contract he was given a more or less nominal post as 'premier compositeur du roi,' and another of 'inspecteur-général du chant en France' at the combined salary of 20,000 francs. He produced at the Paris Opéra several French versions of his earlier Italian pieces; the glorious culmination of his Paris seasons was the production of his great dramatic work Guillaume Tell, presented at the Opéra on Aug. 3, 1829, with a magnificent cast, winning immense applause. With this grand work, Rossini abruptly closed his career as a composer of operas, at the age of 37. The reasons for this decision were never made clear by Rossini, who was otherwise outspoken and articulate in supplying information about his work and even about his personal habits. The revolution of 1830 invalidated the agreement made with Rossini by the court of Charles X, which guaranteed 15,000 francs for each opera, biennially, to be written exclusively for the French stage; he had to appeal to the courts to secure a pension of 6,000 francs, which was finally granted him in 1835. With the exception of a brief visit to his father in Bologna (1830) and a trip to Madrid (1831) he stayed in Paris until 1836. In 1837 he separated from his wife, and after her death in 1845, married Olympic Desguilliers (Aug. 21, 1846). He lived in Bologna from 1836 till 1848, and accepted the honorary presidency of the Liceo Musicale, where he also taught singing to some exceptionally talented pupils; was briefly in Paris in 1843 for a gallstone operation; in 1848 he settled in Florence, and in 1855, decided to return to Paris, where he remained for the rest of his life. His villa in Passy became the magnet of the artistic world in Paris; Rossini and his wife entertained gladly and lavishly. He was a great gourmet, and invented recipes for Italian food that were enthusiastically adopted by French chefs. His wit was fabulous, and his sayings were eagerly collected and reported. He did not abandon composition entirely during his last years of life; in 1864 he wrote a Petite Messe Solennelle; as a token of gratitude to the government of the Second Empire, he composed a Hymne à Napoléon III; of greater interest are the numerous piano pieces, songs, and instrumental works which Rossini called Péchés de vieillesse (Sins of Old Age). The Rossini Foundation in Pesaro brought out in 1954-56 a series of 'Quaderni Rossiniani' (6 vols.) comprising the following theretofore unpublished compositions: vol. 1: 6 sonatas for 2 violins, cello, and double-bass (juvenile); vol. 2: piano pieces; vol. 3: Prelude, Theme and Variations for horn and piano; vol. 4: Melodie italiane for voice and piano; vol. 5: Melodie francesi for voice and piano; vol. 6: chamber music. Operas: Demetrio e Polibio (Rome, May 18, 1812); La Cambiale di matrimonio (Venice, Nov. 3, 1810); L'Equivoco stravagante (Bologna, Oct. 29, 1811); L'Inganno felice (Venice, Jan. 8, 1812); La Scala di seta (Venice, May 9, 1812); La Pietra del paragone (Milan, Sept. 26, 1812); L'Occasione fa il ladro, ossia Il Cambio della valigia (Venice, Nov. 24, 1812); Il Signor Bruschino, ossia Il Figlio per azzardo (Venice, Jan., 1813); Tancredi (Venice, Feb. 6, 1813); L'Italiana in Algeri (Venice, May 22, 1813); Aureliano in Palmira (Milan, Dec. 26, 1813); Il Turco in Italia (Milan, Aug. 14, 1814); Sigismondo (Venice, Dec. 26, 1814); Elisabetta, regina d'Inghilterra (Naples, Oct. 4, 1815); Torvaldo e Dorliska (Rome, Dec. 26, 1815); Il Barbiere di Siviglia (1st performed in Rome, Feb. 20, 1816, as Almaviva o sia l'inutile precauzione; 1st performed under the title Il Barbiere di Siviglia at Bologna, Aug. 10, 1816); La Gazzetta (Naples, Sept. 26, 1816); Otello, ossia il Moro di Venezia (Naples, Dec. 4, 1816); Cenerentola, ossia La Bontà in trionfo (Rome, Jan. 25, 1817); La Gazza ladra (Milan, May 31, 1817); Armida (Naples, Nov. 11, 1817); Adelaida di Borgogna (Rome, Dec. 27, 1817); Mosè in Egitto (Naples, March 5, 1818); Adina, o Il Califo di Bagdad (Lisbon, June 22, 1826); Ricciardo e Zoraide (Naples, Dec. 3, 1818); Ermione (Naples, March 27, 1819); Edoardo e Cristina (Venice, April 24, 1819); La Donna del lago (Naples, Sept. 24, 1819); Bianca e Faliero, ovvero Il Consiglio dei tre (Milan, Dec. 26, 1819); Maometto II (Naples, Dec. 3, 1820); Matilde di Shabran, ossia Bellezza e cuor di ferro (Rome, Feb. 24, 1821); Zelmira (Naples, Feb. 16, 1822); Semiramide (Venice, Feb. 3, 1823); Il Viaggio a Reims (Paris, June 19, 1825); Le Siège de Corinthe (new version of Maometto II; Paris, Oct. 9, 1826); Mosè (new version of Mosè in Egitto; Paris, March 26, 1827); Le Comte Ory (Paris, Aug. 20, 1828); Guillaume Tell (Paris, Aug. 3, 1829). Cantatas: Il Pianto d'armonia sulla morte d'Orfeo (1808); La Morte di Didone (1811); Egle ed Irene (1814); Inno agli Italiani (1815); Le Nozze di Teti e Peleo (1816); Igea (1819);

Partenope (1819); Voto filiale (1820); La Riconoscenza (1821); La santa alleanza (1822); Il vero omaggio (1822); L'Augurio felice (1822); Il Bardo (1822); Omaggio pastorale (1823); Il Pianto delle muse in morte di Lord Byron (1824); I Pastori (1825); Il Serto votivo (1829); Giovanna d'Arco (1832); Inno popolare (1846); Inno nazionale (1848); Inno alla pace (1848); Il Fanciullo smarrito (1861); Coro di cacciatori (1861). For orch.: an early overture (1808); variations for clarinet and orch. (1809); marches; fanfares. Chamber music: 5 string quartets (1808); Tema con variazioni, for flute, clarinet, bassoon, and horn (1812); Rondeau fantastique, for horn and piano (1856). Rossini's melodies have been used by many composers as themes for various works: Respighi utilized Rossini's Quelques Riens in his ballet La Boutique fantasque, and other themes in his orchestral suite Rossiniana. An opera entitled Rossini in Neapel was written by Bernhard Paumgartner (1936). Benjamin Britten made use of Rossini's music in his orch. suites, Soirées musicales and Matinées musicales. The most famous arrangement of Rossini's music is the Prayer from Mosè transcribed for violin by Paganini. —Bibliography: Stendhal, Vie de Rossini (Paris, 1824; often republished; German ed. with corrections and additions, Leipzig, 1824; 3rd ed., 1929; in English, London, 1824, 1956); G. Campani, Le Rossiniane (Padua, 1824); J. d'Ortigue, De la guerre des dilettanti ou de la révolution opérée par Rossini dans l'opéra français (Paris, 1829); H. Blaze de Bury, Vie de Rossini (Paris, 1854); M. and L. Escudier, Rossini (Paris, 1854); E. de Mircourt, Rossini (Paris, 1855); A. J. Azevedo, G. Rossini (Paris, 1864); F. Hiller, Plaudereien mit Rossini, in Aus dem Tonleben unserer Zeit (Leipzig, 1868); H. S. Edwards, Life of Rossini (London, 1869; condensed in 'Great Musicians,' 1881); A. Pougin, Rossini: Notes, impressions, souvenirs, commentaires (Paris, 1870); O. Moutoz, Rossini et son Guillaume Tell (Bourg, 1872); S. Silvestri, Della vita e delle opere di G. Rossini (Milan, 1874); A. Zanolini, Biografia di G. Rossini (Bologna, 1875); J. Sittard, G. A. Rossini (Leipzig, 1882); C. Thrane, Rossini og operaen (Copenhagen, 1885); A. Kohut, Rossini (Leipzig, 1892); G. Mazzatinti, Lettere inedite e rare di Rossini (Pesaro, 1892); E. Checchi, Rossini (Florence, 1898); G. Tebaldini, Da Rossini a Verdi (Naples, 1901); G. Mazzatinti and G. Manis, Lettere di G. Rossini (Florence, 1902); L. Dauriac, Rossini (Paris, 1906); E. Michotte, Souvenirs personnels (Paris, 1906); E. Corradi, G. Rossini (Rome, 1909); A. Testoni, G. Rossini: Quattro episodi della sua vita (Bologna, 1909); F. Cowen, Rossini (N. Y., 1912); H. de Curzon, Rossini (Paris, 1920; 2nd ed., 1930); R. Fauchois, Rossini (Lyons, 1922); G. M. Gatti, Le 'Barbier de Séville' de Rossini (Paris, 1926); G. Radiciotti, G. Rossini: vita documentata, opere ed influenza su l'arte (3 vols.; Tivoli, 1927-29; basic biography); G. Radiciotti, Aneddoti Rossiniani autentici (Rome, 1929); H. de Curzon, Une heure avec Rossini (Paris, 1930); Lord Derwent, Rossini and Some Forgotten Nightingales (London, 1934); F. Toye, Rossini: A Study in Tragi-Comedy (London, 1934); H. Gerigk, Rossini (Potsdam, 1934); A. Bonaventura, Rossini (Florence, 1934); G. Monaldi, Rossini nell' arte, nella vita, negli aneddoti (Milan, 1936); L. d'Amico, Rossini (Turin, 1938); A. Fraccaroli, Rossini (Milan, 1941; 4th ed., 1944); R. Bacchelli, G. Rossini (Turin, 1941; 2nd ed., 1945); F. Bonavia, Rossini (London, 1941); G. Roncaglia, Rossini, l'olimpico (Milan, 1946); K. Pfister, Das Leben Rossinis: Gesetz und Triumph (Vienna, 1948); C. van Berkel, Rossini (Haarlem, 1950); E. J. Dent, Rossini in The Heritage of Music, Vol. III (London, 1951); special issue of the 'Rassegna Musicale' (Sept., 1954) devoted to the collection of 1100 pages of Rossini's manuscript works in the Pesaro archives; F. Schlitzer, Rossiniana: contributo all'epistolario di G. Rossini (Siena, 1956); Luigi Rognoni, Rossini (Modena, 1956).

Rosslavetz, Nikolay Andreyevitch, Russian composer; b. Suray, near Tchernigov, Jan 5, 1881. He studied violin with Jan Hřimalý, and composition with Ilyinsky and Vassilenko, at the Moscow Cons.; won the silver medal for his cantata Heaven and Earth (after Byron). A composer of advanced tendencies, he publ. a remarkable violin sonata in 1913, which stands as the first atonal work by a Russian composer. He continued to develop his style along ultra-modern lines until 1925; but at that time the trend in Soviet Russia, political and artistic, changed towards traditionalism, and Rosslavetz was severely criticized in the press for persevering in his modernism. About 1930 he attempted to write light theater music, but without success; soon he disappeared from the musical scene. Besides the early violin sonata, he wrote the symph. poems Man and the Sea, after Baudelaire (1921), and End of the World, after Paul Lafargue (1922); also a violin concerto (1925).

Rössler, F. A. See Rosetti, F. A.

Rostropovitch (rös-tröh-pöh'-vich), Mstislav Leopoldovitch, remarkable Russian cellist; b. Baku, March 27, 1927. His father was prof. of cello at the Cons. of Baku; his mother, a pianist. After preliminary study at home, he entered the Moscow Cons. in 1937; his studies were interrupted by the war in 1941, but in 1943 he resumed his work, studying cello with Kozolupov and composition with Shebalin; in 1948 he graduated, and became instructor at the Moscow Cons., and in 1957, professor. He won 1st prize at the international festival in Prague (1950); subsequently gave concerts in Europe and America with outstanding success.

Roswaenge, Helge, Danish tenor; b. Copenhagen (of German parents), Aug. 29, 1897; studied engineering and voice; then sang in Germany, Austria, and Scandinavia, attaining great renown in opera and concert. Since 1949, mostly at the Berlin State Opera. In his prime his lyric and dramatic qualities were often compared with Caruso's. He publ. an autobiography, Skratta Pajazzo (1945).

Rota, Nino, Italian composer; b. Milan, Dec. 3, 1911. At the age of 11 he composed an oratorio which had a public performance, and at 14 a lyric comedy in 3 acts, Il Principe porcario, after Andersen (1926); later studied with Casella and Pizzetti at Santa Cecilia, Rome, graduating in 1930; then went to the U. S. to enter the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, where he studied composition with Rosario Scalero and conducting with Fritz Reiner. Returning to Italy, he taught at the Liceo Musicale in Taranto (1937-38); from 1939 was instructor at the Liceo Musicale in Bari; in 1950 appointed its director. —Works: viola sonata (1934-35); Canzona for 11 instruments (1935); quintet for flute, oboe, viola, cello, and harp (1935); symph. No. 1 (1936-39); violin sonata (1937); sonata for flute and harp (1938-39); symph. No. 2 (1938-43); the opera Ariodante (Parma, 1942); harp concerto (1948); radio opera, I due timidi (1950); songs; etc. He has also written a number of film scores.

Roters, Ernst, German composer; b. Oldenburg, July 6, 1892. He studied at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Cons., in Berlin, with Moritz Mayer-Mahr (piano), Hugo Leichtentritt (theory), and Georg Schumann (composition); from 1914 to 1916, taught piano at the Cons. of Danzig; was in the

ROTH — ROTTENBERG

German army during World War I; in 1920 settled in Hamburg, where he was active as lecturer and music critic; in 1930 went to Berlin as radio conductor; then worked in the films; was again in the German army during the last year of World War II (1944-45); after the cessation of hostilities, he returned to Berlin, where he conducted the Deutsches Theater (1945-47). A highly prolific composer (150 op. numbers before 1955), he wrote an opera, Die schwarze Kammer (Darmstadt, 1928); incidental music for 15 plays; about 50 radio works; 3 piano concertos; numerous pieces of chamber music and songs (some with orch.).

Roth (roht), Bertrand, Swiss pianist; b. Degersheim, Feb. 12, 1855; d. Bern, Jan. 25, 1938. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. and later in Weimar with Liszt; then lived in Frankfurt, where he founded (with Schwarz and Fleisch) the Raff Cons. (1882); from 1885 to 1890, taught at the Cons. of Dresden; in 1901, he established there the 'Musiksalon Bertrand Roth,' Sunday matinées at which were performed works by contemporary composers. He publ. songs and piano pieces.

Roth, Feri, eminent violinist; b. Zvolen, Czechoslovakia, July 18, 1899; studied at the State Academy, Budapest; organized the Budapest String Quartet in 1923 (Roth, Schiff, Spitz, Franke), with which he toured Europe and Africa (1925) and which established itself as one of the finest quartets in the world. Left the Budapest in 1926 and organized the Roth Quartet (Roth, Jenő Antal, Ferenc Molnar, Janos Scholz). Their American début took place at the Pittsfield Music Festival on Sept. 21, 1928.

Roth, Herman, German musicologist; b. Hornberg, Baden, Feb. 15, 1882; d. Berlin, Feb. 1, 1938. He studied philology and philosophy; then took courses in music with Philipp Wolfrum in Heidelberg (1902) and Hugo Riemann in Leipzig (1905). He was music critic in Leipzig (1907-10) and Munich (1910-21); taught at the Cons. of Baden (1921-24) and at the Hochschule für Musik at Stuttgart (1925-32); after 3 years of musical journalism in Hamburg (1932-35) he settled in Berlin. His German translations of the Italian librettos of operas of Handel, Mozart, and Rossini are used in many German opera houses. He publ. the books Heinrich Kaspar Schmid (Munich, 1921) and Elemente der Stimmführung (Stuttgart, 1926); edited works by Bach, Handel, etc.

Rothier (roh-tyä'), Léon, French bass singer; b. Reims, Dec. 26, 1874; d. New York, Dec. 6, 1951. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Crosti (singing), Lhérier (opéra-comique), and Melchisedec (opera), winning 1st prizes in all 3 classes upon graduation. He made his operatic début as Jupiter in Gounod's Phlémon et Baucis at the Opéra-Comique, where he remained until 1903; then was active at Marseilles (1903-07), Nice (1907-09), and Lyons (1909-10). On Dec. 10, 1910, he made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. as Méphistophélès; after retirement (1939), he remained in N. Y. as a teacher.

Rothmüller, Marko, Yugoslav baritone; b. Trnjam, Dec. 31, 1908. He studied at the Music Academy in Zagreb; then took courses at the Vienna Cons., and had lessons in composition from Alban Berg. He made his operatic début in Hamburg (1932); then sang in Zagreb (1932-34) and Zürich (1935-47). His first signal success came with his appearances in England with the New London Opera Co., which he joined in 1947; he also sang at the Vienna State Opera.

Rothwell, Walter Henry, conductor; b. London, Sept. 22, 1872; d. Santa Monica, Calif., March 12, 1927. He studied at the Vienna Cons. (1881-88) with J. Epstein (piano), R. Fuchs (theory), and Bruckner (composition); took further courses in Munich with Thuille and Schillings. In 1895 he became assistant conductor to Mahler at the Hamburg Opera; then conducted the German opera in Amsterdam (1903-04) and (1904-08) the Savage Opera Co. in the U. S., with which he gave performances of Parsifal in English. He then was conductor of the St. Paul Symph. Orch. (1908-14); after several years in N. Y. as teacher, he was engaged by W. A. Clark (1919) to organize and conduct the Los Angeles Philh. Orch., which he led until his death. He was married (Sept. 10, 1908) to the soprano Elisabeth Wolff.

Rottenberg, Ludwig, conductor and composer; b. Czernowitz, Bukovina, Oct. 11, 1864; d. Frankfurt, May 6, 1932. He studied music with A. Hřimalý, R. Fuchs, and E. Mandyczewski in Vienna; was Kapellmeister at the Stadttheater in Brünn (1891-92) and at the Frankfurt opera (1893-1926); retired in 1927. In 1912 and 1913 he conducted the Wagner performances at Covent Garden, London. He publ. a collection of 30 songs, a violin sonata, and piano variations; his opera, Die Geschwister, was produced in Frankfurt on Nov. 30, 1915. —Rottenberg was the father-in-law of Paul Hindemith.

Rouart-Lerolle & Cie., French publishing house, founded in 1905 at Paris by Alexander Rouart (1869-1921), through the purchase of the firms of Meuriot and Baudoux. When, in 1908, Jacques Lerolle (b. 1880), son of the famous painter, became his associate, the firm acquired the catalogue of the publ. house of Gregh (founded in 1840). After the death of Rouart in 1921, Lerolle became director, Mme. Rouart, the founder's widow, a partner, and François Hepp (b. 1887), son-in-law of Rouart, co-director. In 1942, the entire stock of Rouart-Lerolle & Cie. was sold to Salabert (q. v.).

Rouget de l'Isle (roo-zhā' dü lēl'), Claude-Joseph, composer of the Marseillaise; b. Lons-le-Saulnier, Jura, May 10, 1760; d. Choisy-le-Roy, June 27, 1836. He composed the famous national hymn in 1792, while stationed in Strasbourg as a military engineer. The original title of the Marseillaise was Le Chant de guerre de l'armée du Rhin, and it was designed to be a patriotic song at the time of the war with Austria; it was taken up by the Marseilles soldiers marching towards Paris, and so assumed its universally known title. Rouget de l'Isle was himself not a revolutionary; he was in fact imprisoned for refusing to take the oath against the crown. He went to Paris after Robespierre's downfall, and composed a Hymne dithyrambique sur la conjuration de Robespierre (1794), Chant des vengeances (1798), and a Chant du combat for the army in Egypt (1800). He publ. 50 Chants français in 1825; wrote several opera librettos. Maurice de La Fuye and Émile Guéret, in their book Rouget de l'Isle, inconnu (Paris, 1943), argued that he wrote only the words and not the music of the Marseillaise, and suggested that the composer was Ignace Pleyel. A. Loth, in his pamphlet Le Chant de la Marseillaise (Paris, 1886), claimed that the composer was one Grisons. See also J. Tiersot, Rouget de l'Isle: son œuvre, sa vie (Paris, 1892); A. Köckert, Rouget de l'Isle (Leipzig, 1898); A. Lanier, Rouget de l'Isle (Besançon, 1907); J. Tiersot, Histoire de la Marseillaise (Paris, 1915); R. Brancour, La Marseillaise et le Chant du départ (1916); E. Istel, Is the Marseillaise a German Composition?, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1922); V. Helfert, La Marseillaise, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1922); A. Becker, La Marseillaise (Brunswick, 1930); G. de Froidcourt, Grétry, Rouget de l'Isle et la Marseillaise (Liège, 1945).

Rousseau (röös-söh'), Jean-Jacques, great philosopher and author; b. Geneva, June 28, 1712; d. Ermenonville, near Paris, July 2, 1778. Without other musical training than desultory self-instruction, Rousseau made his début as a music scholar at the age of 29, reading a paper before the Académie in Paris (1742), which was revised and publ. as a Dissertation sur la musique moderne (1743). His opera, Les Muses galantes, had only one private representation, at the house of La Pouplinière in 1745; his revision of the intermezzo La Reine de Navarre (by Voltaire and Rameau) was a failure in Paris; but his opera Le Devin du village (Fontainebleau, Oct. 18, 1752; Paris Opéra, March 1, 1753) was very successful, and remained in the repertory for 75 years. In the meantime his musical articles for the 'Encyclopédie' had evoked scathing criticism from Rameau and others; improved by revision and augmentation, they were republished as his Dictionnaire de musique (Geneva, 1767). In 1752 commenced the dispute, known as the 'guerre des bouffons,' between the partisans of French and Italian opera; Rousseau sided with the latter, publishing a Lettre à M. Grimm au sujet des remarques ajoutées à sa lettre sur Omphale (1752), followed by the caustic Lettre sur la musique française (1753), to which the members of the Opéra responded by burning him in effigy and excluding him from the theater), and Lettre d'un symphoniste de l'Académie royale de musique à ses camarades (1753). He wrote 2 numbers for the melodrama, Pygmalion (1770; Paris, Oct. 30, 1775). Publ. posthumously were six new arias for Le Devin du village, and a collection of about 100 romances and duets, Les Consolations des misères de ma vie (1781), and fragments of an opera, Daphnis et Chloé (1780). All his writings on music have been often republished in eds. of his 'Collected Works' (1782; many eds. since). —Bibliography: A. Jensen, J.-J. R. Fragments inédits, recherches biographiques (Paris, 1882); A. Jansen, J.-J. R. als Musiker (Berlin, 1884); A. Pougin, J.-J. R., musicien (Paris, 1901); E. Istel, J.-J. R. als Komponist seiner lyrischen Szene 'Pygmalion' (Leipzig, 1901); F. Hellouin, J.-J. R. et la psychologie de l'orchestre, in Feuilles d'histoire musicale française (Paris, 1903); E. Schütte, J.-J. R. Seine Persönlichkeit und sein Stil (Leipzig, 1910); J. Tiersot, J.-J. R. (Paris, 1912); E. Faguet, Rousseau artiste (Paris, 1913); A. L. Sells, The Early Life of Rousseau: 1712-40 (London, 1929); R. Gérin, J.-J. R. (Paris, 1930); M. Moffat, Rousseau et le théâtre (Paris,

ROUSSEAU — ROUSSEL

1930); J. Tiersot, Concerning J.-J. R., the Musician, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1931); Correspondance générale de J.-J. R., ed. by Dufour and Plan, in 20 vols. (Paris, 1924-34); H. V. Somerset, J.-J. R. as a Musician, in 'Music & Letters' (1936); L. Richebourg, Contributions à l'histoire de la 'querelle des bouffons' (Paris, 1937); A. Pochon, J.-J. R., musicien, et la critique (Montreux, 1940); E. Kisch, Rameau and Rousseau, in 'Music & Letters' (1941); A. R. Oliver, The Encyclopaedists as Critics of Music (N. Y., 1947); Jean Senelier, Bibliographie générale des œuvres de J.-J. R. (Paris, 1949). For details of productions, see A. Lowenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; 2nd ed., 1955).

Rousseau, Marcel (-Auguste-Louis), French composer; b. Paris, Aug. 18, 1882; d. there, June 11, 1955. He studied with his father, Samuel Rousseau; then entered the Paris Cons. as a student of Lenepeveu; won the Deuxième Premier Grand Prix de Rome with the cantata Maïa (1905). Later in his professional career he added his father's first name to his own, and produced his works as Samuel-Rousseau. —Works: the operas (all produced in Paris) Tarass Boulba, after Gogol (Nov. 22, 1919), Le Hulla (March 9, 1923), Le bon roi Dagobert (Dec. 5, 1927; his most successful work), Kerkeb (April 6, 1951); the ballets Promenade dans Rome (Paris, Dec. 7, 1936) and Entre deux rondes (Paris, April 27, 1940); orchestral tableaux, Solitude triste and Impression dolente; etc. In 1947 he was elected to the Académie des Beaux-Arts.

Rousseau, Samuel-Alexandre, French composer; father of Marcel Samuel-Rousseau; b. Neuve-Maison, Aisne, June 11, 1853; d. Paris, Oct. 1, 1904. He studied at the Paris Cons. with César Franck (organ) and Bazin (composition); won the Grand Prix de Rome with the cantata La Fille de Jephté (1878); also the Prix Cressent with the 1-act comic opera Dianora (Opéra-Comique, Dec. 22, 1879). His opera Mérouig was awarded the Prize of the City of Paris, and was performed in concert form at the Grand Théâtre there on Dec. 12, 1892. In 1892 he was appointed conductor at the Théâtre-Lyrique; was for 10 years chorusmaster at the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire; also taught harmony at the Paris Cons. On June 8, 1898, his lyric drama La Cloche du Rhin was staged at the Paris Opéra with considerable success, but had only 9 performances in all; this was followed by the music dramas Milïa (Opéra-Comique, 1904) and Léone (Opéra-Comique, March 7, 1910).

Roussel (roos-sehl'), Albert (Charles Paul), outstanding French composer; b. Tourcoing, Département du Nord, April 5, 1869; d. Royan, Aug. 23, 1937. Orphaned as a child, he was educated by his grandfather, mayor of his native town, and after the grandfather's death, by his aunt. He studied academic subjects at the Collège Stanislas in Paris; music with the organist Stoltz; then studied mathematics in preparation for entering the Naval Academy; at the age of 18 he began his training in the navy; from 1889 to Aug., 1890 he was a member of the crew of the frigate Iphigénie, sailing to Indo-China. This voyage was of great importance to Roussel, since it opened for him a world of Oriental culture and art, which became one of the chief sources of his musical inspiration. He later sailed on the cruiser Dévastation; received a leave of absence for reasons of health, and spent some time in Tunis; was then stationed in Cherbourg, and began to compose there. In 1893 he was sent once more to Indo-China. He resigned from the navy in 1894 and went to Paris, where he began to study music seriously with Eugène Gigout. In 1898 he entered the Schola Cantorum in Paris as a pupil of Vincent d'Indy; continued this study until 1907, when he was already 38 years old, but at the same time he was entrusted with a class in counterpoint, which he conducted at the Schola Cantorum from 1902 to 1914; among his students were Paul Le Flem, Erik Satie, Stan Golestan, Roland-Manuel, Guy de Lioncourt, and Edgard Varèse. In 1909 Roussel and his wife Blanche Preisach-Roussel undertook a voyage to India, where he became acquainted with the legend of the queen Pādmavati, which he selected as a subject for his famous opera-ballet. His choral symph. Les Évocations was also inspired by this tour. At the outbreak of war in 1914, Roussel applied for active service in the navy but was rejected and volunteered as an ambulance driver. After the Armistice of 1918, he settled in Normandy and devoted himself to composition. In the autumn of 1930 he visited the U. S. —Roussel began his work under the influence of French Impressionism, with its dependence on exotic moods and poetic association. However, the sense of formal design asserted itself in his symphonic works; his Suite en fa (1927) signalizes a transition towards neo-Classicism; the thematic development is vigorous, and the rhythms are clearly delineated, despite some asymmetrical progressions; the orchestration, too, is in the Classical tradition. Roussel possessed a keen sense of the theater; he was capable of fine characterization of exotic or mythological subjects, but also knew how to depict humorous situations in lighter works. An experiment in a frankly modernistic manner is exemplified by his Jazz dans la nuit for voice and piano. —Works: For the stage: Le Marchand de sable qui passe, incidental music (Le Havre, Dec. 16, 1908); Le Festin de l'araignée, ballet-pantomime in 1 act (Paris, April 3, 1913); Pâlmavati, opera-ballet in 2 acts (1914-18; Paris, June 1, 1923); La Naissance de la lyre, lyric opera in 1 act (Paris, July 1, 1925); Bacchus et Ariane, ballet in 2 acts (Paris, May 22, 1931); Le Testament de la tante Caroline, opéra-bouffe (1932-33; Olomouc, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 14, 1936; Paris, March 11, 1937); Aeneas, ballet with chorus, in 1 act (Brussels, July 31, 1935). For orch.: 4 symphonies: No. I, Le Poème de la forêt (1904-06; Brussels, March 22, 1908), No. II, Symphonie en si bémol (1919-21; Paris, March 4, 1922), No. III, Symphonie en sol mineur (commissioned by the Boston Symp. Orch.; performed there by Koussevitzky, Oct. 24, 1930), No. IV, Symphonie en la majeure (1934; Paris, Oct. 19, 1935); Suite en fa (Boston, Jan. 21, 1927); Sinfonietta for strings (Paris, Nov. 19, 1934); Résurrection, symph. poem (Paris, May 17, 1904); Evocations, suite in 3 movements (Paris, May 18, 1912); Pour une fête de printemps (Paris, Oct. 29, 1921); Rapsodie flamande (Brussels, Dec. 12, 1936); Concert pour petit orchestre (Paris, May 5, 1927); Petite suite pour orchestre (Paris, Feb. 6, 1930); piano concerto (Paris, June 7, 1928); Concertino for cello and orch. (Paris, Feb. 6, 1937); Le Bardit des Francs, for male chorus, brass, and percussion (Strasbourg, April 21, 1928); Psaume LXXX, for tenor, chorus, and orch. (Paris, April 25, 1929); symph. suites from theater works: Le Festin de l'araignée (1912), Pâlmavati (1914-18), La Naissance de la lyre (1922-24), Bacchus et Ariane (1930). Chamber music: a piano trio (1902); Divertissement for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn, and piano (1906); Sérénade, for flute, violin, viola, cello, and harp (1925); trio for flute, viola, and cello (1929); string quartet (1932); trio for violin, viola, and cello (1937); 2 violin sonatas (1908; 1924); Joueurs de flûte, suite for flute and piano (1924); Andante et Scherzo, for flute and piano (1934). For piano: Des Heures passent, a cycle of 4 pieces (1898); Rustiques, a cycle of 3 pieces (1904-06); suite of 3 pieces (1910); sonatina (1912); Petit canon perpétuel (1913); Prélude et fugue (Hommage à Bach); etc. Songs: Adieux (1907); Jazz dans la nuit (1928); Deux idylles (1931); 3 sets of Poèmes chinois (1908; 1927; 1932); etc. —A complete catalogue of works, with a biographical notice and annotations, was publ. in Paris, 1947, and constitutes a primary source of information. —Bibliography: Roland-Manuel, A. R., in the 'Revue Musicale' (Nov., 1922); L. Vuillemin, A. R. et son œuvre (Paris, 1924); Roussel issue of the 'Revue Musicale' (May-June, 1929); H. Prunières, A. R. and the 80th Psalm, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1930); R. Dumesnil, L'Œuvre symphonique de A. R., in 'Musique Française' (Feb., 1933); R. Petit, A. R., in 'Modern Music' (Nov.-Dec., 1937); A. Hoérée, A. R. (Paris, 1938); P. Landormy, A. R., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1938); N. Demuth, A. R.: a Study (London, 1947); R. Bernard, A. R.: sa vie, son œuvre (Paris, 1948); Marc Pincherle, A. R. (Paris, 1957).

Roussier, Abbé Pierre-Joseph, French writer on music; b. Marseilles, 1716; d. as canon at Ecouis, Normandy, c. 1790. —Publ. Observations sur différents points d'harmonie (1755); Sentiment d'un harmoniphile sur différents ouvrages de musique (1756); Traité des accords, et de leur succession (1764; supplemented by L'harmonie pratique . . . , 1775); Mémoire sur la musique des anciens (1770); Notes et observations sur le mémoire du P. Amiot concernant la musique des chinois (1779); Mémoire sur la nouvelle harpe de M. Cousineau (1782); Mémoire sur le clavecin chromatique (1782); Lettre sur l'acceptation des mots 'basse fondamentale' . . . (1783; 'Journal encyclopédique,' vol. I); etc.

Rovelli, Pietro, Italian violinist; b. Bergamo, Feb. 6, 1793; d. there, Sept. 8, 1838. He studied with R. Kreutzer; then played in various orchestras in Italy; was concertmaster of the court orch. in Munich (1817-19). He publ. excellent études and caprices for violin; also Variations for violin and orch.

Rovsing Olsen, Paul, Danish composer and pianist; b. Copenhagen, Nov. 4, 1922. He studied with Jeppesen at the Cons. of Copenhagen, and later with Nadia Boulanger in Paris; from 1949 was music critic in Copenhagen. Among his works are an orchestral suite, Miniatures (1949), a Serenade, for violin and piano (1950), and a number of piano pieces and songs.

Rowbotham, Rev. John Frederick, British music historian; b. Edinburgh, April 18, 1854; d. Sutton-Cheney, Oct. 20, 1925. He took the Balliol Scholarship, Oxford, at 18; studied music there, and at the Stern Cons. (Berlin), Dresden, Paris, and Vienna; ordained in 1891, he held various appointments as vicar and rector until 1910, when he founded 'The Bard,' of which he was editor. He traveled on the Continent to collect materials for his History of Music, publ. in 3 vols. (London, 1885-87); also publ. How to Write Music Correctly (1889); A Short History of Music (1891); Private Life of the Great Composers (1892); The Troubadours, and the Courts of Love (1895); A History of Music to the Time of the Troubadours (1899); Story Lives of Great Musicians (1908); etc.

Rowley, Alec, English composer; b. London, March 13, 1892; d. there, Jan. 10, 1958. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music; upon graduation, became a teacher and examiner. Among his works are a pantomime, The Princess Who Lost a Tune; 2 piano concertos; a rhapsody for viola and orch.; a concerto for oboe and orch.; Phyllis and Corydon, for string quartet; From Faerie, for string quartet; Little Jesus, for voice, piano, and string quartet; Watercolours, for piano, violin, viola, and cello; Pastel Portraits, for piano, violin, and cello; 3 little trios for piano, violin, and cello; The Puppet Show, 4 Contrasts, A Short Suite; also piano pieces for children.

Roy, Klaus George, composer, critic, and musicologist; b. Vienna, Jan. 24, 1924. He studied piano and composition with F. C. Schreiber; in 1939 went to England; then settled in the U. S. (naturalized in 1944); took courses with Karl Geiringer (musicology) at Boston Univ. (Mus. B., 1947); then with Walter Piston (composition), A. T. Davison and A. T. Merritt (music history) at Harvard Univ. (M. A., 1949). He was librarian at the Boston Univ. College of Music (1948-57); also a contributing music critic for the 'Christian Science Monitor,' Boston (1950-57); also wrote for other publications; 1958, appointed ed. of the program book and assistant manager of the Cleveland Orch. —Works: 2 chamber operas: Sterlingman (Boston Univ., April 18, 1957) and The Easter Guest (1956); cantata, St. Francis's Canticle of the Sun (Boston, Nov. 5, 1951); Tripartita, for brass ensemble (1949); sonata for trombone and piano (1951); 3 Songs of Praise (1952); Dialogue and Choreia, for violin and harpsichord (1952); 3 Folksong Settings (Dutch, Greek, Slovakian), for mixed chorus a cappella (1955); string trio (1956); 2 Rhapsodic Pieces, for viola and piano (1957); Serenade for solo violin (1957); several choruses; songs; piano pieces.

Royce, Edward, American composer and teacher; b. Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 25, 1886. He studied at Harvard Univ. (B. A., 1907), later at the Stern Cons. in Berlin; 1913, founded the music dept. at Middlebury College, Vermont; then head of the theory dept. at the Ithaca Cons. (1916-21); from 1923 till 1947 prof. of theory at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y. —Works: 2 tone poems, The Fire Bringers (Rochester, April 23, 1926) and Far Ocean (Rochester, June 3, 1929, composer conducting); piano pieces, songs.

Royer (rwäh-yä'), Étienne, French composer; b. Grenoble, April 12, 1882; d. Paris, March 2, 1928. He studied with Vincent d'Indy and Sérieyx at the Schola Cantorum in Paris; was a cello pupil of L. Revel; wrote music criticism and publ. pedagogical works. He composed a Danse mystique for orch.; Cantus memorialis, for violin and orch.; Pour le temps de la moisson and Pour les fêtes de mai, for string quartet (based on French folk tunes); songs; piano pieces, etc.

Royer (rwäh-yä'), Joseph-Nicolas-Pan-crace, French composer; b. 1700; d. Paris, Jan. 11, 1755. He was a native of Burgundy, and settled in Paris in 1725. In 1739 he became a member of the court orch.; 1748, lessee and director of the Concert Spirituel; 1753, inspector of the Paris Opéra and 'maître de musique de la chambre du roy.' —Works: the operas Pyrrhus (Paris, 1730), Zaïde (1739), Le Pouvoir de l'amour (1743), Almasis (1747), Myrtil (1750); also Pandore, after Voltaire, which was not produced. He publ. sonatas and a book of pieces for the clavecin. —Cf. M. Brenet, Les Concerts en France sous l'ancien régime (Paris, 1900).

Rôze (rohzh), Marie-Hippolyte (née Roze-Ponsin), famous French soprano; b. Paris, March 2, 1846; d. there, June 21, 1926. She studied at the Paris Cons. with Mocker and later with Auber, winning 2 prizes in 1865; made her début at the Opéra-Comique in the title role of Hérold's Marie (Aug. 16, 1865); sang there for 3 seasons; then appeared at the Paris Opéra as Marguerite in Gounod's Faust (Jan. 2, 1879); after several engagements in Belgium and Holland, she made her London début at Drury Lane as Marguerite (1872), achieving extraordinary success; continued to sing in England for many years. She visited America twice, in 1877-78 and 1880-81. In 1874 she married an American bass singer, Julius E. Perkins, who died the following year; later she married the impresario, Col. J. H. Mapleson, but the marriage ended in divorce. In 1890 she settled in Paris as a teacher; appeared occasionally in England, the last time in 1903.

Rôze, Raymond (J. H. Raymond Rôze-Perkins), English composer; son of Maria Rôze; b. London, 1875; d. there, March 31, 1920. He studied at the Brussels Cons., where he won 1st prize; was musical director to Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum Theatre, and later at His Majesty's Theatre. He wrote overtures and incidental music to many plays, including several of Shakespeare's and Trilby. In the fall of 1913 he conducted at Covent Garden a season of opera in English, during which he brought out his own opera Joan of Arc (Oct. 31, 1913); another opera by him, Arabesque, was produced at the Coliseum, London, in 1916.

Rozkošný (rôz-kôsh'-nê), Josef Richard, Czech composer; b. Prague, Sept. 21, 1833; d. there, June 3, 1913. He studied painting and music in Prague; his teachers were Tomaschek (piano) and Kittl (composition). His songs and choruses became popular, and he successfully attempted the composition of operas to Czech librettos; 8 operas were produced in Prague, among them: Svatopluk (1871), Popelka (Cinderella; May 31, 1885), Černé jezero (The Black Lake; Jan. 6, 1906). He also publ. a number of piano pieces.

Rózsa (roh'-zhah), Miklós, composer; b. Budapest, April 18, 1907. He studied piano and composition in Leipzig, with Hermann Grabner; musicology with Theodor Kroyer. In 1932 he settled in Paris, where he became successful as a composer; his works were often performed in European music centers. In 1935 he went to London as a writer for the films; in 1939 emigrated to the U. S., and settled in Hollywood. His orchestral and chamber music is cast in the advanced modern idiom in vogue in Europe between the two wars; neo-Classical in general content, it is strong in polyphony and incisive rhythm; for his film music, he employs a more Romantic and diffuse style, relying on a Wagnerian type of grandiloquence. —Works: for orch.: Nordungarische Bauernlieder und Tänze (1929); symphony (1930); Serenade for small orch. (1932); Scherzo (1933); Thema, Variationen und Finale (1933); Capriccio, pastorale e danza (1938); Variations on a Hungarian Peasant Song (N. Y., Nov. 14, 1943); Concerto, for string orch. (Los Angeles, Dec. 28, 1944); violin concerto (Dallas, Jan. 5, 1956, Heifetz soloist); sonata for 2 violins; etc.

Rózycki (rôh-zhit'-skê), Ludomir, Polish composer; b. Warsaw, Nov. 6, 1883; d. Katowice, Jan. 1, 1953. He studied piano with his father, a teacher at the Warsaw Cons.; theory with Noskowski at the Cons., graduating with honors in 1903. He then went to Berlin, where he took lessons with Humperdinck. In 1908 he was appointed conductor of the opera theater in Lwow and instructor at the Lwow Cons.; in 1912, he went to Warsaw to supervise the production of his opera Meduza; then undertook a European tour; settled in Berlin, where he remained through the years of World War I, continuing to compose. In 1920 he returned to Warsaw; after 1945, lived mostly in Katowice. He was highly regarded in Poland as a national composer of stature; his style of composition was a successful blend of German, Russian, and Italian ingredients, yet the Polish characteristics were not obscured by the cosmopolitan harmonic and orchestral dress. —Works: the operas Bolesław śmiały (Boleslaw the Bold; Lwow, Feb. 11, 1909), Meduza (Warsaw, Oct. 22, 1912), Eros und Psyche (Breslau, March 10, 1917; in German), Casanova (Warsaw, June 8, 1923), Beatrice Cenci (Warsaw, Jan. 30, 1927), Młyn diabelski (The Devilish Mill, Poznan, Feb. 21, 1931), Lili chce śpiewać, comic opera (Poznan, March 7, 1933); the ballets: Pan Twardowski (Warsaw, May 9, 1921; his most successful work; more than 800 performances in Warsaw) and Apollon et la belle (1937); for orch.: the symph. poems Stanczyk (1903), Anelli (1909), Warszawianka (1910), Mona Lisa Gioconda (1910), Pietà (1942), Warszawa wyzwolona (Warsaw Liberated; 1950); 2 piano concertos (1918; 1942); violin concerto (1944); piano quintet (1913); string quartet (1916); violin sonata (1903); cello sonata (1906); a number of piano pieces; several song cycles. —Cf. A. Wieniawski, Ludomir Rózycki (Warsaw, 1928); M. Kaminski, Ludomir Rózycki (Katowice, 1951).

Rubbra, Edmund, English composer; b. Northampton, May 23, 1901. His parents were musical, and he was taught to play the piano by his mother. He left school as a young boy and was employed in various factories; at the same time he continued to study music by himself, and attempted some composition; organized a concert devoted to the works of his favorite composer, Cyril Scott (Northampton, 1918); subsequently took lessons from him in London; in 1919 he studied with Holst; also took courses at the Royal College of Music with R. O. Morris; his other teachers in composition were John Ireland, Eugene Goossens, and Vaughan Williams. He compensated for a late beginning in composition by an extremely energetic application to steady improvement of his technique; finally elaborated a style of his own, marked by sustained lyricism and dynamic Romanticism; his harmonic language often verges on polytonality. —Works: 1-act opera, Bee-Bee-Bei (1933); ballet, Prism (1938); for orch.: Double Fugue (1924), Triple Fugue (1929), symph. No. 1 (London, April 30, 1937), symph. No. 2 (London, Dec. 16, 1938), symph. No. 3 (Manchester, Dec. 15, 1940), symph. No. 4 (London, Aug. 14, 1942), symph. No. 5 (London, Jan. 26, 1949), symph. No. 6 (London, Nov. 17, 1954), symph. No. 7 (Birmingham, Oct. 1, 1957), Sinfonia Concertante, for piano and orch. (London, Aug. 10, 1943), Soliloquy, for cello and orch. (London, Jan. 1, 1945), viola concerto (London, April 15, 1953); chamber music: Fantasy for 2 violins and piano (1925), Lyric Movement, for piano quintet (1929), 2 string quartets (1933; 1952), piano trio (1950), 2 violin sonatas (1925; 1931), cello sonata (1946); choral works: The Sacred Hymnody (1921), La Belle Dame sans merci (1925), The Morning Watch (1941), Te Deum (1951); a number of madrigals and motets for unaccompanied chorus; songs with orch. (Ballad of Tristram, 4 Medieval Latin Lyrics, 5 Sonnets, etc.); songs with piano; miscellaneous pieces for various instruments. —Cf. Edwin Evans, Edmund Rubbra, in the 'Mus. Times' (Feb.-March, 1945; with a list of works); Colin Mason, Rubbra's 4 Symphonies, in 'Music Review' (Jan., 1941); Alan Frank, Modern British Composers (London, 1953; pp. 53-57).

Rubens, Paul Alfred, English composer of light music; b. London, April 29, 1875; d. Falmouth, Feb. 5, 1917. He was educated at Oxford; studied law; in 1899 he contributed some numbers to the famous musical revue Floradora, and this success induced him to abandon the law and devote himself to the composition of light operas. The following stage works by him were produced: Lady Madcap (1904), Miss Hook of Holland (1907), My Mimosa Maid (1908), Dear Little Denmark (1909), The Balkan Princess (1910), The Sunshine Girl (1912); he also wrote numerous songs and ballads.

Rubenson, Albert, Swedish composer; b. Stockholm, Dec. 20, 1826; d. there, March 2, 1901. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. (1844-48) with Ferdinand David (violin), Hauptmann (counterpoint), and Gade (composition). Returning to Stockholm, he wrote music criticism; in 1872 became inspector at the Stockholm Cons., and from 1888 till his death was its director. He wrote an overture, Julius Caesar; a symph.; several orchestral suites; a string quartet; many songs. His style was derived from Mendelssohn and Schumann, but he attempted to inject some elements of Swedish folksong into his music, and in doing so contributed to the rise of musical nationalism in Sweden.

Rubini, Giovanni Battista, celebrated Italian tenor; b. Romano, near Bergamo, April 7, 1794; d. there, March 2, 1854. His teacher was Rosio of Bergamo; after an auspicious début in Pavia (1814), he sang for a time in Naples; there he married (1819) a singer, Mlle. Chomel, known under the professional name of La Comelli. On Oct. 6, 1825 he sang in Paris, where he scored his first triumphs in Rossini's operas at the Théâtre-Italien; his performances of the leading parts in the operas of Bellini and Donizetti were also very successful, and there is reason to believe that Rubini's interpretations greatly contributed to the rising fame of both of those composers. Between 1831 and 1834 he sang in Paris and London; in 1843 he undertook a tour with Liszt, traveling with him in Holland and Germany; in the same year he sang in Russia with tremendous acclaim; visited Russia again in 1844; then returned to Italy, bought an estate near his native town, and remained there until his death; for some years he gave singing lessons. He publ. 12 Lezioni di canto moderno per tenore o soprano and an album of 6 songs, L'Addio. —Cf. C. Traini, G. B. Rubini (Romano, 1954).

Rubinstein, Anton Grigorievitch, celebrated Russian composer and pianist; brother of Nicholas Rubinstein; b. Vykhatinets,

RUBINSTEIN

Podolia, Nov. 28, 1829; d. Peterhof, near St. Petersburg, Nov. 20, 1894. He was of a family of Jewish merchants who became baptized in Berdichev in July, 1831. His mother gave him his first lessons in piano; the family moved to Moscow, where his father opened a small pencil factory. A well-known Moscow piano teacher, Alexandre Villoing, was entrusted with Rubinstein's musical education, and was in fact his only piano teacher. In 1839 Villoing took him to Paris, where Rubinstein played before Chopin and Liszt; remained in Paris until 1841; then made a concert tour in Holland, Germany, Austria, England, Norway, and Sweden, returning to Russia in 1843. Since Anton's brother, Nicholas, evinced a talent for composition, the brothers were taken to Berlin in 1844, where, on Meyerbeer's recommendation, Anton too studied composition, with Dehn; subsequently he made a tour through Hungary with the flutist Heindl. He returned to Russia in 1848 and settled in St. Petersburg. There he enjoyed the enlightened patronage of the Grand Duchess Helen, and wrote 3 Russian operas, Dmitri Donoskoy (1852), Sibirskie Okhotniki (The Siberian Hunters; 1853), and Fomka Duratchok (Thomas the Fool; 1853). In 1854, with the assistance of the Grand Duchess, Rubinstein undertook another tour in Western Europe. He found publishers in Berlin, and gave concerts of his own works in London and Paris, exciting admiration as both composer and pianist; on his return in 1858, he was appointed court pianist and conductor of the court concerts. He assumed the direction of the Russian Musical Society in 1859; in 1862 he founded the Imperial Cons. in St. Petersburg, remaining its director until 1867. For 20 years thereafter he held no official position; from 1867 until 1870 he gave concerts in Europe, winning fame as a pianist second only to Liszt. During the season of 1872-73, he made a triumphant American tour, playing in 215 concerts, for which he was paid about $40,000; appeared as soloist and jointly with the violinist Wieniawski. He produced a sensation by playing from memory, which was a novel procedure at the time. Returning to Europe, he elaborated a cycle of historical concerts, in programs ranging from Bach to Chopin; the last concert of a cycle he usually devoted to Russian composers (Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakov, Tchaikovsky, etc.). In 1887 he resumed the directorship of the St. Petersburg Cons., resigning again in 1891, when he went to Dresden (until 1894). He returned to Russia shortly before his death. —In 1890 Rubinstein established the Rubinstein Prize, an international competition open to young men between 20 and 26 years of age. Two prizes of 5,000 francs each were offered, one for composition, the other for piano playing. Quinquennial competitions were held in St. Petersburg, Berlin, Vienna, and Paris. —Rubinstein's role in Russian musical culture is of the greatest importance. He introduced European methods into education, and established high standards of artistic performance. He was the first Russian musician who was equally prominent as composer and interpreter. According to contemporary reports, his playing possessed extraordinary power (his octave passages were famous) and insight, revealed particularly in his performance of Beethoven's sonatas. His renown as a composer was scarcely less. His Ocean Symphony was one of the most frequently performed orchestral works in Europe and in America; his piano concertos were part of the standard repertory; his pieces for piano solo—the Melody in F, Romance, Kamennoi Ostrov, etc.—became perennial favorites. Rubinstein's style of composition was unabashedly Romantic; he was cosmopolitan as well as conservative; his reputed remark: "For the Christians I am a Jew; for the Jews, a Christian; for the Russians, a German; for the Germans, a Russian" sums up fairly well his position in the musical world. After his death, his orchestral works all but vanished from concert programs, as did his operas (with the exception of The Demon, which is still performed in Russia); his piano concerto no. 4, in D minor, is occasionally heard. —Works: operas: Dmitri Donskoy (St. Petersburg, April 30, 1852), Sibirskie Okhotniki (The Siberian Hunters; 1853), Fomka Duratchok (Thomas the Fool; St. Petersburg, May 23, 1853), Die Kinder der Heide, 5-act German opera (Vienna, Feb. 23, 1861), Feramos, after the poem Lalla Rookh of Th. Moore (Dresden, Feb. 24, 1863), The Demon, after Lermontov (St. Petersburg, Jan. 25, 1875), Die Makabäer (Berlin, April 17, 1875), Nero (Hamburg, Nov. 1, 1879), Kupets Kalashnikov (The Merchant Kalashnikov; St. Petersburg, March 5, 1880), Sulamith and Unter Räubern (both performed Hamburg, Nov. 8, 1883), Der Papagei (The Parrot; Hamburg, 1884), Goriusha (St. Petersburg, Dec. 3, 1889); oratorios: Paradise Lost (Weimar, 1858; revised and arranged as a sacred opera, Düsseldorf, 1875), The Tower of Babel (Königsberg, 1870), Moses (1892), Christus (1893); ballet, Die Rebe (The Vine; 1885); 2 cantatas, Die Nixe, for alto solo and female chorus, and Der Morgen, for male chorus; scene and aria for soprano, E dunque ver?; 2 scenes for alto and orch., Hecuba and Hagar in der Wüste; 6 symphonies (No. 2, Ocean; No. 4, Dramatic; No. 5, Russian); Ouverture triomphale; Ouverture de concert; 3 'character pictures': Faust, Ivan the Terrible, Don Quixote; a 'morceau symphonique' La Russie; 5 piano concertos; Fantaisie for piano and orch.; Konzertstück, for piano and orch.; violin concerto; 2 cello concertos; octet for piano, strings, and winds; sextet for strings; quintet for piano, flute, clarinet, horn, and bassoon; string quintet; piano quintet; 10 string quartets; piano quartet; 5 piano trios; 2 violin sonatas; 2 cello sonatas; piano works: 4 sonatas; Kamennoi Ostrow; Soirées à St. Petersburg; Album de Péterhof; Soirées musicales; 6 Barcarolles; Sérénade russe; polkas, mazurkas, etc.; about 100 songs (of these, Asra is popular). —Writings: Memoirs (St. Petersburg, 1889; in English, as Autobiography of Anton Rubinstein, Boston, 1890); Music and its Representative (Moscow, 1891; in English as Music and its Masters; N. Y., 1892; also publ. as A Conversation on Music); Leitfaden zum richtigen Gebrauch des Pianoforte-Pedals (posthumous; Leipzig, 1896; in French, Brussels, 1899); Gedankenkorber, Litterarischer Nachlass (posthumous; Stuttgart, 1896); Die Meister des Klaviers (posthumous; Berlin, 1899). —Bibliography: A. McArthur, Anton Rubinstein (London, 1889); E. Zabel, Anton Rubinstein (Leipzig, 1892); A. Soubies, Anton Rubinstein (Paris, 1895); I. Martinov, Épisodes de la vie de Rubinstein (Brussels, 1895); J. Rodenberg, Meine persönlichen Erinnerungen an Anton Rubinstein, nebst Briefen, in 'Deutsche Rundschau' (vol. 21; Berlin, 1895; in English in 'Music' vol. 8, Chicago, 1905); E. Wessel, Some Explanations, Hints and Remarks of Anton Rubinstein from His Lessons in the St. Petersburg Cons. (St. Petersburg, 1901; in German, Leipzig, 1904); N. Findeisen, Anton Rubinstein (Moscow, 1907); La Mara, Anton Rubinstein, in 'Musikalische Studienköpfe' (vol. 3, 7th ed., Leipzig, 1909; separately, Leipzig, 1911); N. Bernstein, Anton Rubinstein (Leipzig, 1911); A. Hervey, Anton Rubinstein (London, 1913); K. Preiss, Anton Rubinstein's pianistische Bedeutung (Leipzig, 1914); Igor Glebov, Anton Rubinstein in his Musical Activities and Opinions of his Contemporaries (Moscow, 1929); C. D. Bowen, 'Free Artist': the Story of Anton and Nicholas Rubinstein (N. Y., 1939; fictionalized account, but accurate as to actual events; with a complete list of works and a detailed bibliography, compiled by Otto E. Albrecht); O. Bennigsen, The Brothers Rubinstein and Their Circle, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1939); L. Barenboym, A. G. Rubinstein, vol. I (Moscow, 1957).

Rubinstein, Artur, celebrated pianist; b. Łódź, Poland, Jan. 28, 1886. He performed in public at a very early age; after taking lessons with A. Rózycki in Warsaw, he was sent to Berlin, where he studied with Heinrich Barth (piano) and with Robert Kahn and Max Bruch (theory). He made his European début playing a Mozart concerto in Berlin, with Joachim as conductor; then toured in Russia with Koussevitzky's orch. In 1906 he made his American début with the Philadelphia Orch. During World War I he played recitals in England with Eugène Ysaÿe; in 1916 toured Spain, and later gave concerts in South America. In 1932 he married a daughter of Emil Mlynarski. Rubinstein is one of the finest interpreters of Chopin's music, for which his fiery temperament and poetic lyricism are particularly suitable. After his concerts in Spain and South America, he became one of the most ardent exponents of Spanish music. His popularity with audiences continued through the decades of his active career; he was equally successful in France, Spain, the U. S., and South America, appearing in recitals and with major symph. orchestras. His style of playing tends towards bravura in Classical compositions, but he rarely indulges in mannerisms. He appeared in several films made in Hollywood, as pianist, representing himself. In 1946 he became an American citizen. In 1958 he revisited Poland after 20 years, obtaining immense success. —Cf. B. Gavoty, A. Rubinstein (Geneva, 1955; in English, 1956).

Rubinstein, Beryl, American pianist and composer; b. Athens, Ga., Oct. 26, 1898; d. Cleveland, Dec. 29, 1952. He studied piano with his father and Alexander Lambert; toured the U. S. as a child (1905-11); then went to Berlin to study with Busoni and Vianna da Motta. He was appointed to the faculty of the Cleveland Institute of Music in 1921; became its director in 1932. He wrote an opera, The Sleeping Beauty, to a libretto by John Erskine (Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., Jan. 19, 1938); 32 piano studies; 3 dances for piano; transcriptions from Gershwin's Porgy and Bess. He conducted his orchestral Scherzo with the Cleveland Orch. on March 17, 1927; performed his piano concerto in C with the same orch. on Nov. 12, 1936.

Rubinstein, Joseph, Russian pianist; b. Starokonstantinov, Feb. 8, 1847; d. (committed suicide) Lucerne, Sept. 15, 1884; studied in Vienna with Hellmesberger, Dachs, and Liszt. He was an ardent partisan of Wagner, whom he knew personally; in 1874 he was the pianist at the preliminary rehearsals of The Ring des Nibelungen at Bayreuth; made piano transcriptions of it and also of Parsifal.

Rubinstein, Nicholas (Nicolay Grigorievitch), Russian pianist and pedagogue; brother of Anton Rubinstein; b. Moscow, June 14, 1835; d. March 23, 1881. He began to study piano with his mother at the age of 4, when his brother, 6 years older than he, was already on the road to fame as a child prodigy; was taken to Berlin with his brother, and there studied with Kullak (piano) and Dehn (composition). The brothers met Mendelssohn and Meyerbeer; returning to Moscow in 1846, he began to take lessons with Alexandre Villoing. He also studied law, and received a degree from the Univ. of Moscow (1855); subsequently was a minor functionary in the government; earned his living by giving private lessons. In 1858 he began his concert career; appeared in Russia, and also in London. In 1859, when he was only 24 years old, he became head of the Moscow branch of the Russian Music Society; in 1866 this Society opened the Moscow Cons., of which Nicholas Rubinstein was director until his death. From 1860 he was the regular conductor of the Moscow concerts of the Imperial Russian Musical Society. In 1878 he conducted 4 Russian concerts at the Paris Exposition; at the first and the fourth of the series he performed Tchaikovsky's piano concerto No. 1 (which he had criticized so sharply when Tchaikovsky first submitted it to him in 1874). Anton Rubinstein declared that Nicholas was a better pianist than himself; however, this generous appreciation was not accepted by the public. As an educator, however, Nicholas Rubinstein played perhaps a greater role than his younger brother. Among his pupils were Taneyev, Siloti, and Emil Sauer. — Cf. N. Findeisen, Nicholas Rubinstein, in 'Russkaya Muzykalnaya Gazeta' (1901, No. 10); C. D. Bowen, 'Free Artist': the Story of Anton and Nicholas Rubinstein (N. Y., 1939); Olga Bennigsen, The Brothers Rubinstein and Their Circle, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1939).

Rubio Piqueras (roo'-bē-oh pē-keh'-rahs), Felipe, Spanish musicologist; b. Valera de Arriba, Sept. 13, 1881; d. Toledo, 1936. He was ordained priest in 1904, and served as organist at the Cathedral of Badajoz until 1917; then went to Toledo as church organist. He publ. valuable works on music in Toledo: Códices polifónicos toledanos and Música y Músicos toledanos (1923); wrote some church music.

Rubner. See Rybner.

Rubsamen, Walter (Howard), American musicologist; b. New York, July 21, 1911. He studied the flute with Georges Barrère; musicology at Columbia Univ. under Paul H. Lang (B. A., 1933); then went to Germany (on a Clarence Barker Music Scholarship); studied at the Univ. of Munich with R. von Ficker and Otto Ursprung; received his Ph. D. there with the dissertation Pierre de la Rue als Messenkomponist (1937). From 1938 to 1942, instructor in music at the Univ. of California, Los Angeles; 1942-48, assistant prof.; 1948-55, associate prof.; 1955, prof. — Publications: Literary Sources of Secular Music in Italy c. 1500 (1943); articles in the 'Mus. Quarterly,' 'Notes,' the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana,' etc.

Rückauf, Anton, an outstanding composer of German songs; b. Prague, March 13, 1855; d. Schloss Alt-Erla, Austria, Sept. 19, 1903. A pupil of Proksch, he became a teacher at the Proksch Institute in Prague; subsequently studied composition in Vienna (under Nottetbohm and Nawrátil), where he settled permanently. He owed much to the artistic cooperation of the noted singer Gustav Walter, who constantly performed his songs, and whom Rückauf himself accompanied at the piano. He publ. about 80 songs; of these the following were particularly well liked: Ballade (to Uhland's poem), Hafis, 5 Minnelieder, Zigeunerlieder, Flammen und Asche, Lenz und Liebe, Lieder der Liebe in Völkerstimmen, Aus der Wanderzeit, Grüsse; also wrote chamber music; an opera, Die Rosenthalerin (Dresden, 1897); set 5 Russian folk poems for mixed chorus with 4-hand piano accompaniment.

Ruckers, celebrated family of harpsichord makers at Antwerp. Hans the elder (b. Mechlin, c. 1550; d. Antwerp, c. 1625), was the first to make instruments. He was admitted to the Guild of Saint Luke in 1579, and his 1st known instrument is a harpsichord dated 1581; his last, 1620. Hans the younger, also known as Jean (baptized Antwerp, Jan. 15, 1578; d. there, April 24, 1643), was the second son of the founder.

He was greatly esteemed by his contemporaries, and was exempted from Civic Guard duties in appreciation of his artistry. Andreas the elder (baptized Antwerp, Aug. 20, 1579; d. after 1651), manufactured harpsichords in 1601-44. Andreas the younger, son of the elder Andreas (baptized Antwerp, March 31, 1607; d. after 1667), made instruments between 1637 and 1667. Another member of the same family was Christopher Ruckers, who flourished about 1600. For a list of surviving instruments and other particulars, see Donald H. Boalch, Makers of the Harpsichord and Clavichord, 1440 to 1840 (N. Y., 1956). See also Georg Kinsky, Die Familie Ruckers, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. IV); André M. Pols, De Ruckers en de klavierbouw in Vlaanderen (Antwerp, 1942).

Rüdel, Hugo, German horn player and choral conductor; b. Havelberg, Feb. 7, 1868; d. Berlin, Nov. 27, 1934. He studied at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik; was horn player at the Royal Opera; director of the Berlin opera chorus (1901); choral conductor at the Bayreuth Festivals (1906); in 1909 succeeded Prüfer as conductor of the famous Berlin 'Domchor,' with which he toured extensively; also conductor of the Berlin 'Lehrergesangsverein' (1916).

Rudersdorff, Hermine, dramatic soprano; b. Ivanovsky, Ukraine, Dec. 12, 1822; d. Boston, Feb. 26, 1882. A pupil of Bordogni at Paris and of de Micherout at Milan; she sang at first in Germany (1840-54); then in London (1854-65). Engaged at the Boston Jubilee of 1869, she settled in Boston, becoming renowned as a teacher (Emma Thursby was her pupil). In 1844 she married Dr. Küchenmeister, from whom she was divorced, then married in 1850 an English merchant, Maurice Mansfield. Their son was the famous actor, Richard Mansfield (1857-1907).

Rudhyar, Dane (real name Daniel Chen-nevière), composer and writer; b. Paris, March 23, 1895. He studied at the Sorbonne, and, for a short time, at the Paris Cons.; very early began to be interested in modern music, philosophy, and literature; publ. a book on Debussy at the age of 18 (Paris, 1913). In 1916 he came to the U. S. for a performance of his dance poems for orch., Poèmes ironiques and Vision végétale, at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., on April 4, 1917; remained in the U. S. and became an American citizen; lived in California, New Mexico, and N. Y. In 1922 his tone poem Soul Fire won the $1000 prize of the Los Angeles Philharmonic. He became deeply interested in theosophy, and adopted the Hindu pseudonym Rudhyar; has publ. several books on mystical philosophy, contributed to astrological journals; also exhibited his paintings. His music derives from Scriabin, with whose cosmic philosophy Rudhyar finds himself in sympathy. —Works: Ouranos, a 'syntony' in 3 movements scored for orch. and 3 pianos (1919-26); The Surge of Fire, symph. trilogy (Los Angeles, Oct. 22, 1925); Sinfonietta (1927); To the Real, symph. triptych (Paris, Feb. 21, 1932); several sets of piano pieces: 3 Peans, Tetragrams, Chants of Formation, etc. —Cf. Paul Rosenfeld, An Hour with American Music (N. Y., 1929; pp. 71-78); A. Morang, Dane Rudhyar, Pioneer in Creative Synthesis (N. Y., 1939).

Rüdinger, Gottfried, German composer; b. Lindau, Aug. 23, 1886; d. Gauting, near Munich, Jan. 17, 1946. He studied in a local school, of which his father was director; in 1907 went to Eichstätt, where he studied philosophy and theology; at the same time took courses with Max Reger at the Leipzig Cons. (1907-09); in 1910 he settled in Munich, where he became instructor in theory at the Academy. He composed prolifically; brought out a 'peasant play-opera,' Tegernseer im Himmel, op. 100; the children's operas Benchtsgadener Sagenspiel, Musikantenkomödie, König Folkwart, etc.; several string quartets; 2 piano trios; a trio for viola, saxophone, and piano; pieces for small brass ensembles, in the style of old townpiper music; a Nordisches Fest for 3 zithers; many choruses; a Muttergottes-Messe, op. 143; also many instructive piano pieces.

Rudnick, Wilhelm, German composer; b. Damerkow, Dec. 30, 1850; d. there, Aug. 7, 1927. He studied at Kullak's Akademie der Tonkunst in Berlin; subsequently occupied various posts as church organist in Landsberg and Liegnitz; was also active as choral conductor. He wrote numerous organ works of excellent quality; a fantasy on Ein feste Burg, Trinitatis-Sonate, Pfingsten-Sonate, Konzert-Phantasie, Choralvorspiele; etc. Also vocal works (sacred and secular).

Rudnicki (rood-nits'-skē), Marian Teofil, Polish composer; b. Cracow, March 7, 1888; d. there, Dec. 31, 1944. He was conductor at the Cracow Operetta Theater (1916-19) and at the Warsaw Municipal Opera (1919); wrote incidental music to Antony and Cleopatra, The Return of Ulysses, Caligula, etc.; choral works; piano pieces; songs.

Rudnitsky, Antin, pianist, conductor, and composer; b. Luka, Galicia, Feb. 7, 1902. He studied in Berlin with Schnabel and Petri (piano), Schreker (composition), Abert and Curt Sachs (musicology); Ph. D. at the Univ. of Berlin, 1926. In 1927 he went to Russia, where he conducted the State Opera of Kharkov (1927-30) and the State Opera of Kiev (1930-32); from 1932 to 1937, was conductor at the Municipal Opera and prof. at the Academy of Music in Lwow and Warsaw. In 1937 he settled in the U. S.; toured as accompanist for his wife, Maris Sekil, soprano; in 1939 made his permanent home in N. Y. His works include an opera, Doubush (1937); a ballet, Storm over the West (1932); 3 symphonies (1936; 1941; 1942); a cello concerto (1942); chamber music.

Rudolf, Max, eminent conductor; b. Frankfurt, June 15, 1902. He studied cello with Maurits Frank, piano with Eduard Jung, and composition with Bernhard Sekles at the Hoch Cons. in Frankfurt; then was coach at the Municipal Opera in Freiburg (1922-23) and Darmstadt (1923-25); traveled in Italy (1926-27); 1st conductor at the Darmstadt Opera (1927-29); later conducted in Prague (1929-35). From 1935 until 1940 he was conductor of the Göteborg, Sweden, Symph. Orch. and of the Swedish Broadcasting Co. In 1940 he came to the U. S. (American citizen, 1946); in 1945, joined the managerial staff at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y.; 1950, became its artistic administrator; also gave many distinguished performances of standard operas. In 1958 he was appointed permanent conductor of the Cincinnati Symph. Orch. He is the author of The Grammar of Conducting (N. Y., 1949).

Rudorff, Ernst Friedrich Karl, German pianist; b. Berlin, Jan. 18, 1840; d. there, Dec. 31, 1916. He studied with Bargiel in Berlin and with Moscheles, Plaidy, and Reinecke in Leipzig. After a few years of teaching in Cologne (1865-68), he was appointed head of the piano dept. at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, and held this post for 41 years (1869-1910); also conducted the Stern Gesangverein (1880-90). He edited the piano concertos and piano sonatas of Mozart; brought out the full score of Weber's Euryanthe; etc. He was a friend of Brahms, whose letters to him were publ. in vol. III of the Brahms correspondence (Berlin, 1907); Rudorff's correspondence with Joachim was publ. in vol. III of Briefe von und an Joseph Joachim (1913). He composed 3 symphonies; piano pieces. —Cf. Elisabeth Rudorff, ed., Aus den Tagen der Romantik, Bildnis einer deutschen Familie (Leipzig, 1938).

Rudzinski, Witold, Polish composer; b. Sebes, Russia, March 14, 1913. He studied with T. Szeligowski at the Cons. of Vilna; in 1938 he went to Paris, where he studied with Nadia Boulanger. Returning to Poland, he taught at the Vilna Cons. (1941) and the Lodz Cons. (1946); then settled in Warsaw. Among his works are 2 symphonies, 2 piano concertos, 2 string quartets; piano music; songs. He also publ. some books on music appreciation, and a biography of Moniuszko (Cracow, 1955; 2nd ed., 1957).

Rue, Pierre de la. See La Rue.

Ruelle, Charles Émile, French musicologist, authority on Greek music; b. Paris, Oct. 24, 1833; d. there, Oct., 1912. He was chief librarian of the Bibliothèque de Ste. Geneviève, Paris, from 1898 to 1905; translated into French the treatises of Aristoxenus (1871), Nicomachus (1881), etc.; publ. the valuable treatises Études sur l'ancienne musique grecque (1875 and 1900); Le Monocorde (1891); Sextus Empiricus (1899); De la musique des Grecs modernes et en particulier de leur musique ecclésiastique (1876); contributed to the 'Dictionnaire des antiquités grecques.'

Rüfer, Josef, Austrian music scholar; b. Vienna, 1893; studied with Schoenberg; was his assistant at the Akademie der Künste in Berlin (1925-33); with Stuckenschmidt, ed. the monthly magazine 'Stimmen' in Berlin (1947-49). Publ. a valuable treatise, Die Komposition mit zwölf Tönen (Berlin, 1952; English transl. by Humphrey Searle as Composition with 12 Notes related only to one another, London, 1954).

Rüfer, Philippe (-Barthélemy), pianist and composer; b. Liège, June 7, 1844 (of German parents); d. Berlin, Sept. 15, 1919. He studied at the Cons. of Liège; in 1871, settled in Berlin, where he taught piano at Stern's Cons., Kullak's Akademie der Tonkunst, and (from 1881) at Scharwenka's. He wrote the operas Merlin (Berlin, Feb. 28, 1887) and Ingo (Berlin, 1896); a symphony; 3 overtures; piano music; songs. —Cf. P. Magnette, Philippe Rüfer. Étude biographique et critique (Liège, 1910).

Ruffo, Titta, famous Italian baritone; b. Pisa, June 9, 1877; d. Florence, July 6, 1953. His real name was Ruffo Cafiero Titta, but he found it convenient to transpose his first and last names for professional purposes. He studied with Persichini at the Santa Cecilia in Rome, then with Cassini in Milan. He made his operatic début in Rome as the Herald in Lohengrin (1898); then sang in Rio de Janeiro; returning to Italy, he appeared in all the principal theaters; also sang in Vienna, Paris, and London. He made his American début in Philadelphia as Rigoletto (Nov. 4, 1912) with the combined Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Co.; 1st appearance with the Metropolitan Opera, as Figaro in Il Barbiere di Siviglia (N. Y., Jan. 19, 1922). He left the Metropolitan in 1929 and returned to Rome. In Oct., 1937, he was briefly under arrest for opposing the Mussolini regime; then went to Florence, where he remained until his death. He publ. a book of memoirs, La mia parabola (Milan, 1937); a sequel to it remains in manuscript. —Cf. M. A. Barrenechea, Titta Ruffo; notas de psicologia artistica (Buenos Aires, 1911).

Ruger, Morris Hutchins, American composer; b. Superior, Wis., Dec. 2, 1902. He studied at Columbia Univ. (A. B., 1924), Fontainebleau, France (1925-26), Northwestern Univ. (1930), the Juilliard School of Music (1934); piano with Isidor Philipp in Paris (1926); composition with Seth Bingham in N. Y. and André Bloch in Paris. In 1945, appointed assistant director of the Los Angeles Cons. He publ. a number of choral works; a textbook, Harmony, a Creative Approach to Four-Part Writing (1947); composed a string quartet, a piano quintet, a violin concerto. His opera, Gettysburg, was produced at the Hollywood Bowl in 1938.

Ruggi (roo'-jē), Francesco, Italian composer; b. Naples, Oct. 21, 1767; d. there, Jan. 23, 1845. He studied at the Cons. di S. Loreto in Naples under Fenaroli; became prof. of composition at the Cons. di San Pietro a Maiella; Bellini and Carafa were his pupils there. He wrote the operas L'Ombra di Nino (Naples, 1795), La Guerra aperta (Naples, 1796), and Soft tripponi (Milan, 1804); much sacred music.

Ruggles, Carl, American composer; b. Marion, Mass., March 11, 1876. He studied with Christian Timmer and Joseph Claus; then with Walter Spalding and J. K. Paine at Harvard Univ. In 1912 he organized the Winona Symph. Orch. in Minneapolis, which he conducted for some years; then lived in Arlington, Vt.; in 1937 was appointed to the faculty of the Univ. of Miami, Florida, as instructor in modern composition. In 1954 he was elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters. In his music he adopted a radical idiom, powerfully dissonant, and atonal in its melodic patterns. He wrote only a few works, rarely performed; nonetheless, he appears a strong figure on the American musical scene. In the last decades of his active life, he devoted himself mainly to painting, and exhibited his pictures in New York and elsewhere. —Works: Men and Angels, symph. suite, for 5 trumpets and 1 bass trumpet (N. Y., Dec. 17, 1922; revised for brass or strings, and renamed Angels; Miami, April 24, 1939, composer conducting); Men and Mountains, symph. suite in 3 movements: Men, Lilacs, Marching Mountains (N. Y., Dec. 7, 1924; revised for larger orch.; N. Y., March 19, 1936); Portals, for string orch. (N. Y., Jan. 24, 1926); Sun-Treader, after Browning, for large orch. (Paris, Feb. 25, 1932); Polyphonic Composition for 3 pianos (1940); Evocations, 4 chants for piano (1945); Organum, for large orch. (N. Y., Nov. 24, 1949). —Cf. Paul Rosenfeld, An Hour with American Music (N. Y., 1929; pp. 101-06); C. Seeger, Carl Ruggles, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1932); Lou Harrison, About Carl Ruggles (Yonkers, N. Y., 1946).

Rühlmann, Frans, Belgian conductor; b. Brussels, Jan. 11, 1868; d. Paris, June 8, 1948. He studied at the Cons. of Brussels; filled engagements as conductor at the Théâtre de la Monnaie in Brussels, and also in Liège, Antwerp, etc. In 1905 he appeared at the Opéra-Comique in Paris; in 1914 became conductor of the Paris Opéra; also led a series of popular concerts in Antwerp.

Rühlmann, Franz, German musicologist; b. Chemnitz, Dec. 7, 1896; d. in a camp for prisoners of war, Landsberg, June 15, 1945. He was in the German army in both wars; studied in Leipzig and Kiel; Dr. phil., 1924, with the dissertation, Richard Wagner und die deutsche Opernbühne; was instructor of theater music at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (from 1933). He publ. various essays on Wagner's operas, and on German oratorios; brought out vocal scores of Der Freischütz, Mozart's Requiem, Gluck's operas, etc.

Rühlmann, (Adolf) Julius, German writer on music; b. Dresden, Feb. 28, 1816; d.

there, Oct. 27, 1877. He played the trombone in the court orch. of Dresden, where he founded the Dresden 'Tonkünstlerverein' (1855); taught piano and music history at the Dresden Cons. He prepared a valuable Geschichte der Bogeninstrumente, which was publ. posthumously by his son, Dr. Richard Rühlmann (1882); he also wrote Die Urform der Bogeninstrumente (1874).

Rumford, Robert Henry Kennerley, English baritone; b. London, Sept. 2, 1870; d. North Stoke, Oxford, March 9, 1957. He studied voice with George Henschel in London and with Sbriglia in Paris; in 1900, married the celebrated contralto Clara Butt, with whom he toured the world in 1913-14. He lived most of his life in England.

Rummel, Christian, German composer and conductor; b. Brichsenstadt, Nov. 27, 1787; d. Wiesbaden, Feb. 13, 1849. He was an able performer on the piano, violin, and clarinet; served as municipal conductor in Wiesbaden from 1815 until 1841; publ. a clarinet concerto, 2 quintets, etc. His son, Joseph Rummel (b. Wiesbaden, Oct. 6, 1818; d. London, March 25, 1880), was court pianist to the Duke of Nassau, and publ. piano music; another son, August Rummel (b. Wiesbaden, Jan. 14, 1824; d. London, Dec. 14, 1886), also was a good pianist.

Rummel, Franz, pianist, son of Joseph Rummel, grandson of Christian Rummel; b. London, Jan. 11, 1853; d. Berlin, May 2, 1901. He studied with Louis Brassin at the Brussels Cons., winning the 1st prize in 1872; toured in America 3 times (1878, 1886, 1898). He married a daughter of S. F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph.

Rummel, Walter Morse, distinguished pianist, son of Franz Rummel, and grandson of S. F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph; b. Berlin, July 19, 1887; d. Bordeaux, May 2, 1953. He studied with Leopold Godowsky (piano) and Hugo Kaun (composition). In 1908 he went to Paris, where he became acquainted with Debussy, and devoted himself to propagandizing Debussy's piano works, of which he was a foremost interpreter. He was also a composer; publ. transcriptions of Bach's organ works for piano. He was married twice, to the pianist Thérèse Chaigneau, with whom he appeared in 2-piano recitals (later divorced), and to Sarah Harrington (also divorced).

Runciman, John F., English music critic; b. 1866; d. London, April 7, 1916. He was a church organist before he joined the staff of the 'Saturday Review' in London, 1894, as music critic; held this position till his death; also was editor of 'The Chord' (quarterly) and the 'Musician's Library.' His criticisms were remarkable for their unabashed violence in denouncing composers and performers whom he did not like; on some occasions he became involved in libel suits. He publ. selected essays in 1899 under the title of Old Scores and New Readings, a biographical study of Haydn (1908), one of Purcell (1909), and Richard Wagner, Composer of Operas (1913).

Rung, Frederik, Danish composer, son of Henrik Rung; b. Copenhagen, June 14, 1854; d. there, Jan. 22, 1914. He studied with his father; became conductor at the Copenhagen Opera (1884); also led the 'Cecilia Society' (founded by his father); taught at the Copenhagen Cons. from 1881 till 1893. —Works: the operas: Det hemmelige Selskab (The Secret Party; Copenhagen, Feb. 9, 1888) and Den trekantede Hat (The Three-cornered Hat; Copenhagen, Nov. 7, 1894); symph.; a rhapsody for orch.; Danse des papillons for orch.; a serenade for 9 instruments; a piano quintet; 2 string quartets; a violin sonata; piano pieces; songs.

Rung, Henrik, Danish conductor and composer; father of Frederik Rung; b. Copenhagen, March 3, 1807; d. there, Dec. 13, 1871. He founded the 'Cecilia Society' in 1891; wrote a number of choral works and popular songs. —Cf. C. Thrane, Cæcilieföreningen og dens Stifter (Copenhagen, 1901).

Runge, Paul, German musicologist; b. Heinrichsfeld, Posen, Jan. 2, 1848; d. Colmar, Alsace, July 4, 1911. Studied with J. Schneider and at the Royal Institute for Church Music in Berlin; lived from 1873 as organist and teacher in Colmar. His writings, which are of importance especially in connection with the music of the Minnesingers and Mastersingers, are Die Sangesweisen der Colmarer Handschrift und die Liederhandschrift Donaueschingen (1896), Die Lieder und Melodien der Geissler des Jahres 1349 (1900), Die Lieder des Hugo von Montfort mit den Melodien des Burk Mangolt (1906), Die Notation des Meistergesanges (1907; in the report of the Basel Congress of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft); with R. Batka he publ. Die Lieder Mülchs von Prag (1905), etc.

Rungenhagen, Karl Friedrich, German composer; b. Berlin, Sept. 27, 1778; d. there, Dec. 21, 1851. Pupil of Benda; in 1815 vice-conductor of the Singakademie, succeeding Zelter in 1833 as first conductor; member of the Berlin Academy, and teacher in the School of Composition. — Works: 4 operas, 3 oratorios, a Te Deum, 30 motets, 30 4-part songs, over 100 sacred and 1,000 secular songs; also symphonies, quartets, etc.

Runolfsson, Karl Otto, Icelandic composer; b. Reykjavik, Oct. 24, 1900. He studied trumpet and composition in Copenhagen; then played the trumpet in the radio orchestra in Reykjavik; in 1939, appointed teacher at the Cons. there. He wrote a set of Icelandic songs for voice and orch. (1938); many choruses on Icelandic themes; a violin sonata; songs.

Runze (roohn'tseh), Maximilian, German writer and editor; b. Woltersdorf, Pomerania, Aug. 8, 1849; d. Berlin, May 9, 1931. Studied philosophy and theology at the Univs. of Greifswald and Berlin; from 1882, rector of St. Johannis-Moabit, Berlin, and lecturer at the Humboldt-Akademie. His writings on the life and works of Karl Loewe are valuable: Karl Loewe, eine ästhetische Beurteilung (1884), Loewe redivivus (1888), Ludwig Giesebrecht und Karl Loewe (1894), Goethe und Loewe (1901), Karl Loewe (1905; a biography); also Die musikalische Legende (1902), Volkslied und Ballade (1907). Edited Arien aus ungedruckten Opern und Oratorien Loewes (1892; 3 vols.), Loewe-Hohenzollern Album (1898; 2 vols.), Gesamtausgabe der Balladen, Legenden und Gesänge Loewes (1899-1903; 17 vols.).

Ruolz-Montchal (rü-öhl's möhn-shahl'), Henri (-Catherine-Camille), comte de, French composer; b. Paris, March 5, 1808; d. there, Sept. 30, 1887. He was a pupil of Berton, Lesueur, Paër, and Rossini; had won some success as a composer when the loss of his fortune (1840) induced him to abandon music and devote himself to the study of chemistry. — Works: the operas Attendre et courir (with F. Halévy; Opéra-Comique, 1830), Lara (Naples, Nov. 22, 1835; was highly praised by Alexandre Dumas in the 'Gazette Musicale de Paris'), La Vendetta (Opéra, 1839), La jolie fille de Perth, and Manfred; a Requiem; Cantate en honneur de Jeanne d'Arc; a string quartet; 2 piano trios; motets; songs.

Russell, George Alexander, American organist and song composer; b. Franklin, Tenn., Oct. 2, 1880; d. Dewitt, N. Y., Nov. 24, 1953. The son of a Presbyterian minister, he studied at home; his mother, Felicia Putnam Russell (a direct descendant of General Israel Putnam of Revolution fame), taught him piano; the family moved to Texas, where he studied academic subjects; entered the College of Fine Arts, Syracuse Univ., studying organ with George A. Parker and composition with William Berwald; subsequently studied in Europe with Leopold Godowsky and Harold Bauer (piano), and with Widor (organ). Returning to America in 1908, he toured as accompanist to various artists; in 1910 he became director of the Auditorium concerts at Wanamaker's in N. Y.; in 1917 was appointed prof. in the newly-founded chair of music at Princeton Univ.; assembled the famous Rodman Wanamaker Collection of old Italian string instruments. He wrote the songs Sunset, The Sacred Fire, In Fountain Court, Lyric from Tagore, Expectation, Puer Redemptor, etc.; the piano pieces Theme and Variations, Contrapuntal Waltz, etc. — Cf. J. T. Howard, Alexander Russell (N. Y., 1925).

Russell, Henry, English singer and composer; b. Sheerness, Dec. 24, 1812; d. London, Dec. 8, 1900. He studied in Italy as a young boy; took a few lessons from Rossini in Naples; sang in London in 1828; then was in Canada (1833); served as organist of the First Presbyterian Church of Rochester, N. Y. (1833-41). He returned to England in 1841, and became extremely popular there as a composer and singer of dramatic and topical songs, of which Woodman, Spare that Tree attained immense popularity; other songs were Old Arm Chair, Oh, Weep Not!, A Life on the Ocean Wave (official march of the Royal Marines), Cheer, Boys, Cheer, Ivy Green, The Gambler's Wife, Old Bell, The Maniac, etc. He publ. a book of reminiscences, Cheer, Boys, Cheer (London, 1895) and L'Amico dei cantanti, a treatise on singing. He was the father of Henry Russell, the impresario, and of Sir Landon Ronald (q. v.), the composer and conductor, whose real name was L. R. Russell.

Russell, Henry, English impresario; son of the preceding; b. London, Nov. 14, 1871; d. there, Oct. 11, 1937. He studied singing at the Royal College of Music, and devised an original method of vocal instruction, which attracted the attention of Mme. Melba, who sent him a number of her good pupils. Owing to his wide acquaintance with singers, he was invited in 1903 to manage a season of opera at Covent Garden; in 1905 he brought his company to the U. S., where Boston was the principal field of his operations; his success there resulted, in 1909, in the formation of the Boston Opera Co., of which he was general manager until its dissolution in 1914. Just before the outbreak of World War I, he had taken the entire Boston troupe to Paris, where he gave a successful spring season at the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées. He then lived mostly in London. He publ. a book of memoirs, The Passing Show (London, 1926).

Russell, Louis Arthur, American organist and pianist; b. Newark, N. J., Feb. 24, 1854; d. there, Sept. 5, 1925. He studied music in N. Y.; then singing with William Shakespeare and George Henschel in London. Returning to America in 1878, he was active as church organist in Newark; founded the College of Music there (1885) and organized the Newark Symph. Orch. (1893). He publ. several instructive books: The Embellishments of Music; How to Read Modern Music; Problems of Time and Tune; Development of Artistic Pianoforte Touch; etc.

Russolo, Luigi, Italian futurist composer; b. Portogruaro, May 1, 1885; d. Cerro, Feb. 6, 1947. In 1909 he joined the futurist movement of Marinetti; formulated the principles of the 'Art of Noises', on which subject he publ. a book, L'Arte dei rumori (Milan, 1916); constructed a number of noise-making instruments ('intonarumore'), with which he gave concerts in Milan (April 21, 1914), Paris (June 18, 1921), etc. In his futurist manifesto, issued at Milan on March 11, 1913, he classified the futurist orch. into 6 groups of noises, ranging from explosions and clashes to shrieks and groans; this manifesto is reproduced in English transl. in N. Slonimsky's book, Music Since 1900 (3rd ed., pp. 642-48).

Rust (rööst), Friedrich Wilhelm, German violinist and composer; b. Wörlitz, near Dessau, July 6, 1739; d. Dessau, March 28, 1796. Student of law at Leipzig until 1762; then a pupil of the violinist Höckh at Zerbst and (1763) of Franz Benda at Berlin, under the patronage of Prince Leopold III of Anhalt-Dessau, whom he accompanied to Italy (1765-66), and who appointed him court music director in 1775. He brought out several stage pieces, wrote incidental music to plays and considerable instrumental music. David Singer and Wilhelm Rust publ. several of his violin pieces. — Cf. W. Hosäus, F. W. Rust und das Dessauer Musikleben (Dessau, 1882); E. Prieger, F. W. Rust (Cologne, 1894; with list of works); R. Czach, F. W. Rust (Essen, 1927). His son, Wilhelm Karl Rust (b. Dessau, April 29, 1787; d. there, April 18, 1855), was organist at Vienna (1819-27); then teacher in Dessau. Publ. pieces for piano and organ.

Rust, Wilhelm, German organist and editor; b. Dessau, Aug. 15, 1822; d. Leipzig, May 2, 1892. Pupil of his uncle, W. K. Rust (piano and organ); later of Fr. Schneider (1843-46). He went to Berlin in 1849, taught there, and entered the Singakademie; joined the Leipzig Bach-Verein in 1850, played in numerous concerts, became organist of St. Luke's in 1861, conductor of the Berlin Bach-Verein from 1862-74, 'Royal Music Director' in 1864, and received the title of Dr. phil. (hon. c.) from Marburg Univ. in 1868; in 1870, teacher of theory and composition at the Stern Cons.; in 1878, organist of the Thomaskirche at Leipzig, and teacher in the Cons. there; in 1880 he succeeded Richter as cantor of the Thomaschule. — As ed. of several vols. of the Bach edition prepared by the Bach-Gesellschaft, he displayed great erudition.

Ruthardt (roo'tahrt), Adolf, German editor and composer; b. Stuttgart, Feb. 9, 1849; d. Leipzig, Sept. 12, 1934. Pupil of the Stuttgart Cons.; music-teacher in Geneva 1868-85; from 1886-1914, prof. of piano at the Leipzig Cons.; retired in 1914. — Works: piano pieces and valuable studies (op. 40, Trillerstudien; op. 41, Oktavenstudien; op. 53, Terzen-Etuden; op. 54, Sexten-Etuden; etc.); and an Elementar-Klavierschule (op. 44); edited a selection of Cramer's Studies (1909), a collection of Old Dances (2 vols., 1913), and a 'Klavierbuch nordischer Komponisten' (2 vols., 1913); wrote Das Klavier: ein geschichtlicher Abriss; a Chormeisterbüchlein of short biographies; and prepared the 3rd-10th eds. (1925) of Eschmann's Wegweiser durch die Klavier-Literatur; also a Wegweiser durch die Literatur des Männergesanges (1892).

Ruthström, (Bror Olaf) Julius, Swedish violinist; b. Sundsvall, Dec. 30, 1877; d. Stockholm, April 2, 1944. He studied at the Stockholm Cons. (1894-99) and the Berlin Hochschule für Musik (1901-03); pupil of A. Moser, J. Joachim, and W. Burmester; toured Scandinavia and Central Europe; publ. valuable pedagogic works for the violin: Mechanics of Passage-Playing (1914); The Art of Bowing (1921); Double-Note Studies (1924); Violin School (1928).

RUTZ — RYCHNOVSKY

Rutz, Ottmar, German writer on voice; b. Fürth, July 15, 1881; d. Garmisch, Sept. 8, 1952. He was the son of Josef Rutz and Klara Rutz, vocal teachers in Munich, whose ideas on various physiological aspects of singing (especially as regards the position of trunk muscles in singing different types of songs) he expounded in several important books: Neue Entdeckungen von der menschlichen Stimme (Munich, 1908); Musik, Wort und Körper als Gemütsausdruck (Leipzig, 1911); Typenstimmführung, zugleich die neue Ausdruckskunst für Bühne und Konzert (with Klara Rutz; 1920); Menschheitstypen und Kunst (1921); Vom Ausdruck des Menschen (1926). —Cf. 'Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' XI, p. 180 ff. and p. 311 ff.

Ruygrok, Leo (Leonard Petrus), Dutch cellist, conductor, and composer; b. Utrecht, May 8, 1889; d. Hilversum, Jan. 3, 1944. He studied composition with Johan Wagenaar and cello with Ed. Ferrée; was active as cellist; then conductor at Arnhem (1915-19) and in The Hague (1919-40). He wrote 2 symphonies, 4 overtures, works for voice, etc.

Ruyneman, Daniel, Dutch composer; b. Amsterdam, Aug. 8, 1886. He studied at the Amsterdam Cons.; in 1918 was co-founder of the Society for Modern Dutch Composers. He made a special study of Javanese instruments, and introduced them in some of his works; also used for the first time a 2-octave set of cup bells (cast by J. Taylor & Co., England) in his work Hieroglyphs, for 3 flutes, harp, celesta, piano, 2 mandolins, 2 guitars, and percussion; other works include Sonata in F, for chorus a cappella without words; 3 Parthematologies, for piano; 9 piano sonatas; numerous songs on Dutch and Chinese texts; also stage works. —Cf. A. Petronio, Daniel Ruyneman et son œuvre (Liège, 1922); C. Bérard, Daniel Ruyneman, in the 'Chesterian' (London, 1928); A. Hoérée, Daniel Ruyneman, in the 'Revue Musicale' (March, 1949).

Ryan, Thomas, American musician and composer; b. Ireland, 1827; d. New Bedford, Mass., March 5, 1903. He settled in the U. S. in 1844, and in 1849 was a co-founder of the 'Mendelssohn Quintette Club,' playing the viola (and upon occasion, the clarinet), with August Fries (1st violin), Francis Riha (2nd violin), Eduard Lehmann (viola and flute), and Wulf Fries (cello). With this club he traveled all over the U. S., doing missionary work in bringing good music to remote communities; he also acted as its manager; arranged classical sonatas and other works for it; after half a century, Ryan was the sole remaining original member of the organization; publ. a book of memoirs, Recollections of an Old Musician (N. Y., 1899).

Ryba, Jan Jakub, Czech composer; b. Přestice, Oct. 26, 1765; d. Rožmitál, April 8, 1815. He studied academic subjects in Prague; in 1788 was appointed rector at a school in Rožmitál; remained there until his death (suicide). A very prolific composer, he left about 120 Masses, 100 motets, 30 pastorals (Christmas cantatas to Latin and Czech words); also many songs to Czech words; of these latter, 2 albums were publ. during his lifetime; other works were a symphony, several string quartets, sonatas. There is a growing realization in Czechoslovakia of Ryba's importance as an early representative of the national art song. —Cf. J. Němeček, Jan Jakub Ryba (Prague, 1947).

Rybner, (Peter Martin) Cornelius, pianist, conductor, and composer; b. Copenhagen, Oct. 26, 1855; d. New York, Jan. 21, 1929. His original name was Rubner, but he changed it to Rybner about 1920. He studied at the Copenhagen Cons. with Gade and J. P. Hartmann; then at the Leipzig Cons. with Ferdinand David (violin) and Reinecke (piano); finished his pianistic studies under Hans von Bülow and Anton Rubinstein. After a series of concerts in Europe as pianist, he settled in Karlsruhe; succeeded Mottl in 1892 as conductor of the Philharmonic Society there, and held this position until 1904, when he emigrated to the U. S., succeeding MacDowell as head of the music dept. at Columbia Univ. (1904-19). His works include a ballet, Prinz Ador (Munich, 1902); a symph. poem, Friede, Kampf und Sieg; a violin concerto; numerous choruses; piano pieces; songs; also some chamber music.

Rychnovsky (rih-nöhv'-skē), Ernst, Czech music critic; b. Janovice, June 25, 1879; d. Prague, April 25, 1934. He studied law in Prague; then music with Rietsch; became music critic of the 'Prager Tageblatt.' He publ. monographs on Spohr and Rochlitz (1904), Kittl (2 vols.; 1904, 1905), Blech (1905), Haydn (1909), Schumann (1910), Liszt (1911), Smetana (1924), etc.; compiled a bibliography on German intellectual life in Bohemia (1906-09).

Ryder, Arthur Hilton, American organist and composer; b. Plymouth, Mass., April 30, 1875; d. Newton, Mass., July 18, 1944. He studied at Harvard Univ. with Walter Spalding (theory) and J. K. Paine (composition); subsequently was church organist and choir director in Boston and neighboring towns. In 1935 he developed a system of 'Radical Harmony' which he taught at Univ. Extension Courses in Boston; also publ. songs.

Ryder, Thomas Philander, American organist and composer; b. Cohasset, Mass., June 29, 1836; d. Somerville, Mass., Dec. 2, 1887. He was for many years organist at Tremont Temple in Boston; publ. a number of piano pieces in a light vein.

Ryelandt (ri'-lahnt), Joseph, Belgian composer; b. Bruges, April 7, 1870. He studied composition with Tinel in Brussels; in 1924 was appointed director of the Bruges Cons.; was still living there in 1955. He wrote several oratorios: The Coming of the Lord (Rotterdam, 1909), Maria (Ghent, 1919), Agnus Dei (Brussels, 1921), and Christus Rex (Brussels, 1925); etc.; 5 symphonies; 3 string quartets; 7 violin sonatas; 11 piano sonatas; numerous organ pieces and songs.

Rytel, Piotr, Polish composer; b. Vilna, May 16, 1884; studied with Michalowski and Noskowski at the Warsaw Cons.; in 1918 appointed prof. of harmony there. In 1948 he conducted at the Warsaw Opera House. Among his major works are the operas: Andrzej z Chelmina (1942-43); Ijola (Warsaw, Dec. 14, 1929); Koniec Mesjasza (1935-36); Krzyzowcy (1940-41); the symph. poems Grazyna, The Corsair (after Byron), The Legend of St. George, The Dream of Dante, etc.

S

Saar, Louis Victor (Franz), composer and teacher; b. Rotterdam, Dec. 10, 1868; d. St. Louis, Nov. 23, 1937. He studied with Rheinberger in Munich (1886-89); spent one winter with Brahms in Vienna; lived in Leipzig and Berlin; in 1894 he settled in America; was accompanist for the Metropolitan Opera (1894-96); taught theory at the National Cons., N. Y. (1896-98); then at the N. Y. College of Music (1898-1906). From 1906 till 1917, he was head of the theory dept. at the Cincinnati College of Music; from 1917 to 1933, at the Chicago Musical College; from 1934 until his death, at the St. Louis Institute of Music. As a composer, he won the Mendelssohn Prize (Berlin, 1891), the Tonkünstlerpreis (Vienna, 1892), etc. He was a prolific composer; wrote about 150 op. numbers; for orch.: Rococo Suite; From the Mountain Kingdom of the Great North West (1922); Along the Columbia River (1924); Old German Masters, suite for string orch. (1930); Gondoliera, for violin and string orch.; etc.; choral works: Hallowe'en Night, A Song of Consolation, Ave Maria, etc.; a cycle, Persian Love-Songs; violin pieces; arrangements for men's chorus of 'Swedish Folk-Songs', 'Cycle of Somerset Folk-Songs', 'Old English Songs', and an 'Album of Church Classics.'

Sabaneyev (sah-bah-nyeh'-yehv), Leonid Leonidovitch, Russian writer on music; b. Moscow, Nov. 19, 1881. He studied at the Moscow Cons. with Taneyev; also took a course in mathematics at the Univ. of Moscow. In 1920 he joined the board of the newly-organized Moscow Institute of Musical Science; left Russia in 1926, and lived in Paris; eventually settled in Nice. —Publications (in Russian): Richard Wagner and the Synthesis of Arts (1913); The Development of the Harmonic Idea (1913); Medtner (1913); The Relationship of Color and Sound (1914); Scriabin (1916; 2nd rev. ed., 1923); Rhythm, an Esthetic Inquiry (1917); The 53-Degree Gamut and the Prospects of Musical Composition (1921); Music of Speech (1922); The Hebrew National School of Music (1924); History of Russian Music (1924; German ed., 1926); General History of Music (1924); Modern Russian Composers (in English; N. Y., 1927); What is Music (1928); Taneyev (Paris, 1930; in Russian); Music for the Films (in English; London, July, 1935); also The Jewish National School in Music, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1929); Musical Tendencies in Contemporary Russia, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1930); etc. He wrote 2 piano trios (1907; 1923), a violin sonata, and some other works.

Sabata, Victor de, outstanding Italian conductor and composer; b. Trieste, April 10, 1892. He studied with Saladino and Orefice at the Cons. of Milan (1901-11), winning the gold medal for his graduation; then became conductor of the Monte Carlo Opera; also conducted symph. concerts at La Scala, Milan, and at the Augusteo, Rome. In 1927 he made his American debut as guest conductor of the Cincinnati Symph. Orch., and afterwards visited the U. S. frequently as guest conductor; also conducted opera and symph. orchs. in England. As conductor of Verdi's operas he had few equals after Toscanini; he also excels in interpretations of Beethoven's symphonies. —Works: the opera, Il Macigno (La Scala, Milan, March 31, 1917; renamed Driada for its radio performance, 1935); the symph. poems Juventus (1919), La Notte di Platon (1924), and Gethsemani (1925; N. Y., Jan. 21, 1926); other works for orch.; chamber music. —Cf. R. Mucci, Victor de Sabata (Lanciano, 1937).

Sabatier. See Unger, Karoline.

Sabbatini, Galeazzo, Italian composer and theorist; b. Pesaro; d. there, 1662; was maestro di cappella in Pesaro 1626; from 1630-36 maestro to the Duke of Mirandola. His last publ. work appeared in 1639 (Venice). Author of a treatise on thorough-bass, Regola facile e breve per sonare sopra il basso continuo (Venice, 1628; 3rd ed., Rome, 1669). —Publ. 2 books of madrigals a 2-4 (1625, 1626; other eds.); 2 books of Sacrae laudes a 2-5 (1637, 1641); 1 with organ (1642); 3 books of Madrigali concertati a 2-5 (with instruments; 1627, 1630, 1636); Hymns to the Virgin Mary a 3-6 (1638); Sacri laudi e motetti a voce sola (1639).

Sabbatini, Luigi Antonio, Italian theorist; b. Albano Liziole, near Rome, 1739; d. Padua, Jan. 29, 1809. Pupil of Padre Martini at Bologna, and Vallotti at Padua, succeeding the latter as maestro at the Antonius Basilica in 1780. —Publ. Elementi teorici della musica colla pratica de' medesimi in duetti, e terzetti a canone (1789; part transl. into French by Choron); La vera idea delle musicali numeriche segnature (1799; gives an epitome of Vallotti's system); Trattato sopra le fughe musicali (1802; with fine examples by Vallotti); and Notizie sopra la vita e le opere del R. P. Fr. A. Vallotti (1780).

Sabin, Wallace Arthur, English organist; b. Culworth, Dec. 15, 1860; d. Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 8, 1937. Pupil of M. J. Monk at Banbury and T. W. Dodds at Oxford; F. R. C. O., 1890. Coming to the U. S., he settled in San Francisco, where he was organist at St. Luke's (1894-1906), at Temple Emanu-El (from 1895), and at the First Church, Scientist (from 1906). His settings of the Hebrew liturgy were publ. in Stark's 'Service Book.' He composed many part-songs for men's voices. —Cf. R. R. Rinder, Tribute to W. A. Sabin (San Francisco, 1938).

Sacchetti, Liberius Antonovitch, Russian writer on music and pedagogue; b. Kenzar, near Tambov, Aug. 30, 1852; d. St. Petersburg, March 11, 1916. He studied with Rimsky-Korsakov and others at the St. Petersburg Cons.; in 1878 was appointed to its faculty, as lecturer on musical esthetics; in 1895 became assistant librarian at the Imperial Public Library in St. Petersburg. He publ. an Outline of General Music History (St. Petersburg, 1882); A Brief Anthology of Musical History (St. Petersburg, 1896); manuals on esthetics for use at the St. Petersburg Cons., etc. He was highly regarded as a scholar and teacher in Russia.

Sacchi (sakh'-kē), Don Giovenale, Italian scholar; b. Barbio, Como, Nov. 22, 1726; d. Milan, Sept. 27, 1789. He was a member of the Barnabite monastic order, and an assiduous student of ancient music; also was distinguished as a biographer. —Publications: Del numero e delle misure delle corde musiche e loro corrispondenze (1761); Della divisione del tempo nella musica, nel ballo e nella poesia (1770); Della natura e perfezione dell' antica musica de' Greci (1778); Delle quinte successive nel contrappunto e delle regole degli accompagnamenti (1780); Vita del Cav. Don Carlo Broschi, detto Farinelli (1784); Don Placido, dialogo dove cercasi se lo studio della musica al religioso convenga o disconvenga (1786); etc.; translated Cardinal Fontana's Vita di Benedetto Marcello (1788).

Sacchini (sāhk-kē'-nē), Antonio (Maria Gasparo Gioacchino), Italian opera composer; b. Florence, June 14, 1730; d. Paris, Oct. 6, 1786. He entered the Cons. of Santa Maria di Loreto at Naples as a pupil of Francesco Durante (composition), Nicola Fiorenza (violin), and Gennaro Manna (singing). His intermezzo Fra Donato was performed at the Cons. in 1756; he subsequently wrote music for various stage productions in Naples; then proceeded to Rome, where his opera Semiramide was successfully produced in 1762. This success marked the beginning of his career as an operatic composer; thereafter he produced operas every year: Alessandro nell' Indie (Venice, 1763), Lucio Vero (Naples, Nov. 4, 1764), La Contadina in corte (Rome, 1765), and L'Isola d'amore (Rome, 1766). In 1768 he succeeded Traetta as director of the Cons. dell'Ospedaletto in Venice; his oratorio Caritas omnia vincit was brought out there on April 16, 1769. He then went to Munich and produced there his operas L'Eroe cinese

(1769) and Scipione in Cartagena (1770). In 1772 he traveled to London with Venanzio Rauzzini, and while there presented the following operas: Tamerlano (1773), Montezuma (1775), Erifile (1776), L'Amore soldato (May 5, 1778), Il Calandrino e Pavarolo deluso (1778), and Enea e Lavinia (1779). In 1781 he received an invitation from Marie Antoinette, through the 'intendant des menus-plaisirs,' to come to Paris. His name was already known in France, since his opera Isola d'amore, arranged as La Colonie ('comic opera imitated from the Italian'), had been produced in Paris on Aug. 16, 1775. He arrived in Paris in August, 1781, and was forthwith commissioned to write 3 works at a fee of 10,000 francs each. For this purpose he adapted his Italian opera Armida e Rinaldo (Milan, 1772) to a French text as Renaud, 'tragédie lyrique' in 3 acts (produced at the Académie Royale de Musique, Feb. 25, 1783) and his opera Il Gran Cid (Rome, 1769) as Chimène (Fontainebleau, Nov. 18, 1783); the 3rd opera, Dardanus, was a new work; it was staged at the Trianon, Versailles, Sept. 18, 1784, in the presence of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette. In Paris Sacchini found himself in unintended rivalry with Piccinni as a representative of Italian music in the famous artistic war against the proponents of the French operas of Gluck; Sacchini's most successful opera, however, was to the French text, Oedipe à Colonne, first presented at Versailles (Jan. 4, 1786) and produced at the Paris Opéra (Feb. 1, 1787) after Sacchini's death. It held the stage for half a century, and there were sporadic revivals later on. His last opera, also to a French libretto, Arvire et Evelina, was left unfinished, and was produced posthumously (Paris Opéra, April 29, 1788; 3rd act added by J. B. Rey). Sacchini's music was a typical product of the Italian operatic art of his time. It possessed melodious grace, but was lacking in dramatic development. The undistinguished style of Sacchini's productions was probably the reason for the disappearance of his operas from the active repertory; Piccinni fared much better in comparison. —Cf. A. Jullien, La Cour et l'opéra sous Louis XVI: Marie Antoinette et Sacchini (Paris, 1878); J.-G. Prod'homme, Écrits de musiciens des XVe-XVIIIe siècles (Paris, 1912); J.-G. Prod'homme, Un Musicien napolitain à la cour de Louis XVI, in 'Le Ménestrel' (Dec. 11 and Dec. 18, 1925); V. Morelli, Antonio Sacchini, in 'Vita musicale italiana' (1926, Nos. 7-8); U. Prota-Giurleo, Sacchini non nacque a Pozzuoli (Naples, 1952, proving that Sacchini was born in Florence and not in the vicinity of Naples); F. Schlitzer, Antonio Sacchini: schede e appunti per una sua storia teatrale (Siena, 1955). See also A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; 2nd ed., Geneva, 1955).

Sacher, Paul, Swiss conductor; b. Basel, April 28, 1906. He studied with Karl Nef (music theory) and Weingartner (conducting). In 1926 he founded the Kammer Orchester in Basel; commissioned special works from a number of celebrated contemporary composers (among them Richard Strauss, Hindemith, Honegger, etc.) and presented them for the first time with his ensemble; in 1933, founded the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis; from 1941, was leader of the Collegium Musicum in Zürich; publ. Alte und Neue Musik (Zürich, 1951), annotated catalogue of the 25 years of the Basel Kammer Orchester. Sacher made his American début in N. Y. on April 3, 1955, conducting a concert of the Collegiate Chorale at Carnegie Hall.

Sachs, Curt, eminent musicologist and authority on musical instruments; b. Berlin, June 29, 1881. While attending the Gymnasium there, he studied piano and composition with L. Schrattenholz and clarinet with Rausch; entered Berlin Univ.; studied history of music with Oskar Fleischer, and also history of art; Dr. phil., 1904; after some years as art critic, he turned to musicology, and studied with Kretzschmar and Joh. Wolf; specialized in the history of musical instruments; in 1919 appointed curator of the Museum of Musical Instruments in Berlin, and in 1920, prof. of the National Academy of Music there; also prof. at the Univ. of Berlin. In 1933 he was compelled to leave Germany; went to Paris as Chargé de Mission at the Musée de l'Homme; was visiting prof. at the Sorbonne. In 1937 he settled in the U. S.; was lecturer at the Graduate School of Liberal Arts of N. Y. Univ. (1937-38); consultant to the N. Y. Public Library (1937-52); adjunct prof., Columbia Univ. (from 1953); president of the American Musicological Society (1948-50). In 1956, he was made Dr. phil. (honoris causa) of West Berlin Univ.—Publications: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Berlin bis zum Jahre 1800 (1908); Musik und Oper am kurbrandenburgischen Hof (1910); Reallexikon der Musikinstrumente (1913; very valuable); Systematik der Musikinstrumente (with E. von Hornbostel, in the 'Zeitschrift für Ethnologie,' 1914); Die Musikinstrumente Indiens und Indonesiens (1915); Die litauischen Musikinstrumente ('Internationales Archiv für Ethnographie,' 1915); Handbuch der Musikinstrumentenkunde (1920; 2nd ed., 1930; very valuable); Die Musikinstrumente des alten Ägyptens (1921); Katalog der Staatlichen Instrumentensammlung (1922); Das Klavier (1923); Die Musikinstrumente ('Jedermanns Bücherei,' 1923); Die modernen Musikinstrumente (1923); Musik des Altertums ('Jedermanns Bücherei,' 1924); Die Musik der Antike (in Bücken's 'Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft'; 1928); Geist und Werden der Musikinstrumente (1929); Vergleichende Musikwissenschaft in ihren Grundzügen (1930); Eine Weltgeschichte des Tanzes (1933; in English as World History of the Dance, N. Y., 1937); Les Instruments de musique de Madagascar (Paris, 1938); The History of Musical Instruments (N. Y., 1940); The Rise of Music in the Ancient World (N. Y., 1943); The Commonwealth of Art (N. Y., 1946); Our Musical Heritage (N. Y., 1948; 2nd ed., 1955); Rhythm and Tempo, a Study in Music History (N. Y., 1953); valuable essays in various European and American periodicals; compiled and edited The Evolution of Piano Music (N. Y., 1944).—Cf. E. Hertzmann, Alfred Einstein and Curt Sachs, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1941); K. Hahn, Verzeichnis der wissenschaftlichen Arbeiten von Curt Sachs, in 'Acta Musicologica' (vol. XXIX, pp. 94-106).

Sachs (zähks), Hans, foremost poet of the Meistersinger; b. Nuremberg, Nov. 5, 1494; d. there, Jan. 19, 1576. He wrote over 4,000 poems ('Meisterschulgedichte'), 1,700 tales, etc., and 208 dramatic poems; also invented numerous 'Weisen' (melodies). He is the central figure in Wagner's opera, Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg. The original melodies of a large number of the poems are preserved in Das Singebuch des Adam Puschmann (ed. by G. Münzer, 1907).—Cf. Ch. Schweitzer, Un Poète allemand au XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle: Étude sur la vie et les œuvres de H. Sachs (Nancy, 1889); K. Drescher, Studien zu H. Sachs (Marburg, 1891); R. Genée, H. Sachs und seine Zeit (Leipzig, 1894; 2nd ed., 1901); B. Suphan, H. Sachs: Humanitätszeit und Gegenwart (Weimar, 1895); K. Drescher, Nürnberger Meistersinger-protokolle von 1575-1689 (2 vols.; Tübingen, 1898); K. Mey, Der Meistergesang (1901); H. Holzschuher, H. Sachs in seiner Bedeutung für unsere Zeit (Berlin, 1906); E. Mummehoff, Musikpflege und Musikaufführungen im alten Nürnberg (Leipzig, 1908); H. Nutzhorn, Meistersänger H.

Sachs (Copenhagen, 1911); F. H. Ellis, H. Sachs Studies (Bloomington, Ind., 1941).

Sachs, Léo, composer; b. Frankfurt, Germany, April 3, 1856; d. Paris, Nov. 13, 1930. He was active in the field of modern music in Paris; composed several symph. poems (Retour des cloches; Sur l'eau; Lamento); a piano quintet; 2 string quartets; a piano trio; 3 violin sonatas; a viola sonata; a cello sonata; a Petite suite for string quartet; 24 preludes for piano. His total output amounts to nearly 200 op. numbers. His style of composition was mildly modernistic.

Sachse, Leopold, opera stage director; b. Berlin, Jan. 5, 1880; studied at the Cons. of Cologne; then in Vienna; in 1902 joined the Strasbourg Opera as baritone; in 1907, general manager of the Stadttheater in Münster; in 1913 organized the Sachse Opera in Berlin; from 1922 to 1933 was with the Hamburg Staatsoper. In 1935 he was engaged as stage director of Wagner's operas at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., retiring in 1943; in 1945, became stage director of the N. Y. City Opera; in 1951, organized the 'Opera in English' Co. at Cooper Union, N. Y. From 1936 to 1943 he taught stage technique at the Juilliard Graduate School, N. Y.

Sack, Erna, German coloratura contralto; b. Spandau-Berlin, Feb. 6, 1906. She studied in Prague and in Berlin; made her 1st operatic appearance at the Municipal Theater in Bielefeld; then with the Breslau and Dresden Operas; also at the Charlottenburg-Berlin Opera; sang at the Salzburg festivals, in Italy, and in England; made her first American appearance as concert singer in 1937-38, and revisited the U. S. in 1954. In 1953 she gave a series of concerts in Australia.

Sacratì, Francesco (Paolo), Italian composer; b. Parma, c. 1600; d. Modena, May 20, 1650. He was one of the earliest composers for the opera theaters that began to be opened in Venice after 1637; was also a pioneer of 'opera buffa' before the rise of the Neapolitan school. He wrote an opera, La Delia, for the opening of the Teatro Grimani dei Santi Giovanni e Paolo in Venice (Jan. 20, 1639); there followed La finta pazzia (Teatro Novissimo, Venice; Jan. 14, 1641); this was also one of the earliest Italian operas performed in Paris (Salle du Petit Bourbon, Dec. 14, 1645); other operas by Sacratì were: Bellerofonte (1642), Ve- nere gelosa (Padua, 1643), Ulisse errante (1644), Proserpina rapita (1644), La Semiramide in India (1648), L'Isola d'Alcina (Bologna, 1648). In 1649 he was appointed maestro di cappella at the court of Modena, but died a few months after the appointment. —Cf. Henry Prunières, L'Opéra italien en France avant Lully (Paris, 1913). See also A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; pp. 10-11).

Sadero, Geni, Italian singer; b. Trieste, May 12, 1886. She specialized in collecting and singing regional folksongs of Italy; made a début in opera at Milan (1914), but did not pursue a dramatic career. In 1919 she went to Paris, where she gave lecture-recitals on Italian popular music; in 1936, returned to Italy and devoted herself to teaching; joined the staff of the Academy of Santa Cecilia in Rome. She publ. 2 collections of Italian songs (in Milan and N. Y.); also original songs with piano accompaniment. —Cf. I. Schwerké, Kings Jazz and David (Paris, 1927).

Saenger, Gustav, American music editor and arranger; b. New York, May 31, 1865; d. there, Dec. 10, 1935. He studied violin with Leopold Damrosch and others; was an orchestral violinist; then conducted theater orchestras in N. Y.; in 1897 was engaged as arranger for Carl Fischer, Inc., and in 1909 became editor-in-chief of Fischer's publications; also edited the Fischer periodicals, the 'Metronome' (from 1900) and the 'Mus. Observer' (1904-29). Besides a vast number of arrangements, he publ. pieces for violin and piano (5 Silhouettes; 3 Concert Miniatures; etc.); also a New School of Melody.

Saenger, Oscar, American singing teacher; b. Brooklyn, Jan. 5, 1868; d. Washington, April 20, 1929. He sang in church as a boy; studied voice with J. Bouhy at the National Cons. in N. Y., and taught there from 1889 to 1897; made his début with the Hinrichs Grand Opera Co. in 1891; after a brief tour in Germany and Austria, returned to America, and devoted himself entirely to teaching. Among his students were many well-known singers (Marie Rappold, Paul Althouse, Mabel Garrison, etc.).

Saerchinger, César, editor and writer; b. Aachen, Germany, Oct. 23, 1884. He studied singing with his mother (a pupil of G. B. Lamperti); settled in America in 1902, and continued his musical education in N. Y. Still as a young man, he began writing biographical articles for various American encyclopedias; was managing editor and contributor to 'The Art of Music' (14 vols., 1915-17); from 1919 to 1930 was foreign correspondent of the 'N. Y. Evening Post' and the 'Musical Courier'; lived in Berlin (1920-25) and London (1925-37); then returned to N. Y. He edited 'International Who's Who in Music and Musical Gazetteer' (N. Y., 1918); publ. Voice of Europe (N. Y., 1937); Artur Schnabel (London, 1957).

Saeverud, Harald, prominent Norwegian composer; b. Bergen, April 17, 1897. He studied at the Bergen Music Academy with B. Holmsen and at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin with F. E. Koch; conducting with Clemens Krauss. He began to compose very early, and at the age of 15 conducted in Bergen a program of his symph. pieces (Dec. 12, 1912). —Works: 7 symphonies (1919, 1923, 1926, 1937, 1941, 1943, 1944), of which the 6th, Sinfonia Dolorosa (Bergen, May 27, 1943), is the best known; the 7th Psalm Symph., is with chorus; cello concerto (1930); oboe concerto (1938); divertimento for flute and strings (1939); numerous Slåtter (dances in the Norwegian folk manner) for piano (also for orch.); new music for Ibsen's Peer Gynt (Oslo March 2, 1948). —Cf. S. Lind, Harald Saeverud, in 'Nordisk Musikkultur' (Oslo, 1952, no. 4; with a list of works).

Safonov (sah-foh'-nov), Vassily Ilyitch, eminent Russian pianist, conductor, and pedagogue; b. Ishtcherskaya, Caucasus, Feb. 6, 1852; d. Kislovodsk, March 13, 1918. He studied at the Cons. of St. Petersburg with Leschetizky and Brassin (piano) and Zarembo (theory); made his début as pianist with the Imperial Russian Music Society in St. Petersburg, on Nov. 22, 1880; then taught piano at the St. Petersburg Cons. (1881-85); in 1885 was appointed to the faculty of the Moscow Cons., and in 1889 became its director, resigning in 1905; also conducted the symph. concerts of the Imperial Russian Music Society in Moscow; was the first modern conductor to dispense with the baton; achieved international fame as a forceful and impassioned interpreter of Russian music; conducted in almost all the capitals of Europe; on March 5, 1904, was engaged as guest conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic, obtaining sensational success; as a consequence, was appointed regular conductor for 3 seasons (1906-09; was succeeded by Gustav Mahler); at the same time he was also director of the National Cons. in N. Y. After his return to Russia, he was appointed permanent conductor of the Imperial Russian Music Society in St. Petersburg. He publ. A New Formula for the Piano Teacher and Piano Student (Boston, 1916).

Safranek-Kavić (shaf-rah'-nek-kah'-vitch), Lujo, Croatian composer; b. Zagreb, Oct. 12, 1882; d. there, July 18, 1940. He wrote a symph. suite for violin and orch., Guslar (inspired by the playing of the gusla, the Slovakian national instrument), 2 operas (Hasanaginica and The Queen of Medvedgrad), chamber music, and songs.

Sagittarius. See Schütz.

Saint-Foix (săn-fwăh'), Georges (du Parc Poullain, comte) de, eminent French musicologist; b. Paris, March 2, 1874; d. Aix-en-Provence, May 26, 1954. He was a pupil of d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum. His researches in the music of the 18th century brought to light some very important facts. He publ. Un Maître inconnu de Mozart (with T. de Wyzewa), in 'Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (Nov., 1908); Contribution à l'histoire de la symphonie française vers 1750 (with L. de La Laurencie), in 'L'Année musicale' (1911); Chronologie de l'œuvre instrumentale de J. B. Sammartini, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' XV (1914); M. Clementi; Un Quatuor d'airs dialogués de Mozart; Mozart, disciple de Bach et Haendel (all in 'Bulletin de la Société Union Musicologique,' 1918-21); Les Débuts de Gluck à Milan; Le dernier concerto pour violon de Mozart (ib. II, 1 [1922]); Quatre quatuors inconnus de Mozart (ib. III, 2 [1923]); Clementi, Forerunner of Beethoven, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1931); the section Sonate et symphonie in Lavignac's 'Encyclopédie' (Part II, vol. 5; 1930); other articles in various journals. His most valuable book, and one of the most important on Mozart since Jahn, is W. A. Mozart, Sa vie musicale et son œuvre de Penfance à la pleine maturité (1756-77) (2 vols., 1912; with T. de Wyzewa; 3rd vol. [1777-84] by Saint-Foix alone, publ. 1937; 4th vol. [1784-88], publ. 1940; 5th vol. [1788-91], publ. 1946); also publ. Les Symphonies de Mozart (Paris, 1932; in English, London, 1947).

Saint-George, George, notable player on the viola d'amore; b. (of English parents) Leipzig, Nov. 6, 1841; d. London, Jan. 5, 1924. He studied piano, violin, and theory in Dresden and Prague; his violin teacher, Moritz Mildner of Prague, had a fine viola d'amore, which he lent to Saint-George for practicing; he made such progress on this little-used instrument that he decided to adopt it as a specialty. About 1862 he settled in London and became a manufacturer of string instruments; gave performances on the Welsh crwth for the 'Hon. Soc. Cymmrodorion'; also played the viola d'amore in duos with his son, Henry Saint-George, who assisted him on the viola da gamba.

Saint-George, Henry, son of the preceding; b. London, Sept. 26, 1866; d. there, Jan. 30, 1917. He studied the violin with his father, with whom he subsequently gave concerts, playing works for old instruments; was editor of 'The Strad' for 4 years; publ. The Bow: Its History, Manufacture and Use (1895; 3rd ed., 1922); The Place of Science in Music (1905); Fiddles: Their Selection, Preservation and Betterment (1910).

Saint-Georges (san-zohrhzh'), Joseph Boulogne Chevalier de, violinist; b. Guadeloupe, Dec. 25, 1745; d. Paris, June 12, 1799. He studied with Leclair in Paris; acquired notoriety by eccentric behavior at concerts; wrote an opera, L'Amant anonyme (1780), 5 violin concertos, and several violin sonatas with bass.—Cf. L. de La Laurencie, L'Ecole française de violon, vol. 2.

Saint-Luban (săn-lŭ-băn'), Léon de, violinist and composer; b. Turin, July 5, 1805; d. Berlin, Feb. 13, 1850. After filling various positions as a theater violinist, he pursued further studies with Spohr; was concertmaster at the Josephstadt Theater in Vienna (1827-30); then held a similar position at the Königstadt Theater in Berlin (1830-47). He composed 2 operas, König Branors Schwert and Der Vetter des Doctor Faust; 5 violin concertos; 2 string quintets, 2 piano trios, a violin sonata, and 19 string quartets. He lacked originality, but possessed a solid craft of composition.

Saint-Requier (reh-k'yä'), Léon, French composer, conductor, and music editor; b. Rouen, Aug. 8, 1872; studied with Vincent d'Indy, Guilmant, and Charles Bordes; taught harmony at the Schola Cantorum (1900-34) and at the École César Franck (1934-44); was active as choral conductor at various Paris churches; edited the collection 'Palestrina' (sacred songs of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries). He composed a Christmas motet Il est né le divin enfant (using some folk melodies; 1924); the oratorio, La Mort du doux Jésus (1932); Messe de grande louange (1946); Le Sermon sur la montagne (1949); Messe de St. Jean Apôtre (1957); other religious works.

SAINT-SAËNS

Saint-Saëns (sän-sahns'), (Charles-) Camille, celebrated French composer; b. Paris, Oct. 9, 1835; d. Algiers, Dec. 16, 1921. His widowed mother sent him to his great-aunt, Charlotte Masson, who taught him to play piano. He proved exceptionally gifted, and gave a performance in a Paris salon before he was 5; at 6 he began to compose; at 7 he became a private pupil of Stamaty; so rapid was his progress that he made his pianistic début at the Salle Pleyel on May 6, 1846, playing a Mozart concerto and a movement from Beethoven's C minor concerto, with orch. After studying harmony with Pierre Maleden, he entered the Paris Cons., where his teachers were Benoist (organ) and Halévy (composition). He won the 2nd prize for organ in 1849, and the 1st prize in 1851. In 1852 he competed unsuccessfully for the Grand Prix de Rome, and failed again in a second attempt in 1864, when he was already a composer of some stature. His Ode à Sainte Cécile for voice and orch. was awarded the 1st prize of the Société Sainte-Cécile (1852). On Dec. 11, 1853, his 1st symph. was performed; Gounod wrote him a letter of praise, containing a prophetic phrase regarding the 'obligation de devenir un grand maître.' From 1853 to the end of 1857 Saint-Saëns was organist at the church of Saint-Merry in Paris; in 1858 he succeeded Lefébure-Wély as organist at the Madeleine. This important position he filled with distinction, and soon acquired a great reputation as virtuoso on the organ and a master of improvisation. He resigned in 1877, and devoted himself entirely to composition and conducting; also continued to appear as pianist and organist. From 1861 to 1865 he taught piano at the École Niedermeyer; among his pupils were André Messager and Gabriel Fauré. Saint-Saëns was one of the founders of the Société Nationale de Musique (1871), established for the encouragement of French composers, but withdrew in 1886 when Vincent d'Indy proposed to include works by foreign composers in its program. In 1875 he married Marie Truffot; their 2 sons died in infancy; they separated in 1881, but were never legally divorced; Madame Saint-Saëns died in Bordeaux on Jan. 30, 1950, at the age of 95. In 1891 Saint-Saëns established a museum in Dieppe (his father's birthplace), to which he gave his manuscripts and his collection of paintings and other art objects. On Oct. 27, 1907, he witnessed the unveiling of his own statue (by Marqueste) in the court foyer of the opera house in Dieppe. He received many honors: in 1868 he was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor; in 1884, Officer; in 1900, Grand-Officer; and in 1913, 'Grand-Croix' (the highest rank); in 1881 he was elected to the Institut de France; was also a member of many foreign organizations; received an honorary Mus. D. degree at Cambridge Univ. He visited the U. S. for the 1st time in 1906; was a representative of the French government at the Panama Exposition in 1915, and conducted his choral work with orch., Hail California (San Francisco, June 19, 1915), written for the occasion. In 1916, at the age of 81, he made his 1st tour of South America; continued to appear in public as conductor of his own works almost to the time of his death. He took part as conductor and pianist in a festival of his works in Athens, Greece, in May, 1920. He played a program of his piano pieces at the Saint-Saëns museum in Dieppe on Aug. 6, 1921. For the winter he went to Algiers, where he died. —The position of Saint-Saëns in French music was very important. His abilities as a performer were extraordinary; he aroused the admiration of Wagner during the latter's stay in Paris (1860-61) by playing at sight the entire scores of Wagner's operas; curiously, Saint-Saëns achieved greater recognition in Germany than in France during the initial stages of his career. His most famous opera, Samson et Dalila, was produced in Weimar (in 1877), under the direction of Edouard Lassen, to whom the work was suggested by Liszt; it was not performed in France until nearly 13 years later, in Rouen. He played his 1st and 3rd piano concertos for the first time at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig. Solidity of contrapuntal fabric, instrumental elaboration, fullness of sonority in orchestration, and a certain harmonic saturation were the chief characteristics of his music, qualities as yet not fully exploited by French composers at the time, and the French public preferred the lighter type of music. However, Saint-Saëns overcame this initial opposition, and towards the end of his life was regarded as an embodiment of French traditionalism. The shock of the German invasion of France in World War I made him abandon his former predilection for German music, and he wrote virulent articles against German art. He was unalterably opposed to modern music, and looked askance at Debussy; he regarded later manifestations of musical modernism as outrages, and was outspoken in his opinions. That Saint-Saëns possessed a fine sense of musical characterization, and true Gallic wit, is demonstrated by his instrumental suite, Carnival of the Animals, which he wrote in 1886 but did not allow to be published during his lifetime. He also possessed a considerable literary talent; publ. 2 books of poetry. — Works: Operas: La Princesse jaune (Paris, June 12, 1872), Le Timbre d'argent (Paris, Feb. 23, 1877), Samson et Dalila (Weimar, Dec. 2, 1877; Rouen, March 3, 1890; Paris Opéra, Nov. 23, 1892; New Orleans, Jan. 4, 1893; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1895), Étienne Marcel (Lyons, Feb. 8, 1879), Henry VIII (Paris, March 5, 1883), Prosperpine (Paris, March 16, 1887), Ascanio (Paris, March 21, 1890), Phryné (Paris, May 24, 1893), Les Barbares (Paris, Oct. 23, 1901), Hélène (Monte Carlo, Feb. 18, 1904), L'Ancêtre (Monte Carlo, Feb. 24, 1906), Déjanire (Monte Carlo, March 14, 1911). Incidental music: Antigone (Paris, Nov. 21, 1893), Andromaque, by Racine (Paris, Feb. 7, 1903), On ne badine pas avec l'amour, by Alfred de Musset (Paris, Feb. 8, 1917); a ballet, Javotte (Lyons, Dec. 3, 1896). For orch.: symph. No. 1 (Paris, Dec. 18, 1853); symph. No. 2 (Leipzig, Feb. 20, 1859); symph. No. 3 (with organ, London, May 19, 1886); Le Rouet d'Omphale, symph. poem (1869; Paris, Jan. 9, 1872); Marche héroïque (Paris, Dec. 10, 1871); Phaëton, symph. poem (Paris, Dec. 7, 1873); Danse macabre, symph. poem (one of his most successful works; Paris, Jan. 24, 1875); La Jeunesse d'Hercule, symph. poem (Paris, Jan. 28, 1877); Suite algérienne (Paris, Dec. 19, 1880); Une Nuit à Lisbonne (Paris, Jan. 23, 1881); Le Carnaval des Animaux (contains, as its 13th section, the popular Swan; Paris, Feb. 26, 1922); 5 piano concertos (all 1st performed by Saint-Saëns): No. 1, D major (Leipzig, Oct. 26, 1865), No. 2, G minor (Paris, May 6, 1868), No. 3, E♭ major (Leipzig, Nov. 25, 1869), No. 4, C minor (Paris, Oct. 31, 1875), No. 5, F major (Paris, June 3, 1896); 3 violin concertos: No. 1 (Concertstück), A major (Paris, April 4, 1867); No. 2, C major (1877); No. 3, B minor (Paris, Jan. 2, 1881); Introduction et Rondo Capriccioso, for violin and orch. (1863; 1st performance 50 years later, Paris, Nov. 6, 1913); 2 cello concertos: No. 1, A minor (Paris, Jan. 19, 1873; still extremely popular; No. 2, D minor (1902); Africa, fantasy for piano and orch. (Paris, Oct. 25, 1891). Chamber music: piano quintet (1858), 2 piano trios (1869; 1892), piano quartet (1875), septet for trumpet, strings, and piano (1881), 2 string quartets (1899; 1919), 2 violin sonatas (1885; 1896), 2 cello sonatas (1873; 1905), oboe sonata (1921), clarinet sonata (1921), bassoon sonata (1921). Choral works: Oratorio de Noël (1863), Le Déluge, oratorio (Paris, March 5, 1876), Hail California, for chorus and orch. (1915), Hymne à la Paix, for chorus and orch. (1919); numerous choruses a cappella; song cycles: Mélodies persanes (1870) and La Cendre rouge (1915); about 100 other songs; La Fiancée du timbalier, for voice and orch. (Paris, Feb. 19, 1888); études and various other pieces for piano; also pieces for piano, 4-hands and 2 pianos; 169 op. numbers in all. Saint-Saëns completed Guiraud's opera Frédégonde (Paris Opéra, Dec. 18, 1895); publ. numerous arrangements of works by Classical and Romantic composers; edited Gluck's Armide, Orphée, and Écho et Narcisse in the Pelletan edition (1875-1902), the Durand ed. of Rameau's works (from 1895), and Mozart's piano sonatas (1915). — Writings: Notice sur H. Reber (1881); Matérialisme et musique (1882); Harmonie et mélodie (1885; a collection of essays, chiefly on Wagner); Notes sur les décors de théâtre dans l'antiquité romaine (1886); Ch. Gounod et le Don Juan de Mozart (1894); Problèmes et mystères (1894); Portraits et souvenirs (1899); Essai sur les Lyres et Cithares antiques (1902); École buissonnière (1913); Au Courant de la vie (1914); Germanophilie (1916); Les Idées de M. Vincent d'Indy (1919); Outspoken Essays on Music (London and N. Y., 1922; transl. of several of preceding). — BIBLIOGRAPHY: C. Kit and P. Loanda, Musique savante. Sur la musique de M. S.-S. (Lille, 1889); Blondel, C. S.-S. et son cinquantenaire artistique (Paris, 1896); C. Bellaigue, C. S.-S. (Paris, 1899); E. Solenière, C. S.-S. (Paris, 1899); O. Neitzel, C. S.-S. (Berlin, 1899); P. Locard, Les Maîtres contemporains de l'Orgue (Paris, 1900); A. Hervey, French Music in the 19th Century (London, 1903); E. Baumann, Les grandes formes de la musique: L'Œuvre de S.-S. (Paris, 1905; new ed., 1923); L. Aubin, Le Drame lyrique (Tours, 1908); R. Rolland, Musiciens d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1908; English transl., 1914); A. Jullien, Musiciens d'hier et d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1910); O. Séré, Musiciens français d'aujourd'hui (rev. ed., 1921); J. Bonnerot, C. S.-S. (Paris, 1914; 2nd ed., 1922); L. Augé de Lassus, S.-S. (Paris, 1914); J. Montargis, C. S.-S. (Paris, 1919); Funérailles de S.-S. (collection of speeches, Paris, 1921); J. Chantavoine, L'Œuvre dramatique de C. S.-S. (Paris, 1921); A. Hervey, S.-S. (London, 1921); W. Lyle, C. S.-S., His Life and Art (London, 1923); G. Servières, S.-S. (Paris, 1923; 2nd ed., 1930); L. Laloy, Cinquante ans de musique française, 1874-1923 (1924); A. Dandelot, S.-S. (Paris, 1930); J. Handschin, C. S.-S. (Zürich, 1930); J. Normand, S.-S. (1930); L. Schneider, Une Heure avec S.-S. (1930); J. Langlois, C. S.-S. (Moulins, 1934); R. Dumaine, Les Origines normandes de C. S.-S. (Rouen, 1937); René Fauchois, La Vie et l'œuvre prodigieuse de C. S.-S. (Paris, 1938); D. Brook, Five Great French Composers (London, 1946); J. Chantavoine, C. S.-S. (Paris, 1947). See also 'Le Monde musical' (Oct. 31, 1901) and 'Musica' (June, 1907), special numbers devoted entirely to S.-S., containing numerous portraits and essays by eminent writers. —Durand publ. Catalogue général et thématique des œuvres de C. S.-S. (1897; revised ed., 1907).

SAINT-SAËNS

Sainton (sân-tohn'), Prosper, violinist; b. Toulouse, June 5, 1813; d. London, Oct. 17, 1890. He was a pupil of Habeneck at the Paris Cons., winning 1st prize for violin playing in 1834; was prof. at the Cons. of Toulouse (1840-44); went to England in 1844; appointed prof. at the Royal Academy of Music in 1845; became concertmaster of the London Philharmonic (1846-54), at Covent Garden (1847-71), and at Her Majesty's Theatre (1871-80). He married (1860) Charlotte Helen Dolby, a contralto (b. London, May 17, 1821; d. there, Feb. 18, 1885). Sainton wrote 2 violin concertos and several violin solos; his wife composed some songs and choruses.

Sala, Nicola, Italian composer and theorist; b. Tocco-Gaudio, near Benevento, April 7, 1713; d. Naples, Aug. 31, 1801. He was a pupil of Fago, Abos, and Leo at the Cons. della Pietà de' Turchini, Naples; apparently was not engaged as a teacher there until his old age; was appointed 2nd maestro when he was 74, in 1787, and 1st maestro 6 years later; continued to teach until 1799. It was during his tenure at the Cons. that he publ. his most celebrated theoretical work, Regole del contrappunto pratico (3 vols., 1794; reprinted by Choron in Paris, 1808, as Principii di composizione delle scuole d'Italia). He brought out several operas: Vologeso (Rome, 1737), Zenobia (Naples, Jan. 12, 1761), Demetrio (Naples, Dec. 12, 1762), and Merope (Naples, Aug. 13, 1769); also an oratorio, Giuditta (1780), Masses, litanies, and other religious works.

Salabert, Francis, French music publisher; b. Paris, July 27, 1884; d. in an airplane crash at Shannon, Ireland, Dec. 28, 1946. The Editions Salabert was founded by his father, Édouard Salabert, in 1896; at the latter's death in 1903, Francis Salabert took over the management. A professional musician and composer in his own right, he made a series of practical arrangements for small orch. of numerous classical and modern works, which were widely used. Editions Salabert expanded greatly through the purchase of the stock of orchestral and other music of the firms Gaudet (1927), Mathot (1930), Senart (1941), Rouart-Lerolle (1942), and Deiss (1946). On the death of Francis Salabert, his widow assumed the directorship.

Salaman, Charles Kensington, English pianist; b. London, March 3, 1814; d. there, June 23, 1901. He studied with Charles Neate in London and with Henri Herz in Paris. Returning to London, he took active part in musical affairs; in 1853 he founded, with Lucas Blagrove and others, the 'Concerti da camera'; from 1837 to 1855 was an associate of the Philharmonic Society; in 1849 he was a founder of an amateur choral society in London; co-founder, in 1858, of the Musical Society of London; was one of the founders of the Musical Association in 1874. He wrote a comic opera, Pickwick (London, 1889); about 100 choral works for the synagogue; many anthems, part-songs, piano pieces; also many songs to English, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew texts.

Salas Viú, Vicente, Spanish-Chilean musicologist; b. Madrid, Jan. 29, 1911. He studied academic subjects at the Univ. of Madrid; music with Rodolfo Halffter; wrote for various literary and musical publications until 1939, when he emigrated to Chile; settled in Santiago. He published a very valuable book, La Creación musical en Chile 1900-1951 (Santiago, 1952), in 2 sections, embracing a general account of musical activities in Chile and detailed biographies of 40 Chilean composers; also La última luz de Mozart (Santiago, 1949); Momentos decisivos en la música (Buenos Aires, 1957).

Salazar, Adolfo, eminent Spanish musicologist; b. Madrid, March 6, 1890; studied with Manuel de Falla and Pérez Casas. In 1914 he became editor-in-chief of the 'Revista Musical Hispano-Americana' (until 1918); from 1918 to 1936 was music critic of the influential Madrid daily 'El Sol'; was founder and later secretary of the Sociedad Nacional de Música (1915-22). During the final period of the Spanish Civil War he was cultural attaché at the Spanish embassy in Washington (1938-39); then settled in Mexico City as writer and teacher. —Publications: Música y músicos de hoy (Madrid, 1928), Sinfonía y ballet (Madrid, 1929); La Música contemporánea en España (Madrid, 1930), La Música actual en Europa y sus problemas (Madrid, 1935), El Siglo romántico (Madrid, 1935; new ed. as Los grandes compositores de la época romántica, 1955); La Música en el siglo XX (Madrid, 1936); Música y sociedad en el siglo XX (Mexico, 1939), Las grandes estructuras de la música (Mexico, 1940), La Rosa de los vientos en la música europea . . . (Mexico, 1940; reissued in 1954 as Conceptos fundamentales en la historia de la música); Forma y expresión en la música; ensayo sobre la formación de los géneros en la música instrumental (Mexico, 1941), Introducción en la música actual (Mexico, 1941), Los grandes períodos en la historia de la música (Mexico, 1941), Poesía y música en lengua vulgar y sus antecedentes en la edad media (Mexico, 1943), La Música en la sociedad europea (Mexico, 1942-46; a monumental work; 4 vols.; covers the entire period of music history until modern times), La Música moderna (Buenos Aires, 1944; in English as Music in Our Time, N. Y., 1946), Música, instrumentos y danzas en las obras de Cervantes (Mexico, 1948), La Danza y el ballet (Mexico, 1949), La Música, como proceso histórico de su invención (Mexico, 1950), J. S. Bach (Mexico, 1951), La Música de España (Buenos Aires, 1953); several other smaller works, brochures and pamphlets on a variety of subjects. Salazar is also a composer; wrote 3 symphonic works: Paisajes, Estampas, and Don Juan de los Infernos; songs to words by Verlaine; piano pieces.

Saldoni, Baltasar, Spanish composer and lexicographer; b. Barcelona, Jan. 4, 1807; d. Madrid, Dec. 3, 1889. He was a pupil of Mateo Ferrer at Montserrat and of Carnicer in Madrid. In 1826 he produced in Madrid his light opera, El Triunfo del amor, and a series of Italian operas: Saladino e Clotilde (1833), Ipermestra (1838), and Cleonice regina di Siria (1840); also 2 Spanish operas, Boabdil (1845) and Guzmán el Bueno (1855). He achieved his best successes with the zarzuelas El Rey y la costurera (1853), La Corte de Mónaco (1857), and Los Maridos en las máscaras (1864). In 1840 he was appointed prof. of singing at the Madrid Cons. His magnum opus as a scholar are the Diccionario biográfico-bibliográfico de efemérides de músicos españoles, in 4 vols. (Madrid, 1868-81), to which a supplementary volume was added, in the form of a chronology of births and deaths of Spanish musicians, day by day, year by year, with exhaustive biographical notes. This monumental compilation, upon which Saldoni worked nearly 40 years, contains (inevitably) a number of errors, but in the absence of other musicographical works on Spanish musicians, it still retains considerable documentary value.

Sales, Pietro Pompeo, Italian composer; b. Brescia, 1719; d. Hanau, Germany, 1797. Little is known about his early life; when a devastating earthquake destroyed his home in Italy, he went to Germany; in 1763 was in the service of the Prince-Bishop of Augsburg as Kapellmeister; from 1768 occupied a similar position with the Elector at Coblenz, where Burney met him in 1772. After the French invasion of 1797 he fled to Hanau, where he died shortly afterwards. He also visited London. His operas had performances in Germany and Italy, as well as in London; he also composed oratorios, church music, instrumental works; a piano sonata is reprinted in Haffner's 'Raccolta musicale.' —Cf. F. Collignon, Pietro Pompeo Sales (Bonn, 1923).

Saleski (zah-lēs'-kē), Gdal, cellist; b. Kiev, Feb. 11, 1888; sang in a synagogue choir there; then went to Leipzig, where he studied cello with Julius Klengel, graduating in 1911; while a student, he played in the cello section of the Gewandhaus orch. under Nikisch. He was in Scandinavia from 1915 till 1921; then settled in the U. S.; was a member of the NBC orch. under Toscanini (1937-48). He publ. a biographical compilation, Famous Musicians of a Wandering Race (N. Y., 1927; revised ed. under the title Famous Musicians of Jewish Origin, N. Y., 1949); both editions include Bizet, Ravel, Saint-Saëns, and others in the mistaken belief that they were Jews; there are many other factual errors, but the material on performers is serviceable; also publ. some pieces for cello.

Saléza, Albert, French tenor; b. Bruges, near Bayonne, Oct. 18, 1867; d. Paris, Nov. 26, 1916. He studied at the Paris Cons., taking the 1st prize in singing, 2nd in opera; made his début at the Opéra-Comique on Sept. 19, 1888, as Mylio in Le Roi d'Ys by Lalo; then sang at Nice (1892-94), at the Paris Opéra (1892-94), at Monte Carlo (1895-97), returning to the Paris Opéra in 1897; sang at the Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels (1898-99); also appeared at Covent Garden, London; was engaged at the Metropolitan House, N. Y., from 1899 to 1901; returned to sing in Paris in 1901. In 1911 he became prof. of singing at the Paris Cons. —Cf. H. de Curzon, Croquis d'artistes (Paris, 1898).

Salieri, Antonio, Italian composer; b. Legnago, near Verona, Aug. 18, 1750; d. Vienna, May 7, 1825. He studied music with his brother, Francesco, who was a violinist, and also took lessons from the organist Simoni. His father died in 1765, and Salieri was taken to Venice by a wealthy patron; there he studied harmony with Pescetti and singing with Pacini. Gassmann, the Viennese composer, who was in Venice at the time, took Salieri to Vienna in 1766, and provided there for his education. While Gassmann was in Rome (1770), Salieri took his place as conductor at the Burg Theater in Vienna, and brought out there his 1st opera, Le Donne letterate, with marked success. From that time until 1774 he produced 9 more operas of his own, all in the Italian style, the last being La Calamità dei cuori. When Gassmann died in 1774, Salieri became his successor as court composer. He began a serious study of Gluck's style under the master's own direction; Gluck recommended Salieri to the administration of the Académie de Musique in Paris for the composition of a French opera; this was produced in Paris as Les Danaïdes, based on an Italian libretto, Ipermestra, by Calzabigi; the opera was advertised as composed by Gluck in collaboration with Salieri, but after the 12th performance Gluck declared that the work was entirely by Salieri; it remained in the repertory of the Paris Opéra for many years. Salieri then returned to Vienna, where he produced a comic opera, La Grotta di Trofonio (Oct. 12, 1785), with much success. His French opera, Les Horaces, was produced in Paris on Dec. 7, 1786, and proved a failure, but his next French opera, Tarare (Paris Opéra, June 8, 1787), made a sensation, and was performed on all the principal stages in Europe; Lorenzo Da Ponte made a revised Italian version of it as Axur, Re d'Ormus, which was produced in Vienna on Jan. 8, 1788, with enormous acclaim. In 1788 Salieri succeeded Bonno as court Kapellmeister at Vienna, retaining this post until 1824, but he did not conduct operatic performances after 1790, confining himself to the concerts of the 'Hofsängerkapelle'; was also conductor of the 'Tonkünstler-Sozietät' (founded in 1771 by Gassmann) until 1818. In Vienna he enjoyed great renown as a teacher; Beethoven studied with him, and acknowledged himself willingly as Salieri's pupil; Schubert and Liszt were also his pupils. Salieri was undoubtedly a master of the Italian method of composition, and his technique in harmony and counterpoint was of the highest. He had a reputation for selfishness and unscrupulousness; it seems certain that he intrigued against Mozart at the Vienna court, and this gave rise to the fantastic story of his poisoning of Mozart (Pushkin publ. a drama, Mozart and Salieri, based on this story, and Rimsky-Korsakov set it to music). In all, Salieri wrote 39 operas, of which 6 remained unproduced; 11 cantatas, 6 Masses, 4 Te Deums, a Requiem, many other pieces of church music; 2 symphonies; 2 piano concertos; various other instrumental works. —Cf. I. von Mosel, Über das Leben und die Werke des Anton Salieri (Vienna, 1827); A. von Hermann, Antonio Salieri (Vienna, 1897); H. de Curzon, Salieri, in 'Le Ménestrel' (1925); C. Serini, Antonio Salieri, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1926); R. Nützlader, Salieri als Kirchenmusiker, in 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 14, Vienna, 1927); G. Magnani, Antonio Salieri (Legnago, 1934); A. Della Corte, Un Italiano all'estero, Antonio Salieri (Turin, 1936); E. J. Juin, Documenti inediti sul Salieri come maestro di F. Liszt e di altri, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1936); W. Bollert, Aufsätze zur Musikgeschichte (Bottrop, 1938, pp. 43-93); G. Barblan, Il primo operista della Scala, in 'La Scala: Rivista dell'Opera' (May, 1950).

Salinas, Francisco de, Spanish organist and theorist; b. Burgos, March 1, 1513; d. Salamanca, Jan. 13, 1590. He became blind at the age of 10; was taught organ playing, and studied languages at the Univ. of Salamanca. In 1538 he was taken to Italy by Cardinal Sarmiento; from 1553-58, was organist to the Duke of Alba at the vice-regal court of Naples, where Diego Ortiz (q.v.) was maestro. In 1561 Salinas returned to Spain, and from 1567 until his retirement in 1587 was prof. of music at the Univ. of Salamanca. He wrote the theoretical treatise De musica libri septem . . . (Salamanca, 1577), chiefly valuable for the examples of Spanish folk music it contains. It was to Salinas that Luis de León dedicated his famous 'Ode to Music'. —Cf. Otto Kinkeldey, Orgel und Klavier in der Musik des 16. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1910); F. Pedrell, Lírica nacionalizada (Paris, 1913; pp. 211-63; contains musical examples); J. B. Trend, Francisco de Salinas, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1927).

Salmhofer, Franz, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, Jan. 22, 1900. He was a chorister at the Admont Monastery in Styria until 1914; then studied composition with Schreker at the Vienna Academy, and musicology with Guido Adler at the Vienna Univ. In 1923 he married the pianist Margit Gál. In 1929 he became conductor at the Hofburg Theater, for which he composed incidental music, ballets, and operas; he resigned in 1939. In 1945, he became conductor at the Vienna State Opera. —Works: operas: Dame in Traum (Vienna, Dec. 26, 1935), Iwan Sergejewitsch Tarassenko (Vienna, March 9, 1938), Das Werkleid (Vienna, June 25, 1946); ballets: Das lockende Phantom, Der Taugenichts in Wien, Weihnachtsmärchen, Österreichische Bauernhochzeit; 2 symphonies (1947; 1955); the overtures Der Ackermann und der Tod and Heroische Ouvertüre; trumpet concerto; cello concerto; Der geheimnisvolle Trompeter, symph. poem for narrator and orch., after Walt Whitman's The Mystic Trumpeter (1924); Kammersuite, for 16 instruments (Vienna, May 10, 1923); string quartet; piano quartet; viola sonata; cello sonata; songs; piano pieces.

Salmon, Alvah Glover, American composer and pianist; b. Southold, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1868; d. Boston, Sept. 17, 1917. He studied at the New England Cons. in Boston, graduating in 1888; then with Goetschius and MacDowell in N. Y.; went to Russia, where he took lessons from Glazunov and became deeply interested in Russian music; collected a valuable library of works by Russian composers (about 3000 vols.) and an extensive collection of autographs; publ. numerous essays. His compositions are chiefly for piano (Valse arabesque, Scherzo, Novelllette, Fileuse, Impromptu, Tarentelle fantastique), etc.

Salmond, Felix, distinguished cellist; b. London, Nov. 19, 1888; d. New York, Feb. 19, 1952. He studied at the Royal College of Music with W. E. Whitehouse, and in Brussels with Édouard Jacobs; made his début in London (1909), accompanied at the piano by his mother, Mrs. Norman Salmond. He gave the world première of Elgar's cello concerto under Elgar's direction, on Oct. 27, 1919; after a European tour, he settled in America (début, N. Y., March 29, 1922); was head of the cello dept. at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia (1925-42) and taught cello at the Juilliard Graduate School of Music in N. Y. from its opening in 1924. He enjoyed the reputation of a fine chamber-music player and an excellent teacher.

Salò, Gasparo da. See Gasparo.

Saloman, Siegfried, composer; b. Tondern, Schleswig, Oct. 2, 1816; d. Stockholm, July 22, 1899. He studied composition with J. P. Hartmann in Copenhagen, and violin with Lipinski in Dresden. He lived in Copenhagen for many years and produced 2 operas there, Tordenskjold I Dynekilen (May 23, 1844) and Diamantkorset (The Diamond Cross; March 20, 1847); toured Russia and Holland (1847-50); married the singer Henriette Nissen, and traveled with her; in 1859, settled in Russia; one of his operas, to a German libretto, was produced in Russian as Karpatskaya Roza in Moscow, Jan. 7, 1868; several other operas were produced in Stockholm, where he went in 1879 after the death of his wife. Some of his violin pieces and songs have been published.

Salomon (Salomonis). See Elias Salomon.

Salomon, Johann Peter, German violinist, composer, and impresario; b. Bonn (baptized Feb. 2), 1745; d. London, Nov. 28, 1815. He was a member of the Electoral orch. at Bonn (1758-65); after a successful concert tour he was engaged as concertmaster and composer to Prince Henry of Prussia at Rheinsberg. When the orch. was disbanded Salomon went to Paris and then to London, where he settled in 1781; made himself known as a violinist and conductor; introduced symphonies by Haydn and Mozart in a series of concerts he gave in 1786. In 1790 he went to Italy to engage singers for the Italian Opera in London, and from there went to Vienna, where he saw Haydn and persuaded him to accept an engagement in London. At Salomon's behest Haydn wrote the works familiarly known as his 'Salomon Symphonies'; it is through his association with Haydn's 2 visits to London, in 1791 and 1794, that Salomon's name remains in the annals of music. He was a founder of the Philharmonic Society in London (1813). His own works are of merely antiquarian interest; they include the operas Les Recruteurs (Rheinsberg, 1771), Le Séjour du bonheur (Rheinsberg, 1773), Titus (Rheinsberg, 1774), La Reine de Golconde (Rheinsberg, 1776), Windsor Castle, or The Fair Maid of Kent (London, 1795); also violin sonatas. —Cf. Memoir of Johann Peter Salomon, in the 'Harmonicon' (London, Feb., 1830).

Salter, Mary Elizabeth Turner (Mrs. Sumner Salter), American soprano; b. Peoria, Ill., March 15, 1856; d. Orangeburg, N. Y., Sept. 12, 1938. She studied in Burlington, Iowa, and Boston; from 1874 to 1893, sang in churches in Boston and N. Y.; she married Sumner Salter in 1881, and settled with him in Williamstown, Mass. She publ. a number of song cycles, and was still composing at the age of 80 (Christmas Song, 1936). —Song cycles: Love's Epitome, A Night in Naishapur, Lyrics from Sappho, From Old Japan; about 80 songs publ. separately (The Cry of Rachel, The Pine Tree, Für Musik, Die stille Wasserrose, etc.); duets, some part-songs, and church music.

Salter, Sumner, American organist and arranger; b. Burlington, Iowa, June 24, 1856; d. New York, March 5, 1944. After graduating from Amherst College he studied at the New England Cons.; then taught at various schools in Boston and elsewhere; from 1905 to 1923, was director of music at Williams College; then retired. He edited 'The Pianist and Organist' (official organ of the American Guild of Organists) from 1895 to 1898; publ. church music and numerous organ arrangements of various works. In 1881 he married Mary E. Turner, the singer and composer.

Salvayre (sahl-vâr'), (Gervais-Bernard-) Gaston, French composer; b. Toulouse, June 24, 1847; d. St. Ague, near Toulouse, May 16, 1916. He was a pupil at the Cons. of Toulouse; then entered the Paris Cons., studying organ with Benoist and composition with Ambroise Thomas. After failing to win the Prix de Rome for 5 consecutive years, he finally obtained it in 1872 with the cantata Calypso. He was subsequently chorusmaster at the Opéra-Populaire in 1877. —Works: operas: Le Bravo (Paris, April 18, 1877), Richard III (St. Petersburg, Dec. 21, 1883), Egmont (Paris, Dec. 6, 1886), La Dame de Monsoreau (Paris, Jan. 30, 1888), Solange (Paris, March 10, 1909); ballets: Le Fandango (Paris, Nov. 26, 1877), La Fontaine des fêtes (Paris, 1899), L'Odalisque (Paris, 1905); for orch.: Le Jugement dernier (Paris, Dec. 3, 1876, under the title La Résurrection), Ouverture symphonique (Paris, March 22, 1874), Air et Variations for string orch. (1877).

Salviucci, Giovanni, Italian composer; b. Rome, Oct. 26, 1907; d. there, Sept. 5, 1937. He studied with Respighi and Casella; developed a fine style of instrumental writing; his works were performed by Italian orchestras with increasing frequency, but his early death cut short his promising career. His overture in C# (1932) received a national prize. —Works: the symph. poem La Tentazione e la preghiera (1931); Sinfonia italiana (1932; Rome, Feb. 25, 1934); Introduzione, Passacaglia e Finale (1934); Serenata for 9 instruments (1937); also Psalm of David, for soprano and chamber orch. (Rome, 1935); Alceste, after Euripides, for chorus and orch. (1937). —Cf. F. Ballo, Giovanni Salviucci, in 'Rassegna Musicale' (Jan., 1937).

Salzedo (originally Salzédó) (sahl-zä'-doh), Carlos, eminent harpist and composer; b. Arcachon, France, April 6, 1885. He studied at the Cons. of Bordeaux (1891-94), winning 1st prize in piano; then entered the Paris Cons., where his father, Gaston Salzédó, was prof. of singing; studied with Charles de Bériot (piano), gaining 1st prize in 1901, and with Hasselmans (harp), also receiving 1st prize. He began his career as a concert harpist upon graduation; traveled all over Europe (1901-05); was solo harpist of the 'Association des Premiers Prix de Paris' in Monte Carlo (1905-09); in 1909 settled in N. Y.; was 1st harpist in the orch. of the Metropolitan Opera Co. (1909-13). In 1913 he formed the 'Trio de Lutèce' (from Lutetia, ancient name for Paris), with Georges Barrère (flute) and Paul Kéfer (cello). In 1921 he was co-founder with Edgard Varèse of the International Composers' Guild in N. Y., with the aim of promoting modern music; this organization presented many important contemporary works; in the same year he founded a modern music magazine, 'Eolian Review,' later renamed 'Eolus' (discontinued in 1933). He became an American citizen in 1923; was elected president of the National Association of Harpists; held teaching positions at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y., and the Juilliard Graduate School of Music; organized and headed the harp dept. at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. In 1931 he established the Salzedo Harp Colony at Camden, Maine, for teaching and performing during the summer months. Salzedo introduced a number of special effects, and publ. special studies for his new techniques; designed a 'Salzedo Model' harp, capable of rendering novel sonorities (Eolian Flux, Eolian chords, gushing chords, percussion, etc.). His own compositions are rhythmically intricate and contrapuntally elaborate, and require a virtuosic technique. —Works: Terres enchan- tées, for orch. with harp solo (performed under the title The Enchanted Isle by Salzedo with the Chicago Symph. Orch., Nov. 28, 1919); 5 Poetical Studies for harp solo (1918); 3 Poems for soprano, 6 harps, and 3 wind instruments (1919); Bolmimerie for 7 harps (1919); 4 Preludes to the Afternoon of a Telephone, for 2 harps (1921); Sonata for harp and piano (1922); 3 Poems by Mallarmé, for soprano, harp, and piano (1924); concerto for harp and 7 wind instruments (N. Y., April 17, 1927; composer soloist); Pentacle, 5 pieces for 2 harps (1928); Préambule et Jeux, for harp, 4 wind instruments, and 5 string instruments (Paris, 1929); Scintillation for harp solo (1936); Panorama, suite for harp solo (1937); 10 Wedding Presents, for harp solo (1946-52); etc.; many transcriptions for harp of various works by Bach, Corelli, Rameau, Haydn, Brahms, etc. He publ. Modern Study of the Harp (N. Y., 1921), Method for the Harp (N. Y., 1929); The Art of Modulating (in collaboration with Lucile Lawrence; N. Y., 1950).

Salzer, Felix, theorist and musicologist; b. Vienna, June 13, 1904; studied there with Schenker and Weisse (theory and composition), Malvine Bree (piano), and Guido Adler (musicology); Ph. D., Univ. of Vienna; taught at the Vienna Cons. (1935-38); then came to America and (1940-56) was on the faculty of the Mannes College of Music in New York (from 1948, director); 1956-58, at Queens College there. —Publ. Sinn und Wesen der abendländischen Mehrstimmigkeit (Vienna, 1935); Structural Hearing (2 vols.; N. Y., 1952; in German, 1958); contributed various articles to the musical press; was co-editor of the monthly 'Der Dreiklang' (Vienna, 1937).

Samara, Spiro, Greek composer; b. Corfu, Nov. 29, 1861; d. Athens, March 25, 1917. He was a pupil of Enrico Stancampiano in Athens; later of Léo Delibes at the Paris Cons. He won considerable success with his 1st opera, Flora Mirabilis (Milan, May 16, 1886), and devoted himself almost exclusively to dramatic composition. Other operas were Medgè (Rome, 1888), Lionella (Milan, 1891), La Martire (Naples, May 23, 1894), La Furia domata (Milan, 1895); Storia d'amore (Milan, 1903; in Gotha, 1906, as La Biondinetta), Mademoiselle de Belle-Isle (Genoa, Nov. 9, 1905), Rhea (Florence, April 11, 1908), La Guerra in tempo di guerra (Athens, 1914). He publ. Scènes orientales, suite for piano (4 hands); many pieces for piano solo; songs.

Samaroff, Olga (née Hickenlooper), American pianist and educator; b. San Antonio, Texas, Aug. 8, 1882; d. New York, May 17, 1948. She studied as a child with her mother and grandmother (Mrs. L. Grünwald, a former concert pianist); subsequently studied in Paris (with Delaborde), Baltimore (with Ernest Hutcheson), and Berlin (with Ernst Jedliczka). She made her concert début in N. Y. (Jan. 18, 1905) with the N. Y. Symph. Society; appeared with other orchestras in the U. S. and Europe; gave joint recitals with Fritz Kreisler, Zimbalist, and other violinists. In 1911 she married Leopold Stokowski; divorced in 1923; for 2 seasons was music critic for the 'N. Y. Evening Post' (1927-29); taught at the Juilliard Graduate School and at the Philadelphia Cons. of Music; from 1930, gave master courses in N. Y.; lectured extensively on music appreciation; publ. The Layman's Music Book (N. Y., 1935); The Magic World of Music (N. Y., 1936); A Music Manual (N. Y., 1937); An American Musician's Story (autobiography; N. Y., 1939); The Listener's Music Book (N. Y., 1947; enlarged and revised ed. of The Layman's Music Book; 12 printings).

Samazeuilh (sah-mah-zö'y), Gustave, French composer; b. Bordeaux, June 2, 1877. He studied music with Chausson and at the Schola Cantorum with Vincent d'Indy; also took some lessons from Paul Dukas. In his music he absorbed the distinct style of French Impressionism, but despite its fine craftsmanship, performances were few and far between. He is much better known as a writer on musical subjects; publ. Un Musicien français: Paul Dukas (Paris, 1913; augmented ed., 1936); Musiciens de mon temps: chroniques et souvenirs (Paris, 1947). —Works: for orch.: Étude symphonique (1907), Nuit (Paris, March 15, 1925), Naiades au soir (Paris, Oct. 18, 1925); L'Appel de la danse (1946); for orch. with chorus: Le Sommeil de Canope (1908), Chant d'Espagne (Paris, Jan. 10, 1926), Le Cercle des heures (Paris, Feb. 17, 1934); string quartet (1911); Suite en trio, for strings (1938); etc.; many transcriptions for piano of orchestral works by d'Indy, Debussy, Franck, Dukas, Fauré, etc.

Saminsky, Lazare, composer, conductor, and writer on music; b. Odessa, Nov. 8, 1882. He studied mathematics and philosophy at the Univ. of St. Petersburg; composition with Rimsky-Korsakov and Liadov, conducting with Nicolas Tcherepnin at the St. Petersburg Cons. (graduated, 1910). He was in the military service at Tiflis in 1911; conducted the symph. concerts there (1915-18); taught at the People's Cons. in Tiflis (1917-18); left Russia in 1919; traveled in Palestine; then was in Paris and London; emigrated to the U. S. in 1920, settling in N. Y.; in 1923 was a co-founder of the League of Composers; in 1924 appointed music director of Temple Emanu-El, N. Y.; established annual Three-Choir Festival there in 1936, presenting old and new music; conducted many American works; also was guest conductor with major European orchestras; lectured and conducted in the U. S., Canada, South America, and Europe. A versatile scholar and musician, he wrote essays on mathematics and philosophy, as well as on music. In his compositions he follows the Romantic tradition; Hebrew subjects and styles play an important part in some of his music. He was married to an American writer, Lillian Morgan Buck, who died in 1945. On Feb. 15, 1948, he married the American pianist Jennifer Gandar. —Works: operas: The Vision of Ariel (1916), Gagliarda of a Merry Plague, chamber opera (N. Y., Feb. 22, 1925), The Daughter of Jephtha (1929), Julian, the Apostate Caesar (1933-38); 5 symphonies: No. 1, Of the Great Rivers, in 'E-Frimoll' (free minor mode; Petrograd, Feb. 25, 1917, composer conducting), No. 2, Symphonie des Sommeits (1918; Amsterdam, Nov. 16, 1922), No. 3, Symphony of the Seas (Paris, June, 1925, composer conducting), No. 4 (Berlin, April 19, 1929, composer conducting), No. 5, Jerusalem, City of Solomon and Christ, with chorus (1929-30; performed many years later, N. Y., April 29, 1958); Vigilias, a symph. triptych (Moscow, Feb. 20, 1913, composer conducting); Lament of Rachel, suite from a ballet (Boston, March 3, 1922); Litanies of Women, for voice and chamber orch. (Paris, May 21, 1926); Venice, a 'poem-serenade' for chamber orch. (Berlin, May 9, 1928); Ausonia, orch. suite (1930; Florence, Feb. 24, 1935); Three Shadows, poems for orch. (N. Y., Feb. 6, 1936); Pueblo, a Moon Epic (Washington, Feb. 17, 1937); Stilled Pageant, for orch. (Zürich, Aug., 1938); Eon Hours, suite of 4 rondos for 4 voices and 4 instruments (N. Y., Nov. 28, 1939); Requiem, in memory of Lillian M. Saminsky (N. Y., May 20, 1946); A Sonnet of Petrarch, for 3 voices and 3 instruments (1947); To a New World, for orch. (1932; N. Y., April 16, 1951); East and West, suite for violin and orch. (1943); To Zion, a choral fanfare (1948); 4 Sacred Choruses (1913); 10 Hebrew Folksongs and Folk Dances; 3

Hebrew Song Cycles; 6 Songs of the Russian Orient; Sabbath Morning Service; Holiday Service; By the Rivers of Babylon, for chorus; a group of piano pieces; etc. — Books: Music of Our Day (N. Y., 1932); Music of the Ghetto and the Bible (N. Y., 1934); Living Music of the Americas (N. Y., 1949); Essentials of Conducting (N. Y., 1958); Physics and Metaphysics of Music and Essays on the Philosophy of Mathematics (The Hague, 1957). —Cf. Lazare Saminsky, Composer and Civic Worker, a collection of essays by Domenico de Paoli, Leigh Henry, L. Sabaneyev, Joseph Yasser, and Léon Vallas (N. Y., 1930).

Sammarco, (Giuseppe) Mario, Italian baritone; b. Palermo, Dec. 13, 1873; d. Milan, Jan. 24, 1930. He studied singing with Antonio Cantelli, making a successful début at Milan (1894); then sang in Brescia, Madrid, Lisbon, Brussels, Moscow, Warsaw, Berlin, and Vienna. After his triumphant début as Scarpia in Tosca at Covent Garden, London (Oct. 19, 1905) he sang there every season until the outbreak of World War I. He made his American début as Tonio (Feb. 1, 1908) at the Manhattan Opera House, N. Y.; in 1910 joined the Chicago Opera Co.; also sang several seasons at the Teatro Colón in Buenos Aires (from 1897). He sang in Russian, Spanish, Italian, French, and English.

Sammartini (or San Martini), Giovanni Battista, significant Italian composer; b. Milan, 1701; d. there, Jan. 15, 1775. Younger brother of Giuseppe (see below). He was organist of several churches in Milan, and from 1730-70 maestro di cappella at the convent of Santa Maria Maddalena. Gluck was his pupil from 1737-41. An extremely prolific composer (said to have written over 2,000 works), and a precursor of Haydn in the development of the symph. style; produced his first symph. in 1734. He was also a pioneer in the cultivation of chamber music. His publ. instrumental works include 24 symphonies; 6 trio sonatas for 2 violins with bass (London, 1744); Nocturnes for the same (op. 7); sonatas for flute, 2 violins, and bass (op. 9); concerti grossi; flute duets; sonatas for cembalo, etc. Also composed 2 operas, an oratorio, and church music. Modern eds. of various works have been publ. by Prunières (concerto), G. Salomon (2 trio sonatas), Riemann (Trio in E♭), A. Moffat (2 sonatas for violin and piano), etc. —Cf. F. Torrefranca, in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1913, 1915); G. de Saint-Foix, in 'Sammelbände der Interna-tionalen Musik-Gesellschaft' XV (1914); R. Sondheim, G. B. Sammartini, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' III (1920); H. G. Mishkin, Five Autograph String Quartets by G. B. Sammartini, in 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (Summer, 1953).

Sammartini (San Martini), Giuseppe, called 'il Londinese' to distinguish him from his brother, 'il Milanese'; b. Milan, c. 1693; d. London, c. 1770. In 1727 he went to London, where he became oboist at the Opera; later director of the chamber concerts in the household of the Prince of Wales. He gave concerts with Arrigoni at Hickford's Rooms in 1732; was an oboe virtuoso. Burney heard him play in 1744, and according to Hawkins he was still living in 1770. —He publ. sonatas for 2 flutes (1738), 12 concerti grossi, 12 violin sonatas, 8 overtures, harpsichord concertos, solos for flute, etc. A sonata a 3 was ed. by Riemann in his 'Collegium musicum.'

Sammons, Albert Edward, English violinist and composer; b. London, Feb. 23, 1886; d. there, Aug. 24, 1957. He studied with his father and other teachers in London; was 1st violinist of the London String Quartet (1907-16); also concertmaster of the London Philharmonic; edited the violin concerto by Delius; composed a Phantasy Quartet for strings and other works; taught violin at the Royal College of Music.

Sampson, George, English organist and conductor; b. Clifton, July 24, 1861; d. Brisbane, Australia, Dec. 23, 1949. He studied with George Riseley and Harford Lloyd; was organist at various churches in Bristol; in 1898, went to Australia, where he was organist at St. John's Cathedral in Brisbane; in 1907 he organized and conducted the Sampson Orch. there, which later became the Queensland State and Municipal Orch. His works include a Berceuse for organ and strings, church music, and a Romance for violin and piano. Author of The Pianoforte; Rhythm; Elements of Music; Queensland Manual of Music; A Day with Felix Mendelssohn (1910); Seven Essays (Cambridge, 1947).

Samuel (sah-mü-ehl'), Adolphe, Belgian composer; b. Liège, July 11, 1824; d. Ghent, Sept. 11, 1898. He was educated at the Cons. of Liège and that of Brussels, winning the Belgian Grand Prix de Rome (1845); taught harmony at the Brussels Cons. (1860-70); in 1871 was appointed director of the Ghent Cons. He founded the Brussels Popular Concerts in 1865; in 1869 organized the 1st annual musical festivals, with an orch. of 450 and a chorus of 1200. —Works: 5 operas: Il a rêvé (1845), Giovanni da Procida (1848), Madeleine (1849), Les deux prétendants (1851), L'Heure de la retraite (1852); 7 symphonies; overtures; string quartets; piano pieces; publ. Cours d'harmonie pratique et de basse chiffrée; Livre de lecture musicale (400 national airs). — Cf. E. L. V. Mathieu, Notice sur Adolphe Samuel (1922).

Samuel, Harold, famous English pianist; b. London, May 23, 1879; d. there, Jan. 15, 1937. He studied at the Royal College of Music with Dannreuther (piano) and Stanford (composition); later was on its faculty. He was particularly distinguished as an interpreter of Bach; in 1921 gave 6 successive Bach recitals in London and a similar cycle in New York; toured the U. S. regularly from 1924. He wrote a musical comedy, Hon'ble Phil, and some piano pieces.

Samuel-Rousseau, Marcel. See Rousseau, Marcel Samuel.

Sanborn, (John) Pitts, American music critic; b. Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 19, 1879; d. New York, March 7, 1941. He studied at Harvard Univ. (B. A., 1900; M. A., 1902); was music editor of the 'N. Y. Globe' (1905-23), 'N. Y. Evening Mail' (1924-31), and 'N. Y. World Telegram' (from 1931). He publ. Prima Donna—A Novel of the Opera (London, 1929); The Metropolitan Book of the Opera (with Emil Hilb; N. Y., 1937); a pamphlet, Beethoven and His Nine Symphonies (1939); etc.

Sanchez de Fuentes, Eduardo, important Cuban composer and educator; b. Havana, April 3, 1874; d. there, Sept. 7, 1944. He studied music with Ignacio Cervantes and Carlos Anckermann. He occupied an influential position in the artistic affairs of Cuba; wrote 6 operas and many other works, but is known outside Cuba chiefly by his popular song, Tú, which he publ. at the age of 18. —Operas (all produced in Havana): El Naufrago, after Tennyson's Enoch Arden (Jan. 31, 1901), Dolorosa (April 23, 1910), Doreya (Feb. 7, 1918), Kabelia, to his own libretto after a Hindu legend (June 22, 1942); Bocetos cubanos, for orch., women's chorus, and soprano solo (Barcelona, 1922); Temas del patio, symph. prelude; songs (Mírame así, etc.); piano pieces; publ. El Folk-lore en la música cubana (1923), Folklorismo (1928), Viejos ritmos cubanos (1937), etc. —Cf. O. Martínez, Eduardo Sánchez de Fuentes: in Memoriam (Havana, 1944); M. Guiral, Un grand musicógrafo y compositor cubano: Eduardo Sánchez de Fuentes (Havana, 1944); A. Carpentier, La Música en Cuba (Mexico, 1946; pp. 213-17).

Sancta Maria. See Santa María, Tomás de.

Sandberg, Mordecai, composer; b. Rumania, March, 1897. He studied in Vienna; went to Jerusalem in 1922, remaining there until 1938; in 1939, he was in London; in 1940, settled in New York. A musician of extraordinary ambition, he set to music the complete Book of Psalms, as part of a grandiose project of writing a musical score for the entire Bible. In several of his works he employs fractional tones in order to secure greater expressiveness; apart from 2 symphonies, chamber music, piano pieces, etc., he wrote 2 oratorios, Ruth (N. Y., May 22, 1949) and Ezkerah (I Remember; N. Y., April 22, 1952).

Sandberger, Adolf, eminent German musicologist; b. Würzburg, Dec. 19, 1864; d. Munich, Jan. 14, 1943. He studied composition at the Royal School of Music there, and at Munich; also musicology at the Universities of Würzburg and Berlin (under Spitta); Dr. phil., 1887; spent the next 2 years in further study in Austria, Italy, France, England, and Russia. In 1889 provisional, 1892 regular, custodian of the music department of the Munich Library, also lecturer at the Univ. from 1894; made associate prof. in 1900, and regular prof. in 1909; prof. emeritus in 1930. Editor of Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern and of Breitkopf & Härtel's monumental edition of the complete works of Roland de Lassus; from 1924 ed. of the Neues Beethoven-Jahrbuch; 1927, brought out a facsimile ed. of Monteverdi's Orfeo. Sandberger was a specialist in Haydn; discovered in the Esterházy archives some theretofore unknown works by Haydn (string trios, etc.); brought out a new edition of the 1828 Haydn biography by Fröhlich (1926). —Writings: Leben und Werke des Dichtermusikers Peter Cornelius (1887; dissertation); Beiträge zur Geschichte der bayerischen Hofkapelle unter Orlando di Lasso (planned in 3 vols.: I. Life, 1894; III, Documents, 1895; II, not publ.); Zur Geschichte des Haydn'schen Streichquartetts (1899); Über zwei ehemals Mozart zugeschriebene Messen (1907); Lasso und die geistigen Strömungen seiner Zeit (Munich Akademie der Wissenschaft, 1924-26); Neue Haydniana, in 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1933); other valuable essays. His collected essays were publ. in 3 vols.: I, Biography of Lassus, On old Italian keyboard music, etc. (1921); II, On Beethoven (1924); III, On the history of opera (1934). —In 1918 a 'Sandberger Festschrift' appeared, contributed to by his pupils, and ed. by Th. Kroyer; in 1929 a second Festschrift was publ., containing many valuable articles. —Cf. L. Schiedermair, A. S., in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (Jan., 1935); E. I. Luin, In memoria di A. S., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1943, pp. 418-23).

Sandby, Herman, Danish cellist and composer; b. Sandby, near Holbaek, March 21, 1881. He studied cello with Hugo Becker and composition with Iwan Knorr in Frankfurt (1895-1900); gave concerts in Scandinavia, England, and Germany; in 1912 settled in America as 1st cellist of the Philadelphia Orch.; moved to N. Y. in 1916; returned to Denmark in 1930. —Works: cello concerto (Philadelphia, Feb. 5, 1916); The Woman and the Fiddler, symph. suite; 3 symphonies (1930, 1938, 1942); Serenade, for strings (1940); 3 string quartets; string sextet; string quintet; piano quintet; piano trio; etc.

Sander, Constantin. See Leuckart.

Sanders, Paul F., Dutch composer; b. Amsterdam, Dec. 21, 1891. He studied with Sem Dresden and Willem Pijper; contributed to various Dutch publications; was co-founder (with Pijper) of the magazine 'De Muziek'; in 1947 was N. Y. correspondent of Dutch newspapers. —Works: Pierrot aan de lantaarn, ballet for recitation and chamber orch. (1923); Rataplan, ballet for chamber orch. (1925); Mara, for chorus and orch.; string quartet; sonata for solo violin (1933); Little Suite, for piano 4 hands; songs; etc. He publ. De Piaao (Amsterdam, 1926); Moderne Nederlandsche Componisten (The Hague, 1933).

Sanders, Robert L., American composer; b. Chicago, July 2, 1906; attended the Bush Cons. there (Mus. B., 1924; Mus. M., 1925); in 1925 received a fellowship of the American Academy in Rome; there he studied with Respighi; also in Paris with Guy de Lioncourt. Returning to America in 1929, he taught at the Chicago Cons. and conducted its orch.; also taught at Univ. of Chicago and Meadville Theological School; was for many years organist-director, First Unitarian Church; in 1938, became dean of the School of Music at Indiana Univ.; in 1947, appointed prof. at Brooklyn College; held a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1954-55. — Works: L'Ag'ya, choreographic drama (Hollywood Bowl, summer 1944; danced by Katherine Dunham); Scenes of Poverty and Toil, a choreographic suite for orch. (1934-35; first performed under the title The Tragic Muse, Chicago, Jan. 30, 1936, composer conducting); Suite for orch. (Rome, May 31, 1929, composer conducting); Little Symphony No. 1 (N. Y., Feb. 26, 1939); Little Symphony No. 2 (Louisville, 1954); Symphony in A (1954-55); violin concerto (1936; Rochester, N. Y., April 28, 1945); a symph. for band (1943); An American Psalm, for women's voices and organ (1945); The Mystic Trumpeter for baritone solo, chorus, and orch. (1947); A Celebration of Life, cantata for soprano solo, chorus, and chamber orch. (1956); 23rd Psalm, for soprano and organ; Recessional for mixed voices and organ; numerous other choral works; chamber music: piano trio (1925), violin sonata (1927-28), string quartet (1929); cello sonata (1931), The Imp for clarinet quartet (or for clarinet and piano; 1941), quintet for brass instruments (1942), Rhapsody for woodwind quartet (1943), sonata for trombone and piano (1945), suite for brass quartet (1949), Scherzo and Dirge for 4 trombones (1949), Fugue on a Noël for woodwind quartet (1949); Variations on an Original Theme, for pipe organ pedals only (1956); etc.

Sanderson, Sibyl, American soprano; b. Sacramento, Calif., Dec. 7, 1865; d. Paris, May 15, 1903. She was educated in San Francisco, where her musical talent attracted attention; taken to Paris by her mother at the age of 19, she studied at the Cons. with Massenet; also with Sbriglia and Mathilde Marchesi. Massenet was charmed with her voice, and wrote the leading part in Esclarmonde for her; she created it at the Opéra-Comique, on May 14, 1889; the role of Thaïs (Paris Opéra, March 16, 1894) was also written by Massenet for her. Other French composers were equally enchanted with her voice, her appearance, and her passionate lyricism; Saint-Saëns wrote Phryné for her (1893). She made her American début at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., as Manon (Jan. 16, 1895); sang there again in 1901, but had little success with the American public. In 1897 she married a wealthy Cuban, Antonio Terry, who died in 1900. — Cf. J. Massenet, Mes Souvenirs (Paris, 1912).

Sandi, Luis, Mexican composer; b. Mexico City, Feb. 22, 1905. He studied violin; later specialized in choral music; was active in the administration of musical affairs; in 1938 founded the Coro de Madrigalistas; compiled collections of choral pieces for schools. — Works: symph. suite Norte (Mexico City, Aug. 15, 1941); 1-act opera Carlota (Mexico City, Oct. 23, 1948); ballet Bonampak (Mexico City, Nov. 2, 1951); film music. — Cf. C. Chávez, Luis Sandi, in 'Nuestra Música' (July, 1949).

Sándor, Arpád, pianist; b. Budapest, June 5, 1896; studied there with Bartók and Kodály at the Royal Academy, graduating in 1914; after several years in Berlin, he toured the U. S. as accompanist in 1922; then returned to Germany, and wrote art criticism in the 'Berliner Tageblatt.' In 1933 he settled permanently in the U. S.; was accompanist to Jascha Heifetz, Lily Pons, and other celebrated artists. He became an American citizen in 1943.

Sándor, György, pianist; b. Budapest, Sept. 21, 1912. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music there, with Bartók (piano) and Kodály (composition). After a series of concerts in Europe (1930-38), he settled in the U. S. in 1939; was soloist in the première of Bartók's posthumous piano concerto No. 3, with the Philadelphia Orch. (Feb. 8, 1946); traveled in Australia in 1951. He made brilliant transcriptions of several modern orchestral works, including L'Apprenti sorcier by Paul Dukas.

Sandoval, Miguel, pianist, conductor, and composer; b. Guatemala City, Nov. 22, 1903; d. New York, Aug. 24, 1953. He settled in the U. S. in 1919, and became an American citizen in 1925; was active as conductor and pianist; wrote a symph. poem, Recuerdos en un paseo, and publ. numerous piano works and songs in the Latin American vein.

Sandt, Maximilian van de, Dutch pianist and composer; b. Rotterdam, Oct. 18, 1863; d. Cologne, July 14, 1934. He was a pupil of Liszt in the last years of the master's life; toured in Europe with conspicuous success; taught at the Stern Cons. in Berlin (1889-94) and at the Cons. of Cologne (1896-1906); from 1910 taught at Bonn. He composed many brilliant piano pieces (Concert-étude, 4 kleine Tonbilder, Auf dem See, etc.); also wrote cadenzas to Beethoven's piano concertos.

Sandvik, Ole Mörk, Norwegian musicologist; b. Hedemarken, May 9, 1875. He studied theology, and in 1916 was appointed teacher of liturgy and church music at the Theological Seminary of the Univ. of Oslo, retiring in 1945. —Writings: Norsk Kirke-musik (1918), Folkemusikk i Gudbrands-dalen (1919; 2nd ed., 1948), Norsk Folke-musikk (1921), Norges Musikkhistorie (1921, with G. Schjelderup); Norsk Korall-historie (1930); Østerdalsmusikken (1943); Gregoriansk sang . . . (1945); a centennial biography of Agathe Backer-Grøndahl (1948); a monograph on L. M. Lindeman (1950); compiled the Gradual for the Norwegian Church; publ. albums of regional folksongs, etc. A symposium of articles in his honor was publ. on the occasion of his 70th birthday (Oslo, 1945).

Sanford, Harold Bryant, American conductor and arranger; b. Florence, Mass., Sept. 5, 1879; d. Springfield, Mass., Jan. 19, 1945. He studied violin with Emil Mollenhauer in Boston, and theory with Goetschius; was employed as a violinist, conductor, and arranger by Victor Herbert in N. Y. City (1906-24); conducted recordings for various phonograph companies; also on the radio.

Sanford, Samuel Simons, American pianist; b. Bridgeport, Conn., 1849; d. New York, June 6, 1910. He studied with William Mason; went to Europe in 1868, where he took lessons with Anton Rubinstein, who had a high opinion of Sanford's abilities. However, Sanford did not undertake a pianistic career; in 1894 he became prof. of applied music at Yale Univ., developing the music dept. in collaboration with Horatio Parker.

Sangiovanni (sahn-joh-vahn'-nē), Antonio, celebrated Italian singing teacher; b. Bergamo, Sept. 14, 1831; d. Milan, Jan. 6, 1892. He studied at the Cons. of Milan; in 1854, was appointed prof. of singing there, and acquired considerable fame as a builder of voices. Two generations of Italian and foreign singers were his pupils.

Sanjuán (sahn-hwahn'), Pedro, Spanish composer and conductor; b. San Sebastian, Nov. 15, 1886. He studied composition with Turina; after conducting in Europe, he went to Havana, where he organized the Havana Philharmonic (1926); was also teacher of composition there; Roldán, Caturla, and other Cuban composers were his pupils; in 1932 he went back to Spain; was in Madrid (1932-36); from 1939 until 1942, he was again conductor of the Havana Philharmonic; in 1942 was appointed prof. of composition at Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C.; American citizen, 1947. —Works: Rondo fantástico (Havana, Nov. 29, 1926); Castilla, suite for orch. (Havana, June 12, 1927); Sones de Castilla, for small orch.; La Macumba, a 'ritual symphony' (St. Louis, Dec. 14, 1951, composer conducting); Antillean Poem for band (N. Y., Aug. 11, 1958, composer conducting); choral works; piano pieces.

San Martini. See Sammartini.

Sanromá, Jesús María, brilliant pianist; b. Carolina, Puerto Rico (of Catalonian parents), Nov. 7, 1903. At the age of 14 he was sent to the U. S. by the governor of Puerto Rico; studied piano with Antoinette Szumowska at the New England Cons.; 1920, won the Mason & Hamlin piano prize; then went to Europe, where he studied with Alfred Cortot (in Paris) and Artur Schnabel (in Berlin); from 1926 till 1944 he was pianist of the Boston Symph. Orch.; taught at the New England Cons.; gave annual concerts in the U. S., Canada, and South America; also played in Europe. In 1951 he was appointed chairman of the music dept. at the Univ. of Puerto Rico. He excels particularly in the works of modern composers, and has given several world premières of contemporary concertos (by Hindemith, etc.). —Cf. E. S. Belaval, El Niño Sanromá (San Juan, Puerto Rico, 1952).

San Sebastián, Padre José Antonio de. See Donostia.

Santa Cruz Wilson, Domingo, foremost Chilean composer; b. La Cruz, near Quilota, July 5, 1899. He studied law at the Univ. of Chile; served as 2nd secretary of the Chilean Legation in Spain (1921-24); in music, received his training with Enrique Soro in Santiago and with Conrado del Campo in Madrid. Returning to Chile, he became prof. at the National Cons. in Santiago (1928); dean of the faculty of fine arts of the Univ. of Chile (1933); president of the Instituto de Extensión Musical (1940). His role in the promotion of musical culture in Chile, in the publishing of music by Chilean composers, and in the organization of educational activities is very important; he traveled in Europe and in South America; visited the U. S. several times as lecturer. In his works he accepts the international tradition of neo-Classical music; only in a few instances does he employ identifiable Chilean melodies. — Works (all first performed in Santiago): Cantata de los ríos de Chile, for chorus and orch. (Nov. 27, 1942); 5 Piezas breves, for string orch. (May 31, 1937); Variaciones, for piano and orch. (June 25, 1943); Sinfonía concertante, for flute, piano, and string orch. (Nov. 29, 1945); symph. no. 1, for strings, celesta, and percussion (May 28, 1948); symph. no. 2, for strings (Nov. 26, 1948); Egloga, for soprano, chorus, and orch. (Nov. 24, 1950); Cantares de la Pascua, for chorus a cappella (Dec. 7, 1950); 2 string quartets; many songs; piano pieces. — Cf. N. Slonimsky, Music of Latin America (N. Y., 1945, pp. 162-64); Otto Mayer-Serra, Música y Músicos de Latinoamérica (Mexico City, 1947; vol. 2, pp. 892-99); special issue of the 'Revista Musical Chilena' (Dec., 1951); Vicente Salas Viu, La Creación musical en Chile 1900-1951 (Santiago, 1952; pp. 367-422).

Santa María, Fray Tomás de, important Spanish organist and composer; b. Madrid, c. 1510; d. Valladolid, 1570. A Dominican monk, and a pupil of Antonio de Cabezon; publ. Libro llamado Arte de tañer fantasía (Valladolid, 1565), a treatise on playing fantasias on keyboard instruments and on the guitar or lute (German transl., with critical and biographical introduction, by E. Harich-Schneider and R. Boadella, Leipzig, 1937). — Cf. Pedrell, Hispaniae schola musica sacra (vol. 6); Villalba, Antología de organistas clásicos españoles, I; O. Kinkeldey, Orgel und Klavier in der Musik des 16. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1910; with mus. examples); H. Collet, Le Mysticisme musical espagnol au XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1913); J. Bonnet, 'Historical Organ Recitals' VI (1940); G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 629-30).

Santelmann, William Henry, violinist and band conductor; b. Offensen, Hanover, Sept. 24, 1863; d. Washington, D.C., Dec. 17, 1932. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; in 1887 settled in America; played the baritone in the U. S. Marine Band in Washington (1887-95); was its conductor from 1898 until 1927, when he retired. He wrote the suite Pocahontas, for band; marches and dances; made numerous transcriptions. His son, William F. H. Santelmann (b. 1902), studied the violin, joined the U. S. Marine Band in 1923, became its assistant conductor in 1935, and conductor in 1940; president of the American Bandmasters Association, 1953-54; retired in 1955.

Santi, Padre Angelo de, Italian Jesuit priest and music scholar; b. Trieste, July 12, 1847; d. Rome, Jan. 28, 1922. He took a leading part in the reform of Catholic church music, his views being embodied in the Motu proprio of Pius X on sacred music (1903). He founded the Schola Cantorum of the Vatican Seminary. — Publications: Il Maestro Filippo Capocci e le sue composizioni per organo (1888); L'Origine delle feste natalizie (1907); also articles in 'Rassegna Gregoriana,' etc.

Santini, Abbate Fortunato, Italian music scholar and composer; b. Rome, Jan. 5, 1778; d. there, 1862. He was noted as the collector of one of the finest music libraries ever formed; ordained priest in 1801; as early as 1820 he publ. a catalogue of the MSS then in his possession, Catalogo della musica antica, sacra e madrigalesca . . ., listing 1,000 titles by more than 700 composers. The valuable collection is now in the library of the Univ. of Münster, Westphalia. His original compositions (all MS) include a Requiem, a Stabat Mater, many motets. — Cf. V. Scassov, L'Abbé Santini et sa collection musicale à Rome (Florence, 1854; biography and summary of Santini's own catalogue); Mendelssohn's Reisebriefe (Leipzig, 1861; 5th ed., 1882; English transl. by Lady Wallace as Letters from Italy and Switzerland, London, 1862); J. Killing, Kirchenmusikalische Schätze der Bibliothek des Abbate F. Santini (Düsseldorf, 1910); K. Fellerer, Verzeichnis der kirchenmusikalischen Werke der santinischen Sammlungen, in the 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (Regensburg, 1931 ff.).

Santley, Sir Charles, English baritone; b. Liverpool, Feb. 28, 1834; d. Hove, near London, Sept. 22, 1922. He studied with Nava in Milan; then with Garcia in London; made his professional début as Adam in Haydn's Creation, on Nov. 16, 1857. His stage début was at Covent Garden, Oct. 1, 1859; he joined the Carl Rosa Company in 1875, and toured with it for several years; visited America in 1871 and 1891; Australia in 1889-90. In 1887 he was made Commander of the Order of St. Gregory by Pope Leo XIII; in 1907, was knighted. His songs were publ. under the pseudonym 'Ralph Betterton'; he also publ. Student and Singer (London, 1892; a vol. of reminiscences); The Singing Master (2 parts; London, 1900); The Art of Singing and Vocal Declamation (London, 1908); Reminiscences of My Life (London, 1909). — Cf. J. J. M. Levien, Sir Charles Santley (London, 1930).

Santoliquido, Francesco, Italian composer; b. San Giorgio a Cremano, Naples, Aug. 6, 1883. He studied at the Santa Cecilia in Rome; graduated in 1909; in 1912 he went to live in Hammamet, a village in Tunisia, spending part of each year in Rome; about 1950 made his home in Anacapri. Many of his compositions contain melodic inflections of Arabian popular music. —Works: the operas La Favola di Helga (Milan, Nov. 23, 1910), Ferhuda (Tunis, Jan. 30, 1919), La Bajadera dalla maschera gialla (Rome, 1923), La Porte verde, musical tragedy in 4 acts (Bergamo, Oct. 15, 1953); for orch.: Crepuscolo sul mare (Nuremberg, Jan. 19, 1909; composer conducting), Il Profumo delle oasi sahariane (Tunis, April 17, 1918; also in Rome, March 5, 1922), Acquarelli (Rome, April 11, 1923), symph. in F (1924), La Sagra dei morti, heroic elegy for the victims of World War I (Rome, 1929), Tre miniature per i piccoli (1933), Preludio e Burlesca, for string orch. (Rome, 1938), Alba di gloria, symph. prelude (Rome, Nov. 13, 1940), Grotte di Capri, 5 pieces for orch. (1943), Santuari asiatici, symph. sketches (Naples, 1952); a string quartet; a violin sonata; Aria antica, for cello and piano; Chiarità lunare, for violin and piano; 2 Pezzi for 5 wind instruments; Piccola ballata for piano; 2 Acqueforti tunisine for piano; a cycle of songs to words by Pierre Louys; Messa facile for chorus; publ. Il Dopo-Wagner; Claudio Debussy e Richard Strauss (Rome, 1909); also books of verse; wrote short stories in English.

Santoro, Claudio, Brazilian composer; b. Manaos, Nov. 23, 1919. He studied at the Cons. of Rio de Janeiro; also took lessons with Koellreutter, who gave him instruction in modern techniques, particularly the 12-tone method; held a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1946. Under the influence of Soviet ideas about realistic music, Santoro abandoned atonal music and adopted the diatonic style; this orientation is expressed in his work Symphony of Peace, which he conducted by special invitation in Moscow (March 21, 1955). Among his works written in an atonal idiom are a wind quintet (1942), 3 string quartets, 3 violin sonatas, 2 cello sonatas, and his 1st and 2nd symphonies (1940; 1945); his 3rd symphony (1948), Ode to Stalingrad (1947), ballet The Factory (1949), and a marionette opera, Zéé Brasil, are in the diatonic style.

Santucci (san-toooh'-chē), Marco, Italian composer; b. Camajore, Tuscany, July 4, 1762; d. Lucca, Nov. 29, 1843. He was Anfossi's successor (1797-1808) as maestro at S. Giovanni in Laterano, Rome; in 1808 was appointed canon at the Cathedral of Lucca. A motet a 16, for 4 choirs, received a prize from the Accademia Napoleone in 1806 because of the 'entirely new and original' combination of voices. Bains publ. an energetic protest against this award, pointing out that such polyphonic writing was common in works by Italian composers of the 16th and 17th centuries. Santucci also wrote Masses, motets, psalms, canons in up to 7 parts, symphonies, organ sonatas, etc.; publ. a treatise Sulla melodia, sull'armonia e sul metro (1828). —Cf. G. Rinuccini, Biografia di Marco Santucci (Milan, 1851).

Sanz, Gaspar, Spanish 17-century guitarist; b. Calanda (Aragón); studied at Salamanca Univ., taking degrees in theology and philosophy; became maestro to the Spanish Viceroy at Naples. He was guitar teacher to Don Juan of Austria, for whom he wrote an Instrucción de música sobre la guitarra española (Zaragoza, 1674; 2nd ed., 1697), containing examples of contemporary Spanish dance music and folksong.

Sanzogno, Nino, outstanding Italian conductor and composer; b. Venice, April 13, 1911. He studied composition with Malipiero; conducting with Scherchen; appeared as opera conductor at the Teatro La Fenice in Venice and La Scala in Milan; also in South America. Among his compositions are the symph. poems I quattro cavalieri dell'Apocalisse (1930) and Vanitas (1931); a viola concerto (1935); cello concerto (1937); songs.

Sapelnikov, Vassily, Russian pianist; b. Odessa, Nov. 2, 1868; d. San Remo, March 17, 1941. He was a pupil of L. Brassin and Sophie Menter at the St. Petersburg Cons.; in 1888, made his début at Hamburg with the Tchaikovsky concerto in B♭ minor, under the composer's direction; then made tours throughout Europe; 1897-99, prof. at the Moscow Cons.; then resigned to continue his concert tours. Later, he lived chiefly in Germany, also for a time in Florence; 1916, returned to Russia, remaining there until 1922; from 1923, again in Germany and Italy. He wrote an opera, Der Khan und sein Sohn, and pieces for piano (Petite Mazourka, Danse des elfes, Valse-Caprice, Impromptu, Solitude).

Saperton, David, American pianist; b. Pittsburgh, Oct. 29, 1889. He received his first instruction on the piano from his grandfather, a former tenor at the Brünn Opera, while his father, a physician and former concert bass, superintended his theoretical studies. At the age of 10 he made his first public appearance with orch. in Pittsburgh; in 1905 he gave a recital in New York; in 1910-12, toured Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Russia, and Scandinavia; then returned to the U. S. In 1921, he married Vanita Godowsky (daughter of Leopold Godowsky); 1924, joined the piano faculty of the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia.

Sapio, Romualdo, singing teacher; b. Palermo, Sept. 8, 1858; d. New York, Sept. 22, 1943; studied at the Palermo Cons.; made his début as conductor in Milan (1883); conducted Patti's tours of North and South America; also operatic and concert tours of Albani and Nordica; in 1892, settled in New York as teacher of singing and head of the vocal dept. at the National Cons.; the same year he married the concert singer Clementine de Vere (q.v.).

Sapp, Allen Dwight, American composer; b. Philadelphia, Dec. 10, 1922. He studied piano with Robert Elmore and theory with William Hoppich, in Philadelphia (1935-39); subsequently at Harvard Univ., with Walter Piston (composition) and E. B. Hill (orchestration); A.B., 1942; A.M., 1949; graduate studies there with A. T. Davison, A. T. Merritt, Irving Fine, and Randall Thompson; also took courses with Aaron Copland and Nadia Boulanger. He was chief cryptanalyst in the Civil Censorship Division of the U.S. Army, and chief of Code Research (1943-48). In 1949, appointed to the faculty of Harvard Univ. His music is cast in a Classical framework, with contrapuntal and harmonic elements treated as of equal importance; the main influences are Stravinsky, Piston, and Copland; in some works, he applies, freely, methods of serial thematic composition derived from Schoenberg's theories.—Works: for orch.: Andante (1941), 2 suites (1949; 1957), The Double Image (1957), The Septagon (1957); chamber music: 2 violin sonatas (1942; 1948), viola sonata (1949), piano trio (1949), string quartet (1951), string trio (1956), Ricercare for Viols (1956); for piano: 4 sonatas, 2 sonatinas, Dialogues for 2 pianos (1952); 5 Landscapes for chorus (1950); The Marriage Song, after Donne, for chorus and orch. (1951); 4 motets for chorus (1953); The Little Boy Lost, after William Blake, for chorus and orch. (1954); songs (The Lady and the Lute, 7 Epigrams for bass, etc.).

Saran, Franz Ludwig, German writer on music; b. Altranstädt, near Lützen, Oct. 27, 1866; d. Erlangen, April 24, 1931. He studied languages in Halle, Leipzig, and Freiburg; 1896, instructor in German language and literature at the Halle Univ.; 1905, prof.; from 1913, prof. at the Univ. of Erlangen. His works having to do with music include the revision and editing of R. Westphal's Aristoxenos' von Tarent Melodik und Rhythmik (2 vols., 1893) and the editing and transcription of the famous Jena MS of Minnelieder (2 vols.; with G. Holz and E. Bernouilli, 1901; vol. 2 includes a systematic treatise on the rhythm of medieval songs). Also publ. Der Rhythmus des französischen Verses (1904).

Sarasate, Pablo de (Pablo Martín Melitón Sarasate y Navascuez), celebrated Spanish violin virtuoso; b. Pamplona, March 10, 1844; d. Biarritz, Sept. 20, 1908. At the age of 10 he played before Queen Isabella, who presented him with a fine Stradivarius. After successful concerts in Spain he studied at the Paris Cons. under Alard, taking 1st prize in the violin class in 1857, and a 'premier accessit' in 1859. His playing was noted for its extraordinary beauty of tone, impeccable purity of intonation, perfection of technique, and grace of manner; but his repertory consisted almost exclusively of fantasies on operatic airs (mostly arranged by himself). Later his taste changed, and he turned to the masterpieces of violin literature. His tours, extending through all Europe, North and South America, South Africa, and the Orient, were an uninterrupted succession of triumphs. He bequeathed to his native city the gifts that had been showered upon him by admirers throughout the world; the collection was placed in a special museum. For him Lalo wrote his Symphonie espagnole; Bruch, the Schottische Fantasie; Mackenzie, the Pibroch suite. Sarasate's compositions, exclusively for violin, are pleasing and effective.—Works: for violin and orch.: Zigeunerweisen (his best and most popular work), Navarra, for 2 violins, Peteneras, caprice, Jota de San Fermín, Spanish dances; also Spanish dances for violin and piano, etc.—Cf. M. L. van Vorst, Sarasate in 'Scribner's Magazine' (March, 1896); Julio Altadill, Memorias de Sarasate (Pamplona, 1909); A. Hartmann, The Perfect Virtuoso, in 'Musical America' (March 25, 1940); León Zárate, Sarasate (Barcelona, 1945); G. Woolley, Pablo Sarasate: His Historical Significance in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1955); Angel Sagardia, Pablo Sarasate (Palencia, 1956).

Sargeant, Winthrop, American music critic; b. San Francisco, Dec. 10, 1903; studied violin with Elkus in San Francisco, Prohaska in Vienna, and Capet in Paris; was violinist of the San Francisco Symph. (1922-24), the N. Y. Symph. (1926-28), and the N. Y. Philh. (1928-30); 1931-34, on the editorial staff of 'Musical America'; 1934-36, music critic of the 'Brooklyn Daily Eagle'; 1936-37, chief music critic of the 'N. Y. American'; 1937-53, music editor of 'Time' magazine; since 1954, of the 'New Yorker'; author of Jazz, Hot and Hybrid (N. Y., 1938; new ed., 1946); Geniuses, Goddesses, and People (N. Y., 1949); Listening to Music (N. Y., 1958).

Sargent, Sir (Harold) Malcolm (Watts), eminent English conductor; b. London, April 29, 1895. He studied organ at the Royal College of Organists, London, winning the Sawyer Prize in 1910; then was articled to Dr. Keeton, organist of the Peterborough Cathedral (1911-14); served in the infantry during World War I; after the Armistice, studied piano with Moiseiwitsch. He made his début as conductor in 1921, at the Promenade Concerts in London, in a performance of his own piece, Impression on a Windy Day; organized the Leicester Symph. (1922); conducted 2 seasons with the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co.; conducted the Llandudno Orch. (1926-28); filled engagements with Diaghilev's Ballets Russes (1927-30); was conductor of the Royal Choral Society, London (from 1928), the Court-auld-Sargent Concerts (from 1929); led various choruses in England, and won great distinction as choral conductor. In 1945, made his American début in a series of concerts with the NBC Symph.; toured Australia for the Australian Broadcasting Commission (1945-46). He was knighted in 1947. In 1950 he was appointed conductor of the B.B.C. Symph. Orch.; resigned in 1957. —Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (Bristol, 1951; pp. 159-64).

Sarly, Henry, Belgian composer; b. Tirlemont, Dec. 28, 1884; studied there with his father, then at Louvain, and with Huberti, Tinel, Gilson, and Du Bois at the Brussels Cons.; in 1921 was appointed inspector of music education in the Belgian schools. —Works: Scènes brabançonnées, for orch.; La Chanson d'Hallewijn, for soli, chorus, and orch.; Le Cœur d'Hjalmar, for voice and orch.; piano quintet; Poème, for piano trio; violin sonata; 2 Danses antiques, for piano; songs. Author of Cours théorique et pratique d'harmonie.

Sarnette, Eric Antoine Joseph André, French inventor of musical instruments; b. Tarbes, Hautes-Pyrénées, Nov. 28, 1898. He studied at Marseilles, and later at the Paris Cons.; also took lessons with Adolphe Sax, the son of the inventor of the saxophone. He became interested in acoustical problems; was active on the staff of the French Radio; manufactured new musical instruments (the sax trumpet, alto clarinet, etc.); publ. La Musique et le micro (Paris, 1934) and L'Orchestre moderne à la Radio (Paris, 1940).

Saro (zah'-ro), J. Heinrich, German bandmaster and composer; b. Jessen, Jan. 4, 1827; d. Berlin, Nov. 27, 1891. In 1859 he became bandmaster in Berlin; in 1867 his band won the international competition at the Paris Exposition; in 1872 he was awarded a gold medal for his performance at the Boston Jubilee. He wrote a number of brilliant pieces of military music, and also some symph. works; publ. Lehre vom musikalischen Wohlklang und Tonsatz, and Instrumentationslehre für Militärmusik.

Sarrette (sähr-rëht'), Bernard, founder of the Paris Conservatoire; b. Bordeaux, Nov. 27, 1765; d. Paris, April 13, 1858. A captain in the national guard at Paris, he brought together, after the 14th of July, 1789, 45 musicians to form the nucleus of the Parisian band of the national guard. In 1790 the City of Paris assumed the expenses of this band, which was increased to 70 members, among them artists of distinction. In 1792 the financial embarrassments of the Commune led to the suspension of payment; but Sarrette held the band together, and, with the aid of the municipality, established a free school of music employing all the members as teachers. From this school came the musicians employed in the fourteen armies of the Republic. Its energetic principal soon had it converted into a national Institute of Music; and in Sept., 1795, it was definitely organized as a Conservatory. Sarrette, having gained his end, assumed the captaincy of the 103rd Regiment; but the board of directors (5 inspectors and 4 professors) proved so incompetent that he was recalled to the directorship of the Conservatoire in 1796. By introducing advanced methods of instruction, establishing the school of declamation, the concert hall, the grand library, etc., he raised the Cons. to an institution of the first rank. At the Restoration in 1814 he was deprived of his position; nor would he accept it after the revolution of 1830; not wishing to oust his friend Cherubini. — Cf. Pierre Constant, B. Sarrette et les origines du Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation (Paris, 1895).

Sarti, Giuseppe, Italian composer (nicknamed 'Il Domenichino'); b. Faenza (baptized Dec. 1), 1729; d. Berlin, July 28, 1802. He was a pupil of Padre Martini at Bologna. As a young man he was organist in the Cathedral of his native town (1748-50); appointed director of a theater there in 1752; produced there his earliest opera, Pompeo in Armenia (1752); in the following year he brought out a new opera, Il Rè pastore, in Venice, with excellent success. In 1755 he was engaged as conductor of an Italian opera company in Denmark. The opera performances were terminated after 2 seasons, but Sarti received the appointment of court conductor, and remained in Copenhagen. In 1765 he was sent by the Danish government to Italy in order to engage singers for a new opera season in Copenhagen, but the project was put off; Sarti remained in Italy until 1768; returned to Copenhagen, and conducted at the Danish court theater (1770-75). As a result of political intrigue in the palace, Sarti was dismissed. He returned to Italy with his wife, the singer Camilla Pasi, whom he had married in Copenhagen. He was director of the Cons. dell' Ospedaletto at Venice (1775-79); then entered the competition for the post of maestro di cappella at the Cathedral of Milan, and won it, defeating a number of competitors including Paisiello. He assumed his position at the Milan Cathedral in 1778; his prestige as a scholar and composer was very high; he was also renowned as a teacher; Cherubini was one of his students; his operas were produced in rapid succession in Copenhagen, Venice, Rome, Florence, and Vienna. In 1784 he was engaged by Catherine the Great as court musician. On the way to Russia he passed through Vienna, where he was received with honors by the Emperor Joseph II; he also met Mozart, who quoted a melody from Sarti's opera Fra i due litiganti il terzo gode in Don Giovanni. His greatest success in St. Petersburg was Armida e Rinaldo (1786; remodelled from an earlier opera, Armida, originally produced in Copenhagen, 1759); the leading part was sung by the celebrated Portuguese mezzo-soprano, Luiza Todi; but she developed a dislike of Sarti, and used her powerful influence with Catherine the Great to prevent Sarti's re-engagement. However, he was immediately engaged by Prince Potemkin, and followed him to southern Russia and Moldavia during the military campaign against Turkey; on the taking of Otchakov, Sarti wrote an ode to the Russian liturgical text of thanksgiving, and it was performed in January 1789 at Jassy, Bessarabia, with the accompaniment of cannon shots and church bells. Potemkin gave him a sinecure as head of a musical academy in Ekaterinoslav, but the academy was never established in fact. After Potemkin's death in 1791, his arrangements with Sarti were honored by the court of St. Petersburg; in 1793 Sarti was finally reinstated as court composer. He retained his position during the reign of the Emperor Paul, and only after the latter's death decided to leave Russia. He died on his way to Italy, in Berlin. Although Sarti enjoyed a great reputation during his lifetime, and wrote music comparing favorably with that by other Italian composers, his productions sank into oblivion almost immediately after his death; only his sacred works continued to be heard in Italy; he also wrote some instrumental music. — Operas: Pompeo in Armenia (Faenza, 1752); Il Rè pastore (Venice, 1753); Vologeso (Copenhagen, 1754); Gram og Signe (Copenhagen, Feb. 21, 1757); Ipermestra (Rome, 1766); La Contadina fedele (Vienna, 1771); La Successione in Sidone (Copenhagen, April 4, 1771); Deucalio e Pyrrha (Copenhagen, March 19, 1772); Le Gelosie villane (Venice, Nov., 1776); Medonte, Rè di Epiro (Florence, Sept. 8, 1777); I Contrattempi (Venice, Nov., 1778); Giulio Sabino (Venice, Jan., 1781); Fra due litiganti il terzo gode (Milan, Sept. 14, 1782); I finti eredi (St. Petersburg, Oct. 19, 1785); Armida e Rinaldo (St. Petersburg, 1786); Ena nel Lazio (Gatchina, near St. Petersburg, Oct. 15, 1799); contributed some numbers to the Russian opera The Early Reign of Oleg (St. Petersburg, Oct. 22, 1790). — Cf. G. Pasolini-Zanelli, Giuseppe Sarti (Faenza, 1883); A. Untersteiner, Giuseppe Sarti, in the 'Gazzetta Musicale di Milano' (July 24, 1902); C. Rivalta, Giuseppe Sarti, musicista faentino del secolo XVIII (Faenza, 1928); G. Fesetchko, Giuseppe Sarti, in 'Sovetskaya Musica' (Dec., 1950); R.-Aloys Mooser, Annales de la Musique et des Musiciens en Russie au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (vol. II; Geneva, 1951; pp. 415-50, 463-79).

Sartori, Claudio, Italian musicologist; b. Brescia, April 1, 1913. He studied in Pavia and Strasbourg; in 1942 was appointed chief librarian of the Cons. of Milan; publ. important bibliographical works, among them Bibliografia delle opere musicali stampate da Ottaviano Petrucci (1948) and Bibliografia della musica strumentale stampata in Italia fino al 1700 (1952); also La Notazione italiana del trecento (1938), Il Regio Conservatorio di musica 'G. B. Martini' di Bologna (1942), a monograph on Monteverdi (1950), etc.

Sartorio, Antonio, Italian composer; b. Venice, c. 1620; d. there, after 1685. From 1666 to 1675 he was court Kapellmeister at Hanover; in 1676 appointed maestro di cappella at San Marco in Venice, holding that post until 1685. He was a leading representative of the Venetian school; produced 14 operas, of which the best were Seleuco (Venice, Jan. 16, 1666), L'Adelaide (Venice, Feb. 19, 1672), and Orfeo (Venice, Dec. 14, 1672); publ. a Psalm for 8 voices (1780), cantatas, and motets.

Sartorius, Paul, German organist and composer who flourished at the turn of the 17th century. He publ. a book of madrigals in 1600 and a collection of German songs, Neue deutsche Liedlein (1601); also wrote motets.

Sás, Andrés, composer; b. Paris, April 6, 1900, of French-Belgian parents. He studied at the Brussels Cons. with Marchot (violin), Ernest Closson (music history), and Maurice Imbert (counterpoint). In 1924 he was engaged by the Peruvian government to teach violin at the National Academy of Music in Lima; in 1928 he returned temporarily to Belgium; the following year, settled in Lima permanently; married the Peruvian pianist Lily Rosay, and with her established the Sás-Rosay Academy of Music. He became profoundly interested in Peruvian folk music, and collected folk melodies; made use of many of them in his own compositions. —Works: incidental music to Molière's Le Malade imaginaire (1943); the ballets, La Señora del pueblo (Viña del Mar, Chile, Jan. 20, 1946), El Hijo prodigo (1948); for orch.: Canción India (1927), Tres Estampas del Perú (1936); Poema Indio (1941), Sueño de Zamba (1943), Danza Gitana (1944), La Patrona del pueblo (1945), La Parihuana (1946), Las Seis Edades de la Tía Conchita (1947), La Leyenda de la Isla de San Lorenzo (1949); Recuerdos, for violin and piano (also for orch.; 1927); Rapsodia Peruana, for violin and piano (also for orch.; 1928); Sonata-Fantasia, for flute and piano (1934); string quartet (1938); Cantos del Perú, for violin and piano (1941); for piano: Aires y Danzas del Perú (2 albums; 1930 and 1945), Suite Peruana (1931), Himno y Danza (1935), Sonatina Peruana (1946); numerous choruses and songs. —Cf. N. Slonimsky, Music of Latin America (N. Y., 1945; pp. 275-76).

Saslavsky, Alexander, violinist; b. Khar'kov, Russia, Feb. 8, 1876; d. San Francisco, Aug. 2, 1924. He studied in his native town with local violin teachers; then with Jakob Grün in Vienna; after a Canadian tour in 1893 he joined the N. Y. Symph. Orch.; in 1903 became its concertmaster; was also concertmaster of the Russian Symph. Orch. in N. Y.; in 1919, became concertmaster of the newly organized Los Angeles Philharmonic. See 'Dictionary of American Biography.'

Sassòli, Ada, Italian harpist; b. Bologna, Sept. 25, 1886; d. Rome, Dec. 3, 1946. She studied at the Cons. of Bologna; then entered the class of A. Hasselmans at the Paris Cons., winning 1st prize for harp playing in 1902. She toured with Mme. Melba in England and Australia (1904-05); made several tours of the U. S.; appeared as soloist with the Boston Symph. and other American orchestras; returned to Europe in 1916; was appointed prof. of harp at the Santa Cecilia in Rome, and lived there until her death.

Satie (-sah-tē'), Erik (-Alfred-Leslie), French composer; b. Honfleur, May 17, 1866; d. Paris, July 1, 1925. At the age of 8 he received his first musical instruction from a local organist, Vinot (pupil of Niedermeyer); at 13 he settled in Paris, where his father was a music publisher; attended the Paris Cons. for an academic year (1883-84), took some lessons with Guilmant, but then abandoned systematic study; played in various cabarets in Montmartre; publ. some piano pieces in 1887 (which he, to mislead, marked op. 62). A meeting with Josephin Péladan, a writer and mystic, led him to join a Rosicrucian Society in Paris (1892); he also composed music to Péladan's plays. He was nearly 40 years old when he decided to resume serious study of composition, and entered the Schola Cantorum, in the classes of Vincent d'Indy and Albert Roussel. In 1898 he moved to Arcueil, near Paris; became friendly with many leaders of the modern movement in literature, opera, dance, and music. He had devoted admirers among musicians; Milhaud, Sauguet, and the conductor Desormière organized (without facetious intent) the 'École d'Arcueil' to honor Satie as master and leader. Satie's eccentricity was not merely a pose, but an esthetic creed which he proclaimed in the face of ridicule and public contempt. His influence on French composers of the first quarter of the 20th century was profound, and had lasting consequences even after a change of style made his once-daring ideas obsolete. Hence, the flow of books and articles on Satie, and repeated attestations by French musicians to his erratic genius. — Works: the 'symph. drama' Socrate, after Plato, for 4 sopranos and small orch. (Paris, Société Nationale de Musique, Feb. 14, 1920); a lyric comedy, Le Piège de Méduse (1913); the ballets: Parade (Paris, May 18, 1917), Mercury (Paris, June 15, 1924), Relâche (Paris, Nov. 29, 1924); incidental music to Péladan's Le Fils des Étoiles (1891; prelude orchestrated by Ravel) and Le Prince de Byzance (1891), to H. Mazel's Le Nazaréen (1892), to J. Bois' La Porte héroïque au ciel (1893), to M. de Féraudy's Pousse l'Amour (1905); numerous piano pieces, notable chiefly for their extravagant titles: Pièces froides, Prélude en tapisserie, Trois Préludes flasques, Descriptions automatiques, Embryons desséchés, Heures séculaires et instantanées, Crépuscule matinal, Obstacles vénimeux, Trois Morceaux en forme de poire, etc. His early piano suite, Gymnopédies (1888), was orchestrated by Debussy; his posthumous pieces, Jack in the Box (title in English) and Cinq Grimaces pour le 'Songe d'une nuit d'été', were orchestrated by Milhaud. — Cf. Erik Satie, Mémoires d'un amnésique (facetious autobiographical notice, in the bulletin of the Société Internationale de Musique, Paris, 1912); G. Jean-Aubry, La Musique française d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1916); Carl van Vechten, Erik Satie, in Interpreters and Interpretations (N. Y., 1917); R. D. Chennevière, Erik Satie and the Music of Irony, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1919); A. Cœuroy, La Musique française moderne (Paris, 1922); W. W. Roberts, The Problem of Satie, in 'Music & Letters' (Oct., 1923); 2 special issues of the 'Revue Musicale' (March, 1924; June, 1952); G. M. Gatti, Musicisti moderni d'Italia e di fuori (Bologna, 1925); W. Dankert, Der Klassizismus Erik Saties und seine geistesgeschichtliche Stellung, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (Nov., 1929); P.-D. Tamplier, Erik Satie (Paris, 1932); D. Milhaud, Notes sur Erik Satie, in 'Les Œuvres Nouvelles' (vol. 6, N. Y., 1946); W. H. Mellers, Studies in Contemporary Music (London, 1947); Rollo H. Myers, Erik Satie (London, 1948).

Satter, Gustav, pianist and composer; b. Vienna, Feb. 12, 1832; d. Savannah, Ga.,

1879. He studied in Vienna and Paris; undertook a pianistic tour in the U. S. and Brazil (1854-60) with surprising success; went back to Paris, where Berlioz warmly praised his music; then lived in Vienna, Dresden, Hanover, and Stockholm. He wrote an opera, Olanthe; the overtures Lorelei, Julius Caesar, An die Freude; 2 symphonies; a symph. poem, George Washington; much chamber music; 3 sonatas, studies, waltzes, etc., for piano; about 160 opus numbers in all. — Cf. The Life and Works of Gustav Satter (Macon, Georgia, 1879).

Sattler (zat'-lär), Heinrich, German organist and teacher; b. Quedlinburg, April 3, 1811; d. Brunswick, Oct. 17, 1891. He devoted himself mainly to teaching; from 1861, was on the staff of the Oldenburg Seminary. He publ. a treatise, Die Orgel (5 eds.); a book, Erinnerung an Mozart's Leben und Werke (1856); composed an oratorio, Die Sachsentaufe; and 2 cantatas, Triumph des Glaubens and Pfingstkantate; sacred works; chamber music; many organ pieces.

Satz (sahts), Ilya, Russian composer; b. Tchernobyl, Kiev district, April 30, 1875; d. St. Petersburg, Dec. 12, 1912. He studied cello in Kiev; then took lessons in composition with Taneyev in Moscow; his general education was desultory. He traveled in Europe in 1900; then made a tour as a cellist through Siberia. He returned to Moscow in 1903; in 1905 became music director of the Studio of the Moscow Art Theater, and wrote incidental music for new plays, including Maeterlinck's Blue Bird and Andreyev's A Man's Life; also composed ballet music for Salome's dance; the ballet The Goat-Footed (a Dance of the Satyrs was reorchestrated and prepared for performance by Glière). Satz had a talent for the grotesque; a lack of technique prevented his development into a major composer. A memorial volume, Ilya Satz, with articles by Glière and several members of the Moscow Art Theater, was publ. at Moscow in 1923.

Sauer (zow'-ër), Emil von, eminent pianist; b. Hamburg, Oct. 8, 1862; d. Vienna, April 28, 1942. He studied with Nicholas Rubinstein in Moscow (1879-81), and Liszt in Weimar (1884-85); made numerous European tours; played in the U. S. in 1898-99 and 1908. From 1901 till 1907, and again from 1915, was prof. at the 'Meisterschule für Klavierspiel' in Vienna; from 1908 till 1915 he lived in Dresden; appeared in concerts until 1936, and then retired to Vienna. He wrote 2 piano concertos,

2 piano sonatas, many studies for piano; edited the complete works of Brahms and pedagogical works of Pischna, Plaidy, Kulak, etc. He publ. an autobiography, Meine Welt (1901).

Sauguet, Henri, French composer; b. Bordeaux, May 18, 1901. He was a pupil of Joseph Canteloube; in 1922 he went to Paris, where he studied with Koechlin; became associated with Erik Satie, and formed a group designated as the École d'Arcueil (from the locality where Satie lived near Paris). In conformity with the principles of utilitarian music, he wrote sophisticated works in an outwardly simple manner; his first conspicuous success was the production of his ballet, La Chatte, by Diaghilev in 1927. —Works: operas: Le Plumet du colonel (Paris, April 24, 1924), La Contrebasse, after Tchekhov (Paris, 1932); La Chartreuse de Parme (Paris, March 16, 1939), La Gageuse imprévue (Paris, July 4, 1944), Les Caprices de Marianne (Aix-en-Provence, July 20, 1954); ballets: La Chatte (Monte Carlo, April 30, 1927), Paul et Virginie (Paris, April 15, 1943), Les Mirages (Paris, Dec. 15, 1947), Cordelia (Paris, May 7, 1952); Les Saisons et les jours, 'allegoric symph.' (Paris, Dec. 15, 1946); Symphonie expiatoire, in memory of innocent war victims (Paris, Feb. 8, 1948); Orphée, for violin and orch. (Aix-en-Provence, July 26, 1953); much incidental music; film music; chamber music; piano pieces; songs.

Sauret (soh-rä'), Émile, French violinist; b. Dun-le-Roi (Cher), May 22, 1852; d. London, Feb. 12, 1920. He studied with Vieuxtemps at the Paris Cons. and with Bériot in Brussels; was a child prodigy, and made his London début at the age of 14. He was 20 when he was engaged for an American tour (1872); gave concerts in America again in 1874, 1876, 1877, and 1895. From 1903 till 1906 he taught at the Chicago Musical College; returning to Europe, he lived in Geneva and Berlin; was at various times prof. of violin in London and Berlin. In 1872 he married the pianist Teresa Carreño (divorced in 1877). He was a typical representative of the French school of violin playing, distinguished by grace, elegance, and excellent taste. He composed for violin and orch. Souvenir de Moscou, Rapsodie russe, Rapsodie suédoise, Farfalla, and Élégie et rondo; for violin and piano, Feuilles d'album, Pensées fugitives, Scènes champêtres, 20 grandes études, 12 Études artistiques, 24 Études-caprices; publ.

a method, Gradus ad Parnassum du violoniste (in 4 parts, with annotations in French and German); also made about 25 transcriptions.

Sauveur (soh-vör'), Joseph, French acoustician; b. La Flèche, March 24, 1653; d. Paris, July 9, 1716. A deaf-mute, learning to speak in his 7th year, he became a remarkable investigator in the realm of acoustics; in 1696, member of the Académie. —Works (all publ. in the Mémoires of the Académie): Principes d'acoustique et de musique (1700-01); Application des sons harmoniques à la composition des jeux d'orgue (1702); Méthode générale pour former des systèmes tempérés . . . (1707); Table générale des systèmes tempérés (1711); Rapports des sons des cordes d'instruments de musique aux flèches des cordes (1713). He was the first to calculate absolute vibration numbers, and to explain scientifically the phenomenon of overtones.—Cf. H. Scherchen, Vom Wesen der Musik, chap. I (Zürich, 1946; in English as The Nature of Music, Chicago, 1950).

Sauzay (soh-zä'), (Charles-) Eugène, French violinist and composer; b. Paris, July 14, 1809; d. there, Jan. 24, 1901. He studied with Baillot at the Paris Cons., and was a member of Baillot's string quartet; taught violin at the Paris Cons. from 1860 to 1892. He publ. a Symphonie rustique; Études harmoniques, for violin; numerous transcriptions; also Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, étude sur le quatuor (Paris, 1861; 2nd ed., 1884); and L'École de l'accompagnement (Paris, 1869).

Savage, Henry Wilson, American impresario; b. New Durham, N. H., March 21, 1859; d. Boston, Nov. 29, 1927. He started in business as a real estate operator in Boston, where he built the Castle Square Theater; later went into theatrical enterprise himself and in 1897 opened a season of opera in English. His 'Castle Square Opera Co.' flourished, and he undertook tours of other cities. In 1900 he formed the 'English Grand Opera Co.' and engaged several artists from the Carl Rosa Co. of London. In 1904-05 he organized a special troupe, producing Parsifal in English in the principal cities of the East and Middle West; in 1906-07 the same company made a tour with Puccini's Madama Butterfly; he also produced light opera with another company, which, among other operettas, introduced Lehár's The Merry Widow to the U. S. (1906). Cf. Dictionary of American Biography.

Savard (sah-vahr'), (Marie-Gabriel-) Augustin, French music educator; b. Paris, Aug. 21, 1814; d. there, June, 1881. He studied with Leborne and Bazin; in 1843 became prof. of solfège, later of harmony and thorough-bass, at the Paris Cons. — Publications: Cours complet d'harmonie (1853); Principes de la musique (1861; 14th ed., 1913) and its abridge version, Premières notions de musique (1866; 25th ed., 1897); Études d'harmonie pratique; etc.

Savard, (Marie-Emmanuel-) Augustin, French composer and pedagog; son of the preceding; b. Paris, May 15, 1861; d. Lyons, Dec. 6, 1942. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Durand, Taudou, and Massenet; won the Prix de Rome in 1886 with the cantata La Vision de Saul; 1892-93 was chorumaster at the Opéra; director of the Cons. in Lyons from 1902 until 1921, when he retired. — Works: a lyric drama, La Forêt (Paris Opéra, 1910); 2 symphonies; an overture, Roi Lear; Poème for voice and orch.; a string quartet; a violin sonata; etc.

Savart (sah-vahr'), Félix, French acoustician; b. Mézières, June 30, 1791; d. Paris, March 17, 1841. He was prof. of acoustics at the Collège de France; in 1827, was elected member of the Académie. — Writings (publ. in the 'Annales de physique et de chimie'): Mémoire sur la construction des instruments à cordes et à archet (1819, separate reprint; in German, 1844); Sur la communication des mouvements vibratoires entre les corps solides (1820); Sur les vibrations de l'air (1823); Sur la voix humaine (1825); Sur la communication des mouvements vibratoires par les liquides (1826); Sur la voix des oiseaux (1826); etc.

Saville, Frances, American soprano; b. San Francisco, Jan. 6, 1862; d. Burlingame, Calif., Nov. 8, 1935. She went early to Australia, where she made her début in oratorio; continued her studies in Paris with Marchesi; in 1892 made her operatic début in Brussels; also appeared with the Carl Rosa Co. in England, at the Paris Opéra-Comique, in Vienna, Berlin, St. Petersburg, Warsaw, etc.; on Nov. 18, 1895, she made her début as Juliette (with Jean de Reszke) at the Metropolitan Opera House, on whose roster she remained through the season 1899-1900 later she reappeared at the Vienna Opera; then lived in retirement in California.

Savine, Alexander, conductor, composer, and singing teacher; b. Belgrade, April 26, 1881; d. Chicago, Jan. 19, 1949. He studied in Belgrade with S. Mokranjac, and later at the Vienna Cons. (singing with Pauline Lucca). He then was engaged as opera conductor in Berlin (1905-07); taught singing at the Musical Academy in Winnipeg, Canada (1908-12); later settled in the U. S.; was director of the opera dept. at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (1922-24); in 1929 moved to Chicago. He was married (1914) to the soprano Lillian Blauvelt. — Works: the opera Xenia (Zürich, May 29, 1919); 4 symph. poems; choruses; songs.

Sax, (Antoine-Joseph-) Adolphe, inventor of the saxophone; b. Dinant, Belgium, Nov. 6, 1814; d. Paris, Feb. 7, 1894. He was the son of Charles-Joseph Sax, the instrument maker, and acquired great skill in manipulating musical instruments from his early youth; his practical and imaginative ideas led him to undertake improvements of the clarinet and other wind instruments. He studied the flute and clarinet at the Brussels Cons.; in 1842 he went to Paris with a wind instrument of his invention, which he called Saxophone, made of metal, with a single-reed mouthpiece and conical bore. He exhibited brass and woodwind instruments at the Paris Exposition of 1844, winning a silver medal; his father joined him in Paris, and together they continued the manufacture of new instruments; evolved the saxhorns (improved over the bugle-horn and ophicleide by replacing the keys by a valve mechanism), and the saxotromba, a hybrid instrument producing a tone midway between the bugle and the trumpet. Conservative critics and rival instrument makers ridiculed Sax's innovations, but Berlioz and others warmly supported him; he also won praise from Rossini. His instruments were gradually adopted by French military bands. Sax won a gold medal at the Paris Industrial Exposition of 1849. Financially, however, he was unsuccessful, and was compelled to go into bankruptcy in 1852. He exhibited his instruments in London (1862) and received the Grand Prix in Paris (1867) for his improved instruments. In 1857 the Paris Cons. engaged him as instructor of the saxophone; with some interruptions, saxophone instruction was continued at the Paris Cons. for a whole century. He publ. a method for his instrument. Although Wieprecht, Červený, and others disputed the originality and priority of his inventions, legal decisions gave the rights to Sax; the saxophone became a standard instrument; many serious composers made use of it in their scores (Bizet's L'Arlésienne, etc.). The instrument fell into desuetude after Sax's death; but about 1918 a spectacular revival of the saxophone took place, when it was adopted in jazz bands; its popularity became world-wide; numerous methods were publ. and special schools established; and there appeared saxophone virtuosos for whom many composers wrote concertos. —Cf. O. Comettant, Histoire d'un inventeur au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle (Paris, 1860); Th. Lajarte, Instruments Sax et fanfares civiles (Paris, 1876); Albert Remy, La Vie tourmentée d'Adolphe Sax (Brussels, 1939); L. Kochritzky, Adolphe Sax and His Saxophone (N. Y., 1949).

Sax, Charles-Joseph, Belgian instrument maker; b. Dinant-sur-Meuse, Feb. 1, 1791; d. Paris, April 26, 1865. He established an instrument factory at Brussels in 1815, manufacturing not only wind instruments, but also pianos, harps, and guitars; his specialty, however, was brass instruments. He joined his son Adolphe Sax in Paris, and helped him to launch his revolutionary inventions.

Sayão (sah-yahn'-oh), Bidú, Brazilian soprano; b. Rio de Janeiro, May 11, 1902. She studied with Jean de Reszke in Nice (1923-25); sang at the Opéra-Comique in Paris, at the Royal Opera in Rome, and at La Scala, Milan. In 1935 she made her American début in a recital in N. Y.; opera début with the Metropolitan Opera Co. on Feb. 14, 1937, as Manon; also made several South American tours.

Saygun, Ahmed Adnan, Turkish composer; b. Izmir, Sept. 7, 1907; studied in Paris with Le Flem and Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum. Returning to Turkey in 1931, he was active as teacher and conductor in Istanbul; in 1946 appointed prof. at the Cons. of Ankara. He visited the U.S. in 1950 and again in 1958. —Works: 1-act opera, Tas Bebek (Ankara, Dec. 27, 1934); 3-act opera, Kerem (Ankara, March 1, 1953); Yunus Emre, oratorio (Ankara, May 25, 1946); piano concerto (1952); quartet for clarinet, saxophone, percussion, and piano (1933); 2 string quartets (1947 and 1958); symphony (1953); an orchestral suite of national dances, Zeybek, Interlude and Horon (Ankara, April 14, 1951); cello sonata (1935); violin sonata (1942).

Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg, Count Friedrich Ernst, German composer; b. Castle Sannerz, Fulda, June 5, 1837; d. Meran, April 16, 1915. He pursued a military career; also studied music with Julius Rietz in Leipzig; publ. Szenen aus der Frithjofsage for voice and orch., and songs; wrote 2 operas, Die Wolfenbraut (Graz, 1879) and Antonius und Kleopatra (Graz, 1883).

Sayve, Lambert de, Flemish composer; b. Sayve, near Liège, 1549; d. Prague, Feb. 1614. As a youth he went to Vienna, where he became a singer in the Imperial chapel; in 1569 he was choirmaster at the monastery of Melk, near Linz, a post he retained until 1577 (made a trip to Spain in 1570). In 1582 he entered the service of the Archduke Charles in Graz; in 1583 he joined the retinue of Archduke Matthias, King of Bohemia, and lived in Prague. He publ. during his lifetime Il primo libro delle canzoni a la Napolitana a 5 voci (Vienna, 1582); Teutsche Liedlein mit 4 Stimmen (Vienna, 1602); and (his most important works) a collection Sacra Symphonia (1612), containing 141 pieces a 4 to 16 in 12 books. Modern reprints by F. Blume in 'Das Chordwerk' (vol. 51) and by A. Einstein in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 77). 6 Masses by Sayve (a 5 to 16) are in Austrian libraries. —Cf. R. Bragard, Lambert de Sayve (Liège, 1934); H. Osthoff, Die Niederländer und das deutsche Lied (Berlin, 1938); H. Federhofer, L. de Sayve an der Grazer Hofkapelle, in 'Revue Belge de Musicologie' (vol. 3; 1949).

Sbriglia (sbrēl'-yāh), Giovanni, celebrated singing teacher; b. Naples, June 23, 1832; d. Paris, Feb. 20, 1916. He sang as a tenor at the San Carlo Theater in Naples; was heard in Italy by Maretzek, the impresario, who engaged him for a season at the Academy of Music, N. Y., where Sbriglia appeared with Adelina Patti (1860); he then made a grand tour of the U. S. with Parodi and Adelaide Philipps; also sang in Mexico and Havana. He returned to Europe in 1875 and settled in Paris, where he became a highly successful vocal teacher. Jean, Joséphine, and Édouard de Reszke studied with him when they were already professional artists; Sbriglia trained the baritone voice of Jean de Reszke, enabling him to sing tenor roles. Pol Plançon, Nordica, and Sibyl Sanderson were also his pupils.

Scalchi (skahl'-kē), Sofia, celebrated Italian mezzo-soprano; b. Turin, Nov. 29, 1850; d. Rome, Aug. 22, 1922. She made her début at Mantua in 1866 as Ulrica in Verdi's Ballo in Maschera; then sang throughout Italy; appeared in concert in London (Sept. 16, 1868) and at Covent Garden (Nov. 5, 1868) as Azucena, obtaining enormous success. She visited the U. S. for the first time in 1882 with Mapleson's opera company; sang in the opening season of the Metropolitan Opera (1883-84) and again in 1891-96. She then toured with unfailing success in Russia, Austria, Spain, and South America. She married Count Luigi Lolli in 1875; in 1896 she retired to her estate in Turin; in 1921 went to Rome, where she remained until her death. Her voice had a range of 2½ octaves; it was essentially a contralto voice, but with so powerful a high register that she successfully performed soprano parts.

Scalero, Rosario, eminent Italian pedagogue and composer; b. Moncalieri, near Turin, Dec. 24, 1870; d. Settimo Vittone, near Turin, Dec. 25, 1954. He studied violin with Sivori in Genoa, and in London with Wilhelmj; general subjects with Mandyzewski in Vienna. In 1896 he was engaged as violin teacher in Lyons, France; then was instructor at Santa Cecilia, Rome, and examiner at the Naples Cons., and later at the Cons. of Parma. In 1919 he came to the U. S., and was head of the composition classes at the David Mannes School, N. Y.; in 1928 joined the faculty of the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia; among his students there were Samuel Barber, Gian Carlo Menotti, and Lukas Foss. He wrote a violin concerto; Neapolitan Dances, for violin and piano; chamber music; sacred songs; etc.

Scaria, Emil, Austrian bass singer; b. Graz, Sept. 18, 1838; d. Blasewitz, near Dresden, July 22, 1886. He studied with Netzer at Graz, with Lewy at Vienna, and with Garcia in London. After singing in opera in Dessau (1862), Leipzig (1863), and Dresden (1864), he acquired a fine reputation; in 1872 he was engaged as a member of the Court Opera of Vienna. He excelled in Wagner's operas; created the role of Gurnemanz in Parsifal. — Cf. A. Neumann, Erinnerungen an Richard Wagner (Leipzig, 1907; English transl., N. Y., 1908).

Scarlatti, Alessandro, founder of the 'Neapolitan School' of music; b. Palermo, May 2, 1660; d. Naples, Oct. 24, 1725. He was brought to Rome in 1672, and was a pupil there of Carissimi; in 1679 he conducted his first known opera, L'Errore innocente, at Rome; then followed a performance there of L'Onestà negli amori at the palace of Queen Christina of Sweden (Feb. 6, 1680); on the score of another opera, Il Pompeo (Rome, Jan. 25, 1683), he is styled maestro di cappella to the Queen. In 1694 he was maestro to the Viceroy at Naples. In 1703 he became assistant maestro to Foggia at S. Maria Maggiore, Rome, and succeeded him as 1st maestro in 1707, resigning in 1709 and returning to Naples, where he subsequently became maestro of the royal chapel. He also taught music; was briefly engaged at the Cons. di Santa Maria di Loreto, Naples (1689), but never had prolonged tenure; among his private pupils was Hasse, who studied with him in 1724. Scarlatti wrote approximately 115 operas (about 50 are still extant); La Rosaura (Rome, 1690), ed. by Eitner, was printed by the 'Gesellschaft für Musikforschung,' vol. XIV; in Teodora Augusta (Rome, Jan. 3, 1693) he uses an incipient recitativo obbligato accompanied by the entire orchestra; also several arias with the first part sung da capo, a style that was later generally adopted by opera composers. — An aria and a duet from Laodicea e Bernice (Naples, 1701) have been publ. by J. J. C. Maier, also a terzet and quartet from La Griselda (Rome, 1721), with German transl. by Wolzogen; in Il Tigrane, his most celebrated opera, marked in the libretto as his 106th work for the stage (Naples, Feb. 16, 1715), the orch. comprises violins, violas, cellos, double-basses, 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 2 bassoons, and 2 horns; Il Trionfo dell'onore, his only comic opera (Naples, Nov. 26, 1718), was transl. into English by Geoffrey Dunn (London, July 23, 1937). Other important operas are: Olimpia vendicata (Naples, Dec. 23, 1685); La Statira (Rome, Jan. 5, 1690); Pirro e Demetrio (Naples, Jan. 28, 1694); Il Prigioniero fortunato (Naples, Dec. 14, 1698). 14 oratorios are also known; he is said to have written over 200 Masses (up to ten parts), besides much other sacred music (Concerti sacri, motets a 1-4, with 2 violins, viola, and organ, were publ. at Amsterdam as op. 1 and 2; a few separate numbers are in the collections of Choron, the Prince of Moskowa, Commer [a Tu es Petrus], Dehn, Proske, and Rochlitz; Choron also publ. a Requiem, and Proske a Mass); his secular vocal music includes madrigals (one a 4, is in Padre Martini's 'Esempi di contrappunto fugato'), serenatas, duets, and a vast number of cantatas (Dent gives a list of 600 with basso continuo and 61 with instruments). The Cons. Library at Paris has 8 vols. of these in MS. He also composed 12 symphonies (concertos) for small orch., a string quartet, a sonata for 3 flutes and one for 2 flutes, 2 violins, and continuo, one for flute, 2 violins, and continuo, 2 suites for flute and harpsichord, variations on Corelli's La Follia, toccatas for harpsichord, etc. Some of his works have been publ. by G. Bas and F. Nekes (a 4-voiced Missa ad voces æquales), Lenzewski (concertos for strings and continuo), Tebaldini (sonata for flute and strings), J. S. Shedlock (toccatas for harpsichord; 9 vols.), Tagliapietra, Longo (keyboard compositions), etc. — Cf. E. J. Dent, The Operas of A. S., in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (IV, 1); id., A. S. His Life and Works (London, 1905); Ch. Van den Borren, A. S. et l'esthétique de l'opéra napolitain (1922); A. Lorenz, A. S.'s Opern in Wien, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' IX, 2 (1926); id., A. S.'s Jugendopern (2 vols., Augsburg, 1927); E. Jaloux, Sur un air de S. (Maastricht, 1928); A. Cametti, in 'Musica d'oggi' (Feb., 1931); P. Fienga, La véritable patrie et la famille d'Alessandro Scarlatti, in the 'Revue Musicale' (Jan., 1929); Gli Scarlatti (Siena, 1940); O. Tiby, La Famiglia Scarlatti: nuove ricerche e documenti (Rome, 1947).

Scarlatti, (Giuseppe) Domenico, famous Italian composer and harpsichordist; son of Alessandro Scarlatti; b. Naples, Oct. 26, 1685; d. Madrid, July 23, 1757. A pupil of his father, he was named organist and composer at the royal chapel in Naples when he was 16; two years later his first operas, Ottavia restituita al trono and Il Giustino, were produced in Naples (Dec. 19, 1703). In 1705 he was sent by his father to Venice, where he studied with Gasparini. In 1709 he was back in Rome, where he engaged in a friendly contest with Handel, who was adjudged his superior on the organ, while Scarlatti held his own on the harpsichord. From 1709-14 he was maestro di cappella to Queen Maria Casimira of Poland, for whose private theater (in her palace at Rome) he composed 7 operas and an oratorio. He had been appointed in 1713 assistant to Bai, the maestro di cappella at the Vatican, and upon the latter's death in 1714 succeeded him as maestro; resigned in 1719. During this time was also maestro to the Portuguese Ambassador to the Holy See. There is no evidence that Scarlatti went to London in 1720, as is usually stated. But in that year his opera Amor d'un ombra e gelosia d'un'aura (re-written as Narciso) was produced there at the Haymarket Theatre under Roseingrave's direction (May 30), and his brother Francesco gave a concert there in September. Scarlatti went to Lisbon in 1719 or 1720, where he was engaged as maestro of the royal chapel and music-teacher to the Princess Maria Barbara, for whom he composed his famous Esercizi per gravicembalo, of which the first were publ. in 1738. In 1729 the princess married the heir to the Spanish throne, and Scarlatti accompanied her to Madrid, where he spent the rest of his life. When Maria Barbara became queen in 1746, he was appointed her 'maestro de cámara.' After leaving Italy he returned only twice, once for a brief visit to his father at Naples in 1724, and the other time to marry Maria Catalina Gentili on May 15, 1728, in Rome. In Madrid, Scarlatti does not appear to have composed operas; but he founded an instrumental school in Spain, the chief representative being P. Antonio Soler (q.v.), his pupil. He composed over 600 sonatas and pieces for harpsichord, besides operas, cantatas, and sacred music (2 Misereres a 4; a Stabat Mater; a Salve Regina for soprano and strings [1756], his last work); a Fuga estemporanea per orchestra (MS) in the library of the Univ. of Münster. The principal MS source for the harpsichord works of Scarlatti is the collection of the Biblioteca Marciana at Venice, which belonged originally to the Queen of Spain and at her death was brought to Italy by Farinelli. — Domenico Scarlatti's special claim to renown rests upon his harpsichord music; he studied the peculiarities of the instrument, and adapted his compositions to them, being one of the finest writers in the 'free style' (the homophonic 'song form' with graceful ornamentation, in contrast to the former—contrapuntal—vocal or organ style). He also obtained effects by the frequent crossing of the hands; runs in thirds and sixths; leaps wider than an octave; broken chords in contrary motion; tones repeated by rapidly changing fingers; etc. He has been called the founder of modern piano technique. — During Scarlatti's lifetime some of his keyboard pieces were printed in various eds. at London and Paris. Later editions include a collection by Czerny, of 200 pieces; Breitkopf, 60; Pauer, 50; Köhler, 12 sonatas and fugues; Tausig, 3 sonatas; Bülow, 18 pieces in suite-form; Schletterer, 18; André, 28; Banck, 30; Farcenc, 100 (in 'Trésor des pianistes'); Sauer, 25; Barth, 70; Gerstenberg, 5 sonatas (not included in the Longo ed.); Buonamici, 22 (in Schirmer's Library, vol. 73). Ricordi publ. Scarlatti's 'complete' harpsichord works, ed. by A. Longo, in 11 vols. (1 vol. as supplement; 1906 ff.), also a Thematic Index (Milan, 1937). 60 sonatas ed. by Ralph Kirkpatrick were publ. by G. Schirmer. — The most important publication dealing with the life and works of Domenico Scarlatti is Ralph Kirkpatrick's book, publ. in Princeton and London in 1953. Apart from clearing up biographical data, Kirkpatrick gives a new chronological numbering of works, which has been widely accepted and promises to supersede Longo's catalogue. Cf. also E. J. Dent, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (1906); id., in 'Aufakt' (1922); A. Longo, D. Scarlatti e la sua figura nella storia della musica (Naples, 1913); G. F. Malipiero, D. Scarlatti, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1927); F. Torrefranca, Le Origini italiane del romanticismo musicale (Turin, 1930); W. Gerstenberg, Die Klavierkompositionen D. Scarlattis (1933); S. Sitwell, A Background for D. Scarlatti (London, 1935); U. Rolandi, Per una bibliografia di Scarlatti, in 'Bolletino dei Musicisti' (Nov., 1935); C. Valabrega, D. Scarlatti, il suo secolo, la sua opera (with 233 musical examples; Modena, 1937); S. A. Luciani, D. Scarlatti (biographical and bibliographical notes; valuable, in the 'Rassegna Musicale' (Dec., 1938; Jan. and Feb., 1939; also reprinted separately); Gli Scarlatti (Siena, 1940); A. Sôlar Quintes, Documentos sobre la familia de Domenico Scarlatti, in the 'Anuario Musical' (Barcelona, 1949).

Scarlatti, Giuseppe, Italian composer, grandson of Alessandro Scarlatti; b. Naples, 1718; d. Vienna, Aug. 17, 1777. He was in Rome in 1739, and later in Lucca, where he married Barbara Stabili, a singer (1747). He went to Vienna in 1757, and remained there for 20 years until his death. He wrote 31 operas, produced in Rome, Florence, Lucca, Turin, Venice, Naples, Milan, and Vienna; of these the most successful was L'Isola disabitata (Venice, Nov. 20, 1757). Another Giuseppe Scarlatti (a nephew of Alessandro Scarlatti), whose name appears in some reference works, was not a musician.—Cf. H. Springer, Das Partitur-Autograph von Giuseppe Scarlatti's bisher verschollener Clemenza di Tito, in 'Beiträge zum Bibliotheks- und Buchwesen' (1913); Gli Scarlatti (Siena, 1940); O. Tiby, La Famiglia Scarlatti: nuove ricerche e documenti (Rome, 1947); Frank Walker, Some Notes on the Scarlattis, in 'Music Review' (Aug., 1951).

Scarmolin, (Anthony) Louis, composer and conductor; b. Schio, Italy, July 30, 1890; came to the U. S. as a boy; graduated from the N. Y. College of Music in 1907; served in the U. S. Army during World War I; returning to America, he settled in Philadelphia; then resided in Union City, N. J. He wrote 6 operas; numerous symph. poems, including Night (1937); Overture on a Street Vendor's Ditty (1938); Dra- matic Overture (1938); The Ambassador Overture (1938); Mercury Overture (1939); Visions, a symph. impression (1939); Dramatic Tone Poem (Chicago, June 2, 1939); Miniature Symphony (Cleveland, Feb. 7, 1940); The Clockmaker for small orch. (N. Y., March 25, 1933). His works aggregate about 200 op. numbers.

Scarpini, Pietro, Italian pianist; b. Rome, April 6, 1911. After study in Rome, he made several tours in Europe; in 1940 was appointed teacher at the Florence Cons. He made his U. S. début with the N. Y. Philharmonic on Nov. 4, 1954. He specializes in modern works, but is also successful in the standard repertory.

Scelsi, Giacinto, Italian composer; b. La Spezia, Jan. 8, 1905. He studied in Rome and in France. Influenced by Schoenberg, he adopted the 12-tone method after 1930.—Works: for orch.: Rotatives (1930), Rapsodie (1931), concertino for piano and orch. (1934), Ballade, for cello and orch. (1945), La Naissance du verbe, cantata for chorus and orch. (Brussels, International Festival for Contemporary Music, June 28, 1950); string quartet; piano trio; piano sonata; songs.

Schaab, Robert, German organist and composer; b. Rötha, near Leipzig, Feb. 28, 1817; d. Leipzig, March 18, 1887. He studied with C. F. Becker and Mendelssohn; became organist of the Johanniskirche in Leipzig; publ. a great number of works for organ; his 60 Choralvorspiele (op. 118, 119, 121) are of value.

Schaaf, Edward Oswald, American composer; b. Brooklyn, Aug. 7, 1869; d. Newark, N. J., June 25, 1939. He was a physician; M. D., Bellevue Hospital Medical College, N. Y., 1894; studied at the Univ. of Vienna (1894-96); musically an autodidact, through intensive study of classical masterworks. He wrote a grand opera, 8 smaller operas, 2 symphonies, 4 string quartets, 2 Masses, 70 songs, 20 military band pieces, and 90 works for the player-piano. He publ. A Study of Modern Operatic Art; The Art of Playing Piano Transcription; etc.; lived most of his life in Newark.

Schachner, Rudolf Joseph, German pianist and composer; b. Munich, Dec. 31, 1821; d. Reichenhall, Aug. 15, 1896. He was a pupil of J. B. Cramer; appeared in concert in Vienna, Paris, Leipzig, etc.; in 1853, settled in London as a teacher; later went to Vienna. He composed 2 piano concertos and a number of pieces for piano solo: Poésies musicales, Romance variée, Ombres et rayons, La Chasse, etc.

Schacht, Matthias Henriksen, music lexicographer; b. Viborg, Jütland, April 29, 1860; d. Kierteminde, Aug. 8, 1900. He was a pedagogue; served as rector; left in MS a music dictionary, Bibliotheca musica (publ. by G. Skjerne as Musicus danicus, Copenhagen, 1928), which Gerber utilized for his lexicon.

Schacht, Theodor von, German composer; b. Strasbourg, 1748; d. Regensburg, June 20, 1823. He studied in Stuttgart with Jommelli; then went to Regensburg (1773), where he became music director of the town theater; wrote numerous operas in German and Italian; also symphonies, concertos, and chamber music. He was a minor master of the contrapuntal art; wrote an amusing series of 84 canons, under the title Divertimento del bel sesso nel soggiorno di Baden (1811). —Cf. S. Färber, Das Regensburger fürstlich Thurn und Taxissche Hoftheater und seine Oper (Regensburg, 1936).

Schack (Žak), Benedikt, tenor and composer; b. Mirowitz, Bohemia, 1758; d. Munich, Dec. 11, 1826. He studied in Prague and Vienna; made his operatic début in Salzburg (1786); became acquainted with Mozart's librettist Schikaneder, and through him met Mozart in Vienna (1789) and became friendly with him; he was the singer (if contemporary reports are to be trusted) who sang passages from the Requiem for the dying composer. Mozart wrote piano variations (K. 613) on an aria from Schack's opera Die verdeckten Sachen. Among Schack's theatrical pieces the following were performed in Vienna: Der dumme Gärtner aus dem Gebirge (July 12, 1789), Die wiener Zeitung (Jan. 12, 1791), Die Antwort auf die Frage (Dec. 16, 1792), Die beiden Nannerin (July 26, 1794).

Schad, Joseph, pianist and composer; b. Steinach, Germany, March 6, 1812; d. Bordeaux, July 4, 1879. He studied at the Würzburg Cons. and later with Aloys Schmitt at Frankfurt. In 1834 he became organist at Morges, Switzerland; in 1847, settled in Bordeaux, where he gained high reputation as a piano teacher. He publ. a great number of melodious piano pieces which enjoyed some success during his lifetime: Le Soupir, La Gracieuse, La Rose des Alpes, Fleur des Alpes, Tarentelle, etc.; fantasias, transcriptions.

Schadewitz, Carl, German composer; b. St. Ingbert, Jan. 23, 1887; d. Reppendorf, near Kitzingen, March 27, 1945. Studied in Würzburg, and lived there most of his life as choral conductor and teacher. He was a prolific composer; his works include a musical fairy tale, Johannisnacht; a 'Romantic' oratorio, Kreislers Heimkehr; an opera, Laurenca; a tone poem, Heldengedenken (1943); a number of songs, of which the cycle Die Heimat (1934) is outstanding; much chamber music; choruses. —Cf. A. Maxsein, Carl Schadewitz (Würzburg, 1954).

Schaefer, Karl Ludolf, German physiologist, physicist, and acoustician; b. Rostock, July 2, 1866; d. Berlin, Feb. 12, 1931. He obtained his M. D. diploma in 1889; then studied with Carl Stumpf; taught vocal physiology at the Berlin Hochschule. He publ. Musikalische Akustik (1902; 2nd ed., 1912), Einführung in die Musikwissenschaft auf physikalischer, physiologischer und psychologischer Grundlage (Leipzig, 1915); and numerous other studies on acoustics and tone psychology.

Schaeffner, André, French musicologist; b. Paris, Feb. 7, 1895. He studied at the Schola Cantorum with Vincent d'Indy; at the same time pursued research in ethnology; contributed numerous articles on folk music and on modern composers to French magazines; publ. an important monograph on Stravinsky (1931); Origine des instruments de musique (1936); Les Instruments de musique en pays Kisi (1949); etc.

Schäfer, Dirk, eminent Dutch composer, pianist, and pedagogue; b. Rotterdam, Nov. 23, 1873; d. Amsterdam, Feb. 16, 1931. He studied in Rotterdam and at the Cons. of Cologne; after a European tour as a pianist, he settled at The Hague (1895-1904); from 1904, mostly in Amsterdam, where he was active as pianist and teacher. —Works: Rapsodie javanaise, for orch. (1904); Suite pastorale, for orch. (1906); 2 violin sonatas; piano quintet; cello sonata; Sonate inaugurale, for piano; other piano works; songs. —Cf. Herinnering aan Dirk Schäfer (Amsterdam, 1932); Cor Backers, Nederlandse Componisten van 1400 tot op onze tijd (Amsterdam, 1942; pp. 110-12).

Schäffer, August, German composer; b. Rheinsberg, Aug. 25, 1814; d. Baden-Baden, Aug. 7, 1879. Pupil, from 1833, of Mendelssohn at Berlin, where he spent most of his life. His humorous duets and quartets won great popularity; he also composed symphonies, string quartets, piano pieces, etc., and produced a few operas: Emma von Falkenstein (Berlin, 1839), José Riccardo (Hanover, 1857), Junker Habakuk (Hanover, 1861).

Schäffer, Julius, German choral conductor and writer; b. Krevese, near Osterburg, Sept. 28, 1823; d. Breslau, Feb. 10, 1902. He studied theology at Halle, where friendship with Franz, and musicians in the nearby city of Leipzig, won him over to music. In 1850 he went to Berlin to study under Dehn; 1855, to Schwerin, where he founded and conducted the 'Schlosskirchenchor,' modelled after the Berlin cathedral choir. In 1860 he became conductor of the 'Singakademie,' Breslau. — Works: chorale-books (1866; 1880); songs and part-songs; in defence of Franz's 'additional accompaniments' to scores by Bach and Handel, Schäffer wrote, versus Chrysander, Zwei Beurteiler Robert Franz's (1863), Fr. Chrysander in seinen Klavierauszügen zur deutschen Händel-Ausgabe (1876), and R. Franz in seinen Bearbeitungen älterer Vokalwerke (1877); also Die Breslauer Singakademie (1875). — Cf. E. Bonn, J. Schäffer (Breslau, 1903).

Schaffrath, Christoph, German composer; b. Hohenstein-on-Elbe, 1709; d. Berlin, Feb. 17, 1763. As harpsichordist he entered the service of Frederick the Great in 1735 (while the latter was still Crown Prince) at Rheinsberg, and in 1740 followed that monarch to Berlin. He wrote concertos and sonatas for harpsichord, chamber music, etc.

Schafhäutl, Karl Franz Emil von, German acoustician; b. Ingolstadt, Feb. 16, 1803; d. Munich, Feb. 25, 1890, as prof. of mining, etc., custodian of the State geological collections, etc. He was also a student of acoustics, and intimate with Theobald Böhm (q.v.), whom he advised and aided in the construction of his instruments. — Publ. Theorie gedackter, zylindrischer und konischer Pfeifen und der Querflöten (1833, in the 'Neue Annalen der Chemie'); Über Schall, Ton, Knall und einige andere Gegenstände der Akustik (1834, in the same; both separately printed); Über Phonometrie (1854); Abt Georg Jos. Vogler; Sein Leben, Charakter und musikalisches System (1888); also, in the 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung,' 1879, investigations into the phenomena of 'Klangfarbe' (tone color), with results at variance with Helmholtz's theory. — Cf. Erinnerungen an K. Ett und K. von Schafhäutl, in 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1891).

Schalk, Franz, Austrian conductor; b. Vienna, May 27, 1863; d. Edlach, Sept. 2, 1931. Pupil and friend of Anton Bruckner; 1888, Kapellmeister in Reichenbach; 1889-95, in Graz; 1895-98, in Prague; guest conductor at Covent Garden in 1898, 1907, and 1911; 1898-99, succeeded A. Seidl at the Metropolitan Opera House; 1899, conductor of the Berlin Royal Opera; from 1900 at the Vienna Hofoper; 1904-21, also conductor of the Vienna Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and prof. of the classes in conducting at the Royal Academy of Music; from 1918 director of the Vienna State Opera (succeeded Gregor; 1919-24, co-director with R. Strauss; thereafter sole director). A tireless worker, he contributed much to the high artistic standards of the Vienna Opera. His book, Briefe und Betrachtungen, was brought out posthumously (Vienna, 1935).

Schalk, Josef, Austrian pianist and writer on music; brother of Franz Schalk; b. Vienna, March 24, 1857; d. there, Nov. 7, 1911. Studied with Bruckner and Epstein; piano teacher at the Vienna Cons. His arrangements of the Bruckner symphonies for piano 4 hands did much to make these works known, and his book, Anton Bruckner und die moderne Musikwelt (1885), effectively upheld Bruckner's music. He was also a friend of Hugo Wolf, whom he championed in an article in 1890.

Schall, Klaus, Danish composer; b. Copenhagen, April 28, 1757; d. near Copenhagen, Aug. 10, 1835. He was a violinist and theater conductor; wrote many instrumental pieces and 7 operas to Danish librettos, of which the following (all produced in Copenhagen) were the most successful: Claudine af Villa Bella (Jan. 29, 1787), Kinafarerne (March 2, 1792), Domherren i Milano (March 16, 1802), and De tre Galninger (March 19, 1816).

Scharfe, Gustav, German singing teacher; b. Grimma, Saxony, Sept. 11, 1835; d. Dresden, June 25, 1892. He was a baritone at the Dresden Court Opera for 11 years; teacher of singing at the Cons. (1874); professor (1880). — Publications: Die methodische Entwicklung der Stimme, a standard work; also choruses and songs.

Scharfenberg, William, editor; b. Kassel, Germany, Feb. 22, 1819; d. Quogue, Long Island, N. Y., Aug. 8, 1895. A pupil of Hummel at Weimar till 1837; returned to Kassel, playing 2nd violin in Spohr's quartet; went to New York in 1838, making his début as a pianist in Hummel's septet, and at once took a leading position in the city as a teacher and concert player. He was successively secretary, vice-president, treasurer, and (1863) president of the Philharmonic Society. For many years he was music editor and adviser to the firm of G. Schirmer, and did excellent editorial work.

Scharrer, August, composer and conductor; b. Strasbourg, Oct. 18, 1866; d. Fürth, Oct. 24, 1936. As a young man he was sent on a business trip to the U. S.; in Salt Lake City he visited the Mormon Tabernacle, and was granted permission to play on the magnificent organ; after improvising for hours he resolved to devote himself entirely to music. He studied in Strasbourg, and Berlin (composition with H. Hofmann and Ph. Rüfer, musicology with Spitta and Beller-mann). In 1897-98 he was Mottl's assistant in Karlsruhe; 1898-1900, Kapellmeister at the Stadtheater in Regensburg; 1900-04, 2nd conductor of the Kaim Orch. in Munich; 1904-07, conductor of the Philharmonic Orch. in Berlin; 1907-14, director of the Strasbourg Cons.; 1914-25, conductor of the 'Lehrer-Gesangverein' in Nuremberg. He wrote an opera, Die Erlösung (Strasbourg, Nov. 21, 1895); a symph. poem, Per Aspera ad Astra; overtures; songs with orch. accompaniment.

Scharrer, Irene, English pianist; b. London, Feb. 2, 1888. She studied at the Royal Academy of Music under Tobias Matthay; début in 1901; then appeared in numerous recitals and with all the great English orchestras; successful tours in Europe and the U. S.; then taught at the Matthay School in London.

Scharwenka, (Ludwig) Philipp, composer and pedagogue; b. Samter, Posen, Feb. 16, 1847; d. Bad Nauheim, July 16, 1917. After a gymnasial course at Posen, he entered Kullak's Academy at Berlin in 1865, studying chiefly under Wüerst and H. Dorn; in 1870, teacher of theory and composition at the Academy. In 1881 he founded, with his brother, Xaver, the 'Scharwenka Cons.'; also accompanied his brother to New York in 1891, but returned in 1892, joining Goldschmidt in the direction of the Cons., which was amalgamated with the Klindworth Cons. in 1893. In 1880 he married the violinist Marianne Stresow (1865-1918), who then taught in his Cons. —Works: For orch.: op. 19, Serenade; op. 20, Zwei polnische Volkstänze; op. 37, Wald und Berggeister, intermezzo; op. 38, Polnische Tanzweisen; op. 40, Liebesnacht, 'Fantasiestück'; op. 43, Festouvertüre; op. 76, Arkadische Suite; op. 87, Frühlingswogen, symph. poem; op. 92, Traum und Wirklichkeit, do.; op. 95, violin concerto in G; op. 96, symphony in D minor; op. 108, Dramatische Fantasie; op. 115, Symphonia brevis in Eb. Chamber music: piano quintet; 2 string quartets; 3 piano trios; trio for violin, viola, and piano; 2 violin sonatas; viola sonata in G minor; cello sonata. Minor pieces for violin and piano, and for cello and piano; numerous piano pieces (op. 61, 3 sonatas; op. 85, Zwei Rhapsodien; etc.); choruses; cantatas; songs.

Scharwenka, (Franz) Xaver, brother of the preceding; b. Samter, Jan. 6, 1850; d. Berlin, Dec. 8, 1924. Pianist and composer; pupil of Kullak and Wüerst at Kullak's Academy, graduating in 1868, when he was appointed teacher there. First public concert at the Singakademie, 1869, very successful; for about 10 years he gave an annual series of 3 chamber concerts there (with Sauret and H. Grünfeld); also arranged and conducted orchestral subscription concerts. In 1874 he gave up his position as teacher, and made pianistic tours through Europe and America. In 1881 he founded the Berlin 'Scharwenka Cons.', of which he was director till 1891, then establishing his Cons. in New York; made his American début as pianist playing his own concerto, N. Y., Jan. 24, 1891. In 1898 he returned to Berlin, as co-director of the Klindworth-Scharwenka Cons., and head of the piano classes; resigned in 1914, and established his own 'Meisterschule' for piano in Berlin. He revisited the U. S. in 1913-14. Scharwenka was court pianist to the Emperor of Austria. —Works: opera Mataswintha (Weimar, Oct. 4, 1896; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., April 1, 1907); 4 piano concertos; many effective piano pieces (Polish Dances, etc.); numerous songs; church music; technical works, Beiträge zur Fingerbildung (op. 77), Studien im Oktavenspiel (op. 78), Meisterschule des Klavierspiels (a collection of famous études progressively arranged). Also many arrangements; and a critical edition of Schumann's piano works. —Author of Methodik des Klavierspiels (1907; with A. Spanuth) and Klänge aus meinem Leben: Erinnerungen eines Musikers (Leipzig, 1922).

Schatz, Albert, b. Rostock, Germany, May 19, 1839; d. there, Oct. 18, 1910. From earliest youth he was especially interested in opera and its history; although a merchant, he spent much time collecting materials for a history of the opera. After living for 7 years in San Francisco he returned in 1873 to his native city, where he took over the music business of Ludwig Trutschel. In 1867 he formed the plan of writing the history of opera from original sources, and began to collect the original librettos of the first performances; after almost half a century he had in his possession about 12,000; the statistical material he had entered on about 80,000 cards, each containing the title of an opera, name of composer and librettist, city, theater, and date, not only of first performance (world première), but also of first performances in other cities. In 1908 he sold his valuable collection of librettos, one of the largest in the world, to the Library of Congress in Washington, where it is kept intact as a separate unit. —Cf. O. G. Sonneck's preface to Catalogue of Opera Librettos printed before 1800 (2 vols.; Washington, 1914).

Schaub (schowp), Hans Ferdinand, German composer, conductor, and teacher; b. Frankfurt, Sept. 22, 1880. He studied at the Hoch Cons. there with Iwan Knorr (theory) and Carl Friedberg (piano); with Arnold Mendelssohn in Darmstadt, and with Humperdinck in Berlin; also took lessons with Richard Strauss. He then became instructor at the Cons. of Breslau (1903-06); in 1906, settled in Berlin as teacher at Benda's Cons. and editor of the 'Deutsche Musikerzeitung.' In 1916 he moved to Hamburg as music critic and pedagogue. After 1951 he lived in Hanstedt. —Works: Paisiaggia, for orch. (1928); 3 Intermezzi, for small orch.; Capriccio, for violin and piano; the cantata Den Gefallenen (1940); oratorio, Deutsches Te Deum (1942).

Schauffler, Robert Haven, American writer on music; b. Brünn, Moravia (of American parents), April 8, 1879. He was educated at Princeton Univ., and also took courses at the Univ. of Berlin; studied cello with B. Steindel, A. Schroeder, and A. Hekking. —Books: The Musical Amateur (Boston, 1911); Fiddler's Luck, the Gay Adventures of a Musical Amateur (Boston, 1920); Beethoven: The Man who Freed Music (N. Y., 1929; abridged ed. 1932 as The Mad Musician; new ed., 1937); The Unknown Brahms (N. Y., 1933); The Magic of Music; an Anthology . . . (N. Y., 1935); Florestan: the Life and Work of Robert Schumann (N. Y., 1945); Franz Schubert: The Ariel of Music (N. Y., 1949); also Fiddler's Folly and Encores (N. Y., 1942); various smaller publications.

Schaum, John W., American piano pedagogue; b. Milwaukee, Jan. 27, 1905; studied at Milwaukee State Teachers College, at Marquette Univ. (B.M., 1931), and Northwestern Univ. (M.M., 1934). He established a successful piano teaching class in Milwaukee and publ. several piano methods and many collections of piano pieces that sold an enormous number of copies: The Schaum Piano Course (9 vols.); The Schaum Adult Piano Course (3 vols.); The Schaum Duet Albums (2 vols.); also theory books, The Schaum Theory Lessons (2 vols.) and The Schaum Note Spellers (2 vols.).

Schebek (shā'-bek), Edmund, writer on music; b. Petersdorf, Moravia, Oct. 22, 1819; d. Prague, Feb. 11, 1895, as Imperial councillor and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He wrote the official (Austrian) report on the musical instruments at the Paris Exposition of 1855 (separate reprint 1858); Der Geigenbau in Italien und sein deutscher Ursprung (1875; in English, London, 1877); and Zwei Briefe über J. J. Froberger (1874).

Schebest (shā'-best), Agnese, noted mezzo-soprano; b. Vienna, Feb. 10, 1813; d. Stuttgart, Dec. 22, 1869. She studied at Dresden, and sang in the opera there; publ. an autobiography, Aus dem Leben einer Künstlerin (1857).

Schechter, Boris. See Shekhter, Boris.

Scheel (shāl), Fritz, conductor; b. Lübeck, Germany, Nov. 7, 1852; d. Philadelphia, March 13, 1907. His grandfather and father were orchestral conductors, and at 10 the boy played the violin in his father's orch.; 1864-69, pupil of F. David in Leipzig. At 17 he began his career as concertmaster and conductor at Bremerhaven; in 1873, solo violin and conductor of the summer concerts in Schwerin; succeeded Hans Sitt in 1884 as conductor of the Chemnitz municipal orch.; 1890-3, conductor of orchestral concerts in Hamburg. Came to America in 1893, and after conducting some orchestral concerts in New York went to Chicago in 1894 as conductor of the Trocadero concerts at the Columbian Exposition; in 1895 he established the San Francisco Symph. Orch., which he conducted for 4 seasons; then accepted an engagement to conduct a series of summer concerts at Woodside Park, Philadelphia. His playing of Beethoven's symphonies induced influential music-lovers to organize the 'Philadelphia Orchestral Association,' which established in the fall of 1900 the Philadelphia Orchestra, of which Scheel was conductor until his death. —Cf. Frances A. Wister, 25 Years of the Philadelphia Orchestra 1900-1925 (Philadelphia, 1925); John H. Mueller, The American Symphony Orchestra (Bloomington, Ind., 1951, pp. 125-27); also 'Dictionary of American Biography' XVI.

Scheff, Fritz, celebrated soprano; b. Vienna, Aug. 30, 1879; d. New York, April 8, 1954. She studied singing with her mother, Hortense Scheff, of the Vienna Opera, and adopted her last name, having previously appeared under her father's name, Yager. She made her operatic debut in Frankfurt (1899); appeared at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., as Marzelline in Fidelio (Dec. 28, 1900), and continued for 3 seasons as a member of the company. Later she shifted to light opera, and it was in this field that she became famous. She created the role of Fifi in Victor Herbert's operetta Mlle Modiste (Trenton, N. J., Oct. 7, 1905); her singing of Fifi's waltz song 'Kiss Me Again' became a hallmark of her career. Her 3 marriages (to Baron Fritz von Bardeleben, the American writer John Fox Jr., and the singer George Anderson) ended in divorce.

Scheffler, Siegfried, German composer; b. Iimenau, May 15, 1892. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Max Reger, Stephan Krehl, Hans Sitt, and others; at the Univ. of Leipzig with Hugo Riemann and Arnold Schering; then in Berlin with Humpderdink and Kretzschmar. From 1919 till 1924 he filled various positions as theater conductor; in 1924 settled in Hamburg, where he became the music critic of the 'Hamburger Nachrichten.' —Works: Wunderhorn Lieder (1914); Rokoko-Novelle, for orch. (1923); Morgen im Walde, for male chorus a cappella (1953); incidental music to various plays; etc. He publ. Richard Wagner (2 vols.; Hamburg, 1928) and Melodie der Welle (Berlin, 1933).

Scheibe, Johann Adolf, German theorist and composer; b. Leipzig, May 3, 1708; d. Copenhagen, April 22, 1776. Law-student at Leipzig, but on his father's death had recourse to his musical training to support himself; failing to obtain the post of organist at the Thomaskirche in the competition (adjudicated by Bach, among others) with Görner, he traveled for a time, and settled in Hamburg, publishing a paper, 'Der critischer Musicus,' from 1737-40 (in No. 6 is a sharp attack on Bach). In 1740 he became Kapellmeister to the Margrave of Brandenburg-Culmbach; in 1744, court conductor at Copenhagen, where he was pensioned in 1758. He had continued the publication of 'Der critischer Musicus,' issuing an enlarged edition in 1745, containing discussions of topics broached in that paper. —Publ. Abhandlung vom Ursprung und Alter der Musik, insonderheit der Vocalmusik (1754; maintains that part-songs originated with Northern peoples); an Abhandlung über das Recitativ (1764-65); Über die musikalische Composition (only vol. 1, of the 4 projected, was publ. in 1773); etc. —His publ. compositions include a Danish opera, Thusnelda (Copenhagen, 1749); tragic cantatas a 2, with clavier; songs; Musikalische Erquickungstunden (6 sonatas for flute with continuo); 3 sonatas for flute with harpsichord. In MS he left 2 oratorios, about 200 church works, 150 flute concertos, 30 violin concertos, etc. —Cf. E. Reichel, Gottsched und J. A. Scheibe, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (II, 1901); E. Rosenkaimer, J. A. Scheibe als Verfasser seines 'Critischen Musicus' (dissertation, Bonn, 1923); K. A. Storch, J. A. Scheibes Anschauungen von d. musikalischen Historie, Wissenschaft und Kunst (diss., Leipzig, 1923).

Scheibler (shī'-bler), Johann Heinrich, inventor and writer on music; b. Montjoie, near Aix-la-Chapelle, Nov. 11, 1777; d. Krefeld, Nov. 20, 1837. A silk manufacturer at Krefeld, he became interested in acoustic phenomena, and invented an apparatus consisting of 56 tuning forks, for tuning fixed-tone instruments according to the equally tempered scale. He publ. several pamphlets to explain his invention: Der physikalische und musikalische Tonmesser (1834); Anleitung, die Orgel vermittelst der Stösse (vulgo Schwebungen) und des Metronoms correct gleichschwebend zu stimmen (1834); etc., all united as Schriften über physikalische und musikalische Tonmessung . . . (1838). His system is more clearly explained by Töpfer (1842), Vincent (1849), and Lecomte (1856). At the Stuttgart Congress of physicists in 1834, Scheibler proposed the pitch of  $a^1 = 440$  (vibrations) at 69 degrees Fahrenheit, which was adopted (hence called the 'Stuttgart pitch'). —Cf. J. J. Löhr, Über die Scheibler'sche Erfindung überhaupt und dessen Pianoforte- und Orgel-Stimmung insbesondere (Krefeld, 1836).

Scheidemann (schī'-düh-man), Heinrich, German composer; b. Hamburg, c. 1596; d. there, 1663. Important organist; pupil and successor of his father, Hans Scheidemann, organist of the Katherinenkirche; also studied under Sweelinck at Amsterdam. His successor was Reinken. Of his works very little was publ., but many works for organ and harpsichord were preserved in MS. Modern eds. by M. Seiffert in his 'Organum' (15 preludes and fugues for organ), K. Straube and F. Dietrich (other organ works), R. Buchmayer, and G. Tagliapietra. —Cf. M. Seiffert's essay in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1891); R. Buchmayer, Musikgeschichtliche Ergebnisse einer Reise nach Lüneburg, in 'Dresdener Anzeiger' (July 5-26, 1903).

Scheidemantel (shī'-düh-man-tel), Karl, German baritone; b. Weimar, Jan. 21, 1859; d. there, June 26, 1923. He was a pupil of Bodo Borchers, and sang at the court theater in Weimar, 1878-86, also studied with Stockhausen in the summers of 1881-83. Member of the Dresden court opera from 1896-1911; 1911-20, prof. at the 'Grossherzogliche Musikschule' in Weimar; 1920-22, director of the Landesoper in Dresden. In 1909 the Dresden Opera brought out Mozart's Così fan tutte with an entirely new text by Scheidemantel (as Dame Kobold). His new transl. of Don Giovanni won the prize of the 'Deutscher Bühnenverein' (1914). He publ. Stimmführung (1907; 4th ed. as Gesangsbildung, 1913; in English, 1910); also ed. a collection of songs, 'Meisterweisen' (1914; 6 parts). —Cf. P. Trede, K. Scheidemantel (Dresden, 1911).

Scheidt (shīt), Samuel, famous German organist and composer; b. Halle-on-Saale (baptized Nov. 4), 1587; d. there, March 24, 1654; pupil of Sweelinck in Amsterdam; organist of the Moritzkirche, and Kapellmeister to Margrave Christian Wilhelm of Brandenburg, at Halle. He was among the first to treat the working-out of the chorale artistically, and in true organ style. Principal work, Tabulatura nova (1624, 3 vols.; republ., 1892, as vol. I of 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst'; contains figured chorales, toccatas, fantasias, passamezzi, a Mass, Magnificats, psalms, hymns); further a Tabulaturbuch (1650); 100 psalms a 4; Cantiones sacrae a 8 (1620); Concerti sacri 2-12 voc., adjectis symphoniis et choris instrumentalibus (1621; 1622); Ludi musici (2 parts, 1621, 1622; Paduane, Gagliarde, etc.); Liebliche Kraft-Blümlein (1635); Neue geistliche Konzerten a 2-3 with figured bass (1631); the same, Part II (1634); Part III (1635); Part IV (1640); 70 Symphonien auf Konzerten-Manier a 3 with figured bass (1644). The collected ed. of Scheidt's works begun by G. Harms and continued by C. Mahrenholz embraces 5 vols. (1923-37). —Cf. M. Seiffert in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 7, 1891); A. Werner, Samuel und Gottfried Scheidt, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1900); C. Mahrenholz, S. Scheidt (1924); R. Hünicken, S. Scheidt (Halle, 1934); W. Serauky, S. Scheidt in seinen Briefen (ib., 1937); C. Mahrenholz, Aufgabe und Bedeutung der 'Tabulatura nova', in 'Musica' (March, 1954). See also the 'Festschrift' in honor of his 350th birthday (Wolfenbüttel, 1937).

Schein (shīn), Johann Hermann, important German composer; born Gröna, Saxony, Jan. 20, 1586; d. Leipzig, Nov. 19, 1630. On the death of his father, the pastor at Meissen, in 1599, he entered the Electoral Chapel at Dresden as a soprano; studied at Schulpforta from 1603-07, then at Leipzig Univ. (jurisprudence); became 'Praeceptor' and 'Hausmusikmeister' to Captain von Wölffersdorf at Weissenfels; court Kapellmeister at Weimar in 1615; and succeeded Calvisius as cantor of the Thomasschule at Leipzig in 1616. He was among the first to make artistic adaptations of chorales for the organ; together with Praetorius and Schütz he shares the distinction of being among the pioneers to introduce into German music the newly developed monodic and instrumental style of the Italians. His most important work is Cantional oder Gesangbuch Augspurgischer Confession . . . a 4-6 (1627; 2nd ed., 1645; 312 German and Latin sacred songs and psalms). He also wrote other church music, sacred and secular madrigals, and 20 suites for strings (Banchetto musicale, 1617; among the earliest instrumental ensemble works in Germany). The complete edition of his works in 7 vols., ed. by Arthur Prüfer, and publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel (1901-23), is as follows: I, Venus Kränzlein (1609) and Banchetto musicale (1617); II, Musica Boscareccia (1621, 1626, 1628); III, Diletti Pastoralis (1624); and Studenten-Schmauss (1626, 1634); IV, Cymbalum Sionium (1615); V-VII, Opella nova; geistliche Konzerte (1618-26). —Cf. A. Prüfer, J. H. Schein (Leipzig, 1895); A. Prüfer, J. H. Schein und das weltliche deutsche Lied des 17. Jahrhunderts, in 'Beihefte der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1908).

Scheinpflug, Paul, German violinist and composer; b. Loschwitz, near Dresden, Sept. 10, 1875; d. Memel, March 11, 1937. He studied violin with Rappoldi and composition with Draeseke at the Dresden Cons.; in 1898 went to Bremen as concertmaster of the 'Philharmonie' and conductor of the 'Liederkrantz'; then was conductor of the Musikverein in Königsberg (1909-14); conducted the Blüthner Orch. in Berlin (1914-19); was music director in Duisburg (1920-28); in 1930 settled in Berlin, but continued to fill engagements as guest conductor. He wrote a symph. poem, Frühling; an Ouvertüre zu einem Lustspiel; piano quartet; string quartet; violin sonatas; many male choruses; Worpswede, song cycle for voice, piano, violin, and English horn; many song albums. —Cf. F. Dubitzky, Paul Scheinpflug (Leipzig, 1907).

Schelble, Johann Nepomuk, German singer and pedagogue; b. Hüfingen, Black Forest, May 16, 1789; d. Frankfurt, Aug. 7, 1837. He studied with Weisse in Donaueschingen, with Vogler in Darmstadt, and with Krebs in Stuttgart. From 1813 to 1816 he was in Vienna and became an intimate friend of Beethoven; then settled in Frankfurt, where he founded the famous Cäcilien-Verein (1818). His methods for teaching the musical rudiments and training the sense of absolute pitch were much admired; he enjoyed the esteem of many musicians of his time; Mendelssohn paid tribute to him in his correspondence. —Cf. K. Lanz, Die Gehörsentwicklungsmethode von Schelble (Brunswick, 1873); O. Bormann, J. N. Schelble (dissertation; Frankfurt, 1926).

Schelle, Karl Eduard, German music critic; b. Biesenthal, near Berlin, May 31, 1816; d. Vienna, Nov. 16, 1882. In 1864 he succeeded Hanslick as music critic for the Vienna 'Presse'; also lectured on music history at the Vienna Cons. He publ. Der Tannhäuser in Paris (1861) and a valuable monograph, Die päpstliche Sängerschule in Rom, genannt die Sixtinische Kapelle (1872).

Schelling, Ernest (Henry), American conductor, composer, and pianist; b. Belvidere, N. J., July 26, 1876; d. New York, Dec. 8, 1939. He first appeared in public as a child prodigy playing the piano at the age of 4½ at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia. He was then sent to Paris, where he studied, still as a small child, with Mathias (a pupil of Chopin) in Paris, and also with Moszkowski; his other teachers were Leschetizky, Hans Huber, Barth, and finally Paderewski at Morges, Switzerland (1898-1902). Extended tours in Europe (from Russia to Spain) followed; he also toured in South America; settled permanently in the U. S.

in 1905, and devoted most of his energies to conducting and composing. He conducted the young people's symph. concerts in N. Y. (from 1924), in Philadelphia, Boston, Cincinnati, Los Angeles, San Francisco, etc.; for 2 seasons (1936-38) he was regular conductor of the Baltimore Symph. Orch.; also made frequent appearances as conductor in Europe. Among his works the most successful was A Victory Ball, orchestral fantasy after the poem by Alfred Noyes, first performed by Stokowski with the Philadelphia Orch., on Feb. 23, 1923; other works are Légende Symphonique (Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1913); Suite Fantastique, for orch. (Amsterdam, Oct. 10, 1907); Impressions from an Artist's Life, symph. variations for piano and orch. (Boston, Dec. 31, 1915, composer soloist); violin concerto (Boston Symph., Providence, R. I., Oct. 17, 1916, Fritz Kreisler soloist); Morocco, symph. tableau (N. Y., Dec. 19, 1927, composer conducting); symph. in C-sharp minor; Divertimento, for piano and string quartet; Tarantella, for string quartet; piano pieces; songs.

Schenck, Jean (Johann), German gamba virtuoso; b. Elberfeld (baptized Feb. 20), 1656; became chamber musician to the Elector-Palatine at Düsseldorf; later at Amsterdam, where he publ. toward the end of the 17th century, Kunst-Oeffnungen . . ., 15 sonatas for gamba with continuo (1688); Il Giardino armonico, sonatas for 2 violins, gamba, and continuo (1692); Scherzi musicali for gamba; 18 sonatas for violin with continuo (1693); etc.; also Sang-Arien van d'opera Ceres en Bacchus. —Cf. A. Einstein, Zur deutschen Literatur für Viola da Gamba im 16. und 17. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1905, pp. 32-35); H. Bol, 'Le Nymphe di Rheno' van Johann Schenck, in 'Mens en Melodie' (Dec., 1954).

Schenck, Pyotr Petrovitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Feb. 23, 1870; d. Perkiarvy, Finland, July 5, 1915. He studied piano at the Cons. of St. Petersburg; composition with Solovyev. He gave some concerts as pianist; then devoted himself to conducting; appeared in several European countries. His works are entirely under the influence of Tchaikovsky. He wrote 2 operas: Acteyra, from Etruscan life, which had a concert performance, conducted by the composer, in St. Petersburg (Dec. 3, 1899) and The Miracle of Roses (St. Petersburg, Oct. 7, 1913); also ballet music; 3 symphonies; an orchestral fantasy, Dukhy (Ghosts); a symph. poem, Hero and Leander; instrumental pieces; choruses; songs.

Schenk, Erich, Austrian musicologist; b. Salzburg, May 5, 1902. He took courses with Sandberger in Munich, at the Akademie der Tonkunst and at the Univ.; Dr. phil., 1925; in 1929 became lecturer at the Univ. of Rostock; in 1940, prof. of musicology at the Univ. of Vienna; settled there as music editor and pedagogue. He publ. the following books: G. A. Paganelli (diss., Salzburg, 1928); Johann Strauss (Potsdam, 1940); Musik in Kärnten (Vienna, 1941); Beethoven zwischen den Zeiten (Bonn, 1944); 950 Jahre österreichische Musik (Vienna, 1946); Kleine wiener Musikgeschichte (Vienna, 1946); W. A. Mozart (Zürich, 1955); edited works by Friderici, Keiser, Vivaldi, Fux, Gabrieli, Vitali, Porpora, etc.

Schenk, Johann, Austrian composer; b. Wiener-Neustadt, Nov. 30, 1753; d. Vienna, Dec. 29, 1836. He studied with Wagenseil in Vienna. In 1778 he had a Mass performed, which made his reputation; it was followed by other pieces of sacred music; then he began composing light operas, some of which enjoyed great popularity. It was from Schenk that Beethoven took surreptitious lessons while studying with Haydn. Operettas (all produced in Vienna): Die Weinlese (Oct. 12, 1785); Die Weihnacht auf dem Lande (Dec. 14, 1786); Im Finstern ist nicht gut tappen (Oct. 12, 1787); Das unvermutete Seefest (Dec. 9, 1789); Das Singspiel ohne Titel (Nov. 4, 1790); Der Erntekranz (July 9, 1791); Achmet und Almanzine (July 17, 1795); Der Dorfbarbier (Vienna, Oct. 30, 1796; his most popular work; originally staged as a comedy, June 18, 1785); Die Jagd (May 7, 1799); Der Fassbinder (Dec. 17, 1802). In 1819 he wrote his last works, the cantatas Die Huldigung and Der Mai. He also wrote 6 symphonies, string quartets, string trios, and songs. The score of Der Dorfbarbier was publ. by R. Haas in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 66). —Cf. F. Staub, Johann Schenk. Eine Skizze seines Lebens (Vienna, 1901). A short biographical sketch was publ. in 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (1924).

Schenker, Heinrich, outstanding Austrian theorist; b. Wisniowczyk, Galicia, June 19, 1868; d. Vienna, Jan. 14, 1935. He studied with Anton Bruckner at the Vienna Cons.; composed songs and piano pieces; Brahms liked them sufficiently to recommend Schenker to the publisher Simrock; for a while Schenker toured as accompanist of Meschaert, the baritone; then returned to Vienna and devoted himself entirely to the development of his theoretical research; gathered around him a group of enthusiastic disciples (Otto Vrieslander, Hermann Roth, Hans Weisse, Anthony van Hoboken, Oswald Jonas, Felix Salzer, John Petrie Dunn, and others). He endeavored to derive the basic laws of musical composition from a penetrating analysis of the standard masterworks. The result, in his middle and later writings, is the theory that each composition by a master is a horizontalization, through various stages, of a single triad. Schenker brought out editions for piano of works by Bach and Handel and the complete piano sonatas of Beethoven (also, separately, special analytical editions of the last five sonatas); supervised the publication of a facsimile of the original MS of Beethoven's Piano Sonata, op. 27, no. 2; etc. —Publications: Neue musikalische Theorien und Fantasiën: I. Harmonielehre (1906; in English, ed. by O. Jonas, Chicago, 1954); II. Kontrapunkt, in 2 vols.: Cantus Firmus und zweistimmiger Satz (1910); Drei- und mehrstimmiger Satz, Übergänge zum freien Satz (1920); III. Der freie Satz (1935; new ed. by O. Jonas, 1956); Ein Beitrag zur Ornamentik (based on K. P. E. Bach; 1908; new ed., 1954); a monograph on Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (1912) and one on his Fifth Symphony (1925); Der Tonwille (a periodical containing articles and analyses by Schenker and appearing at irregular intervals from 1921 to 1924); Das Meisterwerk in der Musik (a continuation of Der Tonwille in the form of an annual; 3 vols., 1925, 1926, 1930); 5 Urlinie-Tafeln (N. Y., 1932); Johannes Brahms: Oktaven und Quinten (Vienna, 1933). —Cf. W. Riezler, Die Urlinie, in 'Die Musik' (April, 1930); I. Citkowitz, The Role of H. Schenker, in 'Modern Music' (vol. 11, 1933); O. Jonas, Das Wesen des musikalischen Kunstwerkes; eine Einführung in die Lehre H. Schenkers (Vienna, 1934); R. Sessions, H. Schenker's Contribution, in 'Modern Music' (vol. 12, 1935); A. T. Katz, H. Schenker's Method of Analysis, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1935); A. Waldeck and N. Broder, Musical Synthesis as Expounded by H. Schenker, in the 'Mus. Mercury' (Dec., 1935); A. T. Katz, Challenge to Musical Tradition (N. Y., 1945); F. Salzer, Structural Hearing (N. Y., 1952; a development of the Schenker theories).

Schenkman, Edgar, American conductor; b. New Market, N. J., May 9, 1908. He was a pupil at the Juilliard School of Music; conducted the Juilliard Orch.; then was conductor of the Toledo Friends of Music Orch. (1943-46); in 1948, appointed conductor of the Norfolk, Va., Orch.; in 1950, became director of the Virginia Music Festivals; in 1957, engaged as conductor of the Richmond, Va., Orch., while retaining his post at Norfolk.

Scherchen, Hermann, eminent German conductor; b. Berlin, June 21, 1891. He was self-taught in music; played the viola in the Berlin Philharmonic (1907-10); in 1911-12, toured with Arnold Schoenberg. In 1914 he obtained an engagement as symph. conductor in Riga; at the outbreak of World War I, he was interned in Russia; after the Armistice he returned to Berlin; founded and directed the 'Neue Musikgesellschaft' there (1918); edited the music periodical 'Melos' (1920-21); conducted numerous concerts at modern music festivals, in Donaueschingen, Frankfurt, etc.; conducted symph. concerts of the Collegium Musicum in Winterthur, Switzerland (1932-38); from 1928 till 1933, was in charge of the music of the Königsberg Radio. In 1933 he left Germany; edited the periodical 'Musica Viva' in Brussels (1933-36); conducted at music festivals in Barcelona (1936), Paris (1937), etc.; from 1936 also conducted in Winterthur. He distinguished himself as a scholarly exponent of modern music; conducted many world premières of ultra-modern works; publ. the valuable manual on conducting, Lehrbuch des Dirigierens (Leipzig, 1929; in English as Handbook of Conducting, London, 1933; 6th ed., 1949); Vom Wesen der Musik (Zürich, 1946; in English as The Nature of Music, London, 1947; Chicago, 1950); Musik für Jedermann (Winterthur, 1950).

Scheremetiev. See Sheremetiev.

Schering (shā'-ring), Arnold, eminent German musicologist; b. Breslau, April 2, 1877; d. Berlin, March 7, 1941. Having completed the course at the Gymnasium in Dresden, he matriculated at Berlin Univ., continuing his musical studies there with Joachim (violin) and Succo (composition); then took courses at the Univs. of Munich and Leipzig; Dr. phil. (Leipzig, 1902) with the dissertation Geschichte des Instrumentalkonzerts (as far as Vivaldi; continuation, 1905; 2nd ed., 1927); instructor for esthetics and history of music at Leipzig Univ. in 1907; associate prof., 1915; from 1903-06 ed. of 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik.' From 1909-23 prof. of music at the Leipzig Cons.; 1920, prof. at the Univ. of Halle; 1928, prof. at the Univ. of Berlin, and head of the Board of the German 'Denkmäler'; 1933, president of the German Musicological Society. A noted Bach scholar, he edited the 'Bach-Jahrbuch' from its inception in 1904 through 1939. In 1908 he discovered in Upsala Schütz's long-lost work, Weihnachtsoratorium (publ. as supplement to Spitta's complete ed., 1909). He was the first to develop the theory that in early a cappella music the 'tenor' was performed by the organ. In his history of the oratorio he emphasized the importance of the lauda as one of the sources. —Works: Bach's Textbehandlung (1900); Geschichte des Instrumentalkonzerts bis auf die Gegenwart (1905; 2nd ed., 1927); Die Anfänge des Oratoriums (1907); Geschichte des Oratoriums (1911); Musikalische Bildung und Erziehung zum musikalischen Hören (1911; 4th ed., 1924); Die niederländische Orgelmesse im Zeitalter des Josquin (1912); Studien zur Musikgeschichte der Frührenaissance (1914); Tabellen zur Musikgeschichte (1914; 4th ed., 1934); Deutsche Musikgeschichte im Umriss (1917); Die metrisch-rhythmische Grundgestalt unserer Choral melodien (1924); 2 additional vols. to R. Wustmann's Musikgeschichte Leipzigs (1927, 1941); Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (1931); Aufführungspraxis alter Musik (1931); Beethoven in neuer Deutung (1934; aroused a considerable controversy because of its attempt to explain some of Beethoven's compositions as related to modern political trends); Beethoven und die Dichtung (1936); J. S. Bachs Leipziger Kirchenmusik (1936); Von grossen Meistern der Musik (1940); Das Symbol in der Musik (1941); Über Kantaten J. S. Bachs (posthumous, 1942); Vom musikalischen Kunstwerk (posthumous, 1949); also prepared a new ed. of von Dommer's Handbuch der Musikgeschichte (1914). He ed. about 12 vols. of works of early composers (Hasse, Quantz, Schütz, etc.); also composed music to Goethe's Faust and a violin sonata. —Cf. 'Festschrift Arnold Schering zum 60. Geburtstag' (Berlin, 1937).

Scherman, Thomas, American conductor; b. New York, Feb. 12, 1917; son of Harry Scherman, founder and president of the Book-of-the-Month Club. He attended Columbia Univ. (B. A., 1937); then studied piano with Isabelle Vengerova, theory with Hans Weisse, and conducting with Carl Bamberger and Max Rudolf. He served in the Army (1941-45), entering as a private and reaching the rank of captain in the Signal Corps. In the summer of 1947 he was assistant conductor at the National Opera in Mexico City. In 1947 he organized in New York the Little Orchestra Society for the purpose of presenting new works and reviving forgotten music of the past; inaugurated his 1st season of 8 concerts in Town Hall, Oct. 20, 1947; the new venture became extremely successful, and concerts outside N. Y. City were added to the schedule, as well as special performances of small operas and oratorios. In 1948 Scherman started a series of children's concerts at Hunter College Assembly Hall.

Scherzer (shehr'-tser), Otto, German violinist and composer; b. Ansbach, March 24, 1821; d. Stuttgart, Feb. 23, 1886. After studying with Molique, he became violinist in the Stuttgart court orch. (1838-54); was music director at Tübingen Univ. (1860-77); publ. a number of songs and piano pieces. —Cf. Anon., Otto Scherzer. Ein Künstlerleben (Stuttgart, 1897).

Schetky, Johann Georg Christoff, German cellist and composer; b. Darmstadt, 1740; d. Edinburgh, Nov. 29, 1824. The original family name was Von Teschky; Schetky's ancestors were from Transylvania. He traveled in Germany; in 1768 was in Hamburg; in 1772, settled in Edinburgh, where he was 1st cellist of the concerts in St. Cecilia's Hall. He married Maria Anna Teresa Reinagle, sister of Alexander Reinagle (q.v.). He publ. 6 string quartets; 6 string trios; 6 duos for violin and cello; 6 cello sonatas with bass; 6 flute duos; 6 cello duos; 6 sonatas for violin and cello; harpsichord sonatas; songs. In MS he left 3 symphonies, 4 cello concertos, and an oratorio. —His son, J. George Schetky (b. Edinburgh, June 1, 1776; d. Philadelphia, Dec. 11, 1831), was the 2nd of 11 children; emigrated to America in 1792; naturalized in Philadelphia on Nov. 19, 1806. He appeared as a cellist in Philadelphia; about 1800, entered into partnership with Benjamin Carr in the music publ. business; was a co-founder of the Musical Fund Society in Philadelphia. His arrangement for military band of Kotzwara's Battle of Prague was much played. —Cf. Madeira, Music in Philadelphia (Philadelphia, 1896); O. G. Sonneck, Bibliography of Early American Secular Music (Washington, 1905); O. G. Sonneck, Early Concert Life in America (Leipzig, 1907; in English); Laurance Oliphant Schetky, The Schetky Family; A Compilation of Letters, Memoirs and Historical Data (privately publ., Portland, Ore., 1942; of great documentary value, establishing correct factual data from family archives; the author was a grandson of J. George Schetky).

Scheurleer (shör-lär), Daniel François, Dutch musicologist; b. The Hague, Nov. 13, 1855; d. there, Feb. 6, 1927. Although a banker, he took an active part in musical affairs; was president, for many years, of the 'Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis'; made Dr. phil. (hon. c.) by the Univ. of Leyden in 1910; he was the owner of a valuable musical library (catalogue publ. in 1885; 2 supplements, 1903 and 1910) and collection of instruments (catalogue publ. 1885 and 1887; now in the Museum of The Hague); 1921, founded the 'Union musicologique.' He publ. Het Muziekleven in Nederland in de tweede helft der 18<sup>e</sup> eeuw . . . (The Hague, 1909) and other studies; ed. Fruytier's Ecclesiasticus (1563), etc. —Cf. Gedenkboek aangeboden an Dr. D. F. Scheurleer op zijn 70sten Verjaardag (1925; contains a complete bibliography of his works).

Schibler, Armin, Swiss composer; b. Kreuzlingen, Nov. 20, 1920. He studied with Willy Burkhard in Zürich; since 1944, music director at the Kanton Gymnasium there. Much of his music is cast in neo-Classical forms; some works employ a modified form of the 12-tone technique. —Works: Operas: Der spanische Rosenstock (Bern, April 9, 1950); Der Teufel im Winterpalais (1950-53); Das Bergwerk von Falun (1953); Die Füße im Feuer (Zürich, April 25, 1955; aroused considerable interest). For orch.: concertino for piano and chamber orch. (1943); Fantasy for viola and small orch. (1945); Fantasy for oboe, harp, and small orch. (1946); symph. No. 1 (1946); Passacaglia (1949); Symph. Variations (1950); Concertante Fantasie for cello and orch. (1951); symph. No. 2 (1953); Concerto for Amateur Orchestra (1953); symph. No. 3 (Winterthur, Nov. 13, 1957). Cantatas: Die Hochzeit (1946); Gefährten (1946); Weil Alles erneut sich begibt (1949); Mondlicht (1950). Chamber music: solo sonata for flute (1944); suite for cello alone (1945); Little Concerto for viola alone (1947); 2 string quartets (1945; 1951); Trio Concertante for trumpet, violin, and piano (1948); Duo Concertante for violin and piano (1950); Dodecaphonic Studies for piano. —Cf. K. H. Wörner, Armin Schibler; Werk und Persönlichkeit (Amriswil, 1953).

Schicht, Johann Gottfried, German composer; b. Reichenau, Saxony, Sept. 29, 1753; d. Leipzig, Feb. 16, 1823. In 1776, already well trained as an organist and pianist, he matriculated at Leipzig as a law student, but became pianist at Joh. Adam Hiller's 'Liebhaber-Konzerte,' and at the 'Gewandhaus Concerts' evolved from them in 1781, succeeding Hiller as conductor in 1785. In 1810 he became cantor at the Thomasschule. His works comprise the oratorios Die Feier der Christen auf Golgatha, Moses auf Sinai, and Das Ende des Gerechten; Masses, motets, Te Deums, the 100th Psalm; several chorale-motets (Nach einer Prüfung kurzer Tage, Jesus meine Zuversicht, Herzlich lieb hab ich dich, o Herr, etc.); 9 settings of Leo's Miserere a 4-8; an excellent book of chorales (1819; of 1,285 melodies, 306 are original); a concerto, sonatas, caprices, etc., for piano; and Grundregeln der Harmonie (Leipzig, 1812). —Cf. P. Langer, Chronik der Leipziger Singakademie (Leipzig, 1902).

Schick, George, conductor; b. Prague, April 5, 1908. He studied at the Prague Cons.; was assistant conductor at the Prague Opera from 1927 until 1938. He settled in the U. S. in 1939; was conductor of the San Carlo Opera (1943); then conducted in Chicago; from 1948 to 1950 was conductor of the Little Symph. of Montreal; from 1950 to 1956, associate conductor of the Chicago Symph. Orch.

Schick (née Hamel), Margarete Luise, noted German soprano; b. Mainz, April 26, 1773; d. Berlin, April 29, 1809. She studied with Steffani at Würzburg, later with Righini at Mainz, where her stage debut took place in 1791. Her favorite roles were Susanna (Figaro) and Zerlina (Don Giovanni). From 1794 she sang at the Royal Opera, Berlin, having great success in operas by Gluck. Her contemporaries regarded her as the equal of the famous Mara. In 1791 she married the violinist Ernst Schick. —Cf. K. Levezow, Leben und Kunst der Frau Margarete Luise Schick (Berlin, 1809).

Schiedermaier (shē'-der-mīr), Ludwig, eminent German musicologist; b. Regensburg, Dec. 7, 1876; d. Bensberg, near Cologne, April 30, 1957. He studied in Munich with Sandberger and Beer-Walbrunn; 1901, Dr. phil., for the dissertation Künstlerische Bestrebungen am Hofe des Kurfürsten Ferdinand Maria von Bayern; studied further with Riemann in Leipzig and with Kretschmar in Berlin. In 1906 he became instructor of musicology at the Univ. of Marburg; in 1912, lecturer at the Univ. of Bonn (1920, prof.). In 1927, on the occasion of the Beethoven centennial, he was appointed director of the Beethoven-Haus Research Institute in Bonn. —Writings: Gustav Mahler (Leipzig, 1901); Beiträge zur Geschichte der Oper um die Wende des 18. und 19. Jahrhunderts (2 vols., Leipzig, 1907, 1910); Bayreuther Festspiele im Zeitalter des Absolutismus (Leipzig, 1908); Die Briefe Mozarts und seiner Familie (5 vols.; Munich, 1914; vol. 5 is an iconography); W. A. Mozarts Handschrift (facsimiles, Bückeburg, 1919); Einführung in das Studium der Musikgeschichte (Munich, 1918; new ed., Bonn, 1947); Mozart (Munich, 1922; 2nd ed., Bonn, 1948); Der junge Beethoven (Leipzig, 1925; 3rd ed., Bonn, 1951); Beethoven: Beiträge zum Leben und Schaffen (Leipzig, 1930); Die deutsche Oper (Leipzig, 1930); Die Gestaltung weltanschaulicher Ideen in der Vokalmusik Beethovens (Leipzig, 1934); Musik am Rheinstrom (Cologne, 1947); Musikalische Begegnungen; Erlebnis und Erinnerung (Cologne, 1948); Deutsche Musik im Europäischen Raum (Münster, 1954). A 'Festschrift,' Beethoven und die Gegenwart, was publ. in honor of Schiedermair's 60th birthday (Berlin, 1937). —Cf. J. Schmidt-Görg, Ludwig Schiedermair, in 'Die Musikforschung' (No. 2, 1957).

Schiedermayer (shē'dēr-mī-ër), Johann Baptist, German composer; b. Pfaffenmünster, Bavaria, June 23, 1779; d. Linz, Austria, Jan. 6, 1840, as cathedral organist. —Works: the 'Singspiele' Wellmanns Eichenstämme (Linz, 1815), Das Glück ist kugelförmig (Linz, 1816); Die Rückkehr ins Vaterhaus (Linz, 1816); 16 Masses and much other sacred music; also symphonies, string trios, organ pieces, etc.; a Theoretisch-praktische Choralreihe zum Gebrauch beim katholischen Kirchenritus (1828); and an abridged ed. of Leopold Mozart's violin method.

Schiedmayer. The name of 2 well-known firms of piano makers in Stuttgart, i.e., 'Schiedmayer & Söhne' and 'Schiedmayer Pianofortefabrik.' —Balthasar Schiedmayer (1711-81) began manufacturing musical instruments in Erlangen about 1740; at his death in 1781, his son Johann David Schiedmayer (1753-1805) assumed the management; he was succeeded by his 19-year-old son Johann Lorenz Schiedmayer (1786-1860), with whom he had moved about 1800 from Erlangen to Nuremberg. Johann Lorenz ended the business at Nuremberg after 2 years, and went to Vienna for a brief time; in 1809 he was in Stuttgart, where he set up business in partnership with a young piano maker, Karl Dieudonné (d. 1825); from 1825, he carried on the business alone, until 1845, when his eldest sons, Adolf Schiedmayer (1819-90) and Hermann

Schiedmayer (1820-91), entered the firm, which was then called 'J. L. Schiedmayer & Söhne.' In 1853 Johann Lorenz Schiedmayer provided his two younger sons, Julius (1822-78) and Paul (1829-90), with their own separate factory, producing harmoniums. After their father's death, they turned to piano making, and their business became known as 'Schiedmayer Pianofortefabrik.' Upon Paul Schiedmayer's death in 1890, his son, Max Julius, became head of the firm.—Cf. A. Eisenmann, Schiedmayer und Söhne (1909).

Schikaneder, Emanuel (Johann), Mozart's librettist; b. Straubing, Sept. 1, 1751; d. Vienna, Sept. 21, 1812. His baptismal names were Johannes Joseph; he assumed the name Emanuel later in life. He was a member of a troupe of itinerant players when he met Mozart at Salzburg. In 1784 he reached Vienna, where he was an actor and an impresario. He was not successful until he persuaded Mozart to set to music his play Die Zauberflöte, which recouped his fortunes; it was produced on Sept. 30, 1791, shortly before Mozart's death; Schikaneder himself took the part of Papageno. He wrote librettos for 58 'Singspiele'; with Zitterbarth he was the manager of the Theater an der Wien, which he directed from its foundation (1801) until 1806. He died insane after a series of financial setbacks.—Cf. O. E. Deutsch, Das Freihaustheater auf der Wieden, 1787-1801 (Vienna, 1937); Egon von Komorzynski, Der Vater der Zauberflöte: Emanuel Schikaneders Leben (Vienna, 1948); Egon von Komorzynski, Emanuel Schikaneder: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Theaters (Vienna, 1951). For a complete list of his librettos see Anton Bauer, Opern und Operetten in Wien (Vienna, 1955).

Schiller, Friedrich von, great German poet; b. Marbach, Nov. 10, 1759; d. Weimar, May 9, 1805. Many musicians have turned to his works for inspiration.—Cf. M. Berendt, Schiller bis Wagner (Berlin, 1901); J. Baltz, Beethoven und Schiller (Arnsberg, 1905); A. Kohut, F. Schiller in seinen Beziehungen zur Musik (Stuttgart, 1905); H. Knudsen, Schiller und die Musik (Greifswald, 1908); G. Adler, Schiller und Schubert (Vienna, 1910). The Schiller number of 'Die Musik' (May, 1905) contains essays by W. Golther (Schiller und Wagner), M. Runze (Schiller und die Balladenmusik), R. Hohenemser (Schiller als Musikästhetiker).

Schilling, Gustav, German musical lexicographer; b. Schwiigershausen, near Hanover, Nov. 3, 1803; d. Nebraska, March, 1881. He studied theology at Göttingen and Halle; headed a music school in Stuttgart, and published a number of works dealing with various aspects of music. In 1857 he emigrated to America; lived in N. Y., later was in Montreal; finally settled in Nebraska. His most important work was the Enzyklopädie der gesammten musikalischen Wissenschaften oder Universal-Lexikon der Tonkunst (6 vols.; 1835-38; 2nd ed., 7 vols., 1840-42). Other publications are Versuch einer Philosophie des Schönen in der Musik (1838); Lehrbuch der allgemeinen Musikwissenschaft (1840); Geschichte der heutigen oder modernen Musik (1841); Die musikalische Europa . . . (1842); Musikalische Dynamik; oder, Die Lehre vom Vortrage in der Musik (1843); Der Pianist (1843); Franz Liszt (1844); Sicher Schlüssel zur Klaviervirtuosität (1844); Die schöne Kunst der Töne (1847); Musikalische Didaktik (1851); Allgemeine Volksmusiklehre (1852); Akustik oder die Lehre vom Klange (2nd ed., 1856); also a revised ed. of K. P. E. Bach's Versuch über die wahre Art, das Klavier zu spielen (1857); etc.

Schillinger, Joseph, composer and theorist; b. Kharkov, Aug. 31, 1895; d. New York, March 23, 1943. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Tcherepnin, Witold, and others; from 1918 to 1922, taught at the State Academy of Music in Kharkov; also conducted an orch. there; from 1926 to 1928 was active in Leningrad as teacher and composer. In 1929 he came to America, settling in N. Y.; taught at the New School for Social Research; then established private classes, teaching his own system of composition, based on rigid mathematical principles; also taught by correspondence. He became highly successful as instructor; George Gershwin took lessons from him for a considerable time; many other established composers, and particularly composers of popular music, became his students. After Schillinger's death, his correspondence lessons were organized by Lyle Dowling and Arnold Shaw and publ. in 2 vols. by Carl Fischer, Inc. under the title, The Schillinger System of Musical Composition (N. Y., 1946); this was followed by The Mathematical Basis of the Arts (N. Y., 1947); a short volume of musical patterns, Kaleidophone, was publ. previously (N. Y., 1940). Schillinger was also a composer in his own right; his works include a March of the Orient, for orch. (Leningrad, May 12, 1926); First Airphonic Suite, for the there-min with orch. (Cleveland, Nov. 28, 1929; Leo Theremin, the inventor, as soloist); piano pieces; etc. See Frances Schillinger, Joseph Schillinger: a Memoir by his Wife (N. Y., 1949); Vernon Duke, Gershwin, Schillinger, and Dukelsky, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1947).

Schillings, Max von, German composer and conductor; b. Düren, April 19, 1868; d. Berlin, July 23, 1933. While attending the Gymnasium at Bonn he studied violin with O. von KönigsLöw, and piano and composition with K. J. Brambach. He then entered the Univ. of Munich, where he studied law, philosophy, literature, and art. He became associated with Richard Strauss, and under his influence decided to devote himself entirely to music. In 1892 he was engaged as assistant stage director at the Festival Theater in Bayreuth; in 1902 became chorus-master; in 1908 he moved to Stuttgart as general music director; on the occasion of the inauguration of the new opera theater there, he was given the rank of nobility, and added the nobiliary particle 'von' to his name; he remained in Stuttgart until 1918; was intendant of the Berlin State Opera (1919-25). He made several visits as conductor to the U. S. In 1923 he married the soprano Barbara Kemp. As a composer, he trailed in the path of Wagner, barely avoiding direct imitation. One of his operas, Mona Lisa (Stuttgart, Sept. 26, 1915), enjoyed considerable success; it was produced by the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. on March 1, 1923. Other works include the operas Ingwilde (Karlsruhe, Nov. 13, 1894), Der Pfeifertag (Schwerin, Nov. 26, 1899), and Moloch (Dresden, Dec. 8, 1906); incidental music to Orestie of Aeschylus (1900) and to Part 1 of Goethe's Faust; a symph. prologue to Oedipus Rex of Sophocles; also several melodramas with orch.: Kassandra, Das eleusische Fest, Das Hexenlied, and Jung Olaf; Dem Verklärten, for baritone solo, chorus, and orch.; Glockenlieder, for solo voice and orch.; Hochzeitglocken, for baritone, chorus, and orch.; Die Perle, after Goethe, for soprano, tenor, and orch.; 4 duets from Goethe's Westöstlicher Divan, for soprano, tenor, and orch.; 2 symph. fantasies, Meergruss and Seemorgen; a violin concerto; a string quartet; a string quintet; pieces for violin and piano; men's choruses a cappella; songs; piano pieces. A complete catalogue of his works, compiled by J. Beck, was publ. at Berlin in 1934. —Cf. R. Louis, Max Schillings (Leipzig, 1909); A. Richard, Max Schillings (Munich, 1922); W. Raupp, Max von Schillings (Hamburg, 1935).

Schimon (shē-mon), Adolf, noted singing teacher and composer; b. Vienna, Feb. 29, 1820; d. Leipzig, June 21, 1887. He studied with Berton, Halévy, and others at the Paris Cons.; studied the Italian method in Florence, bringing out his opera, Stradella, there in 1846; was 'maestro al cembalo' at Her Majesty's Theatre, London (1850-52), then at the Italian Opera in Paris. In 1858 Flotow brought out Schimon's 1-act comic opera List um List at Schwerin. His works further include Italian and French songs; German lieder; 2 string quartets; a piano trio; a violin sonata; piano music; etc. He was married to the soprano Anna Regan.

Schimon-Regan, Anna, distinguished German soprano; b. Aich, near Karlsbad, Sept. 18, 1841; d. Munich, April 18, 1902. In 1859 she had her first singing lessons from Mme. Schubert in Karlsbad; the next year her aunt, the famous Caroline Unger, took her to Florence and taught her till 1864; she was then engaged at the court opera in Hanover (1864-67); during the winter of 1867-68 she sang in Berlioz's concerts in St. Petersburg. She made her first visit to England in 1869, appearing in concerts with Caroline Unger; gave song recitals there every winter till 1875. In 1872 she married Adolf Schimon (q.v.) and settled in Munich.

Schindlmeisser, Ludwig, German composer; b. Königsberg, Dec. 8, 1811; d. Darmstadt, March 30, 1864. He was an opera conductor at Salzburg, Innsbruck, Graz, Berlin, Budapest, and Darmstadt; wrote 7 operas, including Melusine (Darmstadt, 1861); overture to Uriel Acosta; oratorios on Schleswig-Holstein, meerumschlungen and Rule Britannia; Concertante in E-flat for 4 clarinets and orch.; concertino for clarinet and orch.; 2 piano sonatas; minor piano pieces and songs.

Schindler, Anton Felix, Beethoven's faithful friend and biographer; b. Meedl, Moravia, June 13, 1795; d. Bockenheim, near Frankfurt, Jan. 16, 1864. He was the son of a schoolteacher; studied law at the Univ. of Vienna, and at the same time learned to play the violin. He was a violinist and conductor at the Josephstadt Theater and at the Kärntner Theater in Vienna (1825); conducted performances of several of Beethoven's symphonies. He met Beethoven in 1814; in 1819 became Beethoven's secretary and helper, and lived in the same house with him until their break in 1824, when Beethoven unjustly accused him of disloyalty. A few months before Beethoven's death, Schindler was called back and never left him again. From 1831 till 1835 Schindler was Kapellmeister at the Cathedral of Münster; from 1835 to 1837 at Aachen; later moved to Bockenheim, remaining there until his death. His intimacy with Beethoven lends peculiar value to his Biographie Ludwig van Beethovens (Münster, 1840; 2nd, enlarged ed., 1845; 3rd ed., 1860). The biography was publ. in English, transl. by Moscheles (London, 1841); modern German eds. were brought out by Kalischer (1909) and Fritz Volbach (1927). His diaries of his sojourns in Paris and Berlin (1841-43) were edited by Marta Becker (Frankfurt, 1939). His pamphlet, Beethoven in Paris (1842), is an account of the production of Beethoven's works at the Concert Spirituel; it formed an appendix to the 2nd ed. of his biography. After Schindler's death, his papers, comprising the invaluable conversation books and sketch books of Beethoven, as well as a vast amount of personal notes of all kinds, passed to the Royal Library of Berlin. —Cf. E. Hüffer, A. F. Schindler, der Biograph Beethovens (diss., Münster, 1909); R. Zimmermann, in 'Allgemeine Musikzeitung,' Nos. 38-39 (1925).

Schindler, Kurt, choral conductor and music editor; b. Berlin, Feb. 17, 1882; d. New York, Nov. 16, 1935. He studied piano with Anserge and composition with Bussler, Gernsheim, and L. C. Wolf, in Berlin; then in Munich with Thuille; was at various times assistant conductor to Richard Strauss in Berlin and to Mottl in Munich; after a season as theater conductor in Stuttgart (1902-03) and another season in Würzburg (1903-04), he emigrated to America; was assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera House (1905-07); in 1907 became reader for G. Schirmer, Inc. In 1909 he founded in N. Y. the MacDowell Chorus, whose name was changed in 1910, with the enlargement of the scope of its work, to Schola Cantorum, Schindler remaining as conductor until 1927; with this group Schindler introduced many new works, and also produced arrangements of the folk music of various nations; was particularly interested in Spanish and Russian music. He also taught at various schools; publ. about 80 songs. —Editions: '6 Old French Christmas Carols' (1908), 'Century of Russian Song from Glinka to Rachmaninov' (50 songs, with English transl.; 1911), 'The Development of Opera' (examples of various periods; 1912), 'Songs of the Russian People' (1915), '10 Student Songs of Finland' (1915), 'A Cappella Choruses from the Russian Liturgy' (1913-17), 'Masters of Russian Song' (2 vols., 1917), 'Old Spanish Sacred Motets' (1918), 'Modern Spanish Choral Works' (1918), '60 Russian Folk-Songs' (3 vols., 1918-19); 'Folk Music and Poetry of Spain and Portugal' (N. Y., 1941; posthumous; about 1,000 musical examples; text in English and Spanish).

Schiøler (shö-lëhr), Victor, prominent Danish pianist; b. Copenhagen, April 7, 1899. He studied with his mother, Augusta Schiøler (1868-1946); then with Ignaz Friedman and Artur Schnabel; made his piano début in 1914; from 1919 toured in Europe; first American tour, 1948-49. He also was active as conductor in Denmark.

Schiøtz, Aksel, Danish tenor; b. Roskilde, Sept. 1, 1906. He studied languages at the Univ. of Copenhagen; then was a school teacher. It was not until 1939 that he made his début as an opera singer; in 1942 he began to give concerts and became known in Denmark as a singer of lieder. In 1946 he made appearances in England, and in 1948 was in the U. S. In 1958 was appointed to the faculty of the Royal Cons. of Music in the Univ. of Toronto. —Cf. G. Schiøtz, Kunst og Kamp: Gerd og Aksel Schiøtz (Copenhagen, 1951).

Schipa (skë'-pah), Tito (real baptismal names, Raffaello Attilio Amedeo), famous Italian tenor; b. Lecce, Jan. 2, 1889; studied composition with A. Gerunda, and began his career as a composer of piano pieces and songs; then turned to singing, and in 1911 made his début at Vercelli. After numerous appearances in Europe, he was engaged by the Chicago Civic Opera (1920-32); made his 1st appearance with the Metropolitan Opera on Nov. 23, 1932 as Nemorino in L'Elisir d'amore; made extensive tours of Europe and South America, as well as in the U. S.; lived in California until 1941, when he went back to Italy. On Sept. 28, 1946, he married Teresa Borgna of São Paulo, Brazil. He toured the U. S. again in 1947. He publ. an operetta, La Principessa Liana (1935; performed in Rome), Hosanna, a Mass (1929), and several songs.

Schippers, Thomas, American conductor; b. Kalamazoo, Mich., March 9, 1930. He gave a public concert as a pianist at the age of 6; was church organist at 14. He studied at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia (1944-45) and privately with Olga Samaroff (1946-47). In 1948 he won 2nd prize in the young conductors' contest of the Philadelphia

Orch. His début as conductor was with the Lemonade Opera Co., N. Y., in 1948; he directed the première of Menotti's opera The Consul (N. Y., 1950) and the television première of Amahl and the Night Visitors (Dec. 25, 1951). He became a staff member of the New York City Opera Co. in 1951. On March 26, 1955, he led the N. Y. Philharmonic as guest conductor, the youngest to conduct this organization. In the fall of 1955 he made his début at the Metropolitan Opera, also the youngest musician to conduct there; was guest conductor at La Scala, Milan, in 1955.

Schirmer, the family of music publishers. The first of the family to be connected with music was Johann Georg Schirmer, who settled in Sondershausen and was married there on July 18, 1781. He was a cabinet-maker, a native of Gäuroden, and made musical instruments. His son, Ernst Ludwig Rudolf Schirmer (b. Sondershausen, May 8, 1784), emigrated to New York with his wife and children in 1840. There his son (Friedrich) Gustav (Emil) Schirmer (b. Königsee, Thuringia, Sept. 19, 1829; d. Eisenach, Aug. 5, 1893) found employment in the music store of Scharfenberg & Luis, and after several years entered the employ of Kerk sieg & Breusing, music dealers, becoming manager in 1854. In 1861 he took over the business with a partner, and acquired sole control in 1866, establishing the house of G. Schirmer (q.v.). Schirmer was an enlightened and progressive publisher; he entered into personal relations with noted European composers, especially those of the Weimar circle, and was among the original patrons of the Bayreuth project. He was an amateur pianist and had a real love for music. The diary of Tchaikovsky's visit to N. Y. in 1891 makes repeated mention of Schirmer and his family. Schirmer married an American, Mary Fairchild, by whom he had 5 daughters and 2 sons.

The younger of these sons, Gustave Schirmer (b. New York, Feb. 18, 1864; d. Boston, July 15, 1907), organized in 1885 the Boston Music Company, which gained prominence especially through the publication of Ethelbert Nevin's music. Shortly afterwards, with his brother, he became a partner in the firm founded by his father in N. Y., and after the latter's death in 1893 he managed the business jointly with his brother, retaining independent control of the Boston Music Co. His brother, Rudolph Edward Schirmer (b. New York, July 22, 1859; d. Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 19, 1919), was educated in N. Y. public schools and from 1873-75 lived at Weimar with his mother, brother, and 4 sisters; studied violin and piano there with Helene Stahl and came in contact with the Liszt circle. In 1876 entered College of New Jersey (later Princeton Univ.), and after graduation in 1880 studied law for 4 years at Columbia College, being admitted to the bar in 1884. In 1885 he took the place of his brother Gustave in his father's music-publishing business (see G. Schirmer, Inc.). Later he was rejoined by Gustave, and upon their father's death in 1893, he became president of the firm, assuming sole control from 1907. In 1915 he founded the 'Mus. Quarterly.' He was a director of the N. Y. Oratorio Society and the N. Y. Symph. Society, and a trustee of the Institute of Mus. Art, N. Y. His second wife was the singer Ann Swinburne (married 1916), by whom he had one son. Gustave Schirmer, 3rd (b. Boston, Dec. 29, 1890), son of Gustave Schirmer and grandson of the founder of G. Schirmer, Inc., inherited the Boston Music Co. from his father and acquired the Willis Music Co. of Cincinnati. He was president of G. Schirmer, Inc. 1919-21 and 1944-57. Rudolph E. Schirmer's son, also named Rudolph Edward Schirmer (b. Santa Barbara, Calif., June 8, 1919), in 1949 became vice-president of G. Schirmer, Inc.

Schirmer, Ernest Charles, American music publisher; b. Mt. Vernon, N. Y., March 15, 1865; d. Waban, Massachusetts, Feb. 15, 1958. His father, Edward Schirmer (1831-85), a native of Thuringia, Saxony, was a brother of the famous music publisher, Gustav Schirmer of New York, the brothers emigrating to the U.S. in 1840. Ernest Schirmer entered apprenticeship in the music store of Gustav Schirmer, N. Y., in 1878. In Oct., 1891, he became business manager of the Boston Music Co.; admitted to partnership in Jan., 1902. In 1917 he withdrew from the Boston Music Co., and in 1921 founded the E. C. Schirmer Music Co., with the stated purpose of promoting good music. In 1956 he was still active in the affairs of the E. C. Schirmer Co. The publications of the firm include the Concord Series, the Choral Repertory of the Harvard Univ. Glee Club, Radcliffe, Vassar, and Wellesley College Choral Music, the Polyphonic and 'A Cappella' Libraries, the St. Dunstan Edition of Sacred Music, and treatises on harmonic analysis, musical theory, and music appreciation. The firm enjoys a world market for its publications with agencies at London and Berlin. The catalogue includes several important works by American composers (Randall Thompson, Walter Piston, Douglas Moore, Aaron Copland, etc.).

Schirmer, G., Inc., music-publishing house at New York. It is an outgrowth of the business founded in 1848 by Kerk sieg & Breusing, of which Gustav Schirmer became manager in 1854. With a fellow-employee, Bernard Beer, Schirmer took over the business in 1861, the firm becoming known as 'Beer & Schirmer.' In 1866 Schirmer acquired complete control, establishing the house of 'G. Schirmer, music publishers, importers and dealers.' Until 1880 the business was located at 701 Broadway, then it was moved to 35 Union Square, and in 1910 it was transferred to a 7-story building at 3 East 43rd St., which it occupies at present. In 1891 Schirmer founded his own engraving and printing plant in East 16th St., which in 1916 developed into a large factory located at Woodside, L. I. After the death of Gustav Schirmer in 1893, the business was incorporated under the management of his sons, Rudolph Edward (president) and Gustave (secretary). Upon the death of Rudolph in 1919, he was succeeded by his nephew, Gustave Schirmer, 3rd (resigned in 1921). Then W. Rodman Fay became president, with O. G. Sonneck (q.v.) as vice-president. On May 7, 1929, Carl Engel (q.v.) was made president and continued in that office—except for one year (1933), when his place was taken by Hermann Irion—up to his death in 1944, when Gustave Schirmer, 3rd, became president again, retiring in 1957. He was succeeded by Rudolph Tauhert. The firm has branches in Cleveland and Los Angeles. The catalogue comprises about 40,000 titles. In 1892 the firm began publication of the 'Library of Musical Classics,' notable for careful editing and general typographical excellence; and the same year it launched the 'Collection of Operas' (vocal scores with original text and English transl., also historical and critical introductions). A large number of Masses, oratorios, and cantatas are included in the catalogue. The 'American Folk-Song Series' offers authentic folk material. The firm has publ. compositions by Charles T. Griffes, Victor Herbert, Loeffler, Granados, Ernest Bloch, Percy Grainger, Arnold Schoenberg, etc.; also by many of the younger and most prominent American composers (Roy Harris, Samuel Barber, William Schuman, Gian Carlo Menotti, Paul Creston, Leonard Bernstein, etc.). Other publications are 'Baker's Biographical Dictionary of Musicians,' first issued in 1900, and Pratt's 'History of Music' (revised ed., 1935), both recognized as standard works in their respective fields. In 1915 'The Musical Quarterly' was founded under the editorship of O. G. Sonneck. Its subsequent editors have been Carl Engel (1929-44), Gustave Reese (1944-45), and Paul Henry Lang (since 1945). This periodical, containing contributions by the foremost scholars of Europe and America, occupies a preëminent place among musical journals in the English language.

Schiske, Karl, composer; b. Győr (Raab), Hungary, Feb. 12, 1916. He studied at Vienna Univ. (Ph. D., 1942); in 1952 appointed prof. at the Vienna Academy of Music. —Works: 3 symphonies (1942; 1948; 1951); an oratorio, Vom Tode (1946); piano concerto; 2 string quartets; quintet for wind instruments; numerous piano works and songs.

Schioma, Alfredo, Argentine composer; b. Buenos Aires, June 25, 1885. He studied with Romaniello in Buenos Aires; later founded his own music school there; wrote in various musical genres. —Operas (all performed in Buenos Aires): Amy Robsart, based on Walter Scott's novel Kenilworth (April 24, 1920); La Sirocchia (April 23, 1922); Tabaré (Aug. 6, 1925); Las Virgenes del Sol (June 20, 1939); La Infanta (Aug. 12, 1941). Orchestral works: symph. in F (Buenos Aires, June 15, 1928); Pitanga, symph. tableau (Buenos Aires, March 31, 1929); Los Incas (Buenos Aires, April 26, 1931); choral works, chamber music, and songs.

Schjelderup (shehl'-de-roop), Gerhard, Norwegian composer and writer; b. Christiansand, Nov. 17, 1859; d. Benediktbeuren, Bavaria, July 29, 1933. He went to Paris in 1878, and studied with Franchomme (cello) and Massenet (composition); in 1888 settled in Germany; lived in Dresden (from 1896); then moved to Benediktbeuren, where he remained till his death. He wrote music influenced partly by Wagner, partly by Grieg; publ. a biography of Grieg (in Norwegian, 1903; German ed., with Walter Niemann, 1908) and a monograph on Wagner (in Norwegian, 1908; in German, 1913). —Works: operas: Sonntagmorgen (Munich, May 9, 1893), Norwegische Hochzeit (Prague, March 17, 1900), Frühlingsnacht (Dresden, May 1, 1908; in Norwegian, as Vaarnat, Oslo, Aug. 31, 1915), Sturmvoegel (Schwerin, Sept. 19, 1926); mus. fairy-tale, Sampo; Weihnacht-Suite, for orch.; 2 symph. poems, Eine Sommernacht auf dem Fjord and Brand (after Ibsen); In Baldurs Hain for violin and piano; Fantasiestück for cello and piano; songs. — Cf. O. M. Sandvik, G. Schjelderup, in 'Schweizerische Musikzeitung' (Oct., 1948).

Schladebach, Julius, German physiologist and musician; b. Dresden, 1810; d. Kiel, Sept. 21, 1872. He publ. vol. 1 of a Neues Universal-Lexikon der Tonkunst (1854), completed by Bernsdorf; also Die Bildung der menschlichen Stimme zum Gesang (1860).

Schläger, Hans, Austrian composer; b. Filskirchen, Dec. 5, 1820; d. Salzburg, May 17, 1885. He was a pupil of Preyer at Vienna; chorusmaster of the Männergesangsverein (1844-61); then Kapellmeister of Salzburg Cathedral, and director of the Mozarteum, resigning on his marriage with Countess Zichy in 1867. He wrote the operas Heinrich und Ilse (Salzburg, 1869) and Hans Haidkukuk (Salzburg, 1873); the symph. tone-picture Waldmeisters Brautfahrt; symphonies; string quartets; etc.

Schlegel (shlā'-gel), Leander, Dutch composer; b. Overveen, near Haarlem, Feb. 2, 1844; d. there, Oct. 20, 1913. He was a pupil at the Cons. in The Hague and of Reinecke at the Leipzig Cons. After making several tours (as pianist) with Wilhelmj, he settled in Haarlem as director of a music school (1871-98); in 1898 he moved to Overveen, where until his death he was director of his own Cons. A composer of solid attainments and serious tendencies, he followed in the footsteps of Brahms. He publ. a piano quartet, a string quartet, and a number of piano pieces: 2 Ballades, Rhein und Loreley, Der arme Peter, Zwei fantastische Studien, Sechs Fantasiën; songs: An die Nacht, Deutsche Liebeslieder, etc.; in MS are a piano concerto, Rhapsodie for piano; Aus Toggenburgs Sage, symph. poem; a symphony; violin concerto; etc.

Schleinitz (shlī'-nitz), Heinrich Conrad, German lawyer and musician; b. Zschaitz, near Döbeln, Oct. 1, 1802; d. Leipzig, May 13, 1881. As a pupil of the Thomasschule he had an excellent musical education; was a member of the Gewandhaus Board of Managers when they called Mendelssohn to Leipzig, and became a fast friend of the latter, giving up his legal practice on Mendelssohn's death to undertake the direction of the Conservatorium, an office he filled with conservative zeal until his death.

Schlesinger, Adolf Martin, German music publisher. In 1810 he founded the 'Schlesinger'sche Buch- und Musikalienhandlung' at Berlin; was one of Beethoven's German publishers. The firm was carried on after his death by his son Heinrich Schlesinger, who began publishing (1851) the influential music periodical 'Echo'; the business was sold in 1864 to R. Lienau (1838-1920), whose sons took it over at his death. The firm was further enlarged by the acquisition of several other catalogues, such as those of Haslinger of Vienna (1875), Krentzlin of Berlin (1919), Vernthall of Berlin (1925), and Köster of Berlin (1928). — Cf. Max Unger, Ludwig van Beethoven und seine Verleger S. A. Steiner und T. Haslinger in Wien, A. M. Schlesinger in Berlin (Berlin, 1921).

Schlesinger, Kathleen, musicologist; b. Hollywood, near Belfast, Ireland, June 27, 1862; d. London, April 16, 1953. She was educated in Switzerland; then settled in England; became interested in musical instruments; publ. The Instruments of the Modern Orchestra (2 vols., London, 1910). Her chief work is The Greek Aulos (London, 1939), containing not only a description of ancient Greek instruments, but also propounding an original theory of the formation of Greek modes, which aroused much controversy; the weight of learned opinion inclined against her hypotheses.

Schlesinger, Maurice Adolf, music publisher; son of Adolf Martin Schlesinger; b. Berlin, c. 1800; d. Baden-Baden, Feb., 1871. He moved to Paris in 1819, and was at first engaged in book selling. In 1834 he established a music publishing business, and launched the publication of the 'Gazette musicale,' soon united with the 'Revue musicale' (continued publication until 1880). He became one of the most important Paris publishers; publ. full scores of operas by Meyerbeer, Donizetti, and others; also Berlioz's Symphonie fantastique and much of Chopin's music. In 1846 he sold the catalogue to Brandus and Dufour; later it was acquired by Joubert.

Schlesinger, Sebastian Benson, German composer; b. Hamburg, Sept. 24, 1837; d. Nice, Jan. 8, 1917. He went to the U. S. at the age of 13; studied music at Boston, chiefly under Otto Dresel; was for 17 years German Consul at Boston; then lived for a time in London, and during his last years in Paris. He was a gifted composer; publ.

about 120 songs which received praise from Max Bruch and Robert Franz; wrote several piano pieces in a Romantic vein (Novelette, Albumblatt, Impromptu-Caprice, etc.).

Schletterer, Hans Michel, German conductor and writer on music; b. Ansbach, May 29, 1824; d. Augsburg, June 4, 1893. He studied with local teachers; then became a pupil of Spohr at Kassel and Ferdinand David in Leipzig. After filling a number of teaching posts in provincial towns, he taught at the Univ. of Heidelberg (1854-58); then was choral conductor and singing teacher in Augsburg, where he founded an oratorio society and a music school. He publ. 17 books of choral music a cappella; a selection of Lutheran church music, Musica sacra (2 vols., 1887; 3rd ed., 1927); Das deutsche Singspiel (1863); J. Fr. Reichardt (1865); Geschichte der geistlichen Dichtung und kirchlichen Tonkunst (1869); Studien zur Geschichte der französischen Musik (3 vols.; 1884-85; mostly borrowed from Castil-Blaze); etc.

Schlick, Arnolt, the elder, blind organist and lutenist; b. in Bohemia, c. 1460; d. after 1517. He was organist to the Count Palatine at Heidelberg (possibly from 1496 or even earlier), and since he bore the title of Imperial organist, he may have also served at one time at the court of Friedrich III. He toured Germany and Holland as organist, appearing in Worms (1495), Torgau, Hagenau, etc. —Works: Spiegel der Orgelmacher und Organisten (1511; reprinted by R. Eitner as a supplement to 'Monatshefte für Musik-Geschichte,' 1869; by E. Flade, 1932; by P. Smets, 1937, and Flade again, 1951); Tablaturen etlicher Lobgesang und Lidlein uff die Orgeln und Lauten (1512; new ed. by G. Harms, 1924; reprints by R. Eitner in 'Monatshefte für Musik-Geschichte,' 1869; A. G. Ritter, Zur Geschichte des Orgelspiels, II, 96, 1884; and Wm. Tappert, Sang und Klang aus alter Zeit, Berlin, 1906). —Cf. R. Eitner in 'Monatshefte für Musik-Geschichte,' XXI, 192; F. Stein, Zur Geschichte der Musik in Heidelberg (containing index of Spiegel der Orgelmacher; 1912; 2nd ed., 1921); A. Pirro, Orgues et organistes de Haguenau, in 'Revue de musicologie' (1926); R. Kendall, Notes on A. Schlick, in 'Acta Musicologica' (1939); H. H. Lenneberg, The Critic Criticized: Sebastian Virdung and his Controversy with A. Schlick, in the 'Journal of the American Musicological Society' (Spring, 1957). See also A. Mendel, Pitch in the 16th and Early 17th Centuries, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1948).

Schlieder, Frederick William, American organist and composer; b. Foreston, Ill., Jan. 22, 1873; d. New York, Jan. 13, 1953. He studied at Syracuse Univ. (M. M., 1915); later took organ lessons in Paris with Guilmant; returning to America in 1905, he was active as concert organist; from 1910 till 1923, was organist at the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, N. Y.; also taught harmony at the Philadelphia Cons. He publ. Lyric Composition through Improvisation: First Year's Training in Formal Self-expression (Boston, 1927); a sequel was publ. by the Schlieder Book Foundation, Decatur, Ill. (1946); he further publ. Beyond the Tonal Horizon of Music, a collection of aphorisms (Decatur, Ill., 1948).

Schloezer, Boris de, writer on music; b. Vitebsk, Russia, Dec. 8, 1884; studied at the Brussels Cons. and in Paris; his sister, Tatiana Schloezer, was Scriabin's second wife; he was associated with Scriabin for many years beginning in 1905; lived in Moscow as music critic and lecturer; went to Kiev in 1918; in 1920, left Russia and settled in Paris; contributed to literary and musical magazines; lectured in France and Switzerland. —Books: Scriabin (vol. 1; Berlin, 1923; in Russian; vol. 2 was planned but not publ.); Igor Stravinsky (Paris, 1929; in French); Introduction à J. S. Bach (Paris, 1947).

Schlögel, Xavier, Belgian composer; b. Brillionville, Famène, July 14, 1854; d. Ciney, near Namur, March 23, 1889. He studied with Ledet at the Liège Cons. —Works: Scènes champêtres for orch.; Ballade des épées for voice and orch.; Messe solennelle for male chorus, organ, and orch.; string quartets and piano trios.

Schlösser, (Karl Wilhelm) Adolf, pianist, son and pupil of Louis Schlösser; b. Darmstadt, Feb. 1, 1830; d. Great Bookham, England, Nov. 10, 1913. He made his début at Frankfurt in 1847; after concert tours in Germany, France, and England, he settled in London (1854); taught (until 1903) at the Royal Academy of Music. —Works: piano quartet; piano trio; 24 studies and many other pieces for piano.

Schlösser, Louis, German composer; b. Darmstadt, Nov. 17, 1800; d. there, Nov. 17, 1886. He was a pupil of Rinck at Darmstadt; Seyfried, Mayseder, and Salieri at Vienna, and Le Sueur and Kreutzer at the Paris Cons.; was court conductor in Darmstadt. —Works (about 70 opus numbers publ.): the operas Granada (Vienna, 1826), Das Leben ein Traum (1839), Die Jugend Karls II. von Spanien (1847), Die Braut des Herzogs (1847), and Benvenuto Cellini; an operetta, Kapitän Hector; the melodrama Die Jahreszeiten; music to Faust; ballets, entr'actes, symphonies, overtures, string quartets, concertino for horn with orch., piano pieces, songs, etc.

Schlottmann, Louis, German pianist and composer; b. Berlin, Nov. 12, 1826; d. there, June 13, 1905. He studied with Taubert and Dehn; gave successful concerts in London and elsewhere, and settled in Berlin as a teacher. —Works: overtures to Romeo and Juliet and Wallenstein's Lager; Trauermarsch, Rezitativ und Finale, symph. scene for orch.; Concertstück for piano; chamber music; piano pieces (3 Capricettes; Polonaise de concert; Andantino; Jugendspiegel); choruses and songs.

Schlusnus, Heinrich, German baritone; b. Braubach, Aug. 6, 1888; d. Frankfurt, June 19, 1952. He studied with Louis Bachner in Berlin; was a member of the Nuremberg Opera (1915-17); on the roster of the Berlin State Opera (from 1917); made appearances with the leading opera companies of Europe; also with the Chicago Opera Co.; toured the U. S. as concert singer.

Schmedes (shmā-des), Erik, Danish tenor; b. Gjentofte, near Copenhagen, Aug. 27, 1868; d. Vienna, March 23, 1931. He studied piano, then turned to singing; studied with Mme. Artôt in Paris; made his operatic début as baritone in Wiesbaden (Jan. 11, 1891), as the Herald in Lohengrin; then sang baritone roles in Nuremberg and Dresden (1894-97). After a course of study with A. Iffert in Dresden, he developed a definite tenor voice, and appeared as Siegfried at the Vienna Opera (Feb. 11, 1898); remained as a tenor with the Vienna Opera until 1924. He was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Co. during the season of 1908-09; made his début as Siegmund (Nov. 18, 1908).

Schmeling, Gertrud. See Mara.

Schmelzer, Johann Heinrich, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, c. 1623; d. there, June 30, 1680. In 1649-70, violinist at the Vienna court chapel; 1671, assistant conductor; 1679, first conductor. He may have been the teacher of the famous violinist, Heinrich Biber. Composed valuable chamber music, including Duodena selectarum sonatarum (12 trio so-nas, 1659); Sacro-profanus concentus musicus (sonatas, for 2-8 instruments, 1662); Sonate unarum fidium (6 solo violin sonatas, 1664; one reprinted in the supplement to G. Beckermann's Das Violinspiel in Deutschland vor 1700); also the trumpet fanfares to Bertali's Festspiel, La Contesa dell'aria (1667), publ. as Arie per il balletto a cavallo (ed. by P. Nettl in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich,' vol. 56) and a Missa nuptialis (ed. by G. Adler in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich,' vol. 49). Other MSS of vocal and instrumental works by Schmelzer are in Vienna, Kromeriz, Paris, and Upsala. —Cf. E. Wellesz, Die Ballett-Suiten von J. H. und A. A. Schmelzer (Vienna, 1914); A. Moser, Geschichte des Violinspiels (p. 126 ff.); P. Nettl in 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' VIII.

Schmelzl (Schmeltzl, Schmaelzl), Wolfgang, b. Kemnat, Upper Palatinate, c. 1500; was at first a Protestant cantor at Amberg, where he married; then, c. 1540, a teacher in Vienna and singer at the S. Salvator Chapel, and finally a Catholic priest at St. Lorenz at Steinfeld, near Vienna, where he died c. 1561. He is known for a collection of 4-5 voiced quodlibets and folksongs of the period, published in 1544. Reprint by Schering in Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (No. 111). —Cf. Elsa Bienenfeld, W. S., sein Liederbuch (1544) und das Quodlibet des XVI. Jahrhunderts, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' VI, 1 (1904); R. Eitner, in 'Monatshefte für Musik-Geschichte' III, 201.

Schmid, Adolf, conductor and arranger; b. Hannsdorf, Austria, Nov. 18, 1868; d. Engelwood, N. J., Feb. 12, 1958. He studied at the Vienna Cons. (graduated, 1897); from 1901 to 1915 was music director of His Majesty's Theatre, London; in 1915 settled in the U. S.; conducted a season of the Boston Grand Opera Co. (1915-16) and the Pavlova Ballet Russe (1916-18); from 1930 to 1945, was chief arranger for the National Broadcasting Co.; made innumerable orchestral arrangements of various works, especially for schools; also wrote some incidental music for the theater; a Caravan Dance; a Bacchanal Dance; etc. He taught at the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y.; retired in 1953, and lived in Leonia, N. J. He publ. The Language of the Baton (N. Y., 1937).

Schmid, Anton, b. Pihl, near Leipä, Bohemia, Jan. 30, 1787; d. Baden, near Vienna, July 3, 1857. Was custodian of the music section in the Vienna Library. Publ. the monographs Ottaviano dei Petrucci da Fossombrone, der erste Erfinder des Musikenotendruckes mit beweglichen Metalltypen, und seine Nachfolger im 16. Jahrhundert (1845); J. Haydn und N. Zingarelli (1847); to prove that Haydn composed Gott erhalte Franz den Kaiser; Christoph Willibald, Ritter von Gluck (1854); and Beiträge zur Literatur und Geschichte der Tonkunst (in Dehn's 'Cäcilia,' 1842-46).

Schmid, Ernst Friedrich (Fritz), eminent German musicologist; b. Tübingen, March 7, 1904; studied natural science there and in Göttingen; music at the Munich Academy with Courvoisier (composition) and Sandberger (musicology); then at the Univ. of Freiburg-im-Breisgau; and in Vienna (under Lach and Robert Haas); Dr. phil. (Tübingen, 1929). In 1934 he went to Graz, where he organized a seminar in musicology; then was prof. at the Univ. of Tübingen (1935-37); was in the German army (1940-45). In 1948 he settled in Augsburg, where he developed numerous activities, as music critic, president of the Mozart Gesellschaft, general ed. of the 'Neue Mozart Ausgabe,' etc. His research in the field of Baroque music and in establishing the authenticity or the spuriousness of works of Haydn and Mozart is of the highest caliber. —Books: C.P.E. Bach und seine Kammermusik (Kassel, 1931); Joseph Haydn: ein Buch von Heimat und Vorfahren (Kassel, 1934); W. A. Mozart (Lübeck, 1935); ed. of Ein schwäbisches Mozartbuch (Stuttgart, 1947); edited numerous works by German and Austrian 18th-century composers; contributed valuable articles to musical periodicals, to 'Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart,' etc.

Schmid, Heinrich Kaspar, German composer; b. Landau, Sept. 11, 1874; d. Odlung, near Munich, Jan. 8, 1953. He was a chorister at Regensburg, and studied there with J. Mitterer; in 1899 he entered the Munich Academy, where he was a pupil of Thuille and Bussmeyer. In 1903 he went to Athens, where he taught at the Odeon; in 1905 returned to Munich, taught at the Munich Academy (until 1921); then was director of the Karlsruhe Cons. (1921-24), director of the Augsburg Cons. (1924-32); from 1933 he occupied various positions in the Dept. of Education. His eyesight failed him, and he was totally blind during the last years of his life. As a composer, he continued the Romantic tradition of the Bavarian School; was at his best in lieder, of which he wrote a great number; also composed folk-like singspiele (Finden und Meiden, Vilsbiburger Liebfrauenspiel, etc.); Tanzbilder aus unserer Zeit, for men's voices and a dance ensemble; chamber music. —Cf. H. Roth, H. K. Schmid (Munich, 1921); W. Zentner, H. K. Schmid, in 'Neue Musikzeitschrift' (Aug.-Sept., 1949).

Schmid, Otto, German writer on music and editor; b. Dresden, May 6, 1858; d. there, Sept. 12, 1931. He abandoned the study of jurisprudence in Leipzig, and became a private pupil of Ed. Kretschmer in Dresden; 1912-24, prof. of history of music at the Cons. there; was also critic for the 'Dresdener Journal' and 'Sächsische Staatszeitung.' Publ. biographies of Koschat (1887) and Kretschmer (1890); also Merkblätter zur Musikgeschichte (1912); Die Heimstätten der Sächsischen Landestheater (1919); R. Wagners Opern und Musikdramen in Dresden (1919); Der Mozart-Verein zu Dresden (1921); Geschichte der Staatsoper in Dresden (2 vols., 1926-27). He ed. the important collection 'Musik am sächsischen Hofe' (10 vols.; compositions by Hasse, J. C. Schmidt, J. A. and C. S. Binder, Naumann, Petzold, etc., and members of the royal house); also 'Orgelwerke altböhmisches Meister' (2 vols.).

Schmidl, Carlo, Italian music publisher and lexicographer; b. Trieste, Oct. 7, 1859; d. there, Oct. 7, 1943. He was the son and pupil of the Hungarian composer Antonio Schmidl (1814-80). In 1872 he entered the employ of the music publisher Vicentini, and in 1889 he established his own business at Trieste; also directed the Leipzig branch of the Ricordi Co. (1901-06). He compiled and publ. an important biographical music dictionary, 'Dizionario universale dei musicisti' (Milan, 1887-89; 2nd ed., 1926-29; supplement 1938), containing scrupulously accurate data on Italian musicians, exact dates of performance of major works, and other information testifying to independent research. Schmidl also wrote biographies of Schumann (1890) and G. S. Mayr (1901).

Schmidt, Arthur Paul, music publisher; b. Altona, Germany, April 1, 1846; d. Boston, May 5, 1921. He settled in Boston in 1866, and entered the music firm of George D. Russell & Co. In 1876 he established a business of his own; for some years maintained branches in New York and Leipzig. Henry R. Austin became president of the firm in 1949. The A. P. Schmidt Co. won prominence by publication of the works of MacDowell; brought out virtually the complete output of Arthur Foote (more than 150 items); also works by Chadwick, Hadley, Paine, and Mrs. Beach.

Schmidt, Franz, important Austrian composer; b. Pressburg, Dec. 22, 1874; d. Perchtoldsdorf, near Vienna, Feb. 11, 1939. He studied organ, piano, and cello at the Vienna Cons.; a pupil of Anton Bruckner (composition) and Robert Fuchs (theory); also took piano lessons with Leschetizky. From 1896 to 1911 he played cello in the Vienna Philharmonic Orch.; also taught at the Cons. (both cello and piano). From 1925 till 1927 he was director of the Vienna Academy of Music, and from 1927 to 1931, rector of the Hochschule für Musik; retired in 1937. While engaged in pedagogical activities, he continued to compose; his music is steeped in Viennese Romanticism, and the influence of Bruckner is particularly pronounced. Although he is regarded in Austria as a very important symphonic composer, his music is almost totally unknown elsewhere. —Works: operas, Notre Dame (Vienna, April 1, 1914; an orchestral suite from it entitled Zwischen spiel aus einer unvollständigen romantischen Oper was performed by the Vienna Philharmonic, Dec. 6, 1903); Fredigundis (Berlin, Dec. 19, 1922); oratorio, Das Buch mit sieben Siegeln (Vienna, June 15, 1938); 4 symphonies: No. 1 (Vienna, Jan. 25, 1902); No. 2 (Vienna, Dec. 3, 1913); No. 3 (Vienna, Dec. 2, 1928); No. 4 (Vienna, Jan. 10, 1934); Konzertante Variationen über ein Thema von Beethoven (piano concerto No. 1), for piano, left hand alone, and orch. (Vienna, Feb. 2, 1924, Paul Wittgenstein soloist); piano concerto No. 2, left hand alone (Vienna, Feb. 10, 1935, Wittgenstein soloist); Chaconne, for orch. (Vienna, Jan. 29, 1933); 2 string quartets; piano quintet; 2 clarinet quintets; several works for organ. —Cf. Andreas Liess, Franz Schmidt. Leben und Schaffen (Graz, 1951); Carl Nemeth, Franz Schmidt. Ein Meister nach Brahms und Bruckner (Vienna, 1957).

Schmidt, Gustav, German conductor and composer; b. Weimar, Sept. 1, 1816; d. Darmstadt, Feb. 11, 1882. While theater conductor at Frankfurt, he produced his operas Prinz Eugen (1845) and Die Weiber von Weinsberg (1858); other operas were La Réole (Breslau, 1863) and Alibi. He also wrote songs, ballads, and popular male choruses.

Schmidt, Heinrich, German editor; b. Kirchenlamitz, near Bayreuth, April 30, 1861; d. Bayreuth, May 23, 1923. Pupil of Rheinberger, Kellermann, and Riehl at the Königliche Akademie der Tonkunst in Munich; Dr. phil. (Univ. of Munich, 1897) with the dissertation Joh. Mattheson, ein Förderer der deutschen Tonkunst, im Lichte seiner Werke (Leipzig, 1897); from 1898 teacher at the seminary in Bayreuth. —He ed. 'Streichorchester für Mittelschulen' (8 vols.; selections of classical pieces), 'Der Männerchor auf natürlicher Grundlage' (1913), 'Der Chorgesang für Mittelschulen' (1918), and a new ed. of Hohmann's Violinschule. Publ. Die Orgel unserer Zeit in Wort und Bild (1904; 2nd ed., 1922) and Richard Wagner in Bayreuth (1909; with U. Hartmann).

Schmidt, Johann Philipp Samuel, German composer; b. Königsberg, Sept. 8, 1779; d. Berlin, May 9, 1853. He wrote operas for Königsberg and Berlin; many cantatas; 9 oratorios and Masses; symphonies; quintets and quartets for strings, etc.; also contributed to musical periodicals of Berlin and Leipzig.

Schmidt, John Henry, organist, composer, and singing teacher; b. in Germany; lived in Radevormwald, near Düsseldorf until Dec., 1783, when he arrived in Gouda, Holland; was appointed organist of the Cathedral of St. John at Schiedam on Oct. 23, 1785; held this office until 1790, when he sailed for Rio de Berbice, British Guiana. In 1793 he arrived in New York; in June, 1796 he appeared in Charleston and advertised as a singing teacher and piano manufacturer; towards the end of 1796 he settled in Philadelphia, where he became organist of St. Peter's Church (1797); also announced concerts in Baltimore (1796) and Albany (1797). He composed a Sonata for Beginners. —Cf. O. G. Sonneck, Bibliography of Early Secular American Music (Washington, 1905); O. G. Sonneck, Early Concert Life in America (Leipzig, 1907; in English); J. T. Howard, Our American Music (N. Y., 1939, and subsequent eds.).

Schmidt, Joseph, Rumanian tenor; b. Bavideni, Bukovina, March 4, 1904; d. Zürich, Nov. 16, 1942. He studied at the Berlin Cons.; in 1928 began his career as a radio singer, and won great popularity in Germany. In 1933 he went to Belgium; in 1938 was briefly in America; then settled in Switzerland. His voice was regarded as of great lyric expressiveness; but being almost a dwarf (he stood only 4 feet 10 inches in height), he was unable to appear in opera.

Schmidt, Karl, German music scholar; b. Friedberg (Hesse), July 10, 1869; d. there, Feb. 28, 1948. He studied in Leipzig; was active in school music in Laubach and Friedberg; publ. the valuable paper, Quaestiones de musicis scriptoribus romanis imprimis Cassiodoro et Isidoro (Leipzig, 1898).

Schmidt, Leopold, German writer on music; b. Berlin, Aug. 2, 1860; d. there, April 30, 1927. In 1880 he entered the Königliche Hochschule in Berlin, at the same time matriculating as a student of philosophy at the Univ. Was Kapellmeister in Heidelberg (1887), at the Friedrich Wilhelmstädtsches Theater in Berlin (1888), in Zürich (1891) and Halle (1895); Dr. phil., Rostock (1895); from 1897 critic for the 'Berliner Tageblatt'; 1900-12, prof. of history of music at Stern's Cons.; from 1912, at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Cons. — Writings: Zur Geschichte der Märchenoper (dissertation, 1895); G. Meyerbeer (1898); Haydn (1898; 3rd ed., 1914; in Reimann's 'Berühmte Musiker'); Geschichte der Musik im 19. Jahrhundert (1901); Moderne Musik (being vol. III of Die neue Kunst, 1905); Meister der Tonkunst im 19. Jahrhundert (1908; 3rd ed., 1921); Mozart (1909; 2nd ed., 1913; in Reimann's 'Berühmte Musiker'); Beethoven (1914); collected criticisms publ. in 3 vols. (1909, 1913, 1922); ed. Beethovenbriefe (1909, 1922) and Brahms Briefwechsel (vol. 7, 1910); he also wrote several guides (Strauss' Salome and Ariadne auf Naxos, Gluck's Orfeo, etc.).

Schmidt-Görg, Joseph, German musicologist; b. Rüdighausen, near Dortmund, March 13, 1897. He studied musicology with Schieder in Bonn; Dr. phil., 1926; became Schieder's assistant in the Beethoven Archives at Bonn on Beethoven's centennial in 1927; in 1945 was appointed director; also taught musicology at the Univ. of Bonn (from 1930). — Books: Unbekannte Manuskripte zu Beethovens weltlicher und geistlicher Gesangsmusik (Bonn, 1928); Das rheinische Volkslied (Düsseldorf, 1934); Katalog der Handschriften des Beethoven-Hauses und Beethoven-Archivs (Bonn, 1935); Nicolas Gombert (Bonn, 1938),

Schmieder, Wolfgang, German musicologist; b. Bromberg, May 29, 1901; studied with Kroyer and Moser; was keeper of the archives for Breitkopf & Härtel in Leipzig; 1942, appointed chief of the Music Division of the State Library in Frankfurt. He compiled the valuable Thematisch-systematisches Verzeichnis der musikalischen Werke von

J. S. Bach (Leipzig, 1950), also ed. the songs of Neidhart von Reuenthal, in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 71).

Schminke, Oscar Eberhard, American organist and composer; b. New York, Dec. 12, 1881. He suffered from partial deafness since his childhood, and after taking piano lessons, decided to change to another profession; entered the N. Y. College of Dentistry, graduating in 1903; however, he continued to study music after 1909; took organ lessons with Gaston Déthier in N. Y. He publ. several works for organ (Marche russe, Poème exotique, etc.); piano pieces (Chameleon, Moods, etc.); about a dozen songs. After a long period of inactivity, he returned to music in 1948, using an electronic hearing aid; wrote a piano quintet; a flute quintet; a Concertante, for flute, clarinet, and piano; a piano trio; lived at Kenoza Lake, N. Y.

Schmit, Camille, Belgian composer; b. Aubange, March 30, 1908. He studied at the Brussels Cons.; later became instructor of harmony at the Cons. of Liège. He wrote for orch. a Triptyque and Préludes joyeux (Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Copenhagen, June 2, 1947); also a wind quintet; piano pieces; songs.

Schmitt, Aloys, German pianist and eminent teacher; b. Erlenbach, Aug. 26, 1788; d. Frankfurt, July 25, 1866. He was the son and pupil of a cantor; studied composition with André at Offenbach; settled in Frankfurt in 1816, remaining there except for a few years in Berlin and Hanover. He wrote 4 operas, Der Doppelgänger (Hanover, 1827), Valeria (Mannheim, 1832), Das Osterfest zu Paderborn (Frankfurt, 1843), and Die Tochter der Wüste (Frankfurt, 1845); 2 oratorios (Moses and Ruth); church music; etc.; but he is known as a composer only through his valuable works for piano: a method; studies; rhapsodies; rondos; sonatinas; etc.; he also wrote 4 piano concertos, several piano quartets, and piano trios. — Cf. H. Henkel, Leben und Wirken von Dr. Aloys Schmitt (Frankfurt, 1873).

Schmitt, Florent, outstanding French composer; b. Blâmont, Sept. 28, 1870; d. Neuilly, near Paris, Aug. 17, 1958. He had his first music lessons from H. Hess (piano) and G. Sandré (harmony) in Nancy. In 1889 he went to Paris, where he studied with Dubois and Lavignac (harmony), Massenet and Fauré (composition). He won the 2nd Prix de Rome in 1897 with the cantata Frédégonde and the 1st prize in 1900 with the cantata Sémiramis, which was performed at a Colonne concert on Dec. 11, 1900. He spent the years 1901-04 in the Villa Medici in Rome, sending to the Académie several important instrumental and choral works (1st movement of a piano quintet, Le Palais hanté [symph. sketch after Edgar Allen Poe], and Psalm XLVII), as 'envois de Rome'; then spent 2 years traveling in Germany, Austria, Hungary, and Turkey. In 1906 he settled permanently in Paris, devoting himself entirely to composition. He served as a member of the executive committee of the 'Société Musicale Indépendante' since its foundation in 1909; was also a member of the 'Société Nationale de Musique.' His formative years were spent in the ambient of French symbolism in poetry and Impressionism in music, and he followed these directions in his programmatically conceived orchestral music; but he developed a strong, distinctive style of his own, mainly by elaborating the contrapuntal fabric of his works and extending the rhythmic design to unprecedented asymmetrical combinations; he also exploited effects of primitivistic percussion, in many respects anticipating the developments of modern Russian music. He was not averse to humor; several of his works have topical allusions. The catalogue of his works is very long, and he continued to compose until his death at the age of 87; attended the première of his symphony, given at the Strasbourg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 15, 1958. He visited the U. S. in 1932 as soloist in his Symphonie concertante with the Boston Symph. He was an influential music critic, writing regularly for 'Le Temps' (1919-39). —Works: Ballets: La Tragédie de Salomé (Paris, Nov. 9, 1907); Le Petit Elfe Ferme-l'œil, after Hans Christian Andersen (Opéra-Comique, Feb. 29, 1924); Oriane la sans-égale (Paris Opéra, Jan. 7, 1938); incidental music to Antoine et Cléopâtre, after Shakespeare (Paris Opéra, June 14, 1920); Reflets (Opéra-Comique, May 20, 1932). Vocal music with orch.: Musique sur l'eau (1898); Psaume XLVII, for soprano, chorus, orch., and organ (1904; Paris, Dec. 27, 1906); Danse des Devadasis, for solo voice, chorus, and orch. (1900-08); Tristesse au Jardin (1897-1908); Chant de Guerre, for tenor, male chorus, and orch. (1914); Kerob-Shal, for tenor and orch. (1920-24); Fête de la lumière, for soprano, chorus, and orch. (1937); L'Arbre entre tous, for chorus and orch. (1939); À contre-voix, for mixed chorus (1943); motets and choruses a cappella. For orch.: En été (1894); Feuillets de voyage (1903-13); Reflets de l'Allemagne, suite of waltzes (1905); Puppazzi, suite in 8 movements (1907); Musiques de plein-air (1897-99); Séamlík, symph. poem for military band (1906); Le Palais hanté, symph. study after Poe (1900-04); Trois Rapsodies (1903-04); Scherzo vif, for violin and orch. (1903-10); La Tragédie de Salomé, from the ballet of the same title (Paris, Jan. 8, 1911); Légende, for viola (or saxophone) and orch. (1918); Mirages: Tristesse de Pan, La tragique Chevauchée (1921); Fonctionnaire MCMXII: Inaction en Musique (1924; Paris, Jan. 16, 1927); Danse d'Abisag (1925); Salammbo, 6 symph. episodes after Flaubert, from film music (1925); Ronde burlesque (1927; Paris, Jan. 12, 1930); Çançunik (humorous phonetic spelling of Sens unique, i.e., one-way street; Paris, Feb. 15, 1930); Symphonie Concertante, for piano and orch. (Boston, Schmitt soloist, Nov. 25, 1932); Suite sans esprit de suite (Paris, Jan. 29, 1938); Branle de sortie (Paris, Jan. 21, 1939); Janiana, for strings (1941); Habeyssée, for violin and orch. (phonetic representation of ABC, as pronounced in French; Paris, March 14, 1947); symphony (1957; Strasbourg, June 15, 1958). Chamber music: Scherzo-pastorale, for flute and piano (1889); Quatre pièces, for violin and piano (1901); Andante et Scherzo, for harp and string quartet (1906); piano quintet (1901-08); Lied et Scherzo, for double wind quintet (1910); Sonate libre en deux parties enchaînées, for violin and piano (1919); Suite en rocaille, for flute, violin, viola, cello, and harp (1934); Sonatine en trio, for flute, clarinet, and harpsichord (1935); Minorités, for flute, violin, and piano (1938); Hasards, for violin, viola, cello, and piano (1939); À tours d'anches, for flute, clarinet, bassoon, and piano (1939); quartet for saxophones (1941); string trio (1944); quartet for flutes (1944); string quartet (1945-48). For piano: Soirs (10 preludes); Ballade de la neige (1896); Musiques intimes (2 sets; 1890-1900 and 1898-1904); Nuits romaines (1901); Puppazzi, 8 pieces (1907; also for orch.); Pièces romantiques (6 pieces; 1900-08); Trois Danses (1935; also for orch.); Feuillets de voyage (1903; also for orch.); Suite sans esprit de suite (1938; also for orch.); Clavecin obtempérant, suite (1945); etc. Reflets de l'Allemagne, 8 waltzes for piano, 4 hands (1905; also for orch.). Songs: Soir sur le lac (1898); Quatre lieds, to words by Richépin, Maeterlinck, etc.; Kerob-Shal, 3 songs (also for voice and orch.). —Cf.

M. D. Calvocoressi, Œuvres de Florent Schmitt, in 'L'Art Moderne' (Jan. 6, 1907); O. Séré, Musiciens français d'aujourd'hui (rev. ed., Paris, 1921); G. Jean-Aubry, La Musique française d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1916); A. Cœuroy, La Musique française moderne (Paris, 1922); P. O. Ferroud, Auteur de Florent Schmitt (Paris, 1927); Eric Blom, Florent Schmitt, in the 'Chesterian' (March, 1932); Yves Hucher, Florent Schmitt, l'homme et l'artiste (Paris, 1953).

Schmitt, Georg Aloys, son and pupil of Aloys Schmitt; b. Hanover, Feb. 2, 1827; d. (suddenly, during a rehearsal) Dresden, Oct. 15, 1902. He studied theory with Vollweiler at Heidelberg. After pianistic tours in Germany, France, Belgium, and Algiers, he visited London, became theater conductor at Aix-la-Chapelle, Würzburg, etc., and 1857-92 court conductor at Schwerin; from 1893, director of the 'Mozartverein,' Dresden, which flourished under his sway (chorus of 1,400 and its own orch.). He wrote 3 operas; also incidental music to plays; overtures and other orch. works; string quartets; piano trios; piano pieces; songs. He revised and completed Mozart's Mass in C minor (1901), and orchestrated compositions by Handel and Mozart. —He was married to the singer Cornelia Czanyi (b. Debreczin, Dec. 6, 1851; d. Wismar, Oct. 11, 1906).

Schmitt, Hans, piano teacher; b. Koblenz, Bohemia, Jan. 14, 1835; d. Vienna, Jan. 14, 1907. At first an oboist at Bucharest and Vienna, throat-trouble compelled him to give up that instrument, and he studied the piano under Dachs at the Vienna Cons., 1860-62, taking the silver medal, and being appointed teacher at the Cons. —His instructive works for piano include 300 Studies without Octave-stretches; Vademecum; Fundament der Klaviertechnik; Zirkelübungen in Skalen und Akkorden; 120 kleine Vortragsstücke; Repertoirestudien; Das Pedal des Klaviers (1875, after Louis Köhler; in English, 1893).

Schmitt, Jacob (Jacques), brother and pupil of Aloys Schmitt; b. Obernburg, Bavaria, Nov. 2, 1803; d. Hamburg, June, 1853. Piano teacher; of some 370 works, his sonatas for piano (2 and 4 hands) are especially useful; also the Musikalisches Schatzkästlein, a collection of 133 short pieces; his method, op. 301, and studies, rondos, and nocturnes were also popular.

Schmitz, Arnold, German musicologist; b. Sablon, near Metz, July 11, 1893; studied in Bonn (with Schiedermair), in Munich and Berlin (with Kaun and Beer-Walbrunn); 1921-28, on the faculty of the Univ. of Bonn; 1929-39, in Breslau; 1939-45 in the military service; in 1947, appointed prof. at the Univ. of Mainz. —Writings: Beethovens 'zwei Prinzipien' (1923); Das romantische Beethovenbild (1927); Die Bildlichkeit der wortgebundenen Musik J. S. Bachs (1950).

Schmitz, Elie Robert, eminent pianist; b. Paris, Feb. 8, 1889; d. San Francisco, Sept. 5, 1949. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Diémer, winning 1st prize in piano; in 1908 toured as accompanist of Slezak, Emma Eames, and other celebrated singers; in 1912, organized the Association des Concerts Schmitz in Paris, which he led until 1914; in 1919, toured the U. S. as pianist; in 1920 founded the Franco-American Music Society in N. Y. (incorporated in 1923 as Pro Musica), of which he was president from its inception; toured again in the U. S. and Europe (1921-29), and the Orient (1929-30 and 1932-33); eventually settled in San Francisco as a teacher. He publ. a book on his system of piano study, The Capture of Inspiration (N. Y., 1935; 2nd ed., 1944) and a valuable technical analysis with commentary, The Piano Works of Claude Debussy (N. Y., 1950).

Schmitz, Eugen, German musicologist; b. Neuberg, Bavaria, July 12, 1882. He entered the Univ. of Munich to study law, but soon went over to musicology under A. Sandberger and Th. Kroyer at the Univ. and theory under A. Beer-Walbrunn; Dr. phil. in 1905 with the dissertation Leben und Wirken des Nürnberger Komponisten Johann Staden (publ. 1906). 1908, critic for the 'Münchener Zeitung' and ed. of 'Neue musikalische Rundschau'; 1910, instructor for musicology at the Univ. In 1914-15 he was director of the Mozarteum in Salzburg; then settled in Dresden as music ed. of 'Dresdener Nachrichten'; 1916, instructor at the Dresden Technische Hochschule; 1918, prof. From 1939 to 1953 he was director of the Musikbibliothek Peters in Leipzig. —Writings: Hugo Wolf (Leipzig, 1906); Richard Strauss als Musikdramatiker (Munich, 1907); Richard Wagner (1909; 2nd ed., 1918); Harmonielehre als Theorie (1911); Palestrina (1914; 2nd ed., 1954); Geschichte der Kantate und des geistlichen Konzerts (1914); Musikästhetik (1915); O. di Lasso (1915); Das Madonnen-Ideal in der Tonkunst (1919); Klavier-, Klaviermusik und Klavierspiel (1919); Richard Wagner; wie wir ihn heute sehen (1937); Schuberts Auswirkung auf die deutsche Musik... (1954); Geschichte der weltlichen Solokantate (2nd ed., 1955); etc. Edited works of Johann Staden (vols. VII, 1 and VIII, 1 of 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern'). Also publ. original choruses and songs.

Schmuller, Alexander, violinist; b. Mozyr, Russia, Dec. 5, 1880; d. Amsterdam, March 29, 1933. Pupil of Ševčík, Hřmaly, and Auer; from 1908 he taught at the Stern Cons. in Berlin, and from 1914 at the Amsterdam Cons. For several years he gave concerts with Max Reger, whose music he was one of the first to champion; made many concert tours in Europe and the U. S.

Schnabel (shnah'-bel), Artur, celebrated pianist and pedagogue; b. Lipnik, Austria, April 17, 1882; d. Axenstein, Switzerland, Aug. 15, 1951. After taking lessons for two years from Hans Schmitt, he studied in Vienna with Leschetizky (1891-97); appeared in public as a child prodigy; lived many years in Berlin, where he gave joint recitals with the violinist Karl Flesch; formed (1912) a trio with A. Wittenberg (violin) and A. Hekking (cello); from 1925 until 1933 he taught at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; after the advent of the Nazi regime he went to Switzerland, where he organized his famous master classes during summer seasons. He made his American début in 1921, and revisited the U. S. several times; lived in N. Y. after 1939, but eventually returned to Europe. It was as an interpreter of Beethoven that he reached his greatest heights; he was distinguished also in his performances of the piano music of Brahms. His pedagogical method was strict in the observance of every detail of the music, but at the same time he inspired his pupils by encouraging an individual treatment in the matter of dynamics and formal concept. Schnabel was also a composer; in his works he pursued an uncompromisingly modernistic idiom, thriving on dissonance, and tracing melodic patterns along atonal lines. —Works: symph. No. 1 (1938-40; Minneapolis, Dec. 13, 1946); Rhapsody for orch. (Cleveland, April 15, 1948); a piano concerto; chamber music. He publ. Reflections on Music (Manchester, 1933; N. Y., 1934) and Music and the Line of Most Resistance (Princeton, 1942); edited the piano sonatas of Beethoven. —Cf. César Saerchinger, Artur Schnabel (London, 1957).

Schnabel, Joseph Ignaz, German composer of sacred music; b. Naumburg-on-Queiss, Silesia, May 24, 1767; d. Breslau, June 16, 1831. He was appointed Kapellmeister at the Cathedral of Breslau (1804) and remained in Breslau for the rest of his life; from 1812 taught at the Roman Catholic Seminary and was director of the Royal Institute for Church Music. He wrote many sacred works; publ. 5 Masses, 4 Graduals, 2 offertories, hymns, etc., also wrote marches for military band; a quintet for guitar and strings; and a clarinet concerto. His brother, Michael Schnabel (b. Naumburg, Sept. 23, 1775; d. Breslau, Nov. 6, 1842), founded a piano factory in Breslau (1814); his son, Carl Schnabel (1809-1881), who was an excellent pianist and composer of operas and piano music, carried on the business after Michael Schnabel's death. —Cf. H.E. Guckel, Joseph Ignaz Schnabel, part 2 of Katholische Kirchenmusik in Schlesien (Leipzig, 1912).

Schnabel, Karl Ulrich, pianist and composer; son of Artur Schnabel; b. Berlin, Aug. 6, 1909. He studied piano with Leonid Kreutzer and composition with Paul Juon in Berlin; after a series of appearances as soloist in Europe, including Russia, he made an American tour (début, N. Y., Feb. 23, 1937); played 2-piano recitals with his father; also gave duo-piano concerts (4 hands at 1 piano) with his wife, Helen Fogel. He has written piano pieces and chamber music.

Schnéevoigt (shnā'-voih't), Georg Lennart, conductor; b. Viborg, Finland, Nov. 8, 1872; d. Malmö, Nov. 28, 1947. He studied cello with Karl Schröder in Sondershausen and Julius Klengel in Leipzig; appeared as cellist; in 1900 began his career as conductor; from 1904 to 1908 conducted the Kaim Orch. in Munich; from 1909 to 1920, the Riga Symph.; in 1912, founded a symph. orch. in Helsinki, which became known as the Municipal Orch. in 1914; from 1915 to 1924 he led the 'Konserterförening' in Stockholm; in 1919 founded the Oslo Symph. Orch.; also conducted in Germany; conducted the Los Angeles Philharmonic (1927-29); was general director of the National Opera in Riga (1929-32); then went to Malmö, Sweden. In 1907 he married the pianist, Sigrid Sundgren (q.v.).

Schneider, Alexander, violinist; b. Vilna, Dec. 21, 1908. He studied at the Frankfurt Cons.; was concertmaster of the Frankfurt Symph. Orch. (1925-33); 2nd violin of the Budapest Quartet (1933-44 and since 1957); after 1933 lived mostly in the U. S.

In 1950 he established, with Casals, annual summer festivals at Prades, France; and from 1957, collaborated with Casals in the spring festivals in Puerto Rico. He has done much teaching, and has organized, and at times conducted, special concerts.

Schneider, Edward Faber, American pianist, composer, and pedagogue; b. Omaha, Oct. 3, 1872; d. Santa Clara, Calif., July 1, 1950. He studied with local teachers in California; with X. Scharwenka in N. Y., and with H. Barth in Berlin; then settled in San Francisco as piano teacher; subsequently taught at Mills College for 25 years. Several of his orchestral works were performed in San Francisco: In Autumn Time (1913), Sargasso Sea (1922), and Thus Spake the Deepest Stone (1938); he further wrote many piano pieces and songs.

Schneider, Friedrich, German organist and composer; b. Alt-Waltersdorf, Saxony, Jan. 3, 1786; d. Dessau, Nov. 23, 1853. Son and pupil of Johann Gottlob Schneider (b. 1753; d. as organist at Gersdorf, May 3, 1840); attended the Zittau Gymnasium and (1805) Leipzig Univ. As the pupil of Unger at Zittau, he early began composing, and publ. 3 piano sonatas in 1803; was appointed organist of the Thomaskirche at Leipzig in 1812, and in 1817 music director of the City Theater. In 1820 his oratorio, Das Weltgericht, made him famous, and he was called to Dessau in 1821 as court Kapellmeister. Here he founded a celebrated school of music in 1829, which was not closed until 1854; among his pupils were R. Franz, F. Spindler, and Karl Anschütz. He also conducted many music festivals. In 1830 the degree of Dr. phil. was conferred on him by Halle Univ. —His oratorios were often performed. Other works: 14 Masses; 13 motets and psalms; 25 cantatas; 5 hymns; 7 operas; 23 symphonies; many overtures; 7 concertos with orch.; piano quartets; trios; sonatas for violin (or flute); 400 men's choruses; 200 songs; piano sonatas for 2 and 4 hands, etc. (complete ed. of his piano works publ. at Halberstadt). Also publ. Elementarbuch der Harmonie und Tonsetzkunst (1820; etc.; in English, 1828); Vorschule der Musik (1827); Handbuch des Organisten (1829-30; in 4 parts). — Cf. F. Kempe, F. Schneider als Mensch und Künstler (Dessau, 1859; 2nd ed., Berlin, 1864); K. Hoede, F. Schneider und die Zerbster Liedertafel zur Hundertjahrfeier 1927 (Zerbst, 1927); A. Schering, in Geschichte des Oratoriums (p. 347 ff.).

Schneider, Georg Abraham, German horn virtuoso and composer; b. Darmstadt, April 19, 1770; d. Berlin, Jan. 19, 1839. He was a member of the royal orch. at Berlin; from 1820 was Kapellmeister of the Court Opera and 'Musikmeister' of all regiments of the Guards. —Works: the operettas Der Orakelspruch, Aucassin und Nicolette, Die Verschworenen, Der Traum, Der Währwolf; 13 ballets; music to numerous plays, melodramas, etc.; 2 oratorios; cantatas, orchestral Masses; 54 entr'actes for orch.; symphonies and overtures; concertos for horn, flute, oboe, English horn, bassoon, etc.; quintets, quartets, and other chamber music for wind instruments (over 100 works were publ.).

Schneider, Johann, outstanding German organist; brother of Friedrich Schneider; b. Alt-Gersdorf, near Zittau, Oct. 28, 1789; d. Dresden, April 13, 1864. He was a pupil at the Zittau Gymnasium, and later 'regens chori' there; matriculated in 1810 at Leipzig as a law student, but next year succeeded his brother as Univ. organist (at the Paulinerkirche), and in 1812 became organist of the Church of Saints Peter and Paul at Görlitz, also founding a singing society there, and giving organ concerts at Dresden, Leipzig, Liegnitz, etc. In 1825 he was appointed court organist at Dresden. He was praised by Mendelssohn as one of the finest German organ virtuosos of the period; was famous as a teacher; among his pupils were Berthold (his successor as court organist), G. Merkel, F. G. Jansen, K. E. Naumann, Willem Nicolai, and Van Eycken. —Works: fugues, fantasias, and preludes, for organ; songs with organ obbligato.

Schneider, (Johann) Julius, German organist, choral conductor, and composer; b. Berlin, July 6, 1805; d. there, April 3, 1885. He was a pupil of A. W. Bach, Türschmidt, and L. Berger (piano), Hausmann (organ), and B. Klein (composition). In 1829, organist and cantor of the Friedrichswerder Church (where he organized a liturgical choir in 1852); 1835-58, singing teacher at the Municipal Industrial School; 1854, teacher of organ, singing, and composition at the Royal Institute for Church Music. —Works (few publ.): church music; 200 men's choruses; organ pieces; a piano concerto and piano sonatas; chamber music; etc.

Schneider, Karl Ernst, German writer on music; b. Aschersleben, Dec. 29, 1819; d. Dresden, Oct. 25, 1893. He was a teacher at a music school at the time of his death.

—Publications: Das musikalische Lied in geschichtlicher Entwicklung (1863-65; 3 vols.); Zur Periodisierung der Musikgeschichte (1863); and Musik, Klavier und Klavierspiel (1872).

Schneider, Louis, French writer on music; b. Lyons, June 23, 1861; d. Grenoble, Aug. 21, 1934. He lived in Paris as music and drama critic of 'La Paix,' 'Gaulois,' 'New York Herald,' 'Revue de France,' etc. Author of Schumann, sa vie et ses œuvres (1905; in collaboration with Mareschal); Massenet (1908; 2nd ed., 1926); Monteverdi (1921); Offenbach, Hervé, Charles Lecocq, maîtres de l'opérette française (2 vols., 1924); also of a vol. of humorous musical chronicles under the pen-name 'Le Pompier de service.'

Schneider, Marius, Alsatian musicologist; b. Hageneau, July 1, 1903. He studied in Strasbourg, Paris, and Berlin; from 1931 till 1939 was in charge of the recording section at the Ethnological Museum in Berlin; from 1944 to 1951, lived in Barcelona; in 1951, appointed prof. at the Univ. of Cologne. — Publications: Die Ars nova des 14. Jahrhunderts in Frankreich und Italien (diss., Wolfenbüttel, 1931); Geschichte der Mehrstimmigkeit (2 vols., 1934, 1935); El Origen musical de los animales-simbolos in la mitología y la escultura antiguas (Barcelona, 1946); La Danza de espadas y la tarantela (Barcelona, 1948); Singende Steine (1955); contributed numerous articles to musical and ethnological publications.

Schneider, Max, eminent German musicologist; b. Eisleben, July 20, 1875. While a student at the Gymnasium in Weimar he devoted much time to music; studied musicology at Leipzig Univ. under Paul, Riemann, and Kretzschmar, and composition under Jadassohn (1895-97); 1897-1901, Kapellmeister at the Stadttheater in Halle. Owing to an injury to his foot he declined an appointment as chorusmaster at the Hofoper, Munich (1901), and returned to his studies in musicology under Kretzschmar; when the latter became prof. at the Berlin Univ. in 1904, he followed him and was appointed librarian of the musical seminary at the Univ.; 1907-14 he was also Kopfermann's assistant in the music division of the Royal Library; 1909-15, teacher of orchestration and score-reading at the 'Royal Academic Institute for Church Music'; 1915, associate prof. at the Univ. in Breslau; 1920, prof.; 1928, succeeded Schering as prof. at the Univ. of Halle. From 1912-14 he was ed., with H. Springer and W. Wolffheim, of 'Miscellanea musicae bio-bibliographica,' supplement to Eitner's 'Quellenlexikon'; from 1933 ed. of the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft'; 1936 through 1938 ed., with R. Steglich, H. Besseler, and G. Schünemann, of the 'Archiv für Musikforschung' (continuation of the 'Zeitschrift'). — Writings: Die Anfänge des Basso continuo (1918); Der deutsche Kantor (1920); Seltene Musikinstrumente (in 'Schlesien's Vorzeit,' Breslau, 1928); Beiträge zu einer Anleitung Clavichord und Cembalo zu spielen (Strasbourg, 1934); Beiträge zur Musikforschung (vol. I, Halle, 1935); numerous smaller essays in various journals; publ. reprints of Mattheson's Ehrenpforte (1910; with bibliographical additions) and Diego Ortiz's Tratado de glosas sobre cláusulas (1913, with transl.; 2nd ed., Kassel, 1936). In the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' he ed. works by Telemann (vol. 28; with biography) and Keiser (vols. 37 and 38); revised Bach's St. Matthew Passion (Leipzig, 1936); co-ed. of the Neue Bachgesellschaft editions; ed. of 'Altbachisches Archiv' (vol. I: motets and choral songs; vol. II: cantatas; Leipzig, 1935); ed., with Th. Siebs, of 'Schlesische Volkslieder mit Bildern und Weisen' (Breslau, 1924); also ed. the works of H. Schütz, etc. — Cf. 'Festschrift Max Schneider zum 60. Geburtstag' (Halle, 1935); 'Festschrift Max Schneider zum 80. Geburtstag' (Leipzig, 1955).

Schneider, Theodor, cellist and conductor; son of Friedrich Schneider; b. Dessau, May 14, 1827; d. Zittau, June 15, 1909. He studied with his father, and with Drechsler (cello); in 1845 was cellist in the Dessau court orch.; in 1854, cantor and choir director of the court and city churches; from 1860-96 served as cantor and music director at the Jakobikirche in Chemnitz; also conductor of the 'Singakademie' and of a 'Männergesangsverein' which he founded in 1870. He retired in 1898.

Schneider-Trnavský, Mikuláš, Slovak composer; b. Trnava, May 24, 1881; d. Bratislava, May 28, 1958. He studied in Budapest, Vienna, and Prague; was chorusmaster at the Cathedral of Trnava; in 1918 appointed school inspector of music in Slovakia. He brought out (in 1904) excellent arrangements of Slovak songs for voice and piano (revised in 1922 and 1935-40); also wrote a Slovak Sonata for piano; some symph. works; church music, including several Masses (Missa 'Stella Matutina,' Missa facilis, Missa pastoralis, etc.).

Schnerich (shnā'-riyh), Alfred, Austrian musicologist; b. Tarvis, Carinthia, Oct. 22, 1859; d. Vienna, April 29, 1944. He studied history of art at the Institut für österreichisches Geschichtsforschung in Vienna; Dr. phil. in 1888; from 1889, librarian at Vienna Univ.; 1921, Hofrat; retired in 1923. Was a member of the editorial commission of the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich.' — Works: Der Messentypus von Haydn bis Schubert (1892); Die Frage der Reform der katholischen Kirchenmusik (1902; a reply to the attacks of the 'Cäcilienverein'); Messe und Requiem seit Haydn und Mozart (1909); Unsere Kirchenmusik und P. M. Horn. Eine Abwehr (1911); Jos. Haydn und seine Sendung (1922; 2nd ed., 1926); Die kirchliche Tonkunst (1927); articles. Publ. in facsimile the autograph score of Mozart's Requiem (1913; with explanatory notes).

Schnitger (Schnitker), Arp, German organ builder; b. Golzwarden, Oldenburg, July 2, 1648; d. Neuenfelde, July 24, 1719. His organs are in the Nikolai- and Jakobikirche, Hamburg; the Cathedral and Stephanskirche at Bremen; the Johanniskirche at Magdeburg; the Nikolaikirche at Berlin; etc. — His son Franz Kaspar (d. 1729) worked with an elder brother at Zwolle, Holland, building the organ at Zwolle (63 stops), and that at Alkmar (56 stops). — Cf. P. Rubardt, Arp Schnitger (Freiberg, 1928); G. Fock, Schnitger und seine Schule (Kiel, 1931).

Schnoor, Hans, German writer on music; b. Neumünster, Oct. 4, 1893. He studied with H. Riemann and A. Schering at the Univ. of Leipzig; became a music critic in Dresden (1926-45); in 1949 settled in Bielefeld. — Publications: Die Musik der germanischen Völker im XIX. und XX. Jahrhundert (Dresden, 1926); Weber auf dem Welttheater (Dresden, 1942); Weber: ein Lebensbild aus Dresdner Sicht (Dresden, 1947); 400 Jahre deutscher Musikkultur; zum Jubiläum der Staatskapelle und zur Geschichte der Dresdner Oper (Dresden, 1948); Geschichte der Musik (1953); Weber; Gestalt und Schöpfung (1953); Oper, Operette, Konzert; ein praktisches Nachschlagsbuch (1955).

Schnorr von Carolsfeld, Ludwig, German tenor; b. Munich, July 2, 1836; d. Dresden, July 21, 1865. Son of the noted painter; pupil of J. Otto at Dresden, and of the Leipzig Cons.; then of Ed. Devrient at Karlsruhe, making his début there, followed by engagement in 1858. From 1860, leading tenor at Dresden. He created the role of Tristan in Wagner's Tristan und Isolde at Munich, June 10, 1865, his wife singing Isolde. He died shortly afterwards, of heart failure, at the age of 29. — Cf. R. Wagner, Meine Erinnerungen an Ludwig Schnorr von Carolsfeld, in vol. VIII of 'Gesammelte Schriften und Dichtungen'; C. H. N. Garrigues, Ein ideales Sängerpaar, Ludwig Schnorr von Carolsfeld und Malwine Schnorr von Carolsfeld (Copenhagen, 1937).

Schnorr von Carolsfeld (née Garrigues), Malwine, soprano; wife of the preceding; b. Copenhagen, Dec. 7, 1832; d. Karlsruhe, Feb. 8, 1904. She created Isolde on June 10, 1865, in Munich, her husband singing Tristan; after his death she sang in Hamburg, and later in Karlsruhe; after her retirement from the stage she taught. In 1867 she publ. a volume of poems by her husband and herself. — Cf. C. H. N. Garrigues, op. cit. (above).

Schnyder von Wartensee, Xaver, composer; b. Lucerne, April 16, 1786; d. Frankfurt, Aug. 27, 1868. A pupil at Vienna of J. C. Kienlen; joined the campaign against the French in 1815; taught at the Pestalozzian Institute, Yverdon; and in 1817 settled in Frankfurt. — His works include cantatas; sacred and secular songs; Swiss songs for men's chorus; etc.; System der Rhythmik (posthumous publ. by B. Widmann). — Cf. Lebenserinnerungen von X. Schnyder von Wartensee (Zürich, 1887; contains an autobiography and a complete list of works; new ed. by Willi Schuh, Berlin, 1940).

Schoberlechner, Franz, pianist and composer; b. Vienna, July 21, 1797; d. Berlin, Jan. 7, 1843. He studied with Hummel and E. A. Förster at Vienna, and at 10 played in public Hummel's 2nd Concerto, written for him. On a pianistic tour to Italy he produced his opera I Virtuosi teatrali at Florence (1814), and the next year became maestro di cappella to the Duchess of Lucca, producing there a second opera, Gli Arabi nelle Gallie (1816); returned to Vienna in 1820, where he brought out an opera in German, Der junge Onkel (Jan. 14, 1823); made a trip to Russia in 1823, and there married the singer Sophie dall'Occa (1807-63), with whom he made further tours to Italy and Vienna. He purchased a villa in Florence in 1831, and retired to it some years later. Besides his operas, he composed overtures, string quartets, a piano trio, and many piano pieces (sonatas, variations, fantasias, etc.).

Schobert, Johann, composer; b. Silesia, c. 1720; d. Paris, Aug. 28, 1767 (with his entire family, except one child, from eating poisonous mushrooms). From 1760, he was chamber musician to the Prince de Conti in Paris. His works show the general characteristics of the Mannheim school, although it cannot be proved that he ever was in that city. The slow movement of Mozart's Clavier Concerto in B $\flat$ , K. 39, is based on music by Schobert. A selection of Schobert's works (with thematic catalogue) was publ. by H. Riemann in vol. 39 of 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (1909). —Publ. works: op. 1, 2, 3, sonatas for clavecin and violin; op. 4, 5, 16, 17, sonatas for clavecin solo; op. 6, 8, clavecin trios; op. 9, 10, 11, 12, 18, clavecin concertos; op. 13, Concerto pastoral for clavecin; op. 14, 15, 6 symphonies for clavecin, violin, and 2 horns. (The same works reprinted by Hummel in Amsterdam with different op. numbers.) A 'Singspiel,' Le Garde-chasse et le braconnier, was produced in Paris (1765) with little success. —Cf. G. de Saint-Foix, J. Schobert, in the 'Revue Musicale' III, 10 (1922); K. Schalscha, Zur Würdigung Schoberts (1923); H. T. David, J. Schobert als Sonatenkomponist (1928).

Schoeck, Othmar, eminent Swiss composer and conductor; b. Brunnen, Sept. 1, 1886; d. Zürich, March 8, 1957. He was the son of a painter; studied at the Zürich Cons. with Nägeli and Freund; later, with Reger in Leipzig; 1907-15, conductor of the men's chorus 'Ausersihl' in Zürich; 1911-17, of the Lehrergesangverein; from 1917, of the symph. concerts at St. Gall; made hon. Dr. phil. by Zürich Univ. in 1928. A Schoeck Festival was held at Bern in April, 1934. Schoeck is acknowledged as a foremost song composer of Switzerland. —Works: the operas Don Ranudo de Colibrados (Zürich, April 16, 1919), Das Wandbild (libretto by Busoni; Halle, Jan. 2, 1921); Venus (Zürich, May 10, 1922); Penthesilea (Dresden, Jan. 8, 1927); Massimilla Doni (Dresden, March 2, 1937); Das Schloss Dürande (Berlin, April 1, 1943). Also choral and orch. works: violin concerto (1911-12), cello concerto (1947), horn concerto (1951), Festlicher Hymnus for orch. (1950), etc.; chamber music (2 string quartets, 2 violin sonatas, etc.). Song-cycles: op. 36, Élégie (voice and chamber orch.; 1924); op. 38, Gaselen (voice and chamber orch.); op. 40, Lebendig begraben (bass and large orch.; 1927); op. 45, Wanderung im Gebirge (voice and piano; 1930); op. 47, Notturmo (bass and string quartet); over 120 songs. A thematic index of his works was publ. by W. Vogel (Zürich, 1956). —Cf. W. Schuh, Der harmonische Stil O. Schoecks, in 'Neue Musikzeitung,' Jg. 49 (1928); E. Isler, Führer durch 'Penthesilea' (1928); H. Corrodi, O. Schoeck (Frauenfeld, 1931; new ed., much enlarged and revised, 1936); W. Schuh, O. Schoeck (Zürich, 1934); also articles in the 'Schweizerische Musikzeitung' (special Schoeck issue, March, 1943), 'Festgabe der Freunde zum 50. Geburtstag,' ed. by W. Schuh (Erlenbach-Zürich, 1936); W. Vogel, Wesenszüge von Othmar Schoecks Liedkunst (Zürich, 1950).

Schœlcher, Victor, French statesman and music amateur; b. Paris, July 21, 1804; d. Houilles, Dec. 24, 1893. During the Second Empire he lived in England because of his radical politics, and became an enthusiastic admirer of Handel's music; publ. The Life of Handel (1857) in an inadequate English translation from the original French MS (the first 4 chapters in the original French were publ. in 'La France musicale,' 1860-62; the entire MS was bought for the library of the Paris Cons. in 1881). Schœlcher accumulated a fine collection of Handel materials, which he donated to the Paris Conservatory.

Schoemaker, Maurice, Belgian composer; b. Anderlecht, near Brussels, Dec. 27, 1890. He studied theory with Théo. Ysaÿe, Martin Lunssens, and Paul Gilson. He was one of the founders of the group of modern Belgian composers known as 'Synthétistes,' whose aim was to promote modern music. While assimilating the general European tendencies, Schoemaker drew for his thematic material on native folk music. —Works: the opera Swane (1933); 2 comic operas, Arc-en-ciel (1937) and De Toervervol (1954); the ballets: Breughel-Suite (1928) and Pan (1937); symph. poems: Feu d'artifice (1924) and Médée la magicienne (1936); concerto for trombone and orch. (1939); 2 Danses flamandes for orch. (1944); concerto for bassoon and orch. (1947); piano trio (1934); Suite champêtre for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1940); string quartet (1945); numerous piano pieces; also music for radio.

Schoenberg, Arnold, renowned composer; b. Vienna, Sept. 13, 1874; d. Los Angeles, July 13, 1951. As a pupil of the Realschule, in Vienna, he learned to play the violin and also the cello. His father's death left him in needy circumstances at the age of 16; he eked out his existence as a bank clerk, but continued to study music. When he was 20 he began taking lessons in counterpoint with Alexander von Zemlinsky, whose sister he married in 1901; played the cello in Zemlinsky's orchestral group 'Polyhymnia.' He also accepted various jobs of arranging operettas and popular songs. His first original work to obtain public performance was a string quartet in D major (1897), which was favorably received in Vienna; but when his early songs, cast in a more individual style, were presented in public (1898) there were outbursts of protest in the hall, premonitory of the opposition that increased in vehemence throughout his career as a composer. In 1899 he wrote his string sextet Verklärte Nacht, a fine work, deeply imbued with the spirit of Romantic poetry, and in its harmonic idiom stemming from Wagner; it remains Schoenberg's most frequently performed composition. About 1900 Schoenberg was engaged as conductor of several amateur choral groups in Vienna suburbs; this increased his interest in vocal music. He then began work on a choral composition, Gurre-Lieder, after the poem of the Danish writer Jens Peter Jacobsen. For sheer dimensions, it surpassed the most formidable orchestral edifices of Mahler and Strauss; it calls for 5 solo voices, a speaker, 3 male choruses, an 8-part mixed chorus, and a very large orchestra. To write out the score, he had to order special music paper of 48 staves. He completed the first 2 parts of Gurre-Lieder in the spring of 1901; only the concluding chorus remained unfinished; this was delayed by 10 years; since the prospect of a performance was remote, there was no compelling reason to have the work ready. In 1901 Schoenberg moved to Berlin; joined E. von Wolzogen, F. Wedekind, and O. Bierbaum, who launched an 'Überbrett!' (a sort of artistic cabaret), which created a brief sensation; Schoenberg conducted light music there, and himself composed a cabaret song with trumpet obligato; later he met Richard Strauss, through whom he obtained the Liszt stipendium (1902) and a position as teacher at the Stern Cons. In the summer of 1903 he returned to Vienna, where he found the support of Mahler, who became a sincere advocate of Schoenberg's music; Mahler's influence was then at its zenith, and performers were aroused sufficiently to give Schoenberg a hearing. In March, 1904, Schoenberg organized the 'Vereinigung schaffender Tonkünstler' with Alexander Zemlinsky and others, for the purpose of promoting modern music; under the auspices of this society Schoenberg conducted the 1st performance of his symph.

poem Pelleas und Melisande (Jan. 26, 1905); in this work is found the first example of a trombone glissando. His Kammersymphonie was performed in Vienna on Feb. 8, 1907, producing much consternation, because of the decided departure from traditional tonal harmony, the use of chords built on fourths, and the cultivation of dissonances without immediate resolution. In the same year Schoenberg also turned to painting; in his art, as in his music, he adopted the tenets of Expressionism. His fame as a leading modernist attracted progressively minded students, among them Alban Berg, Anton von Webern, and Egon Wellesz, whose own music developed according to Schoenberg's precepts. Schoenberg's string quartet no. 2 (with soprano solo), finished in 1908, was his last work with a designated key signature (F# minor), except for the Suite for strings, in G major, written for school use in 1934. In 1910 Schoenberg was appointed teacher of composition at the Vienna Academy; in 1911 he completed his important book, Harmonielehre, dedicated to the memory of Mahler; this manual presents a traditional exposition of chords and progressions, but also offers illuminating ideas regarding new musical developments. In 1911 he was again in Berlin, where he lectured at the Stern Cons. and taught privately; a small but enthusiastic group of admirers and disciples followed him there. In 1912 he brought out two works that aroused much controversy: 5 Orchester-Stücke, first performed by Sir Henry Wood in London, and a cycle of 21 songs with instrumental accompaniment, Pierrot Lunaire, in which Schoenberg used the 'Sprechstimme,' substituting a gliding speech-song for precise pitches; the work was given, after some 40 rehearsals, in Berlin, on Oct. 16, 1912, and the reaction was startling, the critics drawing upon the strongest invective in their vocabulary. On Feb. 23, 1913, the Gurre-Lieder was finally performed in Vienna under the direction of Franz Schreker. Meanwhile, Schoenberg was appearing as conductor of his own works in various European cities (Amsterdam, 1911; St. Petersburg, 1912; London, 1914). During World War I he was engaged in periods of military service; in 1918 he settled in Mödling, near Vienna, holding a composition seminar, which attracted many new pupils. In Nov., 1918, Schoenberg organized in Vienna a 'Verein für musikalische Privataufführungen' (Society for Private Musical Performances), from which newspaper critics were excluded and which forbade applause (the English translation of a statement of aims is found in N. Slonimsky, Music Since 1900, N. Y., 1949, pp. 649-54). In 1925 Schoenberg was appointed prof. of a master class at the Prussian Academy of Arts in Berlin, but was dismissed from that post in May, 1933, by order of the German Ministry of Education under the Nazi regime; he then went to Paris, where, in a symbolic gesture, he reassumed his original Jewish faith, which he had abandoned in 1921. On Oct. 31, 1933, he arrived in the U. S. at the invitation of Joseph Malkin, to direct a master class at the Malkin Cons. in Boston. After teaching in Boston for a season, he settled in Hollywood; in 1935 he became prof. of music at the Univ. of Southern California, and in 1936 accepted a similar position at the Univ. of California in Los Angeles. He became an American citizen on April 11, 1941; in 1947 he received the Award of Merit for Distinguished Achievement from the National Institute of Arts and Letters. In the U. S. he changed the original spelling of his name, Schönberg, to Schoenberg. —In 1924 Schoenberg's creative evolution reached the all-important point where he found it necessary to establish a new governing principle of tonal relationship; a 'method of composing with 12 tones,' adumbrated in Schoenberg's music as early as 1914 and used partly in 5 Klavierstücke, op. 23, and Serenade, op. 24, was employed for the first time throughout a work in the Suite for Piano, op. 25 (1924), in which the thematic material is based on a group of 12 different notes stated in a certain order; such a 'tone row' was henceforth Schoenberg's mainspring of thematic invention; development was provided by presenting the basic series in inversion, retrograde, and retrograde inversion; allowing for transposition, 48 forms were obtainable in all, with counterpoint and harmony, as well as melody, derived from the basic tone row; the realm of rhythm remaining free, and immediate repetition of single notes freely admitted. As with many revolutionary innovations, the 12-tone technique was not the creation of Schoenberg alone, but rather a result of many currents of musical thought. Josef Matthias Hauer specifically claimed priority in laying the foundations of the 12-tone method; among others who had essayed similar ideas simultaneously with Schoenberg was Jef Golyscheff in his '12 Tondauer-Musik.' Instances of themes composed of 12 different notes are found in Liszt (in the Faust Symphony) and Strauss (Also sprach Zarathustra, in the section On Science). Schoenberg's great accomplishment was to establish the 12-tone row and its changing forms as fundamentals of a new musical language, and to write music of great expressiveness and power, which, in spite of the difficulties of performance and slowness of public comprehension, has become one of the strongest influences in the art. In Europe the 12-tone method is often termed 'dodecaphony.' The most explicit works of Schoenberg couched in the 12-tone idiom are Begleitungsmusik zu einer Lichtspielszene (1930), the violin concerto (1936), piano concerto (1942), and Klavierstück, op. 33a (1929). Among adherents to Schoenberg's method are Alban Berg, Anton von Webern, Egon Wellesz, Krenck, Leibowitz, Roberto Gerhard, Humphrey Searle, and Luigi Dallapiccola. These men and many other composers all over the world—even in the Orient—have adapted the 12-tone technique to their own creative purposes; the sole exception among the nations is Russia, where Schoenberg's theories are unacceptable on ideological grounds. Stravinsky, too, when he was about 70, began to use a serial method, in a manner close to that of Anton von Webern, in his works. —Works: For the stage: Erwartung, monodrama, op. 17 (1909; Prague, June 6, 1924); Die glückliche Hand, drama with music, to Schoenberg's own libretto, op. 18 (1910-13; Vienna, Oct. 14, 1924); Von Heute auf Morgen, opera in 1 act, op. 32 (1928; Frankfurt, Feb. 1, 1930); Moses und Aron, biblical drama to the composer's libretto (2 acts completed, 1932; resumed 1951, but not finished; radio performance of 2 acts, Hamburg, March 12, 1954; stage performance, Zürich Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 6, 1957). For orch.: Pelleas und Melisande, symph. poem after Maeterlinck, op. 5 (1902; Vienna, Jan. 26, 1905); Kammersymphonie, for 15 instruments, op. 9 (1906; Vienna, Feb. 8, 1907; 2nd version for large orch., 1935); 5 Orchester-Stücke, op. 16 (1909; London, Sept. 3, 1912; revised, 1949); Variations, op. 31 (Berlin, Dec. 2, 1928); Begleitungsmusik zu einer Lichtspielszene (Accompaniment to a Cinema Scene), op. 34 (1930); Suite in G for strings (1934; Los Angeles, May 18, 1935); violin concerto, op. 36 (1936; Philadelphia, Dec. 6, 1940); Second Chamber Symph., op. 38 (N. Y., Dec. 15, 1940); piano concerto, op. 42 (1942; N. Y., Feb. 6, 1944); Theme and Variations, op. 43 (1943; Boston, Oct. 20, 1944; also and originally for band). For chorus: Gurre-Lieder, for soli, mixed chorus, and orch. (1901; Vienna, Feb. 23, 1913); Friede auf Erden, op. 13 (1907); 4 pieces for mixed chorus, op. 27 (1925); 3 Satires, op. 28 (1925); 6 pieces for men's chorus, op. 35 (1930); Kol Nidre, for speaker, chorus, and orch., op. 39 (1938); A Survivor from Warsaw, cantata for narrator, chorus, and orch., op. 46 (1947; Albuquerque, Nov. 4, 1948); 3 German Folk-songs, for chorus a cappella, op. 49 (1948); Dreimal Tausend Jahre, for chorus a cappella, op. 50a (1949); De Profundis, for chorus a cappella, to Hebrew text, op. 50b (1951). The oratorio Die Jacobsleiter, begun in 1913, remained unfinished. Chamber music: string quartet in D major (1897; not numbered; presumed lost, but brought to the U. S. by Schoenberg; revived at the Library of Congress, Washington, Feb. 8, 1952); Verklärte Nacht (Transfigured Night), sextet for strings, op. 4 (1899; arranged for string orch., 1917; revised, 1943); string quartet No. 1, in D minor, op. 7 (1904; Vienna, Feb. 15, 1907); string quartet No. 2, in F# minor, op. 10, with voice (1907); Serenade for clarinet, bass clarinet, mandolin, guitar, violin, viola, and cello, op. 24 (4th movement with a sonnet by Petrarch for baritone; 1923; Vienna, July 20, 1924); quintet for flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon, op. 26 (1924); suite for 2 clarinets, bass clarinet, violin, viola, cello, and piano, op. 29 (1927); string quartet No. 3, op. 30 (Vienna, Sept. 19, 1927); string quartet No. 4, op. 37 (1936); Ode to Napoleon, after Byron, for speaker, strings, and piano, op. 41 (1942; N. Y., Nov. 23, 1944); string trio, op. 45 (1946); Fantasia, for violin and piano (1949). Songs: op. 1, 2 songs; op. 2, 4 songs; op. 3, 6 songs; op. 6, 8 songs (1905); op. 8, 6 songs (with orch.; 1904); op. 12, 2 ballads (1907); op. 14, 2 songs; op. 15, cycle of 15 poems from Stefan George's Das Buch der hängenden Gärten (1908); op. 20, Herzgewächse, after Maeterlinck, for soprano with celesta, harmonium, and harp (1915); op. 21, Pierrot lunaire, 21 poems by Albert Giraud, for 'Sprechstimme' with piano, flute (interchangeable with piccolo), clarinet (interchangeable with bass clarinet), violin (interchangeable with viola), and cello (Berlin, Oct. 16, 1912); op. 22, 4 songs (with orch., 1914-15); op. 48, 3 songs. For piano; op. 11, 3 Klavierstücke (1909; No. 2 arranged for concert performance by Busoni); op. 19, 6 kleine Klavierstücke (1911); op. 23, 5 Klavierstücke (1923); op. 25, Suite (1924); op. 33a, Klavierstück (1929); op. 33b, Klavierstück (1932). For organ: op. 40, Variations on a Recitative (1940). Arrangements and transcriptions: 2 chorale preludes, by Bach, for large orch.; organ prelude and fugue in E♭ major, by Bach, for orch.; piano quartet in G minor by Brahms, for orch.; cello concerto, transcribed from a harpsichord concerto by G. M. Monn; concerto for string quartet and orch. after Handel's Concerto grosso, op. 6, no. 7. —Books: Harmonielehre (Vienna, 1911; abridged English transl., N. Y., under the title Theory of Harmony, 1947); Models for Beginners in Composition (N. Y., 1942); Style and Idea (N. Y., 1950); numerous essays in German and American publications. —Bibliography: A. S., a collection of essays by 11 admirers (Munich, 1912); E. Steinhard, Die Kunst A. S.s, in 'Neue Musikzeitung' (1912, No. 18); J. G. Huneker, S., in Ivory Apes and Peacocks (N. Y., 1915); Egon Wellesz, S. and Beyond, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1916); Egon Wellesz, A. S. (Leipzig, 1921; English transl. London, 1925); C. Gray, A. S., a Critical Study, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1922); E. Stein, Praktischer Leitfaden zu S.s Harmonielehre (Vienna, 1923); S. issue of 'Anbruch' (Vienna, 1924); Paul Stefan, A. S. (Vienna, 1924); K. Westphal, A. S.s Weg zur Zwölftöne-Musik, in 'Die Musik' (July, 1929); Carl Engel, Discords Mingled (pp. 84-97, S.'s Pierrot Lunaire; N. Y., 1931); A. S. zum 60. Geburtstag, a collection of articles by friends and pupils (Vienna, 1934); H. E. Wind, Die Endkrise der bürgerlichen Musik und die Rolle A. S.s (Vienna, 1935); R. S. Hill, S.'s Tone-Rows and the Tonal System of the Future, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1936); D. J. Bach, A Note on A. S., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1936); M. Armitage (ed.), A. S. (N. Y., 1937; contains essays by Sessions, Krenek, E. Stein, Carl Engel, Otto Klemperer, Paul Pisk, Paul Stefan, etc., also 2 by Schoenberg himself: Tonality and Form and Problems of Harmony); Darius Milhaud, To A. S. on his 70th Birthday, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1944); H. Jalowetz, On the Spontaneity of S.'s Music, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1944); R. Leibowitz, S. et son école (Paris, 1947; English transl., N. Y., 1949); Dika Newlin, Bruckner, Mahler, S. (N. Y., 1947); R. Leibowitz, Introduction à la musique de douze sons; les Variations pour orchestre, op. 31, d'A. S. (Paris, 1949); W. H. Rubsamen, S. in America, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1951); H. H. Stuckenschmidt, A. S. (Zürich, 1951); J. Rufer, Die Komposition mit zwölf Tönen (Berlin, 1952; English transl., by Humphrey Searle, as Composition with 12 Notes Related to One Another, London, 1954); Roman Vlad, Storia della dodecafonìa (Milan, 1958); Egon Wellesz, The Origin of S.'s 12-Tone System (Washington, 1958).

SCHOENBERG

SCHOENBERG

Schoenefeld, George, American harpsichordist and teacher; son of Henry Schoenefeld; b. Chicago, June 24, 1887. He studied piano and harmony with his father; then in Berlin with Martin Krause and in Paris with Harold Bauer. He became interested in old keyboard instruments; made his début in Los Angeles on June 13, 1913 as a harpsichord player; later specialized exclusively in old music. He was also a noted teacher in Los Angeles; after 1953, lived in Sunland, Calif.

Schoenefeld, Henry, American pianist and composer; b. Milwaukee, Oct. 4, 1857; d. Los Angeles, Aug. 4, 1936. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Papperitz (piano), Richter (theory), Reinecke (composition), and Schradieck (conducting); took an additional course in composition with Lassen in Weimar. On his return to America, he settled in Chicago; conducted a German male chorus there (1891-1902). In 1904 he moved to Los Angeles, where he conducted various German choral societies and also the Women's Symph. Orch. He was one of the earliest American composers who recognized the artistic possibilities of the employment of Indian musical resources. He wrote a grand opera Atala, or The Love of Two Savages (not produced); Suite caractéristique, for string orch. (on Indian themes); Wachicanta, an Indian pantomime; 2 Indian Legends, for orch.; Rural Symphony (won $500 prize offered by the National Cons. of N. Y., 1892); Danse américaine, for piano, and many other piano pieces (Little Soldiers' March, Valse élégante, Mystics of the Woods, Valse noble, etc.). —Cf. Rupert Hughes, Contemporary American Composers (Boston, 1900; pp. 128-35).

Schoen-René, Anna E., noted singer and teacher; b. Coblenz, Germany, Jan. 12, 1864; d. New York, Nov. 13, 1942. She studied singing with Pauline Viardot-Garcia, and sang in opera before coming to America in 1895; she devoted herself to teaching in the U. S., first in Minneapolis and then in N. Y., where she joined the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music. She publ. a book of memoirs, America's Musical Heritage (N. Y., 1941).

Schöffler, Paul, German baritone; b. Dresden, Sept. 15, 1897. He studied at the Dresden Cons. and in Milan; was on the roster of the Dresden Opera from 1925 to 1937; then joined the Vienna Opera; also appeared at Covent Garden, London (1930-38); made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera House in Salome (Jan. 26, 1949).

Scholes (skohls), Percy Alfred, eminent English writer on music; b. Leeds, July 24, 1877; d. Vevey, Switzerland, July 31, 1958. He took his B.Mus. at Oxford in 1908 and later the M.A., D.Litt., and Hon.D. Mus., as also the Hon.Litt.D., Leeds. Dr. ès lettres, Univ. of Lausanne (1934); was organist at various churches until 1905; extension lecturer at the Univs. of Oxford, Cambridge, London, and Manchester; in 1908, founded the Home Music Study Union, and until 1921 edited its organ, the 'Music Student' and 'Music and Youth'; toured the U. S. as lecturer in 1915 and on 4 later occasions; critic of the 'London Evening Standard' and the 'Observer' (1920-27), and for the BBC (1923-29); 1925-30, edited the Audiographic Series of Pianola and Duo Art Rolls; 1928, organized the Anglo-American Music Education Conferences (Lausanne, 1931, 1933); music editor of 'Radio Times' (1932-36); lived in Oxford, and for periods in Switzerland, where he later settled permanently. A writer of great literary attainments and stylistic grace, he succeeded in presenting music 'appreciation' in a manner informative and stimulating to the layman and professional alike. His Oxford Companion to Music is unique in the lexicographical field in its vividness of presentation and its comprehensiveness. His scholarly biographies of Burney and Hawkins are among the finest of the genre. —Books: Everyman and His Music (1917); An Introduction to British Music (1918); The Listener's Guide to Music (1919; 10th ed., 1942); Music Appreciation, Why and How? (1920; 4th ed., 1925); The Book of the Great Musicians (3 vols., 1920; many eds.); New Works by Modern British Composers (2 series; 1921, 1924); The Beginner's Guide to Harmony (1922; several further eds.); The Listener's History of Music (3 vols.; 1923-28; 4th ed., 1933); Crotchets (1924); Learning to Listen by Means of the Gramophone (1925); Everybody's Guide to Broadcast Music (1925); The Appreciation of Music by Means of the Pianola and Duo Art (1925); A Miniature History of Music (1928); The Columbia History of Music Through Eye and Ear (5 albums of records with accompanying booklets; 1930-39; eds. in Japanese and Braille); Music and Puritanism (Vevey, 1934); The Puritans and Music in England and New England (London, 1934); Music: The Child and the Masterpiece (1935; American ed.: Music Appreciation, Its History and Technics); Radio

Times Music Handbook (1935; 3rd ed., 1936; American ed. as The Scholes Music Handbook, 1935); The Oxford Companion to Music (encyclopedia; London and N. Y., 1938; 9th completely revised ed., 1955; contains a pronouncing glossary and over 1,100 portraits and pictures); God Save the King; Its History and Romance (London, 1942; new ed. as God Save the Queen! The History and Romance of the World's First National Anthem, London, 1954); The Mirror of Music, 1844-1944, A Century of Musical Life in Britain as Reflected in the Pages of the 'Musical Times' (London, 1947); The Great Dr. Burney (2 vols.; London, 1948); Sir John Hawkins: Musician, Magistrate, and Friend of Johnson (London, 1952); The Concise Oxford Dictionary of Music (London, 1952); The Oxford Junior Companion to Music (London, 1954); various pamphlets, e.g., Song of Supper, publ. by the London Vegetarian Society (1948); innumerable articles in the musical press; contributions to encyclopedias and dictionaries, etc.

Scholtz, Herrmann, German pianist and composer; b. Breslau, June 9, 1845; d. Dresden, July 13, 1918. He studied in Breslau; then with Plaidy in Leipzig, with Hans von Bülow and Rheinberger in Munich; taught at the Munich Hochschule für Musik (1870-75); then went to Dresden. He was an accomplished pianist; excelled especially in Chopin's works; had a reputation as a fine teacher; also wrote a number of piano pieces in a fashionable style: Albumblätter, Mädchenlieder, Lyrische Blätter, Stimmungsbilder, Ballade, etc. He edited Chopin's works for Peters; also edited the piano concerto, op. 15, of Brahms.

Scholz, Bernard E., German conductor and composer; b. Mainz, March 30, 1835; d. Munich, Dec. 26, 1916. He studied with Ernst Pauer in Mainz and with Dehn in Berlin; after teaching in Munich, he was engaged as court Kapellmeister in Hanover (1859-65); then conducted the Cherubini Society in Florence (1865-66); led the concerts of the Breslau Orch. Society (1871-82), and in the spring of 1883, succeeded Raff as director of the Hoch Cons. in Frankfurt; retired in 1908. He wrote the operas Carlo Rosa (Munich, 1858), Ziethen'sche Husaren (Breslau, 1869), Morgiane (Munich, 1870), Golo (Nuremberg, 1875), Der Trompeter von Säckingen (Wiesbaden, 1877), Die vornehmen Wirte (Leipzig, 1883), Ingo (Frankfurt, 1898), Anno 1757 (Berlin, 1903), and Mirandolina (Darmstadt, 1907); a great many choral works with orch.; 2 symphonies; a piano concerto; 2 string quartets; string quintet; piano quartet; 2 piano trios; 3 violin sonatas; 5 cello sonatas; numerous piano pieces and songs. — Writings: Lehre vom Kontrapunkt und der Nachahmung (1897); Wohin treiben wir? (1897; collection of essays); Musikalisches und Persönliches (1899); Verklungene Weisen (1911); edited Dehn's Lehre vom Kontrapunkt, dem Kanon und der Fuge (1859; 2nd ed., 1883).

Schönberg, Arnold. See Schoenberg.

Schoenberg, Harold G., American music critic; b. New York, Nov. 29, 1915. He studied at Brooklyn College (A. B., 1937) and N. Y. Univ. (A. M., 1938). From 1942 to 1946 he was in the army; then was on the staff of the N. Y. 'Sun' (1946-50); in 1950 appointed to the music staff of the N. Y. 'Times'; also has contributed to various musical magazines. He publ. Chamber and Solo Instrument Music, in the series 'The Guide to Long-Playing Records' (N. Y., 1955).

Schönberger, Benno, pianist and composer; b. Vienna, Sept. 12, 1863; d. Wisborough Green, Sussex, March 9, 1930. He studied with Anton Door (piano), Bruckner and Volkmann (composition) at the Vienna Cons.; then took lessons with Liszt. After a European concert tour, he went to London, where he taught at the Royal Academy of Music and appeared in chamber music concerts. He wrote 3 sonatas, 3 rhapsodies, a bolero, and a polonaise, for piano, and about 40 songs.

Schondorf, Johannes, German choral conductor and composer; b. Röbel, July 1, 1833; d. Güstrow, Oct. 4, 1912. He studied at the Stern Cons. in Berlin; then was a singing teacher at the Cathedral School in Güstrow; also conducted a choral society there. He publ. Vaterländische Gesänge, for mixed voices; many school songs; also piano pieces.

Schönstein, Karl, Austrian singer and government official; b. Ofen, June 26, 1797; d. Vienna, July 16, 1876. Before he assumed office, he had a career as a concert singer; was one of the earliest interpreters of Schubert's songs; Schubert's song cycle, Die schöne Müllerin, is dedicated to him.

Schopenhauer, Arthur, the great German philosopher; b. Danzig, Feb. 22, 1788; d. Frankfurt, Sept. 21, 1860. Although his excursions into the realm of music are neither remarkable nor very valuable, they are stimulating, and have inspired a number of valuable contributions by modern investigators, especially in the field of musical esthetics. Wagner was influenced to a considerable extent by Schopenhauer's philosophical system. — Cf. K. Fuchs, Präludien zu einer Kritik der Tonkunst (Greifswald, 1870); F. von Hausegger, Richard Wagner und Arthur Schopenhauer (Leipzig, 1878; 2nd ed., 1892); H. Dinger, Die Weltanschauung Wagners in den Grundgedanken ihrer Entwicklung (Leipzig, 1893; traces especially the influence of Hegel and Schopenhauer); M. Seydel, Arthur Schopenhauers Metaphysik der Musik (Leipzig, 1895); E. Zoccoli, L'Estetica di Schopenhauer (Milan, 1901); G. Melli, La Filosofia di Schopenhauer (Florence, 1905; treats the relations between Schopenhauer and Wagner); Th. Lessing, Schopenhauer, Wagner, Nietzsche (Munich, 1906); A. Mäckenburg, Schopenhauer und seine Stellung zur Musik, in 'Die Musik' (Dec., 1908); F. J. Wagner, Beiträge zur Würdigung der Musiktheorie Schopenhauers (dissertation, Bonn, 1910); A. von Gottschalk, Beethoven und Schopenhauer (Blankenburg, 1912); L. Duntton Green, Schopenhauer and Music, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1930); V. Bennett, Referring to Schopenhauer, in 'Mus. Review' (Aug., 1950).

Schorr, Friedrich, baritone; b. Nagyvarád, Hungary, Sept. 2, 1888; d. Farmington, Conn., Aug. 14, 1953. He studied law at the Univ. of Vienna, and also took private lessons in singing; appeared with the Chicago Opera Co. (1911-12); then was a member of the opera companies in Graz (1914-16), Prague (1916-18), Cologne (1918-23), and of the Berlin State Opera (1923-31). He sang Wolfram at the Metropolitan Opera on Feb. 14, 1924, and continued as a member till the season 1942-43; sang Wotan at the Bayreuth Festivals in 1925, 1927, 1928, and 1930; specialized in Wagnerian opera. He sang the leading roles of the American premières at the Metropolitan Opera of Kreněk's Jonny Spielt Auf (1929) and Weinberger's Schwanda (1931).

Schott, Anton, German tenor; b. Castle Staufenneck, June 24, 1846; d. Stuttgart, Jan. 6, 1913. He was in the Prussian army; after the Franco-Prussian War, he sang at the Munich Opera (1871) and the Berlin Opera (1872-75); then in London and in Italy; made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., as Tannhäuser (Nov. 17, 1884). He excelled as an interpreter of Wagnerian roles. He publ. a polemical brochure, Hie Welf, hie Waibling (1904).

Schott, Bernhard, the founder of the German music publishing firm, B. Schott's Söhne; b. 1748; d. Mainz, 1817. He founded the firm in 1773; after his death the business was carried on by his sons Andreas Schott (1781-1840) and Johann Joseph Schott (1782-1855) under the firm name of B. Schott's Söhne. The 2 sons of Andreas Schott, Franz Philip Schott (1811-74) and Peter Schott (d. Paris, Sept. 20, 1894), succeeded to the business; Peter Schott was manager of the Paris and Brussels branches; subsequently Peter Schott, Jr., took over the directorship, together with Ludwig Strecker and Franz von Landwehr. B. Schott's Söhne published the journals 'Cäcilia' (1824-48), 'Süddeutsche Musikzeitung' (1852-69), and 'Melos' (1920-34 and from 1946). Dr. Ludwig Strecker, son of the director of the same name, and Heinz Schneider Schott, Dr. Strecker's son-in-law, are the present directors (1958); the main office is at Mainz, and a principal branch is at London. (Schott Frères at Brussels is now an entirely different firm.) The catalogue of Schott is one of the richest in the world; it includes works by Beethoven, (last quartets, 9th symph.), operas by Donizetti, Rossini, etc.; Wagner's Meistersinger, Ring des Nibelungen, and Parsifal; virtually all works by Hindemith and a great number of other contemporary works. Schott is the publisher of the Riemann Musik-Lexikon. — Cf. W. Altmann, Richard Wagners Briefwechsel mit seinen Verlegern (Leipzig, 1911; vol. II contains correspondence with Schott); L. Strecker, Richard Wagner als Verlagsgefährte (Mainz, 1951); Der Musikverlag B. Schott (Mainz, 1954).

Schouwman, Hans, Dutch pianist and composer; b. Gorinchem, Aug. 8, 1902. He began his career as an accompanist; then developed a singing voice, and gave recitals accompanying himself on the piano. — Works: a trio for clarinet, bassoon, and piano; 2 series of old Dutch songs with string accompaniment; arrangements of folk-songs for various instruments; teaching pieces for piano; vocal duets; solo songs.

Schrade, Leo, eminent musicologist; b. Alenstein, Germany, Dec. 13, 1903. He studied with Hermann Halbig at the Univ. of Heidelberg (1923-27), with Adolf Sandberger at the Univ. of Munich, and with Theodor Kroyer at the Univ. of Leipzig; Dr. phil., 1927; was appointed instructor at the Univ.

of Königsberg in 1929; in Bonn, 1932; in 1937 he settled in America; joined the faculty of Yale Univ. in 1938; prof., 1948; in 1958, prof. at the Univ. of Basel. —Writings: Die ältesten Denkmäler der Orgelmusik als Beitrag zu einer Geschichte der Toccata (dissertation, Leipzig, 1926; publ. 1928); Die handschriftliche Überlieferung der ältesten Instrumentalmusik (1931); Mozart und die Romantiker (1931); Das Haydn-Bild in den ältesten Biographien (1932); Beethoven in France (New Haven, 1942); Monteverdi: Creator of Modern Music (N. Y., 1950); Bach; the Conflict between the Sacred and the Secular (N. Y., 1955); many valuable articles. Edited Luis Milán's Libro de musica de vihuela (Leipzig, 1927); Virdung's Musica getutscht (Kassel, 1931); etc. His ed. of the complete Polyphonic Music of the 14th Century began to appear in 1956.

Schradieck, Henry, noted violinist; b. Hamburg, April 29, 1846; d. Brooklyn, March 25, 1918. He studied at the Brussels Cons. with Léonard (1854-58) and with Ferdinand David in Leipzig (1859-61). He was concertmaster of the Philharmonic Concerts at Hamburg (1868-74), and of the Gewandhaus Orch. in Leipzig (1874-83). In 1883 he came to America; taught violin at the Cincinnati College of Music, and conducted symph. concerts there; after a visit to Germany, he returned to the U. S.; was active as violinist and teacher in N. Y. He publ. valuable technical studies for the violin: 25 grosse Studien für Geige allein; Scale-studies; Technical Studies; Guide to the Study of Chords; Finger Exercises; Schule der Violintechnik (3 parts; also adapted for viola).

Schreck, Gustav, German composer and teacher; b. Zeulenroda, Sept. 8, 1849; d. Leipzig, Jan. 22, 1918. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Plaidy, Papperitz, and Jadassohn; after a few years of teaching in Finland, he returned to Leipzig, and joined the faculty of the Cons. there in 1887. His works are mostly vocal; he wrote an oratorio, Christus der Auferstandene, and other sacred works; also a sonata for bassoon and piano; a sonata for oboe and piano; Divertimento, for 9 woodwinds; piano pieces; songs.

Schreiber (shri'-ber), Frederick C., composer; b. Vienna, Jan. 13, 1895; studied piano, cello, and composition at the Vienna Academy of Music, and also at the Vienna Univ.; was on the faculty of the Vienna Cons. of Music (1927-38), teaching music theory; also was active as opera conductor. In 1939 he emigrated to the U. S.; became an American citizen in 1945; settled in N. Y., as organist and choir director at a Reformed Protestant Church. He has written about 125 works, among them 7 symphonies (1927; 1933; 1936; 1951; 1952; 1956; 1957); the 2nd symph. was performed at the Vienna Radio Music Festival, on Sept. 25, 1934; the 4th symph., at Raleigh, N. C., April 26, 1956. Other works are: The Beatitudes, a symph. trilogy for orch. and mixed chorus (1950); 2 violin concertos; a cello concerto; Concerto Grosso (1936; Chicago, March 3, 1955); Sinfonietta in G (Philadelphia, Nov. 18, 1949); numerous choral compositions; chamber music; organ pieces; piano pieces.

Schreiber (shri'-ber), Friedrich Gustav, German organ teacher and composer; b. Bienstedt, Gotha, Aug. 5, 1817; d. Mühlhausen, Thuringia, July 14, 1889. He studied with E. Kast and L. Gebhardt in Erfurt; taught organ in Prague (1840-47); settled at Erfurt in 1851 as municipal music director and cantor at St. Blasius's; founded and conducted a choral society with which he produced oratorios. —Works: Borussia, for male chorus and orch.; Pestalozzi-Kantate and Der deutsche Geist for soli, male chorus, and orch.; songs.

Schreker, Franz, eminent composer and teacher; b. Monaco, March 23, 1878; d. Berlin, March 21, 1934. He spent his early childhood in Monaco, where his father, a native of Austria, was court photographer. He was 10 when his father died, and the family moved to Vienna; there he studied violin with Rosé and theory with Robert Fuchs. In 1908 he organized the Vienna Philharmonic Chorus, and conducted many new works with it. In 1912 he was appointed prof. of composition at the Akademie der Tonkunst. In 1920 he went to Berlin, where he was director of the Hochschule für Musik (until 1932); there he had many talented pupils who later became well-known composers (Krenek, Rathaus, Alois Hába, and others). In 1932 became prof. of a class for advanced students at the Prussian Academy of Arts, but lost this post with the advent of the Nazi regime (1933), when he was forced to resign; he died a year later. As a composer, he led the neo-Romantic movement in the direction of Expressionism, emphasizing psychological conflicts in his operas; in his harmonies he expanded the basically Wagnerian sonorities to include many devices associated with Impressionism. He exercised considerable influence on the German and Viennese schools of his time, but with the change of direction in modern music towards economy of means and away from mystical and psychological trends, Schreker's music suffered an irreversible decline. — Works: operas: (all to his own librettos): Der ferne Klang (Frankfurt, Aug. 18, 1912), Das Spielwerk und die Prinzessin (Vienna, March 15, 1913; revised and produced as a mystery play, Das Spielwerk, Munich, Oct. 30, 1920), Die Gezeichneten (Frankfurt, April 25, 1918), Der Schatzgräber (Frankfurt, Jan. 21, 1920; very successful), Irrelohe (Cologne, March 27, 1924), Der singende Teufel (Berlin, Dec. 10, 1928), Der Schmied von Gent (Berlin, Oct. 29, 1932), Christophorus (Freiburg, 1932); ballet, Der Geburtstag der Infantin, after Oscar Wilde (Vienna, 1908); Rokoko, dance suite (1908); Der Wind, pantomime (1908); Ekkehard, overture for orch. and organ (1903); Romantische Suite for orch. (1903); Phantastische Ouvertüre (1903); Vorspiel zu einem Drama (1913; used as a prelude to his opera Die Gezeichneten); Kammersymphonie (Vienna, March 12, 1917); Kleine Suite for small orch. (Breslau, Jan. 17, 1929); Vom ewigen Leben, for soprano and orch., after Walt Whitman (1929); 23 songs. — Cf. Paul Bekker, Franz Schreker (Berlin, 1919); R. S. Hoffmann, Franz Schreker (Leipzig, 1921); J. Kapp, Franz Schreker (Munich, 1921); F. X. Bayerl, Franz Schrekers Opernwerk (Erlangen, 1928); special issues of 'Musikblätter des Anbruch' (1920; 1928, in honor of Schreker's 50th birthday).

Schrems, Joseph, German music scholar and choral leader; b. Warmensteinach, Oct. 5, 1815; d. Regensburg, Oct. 25, 1872. He was appointed Kapellmeister of the Cathedral at Regensburg in 1839, and held this position almost until his death; revived much early church music in performance; succeeded Proske as editor of 'Musica divina.' Through his efforts the library of the Regensburg Cathedral became one of the largest collections of early church music in existence.

Schröder, Alwin, cellist; brother of Karl Schröder; b. Neuahaldensleben, June 15, 1855; d. Boston, Oct. 17, 1928. He studied piano with his father, and violin with De Ahna; then devoted himself to the cello; became successor of his brother as 1st cellist in the Gewandhaus orch. in Leipzig. In 1891 he went to America; joined the Boston Symph. Orch. (until 1925). He was also for a time the cellist in the Kneisel Quartet. His publications include Violoncello Studies, Technical Studies, New Studies in Scale-playing, as well as collections of classical pieces adapted for cello.

Schröder, Hermann, German violinist and composer; brother of Alwin Schröder; b. Quedlinburg, July 28, 1843; d. Berlin, Jan. 31, 1909. He studied with A. Ritter at Magdeburg; from 1885 was teacher at the Royal Institute for Church Music in Berlin; also had a music school of his own. He publ. Untersuchung über die sympathischen Klänge der Geigeninstrumente (1891); Die symmetrische Umkehrung in der Musik (1902); Ton und Farbe (1906); chamber music for instructive purposes: 6 instruktive Quartette, 3 kleine Trios, etc.; a violin method, Die Kunst des Violinspiels (1887); etc.

Schröder, Karl, German cellist and composer; brother of Alwin Schröder; b. Quedlinburg, Dec. 18, 1848; d. Bremen, Sept. 22, 1935. He studied with Drechsler and Kiel; in 1871 he formed a string quartet with his brothers Hermann, Franz, and Alwin. He was solo cellist in the Gewandhaus orch. in Leipzig (1874-81); afterwards held 8 successive posts as conductor in Germany and Holland, finally settling in Berlin as cello teacher at Stern's Cons. (1911-24). He then retired and lived in Bremen. Among his works are 2 operas, Aspasia (1892) and Asket (1893), 2 string quartets, and other chamber music. He compiled 3 pedagogical manuals, Katechismus des Dirigierens und Taktierens (1889), Katechismus des Violinspiels (1889), and Katechismus des Violoncellspiels (1890), which were also publ. in English (1893, 1895, 1896). His collections of classical works for the cello, especially Vortragsstudien (60 pieces), are of value.

Schröder-Devrient (-dü-vryahn'), Wilhelmine, celebrated German soprano; b. Hamburg, Dec. 6, 1804; d. Coburg, Jan. 26, 1860. She received an early training for the stage from her father, a baritone, and from her mother, Antoinette Sophie Bürger, a well-known actress; she herself played children's parts and was an actress until her 17th year. After the death of her father in 1818, she followed her mother to Vienna, where she studied with Mazatti; made her début as Pamina in Mozart's Zauberflöte; then sang Agathe in Der Freischütz under the direction of Weber himself (Vienna, March 7, 1822). She sang Leonore when Fidelio was revived in Vienna (1822) in the presence of Beethoven. In 1823 she was engaged at the Court Opera in Dresden; there she married the actor Karl Devrient (divorced 1828). She sang in Paris in 1831 and 1832 with spectacular success; in the summer of 1832 she appeared in London. She returned to Germany in 1837; continued to sing in Dresden until 1847; also appeared as a concert singer, evoking praise from critics and musicians alike; Wagner expressed his admiration for her; she created the roles of Adriano Colonna in Rienzi (Oct. 20, 1842), Senta in Der fliegende Holländer (Dresden, Jan. 2, 1843), and Venus in Tannhäuser (Dresden, Oct. 19, 1845). She contracted 2 more marriages: to Döring (divorced) and von Bock (1850). —Cf. G. von Glümer, Erinnerungen an Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient (Leipzig, 1862; reprinted in Reclam's ed., 1905); A. von Wolzogen, Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient (Leipzig, 1863); G. Bonacci, G. Schröder-Devrient e Gasparo Spontini, in 'Nuova Antologia' (Rome, 1903); C. Hagemann, Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient (Berlin, 1904); E. Schuré, Précurseurs et révoltés (Paris, 1904). A purported autobiography, publ. anonymously in many editions since about 1870, as Aus den Memoiren einer Sängerin or Memoires d'une chanteuse allemande, is in fact a pornographic fantasy whose real author is unknown. A novel based on her life, by Eva von Baudissin, Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient: Der Schicksalsweg einer grossen Künstlerin, was publ. in Berlin, 1937. See also Richard Wagner's Über Schauspieler und Sänger (dedicated to her memory), in vol. IX of his 'Gesammelte Schriften und Dichtungen,' and his numerous references to her in Mein Leben.

Schröter, Christoph Gottlieb, German organist and theorist; b. Hohenstein, Saxony, Aug. 10, 1699; d. Nordhausen, Nov. 2, 1782. Chorister under Schmidt, and pupil of the Kreuzschule, Dresden. In 1717 he began the study of theology in Leipzig, but in the same year became Lotti's music copyist at Dresden; traveled (1720-24) in Germany, Holland, and England with a German baron; lectured on music at Jena Univ., became organist at Minden in 1726, and at Nordhausen in 1732. —Works: 7 sets of church cantatas for the entire church year; a Passion, Die sieben Worte Jesu, for which he wrote the poem; 4 other Passions; secular serenades and cantatas; symphonies, overtures, concertos, sonatas; fugues and preludes for organ; etc. —Writings: Umständliche Beschreibung eines neuerfundenen Clavierin- struments, auf welchem man in unterschiedenen Graden stark und schwach spielen kann (1763, in Marburg's 'Kritische Briefe,' vol. II), in which he claims the invention, in 1717, of a hammer action for keyed stringed instruments, a model of which (so he says) he laid before the Saxon court in 1721; his claim of priority in the invention of the pianoforte action rests, however, on this bare assertion, and it is not sufficiently weighty to disturb the priority of Cristofori (q.v.); Deutliche Anweisung zum Generalbass . . . (1772; the first book to represent the major and minor triads as the sole fundamental chords); Letzte Beschäftigung mit musikalischen Dingen; nebst sechs Temperatur-Planen und einer Notentafel (1782); critical and polemical letters in Mizler's 'Bibliothek' and Marburg's 'Kritische Briefe.'

Schröter, Corona (Elisabeth Wilhelmine), celebrated German soprano; b. Guben, Jan. 14, 1751; d. Ilmenau, Aug. 23, 1802. She was trained in music by her father, Johann Friedrich Schröter, who was an oboe player. About 1764 she appeared in a 'grand concert' in Leipzig and was engaged there till 1771. On Nov. 23, 1776 she sang at the court of Weimar, and was appointed Kammer-sängerin to the Dowager Duchess of Weimar. She was also active on the dramatic stage; Goethe esteemed her highly as an actress. She composed some songs, publ. in 2 vols. (1786 and 1794); among them, the first setting of Goethe's Erk König. —Cf. R. Keil, Corona Schröter. Eine Lebensskizze (Leipzig, 1875); H. Düntzer, Charlotte von Stein und Corona Schröter (Ilmenau, 1902); H. Stümcke, Corona Schröter (Bielefeld, 1904).

Schröter, Johann Samuel, pianist and composer; brother of Corona Schröter; b. Warsaw, between 1750 and 1753; d. London, Nov. 1, 1788. He traveled with his father and sister to London, where they gave concerts together. He remained in London, and in 1782 was appointed successor of John Christian Bach as music master to the Queen. 12 piano concertos and 7 trios were publ. in London, also in Paris. His widow became attached to Haydn during the latter's stay in London (1790-91) and sent him many impassioned letters, of which copies made by Haydn are extant. —Cf. Konrad Wolff, Johann Samuel Schroeter, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1958).

Schröter, Leonhart, German contrapunctist; b. Torgau, c. 1532; d. Magdeburg, c. 1601. From 1561 to 1576 he was cantor at Saalfeld; then librarian at Wolfenbüttel (1572-73); cantor of the Old Latin School in Magdeburg (1576-95). He was an important composer of Lutheran church music; publ. 55 geistliche Lieder (1562), a German Te Deum for 8 voices (1571; publ. 1576; reprinted by Kade in vol. V of Ambros' Geschichte der Musik); also a Latin Te Deum (1584); 16 Weihnachtsliederlein for 4-8 voices (1587; reprinted by Engelke in 1914 for Peters); 28 Hymni sacri (1587). 4 Weihnachtsliederlein are found in Schlesinger's 'Musica sacra' (No. 11), other pieces in Jöde's 'Das Chorbuch' I and IV; further reprints by W. Ehmman (Göttingen, 1932), G. Hormann (1933), and E. Lendvai (1934). —Cf. G. Hofmann, Leonhart Schröter, ein lutherischer Kantor zu Magdeburg (dissertation; Altdorf, 1934).

Schryock, Buren, American composer and conductor; b. Sheldon, Iowa, Dec. 13, 1881; at the age of 7, moved to West Salem, Oregon, where he studied music, and played organ in a church; occupied various teaching posts in Michigan, Texas, Nebraska, and California; was conductor of the San Diego Symph. Orch. (1913-20) and of the San Diego Opera Co. (1920-36); then settled in National City, near San Diego. —Works: 5 operas to his own librettos: Flavia (1930-46), Mary and John (1948), Nancy and Arthur (1951), Malena and Nordico (1954), Tanshu and Sanchi (1955); a symphony; chamber music; piano pieces.

Schubart, (Christian Friedrich) Daniel, German poet and musician; b. Sontheim, April 13, 1739; d. Stuttgart, Oct. 10, 1791. Organist at Ludwigsburg in 1768; founded a paper, the 'Deutsche Chronik,' in 1774; from 1777-87 imprisoned at Hohenasperg for political reasons. After his release, he was made music director of the Stuttgart theater and court poet. He was the author of the words of Schubert's famous song Die Forelle. His own compositions are unassuming, but he was historically important in contributing to the creation of the German lied of the folk-like type; his song, Schaf wohl, du Himmelsknebe du, rivalled real folksongs in popularity. He also wrote piano pieces. His son, Ludwig Schubart, edited his philosophical disquisition, Ideen zu einer Aesthetik der Tonkunst (1806; new ed., 1924), written in the extravagant vein characteristic of his whole life. —Cf. Schubarts Leben und Gesinnungen von ihm selbst, im Kerker, aufgesetzt (2 vols.; Stuttgart, 1791-93); F. D. Strauss, Schubarts Leben in seinen Briefen (2 vols.; Berlin, 1849);

G. Hauff, Schubart in seinen Leben und seinen Werken (Stuttgart, 1885); H. Solcher, Schubart der Gefangene auf dem Hohenasperg (Bamberg, 1895); E. Holzer, Schubart als Musiker (Stuttgart, 1905); H. Hesse and K. Isenberg, Schubart: Dokumente seines Lebens (Berlin, 1927); R. Hammerstein, Schubart, ein Dichter-Musiker der Goethe-Zeit (Freiburg-im-Breisgau, 1943); E. Thorn, Genius in Fesseln: Schubarts Leben (2nd ed., Geislingen, 1956).

Schubaur (shoo'bour), Johann Lukas, German composer; b. Lechfeld, Dec. (baptized 23), 1749; d. Munich, Nov. 15, 1815. While studying medicine in Vienna he earned his livelihood by giving music lessons; began to practice in 1775 in Neuburg but soon moved to Munich, where he became physician to the court and president of the medical commission. He was one of the earliest and most successful composers of German 'Singspiele.' The following were produced in Munich: Melida (1781; lost), Die Dorfdeputierten (1783), Das Lustlager (1784; lost), Die treuen Köhler (1786); also composed Psalm 107, and a cantata, Il Sacrificio. —Cf. E. Reipschläger, Schubaur, Danzi und Poissl als Opernkomponisten (Berlin, 1911).

Schubert, Ferdinand, brother of the great composer; b. Lichtenthal, near Vienna, Oct. 18, 1794; d. Vienna, Feb. 26, 1859, as director of the Normal School of St. Anna. He was devoted to his gifted brother, and inherited the latter's literary remains. —Publ. a Tantum ergo, a Regina coeli, a German Requiem a 4 with organ, part-songs, etc.; wrote much other church music, a Requiem for Franz, 2 children's operas, etc. (most in MS).

Schubert, Franz, violinist, son and pupil of the Konzertmeister Franz Anton Schubert (1768-1824); b. Dresden, July 22, 1808; d. there, April 12, 1878. Also taught by Rottmeier and L. Haase; then, with a stipend from the King, by Lafont at Paris. Entered the royal orch. at Dresden in 1823; succeeded Lipinski as 1st Konzertmeister in 1861. —Publ. études for violin, op. 3; duo for piano and violin, op. 8; a fantasia for violin with orch.; 2 concertanti for violin and cello (with Kummer); numerous other violin pieces, including the popular L'Abbeille (The Bee).

Schubert, Franz (Peter), great Viennese composer; b. Lichtenthal (then a suburb of Vienna; now a part of that city), Jan. 31, 1797; d. Vienna, Nov. 19, 1828. He came of Moravian and Silesian peasant stock. By his father, the schoolmaster at Lichtenthal and an amateur cellist, the gifted boy was taught violin playing at the age of 8; and by choirmaster Holzer, in addition, the piano, organ, singing, and thorough-bass, becoming first soprano in the church choir in his tenth year. In 1808 he was admitted into the Vienna court choir as a singer, and also entered the 'Konvikt,' the training school for the court singers. His teachers in theory were Ruzicka and Salieri (the latter from 1812 until at least 1816). He also played in the school orchestra, finally as 1st violin. His earliest extant song, Hagars Klage (dated March 30, 1811), and several others of the period, show that Zumsteeg was his model at this time; he also cultivated instrumental composition, especially chamber music; his first symphony was written in 1813. In this year, his voice having broken, he left the 'Konvikt.' His first Mass was completed in 1814 and successfully performed. Meantime he fitted himself for the post of elementary teacher in his father's school, and taught there until 1816. During these three years, the future supreme exponent of the German lied devoted his leisure to obtaining a thorough mastery of vocal expression. His usual method of composition was to jot down the melody with a sketch of the harmony, and then to write out the piece in full, following this first version by a second for the elimination of faults; when the second failed to satisfy him, the song was subjected to a third, or even a fourth, revision (e.g., Erkönig and Die Forelle). Such masterworks as Gretchen am Spinnrade (Oct. 19, 1814) and Erkönig (1815) mark the swift and unique development of his genius. In the year 1815 he composed as many as 144 songs; in one day (Oct. 15) he wrote eight. From 1814-16 he also composed 2 operettas, 3 Singspiele, and 3 other (fragmentary) stage pieces, none of which were then performed; 4 Masses, other church music, etc. In 1816 his application for the musical directorship of the new State Normal School at Laibach was rejected. The following year he left his place in the Lichtenthal school, and from 1818 made Vienna his home, with the exception of two summers (1818 and 1824) spent at Zelész, Hungary, as music teacher in Count Esterházy's family. From 1817 his friend Franz von Schober (1796-1882) generously aided him, often sharing lodgings and purse with the struggling artist. Through him, Schubert became acquainted with the famous baritone Michael Vogl, one of the first and greatest interpreters of his songs; through his influence Schubert's musical farce, Die Zwillingbrüder, was brought out at the Kärnthner Theater (June 14, 1820), but made little impression. In 1821, however, when he had already written over 600 compositions, his Erkönig was sung at a public concert of the 'Musikverein' with great applause, and others followed at other concerts; so that Cappi & Diabelli were induced to publish on commission 20 songs (Erkönig was the first), which were so successful that Diabelli assumed the risk of further publications; from 1826 his songs and piano music had good sales. Efforts to obtain a salaried post were unsuccessful; that of vice-Kapellmeister to the court, for which he applied in 1826, was given to Weigl; his friends failed to obtain a similar position for him in Hamburg; and the conductorship of the Kärnthner Theater was also refused him in 1827. Not until March 26, 1828, did he give a public concert of his own works (the E♭ trio, a movement from the D minor quartet, songs, etc.), which was an artistic and pecuniary success. Excepting such occasional and momentary good fortune, his life was a continual battle for the daily means of subsistence; although his genius was fully recognized by musicians like Salieri, Weigl, and the singer Vogl, and his songs were highly praised by Beethoven, he was wretchedly underpaid by his publishers, and his greatest works were almost totally neglected. His wonderful gifts, and genial and buoyant disposition, won many friends; chief among them the poet Mayrhofer, the family von Sonnleithner (at whose house Schubert's compositions were often performed long before their introduction to the public), Baron von Schönstein (whose singing aided in bringing Schubert's lyrical songs into vogue), Moritz Schwind, and Anselm Hüttenbrenner. Two visits which Schubert paid to Beethoven are recorded; but they were never intimate. For months previous to his death, Schubert had been failing; his final illness was brought to a fatal termination by an attack of typhus. He was buried, at his own desire, in the 'Ostfriedhof' at Währing, his grave being the third from Beethoven's. When, in 1888, the remains of both masters were transferred to the 'Zentralfriedhof' the new graves also were only a few feet apart. In 1897 Brahms was buried close by.

Schubert was the least 'schooled' of all great German musicians. For this lack of training, his keen musical intuition and inexhaustible resources of melody amply compensated. The spontaneity and fecundity of his song-compositions are not more astounding than the perfection with which the music—melody and accompaniment—fits the poem. He is regarded as the creator of the modern German lied. His known songs for solo voice with piano accompaniment number 634. As to his alleged carelessness in choice of subjects for musical setting, the fact is that he took 72 poems by Goethe, 46 by Schiller, 44 by Wilhelm Müller, 28 by Matthison, 23 by Höltz, 22 by Kosegarten, 13 by Körner, etc.—that is, the best at his command. He also set 47 poems by Mayrhofer and 12 by Schöber, both his warm personal friends. Of Heine (then a newcomer) he composed only 6 numbers (in the 'Schwanengesang'). Equally inspired is his transference of the 'Liedform' to the piano in the 'Moments musicaux' and Impromptus—a miniature form of piano composition extensively copied. In larger forms, his symphony in C (1828) and the unfinished symphony in B minor are equal to the best after Beethoven—and Schubert was but 31 when he died. Only his operas have had no success.

A complete critical edition of Schubert's works in 40 vols. (21 series), edited by E. Mandyczewski (assisted by Brahms, Brüll, Hellmesberger, J. N. Fuchs, etc.), was publ. from 1888-97 by Breitkopf & Härtel. Since the publication of the monumental edition Max Friedlaender discovered the MSS of about 100 lost songs, which were first publ. in Peters' complete ed. of the songs (7 vols.). A thematic index of all of Schubert's works, listed in chronological order, was publ. by O. E. Deutsch (N. Y., 1951). There are numerous editions of Schubert's favorite songs with English translations.

WORKS

OPERAS AND OTHER STAGE MUSIC: Die Zauberharfe, 3-act melodrama (Vienna, Aug. 19, 1820); Alfonso und Estrella, 3-act opera (1821-22; first produced Weimar, June 24, 1854, by Liszt); Die Verschworenen, later called Der häusliche Krieg, 1-act operetta (1823; Frankfurt, Aug. 29, 1861); Fierabras, 3-act opera (1823; Karlsruhe, Feb. 9, 1897); incidental music to the drama Rosamunde von Cypern (overture from Die Zauberharfe) (Vienna, Dec. 20, 1823); Die Bürgschaft (1816); etc.—CHORAL WORKS: 6 Latin Masses; Deutsche Messe (for 4-part mixed chorus with organ); oratorio Lazarus (fragment); Psalm 92 (for baritone solo and mixed chorus); 2 Tantum ergo (for 4-part mixed chorus with orch.); 2 Stabat Mater (4 voices with orch.); several Salve regina; Miriam's Siegesgesang (for soprano solo, chorus, and orch.); prayer Vor der Schlacht (for soli, mixed chorus, and piano); hymn Herr unser Gott (for 8-part men's chorus with wind instruments); Hymne an den Heiligen Geist (for 8-part men's chorus with orch.); Morgengesang im Walde (for 4-part men's chorus with orch.); Nachtgesang im Walde und Nachthelle (for 4-part men's chorus and horns); Schlachtlied (8-part men's chorus with piano); Glaube, Hoffnung und Liebe (for mixed chorus and wind); numerous part-songs.—FOR ORCH.: 8 symphonies (No. 8 is the 'unfinished'); Schubert is supposed to have written another symphony, the 'Gastein,' in 1825, but no trace of it has been found; 7 overtures (2 in 'the Italian style'); Concertstück for violin with orch.; etc.—CHAMBER MUSIC: Octet for strings, horn, bassoon, and clarinet, op. 166; piano quintet in A, op. 144 (the 'Forellenquintet,' with double-bass); string quintet in C, op. 163 (with 2 cellos); 15 string quartets; 2 piano trios; string trio in B♭; for piano and violin: a Rondo brillant in B minor, op. 70, a Phantasie in C, op. 159, a sonata in A, op. 162, 3 sonatinas, op. 137; Introduction and Variations for flute and piano, op. 160; etc.—FOR PIANO (2 hands): 22 sonatas (including op. 42, in A minor; op. 53, D; op. 78 (fantasia), G; op. 120, A; op. 122, E♭; op. 143, A minor; op. 147, B; op. 164, A minor; and 3 grand posthumous sonatas in C minor, A, and B♭); 8 Impromptus, op. 90, 142; 6 Moments musicaux, op. 94; Adagio and Rondo, op. 145; Fantasia, op. 15, in C; sets of variations (op. 10, E minor, on a French air; op. 35, in A♭; on a Diabelli waltz, in C minor; op. 82, in C, on Herold's Marie; etc.); many waltzes (op. 9, 18, 33, 50 [34 Valses sentimentales], 67 [Hommage aux belles Viennoises], 77 [10 Valses nobles], 91 [12 Grätzer Walzer], etc.); Wanderer-Fantasia in C, op. 15 (arr. for piano and orch. by Liszt); 2 Scherzos; 5 Klavierstücke; etc.—For piano 4 hands; 2 sonatas (op. 30, B♭; op. 140, C); Divertissement à l'Hongroise, op. 54; Divertissement in E minor, op. 63; Fantasia in F minor, op. 103; Grand rondo in A, op. 107; Notre amitié, rondo in D, op. 138; Andantino and rondo, op. 84; Lebensstürme, allegro caractéristique, op. 144; Fugue in E minor, op. 52; Polonaises, op. 61, 75; Variations, op. 10, 35, 82; 3 Waltzes, op. 33; 4 Ländler; Marches (op. 27, 40, 51, 55 [Trauermarsch], 66 [héroïque], 121.—SONGS: Erbkönig, op. 1; Gretchen am Spinnrade, op. 2; Heidenröslein, op. 3; Der Wanderer und Der du von dem Himmel bist, in op. 4; 3 Gesänge des Harfners, op. 12; Erster Verlust, Der Fischer, and Es war ein König in Thule, in op. 5; the Suleika songs, op. 14, 31; An Schwager Kronos, in op. 19; Mignon's songs, op. 62; Über allen Gipfeln ist Ruh', in op. 96 (all the above by Goethe); further, the grand song-cycles by Wilhelm Müller, Die schöne Müllerin, op. 25, and Die Winterreise, op. 89, containing 20 and 24 numbers respectively; 7 songs from Scott's Lady of the Lake (Fräulein vom See), op. 52, and 9 songs from Ossian; Der Tod und das Mädchen; Nähe des Geliebten; Des Mädchens Klage; Gruppe aus dem Tartarus; Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt; Frühlingsglaube; Die Forelle; Du bist die Ruh'; the Barcarolle Auf dem Wasser zu singen; 6 songs by Heine, in the Schwanengesang; and many more of surpassing beauty.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. (Note: Many of the books listed here under 'Biography' also deal with the works.) A. BIOGRAPHY: H. Kreissle von Hellborn, F. S., eine biographische Skizze (Vienna, 1861; 2nd, greatly enlarged, ed. as F. S., 1865; in English, London, 1866); H. Barbedette, F. S. Sa vie, ses œuvres, son temps (Paris, 1865); La Mara, F. S., in vol. I of Musikalische Studienköpfe (Leipzig, 1868; 9th ed., 1894; reprinted separately, 1912); A. Audley, F. S., sa vie et ses œuvres (Paris, 1871); A. Reissmann, F. S. Sein Leben und seine Werke (Berlin, 1873); G. L. Austin, The Life of F. S. (Boston, 1873); H. F. Frost, S. (N. Y., 1881); M. Friedlaender, Beiträge zu einer Biographie F. S.s (Rostock, 1887); A. Niggli, S. (Leipzig, 1890); H. Ritter, F. S. (Bamberg, 1896); F. Skalla, F. S. (Prague, 1897); H. Frost, S. (London, 1899); M. Zenger, F. S.s Wirken und Erdenwallen (Langensalza, 1902); R. Heuberger, S. (Berlin, 1902; 2nd ed., 1908); E. Duncan, S. (London, 1905); W. Klatte, S. (Berlin, 1907); L.-A. Bourgault-Ducoudray, S. (Paris, 1908; new ed., 1926); H. Antcliffe, S. (London, 1910); W. Dahms, S. (Berlin, 1912); O. E. Deutsch, F. S. Die Dokumente seines Lebens und Schaffens (3 vols. planned; only 2 publ.; Munich, 1913-14); R. Heuberger, F. S. (vol. 14 of Riemann's 'Berühmte Musiker'; 1921); K. Kobald, S. und Schwind (Zürich, 1921); Th. Gerold, S. (Paris, 1923); O. Bie, F. S. (Berlin, 1925; in English, N. Y., 1929); M. Friedlaender, S.; Skizze seines Lebens und Wirkens (Leipzig, 1928); A. Weiss, F. S. (Vienna, 1928); P. Stefan, F. S. (Berlin, 1928; new ed., Vienna, 1947); P. Landormy, La Vie de S. (Paris, 1928); J.-G. Prod'homme, S. (Paris, 1928); J.-G. Prod'homme, S. raconté par ceux qui l'ont vu (Paris, 1928); C. Whitaker-Wilson, F. S. (London, 1928); E. Roggeri, S. (Turin, 1928); E. H. Bethge, F. S. (Leipzig, 1928); H. Eulenberg, S. und die Frauen (Hellerau, 1928); N. Flower, F. S.

(London and N. Y., 1928; new ed., 1949); K. Kobald, F. S. und seine Zeit (Zürich, 1928; new ed., 1948; in English, N. Y., 1928); G. R. Kruse, F. S. (Bielefeld, 1928); R. Pitrou, F. S. (Paris, 1928); A. K. Glazunov, S. (Leningrad, 1928); R. Pecio Agüero, S. (in Spanish; Paris, 1929); M. Tibaldi Chiesa, S. (Milan, 1932; 2nd ed., 1936); R. Bates, F. S. (London, 1934); W. Vetter, F. S. (Potsdam, 1934); E. Duncan, S. (revised ed. N. Y., 1934); G. Schünemann, Erinnerungen an S. (Berlin, 1936); E. Buenzod, F. S. (4th ed., Paris, 1937); J. Bruyr, F. S. (Brussels, 1938); A. Silvestrelli, F. S. (Salzburg, 1939); A. Orel, Der junge S. (Vienna, 1940); A. Kolb, F. S., sein Leben (Stockholm, 1941); K. Höcker, Wege zu S. (Regensburg, 1942); R. Tenschert, Du holde Kunst: Ein kleiner S.-Spiegel (Vienna, 1943); B. Paumgartner, F. S. (Zürich, 1943; 2nd ed., 1947); W. & P. Rehberg, F. S. (Zürich, 1946); O. E. Deutsch, S.; A Documentary Biography (London, 1946; a transl. and revision of F. S. Die Dokumente seines Lebens; a work of fundamental importance; American ed. as The S. Reader, N. Y., 1947); A. Hutchings, S. (London, 1947; 3rd ed., 1956); C. Weingartner, F. S. (Alten, 1947); R. H. Schauffler, F. S.: the Ariel of Music (N. Y., 1949); H. Malherbe, F. S., son amour, ses amitiés (Paris, 1949); A. Einstein, S.: A Musical Portrait (N. Y., 1951); H. Rutz, S., Dokumente seines Lebens und Schaffens (Munich, 1952); H. Goldschmidt, F. S. (Berlin, 1954); P. Mies, F. S. (Leipzig, 1954); O. E. Deutsch, ed., S.: Die Erinnerungen seiner Freunde (Leipzig, 1957; in English, as S.: Memoirs by His Friends, N. Y., 1958); M. J. E. Brown, S.: A Critical Biography (London, 1958). —B. CRITICISM, APPRECIATION: J. Rissé, F. S. in seinen Liedern (2 vols.; Hanover, 1872); E. Mandyczewski, F. S.s Werke, in series XX of B. & H.'s complete ed. (Leipzig, 1895); M. Friedlaender, F. S. zu seinen 100. Geburtstage (Berlin, 1897); H. de Curzon, Les Lieder de F. S. (Brussels, 1899); O. E. Deutsch, S.-Brevier (Berlin, 1905); M. Vancsa, S. und seine Verleger (Vienna, 1905); L. Scheibler, S.s einstimmige Lieder mit Texten von Schiller, in 'Die Rheinlande' (1905); A. Nathansky, Bauernfeld und S. (Trieste, 1906); D. G. Mason, The Romantic Composers (N. Y., 1906); M. Gallet, S. et le Lied (Paris, 1907); A. Schnerich, Messe und Requiem seit Haydn und Mozart (Vienna, 1909); O. Wigg, F. S.s Messen (Leipzig, 1909); G. H. Clutsam, S. (N. Y., 1912); M. Bauer, Die Lieder F. S.s (Leipzig, 1915); H. von der Pfordten, S. und das deutsche Lied (1916; 2nd ed., Leipzig, 1920); W. Kahl, Das lyrische Klavierstück S.s., in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' III (1921); O. E. Deutsch, Die Originalausgaben von S.s. Goethe-Lieder (Vienna, 1926); H. Költzsch, F. S. in seinen Klaviersonaten (Leipzig, 1927); Felicitas von Kraus, Beiträge zur Erforschung des malenden und poetisierenden Wesens in der Begleitung von F. S.s Liedern (Mainz, 1927); P. Mies, S. der Meister des Liedes (Berlin, 1928); F. Günther, S.s. Lied (Stuttgart, 1928); F. V. Damian, F. S.s Liederkreis, Die schöne Müllerin (Leipzig, 1928); K. Kobald, Der Meister des deutschen Liedes, F. S. (Vienna and Leipzig, 1928); F. Weingartner, S. und sein Kreis (Zürich, 1928); C. Lafite, Das Schubertlied und seine Sänger (Vienna, 1928); R. Capell, S.s. Songs (London, 1928); K. Huschke, Das 7 Gestirn der grossen S.s. Kammermusikwerke (Pritzwalk, 1928); H. Biehle, S.s. Lieder als Gesangsproblem (Langensalz, 1929); A. Farinelli, Beethoven e S. (Turin, 1929); Th. Werner, S.s. Tod, in 'Joh. Wolf-Festschrift' (1929); Bericht über den Internationalen Kongress für Schubertforschung (Augsburg, 1929); H. Bosch, Die Entwicklung des Romantischen in S.s. Liedern (Leipzig, 1930); H. J. Therstappen, Die Entwicklung der Form bei S. (Leipzig, 1931); E. Laaff, F. S.s Sinfonien (Wiesbaden; Part I, 1933); T. Archer, The Formal Construction of 'Die schöne Müllerin,' in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1934); H. Eschmann, S.-Beethoven (Cologne, 1934); P. Egert, Die Klaviersonate im Zeitalter der Romantik (Berlin, 1934); E. G. Porter, The Songs of S. (London, 1937); E. Schaeffer, S.s. 'Winterreise,' in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1938); G. Abraham, ed., The Music of S. (N. Y., 1947); O. E. Deutsch, The Discovery of S.s. Great C Major Symphony: a Story in 15 Letters, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1952); W. Vetter, Der Klassiker S. (2 vols., Leipzig, 1953); M. J. E. Brown, S.s. 'Winterreise,' Part I, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1953); E. Schmitz, S.s. Auswirkung auf die deutsche Musik bis zu Hugo Wolf und Bruckner (Leipzig, 1954). —C. CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.: O. E. Deutsch, F. S.s Briefe und Schriften (Munich, 1922; 4th ed., Vienna, 1954; English transl. with foreword by E. Newman, London, 1928); O. E. Deutsch, S.s. Tagebuch (1928). —D. CATALOGUES, ICONOGRAPHY, ETC.: G. Nottebohm, Thematisches Verzeichniss der im Druck erschienenen Werke von F. S. (Vienna, 1874); A. Trost, F. S.-Bildnisse (Vienna, 1893); H. de Curzon, Bibliographie critique de F. S. (Brussels, 1900); W. Kahl, Verzeichniss des Schrifttums über F. S., 1828-1928 (Regensburg, 1938); A. Orel,

F. S. Sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1939); O. E. Deutsch, in collaboration with Donald R. Wakeling, S.: Thematic Catalogue of all his Works in Chronological Order (London, 1951).

The centenary of Schubert's death in 1928 gave rise to a flood of articles in the musical press. See especially the Schubert numbers in that year of the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct.), 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft,' 'Music & Letters,' 'Die Musik,' the 'Chesterian,' etc.

E. Decsey dramatized Schubert's life in a play entitled Der unsterbliche Franz (music by J. Bittner; Vienna, 1930). The musical score of the popular operetta Blossom Time (Romberg) is based on melodies by Schubert.

Schubert, Louis, German violinist; b. Dessau, Jan. 27, 1828; d. Dresden, Sept. 17, 1884. He went to St. Petersburg at the age of 17; then was concertmaster of the City Theater in Königsberg for 6 years; eventually settled in Dresden and became a singing teacher. He produced the operettas Aus Sibirien (Königsberg, 1865), Die Rosenmädchen (Königsberg, 1860), Die Wahrsagerin (Dresden, 1864), Die beiden Geizigen (Altenburg, 1879), and Faustina Hasse (Altenburg, 1879); publ. a method for violin and a Gesangsschule in Liedern.

Schuberth, Julius (Ferdinand Georg), founder of the firm of 'J. Schuberth & Co.' of Leipzig and New York; b. Magdeburg, July 14, 1804; d. Leipzig, June 9, 1875. Established the Hamburg business in 1826; opened a branch at Leipzig, 1832, and at New York, 1850. His brother, Friedrich Wilhelm (b. 1817) took over the Hamburg house in 1853 (firm-name 'Fritz Schuberth'). Schuberth publ. the 'Kleine Hamburger Musikzeitung' (1840-50), the 'New Yorker Musikzeitung' (from 1867), and 'Schuberth's kleine Musikzeitung' (1871-72). In 1872 he founded the music library at Weimar known as the 'Liszt-Schuberth-Stiftung.'—In 1891 the business was purchased by Felix Siegel (d. Leipzig, July 4, 1920), the originator of the 'Musikalische Universalbibliothek.'

Schuberth, Karl, German cellist; b. Magdeburg, Feb. 25, 1811; d. Zürich, July 22, 1863. He studied in Magdeburg and Dessau; after a European tour, which included Russia (1835), was engaged as court musician in St. Petersburg, and remained there for 20 years. He then went to Switzerland for his health, and died there. He publ. 2 cello concertos, variations for cello with orch.; a string octet; 2 string quintets; 4 string quartets; and a cello sonata.

Schubiger, Anselm (baptismal names, Josef Allis), learned Swiss writer on music; b. Uznach, March 5, 1815; d. at the Monastery of Einsiedeln, March 14, 1888. He took holy orders in 1835, and assumed the clerical name Anselm. — Publications: Die Sängerschule St. Gallens (Einsiedeln, 1858); Die Pflege des Kirchengesanges und der Kirchenmusik in der deutschen katholischen Schweiz (Einsiedeln, 1873); Musikalische Spicilegien . . . (Berlin, 1876; a collection of miscellaneous essays on medieval music); also various papers publ. in special magazines.

Schuch (shooh), Ernst von, eminent Austrian conductor; b. Graz, Nov. 23, 1846; d. Dresden, May 10, 1914. After studying violin in Graz and Vienna, he became theater conductor in Breslau (1867); then conducted in Würzburg, Graz, and Basel; his first important engagement was with the Dresden Opera in 1872; he became court conductor there in 1873, and remained at that post without interruption for over 40 years, until his death. In 1897 he was given the rank of hereditary nobility, entitling him to add the nobiliary particle 'von' to his name. In Dresden he was a worthy continuator of the traditions established by Weber and Wagner, and earned a reputation as one of the finest opera conductors. He was moreover a man of great general culture and of progressive ideas. He brought out the operas Feuersnot, Salome, Elektra, and Rosenkavalier by Strauss, which had their world premières at the Dresden Opera; also included in his repertory operas by Puccini, then new to Germany. He seldom left Dresden, and his most extensive journey was undertaken for a brief appearance in New York in the spring of 1900 to direct 3 orchestral concerts. In 1875 he married Clementine Proska (real name, Procházká; b. Ödenburg, Feb. 12, 1850; d. Köttschenbroda, June 8, 1932), who was the principal coloratura soprano under Schuch's direction from 1873 till her retirement in 1904. Their daughter Liesel von Schuch (b. Dresden, Dec. 12, 1891) was coloratura soprano at the Dresden Opera from 1914, and was in 1935 appointed Kammer Sängerin. — Cf. L. Hartmann, Ernst Schuch und das moderne Kapellmeistertum in 'Nord und Süd' (May, 1896; Breslau); P. Sakolowski, Ernst von Schuch (Leipzig, 1901); F. von Schuch, Richard Strauss, Ernst von Schuch und Dresdens Oper (2nd ed., Leipzig, 1953).

Schucht, Jean F., German writer on music; b. Holzthalleben, Thuringia, Nov. 17, 1822;

d. Leipzig, March 30, 1894. He studied with Hauptmann and Spohr at Kassel, and with Schnyder von Wartensee at Frankfurt; from 1868 was in Leipzig as critic for the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik.' He publ. a Wegweiser in der Tonkunst (1859); Kleines Lexikon der Tonkunst; Partiturenkennntnis; Meyerbeers Leben und Bildungsgang (1869); Grundriss einer praktischen Harmonielehre (1876); a biography of Chopin (1880); wrote piano pieces and songs.

Schuecker, Edmund, Austrian harpist; b. Vienna, Nov. 16, 1860; d. Bad Kreuznach, Nov. 9, 1911. After studying with Zamara at the Vienna Cons., he played the harp in various orchestras; taught at the Leipzig Cons. (1884). In 1891 he went to America as harpist of the newly organized Chicago Symph.; was a member of the Pittsburgh Symph. (1903-04) and of the Philadelphia Orch. (1904-09). He wrote pieces for harp, of which a Mazurka became popular; also published the harp manuals Etüden- und Melodien-Album (4 books), Etüdenschule (3 books), 6 Virtuosenetüden, Orchestra-Studies (5 books), The Most Important Parts from Wagner's Operas (2 books).

Schuecker, Heinrich, Austrian-American harpist, brother of Edmund Schuecker; b. Vienna, Nov. 25, 1867; d. Boston, April 17, 1913. He studied at the Vienna Cons. (1878-84) with Zamara. In 1885 he was engaged as 1st harpist of the Boston Symph. Orch., and held this position until his death. He also taught harp at the New England Cons., Boston.

Schuecker, Joseph E., harpist, son of Edmund Schuecker; b. Leipzig, May 19, 1886; d. Los Angeles, Dec. 9, 1938. He studied with his father, and later at the Vienna Cons. with Zamara. From 1904 to 1909 he was 1st harpist of the Pittsburgh Symph. Orch.; in 1909 succeeded his father as harpist in the Philadelphia Orch.; from 1915 till 1920 taught at the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh; from 1926 till 1930, again played in the Pittsburgh Symph.; then lived in California. He was the author of a History of the Harp.

Schueller, Rudolf, conductor; b. Böhmisches Leipz., Czechoslovakia, July 31, 1884; d. Cleveland, Aug. 1, 1949. He studied at the Univ. of Prague; conducted opera in Berlin (1909-14); after World War I was engaged at the Rumanian Opera at Cluj (1920-24); in 1925 he settled in America; was head of the Opera School of the Cleveland Institute of Music; wrote operas and orchestral works.

Schuh, Willi, Swiss musicologist; b. Basel, Nov. 12 1900. He studied in Munich with Courvoisier, Sandberger, and Beer-Walbrunn, and in Bern with Ernst Kurth; Dr. phil., 1927; settled in Zürich as music critic for the 'Neue Züricher Zeitung'; joined the faculty of the Zürich Cons. — Books: Das Volkslied in der Schweiz (1932); Othmar Schoeck (1934); Ludwig Senfl (1938); Über Opern von Richard Strauss (1947); Zeitgenössische Musik (1947); Schweizer Musik der Gegenwart (1948); Von neuer Musik (a collection of reviews, etc.; 1955); brought out (with Refardt) the Schweizer Musikbuch (2 vols., 1939); edited music by Swiss composers; contributed numerous articles to various musical periodicals.

Schulhoff, Erwin, composer and pianist; great-grandnephew of Julius Schulhoff; b. Prague, June 8, 1894; d. in a concentration camp, Wülzburg, Germany, Aug. 18, 1942. He studied in Prague and in Vienna (1902-08); then in Leipzig with Max Reger and others (1908-10) and in Cologne (1910-14). Settling in Prague, he became a piano teacher; at the same time was active in modern-music circles; together with Alois Hába, he worked on the problems of quarter-tone music; traveled through France, England, and Russia as pianist. In his music (mostly for piano) he followed the modernistic ideas of the period between the two wars, emphasizing the grotesque and making use of atonal and polytonal devices. Several of his pieces were performed at the festivals of the International Society for Contemporary Music: string quartet (Venice, Sept. 3, 1925); violin sonata (Geneva, April 7, 1929); La Somnambule, a ballet (Oxford, July 24, 1931). His opera Plameny (Flames) was performed in Brno on Jan. 27, 1932.

Schulhoff, Julius, noted pianist and composer; b. Prague, Aug. 2, 1825; d. Berlin, March 13, 1898. He studied in Prague; proceeded to Paris, where he gave concerts under the patronage of Chopin, to whom he dedicated his first composition, an Allegro brillante. He made a long tour through Austria, England, Spain, and Southern Russia; returning to Paris, he was a successful teacher; after the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War (1870) he settled in Dresden; moved to Berlin shortly before his death. He publ. excellent salon music for piano; his Galop di bravura and Impromptu Polka were great favorites.

Schuller, Gunther, American horn player and composer; b. New York, Nov. 22, 1925. He played the French horn in the Cincinnati Symph. Orch.; was soloist in his horn concerto there (1944); later moved to New York and was engaged as 1st horn of the Metropolitan Opera Orch. — Works: cello concerto (1945); suite for woodwind quintet (1945); Vertiges d'Héros for orch. (1945); cello sonata (1946); Fantasia Concertante, for 3 oboes and piano (1947); Fantasia Concertante for 3 trombones and piano (1947); quartet for 4 double-basses (1947); trio for oboe, horn, and viola (1948); quintet for 4 horns and bassoon (1949); symph. for brass and percussion (1950); Dramatic Overture (1951); 5 pieces for 5 horns (1952); Recitative and Rondo for violin and piano (1953); quartet for flute and strings (1953); 12 by 11 for chamber orch. and jazz improvisation (1955); Contours for chamber orch. (1956).

Schulthess, Walter, Swiss conductor and composer; b. Zürich, July 24, 1894. He studied with Andreae in Zürich, with Courvoisier in Munich, and with Ansgor in Berlin; in 1918 settled in Zürich. As a composer, he excelled in lyric songs, in a style resembling Othmar Schoeck's. He also wrote 2 violin sonatas; Variationen for cello and orch.; concertino for piano and orch.; piano pieces. He was married to the pianist Stefi Geyer (1888-1956).

Schultz, Edwin, German baritone; b. Danzig, April 30, 1827; d. Tempelhof, near Berlin, May 20, 1907. He studied singing with Brandstätter in Berlin; conducted choral societies and concerts. In 1880 the Prussian Ministry of War commissioned him to compile a book of soldiers' songs. He publ. many male choruses, songs, duets, and the collection Meisterstücke für Pianoforte.

Schultz, Helmut, German musicologist; b. Frankfurt, Nov. 2, 1904; killed in battle, Waldburg, April 19, 1945. He studied musicology with Kroyer in Leipzig; in 1933 was appointed to the faculty of the Univ. of Leipzig. He publ. several books: Johann Vesque von Püttlingen (Regensburg, 1930); Instrumentenkunde (Leipzig, 1931); Das Madrigal als Formideal (1939); edited (with Robert Haas) the works of Hugo Wolf; also was editor of works by Haydn, Rosetti, etc.

Schultz, Svend, Danish composer; b. Nykøbing, Dec. 30, 1913; he studied at the Royal Cons. in Copenhagen (1933-38); became active as choral conductor; was music critic of Politiken (1942-49). In his music, he developed a neo-Classical style characterized by simplicity of form and a cumulative rhythmic drive. —Works: 3 operas, Bag Kulisserne (Copenhagen, May 26, 1949), Solbadet (Aarhus, Nov. 26, 1949), and Host (1950); a Sinfonia piccola (1941); an oratorio, Job (1945); woodwind quintet; 3 violin sonatas; piano pieces.

Schultze, Norbert, German composer of popular music; b. Brunswick, Jan. 26, 1911. He studied in Cologne and Munich; was theater conductor and composer of theatrical pieces; wrote the operettas Schwarzer Peter (Hamburg, Dec. 6, 1936; highly successful); the ballets: Der Struwwelpeter (1937), Max und Moritz (1938), etc., also film music. He is the composer of the celebrated song Lili Marlene, which was tremendously popular during World War II on both sides.

Schulz, August, German violinist, conductor, and composer; b. Lehre, near Brunswick, June 15, 1837; d. Brunswick, Feb. 12, 1909. He studied violin with Joachim; was violinist in the court orch. at Brunswick; then concertmaster at Detmold; returned to Brunswick as conductor of symphony concerts and choral societies. —Works: an opera, Der wilde Jäger (Brunswick, 1887); for chorus and orch.: Eine Sommernacht, Prinzessin Ilse, etc.; many male choruses; altogether nearly 200 opus numbers.

Schulz, Bartholomäus, Hieronymus, Jacob, and Michael. See Praetorius.

Schulz, Ferdinand, German choral conductor and composer; b. Kossar, near Krosen, Oct. 21, 1821; d. Berlin, May 27, 1897. He was a pupil of A. W. Bach and Dehn in Berlin; after serving as chorister, he became conductor of the Cäcilien-Verein in 1856. He wrote motets and other church music; publ. male choruses, songs, and piano pieces.

Schulz, Johann Abraham Peter, German composer; b. Lüneburg, March 31, 1747; d. Schwedt, June 10, 1800. He studied with Kirnberger in Berlin; from 1768 to 1773 was music master to a Polish princess; from 1776 to 1778, was music director of the French theater in Berlin; then was Kapellmeister to Prince Heinrich at Rheinsberg (1780-87); from 1787 to 1795 he was court conductor at Copenhagen; finally returned to Germany, where he was director of an opera troupe. A song composer of marked ability, he publ. in 1779 Gesänge am Clavier, in 1782 Lieder im Volkston, both printed together, with augmentations, as Lieder im Volkston in 1785; a 3rd book was publ. in 1790. His sacred songs are Uzens lyrische Gedichte (1784) and Religiöse Oden und Lieder (1786). Chansons italiennes (1782), 4 Lieder with piano, and a Rundgesang (round) for mixed voices, were also published. Among his stage works are: Das Opfer der Nymphen (Berlin, 1774); operetta, La Fée Urgèle (1782; in German as Was den Damen gefällt); operetta, Clarisse, oder das unbekannte Dienstmädchen (1783); tragic melodrama, Minona (1786; publ.); Le Barbier de Séville (Rheinsberg, 1786); the opera, Aline, reine de Golconde (Rheinsberg, 1787); the following were produced in Copenhagen: Høstgildet (The Harvest Home, Sept. 16, 1790); Indtoget (Entry; Feb. 26, 1793); Peters Bryllup (Peter's Wedding; Dec. 12, 1793). He further wrote church music, small instrumental works, a piano sonata, and various other pieces for piano (Musikalische Belustigung, Musikalische Badinage, Musikalischer Luftball, etc.); publ. Entwurf einer neuen und leichtverständlichen Musiktablatuur . . . (1786; merely the old organ tablature); Gedanken über den Einfluss der Musik auf die Bildung eines Volks (1790); and claimed authorship of Wahre Grundsätze zum Gebrauch der Harmonie (1773; publ. as Kirnberger's). —Cf. K. Klunger, J. A. P. Schulz in seinen volkstümlichen Liedern (Leipzig, 1909); O. K. Riess, J. A. P. Schulz' Leben (dissertation, Leipzig, 1913); J. F. Reichardt, J. A. P. Schulz (new ed., Kassel, 1948).

Schulz, Johann Philipp Christian, German conductor and composer; b. Langensalza, Feb. 1, 1773; d. Leipzig, Jan. 30, 1827. He studied with Schicht at Leipzig; from 1810 was conductor of the Gewandhaus concerts. He published overtures to Faust and Die Jungfrau von Orleans; dances interpolated into Faust (arranged for piano); a Salvum fac regem for 4 voices with brass; marches, etc.; songs with piano.

Schulz, Leo, cellist; b. Posen, March 28, 1865; d. La Crescenta, Calif., Aug. 12, 1944. He was a child prodigy, and appeared in public at the age of 5; then studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; was 1st cellist with the Berlin Philharmonic (1885) and the Gewandhaus Orch. in Leipzig (1886-89); then settled in America; was 1st cellist of the Boston Symp. (1889-98), of the N. Y. Philharmonic (1899-1906); taught in various schools; wrote overtures, string quartets, and some cello music; edited Cello Classics (2 vols.), Cello Album (2 books), and Cello Composers (2 vols.).

Schulz-Beuthen (-boi'ten), Heinrich, German composer; b. Beuthen, June 19, 1838; d. Dresden, March 12, 1915. He was destined for the career of civil engineer; while a student at the Univ. of Breslau, he learned to play the piano and attempted composition; produced a 'Singspiel,' Fridolin (Breslau, 1862), then went to study at the Leipzig Cons., with Moscheles (piano) and Hauptmann (composition). In 1866 he went to Zürich, where he remained until 1880; then lived in Dresden (1880-93) and Vienna (1893-95); finally settled in Dresden, where he became prof. at the Cons. He was an ardent disciple of Liszt and Wagner; during his lifetime he was regarded as a significant composer. —Works: 8 symphonies: No. 1, Dem Andenken Haydns; No. 2, Frühlingsfeier; No. 3, Sinfonia maestosa; No. 4, Schön Elsbeth; No. 5, Reformationssymphonie (with organ); No. 6, König Lear (with male chorus); No. 7 (expanded from a string quartet); No. 8, Siegessymphonie; the symph. poems Mittelalterliche Volksszene, Des Meeres und der Liebe Wellen, Beethoven-Hymnus, Ein Pharaonenbegräbnis, Wilhelm Tell, Sturmesmythe; overtures; orch. suites; Symphonisches Konzert for piano and orch.; a string quintet; a wind octet; a string trio; etc.; a number of piano works (Heroische Sonata, Erinnerung an die Jugendzeit, Präludium und Fuge); several sacred choral works; the opera Aschenbrödel (Zürich, 1879; text by Mathilde Wesendonk) and 4 other operas. —Cf. K. Mey, H. Schulz-Beuthen (Leipzig, 1909); A. Zosel, H. Schulz-Beuthen (Würzburg, 1931).

Schulz-Dornburg, Rudolf, German conductor; b. Würzburg, March 31, 1891; d. Gmund-am-Tegernsee, Aug. 16, 1949. He studied in Cologne, where he became a choral director; then conducted opera in Mannheim, Münster, and Essen; in 1934 settled in Berlin as radio conductor; from 1945 till 1948 was general music director in Lübeck. He arranged for performance the opera Seelewig by S.T. Staden (q.v.).

Schulz-Evler, Andrey, Polish pianist; b. Radom, Dec. 12, 1852; d. Warsaw, May 15, 1905. He studied at the Warsaw Cons., and later with Tausig in Berlin; was prof. of piano at the Kharkov Music School (1888-1904); publ. 52 piano pieces and songs; his transcription of the Blue Danube Waltz was very popular with pianists for a time.

Schulz-Schwerin, Karl, German pianist; b. Schwerin, Jan. 3, 1845; d. Mannheim, May 24, 1913. He studied at the Stern Cons. in Berlin (1862-65) with Hans von Bülow, Stern, and Weitzmann. He was court pianist to the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg; then taught at Stern's Cons. in Berlin (1885-1901); from 1901 lived in Mannheim. —Works: a symphony, overtures to Torquato Tasso and Die Braut von Messina; Serenata giocosa, In Memoriam, and Jubiläums-Festmarsch for orch.; Sanctus, Osanna, Benedictus, Ave Maria, etc.. for soli, chorus, and orch.; piano pieces.

Schuman, William Howard, eminent American composer; b. New York, Aug. 4, 1910. He studied at the Malkin Cons. in N. Y., with Max Persin (harmony); then took lessons in counterpoint with Charles Haubiel; in 1933 he entered Teachers College, Columbia Univ. (B. S. 1935; M. A. 1937); attended the Mozarteum Academy in Salzburg during the summer of 1935; returning to N. Y., he became instructor at Sarah Lawrence College; on March 27, 1936, married Frances Prince. In 1936 he also began taking courses with Roy Harris at a summer session of the Juilliard School of Music. He began to spring into national prominence when his American Festival Overture was given by Koussevitzky and the Boston Symph. (1939), and his 3rd string quartet by the Coolidge String Quartet (1940); in 1941 Koussevitzky performed his 3rd symphony, and in 1942 Rodzinski his 4th at Cleveland; in a brief interval Schuman became one of the leading American composers; held 2 Guggenheim Fellowships, in 1939 and in 1940. He continued to teach at Sarah Lawrence College until 1945, when he became director of publication for G. Schirmer, Inc. (resigned in 1952); in 1945, too, he was appointed president of the Juilliard School of Music. He has won many awards: the Koussevitzky Music Foundation Award, the first Pulitzer Prize in music, Music Critics Circle of N. Y. Award, the Composition Award of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, etc. His music is characterized by great emotional tension, and rhythmic vivacity; the contrapuntal structures reach great complexity. In several of his works he employs explicit American melorhythms, but his general style is cosmopolitan in its thematic content and treatment. —Works: a 'baseball opera' The Mighty Casey (Hartford, Conn., May 4, 1953); ballets: Under-tow (choreographer: Antony Tudor; N. Y., April 10, 1945), Night Journey (Martha Graham, Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 17, 1948), Judith, choreographic poem for orch. (Martha Graham, Louisville, Ky., Jan. 4, 1950); for orch.: symph. no. 1 (N. Y., Oct. 21, 1936), symph. no. 2 (N. Y., May 25, 1938), symph. no. 3 (Boston, Oct. 17, 1941), symph. no. 4 (Cleveland, Jan. 22, 1942), Symphony for Strings (his 5th symph.; Boston, Nov. 12, 1943), symph. no. 6 (Dallas, Feb. 27, 1949), American Festival Overture (Boston, Oct. 6, 1939), concerto for piano and small orch. (N. Y., Jan. 13, 1943), Prayer in Time of War (Pittsburgh, Feb. 13, 1943), William Billings Overture (N. Y., Feb. 17, 1944), Circus Overture (Philadelphia, July 20, 1944), violin concerto (1947; Boston, Feb. 10, 1950, Isaac Stern soloist; revised 1954 and 1958), Credendum (Cincinnati, Nov. 4, 1955), New England Triptych (Miami, Oct. 28, 1956); for band: Newsreel (also orch.; 1941), George Washington Bridge (1950), Chester, overture (1956); choral works: 4 Canonic Choruses (original title, Chorale Canons) for mixed voices (1932-33), Pioneers! for 8-part mixed chorus, after Walt Whitman (1937), Choral Etude, for mixed chorus (1937), Prologue, for mixed chorus and orch. (1939), Prelude for women's voices (1939), This is Our Time, secular cantata for mixed chorus and orch. (1940), Requiescat, for women's chorus (1942), Holiday Song, for mixed chorus (1942), A Free Song, secular cantata for mixed chorus and orch., after Walt Whitman (Boston, March 26, 1943), Te Deum, for mixed chorus (1944), Truth Shall Deliver, for men's voices (1946), 4 Rounds on Famous Words (1957), The Lord Has a Child, hymn (1957); The Earth is Born, music for a film (1957); 4 string quartets (1936, 1937, 1939, 1950); Quartettino for 4 bassoons (1939); 3-Score Set for piano (1943); Voyage, a cycle of 5 pieces for piano (1953); songs. —Cf. N. Broder, The Music of William Schuman, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1945); F. R. Schreiber and V. Persichetti, William Schuman (N. Y., 1954).

Schumann, Camillo, German organist and composer, brother of Georg Schumann; b. Königstein, March 10, 1872; d. Gottleuba, Dec. 29, 1946. He learned the rudiments of music from his father, then studied with Jadassohn and Reinecke at the Leipzig Cons. After further study with Adolf Bargiel in Berlin (1894-96) he became organist at the church in Eisenach. For some years before his death he lived in retirement at Gottleuba. He was a prolific composer, especially noted for his organ works (5 sonatas and numerous smaller pieces); also wrote 6 cantatas, 3 piano trios, 5 cello sonatas, 2 clarinet sonatas, 2 violin sonatas, and 30 albums of piano pieces. About 60 of his compositions have been published.

Schumann, Clara (née Wieck), famous pianist, wife of Robert Schumann; b. Leipzig, Sept. 13, 1819; d. Frankfurt, May 20, 1896. She was the daughter of Friedrich Wieck; trained by her father from her fifth year; played in public for the 1st time on Oct. 20, 1828; made tours from 1832, and during a sojourn in Vienna (1836) received the title of Imperial Chamber Virtuoso. At Paris she had great success in 1839. On Sept. 12, 1840, she was married to Schumann, despite the stubborn opposition of her father to this union. With Schumann she made a tour of Russia as a pianist (1844); appeared with Jenny Lind in Vienna (1846). After Schumann's death (1856) she went with her children to Berlin, living for some years with her mother, who had been divorced from Wieck and had married the music teacher Adolf Bargiel (d. Feb. 4, 1841). From 1856 till 1888 she played regularly in England. In 1863 she moved to Lichtenthaler, near Baden-Baden. In 1878-79 she taught piano in Hoch's Cons. at Frankfurt. She was a masterly and authoritative interpreter of her husband's compositions; later she became an equally admirable interpreter of Brahms, her lifelong friend. She was completely free of all mannerisms, and impressed her audiences chiefly by the earnestness of her regard for the music she played. She was a composer in her own right; wrote a piano concerto and numerous character pieces for piano; also some songs; Schumann made use of her melodies in several of his works. She wrote cadenzas to Beethoven's concertos in C minor and G major; edited the Breitkopf & Hartel ed. of Schumann's works, and some of his early correspondence; also edited finger exercises from Czerny's piano method. —Cf. A. von Meichsner, Friedrich Wieck und seine Töchter Clara und Marie (Leipzig, 1875); La Mara, Clara Schumann, in vol. V of Musikalische Studienköpfe (Leipzig, 1882; 3rd ed., 1902); B. Litzmann, Clara Schumann, Ein Künstlerleben nach Tagebüchern und Briefen (3 vols., Leipzig, 1902-08; English transl. in 2 vols., abridged, London, 1913); W. Kleefeld, Clara Schumann (Bielefeld, 1910); Florence May, The Girlhood of Clara Schumann (London, 1912); F. Schumann, Brahms and Clara Schumann, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1916); Eugenie Schumann, Erinnerungen (1925; English transl., 1927); B. Litzmann,

Letters of Clara Schumann and Johannes Brahms (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1927; English transl., N. Y., 1927); K. Höcker, Clara Schumann (1938); J. N. Burk, Clara Schumann (N. Y., 1940); A. De Lara, Clara Schumann's Teaching, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1945); L. Henning, Die Freundschaft Clara Schumanns mit Johannes Brahms (Zürich, 1952); W. Quednau, Clara Schumann (Berlin, 1955); Margaret and Jean Alley, A Passionate Friendship; Clara Schumann and Brahms (London, 1956; contains a selection of letters). See also the bibliography under Robert Schumann.

Schumann, Elisabeth, noted soprano; b. Merseburg, June 13, 1885; d. New York, April 23, 1952. She studied in Berlin and Hamburg; made her début at the Hamburg Opera in 1910; on Nov. 20, 1914 she made her American début as Sophie in Der Rosenkavalier at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y.; then returned to Germany; sang in Munich in 1919; in 1921 she toured with Richard Strauss in the U. S.; subsequently was engaged at the Vienna Opera. In 1938 she settled in the U. S.; taught at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia; became an American citizen in 1944. —Publ. German Song (London, 1948).

Schumann, Georg (Alfred), German composer and choral conductor; b. Königstein, Oct. 25, 1866; d. Berlin, May 23, 1952. He studied with his father, the town music director, and with his grandfather, a cantor; then took courses in Dresden and at the Leipzig Cons. with Reinecke and Jadassohn; received the Beethoven Prize in 1887. He conducted a choral society in Danzig (1890-96) and the Bremen Philharmonic Orch. (1896-99). In 1900 he became conductor of the Singakademie, Berlin; in 1934 he was elected president of the Berlin Akademie der Künste. —Works: for orch.: Zur Karnevalszeit suite; Liebesfrühling, overture; Lebensfreude, overture; 2 symphonies; chamber music: 2 violin sonatas, 2 piano quintets, cello sonata, piano trio, piano quartet; choral works with orch.: the oratorio Ruth (1909), Amor und Psyche, Totenklage, Sehnsucht, Das Tränenkrüglein; numerous songs; for piano: Stimmungsbilder, Traumbilder, Fantastie-Etüden, Harzbilder. —Cf. P. Hielscher, Georg Schumann, in vol. 1 of 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1906); H. Biehle, Georg Schumann (Münster, 1925).

Schumann, Robert (Alexander), great German composer; b. Zwickau, Saxony, June 8, 1810; d. Eendenich, near Bonn, July 29, 1856. He was the youngest son of a bookseller, and his first music lessons (about 1818) were on the piano from the organist of the Zwickau Marienkirche. His attempts at composition date from his seventh year; in his eleventh, without instruction, he wrote choral and orchestral works. He attended the Zwickau Gymnasium from 1820-28, toward the end of his term developing a marked predilection for the romantic works of Byron and Jean Paul Richter. In 1826 his father wished him to study under Carl M. von Weber, but Weber died, as did Schumann's father shortly thereafter. In 1828 Schumann matriculated at Leipzig Univ. as studiosus juris, though he gave more attention to the philosophical lectures. In 1829 he went to Heidelberg, drawn thither chiefly by the fame of Thibaut (prof. of law, but a profound student of music), and began to apply himself seriously to musical study, aided by his dexterity as a pianist. In the autumn of 1830 he obtained his mother's permission to return to Leipzig in order to devote himself to music. He lived with Friedrich Wieck, under whom he studied the piano; and also took a course in composition under H. Dorn, though his industry was principally concentrated on piano practice. An unfortunate experiment (the endeavor to obtain independence of the fingers by suspending the fourth finger of the right hand in a sling while practicing with the others) ended in 1832 his bright prospects as a piano virtuoso. Thenceforward he gave himself up to composition and literary work. As a composer, his published works (op. 1-23) up to the beginning of 1840 (an important date) are exclusively for the piano; Liszt, Henselt, and Clara Wieck (the daughter of his instructor and host) played them in public. In 1834 Schumann founded, with J. Knorr, L. Schunke, and Wieck, the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik,' which Schumann edited alone from 1835-44. It entered the field as an exponent of liberal and progressive musical art, in opposition to the rapid productions of the Italian stage, to the then fashionable pianists, and to all shallow or retrograde tendencies. Schumann's numerous essays and criticisms (signed Florestan, Eusebius, Meister Raro, or with the numerals '2' and '12') show what musical journalism can be when actuated by the loftiest motives, and based on real and intimate knowledge of the subjects treated. During the succeeding decades it exercised a potent influence for good; Schumann was among the first to herald Chopin's genius (1834); and one of his last papers was the famous 'Neue Bahnen' (1853) on Brahms.

In the meantime he had fallen in love with Clara Wieck; owing to her father's determined opposition their marriage did not take place until 1840, the year in which the degree of Dr. phil. was conferred upon Schumann by the University of Jena. He had spent one year, 1838-39, in Vienna, hoping to better his fortunes by establishing himself and his paper in that city, an attempt which failed. From his marriage year, too, dates the beginning of his career as a song composer, and some of his finest lyrical gems were then produced, including the song-cycles to poems by Heine (op. 24) and Eichendorff (op. 39), the Frauenliebe und Leben (op. 42), and the Dichterliebe to Heine's words (op. 48). In 1841 he wrote his first symphony, speedily followed by three string quartets, op. 41, the piano quintet, op. 44, and the piano quartet, op. 47, also his most beautiful choral work, Das Paradies und die Peri (1843). In 1843 he was invited by Mendelssohn to assume the position of teacher (piano, composition, and playing from score) at the newly founded Conservatorium in Leipzig; Schumann introduced the pedal-piano, for preparatory organ practice, into the Cons., which possessed no organ for ten years. In January, 1844, he undertook a concert tour to Russia with his wife; in the autumn of the same year he moved to Dresden; his duties in the Leipzig Cons. were uncongenial, and it is probable that Mendelssohn, whom Schumann greatly admired, did not fully appreciate the latter's genius. Schumann likewise retired from the editorship of the 'Neue Zeitschrift,' being succeeded in 1845 by K. F. Brendel. In Dresden he lived until 1850, giving private lessons and composing industriously; to this period belong the great C major symphony op. 61 (1846), the opera Genoveva (1848), and the piano trio op. 80 (1847; one of the finest of its class). In 1847 he became the conductor of the 'Liedertafel,' and in 1848 organized the 'Chorgesang-Verein.' He was called to Düsseldorf in 1850 to succeed Ferdinand Hiller as town musical director (conductor of the Subscription Concerts and the Musical Society). He held this position until the autumn of 1853, when signs of insanity, which had appeared as far back as 1833, and still more alarmingly in 1845, compelled him to resign; for some time his assistant (and successor) Tausch had relieved him of much of the work. On Feb. 6, 1854, the disorder reached a climax; he abruptly left the room in which some friends were assembled, and threw himself into the Rhine; rescued from drowning, he had to be conveyed to an asylum at Endenich, near Bonn, remaining here, with but few lucid intervals, until the end. In 1880 a monument was erected on his grave in the churchyard at Bonn, opposite the Sternentor. Schumann was a leader of the German Romantic school, and perhaps its most powerful promoter as both a composer and a writer. At the very outset, his individuality found full expression. His mastery of detail, his concentrated passion and profound emotion, are displayed to best advantage in the smaller forms, the piano pieces and songs—the most suitable mediums for presenting the subtle shadings and artistic refinements characteristic of his lyrical genius. Yet—to name but a few—the first two symphonies and the piano concerto are unsurpassed in the post-Beethoven epoch; the piano quintet, the Études symphoniques, the C major Fantasie, the F# minor and the G minor piano sonatas, rank with the grandest works of their kind. Together with Chopin and Liszt he must be regarded as the founder of the modern piano technique, exploiting the utmost possibilities of the instrument.—A complete edition of his compositions, in 34 vols., edited by Clara Schumann, was publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel (1886-93); in 1893 Brahms edited a supplementary volume.

WORKS

FOR THE STAGE: opera, Genoveva, op. 81 (Leipzig, June 25, 1850); music to Byron's Manfred, op. 115; scenes from Goethe's Faust.—VOCAL WITH ORCH.: cantata Das Paradies und die Peri, op. 50, for solo, chorus, and orch. (after T. Moore's Lalla Rookh); Adventlied, op. 71, for soprano, chorus, and orch.; Beim Abschied zu singen, op. 84, for chorus with woodwind or piano; Requiem für Mignon, op. 98b; Nachlied, op. 108, for chorus and orch.; for soli, chorus, and orch.: cantata Der Rose Pilgerfahrt, op. 112; ballade Der Königssohn, op. 116; ballade Des Sängers Fluch, op. 139; four ballades Vom Pagen und der Königstochter, op. 140; ballade Das Glück von Edenhall, op. 143, for men's chorus and orch.; Neujahrslied, op. 144, for chorus and orch.; Missa sacra, op. 147, with orch.; Requiem Mass, op. 148, with orch.—CHORUSES A CAPPELLA: 6 4-part songs for men's voices, op. 33; 5 songs (Burns) for mixed chorus, op. 55; 4 songs for mixed chorus, op. 59; 3 songs for men's chorus, op. 62; 7 Ritornelle in canon form, for men's voices, op. 65; 5 Romances and Ballades for chorus (2 sets), op. 67 and 75; 6 Romances for women's voices, with piano ad lib. (2 sets), op. 69 and 91; motet (Rückert) Verzweifle nicht im Schmerzens-tal, for double men's chorus, organ ad lib., op. 93 (revised with orch., 1852); 5 Jagd- lieder (Laube) for men's chorus, 4 horns ad lib., op. 137; 4 songs for double chorus, op. 141.—VOCAL WITH PIANO: 3 poems by Geibel, op. 29 (No. 1, for 2 sopranos; No. 2, for 3 sopranos; No. 3, for small chorus); 4 duets for soprano and tenor, op. 34, and 4 duets, op. 78; 3 2-part songs, op. 43; Spanisches Liederspiel for one voice or S.A.T.B., op. 74; Minnespiel from Rückert's 'Liebesfrühling,' for one or several voices, op. 101; Mädchenlieder, for 2 sopranos, op. 103; 3 songs for 3 women's voices, op. 114; ten Spanische Liebeslieder for one or several voices, with 4-hand accompaniment, op. 138; the ballads Belsazar (op. 51), Der Handschuh (op. 87), Schön Hedwig (op. 106; for declamation with piano), and Zwei Balladen, op. 122 (No. 1, Ballade vom Haideknaben; No. 2, Die Flüchtlinge; both for declamation with piano); Liederkreis (Heine), song-cycle, op. 24, and Liederkreis (Heine), 12 poems by Eichendorff, op. 39; Myrthen, op. 25; Lieder und Gesänge, 5 sets (op. 27, 51, 77, 96, 127); 3 poems by Geibel, op. 30; 3 songs, op. 31; 12 poems (Kerner), op. 35; 6 poems (Rückert), op. 36; 12 poems (Rückert), composed with Clara Schumann, op. 37; 5 songs for low voice, op. 40; Frauenliebe und -Leben, op. 42; Dichterliebe, op. 48; Romanzen und Balladen, 4 sets (op. 45, 49, 53, 64); Liederalbum für die Jugend, op. 79; 6 songs, op. 89; 6 poems by Lenau, and Requiem, op. 90; 6 songs from Byron's 'Hebrew Melodies,' op. 95 (with piano or harp); nine Lieder und Gesänge from Goethe's Wilhelm Meister, op. 98a; 7 songs, op. 104; 6 songs, op. 107; 4 Husarenlieder for baritone, op. 117; 3 Waldlieder, op. 119; 5 heitere Gesänge, op. 125; Gedichte der Königin Maria Stuart, op. 135; 4 songs, op. 142; Der deutsche Rhein (no opus number).—FOR ORCH.: 4 symphonies: No. 1, op. 38, in B $\flat$ ; No. 2, op. 61, in C; No. 3, op. 97, in E $\flat$  ('Rhenish' symphony); No. 4, op. 120, in D minor; Ouvertüre, Scherzo und Finale, op. 52; 4 concert overtures (Die Braut von Messina, op. 100; Festouvertüre, op. 123; Julius Caesar, op. 128; Hermann und Dorothea, op. 136); piano concerto in A minor, op. 54; Konzertstück (Introduction and Allegro appassionato) in G, for piano and orch., op. 92; Konzert-Allegro for piano and orch., in D minor, op. 134; Konzertstück for 4 horns, op. 86; cello concerto, op. 129; Fantasia for violin with orch., op. 131; violin concerto (1853; publ. 1937).—CHAMBER MUSIC: piano quintet in E $\flat$ , op. 44; 3 string quartets, in A minor, F, and A, op. 41; piano quartet in E $\flat$ , op. 47; 3 piano trios (No. 1, in D minor, op. 63; No. 2, in F, op. 80; No.

3, in G minor, op. 110); 4 Fantasiestücke for piano, violin, and cello, op. 88; Adagio and Allegro for piano and horn, op. 70; 3 Fantasiestücke for piano and clarinet, op. 73; 3 Romanzen for piano and oboe, op. 94; 5 Stücke im Volkston for piano and cello, op. 102; 2 sonatas for piano and violin (No. 1, in A minor, op. 105; No. 2, in D minor, op. 121); 4 Märchenbilder for piano and viola, op. 113; 4 Märchenerzählungen for piano and clarinet, op. 132.—FOR ORGAN (or pedal-piano): 6 studies in canon-form, op. 56; Skizzen für den Pedalfügel, op. 58; six fugues on B-A-C-H, op. 60.—FOR PIANO: op. 1, Variations on A-B-E-G-G; op. 2, Papillons; op. 3, Studies after Paganini's Caprices; op. 4, Intermezzi; op. 5, Impromptus on theme by Clara Wieck; op. 6, Davidsbündlertänze; op. 7, Toccata; op. 8, Allegro; op. 9, Carnaval; op. 10, six Studies on Paganini's Caprices; op. 11, Sonata No. 1, in F $\sharp$  minor; op. 12, Fantasiestücke (2 books); op. 13, Études symphoniques; op. 14, Sonata No. 2, in F minor; op. 15, thirteen Kinder-scenen; op. 16, Kreisleriana; op. 17, Fantasia in C; op. 18, Arabeske; op. 19, Blumenstück; op. 20, Humoreske; op. 21, Novelletten (4 books); op. 22, Sonata No. 3, in G minor ('Concert sans orchestre'); op. 23, Nachtstücke; op. 26, Faschingsschwank aus Wien; op. 28, three Romanzen; op. 32, Scherzo, Gigue, Romanze und Fughette; op. 68, Album für die Jugend; op. 72, four Fugues; op. 76, four Marches; op. 82, Wald-scenen; op. 99, Bunte Blätter; op. 111, three Fantasiestücke; op. 118, three Sonatas for the Young; op. 124, Albumblätter; op. 126, seven pieces in fughetta-form; op. 133, Gesänge der Frühe; also a Scherzo (original in Sonata op. 14), a Presto passionato (original finale of Sonata op. 22); and a canon on An Alexis.—PIANO 4 HANDS: op. 66, Bilder aus dem Osten; op. 85, 12 vierhändige Klavierstücke für kleine und grosse Kinder; op. 109, Ballszenen; op. 130, Kinderball; op. 46, Andante and Variations in B $\flat$  (for 2 pianos, 4 hands).—WRITINGS: 'Gesammelte Schriften über Musik und Musiker,' a collection of his articles in the 'Neue Zeitschrift' (1854; 4 vols.; 5th ed. revised by M. Kreisig, 1914; English transl., London, 1877). A judicious selection from the complete writings, edited by H. Simon, was publ. under the same title as the original ed. (3 vols.; Leipzig, 1888-89); a selection of Schumann's critical reviews, transl. into English by P. Rosenfeld, was publ. in N. Y., 1946.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.—A. BIOGRAPHY: J. W. von Wasielewski, R. S. (Dresden, 1858; 4th ed., 1906; English transl., Boston, 1871); A.

- Reissmann, R. S. Sein Leben und seine Werke (Berlin, 1865; 3rd ed., 1879; English transl., London, 1886); La Mara, S., in vol. I of Musikalische Studienköpfe (Leipzig, 1868; 10th ed., reprinted separately, 1911); A. Niggli, R. S. (Basel, 1879); P. Spitta, Ein Lebensbild R. S.'s (Leipzig, 1882); J. A. Fuller-Maitland, S. (London, 1884; new ed., 1913); H. Erler, R. S.'s Leben aus seinen Briefen, 2 vols. (Berlin, 1887; 2nd ed., 1912); H. Reimann, R. S. (Leipzig, 1887); R. Batka, S. (Leipzig, 1893); H. Abert, R. S. (Berlin, 1903; 3rd ed., 1918); A. W. Paterson, S. (London, 1903; revised ed., 1934); L. Schneider and M. Mareschal, S. Sa vie et ses œuvres (Paris, 1905); E. J. Oldmeadow, S. (London, 1905); C. Maclair, S. (Paris, 1906); E. Wolff, R. S. (Berlin, 1906); J. Hartog, R. A. S. en sijne werken (Haarlem, 1910); A. Steiner, S. (Zürich, 1911); M. D. Calvocoressi, S. (Paris, 1912); W. Dahms, S. (Berlin, 1916); H. v. d. Pfordten, R. S. (1920); F. Niecks, R. S. (London, 1925; valuable); H. Bedford, R. S. (N. Y., 1925); R. Pitrou, La Vie intérieure de R. S. (Paris, 1925); V. Basch, S. (Paris, 1926); V. Basch, La Vie douloureuse de S. (Paris, 1928; in English, N. Y., 1931); H. Tessmer, R. S. (Stuttgart, 1930); Eugénie Schumann, R. S. ein Lebensbild meines Vaters (Leipzig, 1931); A. Colling, La Vie de R. S. (Paris, 1931); M. Beaufils, S. (Paris, 1932); C. Valabrega, S. (Modena, 1934); W. Gertler, R. S. sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1936); W. Korte, R. S. (Potsdam, 1937); E. Bücken, R. S. (Cologne, 1940); W. Boetticher, R. S., Einführung in Persönlichkeit und Werk (Berlin, 1941); W. Boetticher, R. S. in seinen Schriften und Briefen (Berlin, 1942); R. H. Schaffner, Florestan: The Life and Works of R. S. (N. Y., 1945); R. Petzoldt, R. S. (Leipzig, 1947); J. Chissell, S. (London, 1948); P. Sutermeister, R. S., sein Leben nach Briefen (Zürich, 1949); K. H. Wörner, R. S. (Zürich, 1949); A. Cœuroy, R. S. (Paris, 1950); E. Müller, R. S. (Olten, 1950); P. & W. Rehberg, R. S. (Zürich, 1954); M. Brion, S. et l'âme romantique (Paris, 1954; in English as S. and the Romantic Age, London, 1956); G. Eismann, R. S. ein Quellenwerk über sein Leben und Schaffen (2 vols., Leipzig, 1956); R. Münich, Aus R. S.'s Briefen und Schriften (Weimar, 1956); Percy M. Young, Tragic Muse: The Life and Works of R. S. (London, 1957); also P. J. A. Möbius, Über R. S.'s Krankheit (Halle, 1906).—B. CRITICISM, APPRECIATION: A. W. Ambros, R. S. Tage und Werke, in Kultur-historische Bilder aus dem Musikleben der Gegenwart (Leipzig, 1860); H. Deiters, S. als Schriftsteller, in 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung' (Nos. 47-49; 1865); L. Mesnard, Un Successeur de Beethoven; Étude sur R. S. (Paris, 1876); S. Bagge, R. S. und seine Faustszenen, in Waldersee's 'Sammlung' (Leipzig 1879); P. Graf von Waldersee, Über S.'s Manfred, in Waldersee's 'Sammlung' (Leipzig, 1880); F. G. Jansen, Die Davidsbündler. Aus R. S.'s Sturm- und Drangperiode (Leipzig, 1883); J. W. von Wasielewski, Schumanniana (Bonn, 1883); B. Vogel, R. S.'s Klaviertonpoesie (Leipzig, 1886); E. David, Les Mendelssohn-Bartholdy et R. S. (Paris, 1887); V. Joss, Fr. Wieck und sein Verhältniss zu R. S. (Dresden, 1900); M. d'Albert, R. S. son œuvre pour piano (Paris, 1904); F. Kerst, S.-Brevier (Berlin, 1905); H. Kretzschmar, R. S. als Ästhetiker, in 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1906); D. G. Mason, The Romantic Composers (New York, 1906); M. Katz, Die Schilderung des musikalischen Eindrucks bei S. (Giessen, 1910); Marie Wieck, Aus dem Kreise Wieck-S. (Dresden, 1912; 2nd ed., 1914); L. Hirschberg, R. S.'s Tondichtungen balladischen Charakters (Langensalza, 1913); E. V. Wolff, R. S.'s Lieder in ersten und späteren Fassungen (Leipzig, 1914); R. Pugno, Leçons écrites sur S. (Paris, 1914); R. Hohenemser, Formale Eigentümlichkeiten in R. S.'s Klaviermusik, in 'Sandberger-Festschrift' (1919); W. H. Hadow, Studies in Modern Music, 1st series (London, 1892; 11th ed., 1926); P. Frenzel, R. S. und Goethe (Leipzig, 1926); G. Minotti, Die Enträtselung des Sch. schen Sphinx-Geheimnisses (Leipzig, 1926); G. Minotti, Die Enträtselung des Sch. schen Abegg-Geheimnisses, in 'Zeitschrift für Musik' (July-Aug., 1927); O. Bie, Das deutsche Lied (Berlin, 1926; pp. 75-131); J. A. Fuller-Maitland, S.'s Piano Works (London, 1927); J. A. Fuller-Maitland, S.'s Concerted Chamber Music (London, 1929); M. Ninck, S. und die Romantik in der Musik (Heidelberg, 1929); H. H. Rosenwald, Geschichte des deutschen Liedes zwischen Schubert und S. (Berlin, 1930); W. Schwarz, R. S. und die Variation (Kassel, 1932); H. Kötz, Der Einfluss Jean Pauls auf R. S. (Weimar, 1933); G. Wilcke, Tonalität und Modulation im Streichquartett Mendelssohns und S.'s (Leipzig, 1933); G. Minotti, Die Geheimdokumente der Davidsbündler (Leipzig, 1934); R. Hernried, Four Unpublished Compositions by R. S., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1942); G. Abraham, ed., S. (N. Y., 1951); G. Abraham, Schumann's Jugendsinfonie in G minor in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1951); M. Beaufils, La Musique de piano de S. (Paris, 1951); also Eugenie Schumann, Erinnerungen (1925; in English, London, 1927).—C. CORRESPONDENCE: Clara Schumann, S.S. Jugendbriefe. Nach den Originalen mitgeteilt (Leipzig, 1885; 4th ed., 1912; in English, London, 1888); F. G. Jansen, R. S.S. Briefe (Leipzig, 1886; augmented ed., 1904; in English, London, 1890); J. Gensel, S.S. Briefwechsel mit Henriette Voigt (Leipzig, 1892); K. Storck, S.S. Briefe in Auswahl (Stuttgart, 1906; in English, London, 1907); M. Crémieux, Lettres choisies de R. S. (Paris, 1909); A. Schumann, Der junge S., Dichtungen und Briefe (Leipzig, 1910); Aus S.S. Kreisen (unpubl. letters from and to S.) in 'Die Musik' (No. 14; 1914).—D. CATALOGUE, ETC.: A. Dörfel, Thematischer Katalog der Werke R. S.S. (Leipzig, 1870); M. Kreisig, Stammbaum der Familie Sch. (genealogy; 1931); R. Petzoldt, R. S., sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1956). See also H. S. Drinker, Texts of the Vocal Works of R. S. in English Translation (N. Y., 1947).

Schumann-Heink (née Rössler), Ernestine, famous contralto; b. Lieben, near Prague, June 15, 1861; d. Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 17, 1936. Her father was an officer in the Austrian army; her mother an Italian amateur singer. In 1872 she was sent to the Ursuline Convent in Prague, where she sang in the church choir; after lessons from Marietta von Leclair in Graz, she made her first public appearance, singing the contralto solo in Beethoven's 9th symphony (1876); made her opera début at the Dresden Court Opera (Oct. 13, 1878) as Azucena; continued her studies with Karl Krebs and Franz Wüllner. In 1883 she was engaged to sing at the Hamburg City Opera; when the company was taken to Covent Garden, London, in 1892, she sang Erda; subsequently specialized in the Wagnerian roles; took part in the Bayreuth Festivals from 1896 until 1903, in 1905 and 1906; also sang with the Berlin Opera. She made her American début as Ortrud on Nov. 7, 1898 in Chicago; appeared in the same role with the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., on Jan. 9, 1899; cancelled her contract with the Berlin Opera in order to remain a member of the Metropolitan Opera Co. (until 1904); created the role of Klytemnestra in Elektra (Dresden, Jan. 25, 1909); made her last operatic appearance as Erda at the Metropolitan Opera on March 11, 1932. She became an American citizen in 1908. During the last years of her life she was active mainly as a teacher. Her operatic repertory included about 150 parts; her voice, of an even quality in all registers, possessed great power, making it peculiarly suitable to Wagnerian roles. She was married in 1882 to Ernst Heink of Dresden, from whom she was later divorced; in 1893 she married the actor Paul Schumann in Hamburg; he died in 1904; she assumed the names of both Schumann and Heink. Her 3rd husband was a Chicago lawyer, William Rapp, Jr., whom she married in 1905 (divorced 1914).—Cf. M. Lawton, Schumann-Heink, the Last of the Titans (N. Y., 1928).

Schünemann, Georg, German musicologist; b. Berlin, March 13, 1884; d. there, Jan. 2, 1945. He studied flute at Stern's Cons. in Berlin, and played in various orchestras; then took courses in musicology at the Univ. of Berlin with Kretzschmar; Dr. phil., 1907, with the dissertation Zur Frage des Takt-schlagens in der Mensuralmusik. In 1919 he joined the faculty of the Univ. of Berlin; from 1920 to 1928 was also prof. at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin and later, director. In 1933 he was appointed curator of the State Collection of Instruments, and in 1935 was made chief of the music division of the Prussian State Library; was active in many correlated fields of musical research.—Publications: Geschichte des Dirigierens (1913; a standard work); Das Lied der deutschen Kolonisten in Russland (1923); Geschichte der deutschen Schulmusik (1928); Carl Friedrich Zelter (1932); Führer durch die deutsche Chorkliteratur (2 vols., 1935-36); Geschichte der Klaviermusik (1940; 2nd ed. by H. Gerigk, 1953); Die Violine (1940); Die Singakademie zu Berlin (1941). He edited Mozart's sketchbook of 1764 (1908); publ. for the first time Robert Schumann's Concerto for violin and orch. in D minor (1937); brought out Musiker-Handschriften von Bach bis Schumann (1936), Beethoven's conversation-books (3 vols., 1941-43), a facsimile edition of Der Freischütz (1942), and of Beethoven's 5th symphony; contributed numerous essays to German music magazines.

Schunke, Karl, German pianist; b. Magdeburg, 1801; d. Paris (suicide), Dec. 16, 1839. He studied music with his father, the horn player Michael Schunke (1780-1821); then took lessons with Ferdinand Ries, whom he accompanied to London. In 1828 he settled in Paris, where he became a fashionable teacher. He publ. a number of brilliant transcriptions for piano of operatic airs.

Schunke, Ludwig, German pianist; b. Kassel, Dec. 21, 1810; d. Leipzig, Dec. 7, 1834. He studied with his father, the horn player Gottfried Schunke (1777-1840); then went to Paris, where he was a pupil of Kalkbrenner and Reicha; gave concerts there, and also in Vienna, Prague, etc. He settled in Leipzig in 1833, and became the intimate friend of Schumann; was associated with him in founding the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik.' His early death was greatly mourned; his few works (for piano) were full of promise: op. 3, sonata in G minor; op. 9, Caprice; op. 10, 2nd Caprice; op. 13, Charakterstücke; op. 14, Variationen. See Schumann's Gesammelte Schriften for several passages of appreciative comment.

Schuppanzigh, Ignaz, Austrian violinist, friend of Beethoven; b. Vienna, Nov. 20, 1776; d. there, March 2, 1830. He learned to play the violin and the viola; in 1798 became conductor of the Augarten concerts; Beethoven played several times at these concerts. In 1794-95 he was 1st violin in the quartet that played regularly for Prince Lichnowsky. In 1808 he founded the private quartet of Prince Razumovsky (with Mayseder, Linke, and Weiss), interpreting the Beethoven quartets under the master's eye, and also playing quartets of Haydn and Mozart. After a fire in Razumovsky's palace (1815), the Schuppanzigh quartet went on a tour in Germany, Poland, and Russia, returning to Vienna in 1824. Schuppanzigh then became a member of the court orch.; also was director of the German Opera in 1928. He publ. a Solo brillant for violin with string quartet; solo variations on a Russian theme; 9 variations for 2 violins. —Cf. G. Kinsky, Beethoven und das Schuppanzigh-Quartette, in the 'Rheinische Musik- und Theater-Zeitung' (XXI, p. 235 ff.). See also the literature on Beethoven.

Schuré (shü-rä'), Edouard, Alsatian writer on music; b. Strasbourg, Jan. 21, 1841; d. Paris, April 7, 1929. He studied law and philology in Strasbourg; lived in Bonn, Berlin, and Munich; in 1867, settled in Paris. In his writings (in French) he was an avowed propagandist of German music, and particularly Wagner. —Publications: Histoire du Lied; ou, La Chanson populaire en Allemagne (Paris, 1868; new ed. with a study Le Réveil de la poésie populaire en France, 1903); Le Drame musical (Paris, 1875; 12th ed., 1914; German transl. by Hans von Wolzogen as Das musikalische Drama; 3rd ed., 1888; part II is devoted to an appreciation of Wagner); Souvenirs sur Richard Wagner (Paris, 1900); Précurseurs et révoltés (Paris, 1904); The Musical Idea in Wagner (English transl. from French, Hampstead, 1910). —Cf. J. Mainor, Edouard Schuré (Angers, 1905); A. Roux and R. Veyssié, Edouard Schuré, son œuvre et sa pensée (Paris, 1913); R. A. Schuler, Edouard Schuré à travers son écriture (Paris, 1928); A. Roux, In memoriam Schuré (Paris, 1931).

Schuricht, Carl, German conductor; b. Danzig, July 3, 1880. He studied at home, his father being an organ manufacturer and his mother a pianist. He then took lessons with Humperdinck at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, and later in Leipzig with Max Reger. He subsequently conducted theater orchestras in Germany; in 1912 he became municipal music director in Wiesbaden, and held this post until 1944, when he moved to Frankfurt as choral conductor. In 1953 he conducted in France and Switzerland. He composed some piano music and an orchestral suite, Drei Herbststücke. —Cf. B. Gavoty, Carl Schuricht (Geneva, 1955).

Schurig, Arthur, German writer on music; b. Dresden, April 24, 1870; d. there, Feb. 15, 1929. He studied in Dresden, Berlin, and Leipzig; followed a military career; upon retirement, devoted much of his leisure to writing on music; publ. an excellent biography of Mozart: W. A. Mozart; sein Leben und sein Werk (2 vols.; 1913; 2nd ed., 1923); edited Leopold Mozart's Reise-Aufzeichnungen (1920) and Constanze Mozart's Briefe, Aufzeichnungen, Dokumente (1922).

Schurig, Volkmar (Julius Wilhelm), German organist and composer; b. Aue-on-the-Mulde, March 24, 1822; d. Dresden, Jan. 31, 1899. He studied in Dresden, where he played organ in the English Church (1844-56); subsequently filled various other posts as organist, singing teacher, and cantor. He publ. organ fantasias, organ preludes, sacred choruses to English texts; children's songs; brought out a useful collection, 'Liederperlen deutscher Tonkunst.'

Schürmann, Georg Kaspar, German composer; b. Hanover, c. 1672; d. Wolfenbüttel, Feb. 25, 1751. He was a singer (alto-falsetto) at the Hamburg Opera (1693-97); was then engaged as court Kapellmeister to the Duke of Brunswick in Wolfenbüttel; traveled in Italy for further study; from 1703 to 1706, was court Kapellmeister in Meiningen; returned to Wolfenbüttel in 1707 and remained there most of his life. He wrote about 20 operas for the Duke of Brunswick; they were produced in Wolfenbüttel and Hamburg; only a few fragments are extant; his church music is also lost. The following were produced in Brunswick: Heinrich der Vogler (Part I, Aug. 1, 1718; Part II, Jan. 11, 1721); Die getreue Alceste (1719); Ludovicus Pius (1726); this last opera, under the German title, Ludwig der Fromme, is partly reproduced in Eitner's 'Publikationen älterer Musikwerke'; a suite from Alceste and 3 books of arias publ. by G. F. Schmidt (Wolfenbüttel, 1934). —Cf. G. F. Schmidt, Die frühdeutsche Oper und die musikdramatische Kunst G. C. Schürmanns (2 vols., Regensburg, 1933-34; expanded from dissertation, Munich, 1913).

Schuster, Bernhard, German publisher and composer; b. Berlin, March 26, 1870; d. there, Jan. 13, 1934. He studied piano, organ, and violin; was active for a time as a theater conductor. In 1901 he founded the fortnightly review, 'Die Musik,' which from its inception ranked with the foremost musical journals of Germany; was its editor-in-chief until 1933. In 1905 he founded the publ. house 'Schuster und Loeffler' (Berlin and Leipzig), which brought out a number of important works on music (the business was acquired by the Stuttgart Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt in 1922). Schuster publ. 2 books of songs; also composed the operas Der Jungbrunnen (Karlsruhe, 1920) and Der Dieb des Glücks (Wiesbaden, March 10, 1923); a symphony; a string quartet; sacred choruses.

Schuster, Josef, German composer; b. Dresden, Aug. 11, 1748; d. there, July 24, 1812. He spent 4 years in Italy (1765-69) for study, and after 5 years in Dresden, went to Italy again; took lessons with Padre Martini at Bologna; wrote Italian operas, and was made honorary maestro to the King of Naples; after another 2 years in Dresden, he made a third visit to Italy (1778-81), finally establishing himself in Dresden as theatrical conductor; from 1787, he was associated with Seydelmann as court Kapellmeister. He composed a number of operas, mostly to Italian texts; also cantatas, oratorios, symphonies, etc.; publ. piano pieces for 2 and 4 hands, divertissements for piano and violin, etc. —Cf. R. Engländer, Die Opern Josef Schusters, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1928); R. Engländer, Les Sonates de violon de Mozart et les 'Duetti' de J. Schuster, in 'Revue de Musicologie' (1939).

Schuster, Joseph, cellist; b. Constantinople, May 23, 1903. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. and later at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin; was 1st cellist in the Berlin Philharmonic (1926-31); emigrated to America in 1934; played in a string quartet; made his concert début in N. Y. on March 15, 1935; from 1936 to 1944 was 1st cellist of the N. Y. Philharmonic; also appeared as soloist with it; taught at various schools.

Schütt, Eduard, pianist and composer; b. St. Petersburg, Oct. 22, 1856; d. Obermias, near Merano, Italy, July 26, 1933. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Petersen and Stein; at the Leipzig Cons. with Richter, Jadassohn, and Reinecke (1876-78). He then went to Vienna, where he was a private pupil of Leschetizky (piano); in 1880, made a concert tour of Austria with Mme. Norman-Neruda; in 1881, a tour of Hungary with Leopold Auer. Returning to St. Petersburg, he played his 1st piano concerto in G minor, at the concert of the Russian Musical Society (Jan., 1882); then settled definitely in Vienna and became an Austrian subject. His piano pieces retained their popularity for a long time. —Works: comic opera, Signor Formica (Vienna, Nov. 19, 1892); Serenade in D for string orch.; 2 piano concertos; piano quartet; violin sonata; 2 piano trios; Walzermärchen for violin, cello, and piano; Andante Cantabile und Scherzino for 2 pianos; numerous piano pieces (Scènes de bal, Thème varié et Fugato, Silhouetten-Portraits, Poésies d'Automne, Carnaval mignon, etc.).

Schütz (Sagittarius), Heinrich, great German composer; b. Köstritz, Oct. 8, 1585; d. Dresden, Nov. 6, 1672. In 1599 he became a choir boy in the court chapel at Kassel, also studying at the Collegium Mauricianum there, and entering Marburg Univ. in 1609, at his parents' desire, to study law; but was sent to Venice in the same year, by Landgrave Moritz of Hesse-Kassel, to study under Giovanni Gabrieli, remaining there till after the latter's death in 1612. Returning to Kassel, he became court organist; in 1617 he was appointed Kapellmeister to the Elector of Saxony at Dresden, after having acted in that capacity since 1615. He repeatedly revisited Italy; from 1631, amid the distractions of the 30 Years' War, he made protracted visits to Copenhagen (in 1633-35, 1637-38, and 1642-45), where he officiated as court conductor, the Dresden court orch. having been wholly dissolved during 6 years (1633-39), and then reorganized with only ten instrumentalists and singers; after 1645 it attained the former standard of efficiency. —Standing at the parting of the ways between Palestrina and Bach, Schütz was of peculiar importance in German art through having applied the grand Italian choral style, and the new dramatic-monic style (of Monteverdi and his predecessors), to the development of a semi-dramatic church music which is not merely of historical interest as preparing the mightier Bach epoch, but of pleasing and powerful effect at the present day. Schütz was also the composer of the first German opera, Dafne, set to Opitz's translation of Rinuccini's libretto (produced at Hartenfels Castle in Torgau, April 23, 1627, at the wedding of Princess Sophie of Saxony), and of a ballet, Orpheus und Eurydice (1638, on the wedding of Johann Georg II, of Saxony); the music of both is lost. Karl Riedel did much to awaken appreciation of Schütz's merits by publishing and producing Die 7 Worte Christi am Kreuz, and by bringing out other of his works, notably a Passion consisting of selections from Schütz's Historia des Leidens . . . Jesu Christi. From 1885-94 Breitkopf & Härtel publ. a complete edition of Schütz's works in 16 vols., ed. by Philipp Spitta: Vol. I, Die evangelischen Historien und die Sieben Worte Jesu Christi; the Historien being (1) Die Historia des Leidens und Sterbens unsers Heylandes Jesu Christi (4 Passions after the Evangelists; MS in the Dresden Library) and (2) Historia der fröhlichen und siegreichen Auferstehung unsers einigen Erlösers und Seligmachers Jesu Christi (first publ. 1623; similar to the Passions); vols. II-III, Mehrchörige Psalmen mit Instrumenten, with continuo (first publ. 1619); vol. IV, Cantiones sacrae a 4 with continuo; vol. V, Symphoniae sacrae, Part I; vol. VI, Kleine geistliche Konzerte a 1-5; vol. VII, Symphoniae sacrae, Part II; vol. VIII, sacred choral music, containing Musicalia ad chorum sacrum, with continuo (1648); vol. IX, Italianische Madrigale, containing his first publ. work, sent home from Italy, and dedicated to the Landgrave, Il primo libro dei Madrigali (1611; 18 madrigals a 5 and a Dialog a 8); vol. X-XI, Symphoniae sacrae, Part III; vol. XII-XV, Gesammelte Motetten, Konzerte, Madrigale und Arien; vol. XVI, Psalmen Davids deutsch durch Cornelium Beckern in 4 Stimmen gestellt; index, etc. A supplementary vol. was publ. in 1909, containing the long-lost Christmas Oratorio (Historia von der Geburt Jesu Christi), discovered in 1908 by Schering in the Univ. of Upsala (new ed. by A. Mendel, N. Y., 1950); a 2nd supplementary vol. (1927), containing motets, madrigals, and arias, was ed. by Heinrich Spitta. A new ed. of Schütz's complete works began to appear in 1955

(Bärenreiter, Kassel). —BIBLIOGRAPHY: W. Schäfer, H. S. (1854); F. Chrysander, Geschichte der Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttelschen Kapelle und Oper, in 'Jahrbuch für musikalische Wissenschaft' I, p. 159 ff. (1863); Fr. Spitta, Gedächtnisrede auf S. (1886); Fr. Spitta, Die Passionen nach den 4 Evangelien von H. S. (1886); Ph. Spitta, S., in 'Allgemeine deutsche Biographie' and 'Musikgeschichtliche Aufsätze' (1894); M. Seiffert, Anecdota Schütziana, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' I, p. 213 ff.; A. Werner, Städt. und fürstliche Musikpflege in Weissenfels (1911); A. Pirro, S. (Paris, 1913; 2nd ed., 1924; German transl. by W. Gurliitt, 1914); A. Schering, Zur Metrik der Psalmen von S., in 'Kretzschmar-Festschrift' (1918); E. H. Müller, H. S. Leben und Werke (tabulated; Dresden, 1922); E. H. Müller, H. S. (Leipzig, 1925); Fr. Spitta, H. S., ein Meister der Musica sacra (1925); J. Müller-Blattau, Die Kompositionslehre H. Schützens in der Fassung seines Schülers Christoph Bernhard (1926); F. Blume, Das monodische Prinzip in der protestantischen Kirchenmusik (1925); W. Schuh, Formprobleme bei H. S. (Leipzig, 1928); A. Einstein, H. S. (Kassel, 1928); R. Gerber, Das Passionsrezitativ bei S. (Gütersloh, 1929); H. Birtner, Zur S.-Bewegung, in 'Musik und Kirche' (1932); W. Diltthey, H. S. (1932); H. Hoffmann, H. S. in unserer Zeit (Leipzig, 1933); W. Kreidler, H. S. und der stille concitato von Claudio Monteverdi (Stuttgart, 1934); A. A. Abert, Die stilistischen Grundlagen der 'Cantiones sacrae' von H. S. (Berlin, 1935); H. J. Moser, H. S. (Kassel 1936; 2nd ed., 1954); K. Gudewill, Das sprachliche Urbild bei S. (Kassel, 1936); L. Reitter, Doppelchortechnik bei H. S. (Derendingen, 1937); J. Pierzig, Das Weltbild des H. S. (Kassel, 1949); A. Adrio, Bekenntnis zu H. S. (a collection of articles; Kassel, 1954); Festschrift zur Ehrung von H. S. (Weimar, 1954). Schütz's writings and correspondence were edited by E. H. Müller (Regensburg, 1931).

Schützendorf, four brothers, all baritones: Gustav (b. Cologne, 1883; d. Berlin, April 27, 1937), the best known, studied singing in Milan; sang at the Munich Opera, in Berlin, and in Leipzig; made his American début as Faninal in Der Rosenkavalier at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1922, and remained on its roster until 1935; then returned to Germany. In 1929 he married the soprano Grete Stückgold. —Alfons (b. Vught, Holland, May 25, 1882; d. Weimar, Aug., 1946) was distinguished as a Wagnerian singer, and took part in the Bayreuth Festivals; in 1932 settled in Berlin as a singing teacher. — Guido (b. Herzogenbusch, April 22, 1880) sang with the German Opera Co. on its tour in the U. S. in 1929-30. — Leo (b. Cologne, May 7, 1886; d. Berlin, Dec. 18, 1931) was a member of the Berlin State Opera from 1920 to 1929, and made numerous appearances abroad.

Schuyt (Schuijt), Cornelis, Netherlands composer; b. Leyden, 1557; d. there (buried June 12), 1616; studied at first with his father, an organist, and then in Italy. In 1593 was appointed organist in his native city. Publ. madrigals a 5 (1600) and a 6 (1611); 12 pavans and galliards in the 12 modes and 2 canzone alla francese (1611). The 5-part madrigals were reprinted by A. Smijers (2 vols., 1937-38). — Cf. M. Seiffert, Cornelis Schuijt, in 'Tijdschrift der Vereeniging voor Noord-Nederlands Musiekgeschiedenis' (vol. 5; 1897).

Schuyten (shoi'-ten), Ernest Eugene, composer and teacher; b. Antwerp, Nov. 7, 1881. He studied composition with Flor Alpaerts at the Brussels Cons. (graduated 1900). In 1915 he emigrated to America, settling in New Orleans; in 1919 he founded the New Orleans Cons. of Music; from 1932 to 1952 he was dean of the College of Music of Loyola Univ. (affiliated with the New Orleans Cons.); in 1952 dean emeritus, but continued as president and director of the New Orleans Cons. Among his works are a piano concerto, a violin concerto, a Solemn Mass to St. George (1935); symph in F# minor (New Orleans, Jan. 2, 1951, composer conducting); chamber music; vocal works.

Schwalb, Miklóš, Hungarian-American pianist; b. Budapest, Feb. 20, 1909. He studied with Dohnányi; appeared with the Budapest Philharmonic at the age of 14; then toured in Europe. He made his American début in 1942; in 1946 he joined the faculty of the New England Cons., Boston.

Schwalm, Oskar, German music critic and composer; b. Erfurt, Sept. 11, 1856; d. Berlin, Feb. 11, 1936. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Reinecke, Jadassohn, and others; was engaged in music publishing; wrote an overture, König Drosselbart; piano pieces; etc.; publ. collections of school songs.

Schwalm, Robert, German composer; brother of Oskar Schwalm; b. Erfurt, Dec. 6, 1845; d. Königsberg, March 6, 1912. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; in 1875 settled in Königsberg, where he conducted several choral societies. — Works: opera Frauenlob (Leipzig, 1885); male choruses with orch.: Morgengrauen, Bismarck-Hymne, An Deutschland, Mila, Wikingerfahrt, Gotenzug, Festgesang, Der Goten Todesgesang, Abendstille am Meer, Thermopylae, etc.; several biblical cantatas; piano pieces; songs.

Schwanenberg, Johann Gottfried, German composer; b. Wolfenbüttel, Dec. 28, 1740; d. Brunswick, April 5, 1804. He studied with Latilla and Saratelli at Venice; was aided by Hasse. — Works: 12 Italian operas in imitation of Hasse's style; cantatas; piano concertos; violin concertos; 3 sonatas for piano.

Schwartz, Rudolf, eminent German musicologist; b. Berlin, Jan. 20, 1859; d. Halle, April 20, 1935. He studied philosophy at the Univ. of Berlin and musicology with Ph. Spitta; Dr. phil., Leipzig Univ. (1892) with the dissertation H. L. Hassler unter dem Einfluss der italienischen Madrigalisten (publ. in the 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft,' 1893). In 1901 he became librarian of the 'Musikbibliothek Peters' and editor of the Peters 'Jahrbuch,' to which he contributed many valuable essays. A memorial issue of the 'Jahrbuch' (1936) contains a complete list of his writings. He compiled a new ed. of the catalogue of the 'Musikbibliothek Peters' (vol. I, 1910; very valuable); ed. a selection of secular works of H. L. Hassler, for the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (vols. IV, 2, and XI, 1); motets by Dulichius, for the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vols. 31, 41); and Petrucci's 1st and 4th books of frottole, for the 'Publikationen älterer Musik' (vol. 8).

Schwarz, Bianca. See Bianchi.

Schwarz, Boris, violinist, teacher, and musicologist; b. St. Petersburg, March 13, 1906. He studied with Fleisch in Berlin and with Thibaud in Paris; musicology with Schering, Sachs and J. Wolf in Berlin (1930-36); came to the U. S. in 1936; was concertmaster of the Indianapolis Symph. Orch. (1937-38); then a member of the NBC Symph. (1938-39). In 1941 he was appointed to the faculty of Queens College; chairman of its music department 1949-52, 1953-56; associate prof.; received a Ph. D. degree from Columbia Univ. 1950.

Schwarz, Rudolf, Austrian conductor; b. Vienna, April 29, 1905; studied piano and violin; played viola in the Vienna Philharmonic. In 1923, became assistant conductor at the Düsseldorf Opera, and later was conductor at the Karlsruhe Opera. Deprived of this post in 1933, he became music director of the Jüdischer Kulturbund in Berlin. He was arrested by the Nazi authorities in 1939, but released in 1940; then rearrested and sent to the Belsen concentration camp. He survived, and went to Sweden in 1945; then settled in England, where he pursued a successful career; was conductor of the Bournemouth Municipal Orch. (1947-50) and of the Birmingham Orch. (1950-57). In 1957 he received the important post of conductor of the BBC Symph. Orch. —Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (Bristol, 1951; pp. 179-87).

Schwarz, Wilhelm, German singing teacher; b. Stuttgart, May 11, 1825; d. Berlin, Jan. 4, 1878. He was a theologian and teacher; became a singer and teacher of singing in Hanover and Berlin; publ. System der Gesangkunst nach physiologischen Gesetzen (1857) and Die Musik als Gefühls-sprache im Verhältniss zur Stimm- und Gesangsbildung (1860).

Schwarzkopf, Elisabeth, German soprano; b. Jarotschin, near Poznan, Dec. 9, 1915; studied in Berlin with Maria Ivogün; made her début in a minor part in Parsifal at the Berlin Opera in 1938; then joined the roster of the Vienna Opera; appeared also at Covent Garden, London, and La Scala, Milan. She sang the part of Anna Trulove in the world première of Stravinsky's opera The Rake's Progress (Venice, Sept. 11, 1951); gave a number of recitals in the U. S.; also appeared as soloist with major American orchestras.

Schwedler, (Otto) Maximilian, German flutist; b. Hirschberg, March 31, 1853; d. Leipzig, Jan. 16, 1940. He studied in Dresden; played flute in various German orchestras; in 1881, joined the Gewandhaus Orch. in Leipzig; also taught at the Leipzig Cons. He was the inventor of the 'Schwedler flute' (1885), fully described in his Katechismus der Flöte und des Flötenspiels (Leipzig, 1897); made numerous transcriptions for flute, and publ. a flute method.

Schweitzer (shvī'-tser), Albert, great humanitarian, physician, and organist, and an authority on Bach; b. Kaysersberg, Alsace, Jan. 14, 1875. He was the son of a Günsbach vicar; studied organ with Eugen Münch at Mulhouse, with Ernst Münch at Strasbourg, and with Widor in Paris (from 1893); was organist of the Bach Concerts in Strasbourg from 1896; studied theology and philosophy at the Universities of Strasbourg, Paris, and Berlin; in 1902 joined the faculty of the Univ. of Strasbourg; while teaching there, he completed the full medical course (M.D., 1912), with the intention of becoming a medical missionary in Africa, to which task he subsequently devoted most of his time and energy, making occasional concert tours as organist in Europe to raise funds for his hospital work among the African natives. In 1952 he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. His philosophical and theological writings had established his reputation as one of the foremost thinkers of our time. In the field of music, he distinguished himself as the author of one of the most important books on Bach, greatly influencing the interpretation of Bach's music, and contributing to the full understanding of Bach's symbolic treatment of various musical devices. In 1906 he became organist of the 'Société J. S. Bach' in Paris; in 1909 he presided over the conferences on organ building at the Congress of the International Music Society in Vienna, which led to the adoption of international regulations, and read a paper, Die Reform unseres Orgelbaues, urging the simplification of the modern organ to correct faulty tone quality caused by extreme wind pressure (full report in the 'Wiener Kongressbericht der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft,' 1909, pp. 581-679). With Widor, he edited the first 5 vols. of the Schirmer critico-practical edition of Bach's organ works (editions in English, French, and German) and with Edouard Nies-Berger, the remaining 3 vols. He holds the degrees of Dr. theol. and Dr. phil.; also the honorary degrees of D.D. (Oxon.) and Litt. D. (St. Andrews). —Books on music: Deutsche und französische Orgelbaukunst und Orgelkunst (Leipzig, 1906; 2nd ed., 1927) and Jean Sébastien Bach, le musicien-poète (Paris, 1905; German enlarged ed., 1908; English transl. by Ernest Newman, Leipzig, 1911; re-issued, 1923); publ. an autobiography, Aus meinem Leben und Denken (Leipzig, 1931; English transl. as My Life and Thought, London, 1933; revised ed., as Out of My Life and Thought, N. Y., 1949; selections in German publ. as a school textbook, with an introduction in English, N. Y., 1949); also African Notebook (N. Y., 1939); On the Edge of the Primeval Forest (combined ed. of various previous vols. in German and English; N. Y., 1948). See also C. R. Joy, ed., Music in the Life of A. S. (selections from his writings; N. Y., 1951). —Bibliography: C. T. Campion,

A. S.: Philosopher, Theologian, Musician, Doctor (N. Y., 1928); Jan Eigenhuis, A. S. (Haarlem, 1929); H. Christaller, A. S. (1931); John D. Regester, A. S.: The Man and His Work (N. Y., 1931); Magnus C. Ratter, A. S. (London, 1935; revised ed., 1950); A. A. Roback, ed., The A. S. Jubilee Book (Cambridge, Mass., 1946; a collection of essays); G. Seaver, A. S.: the Man and his Mind (London, 1947); O. Kraus, A. S.: his Work and his Philosophy (N. Y., 1947); H. Hagedorn, Prophet in the Wilderness: the Story of A. S. (N. Y., 1947); R. Grabs, A. S.: Weg und Werk eines Menschenfreundes (Berlin, 1953); R. Sonner, S. und die Orgelbewegung (Colmar, 1955); numerous articles in the musical and general press.

Schweitzer, Anton, German composer; b. Coburg (baptized June 6), 1735; d. Gotha, Nov. 23, 1787. He was a chorister and later viola player in Hildburghausen; in 1764 went to Italy for serious study; returning to Germany, he was appointed (in 1766) music director of the ducal theater in Weimar; in 1769 became conductor of Seyler's operatic troupe, which was engaged by the Duke of Weimar in 1772. After the destruction by fire of the Weimar Theater in 1774, Schweitzer went to Gotha; there he was appointed court conductor in 1778. Schweitzer was one of the earliest composers to write serious operas to German texts. He produced in Weimar his operas Die Dorf- und Stadtfeste (June 30, 1772) and Alceste (May 28, 1773; libretto by Wieland); there followed another opera, Rosamunde (Mannheim, Jan. 20, 1780); Mozart expressed appreciation of Schweitzer's operas. But it was as a composer of 'Singspiele' that Schweitzer achieved popularity in his day; he was also important historically as the first composer of a melodrama in German, after Rousseau's Pygmalion (Weimar, 1772). —Cf. J. Maurer, Anton Schweitzer als dramatischer Komponist (Leipzig, 1912). See also A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (1943; 2nd ed., 1955).

Schwencke, Christian Friedrich Gottlieb, German composer; son of the bassoonist Johann Gottlieb Schwencke (1744-1823); b. Wachsenhausen, Harz, Aug. 30, 1767; d. Hamburg, Oct. 27, 1822. He studied with Marburg and Kimberger; succeeded K. P. E. Bach as town cantor and music director at the Katharinenkirche, Hamburg. Wrote cantatas, sacred and secular; 2 oratorios; church music; 6 organ fugues; 3 violin sonatas; piano sonatas. He rescored Handel's Messiah and Bach's Mass in B minor; wrote much for the Leipzig 'Allgemeine Zeitung.'

Schwencke, Friedrich Gottlieb, pianist and organist; son and pupil of Johann Friedrich Schwencke; b. Hamburg, Dec. 15, 1823; d. there, June 11, 1896. He gave organ concerts in Paris (1855); succeeded his father in 1852 as organist of the Nikolaikirche in Hamburg. —Works: 3 fantasias for organ, trumpet, trombone, and kettledrums; sacred songs for female chorus with organ; in 1886 he publ. a new and unabridged ed. of his father's chorale preludes.

Schwencke, Johann Friedrich, German organist and composer; son and pupil of Christian Friedrich Gottlieb Schwencke; b. Hamburg, April 30, 1792; d. there, Sept. 28, 1852. He was organist at the Nikolaikirche in Hamburg; composed numerous cantatas; over 500 preludes and postludes for organ; a septet for 5 cellos, double-bass, and kettledrums; harmonized about 1,000 chorales and 73 Russian folksongs; publ. the popular Hamburgisches Choralbuch; made many transcriptions; orchestrated Beethoven's Adelaide, and various works by other composers.

Schwerké, Irving, American writer on music; b. Appleton, Wis., July 21, 1893. He was educated at the Univ. of Wisconsin and at Charleston College, S. C.; studied music privately in Europe; from 1921 to 1934, was music critic for the Paris ed. of the Chicago 'Daily Tribune'; from 1932 to 1940 was the European representative for the N. Y. 'Musical Courier.' After the outbreak of World War II he lived in Switzerland; then returned to the U. S. and settled in his home town, Appleton. —Books: Kings Jazz and David (Paris, 1927); Alexandre Tansman, compositeur polonais (Paris, 1931; in French); Views and Interviews (Paris, 3rd ed., 1936); contributed several articles on French composers to the 'Mus. Quarterly.'

Schwieger, Hans, conductor; b. Cologne, June 15, 1906. He studied at the Cologne Hochschule für Musik; was assistant conductor at the Berlin State Opera (1927-30); at the Kassel Opera (1930-31); in Mainz (1932-34) and in Danzig (1936-37). In 1937 he went to Japan, where he conducted the Tokyo Symph. Orch. In March, 1938 he arrived in the U. S.; organized and conducted the Southern Symph. Orch. at Columbus (1938-41); then was conductor of the Fort Wayne Symph. (1944-48). In 1948 he was appointed conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic. —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 182-89).

Schytte (shüt'-te), Ludvig (Theodor), Danish composer; b. Aarhus, April 28, 1848; d. Berlin, Nov. 10, 1909. He was a pharmacist as a young man; then began to study piano with Anton Rée and composition with Gade, finishing under Taubert in Berlin and Liszt in Weimar. He settled in Vienna in 1887 as a teacher; moved to Berlin in 1907; taught there at Stern's Cons. A master of the miniature forms, he wrote a number of attractive piano pieces, some of which became extremely popular; about 200 were publ., among them Promenades musicales, Rapsodie norvégienne, Aus froher Kinderzeit, Spanische Nächte, Valse piquante, Waldbilder, Aus der Heimat und Fremde; numerous piano studies (6 brillante Vortragsetüden, Melodische Spezialsetüden, Studien in Ornamentik und Dynamik); for piano 4 hands: Bajaderntänze, Kindersymphonie, Musikalische Wandelbilder, Reiseblätter, Kindersuite, etc.; also a 1-act opera, Hero (Copenhagen, Sept. 25, 1898); the operetta Der Mameluk (Vienna, Dec. 22, 1903); a piano concerto; chamber music; a song cycle, Die Verlassene.

Scontrino, Antonio, Italian composer and teacher; b. Trapani, May 17, 1850; d. Florence, Jan. 7, 1922. He studied at the Palermo Cons.; was a virtuoso on the double-bass, and gave concerts; went to Munich for a special study of German music at the Musikschule (1872-74); after various engagements as an orch. player and teacher, he settled in Florence in 1892, and taught composition at the Istituto Musicale there. He wrote 5 operas: Matelda (Milan, June 19, 1879), Il Progettista (Rome, Feb. 8, 1882); Il Sortilegio (Turin, June 21, 1882), Gringoire (Milan, May 24, 1890), and La Cortigiana (Milan, Jan. 30, 1896); incidental music to Gabriele d'Annunzio's Francesca da Rimini; a Sinfonia marinaresca; a Sinfonia romantica; a concerto for double-bass and orch.; 3 string quartets; church music; songs. A biographical brochure, Antonio Scontrino nella vita e nell'arte, was publ. in his native town of Trapani in 1935. A detailed analysis of his instrumental works is found in Cobbett's 'Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music' (vol. II, pp. 395-408).

Scott, Charles Kennedy, English choral conductor and composer; b. Romsey, Nov. 16, 1876. He studied organ at the Brussels Cons., taking 1st prize (1897). In 1898, he settled in London; in 1904 he established the Oriana Madrigal Society there, in 1919 the Philharmonic Choir, and in 1922 the Euterpe String Players. He publ. Madrigal Singing (London, 1907; new enlarged ed., 1931); a vocal method, Word and Tone (London, 1933; 2 vols.); The Fundamentals of Singing (N. Y., 1954); edited old carols and choral music of the 16th century. —Cf. S. de B. Taylor, C. K. Scott, in the 'Mus. Times' (Nov., 1951).

Scott, Cyril Meir, noted English composer; b. Oxtou, Cheshire, Sept. 27, 1879. He was a scion of a cultured family, his father being a classical scholar, his mother a musician. At the age of 12 he was placed at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt; studied piano there; then traveled back to England and continued his study in Liverpool; in 1895 he went to Frankfurt again and studied composition with Iwan Knorr. In 1898 he settled in Liverpool as a piano teacher, and also began to compose music and to write poetry. He was attracted to descriptive music and poetic legends; his first important orchestral work, Heroic Suite, was conducted by Hans Richter at Liverpool in 1900, and in the same year his 1st Symph. was given at Darmstadt. His 2nd Symph. was performed at a Promenade Concert in London on Aug. 25, 1903. In 1913 his overture to Maeterlinck's play Princess Maleine was given in Vienna. He was the soloist in his piano concerto at the festival of British music given in London by Beecham in 1915. His settings of Keats' La Belle Dame Sans Merci for chorus and orch. (1915-16) was revived at the Leeds Festival of 1934. His opera The Alchemist, to his own libretto, was produced in Essen on May 28, 1925. Among the works of his later years is the Ode to Great Men for speaker, women's chorus, and orch. (Norwich Festival, 1936). In 1921 Scott traveled in the U. S. as pianist and lecturer. Also in 1921 he married the novelist Rose Laure. He became widely known as a composer of evocative piano pieces, often under exotic titles, and employing modern technical devices; he experimented successfully with progressions of unresolved dissonant chords; made frequent use of the whole-tone scale; his harmonic apparatus is impressionistic; there is an aura of vague poetic inspiration in his melodies; the mood created by his music is communicative; besides, the pianistic idiom is expert, and the success of his pieces early in the century is understandable. From his youth he was a student of occult philosophy; wrote also on the relationship between music and colors; in his writings he opposed modern music beyond Impressionism, and inveighed violently against jazz. —Works: Chamber music: piano quartet (1903); piano trio (1922); 3 string quartets; 2 string trios; concerto for oboe and strings (London, Sept. 13, 1948); cello sonata (1949); clarinet quintet (1951); Sonata melodica, for violin and piano (1951). Piano pieces: Chinese Serenade, Lotus Land (1905; very popular; arranged for violin and piano by Fritz Kreisler); Russian Dance; Sphinx; Danse nègre (one of his most popular pieces); Berceuse; Autumn Idyll; Impressions of the Jungle Book, after Kipling (highly successful); Little Russian Suite; Indian Suite; Spanish Dance; Badinage; etc.; over a hundred songs. —Books: My Years of Indiscretion (1924); The Philosophy of Modernism in its Connection with Music (1917); The Influence of Music on History and Morals, a Vindication of Plato (1928); Music, its Secret Influence Throughout the Ages (1933; new and extended ed., 1950). —Cf. A. Eaglefield Hull, Cyril Scott: Composer, Poet, and Philosopher (London, 1918).

Scott, Marion Margaret, English writer on music; b. London, July 16, 1877; d. there, Dec. 24, 1953. She studied at the Royal College of Music in London (1896-1904). With Gertrude Eaton she organized in 1911 the Society of Women Musicians; contributed to the 'Mus. Times', 'Mus. Quarterly', and other musical journals. She specialized in Haydn research and publ. a number of articles on Haydn; compiled a complete catalogue of Haydn's quartets, publ. in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1930); participated in the revision of the Haydn article for the 5th ed. of Grove's Dictionary. —Books: Beethoven, in the 'Master Musicians' series (London, 1934; revised ed., 1951) and Mendelssohn (London, 1938).

Scott, Tom, American folk singer and composer; b. Campbellsburg, Ky., May 28, 1912. His full name was Thomas Jefferson Scott; he studied violin with an uncle; played in dance bands; wrote songs; then went to Hollywood, where he took theory lessons with George Antheil; subsequently studied with Harrison Kerr and Wallingford Riegger. —Works: opera, The Fisherman (1956); for orch.: Song with Dance (1932); Plymouth Rock (1938); Hornpipe and Chantey (1944); symph. No. 1 (Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 22, 1946); From the Sacred Harp (1946); Ballad of the Harp Weaver, for narrator, harp, chorus, and string quartet (N. Y., Feb. 22, 1947); Johnny Appleseed (N. Y., March 1, 1948); Lento for saxophone and strings (1953); chamber music: 2 string quartets (1944; 1956); Emily Dickinson Suite, for violin and harp (1955); chantey for chorus; a number of solo songs; arrangements of folksongs; etc. —Cf. J. Ringo, Some Notes on Tom Scott's Music, in the 'Bulletin of the American Composers Alliance' (Winter, 1957; with a list of works).

Scotti, Antonio, celebrated Italian baritone; b. Naples, Jan. 25, 1866; d. there, Feb. 26, 1936. He studied with Francesco Lamperti; made his début as Amonasro in Malta (Nov. 1, 1889); then sang in Italy, Russia, Spain, and South America; made his London début at Covent Garden on June 8, 1899, as Don Giovanni, and appeared in the same role with the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. (Dec. 27, 1899). He remained with the Metropolitan Opera for 33 years; made his farewell appearance on Jan. 20, 1933. He also toured in America with his own company. He possessed great histrionic ability, and was especially noted for his dramatic roles (Scarpia, Rigoletto, Falstaff, Don Giovanni).

Scotus (Scot), Joannes (called Erigena), noted philosopher; b. c. 815; d. c. 877. His work, De divisione naturae, contains a definition of music, with a description of musical practice in his day. —Cf. J. Handschin, Die Musikanschauung des Johannes Scotus (Erigena), in 'Deutsche Vierteljahrsschrift für Literaturwissenschaft und Geistesgeschichte' (vol. V, 2).

Scriabin (skryah'-bin), Alexander Nikolayevitch, remarkable Russian composer; b. Moscow, Jan. 6, 1872; d. there, April 27, 1915. His mother died when he was a child; his father remarried. Scriabin received his education mainly from his aunt, who was a musician; she taught him the rudiments of music until he was 12, when he began to take regular piano lessons with George Conus, and later with Zverev. In 1885 he took private lessons in composition with Taneyev. He entered the Moscow Cons. in 1888, enrolling in the piano class of Safonov. Although he practiced assiduously, he never became a virtuoso; at his piano recitals he played mostly his own works. Graduating with a gold medal from Safonov's class, Scriabin remained at the Cons. to study fugue with Arensky, but failed to pass the required examination and left the Moscow Cons. without a diploma for composition. By that time he had written several piano pieces in Chopin's manner. The publisher Belaiev heard him play some of them and offered him a contract. Belaiev also financed Scriabin's European tour in 1895-96; on Jan. 15, 1896 Scriabin gave in Paris a concert of his own music. Returning to Russia, he completed his first major work, a piano concerto; on Oct. 23, 1897 he gave its first performance with the Odessa Philharmonic Orch., conducted by Safonov. In the same year he married the pianist Vera Isakovitch. They spent some time abroad; on Jan. 31, 1898 they gave a joint recital in Paris in a program of Scriabin's works. From 1898 until 1903 Scriabin taught piano at the Moscow Cons. His first orchestral work, Réverie, was performed in Moscow by Safonov (March 24, 1899), who also conducted the première of Scriabin's 1st symph. (March 29, 1901). The 2nd symph. was brought out by Liadov in St. Petersburg (Jan. 25, 1902). After the death of Belaiev in 1904, Scriabin received an annual grant of 2,400 rubles from the wealthy Moscow merchant Morozov, and settled in Switzerland, where he began work on his 3rd symph., The Divine Poem. A special concert was arranged in Paris for its première on May 29, 1905, Arthur Nikisch conducting. At that time Scriabin separated from Vera Isakovitch and established a household with Tatiana Schloezer (sister of the music critic Boris Schloezer). In Dec., 1906, Scriabin went to America at the invitation of Modest Altschuler, conductor of the Russian Symphony Society in N. Y.; appeared as soloist at Altschuler's concerts and gave piano recitals of his works in New York, Chicago, Detroit, and other cities. Tatiana Schloezer joined him in N. Y. in Jan., 1907, but they were warned that charges of moral turpitude might be brought against them. To forestall this eventuality, they left America in March, 1907, for Paris. On Dec. 10, 1908 Altschuler gave in N. Y. the world première of Scriabin's new symph. work, The Poem of Ecstasy; the Russian première came later in St. Petersburg (Feb. 1, 1909). In the spring of 1908 Scriabin met Serge Koussevitzky, who became one of the most ardent supporters of his music. He gave Scriabin a 5-year contract with his newly established publishing house 'Éditions Russes' at a guarantee of 5,000 rubles a year; in the summer of 1910 he engaged Scriabin as soloist for a tour in a chartered steamer down the Volga River. Scriabin wrote for Koussevitzky his most ambitious symph. work, Prometheus or The Poem of Fire, with an important piano part. The score included a special color keyboard (clavier à lumières) intended to project changing colors according to the scale of the spectrum. The construction of such an instrument however, presented insurmountable difficulties, and when Koussevitzky gave the world première of Prometheus (Moscow, March 15, 1911) with Scriabin at the piano, it was without the color organ. A performance with colored lights thrown on a screen was given at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., on March 20, 1915, by Altschuler, but the effect was disappointing. Meanwhile, the intimate association between Scriabin and Koussevitzky came to a sudden end owing to financial and personal disagreement. In 1912 Scriabin signed a contract with the Moscow publisher Jurgenson, who guaranteed him 6,000 rubles annually. In 1914 Scriabin visited London and was soloist in his piano concerto and in Prometheus at a concert led by Sir Henry Wood (March 14, 1914); he also gave a recital of his own works there (March 20, 1914). His last public appearance was in a recital in Petrograd on April 15, 1915; upon his return to Moscow, an abscess developed on his lip, leading to blood poisoning; he died after a few days' illness. His 3 children (of the union with Tatiana Schloezer) were legitimized at his death. His son Julian, an exceptionally gifted boy, was accidentally drowned at the age of 11 in the Dnieper River at Kiev (June 22, 1919); Julian's 2 piano preludes, written in the style of the last works of his father, were publ. in a Scriabin memorial volume (Moscow, 1940). —Scriabin was a genuine innovator in harmony. After an early period of strongly felt influences (Chopin, Liszt, and Wagner), he gradually evolved his own melodic and harmonic style, marked by extreme chromaticism; in his piano piece Désir, op. 57 (1908) the threshold of polytonality and atonality is reached; the key signature is dispensed with in his subsequent works; chromatic alterations and compound appoggiaturas create a harmonic web of such complexity that all distinction between consonance and dissonance vanishes. Building chords by fourths rather than by thirds, Scriabin constructed his 'mystic chord' of 6 notes (C, F#, Bb, E, A, and D), which is the harmonic foundation of Prometheus. In his 7th piano sonata (1913) appears a chordal structure of 25 notes (Db, Fb, G, A, and C, repeated in 5 octaves) which was dubbed 'a 5-story chord.' These harmonic extensions were associated in Scriabin's mind with theosophic doctrines; he aspired to a universal art in which the impressions of the senses were to unite with religious experience. He made plans for the writing of a 'mystery play' designed to accomplish such a synthesis, but only the text of a preliminary poem (L'Acte préalable) was completed at his death. —Scriabin never wrote chamber music, songs, or choral works. His catalogue includes the following: For orch.:

concerto for piano and orch., op. 20 (1897); Rêverie, op. 24 (1899); symph. No. 1, op. 26 (1900); symph. No. 2, op. 29 (1901); symph. No. 3 (The Divine Poem), op. 43 (1905); The Poem of Ecstasy, op. 54 (1908); Prometheus (The Poem of Fire), op. 60 (1911). For piano: 10 sonatas (op. 6, 19, 23, 30, 53, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70); 79 preludes in 15 sets (op. 11, 13, 15, 16, 17, 22, 27, 31, 33, 35, 37, 39, 48, 67, 74); 24 etudes in 4 sets (op. 2, 8, 42, 65); 6 impromptus (op. 10, 12, 14); 21 mazurkas (op. 3, 25, 40); 2 nocturnes (op. 5); Prelude and Nocturne for the left hand alone (op. 9); Polonaise (op. 21); Fantaisie (op. 28); Poème tragique (op. 34); Poème satanique (op. 36); 3 Morceaux (op. 49); 4 Morceaux (op. 51); 3 Morceaux (op. 52); 4 Morceaux (op. 56); 2 Morceaux (op. 57); Feuillet d'album (op. 58); 2 Morceaux (op. 59); Poème-Nocturne (op. 61); 2 Poèmes (op. 63); Vers la flamme (op. 72); 2 Danses (op. 73). —Bibliography: 'Musikalnyi Sovremennik,' special Scriabin number (Petrograd, 1915); L. Sabaneyev, S. (Moscow, 1916; 2nd ed., 1923); A. E. Hull, S. (London, 1916); A. E. Hull, A Survey of the Piano-forte Works of S., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1916); A. E. Hull, The Piano-forte Sonatas of S., in the 'Mus. Times' (Nov.-Dec., 1916); M. Montagu-Nathan, A Handbook of the Piano-forte Works of S. (Boston, 1916); M. Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers (London, 1917); A. E. Hull, S.'s Scientific Derivation of Harmony Versus Empirical Methods, in 'Proceedings of the Musical Association' (London, 1917); Paul Rosenfeld, Musical Portraits (N. Y., 1920); Igor Glebov, S. (Petrograd, 1921); Boris de Schloezer, A. S., in the 'Revue Musicale' (1921); O. von Riesemann, A. S. im Lichte eigener Jugendsbriefe, in 'Die Musik' (1923); Boris de Schloezer, S., (Berlin, 1923; in Russian; vol. 1 only); A. J. Swan, S. (London, 1923); C. Gray, A Survey of Contemporary Music (London, 1924); V. Yakovlev, S. (Moscow, 1925); Georg Rimsky-Korsakov, The Deciphering of the 'Lumière' Part in Scriabin's 'Prometheus' in 'De Musica' (Leningrad, 1927; in Russian); R. H. Hill, A. S., in 'Fortnightly Review' (N. Y., 1928); A. J. Swan, Music 1900-1930 (N. Y., 1929); L. Sabaneyev, S. and the Idea of Religious Art, in the 'Mus. Times' (1931); P. Dickmann, Die Entwicklung der Harmonik bei A. S. (Leipzig, 1935); M. D. Calvocoressi and G. Abraham, Masters of Russian Music (N. Y., 1936); S., Symposium on the 25th Anniversary of his Death (Moscow, 1940); N. Slonimsky, A. S., in Great Modern Com- posers, ed. by O. Thompson (N. Y., 1941); D. Brook, Six Great Russian Composers (London, 1946); L. Danilevitch, S. (Moscow, 1953). Scriabin's correspondence, ed. by L. Sabaneyev, was publ. in Moscow, 1923. For an exposition of Scriabin's principles see chapter IV in A. E. Hull's Modern Harmony (London, 1914) and Part I of J. L. Dunk's Hyperacoustics (London, 1916).

Scribe, Eugène, famous French dramatist and author of many opera librettos; b. Paris, Dec. 25, 1791; d. there, Feb. 21, 1861. He was the writer of the finest librettos set to music by Auber (La Muette de Portici, Fra Diavolo, Le Domino noir, etc.) and Meyerbeer (Robert le Diable, Les Huguenots, Le Prophète, L'Africaine). For Boieldieu he wrote La Dame blanche; for Halévy, Manon Lescaut and La Juive; he also wrote for less celebrated composers. In the complete edition of his Ceuvres dramatiques (Paris, 1874-85; 76 vols.), 26 vols. are filled by his opera librettos. —Cf. J. G. Prod'homme, Wagner, Berlioz and Monsieur Scribe, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1926).

Scudo, Pierre, music critic; b. Venice, June 8, 1806; d. Blois, Oct. 14, 1864. He was brought up in France; studied at Choron's school in Paris; was for a time an opera singer; played clarinet in military bands; then turned to journalism; publ. several political pamphlets; became music critic of the influential 'Revue des Deux Mondes.' A writer of considerable talent, he held reactionary views; violently attacked Berlioz, Liszt, and Wagner. He became deranged and died in an insane asylum. His articles were publ. in book form: Critique et littérature musicale (2 series; 1850; 1859); L'Art ancienne et l'art moderne (1854); L'Année musicale, ou Revue annuelle des théâtres lyriques et des concerts (3 vols., 1860-62); etc. He also wrote a musical novel, Le Chevalier Sarti (1857; not connected with the composer Giuseppe Sarti); its sequel Frédérique was publ. in the 'Revue des Deux Mondes.' He publ. some songs (Le Fil de la Vierge, La Baigneuse, etc.).

Seagle, Oscar, American baritone; b. Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 31, 1877; d. Dallas, Dec. 19, 1945. He sang in concerts in the U. S. from 1896 until 1905; then went to Paris for further study, with Jean de Reszke; made his Paris début in 1907, and also sang in England; returned to America at the outbreak of World War I in 1914, and settled in N. Y. as a singing teacher.

Searle, Humphrey, English composer; b. Oxford, Aug. 26, 1915. He studied classical literature at Oxford Univ. and music at the Royal College of Music in London, with John Ireland and R. O. Morris. In 1937 he went to Vienna, where he took private lessons with Anton von Webern; this study was a decisive influence in Searle's future work. He served in the British Army during World War II, and was stationed in Germany in 1946. Returning to London, he was on the music staff of the BBC (1946-48); became active in various modern-music organizations. His music reflects the trends of Expressionism, and the idiom is a modification of the 12-tone method; but he also applies purely national English melodic patterns in some of his compositions. He publ. 2 books, The Music of Liszt and Twentieth Century Counterpoint (both London, 1954), and contributed articles on musical subjects to magazines. —Works: 2 suites for strings (1942, 1944); 2 piano concertos (1944; 1955); quintet for bassoon and strings (1945); Intermezzo for 11 instruments (1946); Put Away the Flutes, for tenor and 6 instruments (1947; in memory of Anton von Webern); Fuga Giocosa, for orch. (1948); quartet for violin, viola, clarinet, and bassoon (1948); Gold Coast Customs, to Edith Sitwell's poem, for speakers, men's chorus, and orch. (1948); The Shadow of Cain, to Edith Sitwell's poem, for speakers, men's chorus, and orch. (1952); a symphony (1953); Concertante, for piano, strings, and percussion (1954); Aubade, for horn and strings (1955); piano pieces; songs.—Cf. E. Lockspeiser, Humphrey Searle, in the 'Mus. Times' (Sept., 1955).

Seashore, Carl Emil, American psychologist and musician; b. Mörlunda, Sweden, Jan. 28, 1866; d. Lewiston, Idaho, Oct. 16, 1949. He was brought to the U.S. as a child; studied at Yale Univ. (Ph. D., 1895); taught psychology at Yale (until 1902), then at Iowa State Univ.; dean of the Graduate College there in 1908; dean emeritus, 1938. He devised a widely used method for measuring musical talent ('Seashore Test') through special instruments of his own invention (audiometer, tonoscope, chronograph, etc.). —Books: The Voice Tonoscope (1903); Localisation of Sound (1903); A Sound Perimeter (1903); The Tonoscope and its Use in the Training of the Voice (1906); The Measure of a Singer (1912); Seeing Yourself Sing (1916); Vocational Guidance in Music (1916); The Measurement of Musical Memory (1917); The Psychology of Musical Talent (1919); Psy- chology of the Vibrato (1936); Psychology of Music (1938); Pioneering in Psychology (1942); In Search of Beauty in Music (N. Y., 1947) etc.; contributed articles to the 'Mus. Quarterly': The Measurement of Musical Talent (Jan., 1915), Psychology in Music (April, 1930), etc.—Cf. the special Seashore issue of the Univ. of Iowa Studies in Psychology (No. 21; Princeton, N. J., 1928).

Sebastian, George, conductor; b. Budapest, Aug. 17, 1903. He studied composition with Leo Weiner and Kodály at the State Academy of Music, graduating in 1921; then took private lessons in conducting with Bruno Walter in Munich (1922-23); was opera coach at the Munich State Opera; in 1923-24 was assistant conductor with the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y.; then conductor at the Hamburg Municipal Opera (1924-25), at the Neues Theater, Leipzig (1925-27); at the Berlin Opera (1927-31). In 1931 he went to Russia, where he was conductor of the Moscow Radio Orch. (until 1937). In 1938 he came to the U. S.; conducted the Scranton, Penn., Philharmonic Orch. (1940-45); in 1946 he went back to Europe; settled in Paris; conducted at the Opéra-Comique, and also symph. concerts.

Sebastiani, Johann, German composer; b. Weimar, Sept. 30, 1622; d. Königsberg, 1683. He was in the service of the Elector of Brandenburg at Königsberg; appointed Kapellmeister to the palace church in 1663; pensioned in 1679. He wrote a Passion, Das Leiden und Sterben . . . Jesu Christi (1672), employing a 5-part chorus with 6 instruments. It is noteworthy for the devotional chorales therein introduced, as in Bach's Passions. It was reprinted by Zelle in vol. 17 of the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst.' Sebastiani's Parnass-Blumen, Geistliche und weltliche Lieder were publ. in Hamburg in 2 vols. (1672, 1675); 13 Funeral Songs for several voices were issued separately at Königsberg between 1664 and 1680.

Šebor (shā'-bohr), Karl, Bohemian conductor and composer; b. Brandeis, Aug. 13, 1843; d. Prague, May 17, 1903. He was a pupil of Kittl; was conductor of the National Opera (1864-67), and military bandmaster in Vienna (from 1871). He wrote the Czech operas (all produced in Prague): The Templars in Moravia (Oct. 19, 1864), Drahomíra (1867), The Hussite's Bride (Sept. 28, 1868), Blanka (1870), The Frustrated Wedding (Oct. 25, 1879); cantatas; overtures; songs.

Sechter (zeh'-ter), Simon, composer and teacher; b. Friedberg, Bohemia, Oct. 11, 1788; d. Vienna, Sept. 10, 1867. He studied with Koželuh and Hartmann in Vienna; in 1810 he obtained the position of organ instructor at the Vienna Institute for the Blind; was also active as court organist; in 1851 he became prof. of harmony and composition at the Vienna Cons. The excellence of his teaching attracted to him a number of students from all over Europe, among them Henselt, Bruckner, Nottbohm, Vieuxtemps, Thalberg, and Pauer. So great was his renown even before he held an official teaching position, that Schubert, some weeks before his death (1828), expressed a desire to study with him. He was a master contrapuntist, and wrote a vast amount of church music; publ. many fugues and preludes for organ; several intricate piano pieces (Dances in Counterpoint; 12 Contrapuntal Pieces; 4 books of amusing fugues for 4 hands on national and operatic airs; etc.); string quartets; songs. He also wrote an opera, Ali Hirsch-Hatsch, which was produced in Vienna on Nov. 12, 1844. His most important pedagogical work is the treatise Die Grundsätze der musikalischen Komposition (3 vols.; Vienna, 1853-54), on the lines of Rameau's 'basse fondamentale'; the 1st vol. was publ. in English transl. (N. Y., 1871; 12th ed., 1912). He also publ. a Generalbass-Schule, and a new ed. of Marpur's Abhandlung von der Fuge. —Cf. K. F. Pohl, Simon Sechter (Vienna, 1868); G. Capellen, Ist das System S. Sechters ein geeigneter Ausgangspunkt für die theoretische Wagnerforschung? (Leipzig, 1902).

Seckendorff (zehk'-en-dorf), Karl Siegmund von, German composer; b. Erlangen, Nov. 26, 1744; d. Ansbach, April 26, 1785. He was an officer in the Austrian and Sardinian armies (1761-74); then in the diplomatic service in Weimar (1776-84); shortly before his death he was appointed Prussian ambassador in Ansbach (1784). At Weimar he was on intimate terms with Goethe, who allowed him to write music for a number of his poems before their publication (Der Fischer, Der König in Thule, etc.); in these songs Seckendorff caught the characteristic inflections of folk melodies. He publ. 3 collections of Volks- und andere Lieder (1779-82); wrote 12 string quartets, 8 divertimentos for violin and piano, 3 piano trios, and 2 piano sonatas for 3 hands (probably the earliest example of such compositions); 3 Singspiele: Lila (1776), Proserpine (1778), and Jery und Bätely (1780). —Cf. V. Knab, K. S. von Seckendorff (Ansbach, 1914); Max Friedlaender, Gedichte von Goethe in Kompositionen seiner Zeitgenossen (1896 and 1916); E. Herrmann, Das Weimarer Lied in der 2. Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts (dissertation, Leipzig, 1925).

Seefried, Irmgard, German soprano; b. Königstried, Bavaria, Oct. 9, 1919. She studied voice at the Augsburg Cons.; was opera singer in Aachen (1939-43); on May 2, 1943, made her first appearance with the Vienna Opera as Eva in Die Meistersinger; subsequently sang in Paris, London, Zürich, and Stockholm; American début at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., as Susanna in The Marriage of Figaro (Nov. 20, 1953).

Seeger, Charles Louis, Jr., American musicologist; b. (of American parents), Mexico City, Dec. 14, 1886. He studied at Harvard Univ., graduating in 1908; taught music at the Univ. of California (1912-19) and at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (1922-33); also lectured at the New School for Social Research; in 1935, he went to Washington, D. C.; from 1941 till 1953 was Chief of the Division of Music and Visual Arts at the Pan American Union. He was one of the founders of the American Musicological Society (1934); also of the American Library of Musicology (1931). In 1931 he married the composer Ruth Crawford (q.v.). His compositions include the overture Shadowy Waters (after Yeats) for orch.; music for the pageants Dredra (1914) and The Queen's Masque (1915); a violin sonata; songs. In collaboration with E. G. Stricklen he publ. An Outline of a Course in Harmonic Structure and Musical Invention (1913) and Harmonic Structure and Elementary Composition (1916). Author of many articles in the 'Mus. Quarterly' and elsewhere. —Cf. Henry Cowell, ed., American Composers on American Music (Stanford Univ., 1933, p. 119 ff.).

Seeger (zä'-ger), Joseph (also known as Seegr, Segert, Zeckert, etc.), Bohemian organist; b. Repin, March 21, 1716; d. Prague, April 22, 1782. He was a pupil of Czernohorsky and Franz Benda in Prague; played the violin in a Prague church, before being appointed organist at the Kreuzherrenkirche (1745); retained this position until his death. He was greatly esteemed as a teacher; among his pupils were J. A. Koželuh, Kuchar, Mašek, Mysliveček, etc. His most celebrated organ works, 8 Toccatas and Fugues, were publ. posthumously (1793); his organ preludes were included in Guilman's collection École classique de l'orgue.

Seeling (zä'-link), Hans, pianist; b. Prague, 1828; d. there, May 26, 1862. He went to Italy in 1852; then traveled in the East, returning to Europe in 1857; was in Paris in 1859; then in Germany; finally went back to Prague. He publ. many salon pieces, which were successful (Barcarolle, Lorelei, etc.).

Seghers (sü-gär'), François-Jean-Baptiste, Belgian violinist; b. Brussels, Jan. 17, 1801; d. Margency, near Paris, Feb. 2, 1881. He studied in Brussels with Gensse, and at the Paris Cons. with Baillot; founded in Brussels the Société Ste.-Cécile in 1848, and conducted it until 1854. Its concerts of orchestral and choral works were famous; after the founder's death it rapidly declined and soon was dissolved.

Segnitz (zehg'-nitz), Eugen, German musicologist; b. Leipzig, March 5, 1862; d. Berlin, Sept. 25, 1927. He studied privately with Papperitz; wrote music criticism; publ. valuable biographical studies: Carl Reincke (1900), Wagner und Leipzig (1901), Liszt und Rom (1901), Goethe und die Oper in Weimar (1908), Franz Liszt's Kirchenmusik (1911), Arthur Nikisch (1920), Max Reger (1922).

Segovia, Andrés, famous Spanish guitar virtuoso; b. Linares, near Jaen, Feb. 17, 1893. He improvised on the guitar as a child; went to Granada, and gave his first concert there at the age of 14; then presented a series of concerts in Barcelona (1916) and Madrid; subsequently undertook a grand tour in South America. On April 7, 1924 he gave his first concert in Paris; this was the beginning of his international fame; for 35 years he traveled all over the world, arousing admiration for his artistry wherever he went. He did much to reinstate the guitar as a concert instrument capable of a variety of expression; several modern composers wrote works especially for him (Castelnuovo-Tedesco, Manuel M. Ponce, Turina, and others); Albert Roussel wrote a solo piece for guitar entitled simply Segovia, which Segovia played in Madrid on April 25, 1925. —Cf. R. Gelatt, Music Makers (N. Y., 1953).

Seiber, Mátyás, composer; b. Budapest, May 4, 1905. Of a musical family, he learned to play the cello at home; later entered the Budapest Academy of Music, where he studied with Kodály (1919-24). During the following years he traveled as a member of a ship's orch. on a transatlantic line; visited Russia as a musical correspondent. He taught at Hoch's Cons. at Frankfurt (1926-33); then was again in Budapest. In 1935 he settled in London; in 1942, was appointed to the faculty of Morley College; also gave lectures on the BBC. A prolific composer, Seiber has written works of every type: an opera, Eva spielt mit Puppen (1934); 2 operettas; incidental music for several plays; 2 suites for string orch.; Transylvanian Rhapsody for orch. (1941); Pastorale and Burlesque for flute and strings (1942); Fantasia Concertante for violin and strings (1943); Notturmo for horn and strings (1944); 3 string quartets; short works for cello; piano pieces; arrangements of folk-songs; and a handbook on jazz percussion playing, Schule für Jazz-Schlagzeug (1929). Seiber's early works are permeated with Hungarian idioms; later he expanded his melodic resources to include oriental modes, and also jazz, treated as folk music; eventually adopted the 12-tone method, with individual extensions; applied this method in his cantata Ulysses, after James Joyce (London, May 27, 1949). —Cf. H. Keller, Mátyás Seiber, in the 'Mus. Times' (Nov., 1955).

Seidel (zi'-del), Friedrich Ludwig, German organist and composer; b. Treuenbrietzen, July 14, 1765; d. Charlottenburg, May 8, 1831. He studied with Benda in Berlin; served as organist of the Marienkirche; was music director of the royal orch. (1808) and court Kapellmeister (1822). —Works: the operas Der Dorfbarbier (1817) and Lila (1818); incidental music to dramas; an oratorio, Die Unsterblichkeit (1797); Masses, motets, songs, piano music.

Seidel, Johann Julius, German organist; b. Breslau, July 14, 1810; d. there, Feb. 13, 1856. He was organist at St. Christopher's Church; published Die Orgel und ihr Bau (Breslau, 1843; 4th ed. by B. Kothe, 1885; reprinted with an appendix by H. Schmidt, 1907; in English, London, 1852).

Seidel, Toscha, violinist; b. Odessa, Nov. 4, 1899. He began to play the violin as a small child; took lessons from Max Fiedelmann in Odessa; subsequently became a pupil of Leopold Auer at the Cons. of St. Petersburg (graduated in 1912). He gave a concert in Oslo, Norway, Sept. 1, 1915; then went to America; début in N. Y. (April 14, 1918); since then he has made many tours in Europe and the U. S.; also played in Australia. He became an American citizen and made his home in Los Angeles.

Seidl (zīdl), Anton, noted conductor; b. Budapest, May 7, 1850; d. New York, March 28, 1898. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. (1870-72); then was engaged by Hans Richter as chorusmaster at the Vienna Opera. Richter recommended him to Wagner to assist in preparing the score and parts of the Ring trilogy for the Bayreuth Festival; Seidl worked in Bayreuth until 1879, when he was engaged by the impresario Angelo Neumann for a great tour of Wagner operas, continuing until 1883, the year of Wagner's death. From 1883 to 1885 Seidl conducted the Bremen Opera; in Bremen he met and married the soprano Auguste Krauss. In 1885 he was engaged by Walter Damrosch to conduct the German operas at the Metropolitan Opera House. Seidl made his American début with Lohengrin (Nov. 23, 1885), and he conducted the American premières of Die Meistersinger (Jan. 4, 1886), Tristan und Isolde (Dec. 1, 1886), Siegfried (Nov. 9, 1887), Die Götterdämmerung (Jan. 25, 1888), and Das Rheingold (Jan. 4, 1889). During the week of March 4-11, 1889, he conducted the entire Ring des Nibelungen. In 1891 he was engaged as permanent conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic Society, and led it until his sudden death (of ptomaine poisoning). Seidl's seasons with the N. Y. Philharmonic were the most brilliant before the advent of Mahler. He was an excellent technician of the baton, and established a standard of perfection rare in American orchestras of that time; he introduced many new works by German composers; presented the world première of Dvořák's symphony From the New World (1893), conducting from manuscript in the presence of the composer. —Cf. H. E. Krehbiel, Anton Seidl (N. Y., 1898); H. T. Finck, ed., Anton Seidl. A Memorial by His Friends (N. Y., 1899).

Seidl, Arthur, German writer on music; b. Munich, June 8, 1863; d. Dessau, April 11, 1928. He studied with Spitta and Beltermann; Dr. phil., Leipzig, 1887 (dissertation, Vom Musikalisch-Erhabenen. Prolegomena zur Ästhetik der Tonkunst; 1887; 2nd ed., 1907). From 1890 to 1893 he was in Weimar; from 1893 to 1897, in Dresden. In 1899 he went to Munich as critic for the 'Neueste Nachrichten.' From 1903 to his death, was active mostly at Dessau. —Writings: Zur Geschichte des Erhabenheitsbegriffs seit Kant (1889); Hat Richard Wagner eine Schule hinterlassen? (1892); Richard Strauss. Eine Charakterstudie (with W. Klatte; 1896); Moderner Geist in der deutschen Tonkunst (1901; 2nd ed., 1913);

Wagneriana (3 vols., 1901-02); Moderne Dirigenten (1902); Kunst und Kultur (1902); Die Hellerauer Schulfeste und die 'Bildungsanstalt Jaques-Dalcroze' (1912); Straussiana (1913); Ascania. Zehn Jahre in Anhalt (1913); Richard Wagners 'Parsifal' (1914); Neue Wagneriana (3 vols., 1914); Hans Pfitzner (1921); Neuzeitliche Tondichter und zeitgenössische Tonkünstler (2 vols.; Regensburg, 1926). —Cf. L. Frankenstein, Arthur Seidl (Regensburg, 1913); B. Schuhmann, ed., Musik und Kultur. Festschrift zum 50. Geburtstag Arthur Seidls (1913).

Seifert (zī'-fert), Uso, German organist and composer; b. Römhild, Feb. 9, 1852; d. Dresden, June 4, 1912. He studied with Wüllner and Nicodé at the Dresden Cons.; taught there for 25 years, and was later organist of the Reformed Church. He publ. a piano method; numerous piano pieces (Capriccio, Valse-Improptu, Polacca graziosa, Polonaise, etc.); choruses; organ works (Präludium und Doppelfuge, Einleitung und Doppelfuge, Zwanzig Orgelvorspiele, etc.); edited classic instructive works.

Seiffert (zī'-fert), Max, eminent German musicologist; b. Beeskow-on-Spree, Feb. 9, 1868; d. Schleswig, April 13, 1948. He entered the Univ. of Berlin in 1886, studying musicology under Ph. Spitta; took the degree of Dr. phil. with the dissertation J. P. Sweelinck und seine direkten deutschen Schüler (publ. in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft,' 1891). In 1914 he was elected a member of the Berlin Akademie; was editor of 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1904-14) and of 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (from 1918); publ. Geschichte der Klaviermusik (Berlin, 1899-1901; nominally the 3rd ed. of Weitzmann's history, but actually a new and valuable book); Die Musik Hamburgs im Zeitalter Bachs (1920); etc. For 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' he edited Scheidt's Tablatura nova (vol. I), selected works of Fr. Tunder (vol. III), selected works of M. Weckmann and Ch. Bernhardt (vol. VI), cantatas etc. by Buxtehude (vol. XIV), the collected works of F. W. Zachow (vols. XXI and XXII); J. G. Walther's organ works (vols. XXVI and XXVII), etc.; for 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern,' selected clavier works of Joh. and W. H. Pachelbel (vol. II, 1), organ works of Joh. and W. H. Pachelbel (vol. IV, 1), Nürnberg Meister (vol. VI, 1), selected works of Leopold Mozart (vol. IX, 2), etc.; for 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich,' Joh. Pachelbel's 94 fugues (for organ) on the Magnificat (vol. 17; with H. Botsiber); for the publications of the 'Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis,' Sweelinck's complete works (12 vols.), A. van Noordt's Tabulatuurboek (vol. XIX), C. Boskoop's Psalmen Davids (vol. XXII), etc.; and a collection of old music under the title Organum (from 1924). He also edited many works by Bach and Handel for modern performance. —A 'Festschrift' for him was publ. for his 70th birthday (1938), and another for his 80th birthday (1948).

Seifriz (zī'-frits), Max, German violinist and composer; b. Rottweil, Württemberg, Oct. 9, 1827; d. Stuttgart, Dec. 20, 1885. He was court Kapellmeister to Prince Hohenzollern at Löwenberg (1854-69); from 1871, music director at Stuttgart. —Works: incidental music to Die Jungfrau von Orleans; cantata, Ariadne auf Naxos; a symphony; a concert overture; choruses for male and mixed voices; wrote, with E. Singer, a Grosse theoretisch-praktische Violinschule (2 vols., 1884-97).

Seiss (zīss), Isidor (Wilhelm), German composer and teacher; b. Dresden, Dec. 23, 1840; d. Cologne, Sept. 25, 1905. He was a pupil of Fr. Wieck and J. Otto; from 1870, piano teacher at Cologne Cons.; conducted the concerts of the 'Musikalische Gesellschaft' there (until 1900). He composed studies in bravura for piano and other pieces; edited classical works (Beethoven, Weber); made transcriptions.

Seitz (zīts), Robert, German music publisher and piano manufacturer; b. Leipzig, April 8, 1837; d. there, Sept. 26, 1889. He was a music publisher from 1866 till 1878; then, selling out, he established a piano factory, which failed in 1884, when his interesting paper, 'Das musikalische Centralblatt,' ceased to appear.

Seixas (say'-shas), (José Antonio) Carlos de, Portuguese musician; b. Coimbra, June 11, 1704; d. Lisbon, Aug. 25, 1742. He studied with his father, a church organist, and from the age of 16, filled positions as organist in Lisbon. He also gave harpsichord lessons there; wrote a number of sonatas, fugues, and dances for the harpsichord, as well as overtures and choral works. He knew Domenico Scarlatti personally, but was not overly influenced by the Italian manner of keyboard composition. —Cf. S. Kastner, Carlos de Seixas (Coimbra, 1947).

Séjan (sā-zhahn), Nicolas, French composer and organist; b. Paris, March 19, 1745; d. there, March 16, 1819. He was a pupil of Forqueray; organist of St.-André-des-Arts in 1760, of Notre Dame in 1772, of St.-Sulpice in 1783; in 1789, of the royal chapel, and teacher at the 'Ecole royale de chant.' He lost his posts in the Revolution, but in 1807 became organist at the Invalides, and in 1814 (after the restoration of the monarchy) of the royal chapel. He publ. 6 violin sonatas, piano sonatas, 3 piano trios, and music for piano and for organ. —Cf. C. Bouvet, Nicolas Séjan et G.-F. Couperin, organistes de l'Opéra, in 'Musique et Théâtre' (1926).

Sekles (zeh'-kles), Bernhard, German conductor, composer, and teacher; b. Frankfurt, June 20, 1872; d. there, Dec. 15, 1934. He studied with Iwan Knorr and others at the Hoch Cons., where he became prof. of theory in 1896; from 1924 till 1933 he was director of the Cons. He wrote 2 operas, Scheherazade (Mannheim, Nov. 2, 1917) and Die zehn Küsse (Frankfurt, 1926); the ballets Der Zwerg und die Infantin, after Oscar Wilde (Frankfurt, 1913) and Die Hochzeit des Faun (Wiesbaden, 1921); a symph. poem, Aus den Gärten der Semiramis; Serenade for 11 solo instruments; Kleine Suite for orch.; Passacaglia und Fuge for string quartet; trio for clarinet, cello, and piano; a violin sonata; several albums of piano music.

Selby, Bertram Luard, English organist, composer, and teacher; b. Ightham, Kent, Feb. 12, 1853; d. Winterton, Dec. 26, 1918. He studied with Reinecke and Jadassohn at the Leipzig Cons.; filled various organ positions in London (until 1900); was organist at the Rochester Cathedral. —Works: 2 operas: The Ring (1886) and Adela (1888); an operetta ('duologue') Weather or no (London, Aug. 10, 1896; very successful; also produced in Germany as Das Wetterhäuschen); 2 piano quintets; a violin sonata; piano pieces; organ works.

Selby, William, organist and composer; b. England, 1738; d. Boston, Dec., 1798. He settled in the U. S. about 1771, and in 1774 was organist at Trinity Church in Newport, R. I.; from 1777, organist at King's Chapel, Boston. He kept a grocery store and was also active as teacher and concert manager. He composed songs, anthems, and some instrumental pieces. —Cf. O. G. Sonneck, Bibliography of Early Secular American Music (1905; 2nd ed., revised by W. T. Upton, 1945).

Seligmann, Hippolyte-Prospér, French cellist; b. Paris, July 28, 1817; d. Monte Carlo, Feb. 5, 1882. He studied at the Paris Cons., taking 1st prize in 1836; made extensive tours. He publ. 6 Études caractéristiques, fantasies, caprices, etc., for cello with piano; and 2 albums of songs.

Selle (zel'-leh), Thomas, German composer; b. Zörbig, March 23, 1599; d. Hamburg, July 2, 1663. He was rector in Wesselsburen (1625); cantor in Itzehoe (1634); cantor at the Johanneum and music director of the 5 principal churches in Hamburg (from 1641). He publ. sacred and secular songs (including settings of poems by Rist), and left in MS numerous madrigals, motets, and Passions. He was an early member of the Hamburg school of German song writing. His collections include: Concertatio Castalidum (1624); Deliciae pastorum Arcadiae (1624); Hagiodecamelhydriion (1627-31); Deliciorum juveniliū decas (1634); Monophonica (1636). His Johannes-Passion of 1642 was brought out in a modern ed. by R. Gerber (1934); reprints of separate songs publ. by H. J. Moser. —Cf. A. Arnheim, Thomas Selle als Schulkantor in Itzehoe und Hamburg, in the 'Liliencron—Festschrift' (1910); H. J. Moser, Aus der Frühgeschichte der deutschen Generalbasspassion, in the 'Jahrbuch Peters' (1920); L. Krüger, Die Hamburgische Musikorganisation im 17. Jahrhundert (1933; p. 64 ff.); S. Günther, Die geistliche Konzertmusik von Thomas Selle nebst einer Biographie (Giessen, 1935).

Sellner (zeh'l'-ner), Joseph, oboe player and teacher; b. Landau, Bavaria, March 13, 1787; d. Vienna, May 17, 1843. He played the oboe in an Austrian army regiment; then at Prague in Weber's orch. (from 1811); from 1817 at the Court Opera in Vienna. He taught at the Vienna Cons. from 1821, and conducted the student concerts there until 1838. His Theoretisch-praktische Oboen-Schule is a fine method for oboe; he also publ. a concerto and 3 concertinos for oboe with orch.; a concerto for 2 oboes; etc.

Selmer, Johan Peter, Norwegian composer; b. Oslo, Jan. 20, 1844; d. Venice, July 22, 1910. After studying law in Norway he went to Paris, where he took a course under Ambroise Thomas at the Paris Cons. (1868-70) and later at the Leipzig Cons. with Richter (1871-74). From 1883 till 1886 he conducted the Oslo Philharmonic. He was greatly influenced by Berlioz and Wagner; his symph. pieces bear the imprint of late Romanticism; like Grieg, he made use of Norwegian folk material. —Works: for orch. (all performed in Oslo): Scène funèbre (Sept. 30, 1871), Alastor, after Shelley (Oct. 24, 1874), Karneval in Flamdern (Nov. 8, 1890), In den Bergen, suite (1892), Prometheus, symph. poem (his most important work; Oct. 29, 1898); choral works with orch.: Nordens Aand (The Spirit of the North); Hilsen til Nidaros, cantata; Nogle politiske Sange og andre Viser (Some Political Songs and Other Airs) for chorus in unison, and orch.; numerous male choruses a cappella; arrangements of folk melodies; songs for solo voice with piano. —Cf. P. Merkel, Der norwegische Komponist Johan Selmer. Ein Lebensbild (Leipzig, 1904).

Selva, Blanche, French pianist and teacher; b. Brive, Jan. 29, 1884; d. St. Amand, Tallende, Puy-de-Dôme, Dec. 3, 1942. She studied piano at the Paris Cons. and composition with Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum; taught piano there from 1901 till 1922; then was on the faculty of the conservatories of Strasbourg, Prague, and Barcelona. She was one of the strongest propagandists of modern music in Paris early in the century, and her concerts attracted the musical élite of Paris; she also excelled in playing Bach. As a writer and teacher, she likewise showed a fine understanding of the problems involved. —Books: La Sonate (Paris, 1913); Quelques mots sur la sonate (Paris, 1914); L'Enseignement musical de la technique du piano (3 vols.; Paris, 1922); Les Sonates de Beethoven (Barcelona, 1927); a monograph on Déodat de Séverac (Paris, 1930); etc.

Selvaggi, Rito, Italian composer; b. Nocattaro di Bari, May 22, 1898. He studied at the Liceo Musicale in Pesaro and later with Busoni; taught at the Cons. of Parma (1934-38); then became director of the Palermo Cons. (1938-43). Among his works are the operas Maggiolata veneziana (Naples, 1929) and Santa Caterina da Siena (1947); the oratorio Estasi francescana (1926); Stabat Mater (1941); several suites in the old Italian style for orchestra.

Sembrich (zěhm'-brih), Marcella (real name Praxede Marcelline Kochanska; Sembrich was her mother's maiden-name), famous coloratura soprano; b. Wisniewczyk, Galicia, Feb. 15, 1858; d. New York, Jan. 11, 1935. From the age of 4 her father, Kasimir Kochanski, gave her piano lessons; violin lessons were soon added. At 10 she appeared in public as a performer on both instruments. In 1869 her father sent her to the Lwow Cons., where she studied piano with Wilhelm Stengel. In 1874 she played and sang for Liszt, who urged her to train her voice. She then studied singing with Viktor Rokitsansky in Vienna, and with G. B. Lamperti, Jr., in Milan. On May 5, 1877, she married her former teacher, Stengel (b. Lemberg, Aug. 7, 1846; d. New York, May 15, 1917), and with him went to Athens, where she made her operatic début on June 3, 1877, as Elvira in Bellini's Puritani; returning to Vienna, she studied the German repertory with Richard Lewy. From 1878 to 1880 she sang at Dresden. On June 12, 1880, she made her London début as Lucia; American début, at the Metropolitan Opera House, on Oct. 24, 1883. Thereafter she sang at the principal opera houses of Germany, Austria, France, Spain, Scandinavia, and Russia until 1898, then becoming a regular member of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Her farewell appearance in opera was at the Metropolitan, Feb. 6, 1909. Her repertory included 40 operatic parts, of which Violetta was the favorite. Of Wagnerian roles, she sang only Eva in Die Meistersinger. In 1924 she joined the faculty of the newly-founded Curtis Institute, Philadelphia; also taught at the Juilliard School, N. Y. —Cf. G. Armin, Marcella Sembrich und Herr Prof. Julius Hey (Leipzig, 1898); H. G. Owen, A Recollection of Marcella Sembrich (N. Y., 1950).

Semet (sü-mä'), Théoophile (-Aimé-Émile), French composer; b. Lille, Sept. 6, 1824; d. Corbeil, near Paris, April 15, 1888. He studied with Halévy; was a drummer at the Opéra; wrote popular songs before attempting operatic composition. The following operas by Semet were produced in Paris: Nuits d'Espagne (Dec. 30, 1857); Gil Blas (March 23, 1860); Ondine (Jan. 7, 1863); and La petite Fadette (Sept. 11, 1869).

Senailé (seh-nah-yä'), Jean Baptiste, French violinist and composer; b. Paris, Nov. 23, 1687; d. there, Oct. 8, 1730. He studied first with his father, a member of the '24 violons du roi'; later was a pupil of Jean Baptiste Anet; then went to Italy, where he studied with Vitali. He returned to Paris in 1720; gave many performances at the Concert Spirituel. His playing was in the Italian tradition; in his music, he was also influenced by the Italian school of Corelli and Vitali. He publ. 50 violin sonatas (with continuo) in 5 books (1710-27); modern reprints by Moffat, Jensen, Alard, etc. —Cf. L. de la Laurencie, L'École française de violon (Paris, 1922; vol. 1, pp. 165-79); A. Moser, Geschichte des Violinspiels (1923; p. 179).

Senart (seh-nahr'), Maurice, French music publisher; b. Paris, Jan. 29, 1878. In 1908 he founded a music publishing enterprise in partnership with Roudanez; in 1912, became sole head of the firm, which bears his name. Among his early publications was the important collection edited by Henry Expert, 'Maîtres musiciens de la Renaissance française'; there followed several other collections; many editions of classical music; collected works of Chopin, edited by Alfred Cortot. Senart was also a decided supporter of modern French music; publ. many works by Honegger and Milhaud, and works by composers of other nationalities resident in Paris (Tansman, Harsanyi, etc.). His publishing firm was acquired by Salabert in 1941.

Sendrey, Albert Richard, composer, son of Aladár Szendrei; b. Chicago, Dec. 26, 1911; studied in Leipzig, Paris, and London; was arranger for film companies in Paris (1935-37) and London (1937-44) before settling in Hollywood in 1944. Among his original works are: Oriental Suite for orch. (1935); 3 symphonies; piano pieces; cello pieces.

Sendrey, Alfred. See Szendrei, Aladár.

Senesino, Francesco (real name Bernardi; called Senesino after his birthplace), Italian male soprano; b. Siena, c. 1680; d. c. 1750. He studied in Bologna with Bernacchi; in 1719 was engaged to sing at the court theater in Dresden; Handel heard him there, and engaged him for his Italian opera company in London. He began his London appearances in Bononcini's opera Astarto (Nov. 30, 1720), and his success was enormous from the start. For 15 consecutive seasons he enjoyed the favor of the London public; was associated with Handel's company until 1733, when a rival organization, the 'Opera of the Nobility,' engaged him and several other celebrated Italian singers, to sing under the direction of Porpora. In 1735 he returned to Siena; in 1739, he was in Florence. It is not known where and exactly when he died. —Cf. F. Haböck, Die Kastraten und ihre Gesangkunst (Stuttgart, 1927); A. Heriot, The Castrati in Opera (London, 1956, p. 91 ff.).

Senff, Bartholf (Wilhelm), German music publisher and editor; b. Friedrichshall, near Coburg, Sept. 2, 1815; d. Badenweiler, June 25, 1900. As a young man he entered Kistner's music publishing house in Leipzig, advancing to the position of managing clerk; here he already began publishing the 'Signale für die musikalische Welt,' a trial number appearing in Dec., 1842; 1st regular number was issued on Jan. 1, 1843. This was one of the most important German music periodicals of the 19th century; it included reports of musical events, special articles, and correspondence from the music centers of the world; many celebrated musicians contributed to it, among them Hans von Bülow. Senff remained editor of the 'Signale' until his death, and publication continued (with a brief interruption in 1917-18) until 1941 (after 1907 by Simrock). Senff founded his own publishing business in 1847; his catalogue included original publications of works by Schumann, Liszt, Anton Rubinstein, Raff, Franz, etc. His niece, Marie Senff, managed the firm until 1907, when she sold it and the 'Signale' to Simrock of Berlin.

Senfl (zahn-fl), Ludwig, important church composer of the Renaissance; b. Zürich, c. 1490; d. Munich, early in 1543. His father was a singer from Freiburg-im-Breisgau; the family name may have been Senffli, Sänftli, Sänfly, Senfel, etc., and the ultimate origin undoubtedly German, although Ludwig Senfl was known under the appellation Schweizer (the Swiss). As a small child, from 1495, he sang in the imperial court chapel; from 1504 he was in Zürich, and shortly afterwards went to Constance, where he was a pupil of Isaac; he was Isaac's assistant at St. Ann's Church, Augsburg, and also sang in the court chapel of Maximilian I; after Isaac's death (1517), Senfl completed his teacher's Choralis Constantinus and became his successor as chamber composer; remained in Augsburg for some time after Maximilian's death (1519), and received a stipend from Charles V; edited the historically important Liber selectarum cantionum (1520), which was one of the earliest books with musical notation publ. in Germany. In 1523 he settled in Munich as 'intonator' at the Bavarian court chapel; his fame grew; he was referred to by an early contemporary as 'prince of all German music.' There is extant a letter written to Senfl by Martin Luther, dated Oct. 4, 1530, containing high praise of the composer (reprinted in F. A. Beck's Dr. M. Luthers Gedanken über die Musik, Berlin, 1828). —Publ. works: 5 Salutationes Domini nostri Ihesu Christi (motets in 4 voices, Nuremberg, 1526); Varia carminum genera, quibus tum Horatius tum alii egregii poetae . . . harmoniis com- posita, for 4 voices (Nuremberg, 1534; 9 Odes are in P. Hofhaimer's Harmonie poeticae, 1539); Magnificat octo tonorum, for 4-5 voices (Nuremberg, 1537); 81 numbers by Senfl are in the collection 121 neue Lieder (Nuremberg, 1534), and 64 numbers in 115 guter neuer Liedlein (Nuremberg, 1544); single compositions in various collections of the period (for a list, see Eitner's Bibliographie, Berlin, 1877, and vol. IV of the 'Publikationen älterer . . . Musikwerke'). Magnificats and a selection of 12 motets were publ. by Th. Kroyer in vol. III, 2 of 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern.' Many MSS (sacred and secular vocal works) are in the Munich Library. Some songs have been publ. in Jöde's Chorbuch, and in 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 34, ed. by J. Wolf); Weltliche Lieder for 4-part mixed chorus were publ. by Willi Schuh (Zürich, 1929); motets are in Schering's Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen (Nos. 74, 84-86); etc. 7 Masses were edited by E. Löhner and O. Ursprung for the 'Reichsdenkmale deutscher Musik' (Leipzig, 1936), and this was taken over the following year by the 'Schweizerische Musikforschende Gesellschaft' as vol. I of the collected works of Senfl (Basel, 1937-40; vol. II, Deutsche Lieder a 4-6; vol. III, motets; vol. IV, Deutsche Lieder a 4-7; vol. V, Deutsche Lieder a 4-6, publ. in 1949).—Cf. Th. Kroyer, Ludwig Senfl und sein Motettenstil (Munich, 1902); H. J. Moser, Instrumentalismen bei Ludwig Senfl, in 'J. Wolf-Festschrift' (1929); H. J. Moser, Der Altmünchner Tonmeister Ludwig Senfl, in 'Süddeutsche Monatshefte' (1930; p. 531); E. Löhner, Die Messen von Ludwig Senfl (Lichtenstein, 1938); H. Birtner, Sieben Messen von Ludwig Senfl, in 'Archiv für Musikforschung' (1942); see also G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 689-90).

Senilov (seh-nē'-lov), Vladimir Alexeyevitch, Russian composer; b. Viatka, Aug. 8, 1875; d. Petrograd, Sept. 18, 1918. He was a student of jurisprudence at the Univ. of St. Petersburg; was encouraged by Rimsky-Korsakov to cultivate his natural talent for musical composition, and went to Leipzig, where he studied with Hugo Riemann (1895-1901); continued his studies with Rimsky-Korsakov and Glazunov at the St. Petersburg Cons., graduating in 1906. His works include a lyric drama, Vassily Buslayev; 1-act opera Hippolytus, after Euripides; In Autumn, symph. poem; Miziri, symph. poem after Lermontov; Pan, symph. poem; The Scythians, symph. poem; 3 string quartets; choral pieces; songs. His MSS are preserved in the Leningrad Public Library.

Serafin, Tullio, Italian conductor; b. Rotanova di Cavarzere, Venice, Dec. 8, 1878. He studied at the Milan Cons.; made his début as conductor in Ferrara (1900); then conducted in the major cities of Italy and in Buenos Aires. In 1924 he became one of the chief conductors at the Metropolitan Opera House; in 1935 returned to Italy, conducting principally in Rome and Milan (La Scala); also conducted opera in London and Paris; in 1952 was a guest conductor for the New York City Opera Company.

Serafino, Santo, celebrated Italian violin maker; b. Udine, c. 1650; d. Venice, c. 1740. He was a pupil of Nicolo Amati, and probably worked in Cremona; signed his name on the labels as 'Sanctus Seraphinus Nicolai Amati Cremonensis Alumnus.' His instruments contained elements characteristic of Stainer and of Nicolo Amati. His nephew Giorgio Serafino worked in Venice in the 1st half of the 18th century.

Serassi, Giuseppe ('il vecchio'), the founder of a celebrated house of Italian organ builders; b. Gordano, 1694; d. Crema, 1760. His son Andrea Luigi (1725-1799) carried on the business; built the cathedral organs of Crema, Parma, and Fossano. A younger member of the family, Giuseppe ('il giovane'; b. Bergamo, Nov. 16, 1750; d. there, May 13, 1817) upheld the reputation of the firm, and built many organs in Lombardy. His catalogue of 1815 lists 345 instruments. He publ. a description of the new organ at Como (1808), with a short history of the organ, and good rules for registration; also brought out a pamphlet, Sugli organi (1816). The catalogue publ. in 1852 by his sons, Carlo and Giuseppe Serassi, shows a total of 654 organs constructed.

Serato, Arrigo, Italian violinist; b. Bologna, Feb. 7, 1877; d. Rome, Dec. 27, 1948. He received his musical training from his father, a cellist; studied at the Bologna Cons. and with Joachim in Germany; from 1914 till 1921 taught at the Santa Cecilia Academy in Rome. He had a very high reputation in Italy as a teacher. —Cf. A. Della Corte, Arrigo Serato violinista (Siena, 1950).

Serauky, Walter, eminent German musicologist; b. Halle, April 20, 1903. He studied at Leipzig Univ. with Schering, H. J. Moser, and Prüfer; Dr. phil. at the Univ. of Halle, 1928, with the dissertation Die musikalische Nachahmungsästhetik im Zeitraum von 1700 bis 1850 (publ. Münster, 1929); joined the faculty of the Univ. of Halle; 1940, prof. there; in 1949, appointed prof. at the Leipzig Univ. He contributed valuable essays to various German publications; brought out a music history of the city of Halle (5 vols.; 1935-43). In 1956, he began publication of an extensive study of Handel, G. F. Händel; sein Leben, sein Werk; also edited works by Handel, Türk, and Reichardt.

Séré, Octave. See Poueigh.

Sérieux (sā-rē-ěks'), Auguste, French composer and writer on music; b. Amiens, June 14, 1865; d. Montreux, Switzerland, Feb. 19, 1949. He studied at the Schola Cantorum with Gedalge and Vincent d'Indy; taught composition there (1900-14), and collaborated with Vincent d'Indy in his monumental Cours de Composition (3 vols., Paris, 1897-1933); publ. a biography of d'Indy (Paris, 1913) and a short treatise, Les trois états de la tonalité (Paris, 1910). His compositions include La Voie lactée, for solo voice and orch.; the cantata Salvete vedri libani; violin sonata; piano pieces; songs.

Sering (zā'-ring), Friedrich Wilhelm, German teacher and composer; b. Fürstenwalde, near Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, Nov. 26, 1822; d. Hanover, Nov. 5, 1901. From 1871 he was head teacher in the Seminary at Strasbourg, where he organized a 'Gesangverein.' —Works: oratorio, Christi Einzug in Jerusalem; Psalm 72, for mixed chorus with piano; the manuals, Gesanglehre für Volksschulen and Die Choralfiguration, theoretisch-praktisch; and an elementary violin method.

Serkin, Rudolf, eminent pianist; b. Eger, Bohemia, March 28, 1903 (of Russian parentage). He studied in Vienna with Richard Robert (piano), Joseph Marx and Arnold Schoenberg (composition). After an early début at the age of 12, he began his serious concert career in 1920; appeared frequently in joint recitals with the violinist Adolf Busch (whose daughter he married); made his American début with Busch at a Coolidge Festival concert in Washington (1933); in 1939 he was appointed to the faculty of the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. He has appeared with virtually all major orchestras in the U. S. and Europe; has given numerous recitals; taught master classes. His performances of the Viennese classics are unexcelled in authority, faithfulness of treatment, and technical virtuosity.

Serly (shār'-lē), Tibor, composer and conductor; b. Losonc, Hungary, Nov. 25, 1900; taken to America as a child. He studied with his father (a theater conductor in Budapest); from 1922, with Kodály and Bartók (composition) at the Royal Academy of Music, Budapest; violin with Hubay. After graduating, he returned to the U. S.; played viola in the Cincinnati Symph. Orch., the Philadelphia Orch., and the N. B. C. Symph. Orch. In 1937 he settled in N. Y. as a teacher. —Works: viola concerto (1929); symph. no. 1 (Budapest, May 13, 1935, composer conducting); 6 Dance Designs (Budapest, May 13, 1935); Colonial Pageant, symph. suite (1937); Elegy, for orch. (1945); Rhapsody, for viola and orch. (N. Y., Feb. 27, 1948); trombone concerto (Chautauqua, Aug. 17, 1952); songs; etc. Serly completed and orchestrated Bartók's unfinished viola concerto (1945).

Sermisy (sehr-mē-sē'), Claude (Claudin) de, French composer; b. c. 1490; d. Paris, 1562. In 1508 he was appointed 'clerc musicien' of the Sainte-Chapelle at Paris; accompanied Francis I to Italy in 1515; was present at the meeting between Francis and Henry VIII at the Field of the Cloth of Gold (1520). Sermisy composed chansons, motets, and Masses, which were printed in collections of the time and frequently republished after his death, indicating a wide popularity. Attaignant's '31 chansons' (1529) contains 11 songs by Sermisy, which are reprinted in Expert's 'Les Maîtres musiciens'; other modern reprints include 3 chansons in Eitner's 'Publikationen älterer . . . Musikwerke' (vol. 23; Leipzig, 1899); 3 chansons in Commer's 'Collectio operum musicorum' (vol. 12); 2 chansons in Bordes, 'Chansonnier du XIV<sup>e</sup> siècle'; 4 chansons in Expert's 'Extraits des maîtres musiciens de la Renaissance.' —Cf. O. Kade, Die ältere Passionskomposition (Gütersloh, 1893; deals fully with Sermisy's Passion music); M. Brenet, Les Musiciens de la Sainte-Chapelle du Palais (Paris, 1910); G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 291-95).

Serocki (sēh-rōts'-kē), Kazimierz, Polish composer and pianist; b. Torun, March 3, 1922. He studied music in Lodz; in 1947 went to Paris, where he took a course in composition with Nadia Boulanger. Among his works are several cantatas, a piano concerto, and a Symphony of Songs (Warsaw, June 11, 1954).

Seroff, Victor, writer on music; b. Batum, Caucasus, Oct. 14, 1902; studied law at the Univ. of Tiflis; then piano with Moriz Rosenthal in Vienna and Theodore Szanto in Paris; eventually settled in New York and became an American citizen. —Books: Dmitri Shostakovich: The Life and Background of a Soviet Composer (N. Y., 1943); The Mighty Five; the Cradle of Russian National Music (N. Y., 1948); Rachmaninoff (N. Y., 1950; French transl., Paris, 1953); Maurice Ravel (N. Y., 1953); Debussy, Musician of France (N. Y., 1956). —Cf. M. R. Werner, To Whom It May Concern: The Story of V. I. Seroff (N. Y., 1931).

Serov (syeh-rōv'), Alexander Nikolayevitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Jan. 23, 1820; d. there, Feb. 1, 1871. He was trained in a law school; also took cello lessons with Karl Schuberth; became a functionary in the Ministry of Justice; served in St. Petersburg (1840-45); then in Simferopol, Crimea (1845-48); in 1849 turned definitely to music, and abandoned government employ. He never took lessons in composition, except a correspondence course in counterpoint, but achieved a certain mastery in harmony and orchestration by studying the classics. In 1851 he began writing critical articles on music and soon became an important figure in Russian journalism; in 1856 he became editor of the 'Musical and Theatrical Monitor.' In 1858 he made his first trip abroad, visiting Germany and Bohemia; the following year made another German visit, and also traveled in Austria and Switzerland; during this journey he met Wagner, whose ardent admirer he became and remained to the end of his career; expounded Wagner's ideas in Russian publications and engaged in bitter polemics with those who did not subscribe to his views, including his old friend and schoolmate Vladimir Stasov. He started very late in the field of composition; inspired by the performance of a biblical play, Judith, by an Italian troupe at St. Petersburg in 1861, he resolved to write an opera on this subject, essaying an Italian libretto, but later deciding on a Russian text. Judith was produced in St. Petersburg on May 28, 1863 with excellent success; but although Serov intended to emulate Wagner in the music, the style of Judith was closer to Meyerbeer. Quite different was Serov's 2nd opera, Rogneda, written on a Russian subject, in a distinctly national idiom, with plentiful use of Russian folksongs. Rogneda was staged in St. Petersburg on Nov. 8, 1865, and won a spectacular success; the Tsar Alexander II attended a subsequent performance and granted Serov an annual stipend of 1000 rubles for it. He then began the composition of another Russian opera, Vrazhaya Sila (Malevolent Power), but death (of a sudden heart failure) overtook him when the 5th act was still incomplete; the opera was finished by N. T. Solovyev, and produced posthumously in St. Petersburg on May 1, 1871. All 3 operas of Serov retain their popularity in Russia, but are unknown elsewhere. Serov wrote further an Ave Maria for Adelina Patti (1868); a Stabat Mater; incidental music to Nero; Plyaska Zaporozhtsev (Dance of the Zaporozh Cossacks) for orch. (1867); an Ouverture d'une comédie for piano 4 hands, and a few other small pieces. A selection from his writings was publ. in 4 vols. (St. Petersburg, 1892-95). —In 1863 Serov married a young Conservatory pupil, Valentina Bergmann (1846-1927), who was the first Russian woman to compose operas: Uriel Acosta (Moscow, 1885) and Ilya Murometz (Moscow, March 6, 1899; with Shaliapin in the title role). She helped to edit and publish Serov's posthumous works; wrote essays; published a number of piano pieces and a book of memoirs (St. Petersburg, 1914) under the name Valentina Serova. —Cf. N. Findeisen, A. N. Serov. His Life and Work (St. Petersburg, 1900; 2nd ed., 1904); Valentina Serova, A. N. Serov (St. Petersburg, 1914); G. Abraham and M. D. Calvocoressi, Masters of Russian Music (N. Y., 1936); G. Khubov, The Life of A. N. Serov (Moscow, 1950).

Serpette (sehr-peht'), Gaston, French composer; b. Nantes, Nov. 4, 1846; d. Paris, Nov. 3, 1904. He studied with Ambroise Thomas at the Paris Cons., taking the 1st Grand Prix de Rome in 1871 with the cantata Jeanne d'Arc. From 1874 he produced in Paris a steady progression of light operas of which the following enjoyed a modicum of success: La Branche cassée (Jan. 23, 1874); Le Manoir du pic tordu (May 28, 1875); Le Moulin du vert galant (April 12, 1876); La petite muette (Oct. 3, 1877); Le petit chaperon rouge (Oct. 10, 1885); Adam et Eve (Oct. 6, 1886); Mademoiselle du téléphone (May 2, 1891); Shakespeare (Nov. 23, 1899).

Serrano, Emilio, Spanish composer of light operas; b. Vitoria, March 13, 1850; d. Madrid, April 9, 1939. He studied at the Madrid Cons., and taught piano and composition there for half a century (1870-1920); also conducted symph. concerts in Madrid. He wrote 5 operas: Mitridates (Madrid, 1882), Doña Juana la Loca (Madrid, 1890), Irene de Otranto (Madrid, Feb. 17, 1891), Gonzalo de Córdoba (Madrid, Dec. 6, 1898), and La Maja de Rumbo (Buenos Aires, Sept. 24, 1910).

Serrao, Paolo, Italian composer; b. Filadelfia, Catanzaro, 1830; d. Naples, March 17, 1907. He studied with Mercadante at the Cons. of Naples, and taught there from 1863. He brought out his first opera, Pergolesi, in 1857, followed by La Duchessa di Guisa (1865) and Il Figliuol prodigo (1868); also composed an oratorio, Gli Ortonesi in Scio; a funeral symph. for Mercadante, Omaggio a Mercadante; a cantata with orch. Le tre ore d'agonia, and much church music.

Serres (serr), Louis (Arnal) de, French composer and teacher; b. Lyons, Nov. 8, 1864; d. Néronde (Loire), Dec. 25, 1942. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Taudou (harmony) and César Franck (organ); joined the faculty of the Schola Cantorum; taught there from 1900; when the institution was reorganized in 1935 as the École César Franck, he became its director. His compositions include Les Heures claires for voice and orch.; Les Caresses for orch.; choruses, motets, and songs.

Servais (sehr-vā'), (Adrien) François, famous Belgian cellist; b. Hal, near Brussels, June 6, 1807; d. there, Nov. 26, 1866. He studied at the Brussels Cons.; played in a theater orch. there; then went to Paris, where he gave a concert in 1834, with brilliant success; on May 25, 1835, he played his own cello concerto with the London Philharmonic; subsequently made a grand tour of Europe; spent several years in Russia as a concert player, even reaching Siberia. He was appointed prof. at the Brussels Cons. in 1848, and taught many pupils who became distinguished artists. He wrote 3 concertos and 16 fantasias for cello with orch.; 6 études and 14 duos for cello with piano (with Gregoir); 3 duos for violin and cello (with Léonard).

Servais, François (Franz), composer and conductor; b. St. Petersburg, 1846; d. Asnières, near Paris, Jan. 14, 1901. He was an illegitimate son of Liszt and Princess Carolyne Sayn-Wittgenstein, and was adopted by Adrien-François Servais, assuming his name. He studied at the Brussels Cons. with Kufferath; won the Belgian Prix de Rome in 1873 with the cantata Le Tasse. As a conductor he vigorously promoted the cause of Wagner's music, and performed several of Wagner's operas in Brussels for the first time. His own opera Iôn (originally L'Apollonide) was produced at Karlsruhe in 1899. —Cf. E. Michotte, Au souvenir de François Servais (Paris, 1907).

Servais, Joseph, Belgian cellist; son of Adrien-François Servais; b. Hal, near Brussels, Nov. 23, 1850; d. there, Aug. 29, 1885. He was a pupil of his father; made his début in a joint recital with him in Warsaw (1867); then went to Weimar, where he played in the orch. (1868-70); in 1872, returned to Belgium, where he was prof. at the Brussels Cons. until his early death.

Servièrès (sehr-vyâr'), Georges, French writer on music; b. Fréjus, Oct. 13, 1858; d. Paris, July 25, 1937. He publ. a number of informative books: Richard Wagner jugé en France (1887); Le 'Tannhäuser' à l'Opéra 1861 (1895); La Musique française moderne (1897); Weber (1906); Emmanuel Chabrier (1912); Épisodes d'histoire musicale (1914); Saint-Saëns (1923); Documents inédits sur les organistes français des XVII<sup>e</sup> et XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècles (1923); Edouard Lalo (1925); La Décoration artistique des buffets d'orgues (1928); Gabriel Fauré (1930).

Sessions, Roger, eminent American composer; b. Brooklyn, Dec. 28, 1896. He studied music at Harvard Univ. (B. A., 1915), and at the Yale School of Music with Horatio Parker (B. M., 1917); then with Ernest Bloch in Cleveland and N. Y.; this association was a decisive one for Sessions; his early works were strongly influenced by Bloch's rhapsodic style and intense harmonic idiom. From 1917 to 1921 Sessions taught music theory at Smith College; in 1921 was appointed teacher of theory at the Cleveland Institute of Music, first as assistant to Ernest Bloch, then as its head. He held two Guggenheim Fellowships (1926, 1927), a Fellowship of the American Academy in Rome (1928-31), and the Carnegie Fellowship (1931-32). He lived mostly in Europe from 1926 to 1933 (Florence, Rome, Berlin); between 1928 and 1931 presented in N. Y. a series of concerts of modern music, in association with Aaron Copland, (Copland-Sessions Concerts), which attracted considerable attention; was also active in various international music organizations. After returning to the U. S., he taught in N. Y. and at Princeton Univ.; from 1944 till 1952 was prof. of music at the Univ. of California, Berkeley; 1952, appointed prof. at Princeton Univ.; also lectured widely in the U. S. and in Europe. While his early works reflect Romantic ideas, he soon adopted an austere style of composition, akin to that of Stravinsky's later works; developed a remarkably complex and yet compact contrapuntal idiom, presenting considerable difficulties to performers, and not easily assimilated by the public; however, with the general advance of modern music, his highly individual works commanded great respect; his name soon became known as that of a major American composer, despite the scarcity of performances. —Works: for the stage: The Black Maskers, incidental music to Leonid Andreyev's play (Smith College, Northampton, June, 1923); The Trial of Lucullus, 1-act opera (Berkeley, Calif., April 18, 1947); Montezuma, 4-act opera (1947); for orch.: symph. No. 1 (Boston, April 22, 1927); symph. No. 2 (San Francisco, Jan. 9, 1947); symph. No. 3 (Boston, Dec. 6, 1957); symph. No. 4 (1958); suite from The Black Maskers (Cincinnati, Dec. 5, 1930); violin concerto (1935; Chicago, Jan. 8, 1940); Idyll of Theocritus (Louisville, Jan. 14, 1956); piano concerto (N. Y., Feb. 10, 1956); string quintet (1957); 2 string quartets (1936; 1950); duo for violin and piano (1942); sonata for violin solo (1953); 2 piano sonatas (1930; 1946); From My Diary, a suite of 4 pieces for piano; 3 Chorale Preludes for organ (1925); Turn O Libertad, for chorus and piano 4-hands, after Walt Whitman (1943); Mass for unison chorus and organ (1956). He publ. the books, The Musical Experience of Composer, Performer, Listener (Princeton, 1950), Harmonic Practice (N. Y., 1951), Reflections on the Music Life in the United States (N. Y., 1956). —Cf. M. Brunswick, Roger Sessions, in 'Modern Music' (vol. 10, 1933); A. Copland, Our New Music (N. Y., 1941, p. 176 ff.); M. A. Schubart, Roger Sessions, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1946).

Setaccioli (seh-tah-choh'-le), Giacomo, Italian composer and teacher; b. Corneto Tarquinia, Dec. 8, 1868; d. Siena, Dec. 5, 1925. He studied at the Liceo Santa Cecilia, Rome, and was prof. there (1922-25); in 1925 appointed director of the Cons. Cherubini in Florence. He wrote 2 operas, La Sorella di Mark (Rome, May 7, 1896) and Adrienne Lecouvreur (1907); a symphony; 2 symph. poems; Cantica for soli, chorus, and orch.; a Requiem; chamber music; songs; piano pieces, etc.; publ. Debussy è un innovatore? (1910); Note ed appunti al Trattato d'armonia di C. de Sanctis (1923); Studi e conferenze di critica musicale (1923).

Ševčík (shěf'-chik'), Otakar, noted Czech violinist and pedagogue; b. Horaždowitz, March 22, 1852; d. Pisek, Jan. 18, 1934. He studied violin with his father; then at the Prague Cons. with Anton Bennewitz. From 1870 to 1873 he was concertmaster of the Mozarteum in Salzburg; then held a similar post in the Theater an der Wien, Vienna. He then went to Russia, where he became prof. at the Cons. of Kiev (1875); also gave concerts in Russia, achieving great success there. In 1892 he returned to Prague; became head of the violin dept. at the Prague Cons. in 1901; continued to teach until 1906; ill health compelled him to interrupt all activities for 3 years; in 1909 he became head of the master school for violin at the Vienna Academy of Music; from 1919 to 1924 he taught again in Prague; also visited abroad as a teacher in the U. S. (1920; 1924; 1931), London (1932), etc. His method, in contradistinction to the usual diatonic system, is founded on chromatic progressions, especially valuable in securing both accuracy and facility. In various parts of the world he had thousands of pupils, among them Jan Kubelík, Kocian, Marie Hall, Baloković, Erica Morini, and Efrem Zimbalist. He publ. the following pedagogical works (in German, Bohemian, French, and Russian; most of them also printed in English): op. 1, Schule der Violintechnik (4 parts); op. 2, Schule der Bogentechnik (6 parts); op. 6, Violinschule für Anfänger (7 parts); op. 7, Triller-Vorstudien und Ausbildung des Fingeranschlags (2 parts); op. 8, Lagenwechsel-Übungen; op. 9, Doppelgriff-Vorstudien; also Böhmische Tänze und Weisen, for violin and piano. —Cf. V. Nopp, Otakar Ševčík (Prague, 1948); J. Dostál, ed., Otakar Ševčík (collection of essays on him; Prague, 1953). See also Paul Stoeving, A Key to Ševčík's Works (London, 1914).

Séverac (sā-vū-rahk'), Déodat de, French composer; b. Saint-Félix-de-Caraman, Lauragais, July 20, 1873; d. Céret, March 24, 1921. He received his first lessons on the piano from his father, a painter and ardent lover of music. He studied music at the Cons. of Toulouse; in 1890 entered the Schola Cantorum in Paris, where he remained till 1907, studying with Magnard and Vincent d'Indy. He resided alternately in Paris and his native town. —Works: the operas Le Cœur du moulin (Paris, Dec. 8, 1909) and Les Princesses d'Hokifari (not produced); incidental music to L. Damard's Le Mirage (1905), E. Sicard's Héliogabale (1910), M. Navarre's Muguetto (1911), E. Verhaeren's Hélène de Sparte (Paris, May 5, 1912); the symph. poems Nymphes au Crépuscule, Tryptique, Les Grenouilles qui demandent un Roi, Nausikaa; Les Muses sylvestres, suite for double string quintet and piano; Le Parc aux cerfs, suite for oboe, string quintet, and piano; Suite in E for organ; for piano; Petite Suite; En Langue-doc, suite; La Nymphé émue ou le Faune indiscret; En Vacances, album of little pieces; sonata; several collections of folk-songs; solo songs. —Cf. O. Séré, Musiciens français d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1921); L. Moulin, Déodat de Séverac (1922); B. Selva, Déodat de Séverac (Paris, 1930); A. Cortot, La Musique française de piano (vol. 2, Paris, 1932); P. Landormy, Déodat de Séverac, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1934); G. Soula and I. Girard, Hommage à Déodat de Séverac (Toulouse, 1952).

Severn, Edmund, composer and teacher; b. Nottingham, England, Dec. 10, 1862; d. Melrose, Mass., May 14, 1942. In 1866 his father, a violinist, settled in Hartford, Conn.; Severn studied violin with him and with Bernhard Listemann in Boston; composition with Chadwick in Boston and with Ph. Scharwenka in Berlin. He lived in Springfield, Mass., in N. Y., and in Melrose, Mass. His works include 2 symph. poems, Lancelot and Elaine (1898) and Eloise and Abelard (1915); a suite, From Old New England (originally for violin and piano, 1912; orchestrated and conducted by the composer at the Springfield, Mass., Music Festival, May 17, 1919); Song Celestial, for orch. (1912); violin concerto (N. Y. Philharmonic, Jan. 7, 1916); choral works; songs.

Sevitzky, Fabien, conductor; b. Vishny Volotchok, Russia, Sept. 29, 1893; nephew of Serge Koussevitzky. He entered the St. Petersburg Cons. on a scholarship as a double-bass student, graduating in 1911 with a gold medal; joined the orch. of the Bolshoy Theater in Moscow, and began a career as concert player on the double-bass, under his original name Koussevitzky; his uncle, who was already a celebrated double-bass player himself, suggested that he adopt a truncated form of the family name, and Sevitzky complied to avoid confusion. He made his appearances as conductor in Russia under the name Sevitzky; lived in Moscow until 1922; spent a year in Poland as double-bass player in the Warsaw Philharmonic; with his wife, a Russian singer, Maria Koussevitzky (who retained her legal name), he went to Mexico in 1923; then joined the Philadelphia Orch., and in 1925 organized the Philadelphia Chamber String Sinfonietta, which he conducted until 1937. From 1934 to 1936 he conducted the People's Symph. in Boston. From 1937 to 1955 he was permanent conductor of the Indianapolis Symph. Orch.; also made guest appearances in Europe and South America. In 1956-57 he conducted in Europe.

Seybold (zī-bohl't), Artur, German composer; b. Hamburg, Jan. 6, 1868; d. Weissenfels, near Leipzig, Dec. 15, 1948. He studied at the Hamburg Cons.; traveled as violinist with Laube's orch. in Russia (1888); lived in Hamburg as teacher and conductor of choral societies (from 1890). His numerous compositions for violin and piano and his male choruses won considerable popularity; he also publ. a violin method, Das neue System, and instructive pieces.

Seydelmann (zī'-del-man), Franz, German composer; b. Dresden, Oct. 8, 1748; d. there, Oct. 23, 1806. He was the son of a player in the court orch., which he joined as a youth; studied in Italy with Josef Schuster (1765-69). In 1772 both he and Schuster were appointed composers of church music to the Elector in Dresden; later both became conductors at the court church, cembalists at the Italian Opera in Dresden, and in 1787, conductors there. Seydelmann wrote 7 Italian operas, and a German opera, Arsene (Dresden, March 3, 1779); the piano score of Arsene is publ.; also publ. are several numbers from his operas Il Capriccio corretto and La Villanella di Misnia; 6 piano sonatas for 4 hands; 3 sonatas for piano solo; 3 flute sonatas; 3 violin sonatas. In MS are the other Italian operas, 36 Masses, 40 psalms, 37 offertories, a Requiem, numerous other vocal works, both sacred and secular. —Cf. R. Cahn-Speyer, Franz Seydelmann als dramatischer Komponist (Leipzig, 1909).

Seyffardt (zī'-fahrt), Ernst Hermann, German choral conductor and composer; b. Krefeld, May 6, 1859; d. Partenkirchen, Dec., 1942. He studied at the Cologne Cons. with F. Hiller and G. Jensen, and at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik with Kiel; conducted the 'Liedertafel' in Freiburg (1887-92); in 1892 was appointed conductor of the 'Neuer Singverein' in Stuttgart; also taught at the Stuttgart Cons.; retired in 1929. —Works: dramatic scene Thusnelda; a symphony; a violin sonata; a piano quartet; a string quartet; Schicksalsgesang for alto solo, chorus, and orch.; Zum Gedächtniss, for baritone solo, male chorus, and orch.; a patriotic cantata, Aus Deutschlands grosser Zeit; a song cycle, Vom Schwarzwald bis zum Rhein; other vocal works. His operas, Die Glocken von Plurs, was produced at Krefeld in 1912.

Seyfried (zī'-frēd), Ignaz Xaver, Ritter von, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, Aug. 15, 1776; d. there, Aug. 27, 1841. He was a close friend of Mozart, and had some piano lessons from him; studied also with Koželuh and Haydn; afterwards with Albrechtsberger. In 1797 he became conductor at Schikaneder's theater in Vienna; then at the new Theater an der Wien when it opened in 1801, retaining this post until 1827. He was an extremely prolific composer, and some of his 'Singspiele' were very successful; one of them, Die Ochsenmenuette, based on Haydn's music (Vienna, Dec. 31, 1823), gave rise to the well-known anecdote about Haydn's composing an Ox Minuet for a butcher and receiving an ox as a gift. Seyfried also wrote an opera, Der Wundermann am Rheinfall (Vienna, Oct. 26, 1799), which elicited praise from Haydn. He further wrote numerous melodramas, ballets, oratorios, motets, symphonies, quartets, etc. He publ. Beethoven's exercises in thorough-bass, counterpoint, and composition (1832), with some unwarranted additions (see Thayer's Beethoven, III, 80); edited a complete ed. of Albrechtsberger's theoretical works; also edited Preindl's Wiener Tonschule (1827; 2nd ed., 1832). For a complete list of Seyfried's theatrical works and dates of performances see Anton Bauer, Opern und Operetten in Wien (Graz, 1955).

Seymour, John Laurence, American composer; b. Los Angeles, Jan. 18, 1893. He studied with Fannie Charles Dillon; went to Europe in 1927; took lessons with Pizzetti in Italy and with Vincent d'Indy in Paris. Returning to America, he became head of the drama dept. of Sacramento, Cal., Junior College (1926-50); wrote plays. His opera, In the Pasha's Garden, was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House, on Jan. 24, 1935. Other operas include The Devil and Tom Walker (1926); The Snake Woman; The Protégé of the Mistress; The Affected Maids (after Molière's Les Précieuses ridicules); Ramona; he also wrote several operettas (The Bachelor Belles, Hollywood Madness, etc.); ballets; a piano concerto; sonatas for various instruments with piano.

Sgambati, Giovanni, Italian pianist and composer; b. Rome, May 28, 1841; d. there, Dec. 14, 1914. He studied piano with Amerigo Barbieri, and appeared in public at the age of 6; sang in church, and conducted instrumental groups. He then became a pupil of Liszt in Rome; subsequently gave orch. concerts, playing German masterpieces; performed Beethoven's Eroica in 1866 for the 1st time in Rome. Historically, Sgambati's concerts were important as the 1st systematic attempt to introduce to the Italian public a varied fare of symph. music. Sgambati appeared also as pianist; after a concert tour in Italy and Germany, he established in 1868 a free piano class annexed to the Accademia di Santa Cecilia in Rome, which in 1877 was formally recognized by the government as the 'Liceo Musicale'; it became the foremost music school in Italy; Sgambati taught piano there until his death. He was an ardent admirer of Wagner, whom he met in 1876; Wagner recommended Sgambati to his own publishers, Schott of Mainz, who subsequently brought out many of Sgambati's works. As pianist and teacher, Sgambati enjoyed a very high reputation in Germany and Italy; his own music betrays strong Germanic influence; unlike most Italian composers of his time, he devoted his energies exclusively to instrumental music, avoiding all service to the theater. —Works: symph. in D (Rome, March 28, 1881); symph. No. 2; Epitalamio sinfonico (1887); overtures; piano concerto; Te Deum for orch.; Messa da Requiem; 2 piano quintets (1876; 1877; his most enduring works); a string quartet (1884); numerous piano pieces: Fogli volanti, Pièces lyriques, Mémoires poétiques, 6 Nocturnes, etc.; also Formulario del pianista (technical exercises); songs. —Cf. Bettina Walker, My Musical Experiences (1892; pp. 44-84); R. A. Streatfeild, in Masters of Italian Music (1895; pp. 246-56); E. Segnitz, Sgambati's Klaviermusik, in 'Musikpädagogische Blätter' (1911, Nos. 11, 12); A. de Angelis, G. Sgambati, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (Jan., 1912); A. Bonaventura, G. Sgambati, in 'La Nuova Musica' (1914); A. Casella, G. Sgambati, in 'Music & Letters' (Oct., 1925); A. Casella in Cobbett's 'Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music' (1929; vol. 2, pp. 413-14); A. Bonaventura, G. Sgambati, in 'Musica d'Oggi' (1941).

Shakespeare, William, English tenor and singing teacher; b. Croydon, June 16, 1849; d. London, Nov. 1, 1931. He was a chorister and played organ in a church at 13; studied at the Royal Academy of Music with Sterndale Bennett; received a Mendelssohn Scholarship in 1871 for piano playing and composition; went to Leipzig for study with Reinecke, but soon left for Milan to cultivate his voice; studied with Lamperti there. From 1875, he appeared in England as a tenor; in 1878 appointed prof. of singing at the Royal Academy of Music in London; won a high reputation as vocal teacher. His compositions are entirely in the vein of German Romanticism, his model being Mendelssohn. He publ. The Art of Singing (3 parts; 1898-99; several times republ.); Singing for Schools and Colleges (1907); Plain Words on Singing (1924); and The Speaker's Art (1931).

Shaliapin (shah-lyah'-pēn), Feodor Ivanovitch, celebrated Russian bass singer; b. Kazan, Feb. 13, 1873; d. Paris, April 12, 1938. He was of humble origin; at the age of 10 was apprenticed to a shoemaker; at 14, secured chorister's work in a traveling opera company; his companion was the writer Maxim Gorky, who also sang in a chorus; this provided him with a bare existence, and he was often forced to walk the railroad tracks when he could not afford the fare. His wanderings brought him to the Caucasus, and there he was introduced to the singer Usatov (1892), who immediately recognized Shaliapin's extraordinary gifts and taught him without a fee, helping him besides with board and lodgings. Shaliapin's fortunes took a turn for the better when he became a member of a summer opera company in St. Petersburg in 1894; subsequently he sang at the Imperial Opera during the regular season. In 1896 he was engaged at Mamontov's Private Opera in Moscow, where he produced a great impression by his dramatic interpretations of the bass roles in the national Russian operas, and he soon became a prime favorite in Russia. His first foreign engagement was at La Scala, Milan, in 1901; there he made his greatest success as Mefistofele in Boito's opera; he returned to La Scala in 1904 and 1908. Following a season of Russian opera in Paris in the spring of 1906, he was engaged to sing at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y.; made his American debut there as Mefistofele on Nov. 20, 1907, but was received with only moderate favor. In London his success was immediate, after he sang in Beecham's seasons of Russian opera at Covent Garden, beginning in the spring of 1913; he returned to Russia after the outbreak of World War I, and remained there until 1920; was given the rank of 'People's Artist' by the Soviet government; this title was withdrawn by the Soviet authorities in 1927, after Shaliapin emigrated to Paris, which he made his home until his death. He appeared at the Metropolitan Opera once more in 1921 and sang there for 8 seasons, winning wide acclaim; also sang with the Chicago Opera Co.; toured the U. S. with his own opera troupe, and gave numerous concerts. His last American recital took place in N. Y. on March 3, 1935. Shaliapin was one of the greatest singing actors of all time; he dominated every scene in which he appeared, and to the last he never failed in his ability to move audiences, even though his vocal powers declined markedly. He was especially famed for his interpretation of the role of Boris Godunov in Mussorgsky's opera; both dramatically and vocally, he created an imperishable image. He was equally great as Méphistophélès (Faust) and in the buffo roles of Don Basilio and Leporello. He also played the title role in a film version of Don Quixote. He publ. his reminiscences: Pages from My Life (N. Y., 1926) and Man and Mask (N. Y., 1932). Vol. I of a monumental ed., F. I. Shaliapin, Literary Heritage, with a chapter of reminiscences by his daughter, was brought out in Moscow, 1957.

Shanet, Howard, American conductor; b. Brooklyn, Nov. 9, 1918. He studied cello; took courses at Columbia Univ.; studied conducting with Koussevitzky at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood; became a member of its staff in 1949; conducted the Huntington, W. V., Symph. Orch. (1951-53); in 1953 was appointed to the music faculty of Columbia Univ.; also conductor of the Columbia Univ. Orch. Publ. a guide for adult beginners, Learn to Read Music (N. Y., 1956).

Shapero, Harold, American composer; b. Lynn, Mass., April 29, 1920. He learned to play piano as a youth; was for several years a pianist in dance orchestras; began serious study in 1936 at the Malkin Cons. in Boston, with Nicolas Slonimsky; then studied with Krenek, with Walter Piston at Harvard Univ., with Paul Hindemith at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, and with Nadia Boulanger in Cambridge, Mass. He graduated from Harvard Univ. in 1941; received the American Prix de Rome for his Nine-Minute Overture (N. Y., June 8, 1941); held a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1946 and 1947; won the Gershwin Prize (1946), etc.; 1949-50, was in Rome; 1952, was appointed prof. at Brandeis Univ., Waltham, Mass. He married the painter Esther Geller in 1945. In his music he adheres to an austere Classical pattern, without excluding a highly emotional melodic line; his exceptional mastery of contrapuntal technique secures clarity of intermingled sonorities in his chamber music. In some of his early compositions he applied the dodecaphonic method. —Works: Serenade in D for string orch. (1945); Symphony for Classical Orchestra (Boston, Jan. 30, 1948); The Travelers, overture (1948); Credo for orch. (Louisville, Oct. 19, 1955); concerto for orch. (1951-58); 3 Pieces for 3 Pieces, for flute, clarinet, and bassoon (1938); trumpet sonata (1939); string quartet (1940); 4-Hand Piano Sonata (1941); violin sonata (1942); 3 Amateur Sonatas for piano. —Cf. Madeleine Goss, Modern Music Makers (N. Y., 1952; pp. 474-78).

Shapey, Ralph, American composer; b. Philadelphia, March 12, 1921; studied with Stefan Wolpe; active as violinist and conductor. —Works: symph. no. 1 (1952); Challenge: The Family of Man, symph. poem (1955); concerto for clarinet and small ensemble (Strasbourg Festival, June 9, 1958); piano quintet; 5 string quartets; oboe sonata; piano pieces; songs.

Shapleigh (shap'-lē), Bertram, American composer; b. Boston, Jan. 15, 1871; d. Washington, D. C., July 2, 1940. He studied at the New England Cons.; went to London in 1899, and remained there until 1916; then lived in New York and Washington. He made a specialty of oriental music, and gave numerous lectures on the subject. A Bertram Shapleigh Foundation was established in Washington after his death, and his unpublished MSS were deposited there.

Shaporin (shah-poh'-rēn), Yuri Alexan-drovitch, Russian composer; b. Glukhov, Ukraine, Nov. 8, 1889. He studied law, and graduated from the Univ. of St. Petersburg in 1913; also studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Sokolov (composition), graduating in 1918. He wrote theatrical music in Leningrad; moved to Moscow in 1936. He is at his best in descriptive music. —Works: opera The Decembrists (1930-50; Moscow, June 23, 1953); cantata A Tale of the Battle for the Russian Land (Moscow, April 18, 1944); incidental music to King Lear, Tartuffe, Boris Godunov, and to Leskov's The Flea (also as an orchestral suite); symphony (Moscow, May 11, 1933); symphony-cantata, On the Field of Kulikov (Moscow, Nov. 18, 1939); 2 piano sonatas; several song cycles. —Cf. Gerald Abraham, Eight Soviet Composers (London, 1942; pp. 89-98); E. A. Grosheva, Y. A. Shaporin (Moscow, 1957).

Sharp, Cecil James, English editor and collector of folksongs; b. London, Nov. 22, 1859; d. there, June 23, 1924. He studied music privately while attending Cambridge Univ.; in 1882 he went to Australia, settling in Adelaide, where he worked in a bank, and practiced law, becoming associate to the Chief Justice of Southern Australia; in 1889 he resigned from the legal profession and took up a musical career; was assistant organist of the Adelaide Cathedral, and co-director of the Adelaide College of Music. In 1892 he returned to England; was made music instructor of Ludgrove School (1893-1910) and also principal of the Hampstead Cons. (1896-1905). At the same time he became deeply interested in English folksongs; publ. a Book of British Songs for Home and School (1902); then proceeded to make a systematic survey of English villages with the aim of collecting authentic specimens of English songs; this was the beginning of a movement that was of great consequence to English music. In 1911 he established the English Folk Dance Society; also was director of the School of Folk Song and Dance at Stratford-on-Avon. During World War I he was in the U. S., collecting folk music in the Appalachian Mountains, with a view of establishing their English origin. In 1923 he received the degree of M.M. (hon. causa) from Cambridge Univ. In 1930 the 'Cecil Sharp House' was opened in London as headquarters of the English Folk Dance Society (amalgamated with the Folk Song Society in 1932). —Sharp publ. many collections of folksongs and dances: English Folk Carols (1911); Folk-Songs from Various Counties (1912); English Folk-Chanteys (1914); One Hundred English Folk-Songs (1916); Folk-Songs of English Origin (2 vols.; 1921-23); English Folk-Songs from the Southern Appalachians (1917; new enlarged ed., 2 vols., ed. by Maud Karpeles, posthumous, Oxford, 1932; republ. 1952); American-English Folk-Songs (1918-21); The Morris Book, in 5 parts (1907-13); Morris Dance Tunes, in 10 parts (1907-13); The Country Dance Book, in 6 parts (1909-22); Country Dance Tunes, in 11 parts (1909-22); The Sword Dances of Northern England, in 5 parts (1911-13); —Books: English Folk Song (London, 1907; 3rd ed., revised by Maud Karpeles, London, 1954); The Dance: An Historical Survey of Dancing in Europe, with A. P. Oppé (London, 1924). —Cf. A. H. Fox Strangways and M. Karpeles, Cecil Sharp (London, 1933; 2nd ed., London, 1955). See also W. S. Shaw, Cecil Sharp and Folk Dancing, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1921).

Sharp, Geoffrey (Newton), English music critic; b. Leeds, June 14, 1914. He studied at Trinity College, Cambridge, and also at the Royal College of Music in London. In 1940 he began publication of the quarterly 'Music Review' in Cambridge; has also written articles on music for various journals.

Sharpe, Herbert Francis, English pianist and composer; b. Halifax, Yorkshire, March 1, 1861; d. London, Oct. 14, 1925. He studied piano at the National Training School in London; joined the faculty of the Royal College of Music in 1884; gave numerous concerts in London and elsewhere; composed many piano pieces and publ. a Pianoforte School (with Stanley Lucas).

Shattuck, Arthur, American pianist; b. Neenah, Wis., April 19, 1881; d. New York, Oct. 16, 1951. He studied piano with Leschetizky in Vienna (1895-1902); made his home in Paris, touring extensively in many countries including Iceland and Egypt. Returning to America, he appeared as soloist with many orchestras.

Shaverzashvili, Alexander Vasilievitch, Soviet composer; b. Tiflis, Caucasus, July 8, 1919. He studied at the Tiflis Cons. with A. Balanchivadze; from 1955, prof. at the Tiflis Cons. —Works: comic opera, Grasshopper (Tiflis, March 18, 1955); a symph. (1945); 2 piano concertos (1946; 1949); piano quintet (1955); string quartet; piano trio; a violin sonata; songs.

Shavitch, Vladimir, conductor; b. Russia, July 20, 1888; d. Palm Beach, Fla., Dec. 26, 1947. He studied piano with Godowsky and Busoni in Berlin, and composition with Hugo Kaun and Paul Juon (1902-12). Coming to America in 1914, he became conductor of the Syracuse, N. Y., Symph. Orch.; also conducted in Rochester, N. Y. (1923-27); appeared as guest conductor in all European capitals, and in Russia. He was married to the pianist Tina Lerner.

Shaw, Frank Holcomb, American organist and teacher; b. Paxton, Ill., May 8, 1884. He studied at Oberlin Cons. and with Widor in Paris; filled various teaching posts; in 1924, appointed director of the Oberlin Cons., retiring in 1949.

Shaw, George Bernard, famous dramatist; b. Dublin, July 26, 1856; d. Ayot St. Lawrence, England, Nov. 2, 1950. Before winning fame as a playwright, he was active as a music critic in London, writing for 'The Star' (under the name of 'Corno di Bassetto') during the season of 1888-89 and for 'The World' from 1890 to 1894. In 1899 he publ. The Perfect Wagnerite, a highly individual socialistic interpretation of the Ring of the Nibelungs. His criticisms from 'The World' were reprinted as Music in London in 3 vols. (1932; new ed., 1950); those from 'The Star' as London Music in 1888-89 (London and N. Y., 1937); selected criticisms were publ., ed. by Eric Bentley, in N. Y., 1954. Shaw's play Arms and the Man was made into an operetta, The Chocolate Soldier, by Oskar Straus (1908); his Pygmalion was converted into a highly successful musical comedy (1956) under the title My Fair Lady, with a musical score by Frederick Loewe. —Cf. W. Irvine, G. B. Shaw's Musical Criticism, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1946).

Shaw, Martin, English organist and composer; b. London, March 9, 1875. He was a pupil at the Royal College of Music in London; played organ in various churches in London. In 1900 he founded the Purcell Society in London; wrote an opera, Mr. Peppys (London, Feb. 11, 1926); several masques and ballads; the oratorios Easter, The Rock (after T. S. Eliot), The Redeemer; sacred choruses, etc. He publ. The Principles of English Church Music Composition (1921); edited The English Carol Book, Songs of Britain, The Motherland Song Book, and (with his brother, Geoffrey Shaw) The League of Nations Song Book. He publ. his autobiography, Up to Now, in 1929. —His brother Geoffrey Shaw (b. London, Nov. 14, 1879; d. there, April 14, 1943) was an organist and composer; also was active in musical education.

Shaw, Mary (née Postans), English contralto; b. London, 1814; d. Hadleigh Hall, Suffolk, Sept. 9, 1876. She studied with Sir George Smart; made her début at London in 1834 with marked success; in 1838 sang in the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, under Mendelssohn's direction, and in other German cities. She made her operatic début at La Scala, Milan, on Nov. 17, 1839; in 1842 she sang in Covent Garden and the principal festivals in England. In 1844, at the height of her success, her career was suddenly ended when her husband (the painter Alfred Shaw, whom she had married in 1835) became insane and died; the shock affected her vocal cords, so that she was unable to sing. Some time later she remarried and went to live in the country.

Shaw, Oliver, a blind American singer; b. Middleboro, Mass., March 13, 1779; d. Providence, Dec. 31, 1848. He was a singing teacher and church organist in Providence from 1807; composer of popular psalm tunes and ballads, which he sang in public; some favorites were Mary's Tears, The Inspiration, Sweet Little Ann, and The Death of Perry. He publ. the collection 'The Social Sacred Melodist' (1835). —Cf. Memorial of Oliver Shaw (Providence, 1884); W. Thomas, A Discourse of the Life and Death of Oliver Shaw (Boston, 1851).

Shaw, Robert, American conductor; b. Red Bluff, Calif., April 30, 1916. He studied at Pomona College, graduating in 1938. In 1941 he founded the Collegiate Chorale in N. Y., giving numerous and highly praised performances of choral works of various periods (until 1954); received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1944; was choral director at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood (1942-45); on the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y. (1946-50); in 1948 founded the Robert Shaw Chorale and toured with it in the U. S.; conductor of the San Diego, Calif., Symph. (summer seasons) from 1953; in 1956, appointed associate conductor of the Cleveland Orch.; also made guest appearances with major American orchestras.

Shebalin (sheh-bah-lēn'), Vissarion Yakovlevitch, Russian composer; b. Omsk, June 11, 1902. He studied at the Moscow Cons. with Miaskovsky, graduating in 1928; in 1935, appointed prof. of composition there; from 1942 till 1948 was its director. — Works: a musical comedy, Bridegroom from the Embassy (Sverdlovsk, Aug. 1, 1942); opera, The Taming of the Shrew, after Shakespeare (Moscow, Oct. 1 1955); 4 symphonies (1925, 1929, 1934, 1935); symph. poem Lenin, with chorus and soloists (Moscow, Jan. 21, 1933); Russian Overture (1941); violin concerto (1940); cantata, Moscow (Moscow, Dec. 14, 1946); 7 string quartets (1923, 1934, 1939, 1940, 1942, 1943, 1947); a piano trio; a viola sonata; several piano sonatas; songs. Cf. Gerald Abraham, Eight Soviet Composers (London, 1943; pp. 61-69); Igor Boelza, V. Y. Shebalin (Moscow, 1945).

Shedlock, John South, English writer on music; b. Reading, Sept. 29, 1843; d. London, Jan. 9, 1919. After graduating from London Univ. (1864) he studied composition with Lalo in Paris; upon his return to London, he devoted himself to writing; was music critic of 'The Academy' (1879-1901) and of 'The Athenæum' (from 1901). He publ. a detailed description of Beethoven's sketch book purchased by the British Museum ('Mus. Times,' June, 1892-Jan., 1893); this led him to further investigations of Beethoven memorabilia, and in 1893 he discovered in Berlin a copy of Cramer's studies with notations by Beethoven; publ. his findings as The Beethoven-Cramer Studies (1893); also publ. 2 vols. of Beethoven's letters in English translation, a short biography of Beethoven in Bell's 'Miniature Series' (1905), and a valuable book, The Pianoforte Sonata, Its Origin and Development (London, 1895); edited Kuhnau's Biblical Sonatas (1895) and harpsichord pieces by Frescobaldi and Froberger.

Shekhter, Boris Semionovitch, Russian composer; b. Odessa, Jan. 20, 1900. He was graduated from the Odessa Cons. in 1922; then entered the Moscow Cons., studying composition with Vassilenko and Miaskovsky; graduated in 1929. In 1940 he went to Turkestan, and became prof. of the Cons. of Ashkhabad. —Works: the operas The Year 1905 (with A. Davidenko, 1935) and Yusuf and Akhmed (Ashkhabad, June 12, 1942); cantatas, Volga-Don (1952) and A House in Shushenskoye (1955); 5 symphonies (1929, 1943, 1945, 1947, 1951); an orch. suite, Turkmenia, based on Central Asian themes (1932; his best work; given at the Florence Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, April 4, 1934); Rhapsody, for orch. (1935); piano pieces; songs.

Shelley, Harry Rowe, American organist and composer; b. New Haven, Conn., June 8, 1858; d. Short Beach, Conn., Sept. 12, 1947. He was a pupil of Dudley Buck and Dvořák in New York; from 1899 was active as church organist and teacher. His compositions include 3 operas: Leila, Romeo and Juliet, and Lotus San; the symph. poem The Crusaders; orch. suite Souvenir de Baden-Baden; the cantatas Vexilla Regis (N. Y., 1894), Lochinvar's Ride (N. Y., 1915), Death and Life, and The Inheritance Divine; much choral music and some effective piano pieces. His ballads Minstrel Boy and Love's Sorrow attained considerable success. He also edited the popular collections 'Gems for the Organ,' 'The Modern Organist,' and '101 Interludes for Organ.'

Shenshin, Alexander Alexeyevitch, Russian composer; b. Moscow, Nov. 18, 1890. He studied philology at the Moscow Univ.; then became schoolmaster; also took music lessons with Gretchaninov and Glière. His compositions, in a style reminiscent of Liadov, include an opera, O T'ao (1925), and a number of other stage works; also the song cycle From Japanese Anthologies. He was inactive after 1940. —Cf. V. Belaiev, A. A. Shenshin (Moscow, 1929, in Russian and German).

Shepard, Frank Hartson, American pianist and pedagogue; b. Bethel, Conn., Sept. 20, 1863; d. Orange, N. J., Feb. 15, 1913. He studied music in Boston; then took courses at the Leipzig Cons. (1886-90) with Jadassohn, Reinecke, and others. Returning to America in 1891, he established the Shepard School of Music at Orange, N. J., of which he was director until his death; also was organist at Grace Church there. He publ. Piano Touch and Scales; Church Music and Choir Training; How to Modulate; Harmony Simplified; Children's Harmony; etc.

Shepherd, Arthur, American composer; b. Paris, Idaho, Feb. 19, 1880; d. Cleveland, Jan. 12, 1958. He studied with G. Haessel; in 1892, entered the New England Cons., where he studied piano with Dennée and Carl Faelten, and composition with Goetschius and Chadwick. In 1897 he went to Salt Lake City, where he settled as teacher and conductor of the Salt Lake Symph. Orch.; returned to Boston in 1908, and became prof. of harmony and counterpoint at the New England Cons. (until 1917). In 1917 he joined the U. S. Army, and was bandmaster of the U. S. Field Artillery in France. From 1920 to 1926 he was assistant conductor of the Cleveland Orch., and also conducted children's concerts there; was music critic of the Cleveland 'Press' (1929-32). In 1927 he became prof. of music at Western Reserve Univ., retiring in 1950; then lived in Boston and Cleveland. A composer of national tendencies, he wrote in a grand Romantic manner, derived from an intense feeling for American melos. —Works: for orch.: the overtures The Nuptials of Attila, Ouverture joyeuse (Paderewski Prize, 1902), The Festival of Youth (1915), and Ouverture to a Drama (1919; Cleveland, March 27, 1924); Fantaisie Humoresque, for piano and orch. (Boston, Feb. 8, 1918); Horizons, 1st symph. (Cleveland, Dec. 15, 1927); Choreographic Suite (Cleveland, Oct. 22, 1931); 2nd symph. (Cleveland, March 7, 1940); Fantasy on Down East Spirituals (Indianapolis, Nov. 2, 1946); violin concerto (1946-47); Theme and Variations (Cleveland, April 9, 1953); Hilaritas, overture for concert band (1942); for chorus: Song of the Sea Wind, for women's voices and piano (1915); He Came All So Still, for women's voices a cappella (1915); Deck Thyself My Soul, for mixed chorus and organ (1918); Ballad of Trees and the Master, for mixed chorus a cappella (1935); Song of the Pilgrims, cantata for tenor solo, mixed chorus, and orch. (1937); Invitation to the Dance, for mixed chorus and piano (1937); Grace for Gardens, for mixed chorus a cappella (1938); Build Thee More Stately Mansions, for women's voices (1938); Psalm XLII, for chorus and orch. (1944); Drive On, for baritone solo and mixed chorus (1946); chamber music: 2 violin sonatas (1914, 1927); Triptych, for voice and string quartet (1926); 3 string quartets (1927, 1935, 1936); piano quintet (1940); Praeludium Saluatorium, for flute, oboe, horn, bassoon, violin, viola, and cello (1942); Divertissement, for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and horn (1943); for piano: 2 sonatas (1907, 1929, both in F minor); songs. He publ. a valuable handbook, The String Quartets of Beethoven (Cleveland, 1937). —Cf. D. Leedy, Arthur Shepherd, in 'Modern Music' (1939); W. S. Newman, Arthur Shepherd, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1950).

Shera, Frank Henry, English writer on music; b. Sheffield, May 4, 1882; d. there, Feb. 21, 1956. He studied at the Royal College of Music in London, where his teachers were Stanford, Parratt, and Walford Davies. He was music director at Malvern College from 1916 to 1926; in 1928 he was appointed prof. of music at Sheffield Univ., retiring in 1950. He publ. Musical Groundwork (1922); Debussy and Ravel (1925) and Elgar's Instrumental Works (1931) in the 'Musical Pilgrim' series.

Sheremetiev (sheh-reh-meht'-yehf), Alexander Dmitrievitch, Count, Russian nobleman and amateur musician; b. St. Petersburg, March 12, 1859; d. Ste-Geneviève-des-Bois, near Paris, May 18, 1931. The private choir maintained by his father, Dmitri, attained wide celebrity in St. Petersburg. In 1882 Count Alexander founded a symph. orch. in his own name, and in 1884 a church choir under the direction of Archangelsky. In 1898 he instituted in St. Petersburg a series of symph. concerts at popular prices, conducted by himself and others. Thanks to his inherited wealth, he was able to engage excellent musicians; presented programs of Russian composers, thus contributing to the cause of national music. He also wrote some pieces himself (Pathetische Fantasie, for orch.; chamber music; etc.). After the revolution of 1917 he went to Paris, and died in poverty, in a Russian charity institution near Paris.

Sheridan, Frank, American pianist; b. New York, May 1, 1898. He studied piano with Harold Bauer; made his début with the N. Y. Philharmonic at the Lewisohn Stadium in 1924; toured in Europe in 1929-30; joined the faculty of the Mannes Music School, N. Y.; also taught at Columbia Univ.

Sherwood, William Hall, American pianist and pedagogue; b. Lyons, N. Y., Jan. 31, 1854; d. Chicago, Jan. 7, 1911. He was the son of Rev. L. H. Sherwood, the founder of Lyons Music Academy, from whom he received his primary education; spent 5 years in Germany studying with Kullak in Berlin; also took lessons with Liszt in Weimar. He returned to the U. S. in 1876; taught at the New England Cons., and later at the Chicago Cons.; in 1897 established his Sherwood Piano School in Chicago. Among his publ. compositions for piano are 2 suites and 2 sets of Gypsy Dances.

Shield, William, English violinist and composer; b. Whickham, Durham, March 5, 1748; d. Brighton, Sussex, Jan. 25, 1829. He was taught by his father, a singing master, on whose death he was apprenticed to a ship builder; at the same time he took lessons in music with Charles Avison, at Newcastle-on-Tyne; played violin in various small theaters in the neighborhood; in 1772 he settled in London, as violinist at the Opera; from 1773 to 1791 he played the viola there. He produced his first comic opera, A Flitch of Bacon, at the Haymarket Theatre in 1778; it was followed by a great number of theatrical pieces; he held the post of composer to Covent Garden Theatre from 1778 till 1791; then traveled in France and Italy, returning to Covent Garden in 1792, retaining his position until 1797. He was appointed Master of the King's Music in 1817. He wrote about 40 light operas, pantomimes, musical farces, ballad operas, etc., of which only separate numbers were ever published; he also wrote 6 string quartets; 6 string trios; 6 duets for 2 violins; other instrumental pieces; publ. An Introduction to Harmony (1800) and Rudiments of Thorough-bass (c. 1815). He had some original ideas, and was not averse to experimentation; e.g., he wrote movements in 5/4 time. —Cf. G. Hauger, William Shield, in 'Music & Letters' (Oct., 1950).

Shilkret, Nathaniel, American composer and conductor; b. New York, Jan. 1, 1895. He studied with Pietro Floridia; until the age of 20, he played the clarinet in various orchestras in N. Y.; in 1916 became music director of the Victor Talking Machine Co., creating the Victor Salon Orch.; held executive posts with Victor until 1935; then went to Hollywood as arranger, but continued to spend part of the season in N. Y.; led thousands of radio broadcasts. He wrote a symph. poem, Skyward (1928); a trombone concerto (1942); numerous descriptive pieces for orch.; commissioned Schoenberg, Stravinsky, Toch, Milhaud, Castelnuovo-Tedesco, and Tansman to write a movement each for a biblical cantata Genesis, to which he also contributed (1947).

Shimizu, Osamu, Japanese composer; b. Osaka, Nov. 4, 1911. He studied composition at the Tokyo Music Academy; was active in the music dept. of the Tokyo Radio Station; won Odaka Prize (1953). Among his works are symph. No. 1 (Tokyo, Dec. 8, 1951); the cantatas Ren-nyo (Tokyo, April 8, 1948) and Peace (Tokyo, April 22, 1949); an opera, Tales of Shuzeni (Tokyo, Nov. 4, 1954); Ballade for violin and piano (1941); numerous songs.

Shira (shē'-rah), Francesco, Italian composer and conductor; b. Malta, Aug. 21, 1808; d. London, Oct. 15, 1883. He studied at the Milan Cons. with Basili; brought out his first opera, Elena e Malvina, at La Scala, Milan (Nov. 17, 1832); on the strength of his success he was engaged as conductor of the Santo Carlos Theater in Lisbon (1833-42); also taught at the Lisbon Cons. In 1842, after a brief sojourn in Paris, he became conductor for the English Opera at the Princess's Theatre; then conducted at Drury Lane (1844-47); in 1848 he went over to Covent Garden but after a brief season there he returned to Drury Lane in 1852; in later years made a high reputation as a singing teacher, without abandoning composition; wrote the operas Niccolò de' Lapi (London, 1863), Selvaggia (Venice, Feb. 20, 1875), and Lia (Venice, 1876).

Shirinsky (shē-rēn'-skē), Vassily Petrovitch, Russian composer; b. Ekaterinodar, Jan. 17, 1901. He studied violin with Conus and composition with Catoire and Miaskovsky at the Moscow Cons. As violin soloist, he contributed much to early propaganda for modern Russian music, playing the 1st concerto of Prokofiev and other new works. His own music is characterized by considerable rhythmic complexity, but remains within the confines of traditional harmony. He wrote an opera, Ivan the Terrible (1951-54); 2 symphonies; several overtures; a piano quintet; 4 string quartets; a piano trio; a violin sonata; a viola sonata; a cello sonata; film music; songs.

Shishakov (shē-shah-kof'), Youri Nikolayevitch, Russian composer; b. Moscow, Jan. 18, 1925. He studied with Zhiganov in Kazan; with Gnëssin in Moscow; then became teacher of composition at the Gnëssin Music School. —Works: 2 symphonies (1947; 1950); overture for folk instruments (1952); concerto for balalaika and orch. (Moscow, 1954); numerous pieces for the accordion.

Shishov, Ivan Petrovitch, Russian composer; b. Novocherkassk, Oct. 8, 1888; d. Moscow, Feb. 6, 1947. He studied with Kastalsky and G. Conus; conducted choral groups; taught at the Moscow Cons. (1925-31). —Works: opera, Painter Serf (Moscow, March 24, 1929); 2 symphonies (1925; 1933); several song cycles; arrangements of folksongs.

Shore, John, famous English trumpeter; b. London, 1662; d. there, Nov. 20, 1752. In 1707 he succeeded his uncle William Shore as Sergeant Trumpeter to the English Court; in 1711 he was one of the 24 musicians to Queen Anne, and also a lutenist of the Chapel Royal. He is the reputed inventor of the tuning-fork. Purcell wrote for Shore trumpet obbligatos to many of his songs.

Shore, Samuel Royle, English music scholar, editor, and composer; b. Birmingham, April 12, 1856; d. Hindhead, Surrey, Feb. 19, 1946. He studied organ with A. R. Gaul, but was mostly self-educated in composition and music history. He became an authority on church music; edited 'The Cathedral Series' of music of the 16th-17th centuries; wrote numerous ecclesiastical works, among them a Te Deum, 4 Communion Services, a Requiem, anthems, etc.

Shortall, Harrington, American composer; b. Chicago, 1895. After attending Harvard Univ. and serving in World War I, he studied in Paris with Nadia Boulanger; returning to America, he became a teacher; was on the faculty of Rosary College (1940-46). In 1946 he was appointed prof. at the Chicago Theological Seminary. In 1936 his Choral Memorial obtained the Westminster Choir School Award. Other works include: Wealth of Variations for Thomas Jefferson's Proposed Orchestra of Artisans, for chamber orch. (1942); Hymn for Uncle Sam's Nephews and Nieces, for chorus and small orch. (1943); Six Pieces in One, for orch. (1944); One Song from Three Poets, for voice and string quartet (1944).

SHOSTAKOVITCH

Shostakovitch (shoh - stah - koh' - vitch), Dmitri Dmitrievitch, celebrated Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Sept. 25, 1906. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Nikolayev (piano), Sokolov (harmony and counterpoint), and Maximilian Steinberg (composition), graduating as pianist in 1923, as composer in 1925. As a graduation piece, he wrote his 1st symph. at the age of 18; it was first performed by the Leningrad Philharmonic on May 12, 1926, and subsequently became his most frequently performed work all over the world. His 2nd symph., written for the 10th anniversary of the Soviet Republic and with a choral ending to a text about Lenin, was less successful, despite its political program. He then wrote a satirical opera, The Nose (after Gogol's whimsical story of the sudden disappearance of a government functionary's nose from his face); in this opera Shostakovitch was plainly influenced by the modernistic grotesque of new German music; there are imitative noises and highly discordant combinations in the score. The Nose was produced in Leningrad on Jan. 12, 1930, but was violently attacked in the Soviet press as a product of 'bourgeois decadence' and was soon withdrawn from the repertory. Somewhat in the same style was his ballet The Golden Age (1930), which included a celebrated Polka, satirizing the Geneva disarmament conference. There followed his 3rd symph., May First, with a choral ending dedicated to the international workers' day. Shostakovitch's declared intention was to pay homage to revolution as a creative force; despite these proclamations, the 3rd symphony, like the 2nd, failed to arouse attention. Shostakovitch then wrote a work that was to precipitate a crisis in his own career, as well as in Soviet music in general, an opera to a subject by the 19th-century Russian writer Leskov, Lady Macbeth of the District of Mzensk (Leningrad, Jan. 22, 1934); the sordid story of adultery, murder, and suicide was presented by the producers as a sociological tableau in condemnation of old Russia, but it ran counter to the growing puritanism of official Soviet ideology. On the occasion of its production in Moscow, the Communist organ 'Pravda' published an editorial inveighing against Shostakovitch as a disciple of foreign modernists and a propagandist of morbid naturalism (Jan. 28, 1936). Shostakovitch immediately admitted his 'faulty' concepts, and asserted his resolve to write music in keeping with the officially accepted formula of 'socialist realism.' Another article in 'Pravda' assailed Shostakovitch for the incorrect depiction of Soviet farm life in his ballet The Limpid Brook. Abandoning the stage for the time, Shostakovitch turned to instrumental composition, and wrote his 4th symph., which was placed in rehearsal with the Leningrad Philharmonic, but withdrawn before the performance when it was found that the music contained numerous modernistic passages. Shostakovitch's rehabilitation came with the performance of his 5th symph. (1937), which was hailed by the critics and important officials as an example of true Soviet art, classical in formal design, lucid in its melodic and harmonic procedures, and optimistic in its philosophical connotations. Of his subsequent symphonies, the 7th was the most dramatically conceived. He began its composition during the siege of Leningrad, in the autumn of 1941; he flew from Leningrad to Moscow and later to the temporary capital on the Volga, Kuibishev, where the work was completed and performed on March 1, 1942. Its symphonic development is explicitly realistic, with the theme of the Nazi military machine in mechanical march-time, rising to monstrous proportions, but eventually overwhelmed by a victorious Russian melody. It was subsequently performed by virtually every orchestra in the Allied countries, often under the title 'Leningrad Symph.' although no such designation appears in the score. During World War II Shostakovitch was one of the most popular modern composers throughout the world. Conductors and orchestras vied with each other for the right of 1st performance of his symphonies; however, his popularity outside Russia began to wane; after the sensational success of his 'Leningrad Symph.' there were no revivals; his 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th symphonies had only sporadic hearings; the 5th symphony retained its place in the repertory; but it was his youthful 1st symph. that enjoyed repeated performances in the U. S., in England, and on the continent of Europe, without losing its original appeal. His chamber music, his piano pieces, and his few songs have never reached a high level of popularity. In 1949 he visited the U. S. as a delegate to the World Peace Conference in N. Y. He received several Stalin prizes for his works, and on the occasion of his 50th birthday was awarded the Order of Lenin (1956). — Works: operas: The Nose (Leningrad, Jan. 12, 1930) and Lady Macbeth of the District of Mtzensk (Leningrad, Jan. 22, 1934; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Feb. 5, 1935); ballets: The Golden Age (Leningrad, Oct. 27, 1930; contains the celebrated dance number Polka); Bolt (Leningrad, April 8, 1931) and The Limpid Brook (Leningrad, June 4, 1935); incidental music to Mayakovsky's comedy, The Bedbug (1929), to Hamlet (1932), The Human Comedy, after Balzac (1934). Symphonies: No. 1 (Leningrad, May 12, 1926); No. 2, with a choral ending, dedicated to the October Revolution (Leningrad, Nov. 6, 1927); No. 3, subtitled May First (Leningrad, Nov. 6, 1931); No. 4 (1936; not performed); No. 5 (Leningrad, Nov. 21, 1937); No. 6 (Leningrad, Nov. 5, 1939); No. 7, 'Leningrad Symph.' (Kuibishev, March 5, 1942; 1st American performance, NBC Symph., Toscanini conducting, July 19, 1942); No. 8 (Moscow, Nov. 4, 1943); No. 9 (Leningrad, Nov. 3, 1945); No. 10 (Leningrad, Dec. 17, 1953); No. 11 (Moscow, Oct. 30, 1957). Other orchestral works: Suite for Jazz Orch. (Leningrad, Nov. 28, 1938); 1st piano concerto, for piano, trumpet, and strings (Leningrad, Oct. 15, 1933); 2nd piano concerto (Moscow, May 10, 1957, Maxim Shostakovitch, son of the composer, soloist); violin concerto (Leningrad, Oct. 29, 1955). Vocal works: Leningrad, suite for chorus and orch. (Moscow, Oct. 15, 1942); Song of the Forests, cantata (Moscow, Nov. 26, 1949); Democratic Vistas, a cycle of 10 poems by Walt Whitman, for chorus and orch. (Moscow, Oct. 10, 1951); 4 songs to texts by Pushkin (1936); 6 songs to words by Burns, Shakespeare, and Walter Raleigh (1942); cycle, From Jewish Folk Poetry (1948). Chamber music: 2 pieces for string octet (1925); cello sonata (1934); 6 string quartets (1938, 1944, 1946, 1949, 1952, 1956); piano quintet (1940); 3 pieces for unaccompanied violin (1940); 2 piano trios (1923; 1944). For piano: 3 Fantastic Dances (1922); 2 sonatas (1926; 1943); Aphorisms, suite of 10 pieces (1927); 24 Preludes (1933); 24 Preludes and Fugues (1951). He re-orchestrated Mussorgsky's opera Boris Godunov (1939-40); wrote music to numerous films: Alone (1930); Golden Mountains (1931); Passerby (1932); Maxim's Return (1937); The Days of Volotchayev (1937); Friends (1938); The Man With a Gun (1938); A Great Citizen (1939); The Great River (1943); The Young Guard (1947); Ivan Mitchurin (1948); Fall of Berlin (1949); etc. — Bibliography: N. Slonimsky, Dmitri Shostakovitch, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1942); Victor Seroff, Dmitri Shostakovitch: The Life and Background of a Soviet Composer (N. Y., 1943); M. Sahlberg-Vatchadze, Shostakovitch (Paris, 1945); Ivan Martinov, Shostakovitch (Moscow, 1946; in English, N. Y., 1947); L. Danilevitch, Dmitri Shostakovitch (Moscow, 1958).

Shudi. See Broadwood.

Shulman, Alan, American composer; b. Baltimore, June 14, 1915. He studied cello at the Peabody Cons. of Music in Baltimore; moved to N. Y. in 1928, and studied cello with Felix Salmond and composition with Bernard Wagenaar at the Juilliard School of Music, graduating in 1937. In 1938 he became the cellist of the newly-founded Stuyvesant String Quartet; also played the cello in the NBC Symph. (1937-54), except for the years he spent in the U. S. Maritime Service (1942-45). — Works: for orch.: A Laurentian Overture (N. Y., Jan. 7, 1952); Waltzes (1949); Popocatepeil, symph. picture (1952); Theme and Variations, for viola and orch. (N. Y., Feb. 17, 1941); Pastorale and Dance, for violin and orch. (N. Y., July 15, 1944); cello concerto (1948; N. Y., April 13, 1950); 2nd symph. (Great Neck, L. I., May 25, 1958); chamber music: Rendezvous, for clarinet and strings (1946); Threnody, for string quartet (1950); Suite Miniature, for octet of cellos (1956); suite for solo cello (1956); Top Brass, for 12 brass instruments (Portland, Oregon, April 25, 1958); numerous short works for violin, for cello, for piano, etc.

Sibelius (sī-bā'-lyoos), Jean (Johan Julius Christian), great Finnish composer; b. Tavastehus, Dec. 8, 1865; d. Järvenpää, Sept. 20, 1957. The son of an army surgeon, he received an excellent classical education; from childhood, showed a deep absorption in music, and began to compose without a tutor. He had piano lessons from the age of 9, and at 14 began to study the violin with Gustaf Levander, the bandmaster in his native town; soon he took part in amateur performances of chamber music. He was sent to the Univ. of Helsinki in 1885 to study law, but abandoned it before the end of his 1st semester, and entered the Cons., where he studied violin with Vasiliev and Csillag, and composition with Wegelius (1886-89). He had a suite for strings and a string quartet publicly performed in 1889, producing an excellent impression; he was then granted a government stipend for further study in Berlin. He studied with Albert Becker (counterpoint and fugue); after returning to Finland for a short stay, he went to Vienna to complete his musical training; there he was a student of Robert Fuchs and Karl Goldmark (1890-91). In 1892 he married Aino Järnefelt. At that time his path as a national Finnish composer became determined; the music he wrote was inspired by native legends, with the epic Kalevala as a prime source of inspiration. A symph. poem, Kullervo, with soloists and chorus, written by Sibelius upon his return to Finland, was performed in Helsinki on April 28, 1892. A little later he completed one of his most famous scores, the symph. poem En Saga (revised in 1901). In 1893 he was appointed instructor in theory at the Helsinki Cons. In 1897 the Finnish senate granted him an annual stipend of 2,000 marks for 10 years. On July 2, 1900, the Helsinki Philharmonic gave the première of the most celebrated and the most patriotic symph. work by Sibelius, Finlandia. So profoundly moving was the music to Finnish audiences that the Czarist government forbade its performances during times of political unrest. In 1901 Sibelius conducted his own works at the annual festival of the 'Allgemeiner deutscher Tonkünstlerverein' at Heidelberg. In 1904 he moved to a country home at Järvenpää, near Helsinki, where he remained until his death, with only occasional absences. In 1913 Sibelius accepted a commission for a new orchestral work from an American patron of music, Carl Stoeckel, to be performed at the 28th annual Norfolk, Conn., Festival; the completed work was the symph. poem Aallottaret (The Oceanides), and Sibelius came to the U. S. to conduct its première on June 4, 1914. The program also included several of his other works. Yale Univ. conferred on him the degree of Mus. Doc. (hon. causa). Returning to Finland just before the outbreak of World War I, Sibelius withdrew into seclusion, but continued to work. He made his last public appearance abroad in Stockholm, when he conducted his 7th symphony on March 24, 1924. He wrote 2 more works after that, a score for Shakespeare's The Tempest, and Tapiola, a symph. poem. After 1929 he ceased to compose; rumors of his completion of another symphony proved unfounded. Although he was cordial in receiving friends and admirers from abroad, he avoided discussion of his own musical plans. Honors were showered on him; festivals of his music were for years popular events in Helsinki; a postage stamp bearing his likeness was issued by the Finnish government on his 80th birthday; special publications, biographical, bibliographical, and photographic, were issued in Finland. Artistically, too, Sibelius attained the status of a classical composer still in his lifetime; several important contemporary composers paid him homage by acknowledging their debt of inspiration to him (Vaughan Williams, for instance). He was the last representative of 19th-century nationalistic Romanticism. He stayed aloof from modern developments, but he was not uninterested in reading scores and listening to performances on the radio of works of such men as Schoenberg, Prokofiev, and Shostakovich. —The music of Sibelius marked the culmination of the growth of national Finnish art, in which Pacius was the protagonist, and Wegelius, the teacher of Sibelius, a worthy cultivator. Like his predecessors, Sibelius was schooled in Germanic tradition, and his early works reflect German lyricism and German dramatic thought. He opened a new era in Finnish music when he abandoned formal conventions and began to write music that seemed inchoate and diffuse, but followed a powerful line of development by variation and repetition; a parallel with Beethoven's late works has frequently been drawn. The thematic material employed by Sibelius is not modelled directly on known Finnish songs; rather he recreated the characteristic melodic patterns of folk music. The prevailing mood is somber, even tragic, with a certain elemental sweep and grandeur. His instrumentation is highly individual, with long songful solo passages, and with protracted transitions that are treated as integral parts of the music. His genius found its most eloquent expression in his symphonies and symph. poems; he wrote relatively little chamber music, and only in his earlier years. His only opera, The Maid in the Tower (1896), to a text in Swedish, was never published. He wrote some incidental music for the stage; the celebrated Valse Triste was written for Järnefelt's play Kuolema (1903). —WORKS: the opera Jungfruburen (The Maid in the Tower); Helsinki, Nov. 7, 1896; Scaramouche, a 'tragic pantomime' (1913; Copenhagen, May 12, 1922); incidental music to King Christian II (1898), Kuolema (1903), Pelléas et Mélisande (1905), Belshazzar's Feast (1906), Svanevit (1908), Odlan (1909), The Language of the Birds (1911), Jedermann (1916), The Tempest (1926); 7 symphonies: No. 1, in E minor, op. 39 (Helsinki, April 26, 1899), No. 2, in D major, op. 43 (Helsinki, March 8, 1902, composer conducting), No. 3, in C major, op. 52 (1904-07; Helsinki, Sept. 25, 1907, composer conducting), No. 4, in A minor, op. 63 (Helsinki, April 3, 1911, composer conducting), No. 5, in E♭ major, op. 82 (Helsinki, Dec. 8, 1915, composer conducting), No. 6, in D minor, op. 104 (Helsinki, Feb. 19, 1923, composer conducting), No. 7, in C major, op. 105 (Stockholm, March 24, 1924, composer conducting); symph. poems: Kullervo, op. 7 (Helsinki, April 28, 1892), En Saga, op. 9 (Helsinki, Feb. 16, 1893); Spring Song, op. 16 (1894), 4 Legends from the Kalevala, op. 22; Lemminkäinen and the Maidens (1895), Lemminkäinen in Tuonela (1895), The Swan of Tuonela (1893), The Return of Lemminkäinen (1895), Finlandia, op. 26 (Helsinki, July 2, 1900), Pohjola's Daughter, op. 49 (1906), Night Ride and Sunrise, op. 55 (1909), The Bard, op. 64 (1913), Luonnotar, op. 70 (1913), Aallotar (The Oceanides), op. 73 (Norfolk, Conn. Festival, June 4, 1914, composer conducting), Tapiola, op. 112 (commissioned by Walter Damrosch, and 1st performed by him, N. Y., Dec. 26, 1926); symph. suites: Karelia, op. 11 (1893), Rakastava, for strings and percussion, op. 14 (1911), Scènes historiques, op. 25, 1st suite (1899), Scènes historiques, op. 66, 2nd suite (1912), Suite mignonne, for 2 flutes and strings, op. 98a (1921), Suite champêtre, for strings, op. 98b (1921), Suite caractéristique for small orch., op. 100 (1923); violin concerto in D minor, op. 47 (1st version, Helsinki, Feb. 8, 1904; 2nd version, Berlin, Oct. 19, 1905); 6 Humoresques for violin and orch., op. 87b and 89 (1917); chamber music; string quartet in B♭ major, op. 4 (1882), Voces intimae, op. 56, for string quartet (1909), Malinconia, for cello and piano, op. 20 (1901), 4 pieces for violin or cello, op. 78 (1915), 6 pieces for violin and piano, op. 79 (1915), Sonatina for violin and piano, op. 80 (1915), 5 pieces for violin and piano, op. 81 (1915), Novellette, for violin and piano, op. 102 (1923), 5 Danses champêtres, for violin and piano, op. 106 (1925), 4 compositions for violin and piano, op. 115 (1929), 3 compositions for violin and piano, op. 116 (1929); piano sonata, op. 12 (1893); 111 piano pieces, grouped in cycles, and composed between 1894 and 1929. Choral works: The Origin of Fire, op. 32, for baritone, male chorus, and orch. (1902), Oma maa, cantata for chorus and orch., op. 92 (1918), Maan virsi, cantata for chorus and orch., op. 95 (1920), The Song of Väinö, for chorus and orch., op. 110 (1926); 85 songs; various early works, without opus numbers.—BIBLIOGRAPHY: K. Flodin, Finska Musiker (Helsinki, 1900); Rosa Newmarch, Jean Sibelius, a Finnish Composer (Leipzig, 1906); E. G. Furuhielm, Jean Sibelius (Borgå, 1916); W. Niemann, Jean Sibelius (Leipzig, 1917); Cecil Gray, Sibelius (London, 1931, 2nd ed., 1938); Cecil Gray, Sibelius: The Symphonies (London, 1935; 5th printing, 1947); Karl Ekman, Jean Sibelius: His Life and Personality (in English; Helsinki, 1935; 4th Swedish ed., 1956); Bengt de Törne, Sibelius: a Close-Up (London, 1937); Rosa Newmarch, Jean Sibelius (Boston, 1939); Eino Roiha, Die Symphonien von Jean Sibelius (Jyväskylä, 1941); E. Arnold, Finlandia, the Story of Sibelius (N. Y., 1941); I. Krohn, Der Formenbau in den Symphonien von Jean Sibelius (Helsinki, 1942); E. Tanzberger, Die symphonischen Dichtungen von Jean Sibelius (Würzburg, 1943); S. Levas, Jean Sibelius (in Finnish; Helsinki, 1945); Bengt de Törne, Sibelius (in Finnish; Helsinki, 1945); The Music of Sibelius, ed. by G. Abraham (N. Y., 1947); I. Hannikainen, Sibelius and the Development of Finnish Music (London, 1948); Nils-Eric Ringbom, Sibelius (in Swedish; Stockholm, 1948; in English, Norman, Okla., 1954); Veikko Helasvuo, Sibelius and the Music of Finland (Helsinki, 1952; in English); O. Andersson, Jean Sibelius i Amerika (Åbo, 1955, in Swedish); S. Parmet, Sibelius symfonier (Helsinki, 1955). See also the following articles in the 'Mus. Quarterly': A. H. Meyer, Sibelius: Symphonist (Jan., 1936) and H. Askeli, A Sketch of Sibelius the Man (Jan., 1940).

Siboni, Erik (Anton Waldemar), Danish pianist and composer; b. Copenhagen, Aug. 26, 1828; d. there, Feb. 22, 1892. He was the son of the tenor Giuseppe Siboni (b. Forlì, Jan. 27, 1780; d. Copenhagen, March 29, 1839, as director of the opera and Cons.); studied with J. P. E. Hartmann; then with Moscheles and Hauptmann at Leipzig and with Sechter at Vienna; returned to Copenhagen, and in 1864 became organist and piano professor at the Royal Academy of Music at Sorø; retired in 1883.—Works: operas, Loreley (Copenhagen, 1859) and Carl II's flugt (Flight of Charles II; Copenhagen, 1862); 2 symphonies; a piano quartet; other chamber music; the choral works Slaget ved Murten (Battle of Murten), Stormen paa København (Storming of Copenhagen), etc.

Sieber (zē-ber), Ferdinand, famous singing teacher; b. Vienna, Dec. 5, 1822; d. Berlin, Feb. 19, 1895. He studied with Ron-coni; after a brief period of singing in opera, he became a singing teacher in Dresden (1848-54), later settling in Berlin, where he had numerous pupils. He taught in the tradition of the old Italian method. He publ. valuable instructive works; Die Kunst des Gesangs, in 2 parts (theoretical and practical studies), with a supplement, 60 Vocalisen und Solfeegien; Vollständiges Lehrbuch der Gesangkunst für Lehrer und Schüler (1858; 3rd ed., 1878); Katechismus der Gesangkunst (1862 and many subsequent eds.); Die Aussprache des Italienischen im Gesang (1860; 2nd ed., 1880); and a Handbuch des deutschen Liederschatzes (1875), containing a catalogue of 10,000 songs arranged according to vocal range; he also wrote many songs.

Siegel, C. F. W., German music publisher; d. Leipzig, March 29, 1869. He founded his company in 1846, making a specialty of choral music. His successor was Richard Linnemann (b. April 14, 1845; d. Dec. 1, 1909), a pupil of the Leipzig Cons., who in 1871 acquired control of 'Die Sängerkhalle' (organ of the German singing societies), which he publ. until 1916. His sons, Carl Linnemann (b. Sept. 25, 1872) and Richard Linnemann, Jr. (b. Nov. 5, 1874; d. April 5, 1932), entered the business in 1901. The stock of E. W. Fritzsch was bought in 1901, and that of K. F. Kistner (q.v.) in 1919. From 1919 to 1927 the firm publ. the 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft.'

Siegel, Felix. See Schubert, Julius.

Siegel, Rudolf, German conductor and composer; b. Berlin, April 12, 1878; d. Munich, Dec. 4, 1948. He studied with Humperdinck in Berlin and with Thuille in Munich; in 1910 became conductor of a choral society in Munich; then was in Berlin (1912-14) and Königsberg (1914-17). From 1919 until 1930 he was music director at Krefeld; then moved to Berlin; in 1945 went to Ebing near Bamberg; eventually moved to Munich. He wrote an opera, Herr Dandolo (Essen, 1914); Apostatenmarsch, for male chorus and orch.; Heroische Ton-dichtung, for orch.; Dem Vaterlande, for men's chorus and orch.; made arrangements of German folksongs.

Siegl, Otto, Austrian violinist, conductor, and composer; b. Graz, Oct. 6, 1896. He studied in Vienna; was active as conductor. From 1933 till 1948 he taught in Cologne; returning to Vienna in 1948, he was appointed prof. at the Academy of Music. He wrote a piano concerto, 3 cello sonatas, a violin sonata, a viola sonata, etc., a total of more than 100 works.

Siegmeister, Elie, American composer; b. New York, Jan. 15, 1909. He studied academic subjects at Columbia Univ.; composition with Seth Bingham; in 1926 he took lessons from Wallingford Riegger; then went to Paris, where he studied with Nadia Boulanger (1927-31). Returning to N. Y., he taught at various schools. In 1940 he organized the American Ballad Singers and toured with them for 5 years. Since 1949, teaching at Hofstra College. —Works: Doodle Dandy of the USA, play with music (1942); Sing Out, Sweet Land, musical show (N. Y., 1944); Darling Corie, 1-act opera (Hofstra College, 1952); Miranda and the Dark Young Man, 1-act opera (Hartford, Conn., 1955); for orch.: A Walt Whitman Overture (N. Y., March 31, 1940); Ozark Set (Minneapolis, Nov. 7, 1944); Western Suite (NBC Symph., Nov. 24, 1945), Wilderness Road (Minneapolis, Nov. 9, 1945), Sunday in Brooklyn (NBC Symph., July 21, 1946), Lonesome Hollow (1946; Columbus, O., 1948), Prairie Legend (N. Y., Jan. 18, 1947), 3 symphonies (No. 1, N. Y., Oct. 30, 1947; No. 2, N. Y., Feb. 25, 1952; No. 3, 1957), From My Window (Erie, Pa., 1949), Summer Night (N. Y., Sept. 27, 1952), Divertimento (1953), clarinet concerto (Oklahoma City, 1956), woodwind quintet (1932); string quartet (1936); American Sonata, for piano (1944); 2 violin sonatas; choral works: Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight (1937), 8 American Folksongs (1940), Freedom Train, for men's voices with piano (1943), etc.; songs; piano pieces. He ed. The Music Lover's Handbook (N. Y., 1943); A Treasury of American Song (with Olin Downes, N. Y., 1940; revised and enlarged ed., 1943); etc.

Siepi, Cesare, Italian bass singer; b. Milan, Feb. 10, 1923; made his debut in Venice, 1941, as Rigoletto; from 1946, engaged at La Scala, Milan; American debut, Metropolitan Opera, N.Y., Jan. 27, 1951; also sang in Scandinavia, Spain, Switzerland, and England.

Sieveking (sē-vē-king), Martinus, pianist; b. Amsterdam, March 24, 1867; d. Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 26, 1950. He studied piano with his father and with Julius Röntgen. He began his career as accompanist in Paris; traveled with Adelina Patti on her tour of England (1891-92); then settled in the U.S.; spent a number of years experimenting with a new method which he announced as guaranteed to achieve virtuosity in 2 years. In 1915 he established in N. Y. a school to teach his virtuoso technique. He became celebrated as a teacher, while continuing to give concerts in Europe and America; then went to California, and lived in Pasadena. He publ. a number of brilliant piano studies and salon pieces.

Siface (sē-fah'-che), Giovanni Francesco, famous Italian male soprano; b. Pescia, Feb. 12, 1653; d. Ferrara, May 29, 1697 (murdered by hired assassins). He was a member of the Papal Chapel from 1675-77; in Modena from 1679 till 1687; later sang at Venice and London.

Sigismondi (sē-jis-mohn'-dē), Giuseppe; Italian singing teacher and composer; b. Naples, Nov. 13, 1739; d. there, May 10, 1826. He was librarian at the Cons. in Naples (from 1808); wrote an opera, 4 oratorios, vocal music, and pieces for piano and organ; only a few of his works were published.

Sigtenhorst-Meyer, Bernhard van den, Dutch composer; b. Amsterdam, June 17, 1888; d. The Hague, July 17, 1953. He studied at the Amsterdam Cons.; later in Vienna and Paris; settled in The Hague as composer and writer. —Works: 2 string quartets (1919, 1944); sonata for cello solo (1926); 2 violin sonatas (1926, 1938); 6 Miniatures, for oboe and piano (1926-46); 2 piano sonatas (1922, 1925); 3 piano sonatinas (1928, 1930, 1948); other piano pieces: La vieille Chine (1916), Les Oiseaux (1917); 2 albums, Le Monde de contes-bleus (1926-28); edited works by Sweelinck; publ. the valuable treatises, Jan P. Sweelinck en zijn instrumentale Muziek (The Hague, 1934; 2nd ed., 1946) and De vocale Muziek van Jan P. Sweelinck (1948). —Cf. C. Backers, Nederlandsche Componisten (The Hague, 2nd ed., 1948, pp. 131-37); H. Antcliffe, Sigtenhorst Meyer: A Personal Impression, in 'Monthly Musical Record' (Dec., 1953).

Sigwart, Botho (real name Sigwart Botho, Count of Eulenburg), German pianist and composer; son of the German diplomat and poet Count Phillip of Eulenburg; b. Berlin, Jan. 10, 1884; d. in Galicia, June 2, 1915 (from wounds received in battle). He studied piano in Vienna and musicology at the Univ. of Munich (Dr. phil. 1907, with the dissertation, Erasmus Widmann); completed his studies with Max Reger at Leipzig (1908-09). In 1909 he married the concert singer Helene Staegemann. He wrote a number of piano pieces, a string quartet, and several melodramas.

Siklós (shik'-losh), Albert, Hungarian composer; b. Budapest, June 26, 1878; d. there, April 2, 1942. His real name was Schönwald, but he changed it to Siklós in 1910. He studied law, and later took courses with Koessler at the Budapest Academy of Music, graduating in 1901; he taught at the Academy from 1910, and gradually became one of its most respected teachers. He was a prolific composer, but few of his works were published, and there were virtually no performances outside Hungary. He wrote the opera The House of the Months (Budapest, Dec. 21, 1927); a ballet, The Mirror (Budapest, March 28, 1923), and other stage works; 2 symphonies and an interesting Symphonie aethérique for 12 double-basses (1899); a cello concerto; a violin concerto; much chamber music; piano pieces. He publ. a number of instructive books, and also a music dictionary in Hungarian.

Sikorski (sē-kor'-skē), Kazimierz, composer; b. Zürich, June 28, 1895 (of Polish parents). He studied music in Warsaw and later in Paris; became prof. at the Warsaw Cons. in 1927. He was appointed director of the State Cons. in Lodz in 1948. His concerto, chamber music, and several choral pieces.

Silas (sē'-lahs), Eduard, pianist and composer; b. Amsterdam, Aug. 22, 1827; d. London, Feb. 8, 1909. He studied piano in Frankfurt and in Paris; took courses at the Paris Cons. with Halévy; won 1st prize for organ playing in competition with Saint-Saëns. In 1850 he settled in England as organist; also taught harmony at the Guildhall School in London. Among his works are 3 symphonies, 3 piano concertos, 2 string quintets, 2 piano trios, numerous piano pieces; also an oratorio, Joash (Norwich Festival, 1863), and a Mass.

Silbermann (zil'-bār-man), German family of organ and piano makers. (1) Andreas Silbermann, b. Klein-Bobritzsch, Saxony, May 16, 1678; d. Strasbourg, March 16, 1734. He settled in Strasbourg in 1703; was the builder of the organ of the Strasbourg Cathedral (1714-16) and of 29 others. (2) Gottfried Silbermann, brother of Andreas, b. Klein-Bobritzsch, Jan. 14, 1683; d. Dresden, Aug. 4, 1753. Apprenticed to a book-binder, he ran away and joined his brother in Strasbourg, working as his helper. He then lived in Freiberg; built 47 organs, the finest of which is that in the Freiberg Cathedral (1714), having 3 manuals and 45 stops. He owed his fame, however, mainly to the manufacture of pianos in Germany, in which field he was a pioneer; the hammer action in his instruments was practically identical with that of Cristofori, the piano inventor. Silbermann also invented the 'cembal d'amour,' a clavichord with strings of double length, struck in the middle by the tangents, thus yielding the duplicated octave of the tone of the entire string. He supplied 3 pianos to Frederick the Great for Potsdam, and Bach played on them during his visit there in 1747. (3) Johann Andreas Silbermann, eldest son of Andreas; b. Strasbourg, June 26, 1712; d. there, Feb. 11, 1783. He built 54 organs; publ. a Geschichte der Stadt Strassburg (1775). (4) Johann Daniel Silbermann, brother of Johann Andreas; b. Strasbourg, March 31, 1717; d. Leipzig, May 9, 1766. He worked with his uncle Gottfried at Freiberg, and continued the manufacture of pianos after the latter's death. (5) Johann Heinrich Silbermann, brother of Johann Andreas and Johann Daniel; b. Strasbourg, Sept. 24, 1727; d. there, Jan. 15, 1799; made pianos at Strasbourg, similar to those of his uncle Gottfried, and introduced them into France. (6) Johann Friedrich Silbermann, son of Johann Heinrich; b. Strasbourg, June 21, 1762; d. there, March 8, 1817. He was an organist in Strasbourg; during the Revolution wrote a Hymne à la Paix; also composed some German songs. —Bibliography: L. Mooser, Gottfried Silbermann (Langensalza, 1857); G. Zschaler, Gottfried Silbermann (1898); E. Flade, Der Orgelbauer Gottfried Silbermann (Leipzig, 1926); H. Hüllemann, Die Tätigkeit des Orgelbauers Gottfried Silbermann im Reussenland (Leipzig, 1937); R. Gärtner, Gottfried Silbermann der Orgelbauer (Dresden, 1938); J. Wörsching, Die Orgelbauer Familie Silbermann in Strassburg (Mainz, 1941); E. Flade, Gottfried Silbermann. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Orgel- und Klavierbau im Zeitalter Bachs (Leipzig, 1953); Donald Boalch, Makers of the Harpsichord and Clavichord 1440-1840 (London, 1956, pp. 112-14; contains genealogy and list of extant instruments made by members of the family).

Silcher (zil'-her), Friedrich, German composer; b. Schnaith, Württemberg, June 27, 1789; d. Tübingen, Aug. 26, 1860. He studied with his father and with Auberlen, an organist at Fellbach; lived for some years in Stuttgart; in 1817 was appointed music director at the Univ. of Tübingen, receiving the honorary degree of Dr. phil. in 1852. He was an influential promoter of German popular singing; publ. several collections of German folksongs, in which he included his own compositions; of the latter, Lorelei (Ich weiss nicht, was soll es bedeuten, to words by Heinrich Heine) became so popular that it was often mistaken for a folksong; his other well-known songs are Ännchen von Tharau, Morgen muss ich fort von hier, Zu Strassburg auf der Schanz, etc. He also publ. a Choralbuch for 3 voices, 3 books of hymns for 4 voices; 'Tübinger Liedertafel' (male choruses); Geschichte des evangelischen Kirchengesanges (1844); Harmonie- und Kompositionslehre (1851; 2nd ed., 1859). —Cf. A. Köstlin, F. Silcher und Weber (Stuttgart, 1877); A. Prümers, F. Silcher: der Meister des deutschen Volkslieds (Stuttgart, 1910); G. Brügel, Kritische Mitteilungen zu Silchers Volksliedern, in the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1914); A. Bopp, F. Silcher (Stuttgart, 1916); A. Bopp, Liederbuch aus Schwaben (1918); H. Kleinert and H. Rauschnabel, eds., F. Silcher (Stuttgart, 1935); A. Lämmle, F. Silcher (Mühlacker, 1956).

Siloti (zē-loh'-tē), Alexander Ilyitch, Russian pianist and conductor; b. Kharkov, Oct. 9, 1863; d. New York, Dec. 8, 1945. He studied piano with Zverev in Moscow, and later with Nicholas Rubinstein and Tchaikovsky at the Moscow Cons. (1876-81), winning the gold medal. He made his début as pianist in Moscow (1880); appeared with great success in Leipzig in 1883; then studied for 3 years with Liszt at Weimar. From 1887 to 1890 he was prof. at the Moscow Cons.; among his students was Rachmaninoff (his first cousin). Between 1890 and 1900 he made numerous concert tours, settling for short periods in Paris, Frankfurt, Antwerp, Leipzig, and Berlin; returned to Russia in 1901; conducted the concerts of the Moscow Philharmonic Society for the season of 1901-02. In 1903 he organized his own orch. in St. Petersburg, with which he gave an annual series of symph. concerts, playing many new works by Russian composers. His piano tours in Europe and America (from 1898) established his reputation as one of Liszt's most talented pupils. He left Russia in 1918; was in England in 1919; settled in New York in 1922; in 1925 joined the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., retiring in 1942. He publ. a collection of piano pieces from his concert programs (with fingering and indications for pedalling); edited concertos by Bach and Vivaldi, etc.; publ. My Memories of Liszt (in English; Edinburgh, 1913).

Silva, Luigi, cellist; b. Milan, Nov. 13, 1903, of a musical family; his father was a vocal teacher; his mother a Viennese singer. He studied piano with his father and composition with Respighi in Rome; cello with Arturo Bonucci in Bologna at the Liceo Musicale; graduated in 1923; was cellist in the Rome Opera orch.; received the Boccherini Prize at the First National Contest for young concert artists in Rome; was a member of the Quartetto di Roma; then taught at the Cherubini Cons. in Florence. He came to the U. S. in 1939; was head of the cello and chamber music dept. at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester (1941-49); from 1949, member of the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., the Mannes College of Music, and the School of Music at Yale Univ. He made transcriptions for cello of works by Boccherini, Della Ciaia, Piatti, Paganini, etc.; edited Bach's unaccompanied compositions include 3 symphonies, a clarinet cello suites.

Silva, Oscar da, Portuguese pianist and composer; b. Paranhos, near Oporto, April 21, 1870. He studied at the Lisbon Cons.; in 1892 took lessons at the Leipzig Cons. with Reinecke and Jadassohn; also for a brief time studied with Clara Schumann. Returning to Portugal, he settled in Leça da Palmeira in 1910; taught piano in Oporto; then gave concerts in America, Brazil, South Africa, and Egypt. In 1932 he went to Rio de Janeiro, remaining there until 1952, when he returned to Portugal, living in retirement at Lisbon. He wrote an opera, Dona Mecia (Lisbon, July 4, 1901); a symph. poem, Alma crucificada; a number of piano pieces: Rapsodia portuguesa, Estudos indefinidos, Papillon dans le jardin, Paginas portuguesas (14 numbers); songs (to French words); 2 string quartets; a piano quartet; etc. — Cf. A. Pinto, Musica moderna portuguesa e os seus representantes (Lisbon, 1930, pp. 114-29).

Silva, (David) Poll da, French composer; b. St.-Esprit, near Bayonne, March 28, 1834; d. Clermont, Oise, May 9, 1875. He went to Paris in 1854, and Halévy advised him to enter the Cons., but he was prevented by failure of his eyesight; when he became quite blind, his mother wrote out his compositions from dictation. Thus handicapped, he succeeded nonetheless in composing 3 operas; a ballet; 2 oratorios; cantatas and other choral works; 2 symphonies; chamber music; songs; piano pieces.

Silva Leite, Antonio da, see Leite, Antonio da Silva.

Silver (sil-vär'), Charles, French composer; b. Paris, April 16, 1868; d. there, Oct. 10, 1949. He studied with Dubois and Massenet at the Paris Cons., winning the Grand Prix de Rome in 1891 with the cantata L'Interdit. He wrote the operas La Belle au bois dormant (Marseilles, 1902); Le Clos (Paris, 1906); Myriane (Nice, 1913); La Mégère apprivoisée (Paris, Jan. 30, 1922); La Grand-mère (Oct. 7, 1930); Quatre-vingt-treize (Paris, Jan. 24, 1936); also orchestral works, songs, etc.

Simandl (zē-mahndl), Franz, double-bass player and composer; b. Blatna, Bohemia, Aug. 1, 1840; d. Vienna, Dec. 13, 1912. He was 1st double-bass player in the Vienna court orch.; from 1869, taught at the Vienna Cons.; publ. Neueste Methode des Kontrabass-Spiels (in 3 parts) and 30 Etüden für Kontrabass; Die hohe Schule des Kontrabass-Spiels, a collection of concertos, studies, solo pieces, etc. His original compositions include a Konzertstück, Konzert-Étude, a concerto, fantasias, and minor pieces for his instrument.

Simila, Martti, Finnish conductor; b. Uleaborg, April 9, 1898; d. Lahti, Jan. 8, 1958. He studied in Finland; then in Paris and London; conducted the Helsinki Opera (1927-44) and the Helsinki Municipal Orch. (1945-50); became conductor of the Municipal Orch. of Lahti in 1951. He made 2 tours in the U. S. as pianist, in 1923 and 1926; was again in the U. S. in 1957, and conducted a memorial concert of the music of Sibelius with the N. Y. Philharmonic, Dec. 8, 1957.

Simmons, Homer, American pianist and composer; b. Evansville, Ind., Aug. 6, 1900. He studied piano with Homer Grunn in Los Angeles; went to Rome in 1931, where he took courses in orchestration with Respighi, and then spent some time in Switzerland, taking lessons from Paderewski at Morges; also studied counterpoint with Nadia Boulanger in Paris. His works include Phantasmia for piano and orch. (Hollywood Bowl, 1929, composer soloist); California Nights, for piano and orch.; Impressions Basques, for orch.; Lyra Davidica for 2 pianos and string quartet; Panels from a Lacquered Screen for voice and string quartet; Evenings in Old Vienna, for 2 pianos and string quartet; numerous piano pieces and songs. He settled in Sunland, California.

Simon, Alicia, Polish musicologist; b. Lodz, Nov. 13, 1879. She studied in Warsaw and Wiesbaden; attended classes of Kretzschmar and Johannes Wolf at the Univ. of Berlin; Dr. phil. at Zürich (1914); in 1918 she came to the U. S.; from 1924 to 1928 was on the staff of the Library of Congress, Washington; later returned to Poland. She publ. Polnische Elemente in der deutschen Musik bis zur Zeit der Wiener Klassiker (Zürich, 1916); The Polish Song-writers (in English; Warsaw, 1936; 2nd ed., 1939); edited sonatas by Telemann.

Simon, Anton, French composer; b. 1851; d. in Russia, c. 1918. He studied at the Paris Cons. with Marmontel (piano); settled in Moscow in 1871, and taught at the Philharmonic Institute until 1891. He wrote the operas Rolla (Moscow, April 29, 1892), The Song of Triumphant Love (Moscow, Dec. 14, 1897), and The Fishermen (Moscow, March 7, 1899); a mimodrama, Esmeralda (1902); 2 ballets, The Stars (1898) and Living Flowers (1900); a piano concerto; a clarinet concerto; a symph. poem, La Pêcheresse; chamber music, including 22 pieces for brass instruments; numerous piano pieces; about 100 songs.

Simon, James, German musicologist; b. Berlin, Sept. 29, 1880; d. in the Oswiecim concentration camp, c. 1941. He studied piano with Ansgorge and composition with Max Bruch; musicology in Munich; Dr. phil., 1904, with a dissertation on Vogler. He taught at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Cons. in Berlin (1907-19); in 1934 he left Germany and lived in Zürich, and later in Amsterdam, where he was arrested in 1941. He wrote an opera, Frau im Stein (Stuttgart, 1925); a cantata after Goethe, Urworte; symph. works; chamber music; songs.

Simon, Robert A., American music journalist; b. New York, Feb. 18, 1897. He graduated from the School of Journalism of Columbia Univ. in 1920; in 1925 began to contribute music criticism to the 'New Yorker' magazine (until 1945); also was active as writer of lyrics for musical comedies; author of the libretto of Garrick, opera with music by Albert Stoessel (N. Y., 1937). He publ. a book of comic songs, Bronx Ballads, for which he wrote both text and music (1927).

Simonds (sī'mündz), Bruce, American pianist and pedagogue; b. Bridgeport, Conn., July 5, 1895. After studying at Yale Univ. (A.B. 1917; Mus.B., 1918; A.M., 1938), he attended the Schola Cantorum in Paris (1919-21) and the Matthey School in London (1920-21). Made his début as a pianist in Europe in 1921; in the same year returned to the U.S. and embarked on a successful career as concert pianist; also in 1921 joined the teaching staff at Yale; prof. since 1938; dean of the Yale School of Music, 1941-54. Publ. 2 organ pieces and one for violin.

Simonetti, Achille, Italian-British violinist; b. Turin, June 12, 1857; d. London, Nov. 19, 1928. He studied violin with Gamba at the Milan Cons. and with Dancla at the Paris Cons.; toured in England with the singer Marie Rôze and the double-bass virtuoso Bottesini; settled in London in 1891, but made frequent tours on the Continent. He wrote a cadenza for Brahms' violin concerto, which he played for the first time in Dresden (Dec. 11, 1896); composed numerous solo pieces for the violin.

Simpson (or Sympson), Christopher, English player of the viola da gamba and composer; b. Yorkshire, c. 1610; d. Scampton, Lincolnshire, 1669. He fought on the Royalist side in the English civil war (1643) and later entered the service of Sir Robert Bolles as music tutor to the latter's son. Simpson was famous as a composer. —Published works: The Division Violist or an Introduction to the Playing Upon a Ground: Divided into 2 Parts (London, 1659; 2nd ed. with title and text in Latin and English, in 3 parts, London, 1665; 3rd ed., 1712, with 2 sonatas for viola da gamba; modern ed. by Nathalie Dolmetsch, London, 1958); The Principles of Practicle Musick . . . either in Singing or Playing upon an Instrument (London, 1665; enlarged ed., as Practicall Musick in 5 Parts teaching by a new and easie Method, London, 1667); also compiled annotations to Campion's Art of Discant (1655). In MS: Months and Seasons: Fancies, Aires, Galliards, for 2 basses and a treble; Fancies for viola da gamba; etc.

Simpson, George Elliott, American music educator and composer; b. Orange, N. J., Nov. 1, 1876. He studied with Emil Mollenhauer (violin) in N. Y. (1886-90); then took composition lessons with Carl Busch in Kansas City (1894-1900); subsequently studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Jadassohn and Reinecke (1900-03). He taught in Kansas City (1903-07); then occupied various teaching and executive positions in Texas, returning to Kansas City in 1918; in 1954 was living there as counselor with a public relations firm. He wrote 12 tone-poems; 4 overtures; publ. about 50 piano pieces and 80 songs. His American Symphony was performed for the first time in Kansas City, on March 26, 1925.

Simpson, Robert, English writer on music and composer; b. Leamington, March 2, 1921. He studied at Durham Univ.; Mus. D., 1952; joined the staff of the B.B.C. He publ. a valuable monograph, Carl Nielsen, Symphonist (London, 1952), and contributed articles to various music magazines. Among his compositions are a symphony (1951), 3 string quartets (1951-54), and piano pieces.

Simpson (or Sympson), Thomas, English composer; from about 1610 he was musician to the Prince of Holstein-Schaumburg, and from 1618 in the royal chapel at Copenhagen. An outstanding instrumental composer, he publ. Opusculum newer Pavanen (Frankfurt, 1610); Pavanen, Galliarden, Courtanten und Volten (Frankfurt, 1611; reprinted in 1617 under the title Opus newer Paduanen, Galliarden, Intraden, Canzonem, etc.); and Tafel-Consort, allerhand lustige Lieder von 4 Instrumenten und Generalbass (Hamburg, 1621). —Cf. G. Oberst, Englische Orchestersuiten um 1600 (Wolfenbüttel, 1929); E. Mohr, Die Allemande (Zürich, 1932).

Simrock, Nikolaus, founder of the famous publishing house in Berlin; b. Mainz, 1752; d. Bonn, 1833. He played the horn in the electoral orch. in Bonn (1774-90); then abandoned playing to establish a music business; he publ. a number of Beethoven's works. His son, Peter Joseph Simrock (b. Bonn, Aug. 13, 1792; d. there, Dec. 13, 1868), succeeded him, and greatly increased the prestige of the house by acquiring the early works of Brahms. He was succeeded by his son, Fritz August Simrock (b. Bonn, Jan. 2, 1838; d. Lausanne, Aug. 20, 1901), who moved to Berlin in 1870, and added the works of Dvořák to the catalogue. His nephew, Hans Simrock (d. Berlin, June 26, 1910), reorganized the firm in 1902 as a stock company, and established branches in London and Paris. Fritz Auckenthaler (grandson of Fritz Simrock) was head of the firm from 1920 to 1930; in 1930 he sold the business to A. Benjamin. —Cf. W. Ottendorf-Simrock, Das Haus Simrock (Ratingen, 1954). See also the correspondence between Simrock and Brahms (vols. IX-XII of the Brahms correspondence).

Šín (shin), Otakar, eminent Czech teacher and composer; b. Rokytno, Moravia, April 23, 1881; d. Prague, Jan. 21, 1943. He studied organ at the Prague Cons., where he was appointed prof. of theory in 1919; publ. a textbook of harmony (Prague, 1922; 6th ed., 1949); also a manual on counterpoint and fugue (1936); wrote several symph. poems and overtures based on Czech national themes.

Sinclair, George Robertson, English organist; b. Croydon, Oct. 28, 1863; d. Birmingham, Feb. 7, 1917. He received his musical education in Dublin; became assistant to the organist of the Gloucester Cathedral, C. H. Lloyd (1879). In 1889 he was appointed organist of Hereford Cathedral, and also conducted the Three Choirs Festivals (1891-1912). He acquired a reputation as a master organist; the 11th variation of Elgar's Enigma is inscribed to Sinclair ('G. R. S.'), and portrays vividly Sinclair's virtuosity in the use of the organ pedals. —Cf. 'Mus. Times' (Oct., 1900; March, 1906; March, 1917).

Sinding, Christian, Norwegian composer; b. Kongsberg, Jan. 11, 1856; d. Oslo, Dec. 3, 1941. He studied first with L. Lindeman in Norway; then at the Leipzig Cons. with Schradieck (violin), Jadassohn (theory), and Reinecke (orchestration); after 4 years (1877-81) he returned to Norway, and had his piano quartet and a symphony performed in Oslo; a government stipend enabled him to continue his studies in Germany, and he spent 2 years (1882-84) in Munich, Berlin, and Dresden; there he wrote his 1st opera, Titandros, much influenced by Wagner. On Dec. 19, 1885, he gave a concert of his works in Oslo; during another stay in Germany, his piano quintet was played in Leipzig with Brodsky and Busoni among the performers (Jan. 19, 1889); Erika Lie-Nissen played his piano concerto in Berlin (Feb. 23, 1889). He publ. a number of piano pieces in Germany; of these Frühlingsrauschen became an international favorite. His opera to a German text, Der heilige Berg (1914), was not successful. In 1915 he received a pension for life of 4,000 crowns 'for distinguished service'; on his 60th birthday (1916) the Norwegian government presented him with a purse of 30,000 crowns, as a mark of appreciation for 'the greatest national composer since Grieg.' He was invited by George Eastman to teach at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y., during the academic season 1921-22; after this journey, he lived mostly in Oslo. He continued to compose, and toward the end of his life wrote in larger forms; his 3rd symph. was conducted by Nikisch with the Berlin Philharmonic in 1921; and his 4th symph. was performed on his 80th birthday in Oslo (1936). His works aggregate to 132 opus numbers. Most of his music is of a descriptive nature; his lyric pieces for piano and his songs are fine examples of Scandinavian Romanticism, but the German inspiration of his formative years is much in evidence; he was chiefly influenced by Schumann and Liszt. —Works: Operas Titandros (1884; not produced); Der heilige Berg (Dessau, April 19, 1914). For orch.: symph. No. 1 (Oslo, March 25, 1882); symph. No. 2 (Berlin, March 22, 1907); symph. No. 3 (Berlin, Jan. 10, 1921); symph. No. 4, subtitled Vinter og Vaar (Oslo, Jan. 11, 1936); Épisodes chevaleresques, op. 35 (1888); Rondo infinito, op. 42 (1889; revised, 1897); piano concerto in D-flat (Berlin, Feb. 23, 1889); 3 violin concertos (1898, 1901, 1917); Legende for violin and orch., op. 46 (1900); Romanze for violin and orch., op. 100 (1910); Abendstimmung, for violin and orch., op. 120 (1915); several cantatas and other choral works. Chamber music: string quartet, op. 70 (1904); piano quintet, op. 5 (1884); 3 piano trios: op. 23 (1893), op. 64 (1902), op. 87 (1908); 4 violin sonatas: op. 12 (1894), op. 27 (1895), op. 73 (1905), op. 99, subtitled Sonate im alten Stil (1909); 4 violin suites: op. 10 (1889), op. 14 (1891), op. 96 (1909), op. 123 (1919); Scènes de la vie for violin and piano, op. 51 (1900); Cantus doloris, variations for violin and piano, op. 78 (1906); 3 capricci for violin and piano, op. 114 (1913); etc.; Nordische Ballade, for cello and piano, op. 105 (1911); etc. For piano: sonata, op. 91 (1909); Fatum, variations, op. 94 (1909); 5 Stücke, op. 24 (1894), 7 Stücke, op. 25 (1895), 6 Stücke, op. 31 (1896), 6 Stücke, op. 32 (1896; No. 3 is the celebrated Frühlingsrauschen), 6 Charakterstücke, op. 33 (1896; contains A la Menuetto and Ständchen), 6 Charakterstücke, op. 34 (1896; contains Chanson), 6 Klavierstücke, op. 49 (1899; contains Humoresque), Méodies mignonnes, op. 52 (1900), 4 Morceaux de salon, op. 54 (1900; contains Sérénade); etc. Songs: Alte Weisen, op. 1 (1886), Lieder und Gesänge, op. 11 (1888; contains Viel Träume and Ein Weib), Galmandssange, op. 22 (1893; contains Mainat), Nyinger, op. 90 (1908), etc.; about 250 publ. songs in all. A complete list of Sinding's works was publ. by Ö. Gauksstad, in the 'Norsk Musikkgranskning' (1938).

Singelée (san-zhū-lā'), Jean-Baptiste, Belgian violinist and composer; b. Brussels, Sept. 25, 1812; d. Ostend, Sept. 29, 1875. He publ. 144 works (2 concertos, many solos for violin, fantasias on operatic airs, etc.).

Singer, Edmund, violinist; b. Totis, Hungary, Oct. 14, 1830; d. Stuttgart, Jan. 23, 1912. He studied in Budapest, and later at the Paris Cons.; was concertmaster in Weimar (1853-61); later, prof. at the Stuttgart Cons. He publ. a number of attractive violin pieces: Tarantella, Rapsodie hongroise, Airs variés, etc.; wrote cadenzas for the violin concertos of Beethoven and Brahms; edited the études of Rode, Kreutzer, Fiorillo, Rovelli, and Gaviniés; with M. Seifriz, compiled the Grosse theoretisch-praktische Violinschule (2 vols., 1884).

Singer, Kurt, German musicologist; b. Berent, Oct. 11, 1885; d. in the Terezin concentration camp, Jan., 1944. He studied musicology with Friedlaender in Berlin; also became a doctor of medicine; wrote criticisms for the socialist newspaper 'Vorwärts.' In 1935, deprived of his posts in German organizations, he became music director of the 'Reichsverband jüdischer Kulturbünde.' He went to Holland in 1939, but was arrested there by the invading Germans, and eventually perished. —Writings: Richard Wagner (1913); Bruckners Chormusik (1924); Berufskrankheiten der Musiker (1927; in English as Diseases of the Musical Profession, N. Y., 1932); Heilwirkung der Musik (1927); etc.

Singer, Otto, pianist and composer; b. Sora, Germany, July 26, 1833; d. New York, Jan. 3, 1894. He studied piano with Moscheles in Leipzig and with Liszt in Weimar; in 1867 he emigrated to America; after a few years in N. Y., he became instructor at the Cincinnati College of Music, returning to N. Y. shortly before his death. He wrote 2 cantatas, The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers (1876) and Festival Ode (1878); 2 piano concertos; a piano sonata and other piano music. —His son, Otto Singer, Jr. (b. Dresden, Sept. 14, 1863; d. Leipzig, Jan. 8, 1931), was a student of Rheinberger in Munich; was active as choral conductor in Leipzig (1892-1900 and from 1922) and Berlin (1900-19); publ. a Konzertstück for violin and orch.; a piano quintet; male choruses; made vocal scores of operas by Wagner and Richard Strauss.

Singer, Peter, Austrian composer and music theorist; b. Häselgehr (Lechthal), July 18, 1810; d. Salzburg, Jan. 26, 1882. He was a Franciscan monk; composed 101 Masses, about 600 offertories, etc.; publ. 'Cantus choralis in provincia Tirolensi consuetus' (1862). In 1839 he invented the 'Pansymphonikon,' a kind of orchestration with reeds; publ. Metaphysische Blicke in die Tonwelt, nebst einem . . . neuen System der Tonwissenschaft (1847). —Cf. Pater Hartmann, Peter Singer (Innsbruck, 1910).

Singer, Martial, French baritone; b. Oloron-Sainte-Marie, Aug. 14, 1904. He sang in a boys' choir in Biarritz and later studied singing at the Paris Cons. (Premier Prix, 1929). In 1930-41, sang at the Paris Opéra; also appeared in opera houses in Sweden, Denmark, Switzerland, Belgium, and Holland; married Margareta Busch (daughter of Fritz Busch) on Jan. 10, 1940. He made his American début at the Metropolitan Opera, Dec. 10, 1943; then appeared in the U. S. and Canada in recitals and with orchestras as well as in operatic roles.

Singleton, Esther, American writer on music; b. Baltimore, Nov. 4, 1865; d. Stonington, Conn., July 2, 1930. She lived most of her life in N. Y.; publ. A Guide to the Operas (1899); A Guide to Modern Opera (1909); The Orchestra and Its Instruments (1917); contributed the chapter on American music to Lavignac's Encyclopédie de la Musique (1915).

Sinico (sē'-nē-koh), Francesco, Italian choral conductor and composer; b. Trieste, Dec. 12, 1810; d. there, Aug. 18, 1865. He studied with G. Farinelli; was organist and conductor in various churches; in 1843 established his own singing school in Trieste, providing excellent training for choral singing. He produced his opera I Virtuosi di Barcellona in 1841. —His son, Giuseppe Sinico (b. Trieste, Feb. 10, 1836; d. there, Dec. 31, 1907), continued the popular singing classes at the Sinico School in Trieste; wrote several operas, which he produced there: Marinella (Aug. 26, 1854), I Moschetti (March 26, 1859), Aurora di Nevers (March 12, 1861), Alessandro Stradella (Lugo, Sept. 19, 1863), and Spartaco (Nov. 20, 1886). He publ. a Breve metodo teorico-pratico di canto elementare. —Cf. Una Famiglia triestina di musicisti 'I Sinico' (Trieste, 1932).

Sinigaglia (sē-nē-gah'-lyah), Leone, Italian composer; b. Turin, Aug. 14, 1868; d. there, May 16, 1944. He was a pupil at the Turin Cons., studying with Giovanni Bolzoni; later in Vienna (1895-1900) with Mandyczewski, and in Prague with Dvořák. His first successful work was a violin concerto dedicated to Arrigo Serato (1900), who played it with considerable success in the principal cities of Germany. His early works were much influenced by Brahms and Dvořák; then he turned for inspiration to the music of his native Piedmont, and in this field achieved a lasting reputation. Toscanini conducted in Turin the première of Sinigaglia's suite Danze Piemontesi on popular themes (May 14, 1905); later he publ. a collection of songs (6 albums), Vecchie canzoni popolari del Piemonte; another work in the folksong manner is the symph. suite Piemonte (1909; Utrecht, Feb. 16, 1910); he further wrote Le Baruffe Chiozzotte, an overture to Goldoni's comedy (Utrecht, Dec. 21, 1907); Rapsodia piemontese, for violin and orch.; Romanze, for violin and orch.; Variations on a Theme of Brahms, for string quartet (1901); Serenade for string trio (1906); cello sonata (1923). Like Sgambati, Sinigaglia did not write any music for the theater. —Cf. E. Desderi, L. Sinigaglia, in the Rivista Musicale Italiana (1946).

Siohan, Robert, French composer and conductor; b. Paris, Feb. 27, 1894. He studied at the Paris Cons. In 1929 he founded the Concerts Siohan (suspended in 1936); conducted at the Paris Opéra (1932-47); taught at the Paris Cons. —Works: the cantatas Cantique au frère soleil (1928) and Hyperion (1945); a violin concerto; a cello concerto; piano concerto; string quartet; choral pieces. Also publ. Horizons sonores; évolution actuelle de l'art musical (Paris, 1956).

Siqueira, José, Brazilian composer and conductor; b. Conceição, June 24, 1907. He studied composition with Francisco Braga, and conducting with Burle Marx. His works include 2 overtures, 3 symph. poems, a symphony, 5 pieces for string orch., chamber music, piano pieces, and songs, most of them based on Brazilian folk melodies. He visited the U. S. in 1944; conducted in Russia in 1955. Publ. a Curso de instrumentação (Rio de Janeiro, 1945).

Širola (shē'-roh-lah), Božidar, Croatian musicologist and composer; b. Žakanj, Dec. 20, 1889; d. Zagreb, April 10, 1956. He studied at the Univ. of Vienna; Dr. phil., 1921. He was on the faculty of the Zagreb Cons. (1935-41); in 1945, became director of the Zagreb Ethnographic Museum. —

SISTERMANS — SJÖBERG

Works: the operas: Comedy in Stanac (1916), Cittern and Drum (1930), The Village Chaplain (1940); 8 oratorios; 4 Masses; a symph.; 9 string quartets; 3 piano trios; 24 Inventions for piano solo; 8 piano sonatas; several song cycles; publ. (in German) several papers on Croatian music; also arrangements of folksongs.

Sistermanns, Anton, Dutch bass singer; b. Hertogenbosch, Aug. 5, 1865; d. The Hague, March 18, 1926. He studied with Stockhausen in Frankfurt; from 1895 gave concerts in Europe; his only appearance in opera was as Pogner (Bayreuth, 1899). From 1904 to 1915 he taught singing at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Cons., Berlin; then lived in The Hague.

Sitt, Hans, violinist and composer; b. Prague, Sept. 21, 1850; d. Leipzig, March 10, 1922. He studied at the Prague Cons.; held various positions as violinist and conductor of theater orchestras in Breslau, Prague, and Chemnitz. In 1881 he settled in Leipzig; organized a series of popular concerts there; was viola player in the Brodsky Quartet; conducted the 'Bachverein' (1885-1903) and other musical societies there. He wrote 3 violin concertos, a viola concerto, 2 cello concertos; publ. valuable studies for the violin; also Praktische Violaschule; Schulausgabe neuerer Violinlitteratur (5 books); and (with Reinecke) Lyrica, a collection of 30 classic and romantic pieces for violin and piano.

Sittard (zit'-tahrt), Alfred, German organist; son of Josef Sittard; b. Stuttgart, Nov. 4, 1878; d. Berlin, March 31, 1942. He studied with his father, and later with Wüllner at the Cologne Cons.; was organist at the Kreuzkirche in Dresden (1903-12), and then at St. Michael's in Hamburg (1912-25). In 1925 he was appointed prof. of organ at the Berlin Akademie für Kirchen- und Schulmusik, and in 1933 became Kapellmeister of the Berlin Cathedral chorus. He publ. 3 Choralstudien for organ; also wrote Das Hauptorgelwerk und die Hilfsorgel der Michaeliskirche in Hamburg (1912).

Sittard, Josef, German music historian; b. Aix-la-Chapelle, June 4, 1846; d. Hamburg, Nov. 24, 1903. He studied at the Stuttgart Cons., and later joined its faculty as instructor in singing and piano; from 1885 was music critic for the Hamburg 'Correspondent.' He publ. several valuable papers dealing with German city music; Studien und Charakteristiken (1889, collected essays); Geschichte des Musik- und Concertwesens in Hamburg (1890); Zur Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters am Württembergischen Hofe (2 vols., 1890, 1891); etc.; also composed some choral works and songs.

Sivori, Camillo, Italian violinist; b. Genoa, Oct. 25, 1815; d. there, Feb. 19, 1894. His first teacher was Restano; he played in public at the age of 6; was presented to Paganini, who was greatly impressed and agreed to take Sivori as a pupil. Still as a child, Sivori produced a sensation at his appearances in Paris and London (1827); after a period of further study with Giacomo Costa (Paganini's teacher), Sivori resumed his concerts; at the age of 16, he undertook a grand journey through Austria, Germany, and Russia. From 1846 to 1850 he made an extensive tour through North and South America. His style of playing was modeled after Paganini's, and his virtuosity amazed musicians and audiences wherever he went. He composed 2 violin concertos; fantasies on airs from various operas for the violin; and numerous characteristic pieces: Tarentelle napolitaine, Carnaval de Chili, Carnaval de Cuba, Carnaval américain, Folies espagnoles, etc.—Cf. E. James, Camillo Sivori (London, 1845); L. Escudier, Mes Souvenirs (Paris, 1863); A. Pierrotet, Camillo Sivori (Milan, 1896).

Sixt, Johann Abraham, German organist and composer; b. Gräfenhausen, Württemberg, Jan. 3, 1757; d. Donaueschingen, Jan. 30, 1797. He was the son of a schoolmaster and organist; received his musical training at home; traveled in Germany; was in Vienna in 1784, and received a recommendation from Mozart. He then settled in Donaueschingen, and remained there for 13 years as piano teacher and chamber musician to the court, until his death. He wrote piano trios, sonatas, and other instrumental works; of particular interest are his lieder, with long introductions in the accompaniment, setting the mood of the text; some of these have been brought out in a modern ed. by Erich Fischer.

Sjöberg (shö'-behrg), Svante Leonard, Swedish organist, conductor, and composer; b. Karlskrona, Aug. 28, 1873; d. there, Jan. 18, 1935. He studied at the Stockholm Cons. with Nordquist and Dente; in Berlin with Max Bruch (composition). Returning to Sweden in 1901, he was organist at the Stadskyrka in Karlskrona, and conductor of the Musikförening there (1901-34). He wrote an overture to Gustaf Vasa (1901); a violin sonata and other chamber music; also songs.

Sjögren (shö'-gren), Emil, Swedish composer; b. Stockholm, June 16, 1853; d. there, March 1, 1918. He studied composition at the Stockholm Cons. with H. Berens, in Berlin with Kiel, and in Vienna with Grädener. In 1891 he was appointed organist at St. John's Church in Stockholm. His importance as composer rests chiefly on his songs, of which he wrote about 200, to texts in Swedish, French, and German; he also wrote a festival overture; several choruses; 5 violin sonatas; a cello sonata; 2 piano sonatas; several groups of lyric pieces for piano. Nils Brodén compiled an index of all of Sjögren's publ. compositions (Stockholm, 1918). A complete ed. of his songs was undertaken by the Swedish Academy in 1950-51. —Cf. S. E. Svensson, Emil Sjögrens vokala lyrik, in 'Svensk Tidskrift för Musikforskning' (1935).

Skalkottas, Nikos, talented Greek composer; b. Chalcis, March 8, 1904; d. Athens, Sept. 19, 1949. He studied with his father and his uncle; then at the Odeon in Athens, graduating as a violinist in 1920. In 1921 he went to Berlin, where he studied violin with Willy Hess and composition with Kurt Weill and Jarnach. From 1927 to 1933 he studied with Schoenberg, whose instruction determined his style (dodecaphonic, but with an original approach; in his book Style and Idea Schoenberg mentions Skalkottas as one of his most gifted disciples). Returning to Athens in 1933, Skalkottas continued to compose despite difficult material circumstances and lack of recognition. His music attracted serious attention only after his death, and a committee was formed in Athens to promote performance and publication of his works. His orchestral suite from the folk tale Im Maienzauber was performed posthumously in Vienna (March 18, 1951); his Petite Suite for orch. at the Venice Festival (1953). He wrote further an overture, The Return of Odysseus (1945); symphony for wind instruments (1947); Sinfonietta (1948); ballet suite La Mer grecque (1948); 36 Greek dances for orch. (4 of these dances were publ. in full score in Athens, and have had frequent performances in Europe and America); 2 piano concertos (1933; 1938); cello concerto (1937); violin concerto (1938) and a concerto for 2 violins; 4 violin sonatinas (1930); 4 string quartets (1930-40); piano trio (1936); string trio (1938); duo for violin and viola (1940); duo for violin and cello (1947); piano pieces; songs.

Škerjanc (shkār-yants), Lucijan Maria, composer; b. Graz, Dec. 17, 1900; studied in Vienna, Basel, and Paris; then was prof. of composition at the Academy of Music in Ljubljana. His music reflects neo-Romantic ideas, with superimposed Impressionist effects. Between 1933 and 1945 he wrote 5 symphonies, 2 violin concertos (1940, 1943), and a Fantasia for piano and orch. (1944); he also composed 5 string quartets (1917-45) and several cantatas; publ. a manual on counterpoint (1951).

Skilton, Charles Sanford, American composer; b. Northampton, Mass., Aug. 16, 1868; d. Lawrence, Kansas, March 12, 1941. After graduating from Yale Univ. (B.A., 1889) he studied in New York with Harry Rowe Shelley (organ) and Dudley Buck (composition); then went to Germany, where he studied with Bargiel at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (1891-93). From 1893 to 1896 he was director of music at the Salem Academy and College, N. C., and conducted the local orchestra there; then filled a similar post at the State Normal School, Trenton, N. J. (1898-1903); in 1903 he was engaged as prof. of organ and theory at the Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence, where he remained most of his life. He made a detailed study of Indian music, and introduced Indian motifs into the traditional forms of a suite or a fantasy. —Works: the operas The Sun Bride (radio performance, April 17, 1930), Kalopin (not produced; received the David Bispham Memorial Medal of the American Opera Society of Chicago, 1930), The Day of Gayomair (1936; not produced); for orch.: Suite Primeval, on Indian melodies, in 2 parts: 2 Indian Dances (originally for string quartet, 1915; Minneapolis, Oct. 29, 1916); part II (Minneapolis, Nov. 13, 1921); Autumn Night (Detroit, Dec. 11, 1930); Shawnee Indian Hunting Dance (Detroit, Dec. 11, 1930); A Carolina Legend, symph. poem; Mt. Oread, overture; Sioux Flute Serenade, for small orch. (1920); cantata The Witch's Daughter (1918); The Guardian Angel, oratorio (1925); From Forest and Stream (1930); Midnight, for women's voices; The Fountain, for women's voices; a string quartet; a sonatina for violin and piano; a Sarabande for wind instruments. Also publ. Modern Symphonic Forms (N. Y., 1927). —Cf. J. T. Howard, Charles Sanford Skilton (N. Y., 1929).

Skinner, Ernest M., American organ builder; b. Clarion, Pa., Jan. 15, 1866. He was the founder of the Ernest M. Skinner

Co., organ builders, originally of Dorchester, later of Methuen, Mass. Until 1905 the business was carried on by Skinner himself; it was then incorporated, with Skinner as president. From 1917 to 1932 he was technical director of the Skinner Organ Co., which in 1932 was merged with the Aeolian Co. of Garwood, N. J., and became the Aeolian-Skinner Organ Co. Skinner was especially successful in the construction of organ pipes reproducing the exact tone color of the various woodwind instruments and the French horn; among several important inventions is the 'duplex windchest,' by means of which the stops of 2 manuals are made interchangeable, and the arrangement of placing the stops on swinging sides. The Skinner Co. built the organ in the National Cathedral at Washington, D.C. Skinner publ. a valuable book, The Modern Organ (1915; 6th ed., 1945), and The Composition of the Organ (1947). He celebrated his 90th birthday on Jan. 15, 1956.

Skriabin. See Scriabin.

Škroup (or Skraup) (shkrōh'-šōp), Franz (František), Czech composer and conductor; b. Osice, near Pardubice, June 3, 1801; d. Rotterdam, Feb. 7, 1862. He studied law in Prague, where he also sang in a chorus. In 1827 he became 2nd conductor at the subsidized Bohemian Theater, Prague, and 1st conductor in 1837; remained at that post until 1857, and put into performance several Wagner operas for the 1st time in Prague; also was an outstanding member of the national movement, and wrote several operas to Czech librettos, which he conducted at the Bohemian Theater: Dráteník (Feb. 2, 1826); Oldřich a Božena (Dec. 14, 1828); Libuše snatek (Nov. 6, 1835); also the German operas Drahomira (Nov. 20, 1848) and Der Meergeuse (Nov. 29, 1891). In 1860 Škroup took a position offered to him with a German opera troupe in Rotterdam, and died there after 2 seasons. Besides his operas, he wrote some chamber music and many popular Bohemian songs, of which Kde domov můj became so famous as to be mistaken for a folksong and was made into the Czech national anthem. —Cf. J. Plavec, František Škroup (Prague, 1946).

Škroup, Jan Nepomuk, Czech composer, brother of František Škroup; b. Osice, near Pardubice, Nov. 15, 1811; d. Prague, May 5, 1892. He was a chorumaster at the Prague Opera; then devoted himself to church music; served as music director at various churches in Prague and finally at the Cathedral; in 1846, he was appointed teacher of singing at the Theological Seminary. He wrote manuals for church services: Manuale pro sacris functionibus and Musica sacra pro populo; also a vocal method.

Skrowaczewski (skrōh-vāh-chēv'-skē), Stanislaw, Polish composer; b. Lwow, Oct. 3, 1923. He studied piano in Cracow; took composition lessons with Nadia Boulanger in Paris. Returning to Poland, he was appointed conductor of the State Philharmonic in Katowice (1948). —Works: 2 symphonies; 4 string quartets; piano sonata; violin sonata; etc.

Skuherský (skoo-hehr'-skē), Franz (František) Zdeněk, Czech composer, pianist, and pedagogue; b. Opočno, July 31, 1830; d. České Budějovice, Aug. 19, 1892. A student of medicine, he also had lessons in music with Kittl; from 1854 to 1866 he conducted the 'Musikverein' in Innsbruck; then returned to Prague, where he lectured at the Czech Univ., conducted the court orch., and taught at the Organ School. He also took great interest in the problem of church music in Bohemia, and participated in the movement for its reform. He publ. textbooks in Czech on musical form (1879), composition (1880-84), harmony (1882), organ (1883), etc.; some of them were translated into German. He wrote the operas Vladimír, Bohuv Zvolenec (Prague, Sept. 27, 1863) and Rektor a General (Prague, March 28, 1873), and a German opera Der Liebesring (Innsbruck, 1861); a symph. poem May; 4 Masses; 30 Orgelvorspiele in den Kirchentonarten (without accidentals) and a similar set of organ pieces with accidentals; also many organ studies, piano pieces, and songs.

Slaughter, A. Walter, English composer; b. London, Feb., 1860; d. there, April 2, 1908. He was a chorister at St. Andrews, Wells St.; studied with A. Cellier and Jacobi. He was a conductor, successively, of the Royal Theatre, the Olympic, Drury Lane, and St. James's Theatre; wrote a number of musical stage works, among them the 3-act comic opera Marjorie (1889), The Rose and the Ring (after Thackeray; 1890), and a musical comedy, The French Maid (1897).

Slavenski (slah-ven'-skē), Josip, outstanding Yugoslav composer; b. Čakovec, May 11, 1896; d. Belgrade, Nov. 30, 1955. He went to Budapest and studied with Kodály and Herzfeld; his education was interrupted by World War I; he resumed his studies with Novák in Prague (1921-23); in 1924 he was appointed prof. at the Music Academy in Zagreb, later became prof. of theory at the Belgrade Cons. A musician of advanced ideas, he experimented with various musical systems, and devised a 'natural' scale of 53 tones to the octave. —Works: Ursinfonie, for orch., organ, and piano (1919-28); Balkanophonia, suite for orch. (Berlin, Jan. 25, 1929); a cantata, Religionophonia; chamber music; several albums of piano pieces on Balkan themes.

Slavík, Joseph, violinist; b. Jince, Bohemia, March 26, 1806; d. Budapest, May 30, 1833. He studied with Pixis at the Prague Cons.; from 1829 was a member of the Vienna Court orch. He wrote 2 violin concertos; double concerto for 2 violins; a string quartet; etc.

Sleeper, Henry Dike, American organist and music educator; b. Patten, Maine, Oct. 9, 1865; d. Winter Park, Fla., Jan. 28, 1948. He studied with J. K. Paine in Boston, and later in London. After teaching at various colleges, he joined the faculty of Smith College in 1898, and was head of the music dept. there from 1904 to 1924. He wrote a number of organ pieces and songs; was co-editor of The Common Order Choir Book (1903) and Hymns of Worship and Service (college edition).

Slenczynska (slen-chin'-skäh), Ruth, American pianist; b. Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 15, 1925. Her father, a violinist, taught her music, and she appeared in public as an infant; made her début in Berlin when she was 6, and played in Paris at the age of 7; also studied composition with Dandelot there. She aroused tremendous enthusiasm by her seemingly accomplished performances of difficult works at such an early age, and was able to give complete recitals of Classical and Romantic works without signs of fatigue; also was soloist with many orchestras. However, when she reappeared after a few years of further study, the critics found her playing mechanical and devoid of mature understanding. She thereupon abandoned her career altogether, married (later divorced), and took a job as a librarian in California. Her vindication as an artist came in 1954 when she resumed her interrupted career with excellent success. She publ. a candid book of memoirs (with Louis Biancolli), Forbidden Childhood (N. Y., 1957), in which she described the difficulties of a child prodigy's life.

Slezak (sleh'-zahk), Leo, famous tenor; b. Mährisch-Schönberg, Moravia, Aug. 18, 1873; d. Egern-on-the-Tegernsee, Bavaria, June 1, 1946. As a youth, he sang in the chorus of the Brünn Opera; made his début as Lohengrin there (March 17, 1896); the role became one of his outstanding successes. He was with the Berlin Opera for a season (1898-99); in 1901 became a member of the Vienna Opera, where he was active until 1926; also performed frequently in Prague, Milan, and Munich. Not satisfied with his vocal training, he went to Paris, where he studied with Jean de Reszke. He made his London début with marked acclaim as Otello (June 2, 1909); appeared in America for the first time also as Otello, with the Metropolitan Opera Co., N. Y. (Nov. 18, 1909); sang with the Metropolitan during its spring tour of 1910 and its summer season in Paris; subsequently sang also in Russia; gave recitals presenting distinguished programs, performed with impeccable taste. He also acted in motion pictures. He was a man of great general culture, and possessed exceptionally sharp literary wit, which he displayed in his reminiscences Meine sämtlichen Werke (1922) and Der Wortbruch (1927); both were later combined in a single volume (1935); English transl. as Songs of Motley: Being the Reminiscences of a Hungry Tenor (London, 1938); also publ. Rückfall (1930). A final book of memoirs, Mein Lebensmärchen, was publ. posthumously (1948).

Slonimsky, Nicolas, musicologist; b. St. Petersburg, April 27, 1894. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with his aunt, Isabelle Vengerova (piano), Kalafati (harmony), and Maximilian Steinberg (orchestration). He came to the U. S. in 1923 (naturalized 1931) as opera coach at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y.; moved to Boston in 1925, as secretary to Serge Koussevitzky (until 1927); from 1928 to 1930, conducted the Pierian Sodality, Harvard; organized the Chamber Orch. of Boston (1927-34); conducted modern American music in Paris, Berlin, Budapest, Havana, etc. (1931-33); toured South and Central America (1941-42); taught at various music schools and colleges; composed (mostly in small forms). —Books: Music Since 1900 (N. Y., 1937; 3rd enlarged ed., 1949); Music of Latin America (N. Y., 1945; in Spanish, Buenos Aires, 1947); The Road to Music (N. Y., 1947); Thesaurus of Scales and Melodic Patterns (N. Y., 1947); A Thing or Two About Music (N. Y., 1948); Lexicon of Musical

Investive (N. Y., 1953); edited the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th eds. of Oscar Thompson's 'International Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians' (1946, 1949, 1952, 1956); edited and translated '50 Russian Art Songs, from Glinka to Shostakovitch' (N. Y., 1951); 1958, appointed to the editorial advisory board of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' (in the field of American music). He is editor of the 5th edition (1958) of BAKER'S BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF MUSICIANS.

Sloper, (Edward Hugh) Lindsay, English pianist and teacher; b. London, June 14, 1826; d. there, July 3, 1887. He studied with Moscheles at London, A. Schmitt at Frankfurt, and Rousselot at Paris; made his début in London (1846); became a very popular concert pianist and teacher there; also gave lectures. In 1880 was made prof. of piano playing at the Guildhall School of Music. He wrote many piano pieces; studies and textbooks for piano; songs; etc.

Smallens, Alexander, conductor; b. St. Petersburg, Jan. 1, 1889. He was brought to the U. S. as a child; graduated from the College of N. Y. (B. A., 1909); studied at the Institute of Musical Art (N. Y.) and at the Paris Cons. (1911). He was then engaged as assistant conductor of the Boston Opera (1911-14); conductor for the Anna Pavlova Ballet Co. on a tour of South America (1915-18); at the Chicago Opera Co. (1919-22); was music director of the Philadelphia Civic Opera (1924-31); assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orch. (1927-34); conductor at the Robin Hood Dell summer concerts and at the Lewisohn Stadium concerts, N. Y., for several seasons; also with the Ballet Theater, N. Y.; from 1947 to 1950 he was musical director at the Radio City Music Hall. He was the original conductor of Gershwin's opera Porgy and Bess, and conducted this opera during its European tour in 1956.

Smallwood, Williams, English organist; b. Kendal, Dec. 31, 1831; d. there, Aug. 6, 1897. He studied with Dr. Camidge and H. Phillips; was organist of the Kendal Parish Church from 1847 till his death. He composed didactic piano pieces and salon music; also anthems, hymns, songs, etc. His Piano-forte Tutor had an immense sale.

Smareglia (smah-rehl'-yah), Antonio, Italian composer; b. Pola, Istria, May 5, 1854; d. Grado, near Trieste, April 15, 1929. He was trained in engineering before turning to music; studied composition with Franco Faccio at the Cons. of Milan. He became totally blind about 1905, but continued to compose by improvising on the piano with a musical amanuensis; lived in Milan until 1921, when he was appointed prof. of composition at the Tartini Cons., Trieste. —Operas: Preziosa (Milan, Nov. 19, 1879); Bianca da Cervia (Milan, Feb. 7, 1882); Re Nala (Venice, Feb. 9, 1887); Il Vassallo di Szigeth (Vienna, Oct. 4, 1889); Cornelio Schutt (Prague, May 20, 1893); Nozze istriane (Trieste, March 28, 1895; very successful); La Falena (Venice, Sept. 4, 1897); Oceana (Milan, Jan. 22, 1903); L'Abisso (Milan, Feb. 9, 1914). —Cf. G. Zuccoli, A. Smareglia (Trieste, 1923); G. D. Nacamuli, A. Smareglia (Trieste, 1930); A. Smareglia, Vita ed arte di Antonio Smareglia (Lugano, 1932); Mario Smareglia, A. Smareglia (Pola, 1934).

Smart, Sir George (Thomas), English organist and conductor; b. London, May 10, 1776; d. there, Feb. 23, 1867. Chorister in the Chapel Royal under Ayrton; pupil of Dupuis (organ) and Arnold (composition). Knighted 1811 at Dublin by the Lord Lieutenant, after conducting a series of concerts. Original member of the Philharmonic Society and conductor of its concerts 1813-44, introducing the works of Beethoven and Schumann. Also conducted the Lenten oratorios (1813-25). Publ. a collection of glees and canons (1863), 2 vols. of sacred music, 2 piano sonatinas, etc.; edited Orlando Gibbons' madrigals and Handel's Dettingen Te Deum. —Cf. H. B. and C. L. Cox, Leaves from the Journals of Sir George Smart (London, 1907); C. Maclean, Sir George Smart, Musician-Diarist, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. X, 1909); A. Hyatt King, The Importance of Sir George Smart, in the 'Mus. Times' (Dec., 1950).

Smart, Henry, English organist; son of Sir George's brother Henry (1778-1823); b. London, Oct. 26, 1813; d. there, July 6, 1879. He was a pupil of his father and W. H. Kearns; served as organist at several London churches, finally at St. Pancras, Euston Road, in 1864, his sight failing in that year; he received a government pension in 1879. His opera, Bertha, or the Gnome of the Hartzberg, was produced at the Haymarket Theatre, May 26, 1855; the cantatas The Bride of Dunkerron (1864), King René's Daughter (1871), The Fishermidens (1871), and Jacob (1873) appeared after he was blind. He wrote many songs, part-songs, and anthems; a full Morning and Evening Service; organ music; etc. —Cf. Wm. Spark, Henry Smart, His Life and Works (London, 1881); W. D. Seymour, Henry Smart (London, 1881).

Smetana (směh'-tah-nah), Bedřich (Friedrich), great Bohemian composer; b. Leitomischl, March 2, 1824; d. insane at Prague, May 12, 1884. His talent manifested itself very early, but his father's prejudice against music as a profession precluded systematic instruction. However, a friend of his school-days, Katharina Kolař, who was studying the piano with Proksch in Prague, introduced Smetana to her master, who accepted him as a pupil (piano and theory). Kittl, the director of the Cons., procured him a position as music teacher in the family of Count Thun. After four years of earnest work Smetana gave up his position, and undertook his first concert tour, which resulted in a disastrous financial failure. In despair, he turned to Liszt, who helped him to open a piano school of his own. This flourished, and a year later (1849) he married Katharina Kolař, who had also become a fine pianist. His reputation as a performer, especially as an interpreter of Chopin, grew rapidly, but his first compositions were received coldly. When, therefore, the Philharmonic Society of Göteborg offered him the conductorship in 1856, he immediately accepted. In his first year there he wrote his first three symphonic poems, Richard III, Wallensteins Lager, and Hakon Jarl (after Öhlenschläger). As conductor and pianist he was highly appreciated. But the cold climate undermined his wife's health. For her sake he spent his vacations regularly in Prague; on the trip there in 1859, she died in Dresden. Meantime, important events were preparing at home. Škroup had made a beginning with national opera, whose chief national element was Bohemian texts, the music being practically devoid of national characteristics. The younger musicians and poets sought the establishment of a national art. After Austria had granted political autonomy to Bohemia in 1860, an agitation was begun for the erection of a national opera-house in Prague. Smetana resigned his post in Göteborg, and returned to Prague in May, 1861, assuming a leading role in the new movement. On Nov. 18, 1862, the new opera-house was opened; but the dozen Bohemian operas by Škroup, Shuherský, and Šebor could not furnish an important or varied repertory; consequently, Meyerbeer and the Italians were sung in Bohemian. Smetana therefore turned to opera, and finished his first dramatic work, Braniboři u

Čechách (The Brandenburgers in Bohemia), in 1863. It was not produced till Jan. 5, 1866; its success, while not overwhelming, was decided. On May 30, 1866, his second opera, Prodaná nevěsta (The Bartered Bride), was received with immense enthusiasm. Smetana was appointed 1st conductor (replacing the Meyerbeer fanatic, Mayer), and acclaimed as Bohemia's greatest composer. This opera has also found success abroad (Austria and Germany, 1892; Scandinavia, 1894; England, 1895; Italy, 1905; Belgium, 1907; U. S., Feb. 19, 1909, at the Metropolitan Opera House). The next opera, Dalibor (May 16, 1868), on account of Smetana's employment of leading motifs and more elaborate treatment of the orchestra, caused several critics to charge the composer with attempting to Wagnerize the national opera. A war of words, lasting ten years, resulted. In 1871, when there was talk of crowning Emperor Francis Josef as King of Bohemia, Smetana wrote Libuša for the coronation festivities. But no coronation took place, and Smetana's enemies found means of preventing a production at the National Opera. Hoping to duplicate the success of his second work, he selected a comedy, Dvě vdovy (The Two Widows), produced on March 27, 1874, with only moderate success. Continued opposition preyed upon his mind, producing a serious nervous disorder affecting his hearing. In the spring of 1874 he had to resign his conductorship; in October he was totally deaf. Mayer, his predecessor, succeeded him at the opera, and Smetana sought forgetfulness in work. He returned to the symphonic poem, but now found inspiration in national subjects. Thus originated those six masterpieces bearing the collective title Má Vlast (My Country): Vysěhrad (the ancient castle of the Bohemian kings) and Vltava (The Moldau) in 1874; Šárka (a valley north of Prague, named after a mythological character) and Z českých luhův a hájův (From Bohemia's Meadows and Groves) in 1875; Tábor (The Camp; introducing the Hussite war-song) in 1878; and Blaník (the Bohemian 'Kyffhäuser') in 1879. To this period also belongs the famous E minor string quartet Z mého Života (As meinem Leben; 1876). But Smetana's labors on behalf of national art had already borne fruit; a reaction soon set in, and by the end of 1875 his friends again controlled the opera. Early in 1876 the master began a new opera, Huňka (The Kiss), produced with gratifying success on Nov. 7, 1876. Tajemství (The Secret), staged in Prague on Sept. 18, 1878, was hailed as a second Bartered Bride, and won even the opposition party. For the opening (June 11, 1881) of the new National Opera Libussa was unanimously chosen, and created a profound impression. His last opera, Čertova stěna (The Devil's Wall), presented on Oct. 29, 1882, was a comparative failure. His health had not improved; nevertheless, he continued to create new works including an opera, Viola, which was never completed; early in 1884 he had to be transferred to the insane asylum. Smetana's other works are: Richard III, symph. poem (Prague, Jan. 5, 1862, composer conducting); Hakon Jarl, symph. poem (Prague, Feb. 24, 1864, composer conducting); Písně česká (Bohemian Song), for vocal quartet and orch. (1868; Prague, March 29, 1875); Pražský Karneval (The Carnival of Prague), symph. poem (Prague, March 2, 1884); Rybář (The Fisher), music to a tableau after Goethe, for harmonium, harp, and string quintet (Žofín, April 12, 1869); a Festmarsch for the Shakespeare tercentenary (1864); string quartet in D minor; piano trio; 2 pieces for violin and piano; choruses and songs; piano music (a set of Bohemian dances, 3 sets of polkas, the popular concert étude Am Seegestade, etc.). —Bibliography: B. Wellek, F. Smetana. Mit einem Anhang von Korrespondenzen Smetanas an Liszt (Prague, 1895; 2nd ed. as F. Smetanas Leben und Wirken, 1899); O. Hostinský, B. Smetana (Prague, 1901); R. Batka, Die Musik in Böhmen (Berlin, 1906); W. Ritter, F. Smetana (Paris, 1907); K. Hoffmeister, B. Smetana (Prague, 1914); V. Helfert, B. Smetana (Brno, 1924); V. Balthasar, B. Smetana (Prague, 1924); E. Rychnovský, Smetana (Stuttgart, 1924); Z. Nejedlý, B. Smetana, a monumental biography in 4 vols. (Prague, 1924-33; 2nd ed. in 7 vols., 1950-54); J. Bistrón, F. Smetana (Vienna, 1924); J. Tiersot, Smetana (Paris, 1926); J. Teichmann, B. Smetana (Prague, 1944); P. Pražák, Smetanovy zpěvohry (on Smetana's operas; 4 vols.; Prague, 1948); H. Boese, Zwei Urmusikanten: Smetana, Dvořák (Zürich, 1955). Documentary vols. containing various materials on Smetana were publ. in Prague by Mírko Očádlík (1950) and F. Bartoš (9th ed., 1954; in English as Letters and Reminiscences, Prague, 1955); numerous monographs on Smetana's individual works have also been publ. in Prague.

Smijers (smi'ĕhrs), Albert Anton, eminent Dutch musicologist; b. Raamsdonksveer, July 19, 1888; d. Huis ter Heide, near Utrecht, May 15, 1957. He studied music with Averkamp at the Cons. of Amsterdam; was trained for the priesthood; ordained in 1912; then entered the school for church music at Klosterneuburg; took a course in musicology with Guido Adler at the Univ. of Vienna (1914-19); Dr. phil. with the dissertation Karl Luython als Motettenkomponist (1917; publ. Amsterdam, 1923). Returning to Holland, he became head of the division for church music at the Catholic seminary in Tilburg; in 1930 was appointed prof. of musicology at the Univ. of Utrecht; formed the Institute of Musicology there, which gave great impetus to musicological research in Holland. He was president of the International Musicological Society from 1952 till his death. In 1921 he undertook the preparation of a critical ed. of the complete works of Josquin Des Prez; at the time of his death, 5 volumes still remained unpublished; brought out 7 volumes of the anthology Van Ockeghem tot Sweelinck (Amsterdam, 1939-56); in collaboration with Charles Van den Borren and others he publ. Algemeene Muziekgeschiedenis (Utrecht, 1938); began an edition of the collected works of Obrecht (vol. I, Amsterdam, 1953-54). Other editions are Missa ad modulum Benedicta es, by Philippe de Monte (1920), Attaignant's 13 Livres de motets (3 vols.); etc. His writings include Die Kaiserliche Hofmusik-Kapelle von 1543-1619, in Adler's 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (VI ff.).

Smit, Leo, American pianist and composer; b. Philadelphia, Jan. 12, 1921. He received a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, at the age of 9; studied piano with Isabelle Vengerova; composition with Nicolas Nabokov. In 1950 he won a Guggenheim Fellowship and a Fulbright Scholarship, and spent several years in Rome; gave piano recitals, specializing in modern music. His own style is neo-Classical; the contrapuntal fabric is particularly strong. —Works: ballet, Virginia Sampler (N. Y., March 4, 1947); for orch.: Joan of Arc (1942), Hymn and Toccata-Breakdown (1945), The Parcae, overture (1951; Boston, Oct. 16, 1953), symph. No. 1 (Boston, Feb. 1, 1957); Capriccio, for string orch. (Ojai, Calif., May 23, 1958); chamber music: sextet for clarinet, bassoon, and strings (1940), Rural Elegy and Rondo, for violin and piano (1945); V-Shum-Roo, for chorus and organ (1946); 5 Pieces for Young People, for piano (1947); other piano pieces; songs.

Smith, Alice Mary (Mrs. Meadows White), English composer; b. London, May 19, 1839; d. there, Dec. 4, 1884. She was a pupil of Sterndale Bennett and G. A. Macfarren; married M. White in 1867. —Works: the cantatas Rüdesheim (1865), Ode to the Northeast Wind (1878), Ode to the Passions (1882), Song of the Little Baitung (1883), and The Red King (1884); also a symphony in C minor; 4 overtures: Endymion, Lalla Rookh, Masque of Pandora, and Jason; 2 piano quartets; 2 string quartets; a piano trio; a clarinet concerto; Introduction and Allegro for piano and orch.; part-songs; etc.

Smith, Bernard (Bernhard Schmidt), called 'Father Smith,' organ builder; b. in Germany c. 1630; d. London, Feb. 20, 1708. He settled in London in 1660 with 2 nephews; became organ builder in ordinary to the King and court organ builder to Queen Anne. He built organs for St. Margaret's, Westminster (1675), Durham Cathedral (1683), the Temple (1684), St. Paul's Cathedral (1697), and the Banqueting Hall, Whitehall (1699). —Cf. A. Freeman, Father Smith (London, 1926).

Smith, Carleton Sprague, American musicologist; b. New York, Aug. 8, 1905. He was educated at Harvard Univ. (M.A., 1928) and the Univ. of Vienna (Ph.D., 1930); was a John Harvard Fellow in 1928; from 1931-34, instructor in history at Columbia Univ.; since 1931 chief of the Music Division, N.Y. Public Library. U.S. delegate to the International Congress of Music Education at Prague, 1936. President of the American Musicological Society, 1938-40. 1940, lectured in South America under the auspices of the American Council of Learned Societies; 1943-46, in Brazil as lecturer on social history of the U.S. and cultural relations officer, Dept. of State. In July, 1946, returned to his post as chief of the Music Division, N.Y. Public Library. 1948, lectured on Latin-American civilizations at N.Y. University; since 1948, lecturer there on American music. A skillful flutist, he has frequently played in public; edited Prokofiev's flute sonata, op. 94; also edited (with Leroy Robertson) a series of records, 'Music in America.'

Smith, Cecil, American music critic; b. Chicago, July 12, 1906; d. London, May 28, 1956. He studied with H. Levy (piano) and Sowerby (composition) in Chicago; later at Harvard Univ. with Piston. He taught at the Univ. of Chicago (1929-46); was music critic of the 'Chicago Tribune' (1936-42) and editor of 'Musical America' (1948-51). He went to England in 1951 and wrote for the London 'Daily Express'; remained in London until his death. —Books: Musical Comedy in America (N. Y., 1950); Worlds of Music (Philadelphia, 1952).

Smith, David Stanley, American composer and music educator; b. Toledo, Ohio, July 6, 1877; d. New Haven, Conn., Dec. 17, 1949. He studied with Horatio Parker at Yale Univ., graduating in 1900. He then went to Europe, where he took courses in composition with Thuille in Munich and Widor in Paris. Upon his return to the U. S. he obtained the Mus. Bac. degree at Yale (1903) and was appointed instructor at the Yale School of Music; in 1916 became prof. there; in 1920, was appointed dean of the School of Music, retiring in 1946. He was conductor of the New Haven Symph. Orch. from 1920 to 1946. —Works: symph. No. 1 (1905); symph. No. 2 (1917); symph. No. 3 (Cleveland, Jan. 8, 1931, composer conducting); symph. No. 4 (Boston, April 14, 1939, composer conducting); Prince Hal, overture (New Haven, Dec., 1912); Impressions, suite for orch. (1916); Fête Galante, fantasy for flute and orch. (N. Y., Dec. 11, 1921); A Satire, orch. sketch (N. Y., Nov. 15, 1933); Epic Poem, for orch. (Boston, April 12, 1935, composer conducting); Requiem, for violin and orch. (1939); Credo, symph. poem (1941); 4 Pieces for string orch. (1943); The Apostle, symph. poem (1944); Flowers, suite of 4 pieces for 10 instruments (1924); Sinfonietta, for string orch. (1931); choral works: Rhapsody of St. Bernard, for mixed chorus and orch. (1915), Visions of Isaiah, for soprano, tenor, chorus, and orch. (1927), The Ocean, for bass solo, mixed chorus, and orch. (1945); chamber music: 10 string quartets, Sonata Pastorale, for oboe and piano, 2 violin sonatas, piano quintet, cello sonata; piano works; songs (cycle, Songs of Three Ages, etc.). —Cf. B. C. Tuthill, David Stanley Smith, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1942).

Smith, Gerrit, American organist and composer; b. Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 11, 1859; d. Darien, Conn., July 21, 1912. He studied music at the Stuttgart Cons.; began his professional career as organist in Buffalo; settled in N. Y. in 1885 as church organist. He was one of the founders of the Manuscript Society, N. Y.; wrote a cantata, King David; many songs of a lyric inspiration; 25 Song-Vignettes (for children), and an interesting suite, Aquarelles, including 8 songs and 8 piano pieces. —Cf. Rupert Hughes, Contemporary American Composers (Boston, 1900; pp. 309-17).

Smith, John Christopher (Johann Christoph Schmidt), organist and composer; b. Ansbach, Germany, 1712; d. Bath, England, Oct. 3, 1795. His father went to England with Handel in 1720 as his agent, and the son became Handel's pupil. When Handel's eyesight began to deteriorate, Smith helped him in playing the organ and harpsichord at performances of Handel's oratorios, and continued to supervise performances of Handel's music after Handel's death; Smith presented the MS scores of Handel, and other objects left to him by Handel, to George III in appreciation for a royal pension. He retired about 1770, and settled in Bath. He wrote several English operas, of which 2 Shakespearian pieces, The Fairies (1754) and The Tempest (1756) were publ.; also wrote the oratorios Paradise Lost (1760), Judith, Redemption, etc. — Cf. W. Coxe, Anecdotes of G. F. Handel and J. C. Smith (London, 1799).

Smith, John Stafford, English organist and composer; b. Gloucester, c. 1750; d. London, Sept. 21, 1836. He was a pupil of his father Martin Smith, organist of Gloucester Cathedral, and of Boyce. In 1784 he was made a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal; succeeded Arnold as organist there in 1802; from 1805 to 1817, master of the boy choristers there; also was (from 1785) lay-vicar at Westminster Abbey; he won several prizes given by the Catch Club of London. The fact that in his 5th collection of glees (1799) he publ. an arrangement of To Anacreon in Heaven, the tune to which Francis Scott Key later wrote The Star-Spangled Banner, has led to his being mistakenly regarded as the composer of the tune, whose actual origin is unknown. Smith was an excellent music scholar; he transcribed into modern notation many old MSS for Sir John Hawkins' History of Music; publ. A Collection of Songs of Various Kinds for Different Voices (1785); edited 'Musica antiqua,' containing compositions 'from the commencement of the 12th to the 18th century' (2 vols., 1812). — Cf. O. G. Sonneck, Report on the Star-Spangled Banner (1914).

Smith, Reed, American educator and writer on folklore; b. Washington, N. C., Jan. 16, 1881; d. Pawley's Island, S. C., July 24, 1943. He was educated at the Univ. of South Carolina and at Harvard Univ. (Ph. D., 1909); in 1910 appointed prof. of English literature at the Univ. of South Carolina; he publ. South Carolina Ballads (1928); also various essays on songs of the South.

Smith, Sydney, English pianist and composer; b. Dorchester, July 14, 1839; d. London, March 3, 1889. He studied piano at the Leipzig Cons. with Moscheles and Plaidy; settled in London in 1859 as a teacher; publ. many salon pieces for piano (La Harpe éolienne, Le Jet d'eau, The Spinning-wheel, etc.); also arrangements from operas.

Smith, Warren Storey, American music critic; b. Brookline, Mass., July 14, 1885. He studied at the Faelten Pianoforte School, Boston, where he taught from 1908 to 1919; in 1922 appointed prof. of theory and music history at the New England Cons., still retaining this post in 1958; assistant music critic of the Boston 'Evening Transcript' (1919-24); music editor of the Boston 'Post' (1924-53). He wrote for orch. a Romance (Boston Pops, 1916) and an Andante Cantabile (1920); songs: To Helen (1914), The Gift of Pan, Faith, I Know a Trail (all 1915); A Caravan From China Comes (1916; also with orch.); numerous instructive piano pieces; brought out a Syllabus of the Lectures in Musical History, for use at the New England Conservatory.

Smith, Wilson George, American pianist and composer; b. Elyria, Ohio, Aug. 19, 1855; d. Cleveland, Feb. 26, 1929. He studied in Germany with Kiel, the Scharwenka brothers, Kullak, and Moszkowski. In 1882 he settled in Cleveland as piano teacher; from 1902 was critic of the Cleveland 'Press.' He publ. a number of salon pieces for piano, Poème d'amour, Humoresque, Schumannesque, Babbling Brook, Menuet moderne, Romanza appassionata; several books of piano studies; about 40 songs; arrangements, transcriptions, etc. His album of 5 piano pieces, Hommage à Edvard Grieg, was commended for its spirit by Grieg himself. — Cf. Rupert Hughes, Contemporary American Composers (Boston, 1900; pp. 394-406).

Smits van Waesberghe, J. See Waesberghe.

Smolensky, Stepan Vassilievitch, Russian authority on church music; b. Kazan, Oct. 20, 1848; d. there, Aug. 2, 1909. While teaching at the Clerical Seminary at Kazan, he had unusual opportunities for studying the old MSS preserved in the Solovetsky Library there; in 1889, appointed director of the Synodal School and Choir in Moscow; gathered a valuable collection of MSS of Russian church music from the 15th-19th centuries, illustrating the various systems of notation. Besides numerous essays in the 'Russkaya Muzykalnaya Gazeta' he publ. A Course of Church Chant Singing (Moscow, 1900); The Collection of MSS of Old Ecclesiastical Music in the Synodal School at Moscow (1899); The Old Russian Notations (1901). —Cf. O. Riesemann, Die Notationen des altrussischen Kirchengesanges (Moscow, 1908); N. Findeisen, To the Memory of S. Smolensky (St. Petersburg, 1910; with a list of Smolensky's writings).

Smolian, Arthur, conductor and writer; b. Riga, Dec. 3, 1856; d. Leipzig, Nov. 5, 1911. He was a pupil of Rheinberger and Willner at the Munich Cons.; conducted choruses in Leipzig (from 1884); taught at the Karlsruhe Cons. (1890-1901); in 1901 settled again in Leipzig as music critic and editor; edited the works of Berlioz for Eulenburg's 'Kleine Partitur-Ausgabe.' In his writings he was an ardent proponent of Wagner's ideas. He publ. Vom Schwinden der Gesangkunst (1903) and Stella del Monte (1903; a free narrative of Berlioz's last years, i.e., the period after he completed the 'Mémoires').

Smulders (smülders), Charles, Belgian composer; b. Maastricht, May 8, 1863; d. Liège, April 21, 1934. He studied at the Liège Cons.; won the Belgian Prix de Rome in 1889; taught at the Liège Cons. He wrote the symph. poems Adieu-Absence-Retour; Chant d'Amour; Le Jour; Le Crépuscule; 2 piano concertos; Hebrew Melodies for cello and orch.; a violin sonata; a piano sonata; choruses; songs. —Cf. W. Paap, C. Smulders en A. Diepenbrock, in 'Mens en Melodie' (vol. 1, 1946, p. 141).

Smyth, Dame Ethel (Mary), foremost English woman composer; b. Foots Gray, Kent, April 23, 1858; d. Woking, Surrey, May 8, 1944. She studied at the Leipzig Cons.; then with Heinrich von Herzogenberg, following him to Berlin; her string quintet was performed in Leipzig in 1884. She returned to London in 1888; presented her orchestral Serenade (April 26, 1890) and an overture Antony and Cleopatra (Oct. 18, 1890). Her prestige as a serious woman composer rose considerably with the presentation of her Mass, for solo voices, chorus, and orch., at Albert Hall (Jan. 18, 1893). After that she devoted her energies to the theater. Her first opera, Fantasio, to her own libretto in German, after Alfred de Musset's play, was produced in Weimar on May 24, 1898; this was followed by Der Wald (Berlin, April 9, 1902), also to her own German libretto; it was produced in London in the same year, and in N. Y. by the Metropolitan Opera, on March 11, 1903. Her next opera, The Wreckers, was her most successful work; written originally to a French libretto, Les Naufrageurs, it was first produced in a German version as Strandrecht (Leipzig, Nov. 11, 1906); the composer herself translated it into English, and it was staged in London on June 22, 1909; the score was revised some years later, and produced at Sadler's Wells, London, on April 19, 1939. She further wrote a comic opera, in English, The Boatswain's Mate (London, Jan. 28, 1916), a one-act opera, described as 'a dance-dream,' Fête Galante (Birmingham, June 4, 1923), and Entente Cordiale (Bristol, Oct. 20, 1926). Other works are a concerto for violin, horn, and orch. (London, March 5, 1927); The Prison, for soprano and bass solo, chorus, and orch. (London, Feb. 24, 1931); choral pieces (Hey Nonny No, Sleepless Dreams, etc.); a group of songs; etc. Her formative years were spent in Germany, and her music never overcame the strong German characteristics, in the general idiom as well as in the treatment of dramatic situations on the stage. At the same time, she was a believer in English national music and its potentialities. She was a militant leader for woman suffrage in England, for which cause she wrote The March of the Women, the battle song of the W. S. P. U. After the suffrage was granted, her role in the movement was officially acknowledged; in 1922 she was made a Dame of the British Empire. She publ. a number of books, mostly autobiographical in nature: Impressions that Remained (2 vols., 1919; new ed., 1945); Streaks of Life (1921); As Time Went On (1936); What Happened Next (1940); also some humorous essays and reminiscences, A Three-legged Tour in Greece (1927); A Final Burning of Boats (1928); Female Pippins in Eden (1934); Beecham and Pharaoh (1935). —Cf. the articles by R. Boughton, in the 'Music Bulletin' (Feb., 1923) and R. Capell, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (July, 1923); R. A. Streatfeild, Musiciens anglais contemporains (Paris, 1913); Kathleen Dale, Dame Ethel Smyth, in 'Music & Letters' (July, 1944).

Snel, Joseph-François, Belgian violinist and composer; b. Brussels, July 30, 1793; d. Koekelberg, near Brussels, March 10, 1861. He studied violin with Baillot at the Paris Cons. In 1818 he founded in Brussels the 'Académie de musique et de chant' (with Mees); popularized in Belgium the singing-teaching methods of Galin and Wilhem; held various positions as inspector of schools. His ballets Frisac et le page inconstant, L'Enchantement de Polichinelle, etc., were produced at the Brussels Opera; in 1830, during the Belgian Revolution, he wrote the ballet Barricades.

Snetzler (Schnetzler), Johann, Swiss organ builder; b. Schaffhausen, April 6, 1710; d. there, Sept. 28, 1785. He went to London in 1746 and established an organ workshop there; built organs for the Moravian Churches in London and in Leeds, for Chesterfield Church, and (on the recommendation of Burney) for the Church of King's Lynn. He returned to Switzerland shortly before his death. His London factory was purchased by Ohrmann, Nutt, and Eliot. A list of his organs exported to the U.S. is found in W. L. Sumner's The Organ (London, 1952).

Snoer (snoor), Johannes, Dutch harpist; b. Amsterdam, June 28, 1868; d. Vienna, March 1, 1936; he studied with Edmund Schuecker when the latter was in Amsterdam; from 1894 to 1910, was first harpist of the Gewandhaus Orch. in Leipzig; traveled as soloist in Europe and America in 1905-06. He publ. several practical pieces for the harp and didactic works: Praktische Harfenschule, Tägliche Übungen, Studien in Konzertform, Orchesterstudien, etc.; also Die Harfe als Orchesterinstrument (Leipzig, 1898).

Sobolewski, Eduard de, German-American composer; b. Königsberg, Oct. 1, 1808, of Polish parents; d. St. Louis, May 18, 1872. He was a pupil of Weber in Dresden; became an opera conductor in Königsberg and Bremen; produced there his operas Imogen (1833), Velleda (1836), and Salvator Rosa (1848); his opera Komala was produced by Liszt in Weimar on Oct. 30, 1858. In 1859 he emigrated to the U. S., settling in Milwaukee, then a center of German musical immigrants. There he staged his opera, Mohega, on Oct. 11, 1859, to his own libretto in German; he selected an American subject dealing with an Indian girl saved by Pulaski from death. Sobolewski subsequently moved to St. Louis; organized a symphony orch. there, which he led until his death. He further wrote the oratorios Johannes der Täufer, Der Erlöser, and Himmel und Erde; 2 symphonies; the symph. poems Vineta and Meeeresphantasie; several male choruses; publ. the pamphlets, Reaktionäre Briefe (1854), Oper nicht Drama (1858), and Das Geheimnis der neuesten Schule der Musik (1859). —Cf. E. E. Hipsher, American Opera and its Composers (Philadelphia, 1927; 2nd ed., 1934; pp. 382-85).

Soderino, Agostino, Italian organist and composer; flourished in the early 17th century. He was church organist in Milan, where he publ. his Canzoni a 4 & 8 voci . . . Libri I, Op. 2 (1608); 2 keyboard canzonas from this publication (La Scaramuccia and La Ducalina) are reprinted in L. Torchi, L'Arte Musicale in Italia (vol. III).

Soderlund, Gustave Frederic, pedagogue; b. Göteborg, Sweden, Jan. 25, 1881. He studied piano in Sweden; in 1908 went to South America, and taught at the Cons. of Valparaíso, Chile (until 1913); in 1916 he settled in the U. S., where he continued to study piano (with Lhévinne) and theory (with C. S. Skilton). He taught at the Univ. of Kansas (1919-27) and then at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester (1928-52). He wrote a symph. poem, Svitthod (1928); chamber music; piano pieces; publ. 2 collections in the Eastman School of Music Series: Examples Illustrating the Development of Melodic Line and Contrapuntal Style, from Greek Melody to Mozart (1932; 3rd printing, 1945) and Examples of Gregorian Chant and Works by Orlandus Lassus . . . for Use in Classes of Counterpoint (1937; 3rd ed., 1946); also Direct Approach to Counterpoint in 16th-century Style (1947).

Söderman, (Johan) August, Swedish composer; b. Stockholm, July 17, 1832; d. there, Feb. 10, 1876. He studied piano and composition at the Stockholm Academy of Music (1847-50); then joined a theatrical company on a Scandinavian tour, as composer of operettas. In 1856 he went to Leipzig, where he studied privately with Richter, and acquired an appreciation of German vocal music; he was particularly influenced by the lyric works of Schumann, Wagner, and Liszt, an influence that is combined with Swedish national elements in his theater music. —Works: the operettas Urdur (1852) and Hin Ondes första lärospan (The Devil's First Lesson; Stockholm, Sept. 14, 1856); incidental music to about 80 plays by Shakespeare, Schiller, and Swedish writers; Digte og Sange, part-songs to words by Bjørnson; several songs to Swedish words; a ballad for solo voice, chorus, and orch., Die Wallfahrt nach Kevlaar, after Heine (1859-66); also a Missa solennis (1875). —Cf. G. Jeanson, A. Söderman: en svensk tondiktarens liv och verk (Stockholm, 1926; includes a complete list of works).

Sodero, Cesare, conductor; b. Naples, Aug. 2, 1886; d. New York, Dec. 16, 1947. He studied with Alessandro Longo (piano) and Martucci (composition) at the Naples Cons.; in 1907 emigrated to the U. S. and settled in N. Y.; was music director of the Edison Phonograph Co., of the National Broadcasting Co., and of the Mutual Broadcasting Co.; conducted the San Carlo Grand Opera Co. and the Philadelphia Grand Opera. He wrote an opera, Ombre russe (Venice, June 19, 1930); ballets; chamber music; etc.

Soffredini, Alfredo, Italian composer; b. Leghorn, Sept. 17, 1854; d. Milan, March 12, 1923. He studied with Mazzucato and Sangalli at the Milan Cons.; was editor of the influential 'Gazzetta Musicale' (Milan) from 1896 to 1912; also taught composition; among his students was Mascagni. He wrote 8 operas to his own librettos: Il Saggio (Leghorn, Feb. 3, 1883), the 2-act children's opera Il piccolo Haydn (Faenza, Nov. 24, 1889; Vienna, 1897; also productions in Russia and elsewhere), Salvatorello (Pavia, March 25, 1894), Tarcisio (Milan, Nov. 23, 1895), Aurora (Pavia, April 21, 1897), La Coppa d'oro (Milan, Jan. 27, 1900), Graziella (Pavia, Nov. 15, 1902), Il Leone (Cesena, 1914). He publ. Le Opere di Verdi (Milan, 1901) and contributed essays on Italian music to various publications, as well as to the 'Gazzetta Musicale.'

Sofronitzky, Vladimir Vladimirovitch, Russian pianist; b. Leningrad, May 8, 1902. He studied at the Leningrad Cons. with Nikolayev, graduating in 1921. In 1928 he gave concerts in France; from 1936 to 1942 was professor at the Leningrad Cons.; since 1942 at the Moscow Cons. In 1943 he received the Stalin Prize.

Sohn, Joseph, American music critic and writer; b. New York, March 22, 1876; d. there, March 15, 1935. After graduation from the College of the City of N. Y., he went to Berlin for further musical studies; upon his return to N. Y., he became music critic of the N. Y. 'American' and 'The Forum.' He publ. Robert Schumann, a Lyrical Poet (1896), Lessons of the Opera (1903), Music in America and Abroad (1904), Joseph Joachim (1904), Opera in New York (1907), The Mission of Richard Wagner (1910).

Sokalsky, Pyotr Petrovitch, Russian writer on music; b. Kharkov, Sept. 26, 1832; d.

Odessa, April 11, 1887. Having studied natural sciences at the Univ. of Kharkov, he became a teacher in the secondary schools; was secretary of the Russian Consulate in New York (1857-60); founded the Philharmonic Society in Odessa in 1864. Throughout his life he collected Russian folksongs, of which he made a profound study; his chief work, The Russian Folk-Song in Greater and Little Russia; Its Melodic Structure and Harmonic Peculiarity, was publ. in 1888 by his brother Ivan. He wrote some piano music and 3 operas, Osada Dubno (The Siege of Dubno), Mazeppa, and Maikaya notch (A Night in May).

Sokoloff, Nicolai, conductor; b. near Kiev, Russia, May 28, 1886. He was brought to America as a young boy; studied violin with Loeffler; won a scholarship at the Yale Univ. School of Music at the age of 13; joined the Boston Symph. Orch. at 17, as violinist. He acquired his first practical experience in conducting with a theatrical company in Manchester, England; in 1916 he conducted an orchestral group in San Francisco. In 1918 he became permanent conductor of the newly organized Cleveland Orch.; the 1st concert took place under Sokoloff's direction on Dec. 11, 1918, with an orchestra of 57 men; the orchestra grew to national significance with its expanded program; modern works and music by American composers were performed. Sokoloff resigned in 1933; was then the first head of the Federal Music Project under the Works Progress Administration (1935-38); was for 2 seasons conductor of the Seattle Symph. Orch. (1938-40); then settled in La Jolla, Calif., as conductor and director of the Musical Arts Society.

Sokolov (söh-köh-löw'), Nikolai Alexandrovitch, Russian composer and pedagogue; b. St. Petersburg, March 26, 1859; d. there, March 27, 1922. He studied with Johansen and Rimsky-Korsakov at the St. Petersburg Cons., graduating in 1884; later taught harmony and counterpoint there for many years, remaining on the faculty until his death; among his pupils was Shostakovich. He was a prolific composer; a great many of his works were publ. by Belaiev: Élégie, for orch.; Divertissement, for orch.; music for Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale; 3 string quartets; choruses; pieces for violin with piano; cello with piano; etc.; a number of songs.

Solano, Francisco Ignacio, Portuguese musical theorist; b. Coimbra, c. 1720; d. Lisbon, Sept. 18, 1800. He publ. Nova instrução musical (1764), Nova arte e breve compendio de musica . . . (1768; 2nd ed., 1794), Novo tratado de musica . . . (1779), Dissertação sobre o caracter . . . da musica (1780), etc.

Soldat, Marie, Austrian violinist; b. Graz, March 25, 1863; d. there, Sept. 30, 1955. She first studied in Graz, and from 1879 to 1882 with Joachim at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, graduating as winner of the Mendelssohn Prize; made a specialty of the Brahms violin concerto, which she performed with great authority. In 1887 she formed in Berlin her own string quartet (all women); in 1889 she married the lawyer Röger, and settled in Vienna, continuing her concert career; there she formed a new string quartet (with Elsa von Plank, Natalie Bauer-Lechner, and Leontine Gärtner); eventually retired in Graz, remaining there until her death at the age of 92.

Solenière (sohl-niär'), Eugène de, French writer on music; b. Paris, Dec. 25, 1872; d. there, Dec. 4, 1904. After studying music in Germany, he settled in Paris as a writer and lecturer on musical esthetics. —Publications: La Femme compositeur (1895); Rose Caron (1896); Notes musicales (1896); Massenet; Étude critique et documentaire (1897); Musique et religion (1897); Camille Saint-Saëns (1899); Cent années de musique française, 1800-1900 (1901); Notules et impressions musicales (1902).

Soler, Padre Antonio, Spanish composer and organist; b. Olot, near Gerona, Dec. 3, 1729; d. at the Escorial, Dec. 20, 1783. At the age of 6 he entered the school of the monastery of Montserrat, near Barcelona, where he studied the organ and harmony. In 1752 he took holy orders at the monastery of the Escorial, where he spent the rest of his life (organist and choirmaster from 1753). He was a pupil in Madrid of Domenico Scarlatti, whose influence is apparent in his harpsichord sonatas (about 75 of these are extant). Soler was a prolific composer in many forms, both sacred and secular; the catalogue of his MSS at the Escorial lists 428 numbers. Besides much church music, he wrote music for many dramatic works performed by the monks of the Escorial; also 6 concertos for 2 organs; 6 quintets for strings and organ or clavier obbligato (ed. by R. Gerhard for the 'Institut d'Estudis Catalans,' Barcelona, 1933, with an introductory essay by H. Anglés); etc. A collection of 27 'Sonatas para Clave' was printed in London by T. Birchall. Portions of a Requiem for 8 voices are in Esclava's 'Lira Sacro-Hispana' (vol. V); organ works in Pedrell's 'Antología de organistas clásicos españoles' (Madrid, 1908); 14 harpsichord sonatas were publ. by J. Nin in 'Classiques espagnols du piano' (12 in vol. I, 1925; 2 in vol. II, 1928); 100 piano sonatas and a Fandango, ed. by F. Marín, were publ. in N.Y., 1958-59; a theoretical work: Llave de la modulación y antigüedades de la música (Madrid, 1762). —Cf. F. Pedrell, Musical vells de la terra, in 'Revista Musical Catalana,' Nos. 58-61 (1908-09); J. Nin, The Bicentenary of Antonio Soler, in the 'Ches-terian' (1930).

Solerti (soh-lehr'tē), Angelo, Italian historiographer; b. Savona, Sept. 20, 1865; d. Massa Carrara, Jan. 10, 1907. His contributions to the early history of opera are valuable: Le Origini del melodramma (a collection of contemporary documents and prefaces to the earliest operas; Turin, 1903); Gli Albori del melodramma, 3 vols. (Milan, 1904-05); Musica, ballo e drammatica alla corte medicea dal 1600 al 1637 (Florence, 1905); Ferrara e la Corte Estense nella seconda metà del secolo XVI (contains a chapter on Musica e canto; Città di Castello, 1891).

Sollertinsky, Ivan Ivanovitch, Russian music critic; b. Vitebsk, Dec. 3, 1902; d. Novosibirsk, Feb. 11, 1944. He studied philology at the Univ. of Petrograd (1919-24); then taught at various schools; became interested in the theater; as music and drama critic, he showed esthetic understanding of modern music, and was the earliest supporter of Shostakovich; publ. numerous articles on works of Soviet composers. At the outbreak of World War II he joined the staff of the Leningrad Philharmonic, which was evacuated to Novosibirsk, and presented regular lectures at symphony concerts there. His selected articles were publ. in Leningrad in 1946, with a biographical sketch and bibliography compiled by M. Druskin. Another collection of his essays was edited by Shostakovich (Leningrad, 1956).

Solomon (real name Solomon Cutner), English pianist; b. London, Aug. 9, 1902. He made a sensational début as a child prodigy at the age of 8, playing Tchaikovsky's Concerto No. 1 in London (June 30, 1911). Later he was sent to Paris for further study, resuming his career as an adult performer in 1923. He appeared under the single name Solomon, without a patronymic; toured all over the world as a concert pianist; also played with orchestras. His interpretation of the classics is particularly fine in that he adheres strictly to the spirit of the music, without superimposing any mannerisms of his own.

Solomon, Izler, American conductor; b. St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 11, 1910. He studied violin in St. Paul and Kansas City; at the age of 14, was granted a fellowship of the Kansas City Educational Art Society; studied in Philadelphia with Myron Poliakin, and in N. Y. with Michael Press; became the latter's assistant in the music dept. of Michigan Agricultural College at Lansing; there he made his début as conductor (March 17, 1932), leading the Lansing Civic Orch.; after 4 seasons, he moved to Chicago as conductor of the American Concert Orch. there; also was conductor of the Illinois Symph. (1936-42) and the Woman's Symph. of Chicago (1939-42); guest conductor of various other orchs. During his last season in Chicago, he assumed the conductorship of the newly founded Columbus, Ohio, Philharmonic; from 1943 till 1947 he conducted the New Orleans Summer Symph.; in 1946 conducted at the Hollywood Bowl; in 1948 was engaged as guest conductor of the Israel Philharmonic; led several concerts during its American tour (1951); was resident conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic (1952-53); guest conductor with the Indianapolis Symph. during the 1955-56 season; was chosen its permanent conductor in 1956. —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 190-99).

Soloviev (söh-löh-vyöhf), Nikolai Feopemptovitch, Russian composer; b. Petrozavodsk, May 9, 1846; d. St. Petersburg, Dec. 27, 1916. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Zarembo; in 1874 was appointed prof. of harmony and music history there. His opera Cordelia was produced in St. Petersburg on Nov. 24, 1885, and then was staged in other Russian cities; also had a performance in Prague; another opera, Vakula, the Smith, had a concert performance in 1880, and later was produced by a private opera company in St. Petersburg (1899). He completed the composition of Serov's opera The Evil Power (with Serov's wife); wrote a cantata, The Death of Samson (1870); a symph. picture, Russia and the Mongols (1882); a choral Prayer for Russia (1876); a number of songs and piano pieces. He was an influential critic in St. Petersburg.

Solovyev-Sedoy, Vassily Pavlovitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, April 25, 1907; studied at the Cons. there, graduating in 1936. —Works: ballet, Taras Bulba, after Gogol (Leningrad, Dec. 12, 1940); musical comedies, A Faithful Friend (Kuibyshev, Oct. 6, 1945) and The Dearest Thing (Moscow, Oct. 2, 1952); a great number of popular songs on patriotic subjects; film music.

Solti, Georg, Hungarian conductor; b. Budapest, Oct. 21, 1912. He studied at the Budapest Cons. with Dohnányi (piano) and Kodály (composition); conducted at the Budapest Opera (1933-39); went to Switzerland in 1939 and was active as pianist and conductor in Zürich (1939-45); in 1947 was appointed conductor of the Munich State Opera; in 1951 became conductor at the Frankfurt Opera and of the Museum Concerts there. He made his American début with the San Francisco Opera (Sept. 13, 1953); also conducted the Opera Theater Association, Chicago (1956-57).

Soltys, Adam, Polish composer; son of Mieczyslaw Soltys; b. Lwow, July 4, 1890. He studied with his father, and later with Georg Schumann in Berlin; also studied musicology at the Univ. of Berlin with Kretzschmar and Johannes Wolf (Dr. phil., 1921). He wrote 2 symphonies; several overtures; ballads in the national Polish style; some chamber music; choruses.

Soltys, Mieczyslaw, Polish composer; b. Lwow, Feb. 7, 1863; d. there, Nov. 12, 1929. He studied music with Krenn in Vienna and with Gigout in Paris. He became director of the Lwow Cons. in 1899, retaining this post for 30 years until his death. He wrote the operas Rzeczpospolita Babinska (Lwow, April 27, 1905), Opowiesc ukrainska (Lwow, March 8, 1910), Panie Kochanku (Lwow, May 3, 1924), and Nieboska komedia (1925); a symph. poem The Fugitive; a piano concerto; choruses; piano pieces; songs.

Somers, Harry Stewart, Canadian pianist and composer; b. Toronto, Sept. 11, 1925. He studied at the Royal Cons. at Toronto, and with Milhaud in Paris (1949-50). —Works: piano concerto (1947); symph. (Toronto, April 27, 1953); wind quintet; 2 string quartets; 4 piano sonatas; songs.

Somervell, Sir Arthur, English composer; b. Windermere, June 5, 1863; d. London, May 2, 1937. Entered King's College, Cambridge, in 1880, taking the classical course (B.A., 1883), and music with Sir C. V.

Stanford; studied further with Kiel and Bargiel at the Hochschule in Berlin, and with Sir H. Parry at the Royal College of Music; prof. of harmony and counterpoint at the Royal College of Music, 1893-1901; then inspector of music to the Board of Education and the Scottish Education Dept.; visited Australia and Tasmania (1900) and South Africa (1905); Mus. Doc., Cambridge, 1903. He was knighted in 1929. His works include a symph. and 2 suites for orch.; Normandy (symph. variations) and Highland Concerto for piano and orch.; Konzertstück for violin and orch.; an oratorio, The Passion of Christ; 4 children's operettas; many choral works and part-songs; song cycles (Maud, The Shropshire Lad, etc.) and about 40 separate songs; piano pieces; etc. He ed. 'Songs of the Four Nations' (50 folksongs of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales).

Somis, Giovanni Battista, Italian violinist and composer; b. Turin, Dec. 25, 1686; d. there, Aug. 14, 1763, as maestro at the court. Son and pupil of the court violinist Francesco Lorenzo Somis (called 'Ardy' or 'Ardito'; 1663-1736). In 1696 entered the orch. of the ducal chapel at Turin, and from 1703-06 was a pupil of Corelli in Rome. He then returned to Turin; in 1733 appeared as soloist at the Concert Spirituel in Paris with great success. He was the teacher of Giardini, Guignon, Pugnani, Chabran, and Leclair. He publ. 2 vols. of Sonate a violino e violoncello o cembalo (op. 1, Rome, 1722; op. 2, Turin, 1723), and Trattenimenti per camera, op. 5 (trio sonatas for 2 violins and basso continuo; Paris, 1733). Sonatas for violin solo and other works are in MS. —Cf. G. Fino, Un grande violinista torinese ed una famiglia di violinisti, G. B. Somis, in 'Il Momento' (Turin, Oct. 25-26, 1927).

Somis, Lorenzo Giovanni, Italian violinist; brother of the preceding; b. Turin, Nov. 11, 1688; d. there, Nov. 29, 1775. He studied in Bologna; from 1724-70 he was 2nd violin in the ducal chapel at Turin. Publ. 8 Sonate da camera a violino solo e violoncello o cimbalo, op. 2 (publ. in Paris), and 6 Sonate a tre, op. 3 (1725). In MS (Dresden) are a concerto for violin solo and a concerto a 4.

Sommer, Hans (real name Zincke), German composer and writer on music; b. Brunswick, July 20, 1837; d. there, April 28, 1922. He studied mathematics at the Univ. of Göttingen (Dr. phil., 1858); later taught mathematics in Brunswick, while taking active part in musical affairs there. In 1885 he married and settled in Berlin; from 1888 till 1898 he lived in Weimar; then again in Brunswick. He was one of the original founders of the 'Genossenschaft deutscher Tonsetzer' (performing rights society) with Richard Strauss, Max Schillings, and F. Rösch. He wrote the operas Der Nachtwächter (Brunswick, Nov. 22, 1865); Loreley (Brunswick, April 11, 1891); Saint Foix (Munich, Oct. 31, 1894); Der Meermann (Weimar, April 19, 1896); Rübezahl (Brunswick, May 15, 1904; his strongest opera); Riquet mit dem Schopf (Brunswick, April 14, 1907); Der Waldschratt (Brunswick, March 31, 1912). His operas Augustin, Münchhausen, and Das Schloss der Herzen were not performed. His lyric songs were greatly appreciated in Germany, and often performed in England; among the best are the cycles Der Rattenfänger von Hameln, Der wilde Jäger, Hunold Singuf, Tannhäuser, Sapphos Gesänge, Aus dem Süden, Eliland; also Balladen und Romanzen, etc. —Cf. E. Stier, Hans Sommer, in vol. 1 of 'Monographien moderner Musiker' (Leipzig, 1906); Erich Valentin, Hans Sommer (Brunswick, 1939).

Sondheimer (zohnd'-hī-mer), Robert, musicologist; b. Mainz, Germany, Feb. 6, 1881. He studied at the Cologne Cons., and with Humperdinck in Berlin. From 1922 to 1933 he was head of the Edition Bernoulli, music publishers. In 1933 he settled in London. He publ. Die Theorie der Sinfonie und die Beurteilung einzelner Sinfoniekomponisten bei den Musikschriftstellern des 18. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1925) and Haydn, A Historical and Psychological Study Based on His Quartets (London, 1951). In London he established the Sondheimer Edition (incorporating the bulk of the Edition Bernoulli); edited works by Boccherini, Haydn, Vivaldi, John Christian Bach, and the composers of the Mannheim School (Stamitz, Richter, Beck, Cannabich, Rigel, etc.), etc.

Sonneck, Oscar George Theodore, eminent American musicologist; b. Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 6, 1873; d. New York, Oct. 30, 1928. Attended the Gelehrtschule in Kiel (1883-89) and the Kaiser Friedrich Gymnasium in Frankfurt (1889-93), where he also took piano lessons with James Kwast; from 1893-97 he studied at Munich Univ., musicology with Sandberger and philosophy with Riehl and Lipps; private pupil in composition of M. E. Sachs; 1897-98, pupil of K. Schröder (conducting) at the Sondershausen

Cons. and Iwan Knorr (instrumentation) in Frankfurt; spent the greater part of 1899 in research work in Italy; then returned to the U. S., continuing his researches in the principal libraries. On Aug. 1, 1902, he was appointed the first Chief of the Music Division of the Library of Congress in Washington, which post he resigned on Sept. 5, 1917, to accept a position with the publishing house of G. Schirmer in New York as director of the Publication Department, managing editor of 'The Musical Quarterly' (of which he had been editor since its foundation in 1915), and personal representative of the president, Rudolph E. Schirmer; in 1921 he became vice-president. He represented the U. S. Government at the International Congresses of Music held in London and Rome in 1911. He took a leading part in the formation of the Society for the Publication of American Music, and of the Beethoven Association in N. Y. —Under Sonneck's administration the Music Division of the Library of Congress became one of the largest and most important music collections in the world. His writings, exhibiting profound and accurate scholarship and embodying the results of original research, laid the real foundation for the scientific study of music in the U. S.; his elaborate catalogues, issued by the Library of Congress, are among the most valuable contributions to musical bibliography. —Works: Protest gegen den Symbolismus in der Musik (1897); Francis Hopkins and James Lyon, Two Studies in Early American Music (1905); Early Concert Life in America (1731-1800) (1907); Report on 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' 'Hail Columbia,' 'America,' 'Yankee Doodle' (1909); A Survey of Music in America (1913); The Star-Spangled Banner (1914); Early Opera in America (1915); Suum Cuique (1916; collection of essays); Miscellaneous Studies in the History of Music (1921); Beethoven, Impressions of Contemporaries (1926); Beethoven Letters in America (1927); The Riddle of the Immortal Beloved (1927); smaller essays: Die drei Fassungen des Hesseschen Artaserses, 1730, 1740, 1760 ('Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft,' XIV, 2), Psiche ed Amore, 1565 (by A. Striggio and F. Cortecchia) ('Mus. Antiquary,' Oct., 1911), Dafne the First Opera ('Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft,' XV, 1), The Future of Musicology in America ('Mus. Quarterly,' July, 1929), etc. —Catalogues: Classification of Music and Literature of Music (1904; 2nd ed., revised and augmented, 1917); Bibliography of Early Secular American Music (1905; 2nd ed., revised and enlarged by W. T. Upton, 1945); Dramatic Music (1908); Orchestral Music (1912); Opera Librettos printed before 1800 (2 vols., 1914); First Editions of Stephen C. Foster (1915; with W. R. Whitteley); First Editions of Edward MacDowell (1917); Dramatic Music (2 vols., 1917; entirely new, superseding the catalogue of 1908). He also publ. 2 vols. of lyric poems, Seufzer (1895) and Eine Totenmesse (1898). Among his compositions are Symphonischer Satz for small orch.; a string quartet (op. 4); Romanze and Rhapsodie for violin and piano (op. 8); piano pieces; songs. —Cf. H. Putnam and R. Goldmark, Remarks at the Funeral Services for O. G. Sonneck in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1929); C. Engel, O. G. Sonneck, in 'Adler-Festschrift' (1930); see also the 'Mus. Quarterly' for Oct., 1933.

Sonnleithner (zöhn'lit-nër), Joseph von, son of the amateur composer Christoph von Sonnleithner (1734-1786); b. Vienna, 1765; d. there, Dec. 25, 1835. A government councillor, and a founder of the 'Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde,' to which he bequeathed his books and musical instruments. Publ. an interesting 'Wiener Theater Almanach' (1794, 1795, 1796). He wrote some librettos and adapted others, including Fidelio for Beethoven and Faniska by Cherubini. In 1827 he discovered the famous Antiphony of St. Gall of the 9th century, in neume-notation; probably a copy of the one sent thither by Charlemagne in 790. —His nephew, Leopold von Sonnleithner, b. Vienna, Nov. 15, 1797; d. there, March 4, 1873. The staunch friend of Schubert, he procured the publication of the Erkkönig (the first publ. work of Schubert's); at his father's house the Prometheus, the Gesang der Geister über den Wassern, the 23rd Psalm, and other important works by Schubert were performed from the MS. —Cf. A. Farcenau, Leopold von Sonnleithners Erinnerungen an Franz Schubert, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1919).

Sontag (zohn'-tahg), Henriette (real name Gertrud Walburga Sonntag), celebrated German soprano; b. Coblenz, Jan. 3, 1806; d. Mexico City (on a tour), June 17, 1854. She played children's parts on the stage; then studied at the Prague Cons. with Tricbensec, Pixis, Bayer, and Frau Czegka; in 1820 she sang in Italian and German opera at Vienna, and in 1823 created the title role in Weber's Euryanthe; on May 7, 1824, she sang in Vienna the soprano solos in Beethoven's Missa solemnis and 9th Symph.; made her first Berlin appearance on Aug. 3, 1825 in the part of Isabella in Rossini's Italiana in Algeri; her Paris début as Rosina in Il Barbiere di Siviglia (June 15, 1826) was an unqualified success and she was adjudged by many as superior to Catalani; she broke her Berlin contract in order to sing at the Italian Opera in Paris (1827); went to London in 1828, and secretly married the Sardinian ambassador to the Dutch court, Count Rossi; was ennobled by the King of Prussia (as 'Fräulein Henriette von Lauenstein'). She then interrupted her career on the stage, and settled with her husband at The Hague; also traveled with him on his diplomatic missions to Germany and Russia. She continued to give concerts as a solo singer, arousing enthusiasm wherever she went. In 1848 she resumed her operatic career; made several tours in England; in the autumn of 1852 she embarked for the U. S., and gave a number of concerts; then went to Mexico (1854), where she sang opera. She died of cholera during an epidemic there. —Cf. Théophile Gautier, L'Ambassadrice, Biographie de la comtesse Rossi (Paris, 1850); J. Gundling, Henriette Sontag (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1861); W. Berger, Berühmte Frauen (Berlin, 1904); H. Stumcke, Henriette Sontag (Berlin, 1913); F. Rogers, Henriette Sontag in New York, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan. 1942); E. Pirchan, Henriette Sontag (Vienna, 1946).

Sonzogno (son-tsoh'-nyoh), Edoardo, Italian music publisher; b. Milan, April 21, 1836; d. there, March 14, 1920. He inherited a printing plant and bookstore founded by his father, and in 1874 began to publish popular editions of French and Italian music with marked success. In 1883 he inaugurated a series of contests for new operas; the 2nd contest, in 1888, was won by Mascagni (then unknown) with Cavalleria rusticana. Sonzogno established his own theater (the 'Lirico Internazionale') at Milan in 1894. From 1861 until his retirement in 1909 he was sole proprietor of the newspaper 'Il Secolo.' He was succeeded by his nephew Riccardo Sonzogno (d. July 8, 1915); upon the latter's death, the business was taken over by another nephew, Renzo Sonzogno, who had previously headed a firm of his own. He died in 1920, and in 1923 control was acquired by a group of Italian industrialists.

Sonzogno (son-tsoh'-nyoh), Giulio Cesare, Italian composer; b. Milan, Dec. 24, 1906. He studied with Pick-Mangiagalli and F. Vittadini. —Works: Lago di Braies, for orch.

(1929); La Luna e l'usignolo, for voice and orch. (1930); Dai Nevi dell'Ortler, symph. poem (1931); Quadri rustici for small orch. (1932); Il Negro for cello and orch. (1933); ballet L'Amore delle tre melarance (Love for Three Oranges), after Carlo Gozzi (La Scala, Milan, Feb. 1, 1936); Regina Uliva, legend in 3 acts (La Scala, Milan, March 17, 1949).

Sopeña, Federico, Spanish writer on music; b. Valladolid, Jan. 25, 1917. He studied music and theology at Madrid and Salamanca; in 1949 became vice-rector of the Spanish Church in Rome; in 1951 was appointed supervisor of Spanish conservatories. As a music critic, he has championed the Spanish school of modern composers; publ. monographs on Turina (1943), Joaquín Rodrigo (1946), and Stravinsky (1956); also Historia de la música en cuadros esquemáticos (1947), La Música europea contemporánea (1953).

Sopkin, Henry, American conductor; b. Brooklyn, Oct. 20, 1903. His family moved to Chicago when he was a child; there he studied violin; in 1917 he entered the American Cons., Chicago, graduating in 1924; then was appointed to its faculty; taught music in Chicago high schools (1931-37), conducted concerts with college orchestras; in 1944 was engaged as conductor of the Atlanta Youth Symph.; in 1945 this became the nucleus of a professional orch. in Atlanta, increasing the number of its concerts to 50 a season in 1955, with Sopkin as permanent conductor. —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 200-06).

Sor (real name Sors), Fernando, celebrated Spanish guitar virtuoso; b. Barcelona, Feb. 13, 1778; d. Paris, July 8, 1839. At the age of 11 he entered the school of the monastery of Montserrat, where he studied music under the direction of Anselmo Viola; wrote a Mass; then left the monastery and returned to Barcelona, where he presented his only opera, Telemaco nella isola di Calipso, on Aug. 25, 1797. A few years later he went to Madrid; there he joined the French army, earning the rank of captain. When Bonapartist rule was defeated in Spain in 1813, he fled to Paris. There he met Cherubini, Méhul, and other important composers, who urged him to give concerts as a guitarist, and he soon acquired fame. In Paris he produced 2 ballets, Cendrillon (1823) and Le Sicilien, ou L'Amour peintre (1827). He was then summoned to London by the Duke of Sussex; subsequently traveled in Russia; wrote funeral music for the obsequies of Alexander I of Russia (1825). After another stay in London, he returned to Paris, settling there definitely in 1828. He wrote for the guitar a number of fantasies, minuets, and studies, as well as a method; all these works are modeled after the Classical forms, rather than on popular motifs. Selected works by Sor have been edited by G. Meier.

Sorabji, Kaikhosru (real Christian names Leon Dudley), English composer; b. Chingford, Aug. 14, 1892. His father was a Parsi, his mother of Spanish-Sicilian extraction. He was self-taught in music, but despite this seeming handicap, he developed a most complex style of music in free asymmetrical rhythms, containing elements of Oriental melody structure cast in the polyphonic forms of Western music; the resulting contrapuntal idiom is akin to that of Busoni, but enormously more intricate. Virtually the only performances of his works were by himself as a pianist. He wrote 3 symphonies, 5 piano concertos, 2 organ symphonies, 2 piano quintets, 4 piano sonatas. His most remarkable work is Opus Clavicembalisticum for piano solo, completed in 1930, and comprising 3 parts with 12 subdivisions, including a theme with 44 variations, and a passacaglia with 81 variations. The work, which is published, is characteristically dedicated to 'the everlasting glory of those few men blessed and sanctified in the curses and execrations of those many whose praise is eternal damnation.' Sorabji played it in Glasgow under the auspices of the Active Society for the Propagation of Contemporary Music, on Dec. 1, 1930. He is also a brilliant writer, of a somewhat polemical bent; he publ. Around Music (1932); Mi contra Fa: The Immoralisings of a Machiavellian Musician (London, 1947). —Cf. A. G. Browne, The Music of Kaikhosru Sorabji, in 'Music & Letters' (Jan., 1930); E. Rubbra, Sorabji's Enigma, in the 'Monthly Mus. Record' (Sept., 1932).

Soresina, Alberto, Italian composer; b. Milan, May 10, 1911. He studied with Paribeni and Bossi at the Milan Cons. —Works: La Fanciulla mutata in rio, for soprano and orch. (1939); Il Santo, symph. poem (1940); Lanterna rossa, lyric drama (Siena, 1942); L'Amuleto, opera in one act (Bergamo, Oct. 26, 1954).

Sorge (zöhr'gě), Georg Andreas, German composer and theorist; b. Mellenbach, Schwarzburg, March 21, 1703; d. Lobenstein, April 4, 1778. From his 19th year, court organist at Lobenstein for life. He publ. piano and organ works of merit; a large number of cantatas and motets are in MS. He is more important as a theorist, being one of the discoverers of the 'combinational' tones. He publ. these discoveries (before Tartini) in his most important work, Vorgemachter musicalischen Composition (3 vols.; 1745-47). His many other treatises are of less value.

Soriano, Francesco. See Suriano.

Soriano Fuertes, Mariano, Spanish music historian; b. Murcia, March 28, 1817; d. Madrid, March 26, 1880. Pupil of his father (director of the royal chamber music); 1843, prof. at Madrid Cons.; from 1844 director, successively, of music schools at Córdoba, Seville, and Cádiz; conducted opera at Barcelona, where he founded the 'Gaceta musical.' He composed some zarzuelas. Author of Música árabe-española (1853); Historia de la música española desde la venida de los fenicios hasta el año de 1850 (4 vols.; 1855-59; a pioneer work, but quite unscientific and unreliable); Memoria sobre las sociedades corales en España (1865); Calendario histórico musical . . . (1872).

Sormann (zohr'-man), Alfred (Richard Gotthilf), German pianist and composer; b. Danzig, May 16, 1861; d. Berlin, Sept. 17, 1913. He studied at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin with Barth, Spitta, and Bargiel; in 1885, studied with Liszt. He made his début in 1886, giving successful concerts in the chief German towns; in 1889 was court pianist to the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. —Works: the operas Die Sibylle von Tivoli (Berlin, 1902) and König Harald (Stettin, 1909); a piano concerto; 2 string quartets; a piano trio; concert études and other piano pieces; songs.

Soro, Enrique, Chilean composer; b. Concepción, July 15, 1884; d. Santiago, Dec. 2, 1954. He was a son of the Italian composer, José Soro, and was educated by him; played in public as a small child. He was granted a stipend by the government of Chile for study in Italy; entered the Cons. of Milan at 14; graduated in 1904, with a grand prize in composition. Returning to Chile in 1905, he was appointed inspector of musical education in primary schools; in 1907 joined the faculty of the Cons. of Santiago; from 1919 to 1928 he was its director. He traveled as a pianist; gave concerts in Europe and South America; also publ. a number of works. In 1948 he was awarded the Premio Nacional de Arte. —Works: For orch.: Sinfonía romántica (1920); piano concerto (1919); Suite sinfónica, no. 1, subtitled Pensamientos íntimos (1918); Suite sinfónica, no. 2 (Santiago, May 9, 1919, composer conducting); Tres preludios sinfónicos (Santiago, July 18, 1936); Aires chilenos, for orch. (Santiago, 1942); Suite en estilo antiguo (Santiago, May 28, 1943). Chamber music: piano quintet (1919), Impresiones líricas, for piano and strings (1918), string quartet (1904), piano trio (1926), violin sonata, cello sonata; 3 piano sonatas (1920, 1923, 1942); a number of piano pieces in a salon genre, some of them based on Chilean melorhythms. —Cf. L. G. Giarda, Analytische Studie über Soros 2. Sonate für Violine und Klavier A moll, das Quartett A dur und das Klavierquintett (Santiago, 1919); Vicente Salas Viú, La Creación musical en Chile 1900-1951 (Santiago, 1953; pp. 427-52).

Sors. See Sor.

Soto de Langa, Francisco, Spanish composer; b. Langa, 1539; d. Rome, Sept. 25, 1619. He spent most of his life in Rome, where he was one of the disciples of St. Philip Neri; for Neri's Congregation of the Oratorio he wrote 5 books of 'laudi spirituali' (publ. between 1583 and 1598); some specimens are reproduced in Alaleona's Studi su la storia dell' oratorio musicale in Italia (Turin, 1908).

Soubies (söö-bēs'), Albert, French writer on music; b. Paris, May 10, 1846; d. there, March 19, 1918. He studied law and was admitted to the bar; about the same time he became a pupil of Savard, Bazin, and Guilmant at the Paris Cons. In 1876 he became music critic for 'Le Soir' and in 1885 began to write for the 'Revue de l'art dramatique.' In 1874 he revived the famous old 'Almanach Duchesne' (publ. between 1752 and 1815), reissuing it as 'Almanach des spectacles' (43 vols. publ. up to 1914); for this the Académie awarded him the Prix Voirac in 1893. —Writings: Histoire de la musique (his principal work; issued in separate sections dealing with music in individual European nations; publ. 1896-1906); Les grands théâtres parisiens, in 2 parts: 67 ans à l'Opéra: 1826-1893 (1893) and 69 ans à l'Opéra-Comique: 1825-1894 (1894); Histoire de l'Opéra-Comique (2 vols.; 1892-93; with Charles Malherbe); Histoire du Théâtre-lyrique 1851-1870 (1899); L'Œuvre dramatique de Richard Wagner (1886); Mélanges sur Richard Wagner (1892; with Charles Malherbe); other booklets dealing with the musical theater in Paris; monographs on French composers; etc.

Soubre (soobr), Étienne-Joseph, Belgian composer; b. Liège, Dec. 30, 1813; d. there, Sept. 8, 1871. He studied at the Liège Cons., and became its director (1862). —Works: opera Isoline (Brussels, 1855); Symphonie triomphale (1845); 2 cantatas; a Requiem with orch.; Stabat Mater and Ave Verum, with orch.; Hymne à Godefroid de Bouillon, for male chorus and orch.; church music, choruses, overtures, symphonies, etc.

Souhaitty (swä-tē'), Jean-Jacques, Franciscan monk and music theorist; flourished in the middle of the 17th century; lived in Paris. He was the first to employ number notation, indicating by numerals 1 to 7 the degrees of the scale, and used this system for popular vocal teaching. He publ. Nouvelle méthode pour apprendre le plain-chant et la musique (Paris, 1665; 2nd ed. as Nouveaux éléments de chant . . ., 1667) and an Essai du chant de l'église par la nouvelle méthode des chiffres (Paris, 1679).

Šourek (shoh'-öö-ek), Otakar, Czech writer on music; b. Prague, Oct. 10, 1883; d. there, Feb. 15, 1956. He was trained as an engineer, and studied music as an avocation; contributed to the leading newspapers and magazines in Prague, and then embarked on his main work, a monumental biography of Dvořák, which was issued under the title Život a dílo Antonína Dvořáka (vol. 1, 1916, 2nd ed., 1922; vol. 2, 1917, 2nd ed., 1928; vol. 3, 1930; vol. 4, 1933); in addition he publ. a thematic catalogue of Dvořák's works, in German and Czech (Berlin, 1917); separate publications, dealing with Dvořák's symphonies (Prague, 1922; 3rd ed., 1948), orchestral music (2 vols.; Prague, 1944, 1946), chamber music (Prague, 1943; 2nd ed., 1949); the last two works together in German (2 vols., Prague, 1954); a Dvořák reader (Prague, 1929; 3rd ed., 1946; in English, Prague, 1954); also a monograph on Rudolf Karel (Prague, 1947). An abridged German version by Paul Stefan, in 1 vol., of Šourek's biography of Dvořák was publ. as Dvořák, Leben und Werk (Vienna, 1935; in English as The Life and Work of Dvořák, N. Y., 1941). —Cf. F. Oeser, Otakar Šourek, in 'Musica' (April, 1956).

Souris (söö-rē'), André, Belgian composer; b. Marchienne-au-Pont, July 10, 1899.

He studied at the Cons. of Brussels with M. Lunssens (harmony), Closson (music history), and privately with Gilson (composition). In 1927 he won the Prix Rubens, and traveled in Italy and France. He conducted the radio orch. in Brussels from 1937 to 1946; also taught at the Cons. of Charleroi. In 1925 he joined the surrealist movement in Belgium, and wrote numerous articles on the subject; was the first to apply its esthetic principles to music composition. He was the founder of the quarterly music review, 'Polyphonie' (1947-1954). —Works: Collage, for orch. (1928); Quelques airs de Clarisse Juranville, for soprano, string quartet, and piano (Barcelona Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, April 21, 1936); Hommage à Babeuf (Paris Festival of the I. S. C. M., June 22, 1937); Rengaines, for wind quintet (Warsaw Festival of the I. S. C. M., April 15, 1939); Comptines pour enfants sinistres, for voice and instruments (1942); Le Marchand d'images, Walloon songs for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (1944). He collaborated with René Vannes on the Dictionnaire des musiciens (Brussels, 1946). —Cf. Paul Nougé, André Souris (1928).

Sousa (sö'zä), John Philip, famous American bandmaster and popular composer; b. Washington, D. C., Nov. 6, 1854; d. Reading, Pa., March 6, 1932. He was the son of a Portuguese father and a Bavarian mother. He studied violin with John Eputa and harmony with G. F. Benkert in Washington (1864-67); also acquired considerable proficiency on wind instruments; played in the Marine Band at the age of 13; led an orch. in a vaudeville theater in Washington before he was 18; in 1877 was engaged as violinist in the special orchestra in Philadelphia that was conducted by Offenbach during his American tour. In 1880 Sousa was appointed leader of the Marine Band; he resigned on Aug. 1, 1892, and organized a band of his own, with which he gave successful concerts throughout the U. S. and Canada; played at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893 and at the Paris Exposition in 1900; made 4 European tours (1900, 1901, 1903, and 1905) with increasing acclaim, and finally a tour around the world in 1910-11. His flair for writing band music was extraordinary; the infectious rhythms of his military marches and the brilliance of his band arrangements earned him the sobriquet of 'The March King'; particularly celebrated is his march, The Stars and Stripes Forever, which became famous all over the world. During World War I Sousa served as a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. He continued his annual tours almost to the time of his death. He compiled for the Naval Dept. the 'National, Patriotic and Typical Airs of All Lands' (1890); publ. an autobiography, Marching Along (Boston, 1928), and wrote 5 novels. His publ. compositions aggregate to several hundred, including the comic operas, The Smugglers (1879), Désirée (1884), The Queen of Hearts (1886), El Capitan (Boston, April 13, 1896; his most brilliant operetta), The Charlatan (1897), The Bride Elect (1898), Chris and the Wonderful Lamp (1900), The Free Lance (1906), The Glass-Blowers (1911), The American Maid (1913), and Victory (1915); suites for orch. and band: Last Days of Pompeii, Three Quotations, Sheridan's Ride, At the King's Court, Looking Upward, Impressions at the Movies, etc.; a symph. poem, The Chariot Race (from Ben Hur); many waltzes, songs, etc.; and numerous popular military marches: The Stars and Stripes Forever, El Capitan, The Washington Post, The High School Cadets, Thunderer, Semper Fidelis, Liberty Hall, Manhattan Beach, King Cotton, Hands Across the Sea; publ. an instruction book for trumpet and drum, and one for violin. —Cf. Through the Years with Sousa . . . (excerpts from his writings; N. Y., 1910); Ann M. Lingg, J. P. Sousa (N. Y., 1954).

Southard, Lucien H., American composer; b. Sharon, Vt., Feb. 4, 1827; d. Augusta, Ga., Jan. 10, 1881. He studied music in Boston; from 1851 to 1858 was supervisor of public schools there. After serving in the Union Army during the Civil War, he conducted the orch. of the Peabody Cons. in Baltimore (1868-71); then lived in Boston (1871-75) and Augusta. He composed an opera, Omano, from Indian life, to an Italian libretto (concert performance in Boston, 1858; MS score in the Boston Public Library); church music, glees, and organ pieces; publ. a harmony manual (1855); edited collections of sacred music. —Cf. F. J. Metcalf, American Composers and Compilers of Sacred Music (1925).

Sowerby, Leo, prominent American composer; b. Grand Rapids, Mich., May 1, 1895. He studied in Chicago with Calvin Lampert (piano) and Arthur Olaf Andersen (theory); served in the U. S. Army during World War I. In 1921 he received the American Prix de Rome, the first such prize to be awarded for composition; stayed at the American Academy in Rome for 3 years (1921-24); in 1925 was appointed teacher of composition at the American Cons., Chicago; also was organist at St. James' Episcopal Church there (from 1927). In his music, he observes a strict formal design; his harmonic style is modern, while remaining within the bounds of traditional tonality. —Works: Comes Autumn Time, an overture (1916); Irish Washerwoman, for orch. (1916); A Set of Four, 'Suite of Ironics' (Chicago, Feb. 15, 1918); King Estmere, ballad for 2 pianos and orch. (Rome, April 8, 1923); Money Musk, for orch. (1924); Vision of Sir Launfal, for soli and mixed chorus (1926); suite, From the Northland, for orch. (1927); symph. No. 2 (Chicago, March 29, 1929); Prairie, a symph. poem (Interlochen, Mich., Aug. 11, 1929); piano concerto (Chicago, March 5, 1920, composer soloist); cello concerto (1933); concerto for organ and orch. (Boston, April 22, 1938); Concert Overture (1941); symph. No. 3 (commissioned by the Chicago Symph. Orch.; Chicago, March 6, 1941); Song for America, for chorus (1942); The Canticle of the Sun, after St. Francis, for chorus and orch. (N. Y., April 16, 1945; won the Pulitzer Prize); symph. No. 4 (Boston, Jan. 7, 1949); Christ Reborn, oratorio (Philadelphia, Nov. 1, 1953); Fantasy-Portrait, for orch. (Indianapolis, Nov. 21, 1953); The Throne of God, poem for mixed voices and orch. (Washington, Nov. 18, 1957). Chamber music: 2 string quartets (1923, 1935); 2 violin sonatas (1922, 1944); quintet for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and horn (1916); cello sonata (1921); Pop Goes the Weasel, for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and horn (1927); clarinet sonata (1938); Poem for viola and organ (1942); sonata for trumpet and piano (1945); suite for organ, brass, and kettledrums (1953); symph. for organ solo (1930). Cantatas, anthems, organ pieces, etc. —Cf. B. C. Tuthill, Leo Sowerby, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1938).

Sowinski, Wojciech (Albert), Polish pianist; b. Łukaszówka, Podolia, 1803; d. Paris, March 5, 1880. He was a pupil of Czerny and Seyfried in Vienna; toured in Italy as pianist; in 1830 settled in Paris, and was a successful piano teacher there. He publ. the first dictionary of Polish musicians in a western language, Les Musiciens polonais et slaves, anciens et modernes. Dictionnaire biographique des compositeurs, chanteurs, instrumentistes, luthiers . . . (Paris, 1857; in Polish, Paris, 1874), and it is through this publication that his name is remembered. He also wrote 3 operas, Lenore, Le Modèle, and Une Scène sous la ligne; an oratorio, Saint Adalbert; several motets; a symphony; overtures on Polish subjects; a piano concerto; a piano quartet; a piano trio; numerous piano pieces in the salon genre.

Spadavecchia, Antonio, Russian composer of Italian descent; b. Odessa, June 3, 1907. He studied with Shebalin at the Moscow Cons., and also took lessons from Prokofiev. —Works: operas, Ak-Buzat (The Magic Steed; Ufa, Nov. 7, 1942; in collaboration with Zaimov), The Inn Hostess, after Goldoni (Moscow, April 24, 1949), Pilgrimage of Sorrows, after Alexey Tolstoy (Perm, Dec. 29, 1953); ballets, Enemias (Moscow, May 20, 1938); The Shore of Happiness (Moscow, Nov. 6, 1948); a symph. suite, Dzangar (1940); Heroic Overture on Bashkir Songs (Ufa, Nov. 6, 1942); a piano concerto (1944); Romantic Trio for violin, cello, and piano (1937).

Spaeth, Sigmund, American writer on music; b. Philadelphia, April 10, 1885. He studied piano and violin with A. Bachmann; then attended Haverford College (M. A., 1906); Ph. D., Princeton Univ., 1910, with the dissertation, Milton's Knowledge of Music (publ. 1913). He was music editor of the N. Y. 'Evening Mail' (1914-18); education director of the American Piano Co. (1920-27); president of the National Association of American Composers and Conductors (1934-37); lectured widely on music; gave popular talks on the radio; was active in musical journalism; held various posts in educational organizations. —Books (a selective list): The Common Sense of Music (1924); The Art of Enjoying Music (1933); Music for Everybody (1934); Great Symphonies (1936); Stories Behind the World's Great Music (1937); Music for Fun (1939); Great Program Music (1940); At Home with Music (1945); A History of Popular Music in America (N. Y., 1948); Opportunities in Music (N. Y., 1950); Dedication; The Love Story of Clara and Robert Schumann (N. Y., 1950); edited several songbooks: Barber Shop Ballads (1925; reprinted 1940), Read 'em and Weep (1926; revised 1945).

Spalding, Albert, American violinist; b. Chicago, Aug. 15, 1888; d. New York, May 26, 1953. At 7, pupil of Chiti in Florence; then of Lefort in Paris and Buitrago in N. Y. Début in Paris, June 6, 1905; American début with the N. Y. Symph. Orch. on Nov. 8, 1908, followed by tour of the U. S.; visited Scandinavia, Russia, the Netherlands, Italy, and Egypt, returning for a second American tour in 1912; won fresh laurels in European capitals from 1912-14; from 1919 he made annual tours of the U. S., also appearing frequently in Europe; was soloist with the N. Y. Symph. Orch. on its first European tour (1920). He composed violin concertos and other works for violin and orch.; a string quartet; violin sonata; suite for violin and piano; piano pieces, songs, etc.; publ. his autobiography, Rise to Follow (N. Y., 1943), and a fictionalized biography of Tartini, A Fiddle, A Sword and a Lady (N. Y., 1953).

Spalding, Walter Raymond, American pedagogue; b. Northampton, Mass., May 22, 1865. Graduate of Harvard Univ. (B. A., 1887; M. A., 1888, with honors in music); taught classics at St. Mark's School, Southborough, Mass., 1889-92; from 1892-95 studied music in Paris (with Guilman and Widor) and Munich (with Rheinberger); appointed instructor of music at Harvard in 1895, assistant prof. in 1903, and prof. in 1912; also prof. at Radcliffe College. In 1920-21 he lectured at 8 French universities. Publ. Tonal Counterpoint (1940); Modern Harmony in Its Theory and Practice (1905; with Arthur Foote); Music; an Art and a Language (1920); Music at Harvard (1935).

Spangenberg, Heinrich, German composer; b. Darmstadt, May 24, 1861; d. there, Sept. 27, 1925. He studied at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt; in 1881 for a short time pupil of N. Rubinstein (piano) in Moscow; then studied with Leschetizky (piano) and Grädener (composition) in Vienna. In 1884, Kapellmeister at the opera and instructor at the Cons. in Mainz; 1886, at Fredenberg's Cons. in Wiesbaden, and in 1888 conductor of the 'Lehrerverein'; about 1890 he founded his own Cons. there, of which he was director until 1914. He composed 3 operas; orchestral works (MS); piano pieces; songs and numerous choruses for men's voices.

Spanuth (shpah'-noot), August, German pianist and editor; b. Brinkum, near Hanover, March 15, 1857; d. Berlin, Jan. 9, 1920. Pupil of Heymann (piano) and Raff (composition) at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt; début as pianist in 1874; then lived as concert pianist and teacher in Koblenz and Bremen; toured the U. S. as pianist in 1886; taught at the Chicago Musical College, 1887-93; from 1893-1906 in N. Y. as teacher and music critic of the 'Staatszeitung'; settled in Berlin in 1906 as teacher at Stern's Cons. and (from 1907) ed. of 'Signale für die musikalische Welt.' He publ. Preparatory Piano Exercises and Essential Piano Technics; songs and piano pieces; with X. Scharwenka he wrote Methodik des Klavierspiels (1907); ed. 3 vols. of Liszt's piano compositions (Ditson's 'Musician's Library').

Spark, Dr. William, English organist and composer; b. Exeter, Oct. 28, 1823; d. Leeds, June 16, 1897. Chorister in Exeter Cathedral; pupil of S. S. Wesley; from 1850-80, organist at St. George's, Leeds; founder, 1851, of the Leeds Madrigal and Motet Society; borough organist of Leeds, 1860; Mus. Doc., Dublin, 1861; editor of 'The Organist's Quarterly Journal.' —Writings: Memoir of Dr. S. S. Wesley; Henry Smart, His Life and Works (London, 1881); Musical Memories (1888); and Musical Reminiscences (1892).

Spazier (shpäh-tsér'), Johann Gottlieb Karl, German song composer; b. Berlin, April 20, 1761; d. Leipzig, Jan. 19, 1805. Student of philosophy at Halle and Göttingen; prof. at Giessen; settled in Leipzig, 1800. He wrote many songs, some of which became great favorites. Publ. the autobiographical Karl Pilgers. Roman seines Lebens (3 vols., 1792-96); Freie Gedanken über die Gottesverehrung der Protestanten (1788); Etwas über Glückliche Musik und die Oper 'Iphigenia in Tauris' (1795); Rechtfertigung Marburgs . . . (1800, in the 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung'); Über den Volksgesang (ibid.); ed. Dittersdorf's autobiography. —Cf. M. Friedlaender, Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (1902).

Speaight, Joseph, English pianist and pedagogue; b. London, Oct. 24, 1868; d. there, Nov. 20, 1947. He studied piano with Ernst Pauer and composition with R. O. Morgan at the Guildhall School of Music; taught there from 1894 to 1919; then on the faculty of Trinity College (1919-39). He wrote 3 symphonies, a piano concerto, piano pieces, and songs.

Speaks, Oley, American baritone and song composer; b. Canal Winchester, Ohio, June 28, 1874; d. New York, Aug. 27, 1948. He studied singing with Emma Thursby and composition with Max Spicker and W. Macfarlane; sang at various churches in N. Y. (1898-1906); then devoted himself entirely to concert singing and composition. He wrote some of the most popular songs in the American repertory: On the Road to Mandalay, Sylvia, The Prayer Perfect, Morning,

Life's Twilight, My Homeland, The Lord is My Light, To You, etc.

Specht, Richard, Austrian writer on music; b. Vienna, Dec. 7, 1870; d. there, March 18, 1932. Trained as an architect, he turned to musical criticism at the suggestion of Brahms and Goldmark, writing at first for 'Die Zeit' (Vienna daily), and from 1908-15 for 'Die Musik.' In 1909 he founded 'Der Merker,' which he ed. until 1919 (at first with R. Batka, later with J. Bittner). 1914, Officier de l'Académie (France); 1926, professor. —Principal writings: Kritisches Skizzenbuch (1900); Gustav Mahler (1906; enlarged, 1913); Joh. Strauss (1909); Das Wiener Operntheater von Dingelstedt bis Schalk und Strauss (1919); Richard Strauss und sein Werk, in 2 vols. (1921); Julius Bittner (1921); Wilhelm Furtwängler (1922); E. N. von Reznicek (1923); Brahms (1928; in English, 1930); Bildnis Beethovens (1930, in English as Beethoven as He Lived, 1933); Giacomo Puccini (1931; in English, 1933); etc.

Speer, Daniel, German composer; b. Breslau, July 2, 1636; d. Göppingen, Oct. 5, 1707. He taught music in Stuttgart (1665-67); in 1675 he settled in Göppingen, where he was employed as town piper; he was dismissed for publishing a pamphlet mocking the authorities, and spent a year and a half in prison; was sent away to Waiblingen in 1690, but was reinstated in 1693 and recalled to Göppingen. He publ. (under assumed names and anagrams) several collections of whimsical songs; also several pieces of chamber music. —Cf. H. J. Moser, Daniel Speer, in 'Acta Musicologica' (vol. 9, 1937).

Speidel (spi'-dēl), Wilhelm, German pianist and composer; b. Ulm, Sept. 3, 1826; d. Stuttgart, Oct. 13, 1899. Pupil at Munich of Wanner and W. Kuhe, and of Ignaz Lachner (composition); 1846-48, teacher at Thann, Alsatia; 1848-54, at Munich; 1854, music director at Ulm; 1857, conductor of the 'Liederkranz' at Stuttgart; co-founder of the Cons., and teacher of piano there until he founded his 'Künstler- und Dilettantenschule für Klavier' in 1874. On Lebert's death (1884) Speidel rejoined the Cons., uniting with it his own school.

Speier, Wilhelm. See Speyer.

Spelman, Timothy Mather, American composer; b. Brooklyn, Jan. 21, 1891. He studied with H. R. Shelley in N. Y. (1908), with W. R. Spalding and E. B. Hill at Harvard Univ. (1909-13), and with Walter Courvoisier at the Munich Cons. (1913-15). He returned to the U. S. in 1915, and was assistant director of band musicians' training in the War Dept. After 1918 he went back to Europe with his wife, the poetess Leolyn Everett, and settled in Florence, until 1935; then again in N. Y., until 1947, when he once more went to Florence. His works are more often performed in Europe than in America; his style of composition reflects the influences of Italian Romanticism and French Impressionism; most of his music is of a programmatic nature. —Works: Snow-drop, a pantomime in 4 acts (Brooklyn, 1911); The Romance of the Rose, a 'wordless fantasy' (Boston, 1913; revised version, St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 4, 1915); La Magnifica, 1-act music drama to a libretto by Mrs. Everett-Spelman (1920); The Sunken City, opera (1930); The Courtship of Miles Standish, opera after Longfellow (1943). For orch.: Barbaresques, suite (1922); Saints' Days, suite in 4 movements (1925; one movement, Assisi, the Great Pardon of St. Francis, was performed in Boston, March 26, 1926); The Outcasts of Poker Flat, symph. poem after Bret Harte (1928); Symphony in G minor (Rochester, Oct. 29, 1936); Homesick Yankee in North Africa, a rhapsody (1944); Jamboree, a 'pocket ballet' (1945); Sunday Paper, suite (1946); oboe concerto (1954). Chamber music: Five Whimsical Serenades, for string quartet (1924); Le Pavillon sur l'eau, for flute, harp, and strings (1925); string quartet (1953). Vocal works: Litany of the Middle Ages, for soprano, women's chorus, and orch. (1928); Pervigilium Veneris, for soprano, baritone, chorus, and orch. (Paris, April 30, 1931); I Love the Jocund Dance, for women's chorus and piano (1938); songs.

Spencer, Allen, American pianist and pedagogue; b. Fair Haven, Vt., Oct. 30, 1870; d. Chicago, Aug. 25, 1950. He studied piano in Rochester and Chicago; in 1892 was appointed teacher at the American Cons. in Chicago; then became its dean (1928-48). He publ. Foundations of Piano Technique, and 5 Concert Etudes for piano.

Spencer, S. Reid, American pianist and teacher; b. Baltimore, July 30, 1872; d. Brooklyn, July 28, 1945. He studied with P. C. Lutkin at the Northwestern Univ. School of Music, and taught there from 1895 to 1900. After teaching in various conservatories, he established his own music school in Brooklyn (1927). He publ. a textbook on harmony (1915), wrote pieces for organ and a Sonate romantique for piano; also church music.

Spencer, Vernon, pianist and composer; b. Belmont, Durham, England, Oct. 10, 1875; d. Los Angeles, Jan. 9, 1949. He studied at the Leipzig Cons., graduating in 1897; in 1903 he settled in the U. S.; was director of the Wesleyan Univ. Cons. of Music at Lincoln, Nebraska; from 1911 taught in Los Angeles. He publ. some songs and character pieces for piano.

Spendiarov, Alexander Afanasievitch, Russian composer; b. Kakhovka, Crimea, Nov. 1, 1871; d. Erivan, May 7, 1928. He received his early education at Simferopol, Crimea, cultivating chiefly the art of painting, but also studying violin; subsequently went to Moscow, where he took academic courses at the Univ.; in 1896 he became a private pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov in St. Petersburg. In his music he adopted the style of Russian Orientalism, making use of Armenian melodic and rhythmic elements. —Works for orch.: Minuet (1895); Berceuse (1897); Ouverture de concert (1900); Les trois palmiers, a symph. picture after a poem by Lermontov (1905); Valse de concert (1907); Prélude funèbre (1908); Crimean Sketches, 2 sets (1903; 1912); 2 Songs of the Crimean Tartars (1915; Moscow, Dec. 25, 1927); Études d'Erivan, on Armenian melodies (1925). Shortly before his death he undertook the composition of his only opera, Almast, after an Armenian legend; it was completed and revised by Maximilian Steinberg, and was performed posthumously in Moscow on June 23, 1930; revived at the Festival of Armenian music in Moscow in 1939.

Spengel, Julius Heinrich, German composer; b. Hamburg, June 12, 1853; d. there, April 17, 1936. He studied at the Cologne Cons.; later at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik with Rudorff, Joachim, Kiel, and A. Schulze; settled as a teacher in Hamburg. In 1878 he was conductor of the 'Cäcilienverein' there; organist of the Gertrudenkirche (1886); made Royal Prof. in 1906. —Works: piano quintet; Psalm 39 for 6-part chorus and wind instruments; Zwiegesang in der Sommernacht, for chorus and orch.; König Alfreds Gesang, for baritone and orch.; male and female choruses; songs.

Sperontes (real name, Johann Sigismund Scholze), German composer; b. Lobendau, Silesia, March 20, 1705; d. Leipzig, Sept. 27, 1750. Between 1736 and 1745 he brought out a collection of poems and melodies to words by Johann Christian Günther, Singende Muse an der Pleisse in zweimal 50 Oden; this became famous, and its success generated many imitations, by composers in Leipzig, Hamburg, and Vienna. Reprint (ed. by E. Buhle) in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vols. 35, 36). —Cf. articles by Spitta in the 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 1, 1885) and H. von Hase in the 'Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. XIV, 4); also A. Schering, Zwei Singspiele des Sperontes, in the 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. VII, 4).

Speyer (shpi'-er), Wilhelm, German violinist and composer; b. Frankfurt, June 21, 1790; d. there, April 5, 1878. He studied in Offenbach with F. Fränzl (violin) and A. André (composition); later in Paris with Baillot (violin). After extensive travels as a concert violinist, he returned to Frankfurt, and embraced a mercantile career, but continued his associations with eminent musicians (Spohr, Mendelssohn, etc.) and began to compose. He gave the first impulse to the great festival held in Frankfurt in 1838, from the profits of which was established the Mozart Scholarship. He wrote a great deal of chamber music; his violin pieces were often played, but he achieved lasting popularity with his ballads written in a characteristically Romantic style; of these Der Trompeter and Die drei Liebchen were particularly famous. —His son, Edward Speyer (b. Frankfurt, May 14, 1839; d. Shenley, Hertfordshire, Jan. 8, 1934), lived most of his life in London, where he organized the Classical Concerts Society; he publ. a monograph on his father, Wilhelm Speyer, der Liederkomponist (Munich, 1925), and a book of reminiscences, My Life and Friends (posthumous, London, 1937).

Spialek, Hans, composer and arranger; b. Vienna, April 17, 1894. He studied at the Cons. of Vienna; settled in the U. S. in 1924, and became an orchestrator of musical comedies in N. Y. He wrote a number of descriptive pieces for salon orch. and for various ensembles (Cloister Meditations, Vision, The Tall City, Manhattan Watercolors, The Danube, etc.); also a Sinfonietta (N. Y., Nov. 15, 1936).

Spicker, Max, conductor, composer, and music editor; b. Königsberg, Aug. 16, 1858; d. New York, Oct. 15, 1912. He studied with Louis Köhler (piano); then at the Leipzig Cons. with Reinecke and Richter.

In 1882 he settled in N. Y., where he conducted German choral societies and taught harmony at the National Cons.; was also reader for G. Schirmer, Inc. He wrote incidental music to Schiller's Demetrius; a cantata, Der Pilot; many songs; edited 'Aus aller Herren Länder' (a collection of folk-songs arranged for male chorus), 'Anthology of Sacred Song' (4 vols.), 'Operatic Anthology' (5 vols.), 'The Synagogical Service' (2 vols.; with W. Sparger); etc.

Spielter (spēl'-ter), Hermann, composer; b. Bremen, April 26, 1860; d. New York, Nov. 10, 1925. He studied with Reinecke and Jadassohn at the Leipzig Cons.; won the Mendelssohn Prize in 1886 with a piano trio, a violin sonata, and a cello sonata. He settled in N. Y. in 1894; from 1897 to 1911 taught theory at the N. Y. College of Music. His works include an operetta, Die Rajahsbraut (N. Y., 1910); Vineta, for baritone, male chorus, and orch.; other choral pieces; a piano sonata; a cello sonata; Serenade for flute and piano; many piano pieces.

Spiering (spē'-ring), Theodore, American violinist and conductor; b. St. Louis, Sept. 5, 1871; d. Munich, Aug. 11, 1925. He studied with Schrädieck at the Cincinnati College of Music and with Joachim at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin. Returning to America, he played the violin in the Theodore Thomas Orch. in Chicago; also organized his own quartet, with which he toured the U. S. and Canada (1893-1905); then traveled in Germany as soloist (1906-09). In 1909 he was appointed concertmaster of the N. Y. Philharmonic Orch. (under Mahler); during Mahler's last illness, he was called upon to conduct 17 concerts of the N. Y. Philharmonic in the spring of 1911. He publ. Sechs Künstler-Etuden, for violin; with Rudolf Ganz he edited a number of classical and modern violin pieces (Bach, Mozart, Grieg, Tchaikovsky, etc.).

Spies (shpēs), Hermine, eminent German contralto, b. Löhneberger Hütte, near Weilburg, Feb. 25, 1857; d. Wiesbaden, Feb. 26, 1893. She was a pupil of Stockhausen in Frankfurt; in 1883 began to give song recitals in Germany; in 1889 made an appearance in England with excellent success; also sang in Austria, Denmark, and Russia. She excelled as an interpreter of songs by Brahms, who had a high regard for her. Shortly before her death she married Dr. W. A. F. Hardtmuth of Wiesbaden. —Cf. Marie Spies, Hermine Spies. Ein Gedenkbuch für ihre Freunde (Stuttgart, 1894; 3rd augmented ed., 1905).

Spiess (shpēss), Meinrad, German composer; b. Honsolgen, Aug. 24, 1683; d. Yrsee, July 12, 1761. He was a pupil of Giuseppe Antonio Bernabei in Munich; music director at the monastery of Yrsee from 1712 to 1749; wrote several Masses and other church music; also 12 trio sonatas for violin, cello, and organ, and other instrumental works.

Spilka, František, Czech composer; b. Štěken, Nov. 13, 1887. He studied at the Prague Cons., and became conductor of the Czech Philharmonic; in 1918 was appointed administrative director of the Prague Cons. He established the 'Teachers' Choral Society' in 1908, and gave concerts with it in France and England. He wrote many choral works; an opera, Stará práva (Ancient Rights; Prague, May 10, 1907); a Sonata-Rhapsody, for cello and piano (1945); etc.

Spindler (shpind'-ler), Fritz, German pianist and composer; b. Wurzbach, Nov. 24, 1817; d. Lössnitz, near Dresden, Dec. 26, 1905. He studied with Fr. Schneider at Dessau; settled in 1841 at Dresden, where he had great success as a teacher. Most of his works (over 400 op. numbers) are salon pieces and characteristic pieces for piano; also publ. the instructive sonatinas op. 157, 290, 294, and the 4-hand sonatina op. 136.

Spinelli, Nicola, Italian composer; b. Turin, July 29, 1865; d. Rome, Oct. 17, 1909. He studied at the Naples Cons., under Serrao. In 1889 his 1-act opera Labilia took the 2nd prize in the famous competition instituted by the publisher Sonzogno, when Mascagni won the 1st prize with Cavalleria rusticana; Spinelli's opera was produced in Rome on May 7, 1890, with indifferent success. His next opera, A basso porto, was more fortunate; after its initial production in Cologne on April 18, 1894 (in a German version), it was staged in Rome, in Italian (March 11, 1895), and then in Budapest, St. Petersburg, etc.; it was also produced in the U. S. (St. Louis, Jan. 8, 1900; N. Y., Jan. 22, 1900). Spinelli's career was cut short by a mental illness.

Spisak, Michal, Polish composer; b. Dabrowa Górnicza, Sept. 14, 1914. He studied violin in Warsaw; in 1937, went to Paris, to study with Nadia Boulanger, and remained there. —Works: Symphonie concertante; bassoon concerto (Copenhagen, Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 2, 1947); Toccata, for orch.; suite for string orch.; Divertimento, for 2 pianos and orch.; concertino for strings; quintet for wind instruments; woodwind quartet; sonatina for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon; violin sonata; piano music.

Spitta, Friedrich, German theologian and writer on music, brother of Philipp Spitta; b. Wittingen, Jan. 10, 1852; d. Göttingen, June 8, 1924. From 1887-1918 prof. of theology at Strasbourg Univ. and from 1919 at Göttingen; from 1896 also editor (with J. Smend) of 'Monatschrift für Gottesdienst und kirchliche Kunst,' in which (Jan.-March, 1913) he publ. important facts concerning Benedictus Ducus. He publ. Liturgische Andacht zum Luther-Jubiläum (1883); H. Schütz, festival oration (1886); Die Passionen nach den vier Evangelisten von H. Schütz (1886); Über Chorgesang im evangelischen Gottesdienste (1889); 'Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott,' Die Lieder Luthers . . . (1905); Studien zu Luthers Liedern (1907); Das deutsche Kirchenlied in seinen charakteristischen Erscheinungen (vol. I: Mittelalter und Reformationszeit, 1912); H. Schütz (1925); also a new ed. of Mergner's Paul Gerhardt Lieder (1918); etc.

Spitta, (Johann August) Philipp, German musicologist; b. Wechold, Hanover, Dec. 27, 1841; d. Berlin, April 13, 1894. Student of philology at Göttingen; teacher at the 'Ritter und Domschule,' Reval, 1864-66; at Sondershausen Gymnasium till 1874; and one year at the Nikolai-Gymnasium, Leipzig, where he was a co-founder of the 'Bach-Verein' (1874); in 1875, prof. of music history at Berlin Univ., life-secretary to the Royal Academy of Arts, and teacher at, and vice-director of, the 'Hochschule für Musik.' As a teacher he had extraordinary success; among his pupils were O. Fleischer, A. Sandberger, M. Friedlaender, R. Schwartz, M. Seiffert, E. Vogel, K. Krebs, and J. Combarieu. He was one of the leading spirits in organizing the publication of the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst.' —Writings: A comprehensive life of J. S. Bach (2 vols., 1873, 1880), carefully and learnedly written, with valuable discussions of principal works (in English, London, 1884-85; condensed ed., Leipzig, 1935); also a short sketch of Bach in Waldersee's 'Vorträge' (1880); a short biography of Schumann for Grove's Dictionary, afterwards published separately in German ('Vorträge,' 1882); Händel und Bach, 2 festival orations (1885); Zur Ausgabe der Kompositionen Friedrichs des Gros- sen (1890); 2 collections of articles, Zur Musik (1892; 16 essays), and Musikgeschichtliche Aufsätze (Berlin, 1894); an essay, Die Passionsmusiken von Sebastian Bach und Heinrich Schütz (Hamburg, 1893); many papers in the 'Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung,' the 'Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte,' and more particularly in his own periodical, the 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft,' founded in 1884 with Chrysander and G. Adler. —Spitta also edited a critical ed. of Buxtehude's organ works (2 volumes, 1875, 1876), with valuable historical notes; the complete ed. of Schütz's works (16 vols.); and Vol. I of the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (1892; contains Scheidt's Tabulatura nova of 1624). He left in MS an almost completed Geschichte der romantischen Oper in Deutschland. Spitta's correspondence with Brahms was publ. by the German 'Brahmgesellschaft' (Vol. 15).

Spitzmueller, Alexander, composer; b. Vienna, Feb. 22, 1894. He studied with Alban Berg; in 1928, settled in Paris, where he conducted radio concerts. —Works: Sinfonietta ritmica; 40th May, satirical suite for orch. (Amsterdam, Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 12, 1948); piano concerto No. 1 (1950); piano concerto No. 2 (Geneva, Oct. 13, 1954); violin sonata; cello sonata; variations for viola and guitar; string quartet; saxophone quartet; Te Deum, for chorus, organ, and orch.; Salve Regina, for voices and small orch.

Spivacke, Harold, American musicologist; b. New York, July 18, 1904. He studied at New York Univ. (M. A., 1925); at the Univ. of Berlin (Ph. D., magna cum laude, 1933); privately in Berlin with Eugen d'Albert and Hugo Leichtentritt as American-German Students Exchange Fellow (1930), and as 'Alexander von Humboldt Stiftung' Fellow (1931). Returning to the U. S., he became assistant chief of the Music Division, Library of Congress, Washington (1934-37); from 1937, chief of the Music Division. Other positions held by Spivacke include: member of the Advisory Committee on Music to the Dept. of State (1939-46); member, U. S. National Commission for Unesco from 1950; member, and from 1952, chairman of the Fulbright Advisory Selection Committee on Music; president of the Music Library Association (1951-53); member of Executive Board of the American Musicological Society, etc. As chief of the Music Division of the Library of Congress, he has been responsible for the acquisition of important materials (including a sizable collection of Schoenberg's MSS). Spivacke married the violinist Carolyn Le Fevre in 1927; divorced in 1953; married Rose Marie Grentzer in 1955. He is the author of Paganiniana (Washington, 1945) and numerous articles.

Spivakovsky, Tossy, outstanding violinist; b. Odessa, Feb. 4, 1907. He studied with Willy Hess in Berlin; made his concert debut there at the age of 10; toured Europe (1920-33) and Australia (1933-41); then came to the U. S.; appeared with major American orchestras.

Spohr (shpor), Ludwig (Louis), celebrated German violinist, composer, and conductor; b. Brunswick, April 5, 1784; d. Kassel, Oct. 22, 1859. The family moved to Seesen in 1786. His father, a physician, was an amateur flute player, and his mother a singer and pianist. In this musical atmosphere Spohr's talent developed very early; at the age of 5 he began taking lessons on the violin with Rector Riemenschneider and Dufour, a French émigré. Spohr was then sent back to Brunswick, where he was taught by the organist Hartung and the violinist Mau-court. He had already composed various violin pieces; the duke himself became interested in Spohr, admitted him to the orch., and arranged for his further study with the violinist Franz Eck. In 1802 Eck took Spohr with him on a tour to Russia, where he made the acquaintance of Clementi and John Field; he returned to Brunswick in 1803 and resumed his post in the ducal orch. In 1804 he made his 1st tour as a violinist, giving concerts in Berlin, Leipzig, and Dresden; in 1805 he became concertmaster in the ducal orch. at Gotha; married the harp player Dorette Scheidler, and toured with her in Germany in 1807. His reputation as a violin virtuoso was established, and he began to give more attention to composition. He wrote oratorios, operas, violin concertos, symphonies, and chamber music, which obtained excellent success in Germany. In 1812 he gave a series of concerts in Vienna, and was acclaimed both as composer and violinist; accepted the position of concertmaster in the orch. of the Theater an der Wien, which he held until 1815. He then made a grand tour of Germany and Italy; played a concertante of his own with Paganini in Rome. In 1816 Spohr's opera Faust was performed by Weber in Prague. After a visit to Holland in 1817, he received the post of opera conductor in Frankfurt, where he produced one of his most popular operas, Zemire und Azor (1819). In 1820 he visited England; appeared with his wife at several concerts of the London Philharmonic Society; this was the 1st of his 6 tours of England, where he acquired a lasting reputation as violinist, conductor, and composer; his works continued to be performed in England for many decades after his death. On his way back to Germany, he presented several concerts in Paris in 1820, but his reception there failed to match his London successes. He then proceeded to Dresden, and was recommended by Weber for the post of court Kapellmeister in Kassel, originally offered to Weber. Spohr accepted it, and settled there in 1822. It was in Kassel that he produced his masterpiece, the opera Jessonda (1823), which held the stage in Europe throughout the 19th century. He conducted its performances in Leipzig and Berlin; also appeared as conductor and composer at various musical festivals (Düsseldorf, 1826; Nordhausen, 1829; Norwich, 1839; Bonn, 1845; etc.). The success of Jessonda was followed by the production in Kassel of his oratorio Die letzten Dinge (1826) and his symphony Die Weihe der Töne (1832), both of which elicited great praise. His wife died in 1834; he married the pianist Marianne Pfeiffer in 1836. Spohr made another journey to England in 1847; visited Frankfurt in 1848. Returning to Kassel, he found himself in an increasingly difficult position because of his outspoken radicalism; the Elector of Hesse refused to grant him further leaves of absence, and Spohr decided to ignore the ban, which resulted in litigation with the Kassel Court. In 1853 he made his last tour of England, appearing at the New Philharmonic Concerts in London. He was retired from Kassel in 1857 on a pension; a few months later he broke his left arm, but despite this accident, at an advanced age, he made another appearance (his last) conducting Jessonda in Prague (1858). —Spohr's style was characteristic of the transition period between Classicism and Romanticism. He was a master of technical resources; some of his works demonstrate a spirit of bold experimentation (the Historical Symph.; symph. for 2 orchestras; quartet concerto; nonet, etc.); yet in his esthetics he was an intransigent conservative. He admired Beethoven's early works but confessed his total inability to understand Beethoven's last period; he also failed to appreciate Weber. It is remarkable, therefore, that he was an early champion of Wagner; in Kassel he brought out Der fliegende Holländer (1843) and Tannhäuser (1853), despite strenuous opposition of the court. He was a highly esteemed teacher; among his pupils were Ferdinand David and Moritz Hauptmann. His autobiography was publ. posthumously as Louis Spohr's Selbstbiographie (2 vols.; Kassel, 1860-61; in English, London, 1865 and 1878). A new ed. of his selected works, under the editorship of F. O. Leinert, began publication after World War II (Kassel, Bärenreiter-Verlag). —Works: Operas: Die Prüfung (Gotha, 1806); Alruna, die Eulen-Königin (1808); Der Zweikampf mit der Geliebten (Hamburg, Nov. 15, 1811); Faust (Prague, Sept. 1, 1816); Zemire und Azor (Frankfurt, April 4, 1819); Jessonda (Kassel, July 28, 1823); Der Berggeist (Kassel, March 24, 1825); Pietro von Albano (Kassel, Oct. 13, 1827); Der Alchymist (Kassel, July 28, 1830); Die Kreuzfahrer (Kassel, Jan. 1, 1845). Oratorios: Das Jüngste Gericht (Erfurt, Aug. 15, 1812); Die letzten Dinge (Kassel, March 25, 1826; in English, as The Last Judgment); Des Heilands letzte Stunden (Kassel, 1835; in English as Calvary at the Norwich Festival, 1839); and Der Fall Babylons (Norwich Festival, 1842). Other vocal works: Das befreite Deutschland, dramatic cantata; a Mass for 5 voices and double chorus; 6 psalms; hymns, part-songs, etc.; duets; 10 books of German songs; a sonatina for voice and piano, An sie am Klavier. Symphonies: No. 1, in Eb major; No. 2, in D minor; No. 3, in C minor; No. 4, Die Weihe der Töne (Consecration of Sound), in F major; No. 5, in C minor; No. 6, Historical (dedicated to the London Philharmonic Society), in G minor; No. 7, Irdisches und Göttliches im Menschenleben, for 2 orchestras, in C major; No. 8, in G minor; No. 9, Die Jahreszeiten (The Seasons), in B minor. Overtures: Macbeth; Im ersten Styl; etc. 15 violin concertos (among the finest being No. 8, 'in modo d'una scena cantante,' and No. 9), all edited by Ferdinand David; a 'quartet concerto' for 2 violins, viola, and cello with orch.; 2 clarinet concertos. Chamber music: nonet for violin, viola, cello, double-bass, woodwinds, and horn; octet for violin, 2 violas, cello, double-bass, clarinet, and 2 horns; 4 double quartets for strings; septet for piano, flute, clarinet, horn, bassoon, violin, and cello; string sextet; 7 string quintets; quintet for piano, flute, clarinet, horn, and bassoon; piano quintet; 34 string quartets; 5 piano trios; 14 duos concertants for 2 violins; 3 duos concertants for piano and violin; 3 sonates concertantes for harp and violin; piano sonata in Ab; Rondoletto for piano; etc. —BIBLIOGRAPHY: W. Neumann, L. Spohr. Eine Biographie (Kassel, 1854); A. Malibran, L. Spohr. Sein Leben und Wirken (Frankfurt, 1860); L. Stierlin, L. Spohr (Zürich, 1862-63; 2 vols.); H. M. Schletterer, L. Spohr (Leipzig, 1881); L. Nohl, Spohr (Leipzig, 1882); C. Robert, L. Spohr (Berlin, 1883); La Mara, Aus Spohrs Leben, in Klassisches und Romantisches aus der Tonwelt (Leipzig, 1892); R. Wassermann, L. Spohr als Opernkomponist (Rostock, 1910); E. Istel, 5 Briefe Spohrs an Marschner, in 'Liliencron-Festschrift' (Leipzig, 1910); F. Göthel, Das Violinspiel L. Spohrs (dissertation; Berlin, 1934); Edith von Salburg, L. Spohr (Leipzig, 1936); P. Heidelberg, Ludwig Spohrs Prozess gegen den Kurfürst von Hessen (in the 'Allgemeine Musikalische Zeitung,' 1936). See also F. Hiller, M. Hauptmanns Briefe an L. Spohr und andere (Leipzig, 1876; in English, London, 1892). For details of performances of Spohr's operas see A. Loewenberg, Annals of Opera (Cambridge, 1943; new ed., Geneva, 1955).

Spontini, Gasparo (Luigi Pacifico), Italian composer; b. Majolati, Ancona, Nov. 14, 1774; d. there, Jan. 24, 1851. His father, a modest farmer, intended him for the church, and gave him in charge of an uncle, a priest at Jesi, who attempted to stifle his musical aspirations. Spontini sought refuge at Monte San Vito, with another relative, who not only found a competent music teacher for him, but effected a reconciliation, so that after a year he was able to return to Jesi. In 1793 he entered the Cons. della Pietà de' Turchini in Naples, where his teachers were Tritto (singing) and Sala (composition). He rapidly mastered the conventional Italian style of his time; some of his church music performed in Naples came to the attention of a director of the Teatro della Pallacorda in Rome, who commissioned him to write an opera. This was I Puntigli delle donne, produced with notable success during Carnival, 1796. In his subsequent opera, L'Eroismo ridicolo (Naples, 1798), he was helped by Piccinni's practical advice. When the Neapolitan court fled to Palermo before the French invasion, Spontini was engaged as maestro di cappella, and wrote 4 operas in quick succession, which were produced at the Palermo court theater in 1800. He left Palermo soon afterwards, and proceeded to Rome (1801), Venice (1802), Naples and Paris (1803). In Paris he brought out 2 French operas at the Théâtre-Italien: La petite maison (May 12, 1804) and Julie, ou le pot de fleurs (March 12, 1805), in sedulous imitation of the Parisian light opera, but the attempt failed completely. Fortunately for Spontini, he met the poet Etienne de Jouy, a writer of superior accomplishments, who influenced him to change his style. The result was a one-act opera Milton, produced at the Théâtre Feytaud on Nov. 27, 1840. Its music showed greater expressiveness and a finer taste than Spontini's preceding works. The next libretto offered by Etienne de Jouy to Spontini (after it was rejected by Boieldieu and Méhul) was La Vestale. Spontini worked on the score for 3 years, repeatedly revising and rewriting in his desire to attain his best, and the final product became Spontini's masterpiece. In the meantime, the Empress Josephine had appointed him her 'compositeur particulier' and her appreciation of Spontini increased after the production of his patriotic cantata, L'Eccelsa gara, celebrating the victory of Austerlitz. Her powerful patronage secured a hearing for La Vestale, which was brought out at the Académie Impériale (Grand Opéra), despite virulent open and secret opposition on the part of influential musicians, on Dec. 16, 1807, and won triumphant success. Not only did the public receive it with acclamation; by a unanimous verdict of the judges, Méhul, Gossec, and Grétry, the prize offered by Napoleon for the best dramatic work was awarded to Spontini. Shortly after the equal success of his grand opera Fernand Cortez (Nov. 28, 1809), Spontini married the daughter of Jean-Baptiste Erard, and in 1810 became director of the Italian Opera, in which capacity he staged Mozart's Don Giovanni in its original form for the first time in Paris. He was dismissed in 1812, on charges of financial irregularity; but in 1814 Louis XVIII appointed him court composer, Spontini having refused reinstatement as operatic director in favor of Catalani. He now wrote stage pieces in glorification of the Restoration: Pélage, ou le roi et la paix (Aug. 23, 1814); Les Dieux rivaux (June 21, 1816); this was followed by Olympie (Paris Opéra, Dec. 22, 1819). He then accepted the appointment, by King Friedrich Wilhelm III, of court composer and general musical director at Berlin; made his début there, in the spring of 1820, with his opera Fernand Cortez, fairly electrifying his audiences, although, like Julie, Milton, and La Vestale, it had been heard before in Berlin. Here Spontini's remarkable ability as a conductor had freest scope; besides repeating his earlier works, he wrote for Berlin the festival play Lalla Rookh (1821), remodeled as the opera Nurmahal, oder das Rosenfest von Kaschmir (Berlin, May 27, 1822); Alcidor (Berlin, May 23, 1825); and Agnes von Hohenstaufen (Berlin, June 12, 1829); none of these, however, found favor in other German cities. In spite of his success, and the King's continued favor, Spontini's position in Berlin gradually grew untenable; he had been placed on an equality with the intendant of the Royal Theater, and there were frequent misunderstandings and sharp clashes of authority, not mitigated by Spontini's jealousies and dislikes, his overweening self-conceit and despotic temper. Partly through intrigue, partly by reason of his own lack of self-control, he narrowly escaped imprisonment for lèse-majesté; and was finally driven out of the theater by the hostile demonstrations of the audience. He retired in 1841, retaining his titles and full pay, but with his prestige and popularity greatly impaired. Thereafter he was inactive as a composer. He returned to Paris, but met with hostility from the director of the Opéra there. In 1844 he conducted a performance (prepared by Wagner) of La Vestale at Dresden. Finally, shattered in health, he retired to his native place and devoted his time to public charities. In 1844 the Pope had given him the rank and title of 'Comte de Sant' Andrea'; he was a knight of the Prussian 'Ordre pour le mérite', member of the Berlin Akademie (1833), and the French Institute (1839), and had received from the Halle Univ. the degree of Dr. phil. — BIBLIOGRAPHY: L. de Loménie, M. Spontini, par un homme de rien (Paris, 1841); E. M. Oettinger, Spontini (Leipzig, 1843); I. Montanari, Elogio . . . (Ancona, 1851); Raoul-Rochette, Notice historique sur la vie et les ouvrages de M. Spontini (Paris 1852); C. Robert, G. L. P. Spontini (Berlin, 1883); Ph. Spitta, Spontini in Berlin, in Zur Musik (1892); W. Altmann, Spontini an der Berliner Oper, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1903); E. Prout, Spontini's La Vestale in 'Monthly Mus. Record' (vol. 35; 1905); R. Wagner, Erinnerungen an Spontini (in his 'Gesammelte Schriften,' vol. V); A. Pougin, Les dernières années de Spontini in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' XXIX (1922); C. Radicotti, Spontini a Berlino (Ancona, 1925); C. Bouvet, Spontini (Paris, 1930); K. Schubert, Spontinis italienische Schule (Strasbourg, 1932); A. Ghislanzoni, G. Spontini (Rome, 1951); P. Fragapane, G. Spontini (Bologna, 1954); 'Atti del primo congresso internazionale di studi Spontiniani . . . 1951' (Fabriano, 1954); F. Schlitzer, Frammenti biografici di G. Spontini (Siena, 1955); A. Belardinelli, ed., Documenti spontiniani inediti (Florence, 1955; 2 vols.); also letters of Spontini publ. by Radicotti and Pfeiffer in 'Note d'archivio' (1932).

Sporck, Georges, French composer; b. Paris, April 9, 1870; d. there, Jan. 17, 1943. He studied with Guiraud and Dubois at the Paris Cons., and later with Vincent d'Indy; was officer of Public Instruction; wrote a number of symph. works of a programmatic nature, often with regional color: Symphonie vivaraise; Islande; Boabdil; Kermesse; Pay-sages normandes; Esquisses symphoniques; Prélude symphonique; Méditation; Orientale; etc.; a violin sonata; piano pieces (Études symphoniques, sonatina, etc.); 2 books of songs. He also publ. instructive editions of classical works (Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Schumann, etc.).

Springer, Hermann, German musicologist; b. Döbeln, May 9, 1872; d. Feb., 1945 (killed during the fighting in eastern Germany). He studied philology and music history in Leipzig, Berlin, and Paris; Dr. phil., 1894, with the dissertation Das alt-provenzalische Klagelied (1895). He entered the Prussian Library Service in 1899, continuing in this position for nearly 40 years; was a member of various learned societies. He publ. Beethoven und die Musik-kritik (Vienna, 1927); contributed musico-graphical papers to German and Austrian publications.

Springer, Max, writer on music; b. Schwendi, Württemberg, Dec. 19, 1877; d. Vienna, Jan. 20, 1954. He attended the Univ. in Prague, and studied music with Klička. In 1910 he was appointed prof. of Gregorian choral singing and organist in the section for church music of the State Academy, Klosterneuburg, near Vienna, and held this post until his retirement shortly before his death. He publ. Die Kunst der Choralbegleitung (1907; English transl., 1908) and manuals on liturgical choral singing; Graduale Romanum in modern notation (1930); Kontrapunkt (Vienna, 1936); composed church music.

Spross, Charles Gilbert, American organist and composer; b. Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 6, 1874. He studied piano with X. Scharwenka while the latter was in N. Y.; organ with various teachers; for nearly 40 years was organist at various churches in Poughkeepsie, Paterson, N. J., New York, etc.; was accompanist to celebrated singers (Fremstad, Schumann-Heink, Nordica, Emma Eames, etc.). He publ. about 250 songs; 5 sacred cantatas; a violin sonata and other chamber music. After his retirement about 1952, he lived in Poughkeepsie.

Spry, Walter, American pianist, pedagogue, and composer; b. Chicago, Feb. 27, 1868; d. Spartanburg, S. C., Sept. 25, 1953. He studied with Leschetizky in Vienna (1889-90), and at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (1890-93). In 1905 he established his own music school in Chicago; from 1917 to 1933 taught at the Columbia School of Music there, and from 1933 to his death, at the Converse College School of Music (Spartanburg, S. C.). He wrote mostly for piano; also composed songs.

Squarcialupi (skwähr-tchä-löŏ'-pē), Antonio, renowned Italian organist (called 'Antonio degli Organi'); b. Florence, March 27, 1416; d. there, July 6, 1480. He lived in Siena before 1450; a few years later returned to Florence, where he became organist at the church of Santa Maria del Fiore and enjoyed the protection of Lorenzo the Magnificent. He was highly esteemed by Dufay (cf. F. X. Haberl, Dufay, in the 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft', 1885, p. 436). Since none of his works has survived, only oblique reports on their excellence can be adduced, but his name was immortalized by the famous 'Squarcialupi Codex,' a collection of Florentine polyphonic music of the 14th century, preserved in the Biblioteca Medicea-Laurenziana in Florence (Cod. Pal. 87). The collection was edited by Johannes Wolf and publ. in 1955. —Cf. Bianca Becherini, Un Canto in panca fiorentino; Antonio di Guido, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (July-Dec., 1948).

Squire, William Barclay, English musicologist; b. London, Oct. 16, 1855; d. there, Jan. 13, 1927. He received his education in Frankfurt, Germany, and at Pembroke College, Cambridge (B. A., 1879; M. A., 1902). He practiced law; in 1885 he was placed in charge of the printed music in the British Museum, retiring as Assistant Keeper in 1920; compiled catalogues of music for the British Museum (publ. in 1899 and 1912); also the catalogue of the King's Music Library (3 vols., 1927-29). He wrote music criticism in the 'Saturday Review' (1890-94); contributed biographical articles to the 'Dictionary of National Biography' and to various archeological and antiquarian periodicals; edited (with J. A. Fuller Maitland) The Fitzwilliam Virginal Book (2 vols., London, 1899); edited Byrd's Masses, Purcell's music for harpsichord, Elizabethan madrigals, etc.

Squire, William Henry, English cellist and composer; b. Ross, Herefordshire, Aug.

8, 1871. His father was an amateur violinist, and he received his primary music education at home; then studied with Hubert Parry at the Royal College of Music; made his début as a cellist in London on Feb. 12, 1891, and became a popular recitalist in England; wrote a cello concerto and many other cello pieces. He retired in 1941, and lived in London.

Stäblein, Bruno, German musicologist; b. Munich, May 5, 1895. He studied at the Munich Academy of Music with Beer-Walbrunn (composition) and at the Univ. of Munich with Adolf Sandberger and Theodor Kroyer (musicology). He was theater conductor in Coburg (1920-26), music teacher at Regensburg (1931-45); in 1946 appointed privatdozent at the Univ. of Erlangen. —Publications: Hymnenstudien (Erlangen, 1946); edited reprints of important source materials pertaining to medieval music ('Monumenta Monodica Medii Aevi,' 'Musica Divina,' etc.); contributed a number of articles to 'Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart' and to musical journals.

Stade (shtah'-deh), Friedrich, German organist and writer on music; b. Arnstadt, Jan. 8, 1844; d. Leipzig, June 12, 1928. He studied in Leipzig with Riedel and Richter; served as church organist (1885-95); edited works by Bach; publ. Vom Musikalisch-Schönen (1870; 2nd ed., 1904), using the title of the celebrated treatise by Hanslick, but directed against Hanslick's ideas.

Stade, Heinrich Bernhard, German organist and composer; b. Ettischleben, near Arnstadt, May 2, 1816; d. Arnstadt, May 29, 1882. He was organist and town cantor at Arnstadt; restored the organ of St. Bonifaziuskirche, on which Bach had played (1703-07). He publ. Der wohl vorbereitete Organist, ein Präludien-, Choral- und Postludienbuch in 2 parts; and other organ music.

Stade, Wilhelm, German organist and composer; b. Halle, Aug. 25, 1817; d. Altenburg, March 24, 1902. He studied with Fr. Schneider in Dessau; was court organist and conductor at Altenburg (1860-91). With Lilliencron he ed. 'Die Lieder und Sprüche aus der letzten Zeit des Minnesangs' (1854). He composed the celebrated Vor Jena, which became a favorite student song; also wrote 2 symphonies, a violin sonata, 7 books of organ pieces, an attractive and unique Kindersonate for piano, 4 hands; many sacred and secular choral works.

Staden, Johann, German organist and composer; b. Nuremberg, 1581; d. there (of the plague), Nov. (buried Nov. 15), 1634. He was court organist to the Margrave of Brandenburg from 1604 to 1616, at Kulmbach and Bayreuth; then returned to Nuremberg, where he was church organist until his death. He publ. 4 vols. of Harmoniae sacrae (1616, 1621, 1628, 1632); 2 vols. of church music (1625-26; 2nd vol. contains a brief treatise on thorough bass); 4 vols. of Haus-Musik (1623-28; posthumous collected ed. 1648, containing sacred songs with instrumental accompaniment); Musicalischer Freuden- und Andachtswecker (1630); Hertzentrost-Musica (1630); Geistlicher Musik-Klang (1633); David's Harfe (1643); Neue deutsche Lieder nach Art der Villanellen (1616, 1609; includes some dances); 3 books of dance pieces (1618, 1625, and a posthumous ed., 1643); etc. Selected works by Staden were edited by E. Schmitz for the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (VII, 1; VIII, 1) and by K. Sannwald for Nagel's 'Musik-Archiv' (1936). —Cf. 'Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte,' XV, 104 ff.

Staden, Sigmund Theophilus, German organist and composer; son of Johann Staden; b. Nuremberg, 1607; d. there, July 30, 1655. As a youth, he studied in Augsburg with the organist Jacob Baumann, and later in Berlin with the resident English player on the viola da gamba, Walter Rowe. Returning to Nuremberg in 1627, he held the position of town piper; in 1634 succeeded his father as organist at the St. Lorenz Church. Staden wrote the earliest extant German opera, Seelewig, in an Italian manner; it was produced in Nuremberg in 1644. The text, and separately the music, for voices and thorough bass, were publ. in Harsdörffer's Frauenzimmer Gesprächspiele (vol. IV, 1644); reprinted by Eitner in vol. XIII of 'Monatshefte für Musik-Geschichte.' R. Schulz-Dornburg arranged the score for a production at Cologne in 1912. Staden edited Hans Leo Hassler's Kirchengesänge (1637), adding 11 songs by his father and 5 songs of his own. —Cf. E. Schmitz, Zur Bedeutung der Harsdörfferschen 'Frauenzimmer-Gesprächspiele' in the 'Lilliencron-Festschrift' (Leipzig, 1910).

Stadler, Anton, famous Austrian clarinet player; b. 1753; d. Vienna, June 15, 1812. His name is chiefly important in connection with his friendship with Mozart, and his influence on Mozart's works: trio (K. 498), the so-called Stadler Quintet (K. 581), clarinet concerto (K. 622). Stadler was a member of the court orch. in Vienna from 1787 till 1799. —Cf. M. K. Ward, Mozart's Clarinetist, in 'Monthly Mus. Record' (Jan., 1955).

Stadler, Maximilian, Austrian organist and composer; b. Melk, Aug. 4, 1748; d. Vienna, Nov. 8, 1833. He was ordained priest in the Benedictine Order; was abbot at Lilienfeld (1786-96); held other church positions; settled in Vienna in 1796. He was a friend of Mozart, and took care of Mozart's MS of the Requiem, which he copied at Mozart's death. When the authenticity of the work was called into question by Gottfried Weber and others, Stadler publ. a pamphlet in its defense, Verteidigung der Echtheit des Mozartschen Requiems (Vienna, 1825; supplement, 1826). He was also a composer; publ. a cantata, Die Frühlingsfeier; much church music; sonatas for organ; songs. His oratorio, Die Befreiung von Jerusalem (Vienna, 1811), enjoyed considerable success. —Cf. H. Sabel, Maximilian Stadlers weltliche Werke (Cologne, 1940); H. Sabel, Maximilian Stadler und W. A. Mozart, in 'Neues Mozart-Jahrbuch' (vol. 3; 1943).

Stadtfeldt, Alexander, composer; b. Wiesbaden, April 27, 1826; d. Brussels, Nov. 4, 1853. He studied with Fétis at the Brussels Cons., winning the Belgian Prix de Rome in 1849. —Works: operas: Hamlet (Darmstadt, 1857), Abu Hassan, L'Illusion, and La Pedrina; 4 symphonies; overtures; 2 concertinos for piano and orch.; string quartet; piano trio; a Mass; a Te Deum; etc.

Staempfli, Edward, Swiss composer; b. Bern, Feb. 1, 1908. He studied composition with Jarnach in Cologne and Paul Dukas in Paris; returned to Switzerland in 1939; settled in Lugano. His early works are in an Impressionist style; later he adopted a modified system of 12-tone writing. —Works: the opera Ein Traumspiel; 3 symphonies; 3 piano concertos; 2 violin concertos; Variations for wind instruments (Salzburg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 23, 1952); other chamber music; songs.

Stagno (stah'-ñoh), Roberto, Italian tenor; b. Palermo, 1836; d. Genoa, April 26, 1897. He studied with Giuseppe Lamperti; sang with great applause in Italy, London, Russia, Spain, etc.; appeared in the 1st season of the Metropolitan Opera Company, N. Y. (1883-84). He married his pupil, Gemma Bellincioni (q.v.), in 1881.

Stahl (shtahl), Wilhelm, German organist and writer on music; b. Gross Schenkenberg (Lauenburg), April 10, 1872; d. Lübeck, July 5, 1954. He studied with Stiehl in Lübeck; was organist there at St. Matthew's Church (1896-1922) and at the Lübeck Cathedral (1922-39); publ. Die Lübecker Abendmusiken (Lübeck, 1937); Franz Tunder und Dietrich Buxtehude (Leipzig, 1926); Dietrich Buxtehude (Kassel, 1937); Musikgeschichte Lübecks (with J. Hennings, Kassel, 1951-52); etc.; edited several vols. of popular dances of Northern Germany.

Stahlberg, Fritz, violinist and composer; b. Ketzin, Germany, June 7, 1877; d. Los Angeles, July 23, 1937. He studied in Stuttgart; emigrated to America in 1899, joining the Pittsburgh Symph. Orch. as a violinist; from 1908 was a member of the N. Y. Philharmonic, and in 1912 was also assistant conductor. He went to Hollywood in 1929, and was in charge of the music dept. for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures. He wrote 2 symphonies; a symph suite, Im Hochland; violin pieces; songs.

Stählin, Jakob von, German music historian; b. Memmingen, 1710; d. St. Petersburg, July 17, 1785. He went to Russia in 1735 and remained there until his death. He publ. an important account, Nachrichten von der Musik in Russland (Leipzig, 1769-70), which is the prime source of information on Russian music of the 18th century.

Stahuljak (stäh-höö-lyäk'), Mladen, Croatian composer and organist; b. Zadar, March 15, 1914. He studied in Zagreb with Odak (theory) and Dugan (organ); then became a teacher at the Cons. of Zagreb. He has written music mostly for practical use in schools, for chorus, organ, and small ensembles; also made arrangements of folk-songs.

Stainer (shti'-ner), Jakob, Austrian manufacturer of violins; b. Absam, July 14, 1621; d. there, 1683. The son of poor peasants, he was a shepherd-boy; as a youth he began making 'Schwegelpfeifen' and other woodwind instruments; then was apprenticed to a lute maker in Innsbruck. He sold his instruments in his native Tyrol, but soon attracted the attention of the Vienna court, and from 1648 was in the service of Archduke Ferdinand Karl. In 1658 he was given the title of violin maker to the court. His fortunes suffered an adverse turn when he was accused of Lutheran leanings, and he spent several months in prison; his mind became unbalanced and he died insane. His brother, Markus Stainer, made excellent violins and violas. The Stainer violins are highly prized, and differed greatly from Italian models (the oft-repeated assertions that Jakob Stainer worked in Italian shops are not substantiated), and their shape created flute-like tones of great subtlety. —Cf. S. Ruf, Der Geigenmacher Jacobus Stainer von Absam im Tirol (Innsbruck, 1872; 2nd ed., 1892); F. Lentner, Jacob Stainers Lebenslauf im Lichte archivärischer Forschung (Leipzig, 1893); E. Heron-Allen, A Pilgrimage to the House of Jacob Stainer, in the 'Mus. Times' (Aug., 1900); Princesse A. de la Tour et Taxis, Le Violon de Jakob Stainer (Paris, 1910); W. Senn, Jakob Stainer, der Geigenmacher zu Absam (Innsbruck, 1951).

Stainer, Sir John, English organist and composer; b. London, June 6, 1840; d. Verona, March 31, 1901. He was a chorister at St. Paul's Cathedral in London (1847-56); played organ there and in other churches as a youth; studied theory with Charles Steggall; filled various positions as church organist and teacher, and in 1872 was appointed organist of St. Paul's; failing eyesight compelled him to resign in 1888, in which year he was knighted. In 1889 he became prof. at the Univ. of Oxford, retaining this position until his death. —Works: the oratorio Gideon; the cantatas The Daughter of Jairus (Worcester, 1878), St. Mary Magdalene (Gloucester, 1882), and The Crucifixion (London, 1887); 4 church services; canticles, anthems, songs; publ. a treatise on harmony, another on the organ, Dictionary of Musical Terms (with W. A. Barrett; 1876; 4th ed., 1898), etc.; edited (with his daughter, Cecie Stainer) Dufay and His Contemporaries (1898; 50 selected compositions) and Early Bodleian Music . . . from about A. D. 1185 to about A. D. 1505 (3 vols.; 1901). —Cf. F. G. Edwards, John Stainer, in 'Mus. Times' (1901; pp. 293-309).

Stainlein (stin'-lin), Comte Louis Charles Georges Corneille de, cellist and composer; b. Hungary, July 3, 1819; d. Angleur-lez-Liège, Belgium, Nov. 22, 1867. A talented cellist, he appeared with success in Germany and France; with Sivori, Ney, and others he gave concerts of chamber music in Paris. —Works: violin sonata; piano trio; 2 string quartets; string quintet; string sextet; pieces for cello and piano, male choruses; songs.

Stainov, Petko, Bulgarian composer; b. Kazanlyk, Dec. 1, 1896. Despite an almost complete loss of sight in his infancy, he studied piano and composition by ear; went to Germany in 1920; graduated from the Dresden Cons. in 1924. In 1926, he became piano teacher at the State Institute for the Blind in Sofia. He wrote 2 symphonies and numerous choral works.

Stair, Patty, American organist and composer; b. Cleveland, Nov. 12, 1869; d. there, April 26, 1926. She studied at the Cleveland Cons. (1882-93); filled several positions as organist in Cleveland; from 1902 taught at the Cleveland Cons. She wrote 2 light operas, The Fair Brigade and Sweet Simplicity; a Berceuse for violin and piano; songs.

Stamaty (stah-mah'-tē), Camille-Marie, pianist; b. Rome, March 23, 1811; d. Paris, April 19, 1870. He was of Greek-French origin; his mother, a Frenchwoman, educated him after the death of his father in 1818, and took him to Paris, where he became a pupil of Kalkbrenner; in 1836 he went to Leipzig, where he studied with Mendelssohn. He returned to Paris the next year, and remained there, enjoying fame as a teacher; among his students were Saint-Saëns and Gottschalk. He publ. a number of didactic works: Le Rhythme des doigts, Études progressives; Études concertantes; Esquisse; Études pittoresques; 6 Études caractéristiques sur Obéron, and 12 transcriptions entitled Souvenir du Conservatoire; also publ. 3 piano sonatas, a piano trio, a piano concerto, etc.

Stamitz, (Johann) Anton, composer; son of Johann Wenzel Anton Stamitz; b. Mannheim, Nov. 24, 1754; d. Paris, before June, 1809. He studied violin and composition with his father. In 1770 he went to Strasbourg, and then to Paris, accompanied by his brother Karl, with whom he made his début at the Concert Spirituel on March 25, 1772; from 1782 he was a member of the royal orch. R. Kreutzer was his pupil. He wrote 13 symphonies; 54 quartets, trios, and duets for strings (2 quartets in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' XV; a trio in vol. XVI); a violin concerto; 6 sonatas for violin, flute, and bass; concertos for piano, for cello, for bassoon, etc. —Cf. M. Pincherle, Feuilles d'histoire du violon (Paris, 1927; pp. 110-17).

Stamitz, Johann Wenzel Anton, violinist and one of the creators of the modern style of instrumental music; b. Deutsch-Brod, Bohemia, June 19, 1717; d. Mannheim, March 27, 1757. He received his musical education from his father, a cantor. His playing at the coronation of Emperor Charles VII at Frankfurt (1742) created a sensation, and Prince Karl Theodor, who in 1743 became Elector Palatine, engaged him as chamber musician. In 1745 he became Konzertmeister of the electoral orch. in Mannheim and 'Kammermusikdirektor.' His fame became widespread; Baron Grimm publ. in Paris a pamphlet, Le petit prophète de Boëhmisch-Broda, satirizing Stamitz's innovations. In the winter of 1754-55 Stamitz was in Paris, where, at the Concert Spirituel, he produced a symphony in which he used clarinets. As a virtuoso and teacher he was one of the most famous of his time; among his pupils were his own sons Karl and Anton, C. Cannabich, W. Cramer, I. Fränzl, etc.; as a conductor he made the Mannheim orch. the finest in Europe, unrivalled for its perfection of dynamic shading. But these achievements were overshadowed by the importance of his new methods as a composer; he virtually established the classical sonata form through introducing the element of contrast into a single movement (primary and secondary subject), replacing the stereotyped basso continuo by skillful and effective leading of the basses and making variety and ingenuity the chief factors in the thematic development. Among the composers who adopted Stamitz's new style were his pupils, C. Cannabich, C. Toeschi, F. Beck, A. Filtz, as well as F. X. Richter, F. Schobert, Johann Christian Bach, Boccherini, Dittersdorf, Eichner, Gossec, etc. During his lifetime his music was printed in Paris, London, and Amsterdam. —His works include 74 symphonies; 10 trios for orch.; about 12 violin concertos; sonatas for violin solo, and others for violin with basso continuo; a Mass in D major; etc. A selection from his symphonies was publ. by Hugo Riemann in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (III, 1; VII, 2; with an important introduction); chamber music in the same series (XV and XVI), and 9 orchestral trios in 'Collegium Musicum.' Two symphonies (in A major and D major) were edited by R. Sondheim (Berlin, 1933); a symph. edited by H. T. David was publ. by the N. Y. Public Library (1937); chamber music was edited by W. Altmann (6 duos for violin and cello), Moffat, Sondheim, etc. —Cf. the studies by P. Gradenwitz: Johann Stamitz: das Leben (Brno, 1936), The Symphonies of Johann Stamitz, in 'Mus. Review' (1940), The Stamitz Family: some Errors, Omissions and Falsifications Corrected, in 'Notes' (Washington, Dec., 1949); also Paul Nettl, Der kleine 'Prophète von Böhmisches-Broda' (Esslingen, 1953).

Stamitz, Karl (Philipp), violinist and composer; son and pupil of Johann Stamitz; b. Mannheim, May 7, 1745; d. Jena, Nov. 9, 1801. He was noted as a virtuoso on the viola and viola d'amore. In 1762 he was engaged as violinist in the Electoral orch. at Mannheim; in 1770, was at Strasbourg, and then toured widely, visiting Paris, London, and St. Petersburg; in 1785, became concertmaster to the Duc de Noailles at Paris; then traveled in Germany and Austria; lived in Nuremberg and Kassel; toured Russia again in 1790, and from 1794 was conductor in Jena. —Works: 70 symphonies, including 26 'symphonies concertantes'; a symphony for 2 orchestras; 7 violin concertos; several string quartets; 6 trios for 2 violins with bass; duos for 2 violins, for violin and cello, and viola and cello; a viola concerto; a piano concerto; etc. H. Riemann edited 2 symphonies in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (VIII, 2) and chamber music in vols. XV and XVI of the same series; chamber music was edited by Altmann, C. Meyer, Klengel; a 'symphonie concertante' by K. Geiringer (Vienna, 1935); the viola concerto was edited by S. Beck (N. Y. Public Library, 1937). —5 letters from K. Stamitz were publ. by A. Schering in Festschrift Fritz Stein zum 60. Geburtstag (Brunswick, 1939).

Stanford, Sir Charles Villiers, eminent composer and pedagogue; b. Dublin, Sept. 30, 1852; d. London, March 29, 1924. Brought up in an intellectual atmosphere, he was a diligent student in his early youth; took organ lessons in Dublin with Robert Stewart; in 1862 was sent to London, where he studied piano with Ernst Pauer. In 1870 he entered Queen's College, Cambridge, as an organ student; in 1873 became organist at Trinity College there (resigned 1892). For two years (1875-76) he studied composition with Reinecke in Leipzig, and in 1877 with Kiel in Berlin. He received his M.A. degree in Cambridge in 1877; honorary degrees of Mus. Doc. at Oxford (1883) and at Cambridge (1888). In 1883 he was appointed prof. of composition at the Royal College of Music and conductor of the orch. there; in 1887 he also became prof. of music at Cambridge, holding both positions until his death; he was conductor of the Leeds Festivals from 1901 to 1910, and appeared as guest conductor of his own works in Paris, Berlin, Amsterdam, Brussels, etc.; was knighted in 1902. He was an extremely able and industrious composer in a distinctly Romantic style, yet unmistakably national in musical materials, both Irish and English. His music, however, remains virtually unknown outside Great Britain. —Works: Operas: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan (London, Feb. 6, 1881); Savonarola (Hamburg, April 18, 1884); The Canterbury Pilgrims (London, April 23, 1884); Much Ado About Nothing (London, May 30, 1901); The Critic, or An Opera Rehearsed (London, Jan. 14, 1916); The Traveling Companion (posthumous; première, Liverpool, April 30, 1925, by an amateur group; 1st professional performance, Bristol, Oct. 25, 1926). For orch.: 7 symphonies: No. 1 (1876), No. 2, Elegiac (1882), No. 3, Irish (London, May 17, 1887), No. 4 (Berlin, Jan. 14, 1889), No. 5, inspired by L'Allegro ed il Penseroso of Milton (1894), No. 6 (1905), No. 7 (1911); 5 Irish Rhapsodies (1901-14); 2 sets of Irish Dances; Overture in the Style of a Tragedy; suite for violin and orch. (Berlin, Jan. 14, 1889, Joachim soloist); 2 violin concertos; 3 piano concertos; Irish Concertino for violin, cello, and orch. Chamber and piano music: 8 string quartets; piano quintet; 2 string quintets; 3 piano trios; 2 violin sonatas; 2 cello sonatas; piano sonata; 10 Dances for piano; 24 Preludes for piano; Ballade, for piano. Choral works: Eden, oratorio (1891); Mass (1892); 3 sets of Elizabethan pastorals; 6 Irish Folksongs; Songs of the Sea; Songs of the Fleet (1910); a number of part-songs; also an Ode to Discord, musical caricature of modern composers (London, June 9, 1909); about 200 songs to English words, and 12 songs to texts by Heine, in German. He edited and arranged Moore's 'Irish Melodies'; 'Songs of Erin' (3 vols.; 130 folksongs); 'Songs of Old Ireland'; 'Irish Songs and Ballads'; for the Irish Literary Society he ed. 'The Complete Petrie Collection' (3 vols., 1902-05; 1,582 Irish airs). —Books: Studies and Memories (1908); Musical Composition (1911); Pages from an Unwritten Diary (1914); A History of Music (with Cecil Forsyth; 1916); Interludes: Records and Reflections (1922). —Cf. the 'Mus. Times' (Dec., 1898); R. A. Stretefeld, Musiciens anglais contemporains (Paris, 1913); J. F. Porte, Sir Charles V. Stanford (London, 1921); J. A. Fuller Maitland, The Music of Parry and Stanford (Cambridge, 1934); H. P. Greene, Charles Villiers Stanford (London, 1935).

Stange, Hermann, German organist; b. Kiel, Dec. 19, 1835; d. there, June 22, 1914. He studied at the Leipzig Cons.; subsequently served as organist at Rossal College, in England (1860-64); from 1878 was music director and from 1887 prof., at Kiel Univ. until his retirement in 1911.

Stange, Max, German singing teacher and composer; nephew of the preceding; b. Ottensen, May 10, 1856; d. Berlin, Jan. 25, 1932. He was prof. of singing at the Hochschule für Musik, Berlin. —Works: Jauchzet dem Herrn, alle Welt for baritone solo, chorus, and orch.; Nachtstück, for orch.; An die Heimat, overture; Adagio for cello and orch.; Serenade and Nachtgebet for string orch.; Zwei Romanzen, for string orch.; many male choruses and songs.

Stanley, Albert Augustus, American organist and composer; b. Manville, R. I., May 25, 1851; d. Ann Arbor, Mich., May 19, 1932. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Reinecke, Richter, and others; returning to America in 1876, he served as church organist in Providence; in 1888 appointed prof. of music at the Univ. of Michigan. He classified the valuable collection of musical instruments given to the Univ. by F. Stearns in 1898, and compiled an extensive catalogue of it (publ. 1918 and 1921). The Univ. made him Mus. Doc. in 1930. He wrote a cantata, The City of Freedom (Boston, 1883); a Psalm of Victory, for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (1906); the symph. poems The Awakening of the Soul (1896) and Altis (1898); anthems; part-songs; etc.

Stanley, John, English organist and composer; b. London, Jan. 17, 1713; d. there, May 19, 1786. Blind from early childhood, he studied organ with Maurice Greene, and soon was able to fill church positions; composed theater music, and publ. a number of instrumental works. In 1779 he succeeded Boyce as Master of the King's Band of Music. He enjoyed the friendship and esteem of Handel, after whose death he conducted the oratorio performances with J. C. Smith. —Works: oratorios: Jephtha (1757), Zimri (Covent Garden, March 12, 1760), The Fall of Egypt (Drury Lane, March 23, 1774); dramatic pastoral Arcadia (for George III's wedding; 1761); an opera, Teraminta; incidental music; songs; etc.; also 8 solos for flute, violin, or harpsichord; 6 concertos for strings; 10 voluntaries for organ; etc. —Cf. G. Finzi, John Stanley, in 'Tempo' (Spring, 1953); Mollie Sands, The Problem of 'Teraminta' in 'Music & Letters' (1952).

Starck, Ingeborg. See Bronsart.

Starczewski (star-chev'-skē), Felix, Polish composer; b. Warsaw, May 27, 1868; d. there, Jan. 21, 1946. He studied in Berlin and Paris; returning to Poland, he was engaged in various activities as teacher, composer, and music critic. He wrote an opera in 1 act, Taniec kwatów (Warsaw, April 28, 1918); a violin sonata; songs.

Starer, Robert, composer; b. Vienna, Jan. 8, 1924. He went to Jerusalem in 1938 and studied at the Cons. there; joined the British Royal Air Force during World War II. In 1947 he came to New York on a scholarship to the Juilliard School of Music; then taught there. —Works: The Intruder, 1-act opera (N. Y., Dec. 4, 1956); symph. No. 1 (1948); Prelude and Dance for orch. (1949); piano concerto (N. Y., Feb. 21, 1949, composer soloist); symph. No. 2 (1951); Tel Aviv, April 27, 1953); a concertino for two voices or instruments (1948); a string quartet; songs; piano music.

Stark (shtark), Ludwig, German pianist; b. Munich, June 19, 1831; d. Stuttgart, March 22, 1884. He studied with Ignaz and Franz Lachner in Munich; in 1857 was co-founder of the Stuttgart Cons., where he taught singing and theory; with Lebert he edited the Grosse Klavierschule (revised by M. Pauer, 1904); brought out a singing method, Deutsche Liederschule (1861); also publ. the Klassischer Hausschatz (24 transcriptions for piano of movements of classical chamber music works). He wrote a number of sacred and secular choral pieces, piano music, songs, etc.; publ. Kunst und Welt (1884).

Stark (shtark), Robert, famous German clarinetist; b. Klingenthal, Sept. 19, 1847; d. Würzburg, Oct. 29, 1922. He studied at the Dresden Cons.; began his career as an orchestral player at Chemnitz; from 1873 to 1881 played the clarinet in Wiesbaden; then was prof. at the Musikschule in Würzburg. He publ. valuable and practical pieces for his instrument: 3 concertos, Romanze for clarinet and orch.; also a Ballade for trombone and orch.; Quintett concertante, for flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon; Serenade, for oboe and piano; instructive works: Die Kunst der Transposition auf der Klarinette, Grosse theoretisch-praktische Klarinett-Schule, in 2 parts, followed by Part III, Die hohe Schule des Klarinett-Spieles (24 virtuoso studies).

Starmer, William Wooding, English organist and expert on bells; b. Wellingborough, Nov. 4, 1866; d. Birmingham, Oct. 27, 1927. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music; in 1924 was appointed lecturer on campanology at Birmingham Univ. He publ. several informative papers on the subject of bells in the 'Proceedings of the Musical Association'; also wrote some church music and organ works.

Starokadomsky (stah-roh-kah-dom'-skē), Mikhail Leonidovitch, Russian composer; b. Brest-Litovsk, June 13, 1901; d. Moscow, April 24, 1954. He studied composition with Miaskovsky at the Moscow Cons., graduating in 1928. He remained in Moscow, where he became prof. of orchestration. His works follow the traditional line of Russian nationalism, but several of his early orchestral scores are purely neo-Classical, and in this respect parallel the European developments. —Works: opera, Sot (1933); operettas, Three Encounters (1942), The Gay Rooster (1944), and The Sun Flower (1947); a concerto for orch. (Paris Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 22, 1937); violin concerto (Moscow, March 20, 1939); some chamber music; and numerous songs for children, by which he is best known in Russia.

Starzer, Josef, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, 1726; d. there, April 22, 1787. He was a violinist in the court chapel at Vienna; from 1760 to 1770 he was court composer in St. Petersburg, where he produced 2 ballets: Floras Sieg and L'Amore medico. After his return to Vienna, he became very popular as a composer of ballets, of which he produced about 20; also wrote instrumental music. 2 divertimentos by Starzer are reprinted in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 31). —Cf. L. Braun, Die Balletkomposition von J. Starzer, in 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 13).

Stasny, Carl Richard, German pianist; b. Mainz, March 16, 1855; d. Boston, April 22, 1920. He studied with Brüll in Vienna, and later was a pupil of Liszt in Weimar (1879-81); while working as piano teacher at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt, he made a special study of Schumann's works with Clara Schumann. In 1891 he settled in Boston, where he taught at the New England Cons. He publ. Finger Training, Scales, Chords and Arpeggios.

Stasny, Ludwig, popular bandmaster; b. Prague, Feb. 26, 1823; d. Frankfurt, Oct. 30, 1883. He studied at the Prague Cons.; was bandmaster in the Austrian Army, and settled in Frankfurt in 1871. He produced 2 operas in Mainz: Liane (1851) and Die beiden Grenadiere (1879). He was noted for his popular dances (211 opus numbers) and for his potpourris from Wagner's music dramas.

Stasov, Vladimir Vassilievitch, famous Russian writer on music; b. St. Petersburg, Jan. 14, 1824; d. there, Oct. 23, 1906. He attended a law school until 1843; in 1845 he became connected with the St. Petersburg Public Library; then traveled in Italy as private secretary to Count Demidov; while in Rome, he made copies of rare works in the library of Abbate Santini (q.v.), which he later presented to the Public Library in St. Petersburg; he became assistant to the librarian there in 1854, and in 1872 was appointed director of the Dept. of Fine Arts, which post he held till his death. He played a very important role in the emergence of the Russian National School, and was to the end of his days an ardent promoter of Russian music. It was Stasov who first launched the expression 'The Mighty Company' (in an article publ. on May 24, 1867, in a St. Petersburg newspaper); although in that article he did not specifically name the so-called 'Five' (Balakirev, Borodin, Cui, Mussorgsky, Rimsky-Korsakov), these composers became identified with the cause championed by Stasov. When young Glazunov appeared on the scene, Stasov declared him a natural heir to the Five. His numerous writings, including biographies of Glinka, Mussorgsky, and others, have the value of authenticity. Those publ. between 1847 and 1886 were issued in book-form in honor of his 70th birthday (St. Petersburg, 1894) in 3 vols.; a 4th vol., containing essays written between 1886 and 1904, was brought out in 1905; among them, Russian Music during the last 25 years, and Art in the 19th Century are particularly important. His collected works, including articles on art and other subjects, were publ. in Moscow in 1952. —Cf. To the Memory of Vladimir Stasov (St. Petersburg, 1910); V. D. Komarova (his niece), V. V. Stasov (St. Petersburg, 1927; 2 vols.); T. Livanova, Stasov and the Russian Classical Opera (Moscow, 1957).

Stassevitch (stah-seh'-vitch), Paul, violinist and conductor; b. Simferopol, Crimea, May 5, 1894. He studied both violin and piano; was a pupil of Auer (violin) and Nikolayev (piano) at the St. Petersburg Cons. As a violinist, he toured in Scandinavia (1914-19); settled in the U. S. in 1919, and produced a considerable sensation at his début as violinist and pianist with the N. Y. State Symph. Orch., Dec.

16, 1924, playing Tchaikovsky's 1st piano concerto and the violin concerto of Brahms; on Jan. 31, 1930, he made his 1st appearance as conductor, at an extra concert of the N. Y. Philharmonic; also was concertmaster of the Conductorless Orch., N. Y., in 1929. However, he did not pursue his career as a virtuoso or conductor, devoting himself mainly to teaching.

Statkowski (stat-kov'-skē), Roman, Polish composer; b. Szczypiorna, Jan. 5, 1860; d. Warsaw, Nov. 12, 1925. He studied law at the Univ. of Warsaw, graduating in 1886. At the same time he took lessons in composition with Zelenki. In 1886 he entered the St. Petersburg Cons. as a student of Soloviev (composition) and Rimsky-Korsakov (orchestration). In 1904 he returned to Warsaw, where he became prof. of music history and later of composition, retaining these positions until his death. He wrote mainly for piano and for violin; successfully stylized Polish dances; his violin pieces retain their popularity in Poland. He further wrote the operas, Filenis (Warsaw, Sept. 14, 1904; won 1st prize at the International Opera Contest in London) and Maria (Warsaw, March 1, 1906); a Polonaise for orch.; a Fantasy for orch.; 6 string quartets. His style represents a blend of German and Russian influences.

Staudigl (shtou'-dēgl), Josef, Sr., famous Austrian bass singer; b. Wöllersdorf, April 14, 1807; d. insane at Michaelbeuerngrund, near Vienna, March 18, 1861. He gave up the study of medicine to join the chorus at the Vienna court opera, later becoming leading bass; then was at the Theater an der Wien (1845-48); from 1848 till 1854 was again at the court opera. He also appeared as concert singer.

Staudigl, Josef, Jr., baritone, son of the preceding; b. Vienna, March 18, 1850; d. Karlsruhe, April, 1916. He studied with Rokitansky at the Vienna Cons.; in 1884-86 was principal baritone at the Metropolitan Opera House, where he created the role of Pogner in the American première of Die Meistersinger (Jan. 4, 1886); then sang until his retirement in 1905 at various German theaters (Berlin, Hamburg, Bayreuth, etc.), often together with his wife, the contralto Gisela Koppmayer, whom he married in 1885. In the spring of 1898 they sang with the Damrosch-Ellis Opera Co. on an American tour.

Stavenhagen, Bernhard, German pianist; b. Greiz, Reuss, Nov. 24, 1862; d. Geneva, Dec. 26, 1914. He studied in Berlin with Kiel; was one of the last pupils of Liszt, with whom he studied in 1885-86. After a tour as pianist in Europe and the U. S., he became court conductor at Weimar in 1895; in 1898 he obtained a similar position in Munich, where he was also for a few years director of the 'Akademie der Tonkunst' (1901-04); in 1907 he went to Geneva, where he conducted the municipal orch. He wrote 2 piano concertos and other piano works; publ. cadenzas to Beethoven's 2nd and 3rd piano concertos.

Stcherbatchev (shcher-bah-chö'v'), Vladimir Vladimirovitch, Russian composer; b. Warsaw, Jan. 24, 1889; d. Leningrad, March 5, 1952. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Maximilian Steinberg and Liadov, graduating in 1914. From 1924 to 1931 he was prof. at the Leningrad Cons.; among his students were Popov, Zhelobinsky, and other well-known composers. He wrote an opera, Anna Kolosova (1939); 5 symphonies (1914, 1926, 1932, 1935, 1948); music for films; an orchestral suite from one of them, The Thunderstorm, was popular at concerts in Russia; other works include a Fairy-Tale, for orch. (St. Petersburg, Dec. 20, 1915); a nonet (1917); several piano sonatas and other piano works.

Stearns, Theodore, American composer; b. Berea, Ohio, June 10, 1880; d. Los Angeles, Nov. 1, 1935. He studied at Oberlin Cons. and at the Cons. of Würzburg; returning to America, he conducted operetta; wrote music criticism in N. Y. (1922-26); went to Germany on a Guggenheim Fellowship (1927-28); in 1932 joined the faculty of the Univ. of California, Los Angeles. He wrote an opera-ballet in 1 act, Snowbird, to his own libretto, which was produced by the Chicago Civic Opera Co. on Jan. 13, 1923, and gained the Bispham Memorial Medal (1925); a lyric drama, Atlantis (1926); a symph. poem, Tiberio, and an orch. suite, Caprese. His orch. suite Before the Door of the Wigwam, from Hiawatha, was performed in Würzburg (April 29, 1897). He publ. The Story of Music (1931). —Cf. E. E. Hipsher, American Opera and its Composers (Philadelphia, 1934, pp. 387-91).

Stebbins, George Waring, American organist and composer; b. Albion, N. Y., June 16, 1869; d. New York, Feb. 21, 1930. He received his early education from his father, the well-known evangelist George C. Stebbins (1846-1945); then studied in N. Y.

with H. R. Shelley, and in Paris with Guilman. He filled various positions as church organist in Brooklyn and N. Y. (from 1893); publ. a number of works for organ (Wedding Song, A Song of Joy, Scherzando, etc.), anthems, choruses, songs.

Steber, Eleanor, American soprano; b. Wheeling, W. Va., July 17, 1916. She studied at the New England Cons., Boston, and with Paul Althouse in N. Y. In 1940 she won the Metropolitan Opera radio audition and made a brilliant début in Der Rosenkavalier in the same year. She created the title role in Samuel Barber's opera Vanessa (N. Y., Metropolitan Opera, Jan. 15, 1958).

Stecker, Karel, Czech organist and writer on music; b. Kosmanos, Jan. 22, 1861; d. Prague, March 13, 1918. He was a pupil of the Organ School in Prague; taught organ there (1885-89); became prof. of theory and organ at the Prague Cons. in 1889. He publ. a history of music (in Czech, 2 vols.; 1892, 1903); a treatise on musical form (Prague, 1905), and a volume on non-thematic improvisation (1903); composed a Missa solennis and other church music; some instrumental works. —Cf. C. Sychra, Karel Stecker (Prague, 1948).

Štědroň, Bohumír, Czech musicologist; b. Vyškov, Dec. 30, 1905. He studied history and musicology at Brno; in 1930 became a school teacher for general subjects; also gave courses in music history at the Brno Cons.; from 1946 to 1951 he was in charge of Music Education Dept. at Brno Univ. He publ. monographs on Czech composers, and contributed to various periodicals. Edited Leoš Janáček; Letters and Reminiscences (in Czech, 1946; in English, 1955).

Štědroň, Vladimír, Czech composer, brother of Bohumír Štědroň; b. Vyškov, March 30, 1900. He studied law in Prague and became a judge; simultaneously he took music courses with J. B. Foerster and Suk. He has composed several symphonic works in an unassuming style inspired by native folk-songs; also some chamber music.

Steele, Porter, American composer; b. Natchez, Miss., Dec. 12, 1880. He studied with Horatio Parker at Yale Univ. Having completed his law studies at Columbia Univ., he was admitted to the bar in 1905, and was a practicing lawyer in N. Y. until 1934, while devoting his spare time to composition. He made his home in Plainfield, N. J. He wrote mostly in small forms; publ.

piano pieces (At Longwood, Poème Lyrique, At Sunset, etc.); songs (The Seagull, etc.).

Stefan, Paul, writer on music; b. Brno, Nov. 25, 1879; d. New York, Nov. 12, 1943. He was educated at the Univ. of Vienna; studied music theory with Hermann Grädener. He became associated with the avant-garde in Vienna, and was appointed editor of the progressive musical periodical, 'Musikblätter des Anbruch'; was a co-founder of the International Society for Contemporary Music in 1922. In 1938 he went to Switzerland; then was in Lisbon (1939-41); arrived in the U. S. in 1941. His books on music include Gustav Mahler (1910; 7th ed., 1921; also in English, N. Y., 1913); Oskar Fried (1911); Die Feindschaft gegen Wagner (1919); Das neue Haus, a history of the Vienna Opera (1919); Neue Musik und Wien (1921; also in English); Der Musiker Hoffmann (1922); Arnold Schönberg (1924); Franz Schubert (1928); Geschichte der Wiener Oper (1932); Arturo Toscanini (1935; 3rd ed., 1937; English transl., N. Y., 1936); Bruno Walter (1936); brought out an abridged German transl. of Sourek's biography of Dvořák (Vienna, 1935; in English, N. Y., 1941); Georges Bizet (Zürich, 1952); publ. essays on Don Giovanni (1938) and Die Zauberflöte (1937) and various studies in European and American journals.

Stefani, Jan, composer and conductor; b. Prague, 1746; d. Warsaw, Feb. 24, 1829. He was Kapellmeister to Count Kinsky and violinist in the orch. of the Vienna Opera. In 1771 he entered the service of Stanislaus Poniatowski in Warsaw, and became conductor of the Warsaw Opera. He wrote several Polish operas, of which Krakowiacy i Górale (The Cracovites and the Mountaineers), produced in Warsaw on March 1, 1794, was very successful, and remained in the repertory for 65 years. Other operas (all produced in Warsaw) were: Król w kraju rozkoszy (Feb. 3, 1787); Wdzieczni poddani panu (July 24, 1796); Frozyňa (Feb. 21, 1806); Rotmistrz Gorecki (April 3, 1807). He also wrote a great number of polonaises.

Stefani, Józef, Polish composer and conductor, son of Jan Stefani; b. Warsaw, April 16, 1800; d. there, 1864. He was a pupil of his father and of Chopin's teacher, Elsner; conducted ballet at the Warsaw Opera, and wrote a number of light operas, which enjoyed a modicum of success during his lifetime: Dawne czasy (April 26, 1826); Lekcja botaniki (March 15, 1829); Figle panien (Aug. 6, 1832); Talizman (Dec. 7, 1849); Zyd wieczny tułacz (Jan. 1, 1850); Piorun (May 21, 1856); Trwoga wieczorna (posthumous, July 25, 1872). He also wrote church music, which was often performed in religious services in Poland.

Steffan, Joseph Anton, composer; b. Kopidlno, Bohemia, March 14, 1726; d. Vienna, April 12, 1797. A pupil of Wagenseil, he settled in Vienna, where he was a renowned teacher; among his pupils were the princesses Marie Antoinette (later Queen of France) and Caroline (later Queen of Naples). He wrote some church music and numerous works for piano (divertimentos, concertos, and sonatas); he is historically important for his songs, Sammlung deutscher Lieder (4 books), which are among the best of that time. Specimens were publ. by M. Friedlaender in Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (1902); see also 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (vol. 79).

Steffani, Abbate Agostino, Italian composer; b. Castelfranco Veneto, July 25, 1654; d. Frankfurt, Feb. 12, 1728. He began his musical career as a choirboy at Padua, where his beautiful soprano voice so charmed Count Tattenbach that the latter obtained permission to take him to the Electoral court at Munich, where he was trained by Kerll from 1668-71; from 1672-74 he studied at Rome with E. Bernabei at the Elector's expense, and in 1675 was appointed court organist at Munich. In 1678-79 he visited Paris, where he made an advantageous study of Lully's music. He took holy orders in 1680 and was made titular Abbot of Lepising in 1682. In 1681 he became director of the Elector's chamber music (together with G. A. Bernabei, his former teacher's son). He composed his first opera, Marco Aurelio, in 1680, for Munich; other operas: Solone (1685), Audacia e rispetto (1685), Servio Tullio (1686), Alarico (1687), and Niobe (1688), followed; in 1688 he went to Hanover as court Kapellmeister. There he brought out the opera Enrico detto il Leone (Jan. 30, 1689), the orchestration of which is noteworthy (besides the string quartet, there are flutes, oboes, bassoons, 3 trumpets, and drums; all the wind instruments have obbligato passages); further, La Lotta d'Ercole con Acheloo (1689); La Superbia d'Alessandro (1690; revised in 1691 as Il Zelo di Leonato); Orlando generoso (1691); Le Rivali concordi, or Atlanta (1693); La Libertà contenta (1693); I Baccanali (1695); Il Trionfo del fato, or Le Glorie d'Enea (1695; given at Brunswick in 1716 as Enea in Italia, or Didone); Briseide (1696); and for Düsseldorf: Arminio (1707); Tassilone (1709); and Amor vien dal destino ossia Il Turno Aricino (1709). Long before this, however, his services had been more in demand as a diplomatist than as a musician; in 1696 he had brought to a triumphant conclusion the delicate negotiations for the creation of a ninth Elector of Brunswick, being rewarded by the appointment of Bishop of Spiga ('in partibus'); from 1698 he was privy councillor and papal protonotary at Düsseldorf, though still holding his position as Kapellmeister at Hanover till 1711, when he joyfully relinquished it to Handel. Some works of the later epoch were produced under the name of his copyist, Gregorio Piva. — Publ. works: Psalmodia vespertina a 8 (1674); Sacer Janus Quadrifrons (1685; motets a 3, with continuo; any voice may be omitted at pleasure); Sonate da camera a 2 violini, alto e continuo (1679); Duetti da camera a soprano e contralto con il basso continuo (1683; historically important and intrinsically valuable); and the pamphlet Quanta certezza habbia da' suoi principii la musica (Amsterdam, 1695; German by Werckmeister, 1699, and Albrecht, 1760). In MS he left 85 chamber duets with continuo (16 of these, with 2 scherzi for 1 voice with instruments and 2 church cantatas, were publ. by A. Einstein and A. Sandberger in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' VI, 2); a chamber cantata for soprano and continuo (publ. by T. W. Werner in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' I, 8); a famous Stabat Mater for 6 voices and 2 violins, 3 violas, cello, and continuo (organ); also 4 vols. of short cantatas and arias. H. Riemann publ. Alarico (complete score; also full bibliography of all Steffani's operas) in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' XI, 2, also selections from other operas in vol. XII, 2. — BIBLIOGRAPHY: F. M. Rudhart, Geschichte der Oper am Hofe zu München (Freising, 1865); G. Fischer, Musik in Hannover (2nd ed., Hanover, 1902); A. Neisser, Servio Tullio . . . von A. S. (dissertation, Leipzig, 1902); A. Untersteiner, A. S., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (vol. XIV; 1907); P. Hildebrandt, Preussen und die römische Kurie (Berlin, 1910; vol. I contains material concerning S.); H. Riemann, A. S. als Opernkomponist, in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern' (XII, 2; 1912); R. de Rensis, A. S., in 'Musica d'oggi' (1921); T. W. Werner, A. S.s Operntheater in Hannover, in 'Archiv für Musikforschung' (1938); also articles on Steffani by A. Einstein in 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch'

(vol. XXIII, 1910), in 'Neue Musik-Zeitung' (1928), and in 'Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' X, 6; J. Loschelder, Aus Düsseldorf italienischer Zeit in K. G. Fellerer, ed., Beiträge zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Düsseldorf (Cologne, 1952). The authorship of Memoirs of the Life of A. S., publ. in London in the 18th century, is attributed to Sir John Hawkins.

Steggall, Charles, English organist and composer; b. London, June 3, 1826; d. there, June 7, 1905. He was a pupil of Sterndale Bennett at the Royal Academy of Music; became prof. there in 1851. After 52 years of continued service, he resigned his professorship in 1903. He wrote anthems and other religious music; edited 'Church Psalmody' (1848), 'Hymns Ancient and Modern' (1889), etc. — His son, Reginald Steggall (b. London, April 17, 1867; d. there, Nov. 16, 1938), was also a pupil at the Royal Academy of Music, where he taught organ playing from 1895. He wrote a number of organ pieces; a Mass; a symphony; orchestral variations and overtures.

Steglich, Rudolf, German musicologist; b. Rats-Damnitz, Feb. 18, 1886; studied musicology with Hugo Riemann in Leipzig (Dr. phil., 1911). He was in the German army during World War I; then was active as music critic of the Hanover 'Anzeiger' (1919-29); in 1929, appointed to the faculty of the Univ. of Erlangen. He was editor of the 'Händel-Jahrbuch' (1928-33) and of the 'Archiv für Musikforschung' (1936-40); edited works by Bach's sons, old German song collections, etc. — Publications: Die 'Quaestiones in musica': ein Choraltraktat des zentralen Mittelalters (Leipzig, 1911); Die elementare Dynamik des musikalischen Rhythmus (Leipzig, 1930); J. S. Bach (Potsdam, 1935); G. F. Händel: Leben und Werk (Leipzig, 1939); Wege zu Bach (Regensburg, 1949); numerous essays.

Stegmayer, Ferdinand, Austrian conductor and composer; b. Vienna, Aug. 25, 1803; d. there, May 6, 1863. He was the son of Matthaeus Stegmayer (q.v.); studied music with Seyfried; was chorusrmaster at Linz and Vienna; then conductor of a German opera troupe in Paris (1829-30). After filling various engagements as theater conductor in Leipzig, Bremen, and Prague, he settled in Vienna in 1848; was teacher of singing at the Vienna Cons.; co-founder, with August Schmidt, of the Vienna 'Singakademie' (1858). He publ. some church music; piano pieces; songs.

Stegmayer, Matthaeus, Austrian actor-poet and composer; b. Vienna, April 29, 1771; d. there, May 10, 1820. He was a chorister in the Dominican church, Vienna; then after singing in small provincial theatrical companies, he returned in 1793 to Vienna, where he sang at the Josephstadt theater; made his début as a singer at Schikaneder's theater Auf der Wieden in 1796; then was briefly at the court opera; in 1804 became chorusmaster at the new Theater an der Wien. He was the first to use the term 'quodlibet' for theatrical light pieces; arranged Mozart's Schauspieldirektor (1814); composed an operetta, Der Salzburger Hans und sein Sohn, der Hansl (Vienna, Nov. 14, 1800), and contributed separate numbers to many others (mainly with Ignaz von Seyfried). He wrote the text for the quodlibet Rochus Pumpnickel, produced at the Theater an der Wien on Jan. 28, 1809, with music assembled by Seyfried from various works, including pieces by Haydn and Mozart. It was so successful that he followed it with a sequel, Die Familie Pumpnickel (Feb. 13, 1810). A complete list of his works as composer, joint composer, and librettist is found in Anton Bauer, Opern und Operetten in Wien (Vienna, 1955).

Stehle, J. Gustav Eduard, organist and composer; b. Steinhausen, Germany, Feb. 17, 1839; d. St. Gall, Switzerland, June 21, 1915. He was organist in Rorschach (1869-74); in 1874 he settled in Switzerland as music director at the St. Gall Cathedral. His cathedral choir of 140 voices was famous as one of the finest in Europe. For 25 years he also was editor of the 'Chorwächter.' He wrote a great deal of religious music: an oratorio, Legende von der heiligen Cäcilia; a cantata, Lumen de Coelo (to words by Pope Leo XIII); Die Nonnen von Compiègne, for double chorus; Frühjohs Heimkehr, for solo, male quartet, and mixed chorus; Die Heintzelmannchen, humorous choral ballad for double chorus a cappella; a symph. poem for organ, Saul; 438 preludes in the church modes, etc. —Cf. A. Locher, J.-G.-E. Stehle (Strasbourg, 1928).

Stehle, Sophie, German soprano; b. Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, May 15, 1838; d. Schloss Harterode, near Hanover, Oct. 4, 1921. She was a prominent member of the Munich Opera, where she created the roles of Fricka in Das Rheingold (Sept. 22, 1869) and Brünnhilde in Die Walküre (June 26, 1870). She also distinguished herself in other Wagnerian parts (Elisabeth, Elsa, Eva).

Steibelt (shti'-belt), Daniel, popular pianist and composer; b. Berlin, Oct. 22, 1765; d. St. Petersburg, Oct. 2, 1823. He studied with Kirnberger (piano and theory); published sonatas for piano and violin, as op. 1 and 2, at Munich, in 1788; then gave concerts in Germany, proceeding to Paris in 1790. There he found himself in strong competition with Ignaz Pleyel, but won out, and became a favorite piano teacher in Paris. His opera Roméo et Juliette was produced at the Théâtre Feydeau on Sept. 10, 1793, and despite the revolutionary turmoil of the time, achieved an excellent success. He left Paris in 1796, going to Holland, and then to London; became a soloist at Salomon's Concerts; played the solo part of his 3rd piano concerto (March 19, 1798), with its famous finale L'Orage, précédé d'un rondeau pastoral, which as a piano solo became as popular as Koczura's Battle of Prague. In London he produced an opera, Albert and Adelaide (Covent Garden, Dec. 11, 1798); returned to Germany in 1799; then proceeded to Vienna, where he challenged Beethoven to a contest of skill, but was easily bested. His next destination was Paris, where he produced Haydn's Creation (Dec. 24, 1800), with an orchestra of 156 players, in an arrangement by Steibelt himself. Napoleon was present at that performance. A ballet by Steibelt, Le Retour de Zéphire, was produced at the Paris Opéra on March 3, 1802; he then went to London, where he staged 2 ballets, Le Jugement du berger Paris (May 24, 1804) and La belle Laitière (Jan. 26, 1805). Returning once more to Paris, he wrote a festive intermezzo, La Fête de Mars, to celebrate Napoleon's victory at Austerlitz; it was produced at the Opéra on March 4, 1806. In the autumn of 1808 he gave concerts in Frankfurt and Dresden; in the spring of 1809 he went to Russia by way of Warsaw, Vilna, and Riga. In St. Petersburg he produced a new opera, Cendrillon, to a French libretto (Oct. 26, 1810), and 2 ballets. Although he held the position of chapelmaster at the court of Czar Alexander I, he did not prosper, and at his death a public subscription was undertaken to help his family. He publ. 5 piano concertos, 37 sonatas with violin, 29 sonatas and sonatinas for piano solo, 15 rondos, 18 fantasias, etc. His Méthode de Piano had considerable vogue. —Cf. G. Müller, Daniel Steibelt, sein Leben und seine Klavierwerke (Strasbourg, 1933).

Steigleder (shteyg'-lē-der), Johann Ulrich, German organist and composer; b. Schwäbisch-Hall, March 21, 1593; d. Stuttgart, Oct.

10, 1635. He was organist at Lindau and then at Stuttgart (1617), serving also as musician to the court of Württemberg. Two of his publications survive: Ricercar Tabulatura, organis et organoedis . . . (1624) and Tabulatur-Buch, containing 40 variations for organ and other instruments, upon the Lord's Prayer (Strasbourg, 1627). Two variations are to be found in Ritter's Geschichte des Orgelspiels im 14.-18. Jahrhundert (1884; new ed. by Frotcher, 1933). —Cf. E. Emsheimer, J. U. Steigleder (dissertation, Kassel, 1928).

Stein, Erwin, Austrian conductor and editor; b. Vienna, Nov. 7, 1885; d. London, July 17, 1958. He studied with Schoenberg; was engaged as opera conductor in Germany; from 1924 till 1938 was an editor for the Universal Edition, Vienna. He settled in London in 1938 and joined the firm of Boosey & Hawkes; wrote for music magazines; publ. a collection of essays, Orpheus in New Guises (London, 1953).

Stein, Fritz, eminent German musicologist; b. Gerlachsheim, Baden, Dec. 17, 1879. He studied theology in Karlsruhe, then took courses in musicology with Ph. Wolfrum in Heidelberg; subsequently went to Leipzig, where he studied conducting with Arthur Nikisch and organ with Straube; also attended Riemann's lectures at the Univ. of Leipzig; Dr. phil. (Heidelberg, 1910) with the dissertation Zur Geschichte der Musik in Heidelberg (publ. 1912; new ed. 1921, as Geschichte des Musikwesens in Heidelberg bis zum Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts). In 1913 he was appointed prof. of musicology at the Univ. of Jena; was in the German army during World War I, and directed a male chorus for the troops at the front. He was prof. at the Kiel Univ. from 1918 to 1925; in 1933 he became director of the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin, holding this position to the end of the war and the collapse of the Nazi regime in 1945; conducted a few concerts in Berlin-Charlottenburg in 1950. He achieved great notoriety when he discovered in the library of the Univ. of Jena the parts of a symphony, marked by an unknown copyist as a work by Beethoven. The symphony became famous as the 'Jena Symphony' and was hailed by many as a genuine discovery; the score was publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel in 1911, and performances followed all over the world; Stein publ. his own exegesis of it as Eine unbekannte Jugendsymphonie Beethovens, in the 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1912, 1). Doubts of its authenticity were often expressed, but it was not until 1957 that the American musicologist H. C. Robbins Landon finally succeeded in proving that the 'Jena Symphony' was in reality the work of Friedrich Witt (1770-1837). Stein publ. a monograph on Max Reger (Potsdam, 1939) and Max Reger: sein Leben in Bildern (a pictorial biography; Leipzig, 1941; 2nd ed., 1956); brought out a thematic catalogue of Reger's works (Leipzig, 1934; definitive ed., 1953); edited works by Johann Christian Bach, Telemann, Handel, Beethoven, etc.; contributed essays to numerous learned publications. A 'Festschrift' was publ. for him on his 60th birthday (1939).

Stein, Johann Andreas, inventor of the 'German' (Viennese) piano action; b. Heidelesheim, Palatinate, May 6, 1728; d. Augsburg, Feb. 29, 1792. He was trained in the Strasbourg workshop of J. A. Silbermann (1748-49). In 1751 he settled in Augsburg, where he built the organ of the Barfüsserkirche; was appointed organist there in 1757. He spent a few months in Paris in 1758 before returning to Augsburg. He experimented with various types of keyboard instruments; invented a 'polytoni-clavichordium' (1769), a 'melodika' (1772), a 'vis-à-vis,' and a 'Saitenharmonika' (1789). The business was carried on by his son, Andreas Stein, and his daughter, Nanette Stein-Streicher (wife of the Austrian piano maker, J. B. Streicher, q.v.), who moved it to Vienna in 1802. —Cf. F. Luib, Biographische Skizze des J. A. Stein (1886); T. Bolte, Die Musikerfamilien Stein und Streicher (Vienna, 1917); K. A. Fischer, J. A. Stein (Augsburg, 1932); Eva Hertz, J. A. Stein: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Klavierbaues (Würzburg, 1937); Donald Boalch, Makers of the Harpsichord and Clavichord, 1440 to 1840 (London, 1956; pp. 117-18).

Stein, Richard Heinrich, German writer on music and composer; b. Halle, Feb. 28, 1882; d. Santa Brigida, Canary Islands, Aug. 11, 1942. He studied law and music; Dr. phil. (Erlangen, 1911) with the thesis, Die psychologischen Grundlagen der Ethik. From 1914 to 1919 he lived in Spain; from 1920 to 1932 taught musical subjects in Berlin. In 1933 he left Germany and went to the Canary Islands, where he remained until his death. He was a composer of experimental tendencies; his Zwei Konzertstücke for cello and piano, op. 26 (1906), was the first composition containing quarter-tones to be published. In 1909 he wrote a brochure giving a detailed exposition of his quarter-tone system, and in 1914 he built a quarter-tone clarinet. He composed about 100 piano pieces and about 50 songs; a Scherzo fantastico for orch.; publ. the books La Música moderna (Barcelona, 1918; in Spanish and German), Grieg (1921), Tschai-kowsky (1927).

Steinbach, Fritz, German conductor; b. Grünsfeld, June 17, 1855; d. Munich, Aug. 13, 1916. He studied in Leipzig, Vienna, and Karlsruhe. In 1880 he was appointed 2nd Kapellmeister in Mainz, where his interpretations of Beethoven and Brahms won praise; Brahms recommended him as successor to Hans von Bülow at Meiningen (1886); in 1902 he went to Cologne as director of the cons. there; resigned in 1914 and settled in Munich. He made frequent appearances in London as conductor, and in the spring of 1906 was engaged by the N. Y. Philharmonic to conduct a pair of concerts.

Steinberg, Maximilian, Russian composer and pedagogue; b. Vilna, July 4, 1883; d. Leningrad, Dec. 6, 1946. He studied at the St. Petersburg Cons. with Glazunov and Rimsky-Korsakov (whose daughter he married on June 17, 1908). In 1908 he was appointed teacher of theory and composition there. His early compositions reflected the influence of his teachers, but gradually he evolved a more personal style distinguished by rhapsodic eloquence, and somewhat touched with procedures of French Impressionism. In 1934 he was appointed director of the Leningrad Cons., and maintained the high standards established before him by Rimsky-Korsakov and Glazunov. Among his pupils were Shostakovitch, Shaporin, and other prominent composers of the Soviet period. —Works: symph. no. 1 (1907); symph. no. 2 (St. Petersburg, Nov. 27, 1909); Metamorphoses, ballet (2nd part performed by Diaghilev, Paris, June 2, 1914); La Princesse Maleine, after Maeterlinck, for orch. and women's chorus (1916); Heaven and Earth, dramatic poem for 6 soloists and orch. (1918); symph. no. 3 (Leningrad, March 3, 1929, composer conducting); symph. no. 4 subtitled Turksib, to celebrate the opening of the Turkestan-Siberian railroad (Leningrad, Dec. 2, 1933); In Armenia, symph. picture (Leningrad, Dec. 24, 1940); a violin concerto (1946); 2 string quartets, etc. He also wrote a number of lyric songs and piano pieces. He made several arrangements of Turkmenian songs for voice and orch.; also arranged for orch. a concerto in D by K. P. E. Bach (1911) and a cello sonata by Gaillard (1924); edited Rimsky-Korsakov's Foundations of Orchestration (St. Petersburg, 1913; 2 vols.). —Cf. A. N. Rimsky-Korsakov, Maximilian Steinberg (Moscow, 1928; in Russian and German).

Steinberg, William, eminent conductor; b. Cologne, Aug. 1, 1899. He received his early instruction from his mother; studied piano and violin; began to compose as a youth; conducted his own setting for chorus and orch. of a poem from Ovid's Metamorphoses in school at the age of 13; then took courses with Franz Bölsche (counterpoint), Lazzaro Uzielli (piano), and Hermann Abendroth (conducting). He graduated from the Cologne Cons. in 1920, obtaining the Wüllner Prize for conducting; then became assistant to Otto Klemperer at the Cologne Opera; in 1924, became 1st conductor. In 1925, he was engaged as conductor of the German Theater in Prague; in 1929, appointed general music director of the Frankfurt Opera. At Frankfurt he brought out several modern operas, including Berg's Wozzeck. In 1933 he was removed from his position by the Nazi authorities, and became associated with the Jewish Culture League, conducting orchestras for Jewish audiences. In 1936 he left Germany and became one of the conductors of the Palestine Orch.; prepared the orchestra for Toscanini, who subsequently engaged him as assistant conductor of the NBC Symph., N. Y. in 1937; he was also guest conductor with major American orchestras. In 1945 he was appointed conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orch.; in 1952 became conductor of the Pittsburgh Symph., and established himself as one of the leading conductors in the U. S.; in 1958 he accepted an additional position as conductor of the London Philharmonic (4 weeks in midwinter, and 4 weeks in the spring). —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 207-14).

Steiner, Jakob. See Stainer.

Steiner, Max (Maximilian Raoul), composer and arranger; b. Vienna, May 10, 1888. He studied at the Vienna Cons. with R. Fuchs, H. Grädener, and also had lessons with Mahler. He wrote an operetta at the age of 14. He went to England in 1904 and to Paris in 1911; settled in America in 1914; conducted musical comedies in N. Y.; in 1929, moved to Hollywood as film composer and conductor. He wrote the music for the motion pictures The Informer, Life With Father, Gone With the Wind, etc.

Steinert, Alexander Lang, American composer, conductor, and arranger; b. Boston, Sept. 21, 1900. He graduated from Harvard Univ. (1922); studied composition with Loeffler in Boston; also with Koehlin and Vincent d'Indy in Paris; took courses in counterpoint with Gedalge at the Paris Cons. In 1927 he received the American Prix de Rome, and spent the next 3 years at the American Academy in Rome. He conducted opera in N. Y. and Los Angeles; became associated with motion picture work as conductor and arranger in Hollywood. He was in charge of music in the First Motion Picture Unit with the U. S. Army at Culver City, Cal. (1942-45); after 1945, lived mostly in California, spending some months of the year in N. Y. His music bears the imprint of French Impressionism. —Works: for orch.: Nuit méridionale (Boston, Oct. 15, 1926); Leggenda sinfonica (Rome, 1930; Boston, March 13, 1931); Concerto sinfonico, for piano and orch. (Boston, Feb. 8, 1935, composer soloist); Air Corps Suite (1942); Flight Cycle (1944); Rhapsody for clarinet and orch. (1945); The Nightingale and the Rose, after Oscar Wilde, for speaker and orch. (Philadelphia, March 31, 1950); choral works; chamber music (violin sonata, piano trio); piano sonata, etc.

Steingraber, Theodor, German music publisher; b. Neustadt-on-the-Orla, Jan. 25, 1830; d. Leipzig, April 5, 1904. The son of a piano maker, he founded a music publishing firm, bearing his own name, in Leipzig in 1878; later the business was located in Hanover for a short time, and in 1890 it was established in Leipzig again. Under the pseudonym Gustav Damm, Steingraber publ. a piano method (1868). From 1903 to 1916 the business was managed by Steingraber's son-in-law, Walter Friedel; from 1918-26 the latter's son-in-law, G. Heinrich, was head of the firm; in 1920 he bought the 'Neue Zeitschrift für Musik,' which he publ. thenceforth as 'Zeitschrift für Musik.' In 1926 control of the business passed to Steingraber's daughters, Clara and Mathilde. —Steingraber's son, Johann George (b. Berlin, Jan. 1, 1858; d. there, March 16, 1932), was a piano maker; he came to the U. S. and worked for Steinway & Sons in N. Y.; from 1907 he lived in Berlin; made excellent harpsichords.

Steingruber, Ilona, Austrian soprano; b. Vienna, Feb. 8, 1912. She studied piano and voice; was on the staff of the Vienna Opera from 1948 to 1951. In 1946 she married the composer Friedrich Wildgans (q.v.).

Steinhard, Erich, Czech musicologist; b. Prague, May 26, 1886; d. in a concentration camp in Czechoslovakia, c. 1944. He was a pupil of K. Knittl and V. Novák (theory); studied musicology with J. Wolf, H. Kretschmar, and M. Friedlaender in Berlin; Dr. phil. Prague, 1911 (with a thesis on organum). He became librarian of the Univ. of Prague; from 1921, ed. of 'Der Auftakt' and from 1929 music critic for the 'Prager Tageblatt.' —Writings: Andreas Hamerschmidt (Prague, 1914); Gliederung neuerer deutscher Tonkunst in der Tschechoslowakei ('Almanach,' Prague, 1922); Junge Musik der Tschechoslowakei ('Die Musik,' 1925); Zur deutschen Musik in der Tschechoslowakischen Republik (2nd part of V. Helfert's Geschichte der Musik in der Tschechoslowakischen Republik; Prague, 1936); Musikgeschichte von der Urzeit zur Gegenwart (with G. Černušák; 1936).

Steinhardt, Milton, American musicologist; b. Miami, Okla. Nov. 13, 1909. He studied at the Univ. of Kansas; in 1929 went to Europe, where he studied at the Munich Akademie der Tonkunst and in Paris with Maurice Hewitt (violin); returning to the U. S., he enrolled in the Eastman School of Music; B.M., 1936; M.M., 1937; then studied with Otto Kinkeldey at Cornell Univ., and at N. Y. Univ. with Curt Sachs and Gustave Reese; Ph.D., 1950. Was instructor at Michigan State Univ., 1948-50; associate prof., Ohio Univ., 1950-51; from 1951, associate prof. at the Univ. of Kansas. In 1958 he received a Guggenheim Fellowship. He publ. Jacobus Vaet and His Motets (East Lansing, Mich., 1951); edited Jacobus Vaet, Zwei Hymnen, in vol. 8 of the series 'Musik alter Meister' (1958); contributed articles on various musical subjects to American and European publications.

Steinitzer, Max, writer on music; b. Innsbruck, Jan. 20, 1864; d. Leipzig, June 21, 1936. Pupil of A. Kirchner (piano) and J. Hüttner (theory) in Munich; Dr. phil. (Munich, 1885) with the dissertation Über die psychologischen Wirkungen der musikalischen Formen. He subsequently conducted theater orchestras in Germany; 1903-11, prof. at the Cons. in Freiburg, Breisgau; 1911-30, music critic of the 'Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten.' An intimate friend of Richard Strauss from boyhood, he wrote a comprehensive and authoritative biography of him. —Publications: Die menschlichen und tierischen Gemütsbewegungen (1889); Musikalische Strafpredigten (1901; 12th ed., 1926); Musikgeschichtlicher Atlas. Eine Beispielsammlung zu jeder Musikgeschichte (1908); Merkbüchlein für Mitglieder von Männerchoren (1908); Richard Strauss (1911; 2nd ed., entirely rewritten, 1914; 3rd revised ed., 1927); Richard Strauss in seiner Zeit (1914; 2nd ed., 1922); Zur Entwicklungsgeschichte des Melodrams und Mimodrams (1919); Meister des Gesanges (1920); Auf Flügeln des Gesanges (1920); Das Leipziger Gewandhaus im neuen Heim unter Carl Reinecke (1924); Tschaikowsky (1925); Beethoven (1927); Pädagogik der Musik (1929); etc.

Steinway & Sons, piano manufacturers of New York and Hamburg. The founder of the firm was Heinrich (or Henry) Engelhard Steinweg (b. Wolfshagen, Germany, Feb. 15, 1797; d. New York, Feb. 7, 1871). He learned cabinet making and organ building at Goslar, and in 1818 entered the shop of an organ maker in Seesen, also becoming church-organist there. From about 1820 he became interested in piano making and worked hard to establish a business of his own. He married in 1825 and his first piano was probably finished at that time. In 1839 he exhibited 1 grand and 2 square pianos at the Brunswick State Fair, winning the gold medal. The Revolution of 1848 caused him to emigrate to America with his wife, 2 daughters, and 4 of his 5 sons: Charles (Christian Karl Gottlieb; b. Seesen, Jan. 4, 1829; d. there, March 31, 1865); Henry (Johann Heinrich Engelhard; b. Seesen, Oct. 29, 1830; d. N. Y., March 11, 1865); William (Johann Heinrich Wilhelm; b. Seesen, March 5, 1835; d. N. Y., Nov. 30, 1896), and (Georg August) Albert (b. Seesen, June 10, 1840; d. N. Y., May 14, 1877), leaving the management of the German business at Seesen in charge of the eldest son, (Christian Friedrich) Theodor (b. Seesen, Nov. 6, 1825; d. Brunswick, March 26, 1889). The family arrived in N. Y. on June 29, 1850, and for about 2 years father and sons worked in various piano factories there. On March 5, 1853, they established a factory of their own under the above firm-name, with premises in Varick St. In 1854 they won a gold medal for a square piano at the Metropolitan Fair in Washington, D. C. Their remarkable prosperity dates from 1855, when they took 1st prize for a square over-strung piano with cast-iron frame (an innovation then) at the N. Y. Industrial Exhibition. In 1856 they made their first grand, and in 1862 their first upright. Among the numerous honors subsequently received may be mentioned 1st prize medal at London, 1862; 1st grand gold medal of honor for all styles at Paris, 1867 (by unanimous verdict); and diplomas for 'highest degree of excellence in all styles' at Philadelphia, 1876. In 1864 the family name (Steinweg) was legally changed to Steinway. —In 1865, upon the death of his brothers Charles and Henry, Theodore S. gave up the Brunswick business (see Steinweg) and became a full partner in the N. Y. firm; he built Steinway Hall on 14th St., which, in addition to the offices and retail warerooms, housed a concert hall that became a leading center of N. Y. musical life. In 1925 headquarters were established in the Steinway Building on 57th St. Theodore S. was especially interested in the scientific aspects of piano construction and made a study of the acoustical theories of Helmholtz and Tyndall, which enabled him to introduce important improvements. He returned to Germany in 1870. —On May 17, 1876, the firm was incorporated and William S. was elected president; he opened a London branch in 1875, and established a European factory at Hamburg in 1880. In the latter year he also bought 400 acres of land on Long Island Sound and established there the village of Steinway (now part of L. I. City), where since 1910 the entire manufacturing plant has been located. William S. was for 14 years president of the N. Y. 'Deutsche Liedertafel.' —Control and active management of the business, now the largest of its kind in the world, has remained in the hands of the founder's descendants. Theodore E. Steinway (d. N. Y., April 8, 1957), grandson of Henry E. Steinway, was president from 1927; in 1955 he was succeeded by his son, Henry Steinway. —Cf. O. Floersheim, W. S. (Breslau, 1894); E. Hubbard, The Story of the Steinways (East Aurora, N. Y., 1911); A. Dolge, Pianos and Their Makers, vol. I (1911); Theodore E. Steinway, People and Pianos (N. Y., 1953).

Steinweg. Original name of the Steinway family. Christian Friedrich Theodore Steinweg continued the piano-making business established by his father (see Steinway & Sons) at Seesen until 1852, when he transferred it to Wolfenbüttel; in 1859 he moved it to Brunswick, carrying it on there until 1865, when he left for America. The business was then taken over by his partners, Grottrian, Helfferich, and Schulz ('Theodor Steinweg Nachfolger'). In 1886 Grottrian became sole owner, and the business was carried on by his sons Willi and Kurt, the firm-name being 'Grottrian-Steinweg.'

Stellfeld, Jean-Auguste, Belgian musicologist; b. Antwerp, Feb. 17, 1881; d. there, Sept. 16, 1952. He was a practicing lawyer, and a judge; at the same time he became associated with various musical organizations in Belgium; accumulated an enormously rich library of music, published and in MS, from the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries. After his death, the library was purchased by the Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor (cf. the article by L. E. Cuyler, G. A. Sutherland, and H. T. David in 'Notes,' Dec., 1954). He publ. Bronnen tot de geschiedenis der antwerpsche clavecimbel- en orgelbouwers in de XVIe en XVIIe eeuwen (Antwerp, 1942); Andries Pevernage (Louvain, 1943); Bibliographie des éditions musicales plantiniennes (Brussels, 1949).

Stenborg, Carl, Swedish composer; b. Stockholm, Sept. 25, 1752; d. Djurgården, Aug. 1, 1813. He studied at the Univ. of Upsala; from 1773 to 1806 was a singer at the Swedish Opera in Stockholm. His opera, Konung Gustaf Adolfs Jagt (Stockholm, June 25, 1777), is of significance as the first opera based on a Swedish historical subject.

Stendhal, famous French writer (real name, Marie-Henri Beyle); b. Grenoble, Jan. 23, 1783; d. Paris, March 23, 1842. He was a military official under Napoleon, taking part in the German and Russian campaigns; from 1815 he lived in Milan, Paris, and Rome; in 1830 became French consul at Trieste, and from 1831 in Civitavecchia. He is best known as a novelist (Le Rouge et le noir, La Chartreuse de Parme, etc.), but also wrote on music; under the pseudonym of 'Louis Alexandre Bombet' he publ. Lettres écrites de Vienne, en Autriche, sur le célèbre compositeur Joseph Haydn, suivies d'une vie de Mozart, et de considérations sur Métastase et l'état présent de la musique en France et en Italie (Paris, 1814; English transl., London, 1817; new ed. in 1817 as Vies de Haydn, Mozart et Métastase, by 'Stendhal'; republ. in 1914 with introduction by R. Rolland: Stendhal et la musique; German transl., Vienna, 1921). The life of Haydn is in part translated from Carpani's Le Haydine; the first 4 chapters of the life of Mozart are taken from Schlichtegroll's Necrology (1791), the last 3 from Cramer's Anecdotes sur Mozart. In Jan., 1824, Stendhal's life of Rossini was publ. in London as Memoirs of Rossini, in a transl. made from the original MS. The French version, considerably expanded, was publ. in Paris later the same year (2 vols.; German transl., Leipzig, 1824; republ. in complete ed. of Stendhal's works, Paris, 1922, with introduction by Henry Prunières: Stendhal et Rossini, which was also publ. in the 'Mus. Quarterly,' Jan., 1921). The oft-repeated assertion that this work was plagiarized from Carpani's Le Rossiniane is without foundation. The Life of Rossini was republ. in English, London, 1956. — Cf. A. Paupe, Histoire des oeuvres de Stendhal (Paris, 1903); H. Prunières, Stendhal et la musique, in 'Revue hebdomadaire' (1921); A. E. A. Beau, Das Verhältnis Stendhals zur Musik (dissertation, Hamburg, 1930); D. Maurice, Stendhal (Paris, 1931); P. Jourda, Stendhal, l'homme et l'œuvre (Paris, 1934); F. C. Green, Stendhal (Cambridge, England, 1939); H. Imbert, Stendhal critique musical, in Symphonie, pp. 87-124 (Paris, 1891); J. W. Klein, Stendhal as a Music Critic, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1943).

Stenhammar, Per Ulrik, Swedish composer; b. Törnå, Feb. 20, 1829; d. Stockholm, Feb. 8, 1875. He received his primary musical education from A. F. Lindblad; became interested in sacred music, and wrote choral works in Mendelssohn's style; many solo songs. His oratorio, Saul och David (1869), was orchestrated by his son, Wilhelm Stenhammar.

Stenhammar, Wilhelm, Swedish composer, son of Per Ulrik Stenhammar; b. Stockholm, Feb. 7, 1871; d. there, Nov. 20, 1927. He studied piano, organ, and theory at the Stockholm Cons., graduating in 1890; then went to Berlin for further piano study with Karl Heinrich Barth. His first large work for solo voices, chorus, and orch., I Rosengården (after K. A. Melin's collection of fairy tales, Prinsessan och svennen), was performed in Stockholm in 1892, attracting considerable attention; on Dec. 9, 1898, he brought out his music drama, Tirfing, at the Stockholm Opera; this was followed by a German opera, Das Fest auf Solhaug (after Ibsen), which was first heard at Stuttgart (April 12, 1899), and 3 years later in Swedish, at Stockholm (Oct. 31, 1902). Both works are music dramas of a Wagnerian type, but employing many Swedish folk tunes. From 1897 to 1900 he was conductor of the Philharmonic Society in Stockholm; later also led orchestral and choral groups in Göteborg (1917-23), where he contributed much to local musical life. The Univ. of Göteborg made him Mus. Doc. in 1916. Besides his operas, he wrote 2 symphonies, 2 piano concertos, 6 string quartets, a piano quartet, a violin sonata, 4 piano sonatas, etc.

Štěpán, Václav, Czech pianist and writer on music; b. Pečky, near Kolín, Dec. 12, 1889; d. Prague, Nov. 24, 1944. He studied musicology at the Univ. of Prague (Dr. phil., 1913); was also a private pupil of Novák in composition (1905-09); from 1919 he was prof. of esthetics at the Prague Cons.; appeared as pianist in Czechoslovakia and in France; contributed valuable articles on Czech musicians to foreign encyclopedias and music dictionaries; publ. 2 vols. of Bohemian folksongs (1917) and 2 vols. of Slovak folksongs (1925); also Das Symbol in der Programm-Musik (1914). He wrote some chamber music and other works, but did not pursue a composer's career.

Stepanian, Aro Leonovitch, Armenian composer; b. Elisabethopol, April 24, 1897. He entered the Moscow Musical Technicum in 1923 and studied composition with Gnesin; in 1926 he went to Leningrad, where he studied with Vladimir Shtcherbatchev. He graduated in 1930, and moved to Erevan, capital of Soviet Armenia. Among his works are 5 operas on Armenian subjects, Kadz Nazar (Braue Nazar; Erevan, Nov. 29, 1935), David of Sasun (1937), Lusabatsin (At the Dawn, 1938), Nune (1947), and Heroine (1950). He also composed 3 symphonies (1943, 1945, 1953); 2 string quartets; 2 violin sonatas; cello sonata; about 200 songs.

Stepanov (steh-pah'-nov), Lev Borissovitch, Russian composer; b. Tomsk, Siberia, Dec. 26, 1908. He studied at the Moscow Cons. with Miaskovsky, graduating in 1938. He devoted himself mainly to theater works; wrote the operas Dunia's Happiness (1937), Darvas Pass (1938), The Guards (Tashkent, Nov. 8, 1947), Ivan Bolotnikov (Perm, Dec. 17, 1950); the ballet, The Native Shore (1941); 2 piano concertos (1947; 1955); viola concerto (1955); cello sonata (1935); viola sonata (1936); choral works; film music.

Stephan, Rudi, German composer; b. Worms, July 29, 1887; d. near Tarnopol, Galicia, Sept. 29, 1915. He studied with Sekles in Frankfurt and with R. Louis in Munich; developed a fine talent for lyric songs, combining German Romantic traits with Impressionism in instrumental coloring. —Works: Musik für 7 Saiteninstrumente, for string quintet, piano, and harp (1912); Musik für Orchester (1913); Musik für Violine und Orchester (1914); a ballad, Liebeszauber, for baritone and orch.; piano pieces. His opera, Die ersten Menschen, was produced posthumously in Frankfurt on July 1, 1920. —Cf. K. Holl, Rudi Stephan (1920); A. Machner, Rudi Stephan's Werk (dissertation, Breslau, 1942).

Stephani, Hermann, German musicologist and composer; b. Grimma, June 23, 1877. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Jadasohn and Reinecke, and at the Univ. of Munich with Lipps and Sandberger; Dr. phil., 1902, with the dissertation, Das Erhabene, insonderheit in der Tonkunst, und das Problem der Form (Leipzig, 1903; 2nd ed., 1907). He became a choral conductor; in 1921 was appointed to the faculty of the Univ. of Marburg; taught musicology there until 1946, when he retired. His scholarly publications include: Der Charakter der Tonarten (Regensburg, 1923); Grundfragen des Musikhörens (Leipzig, 1925); Das Vierteltonproblem (Leipzig, 1925); Polare Harmonik bei Beethoven (Leipzig, 1927); Das Problem des Orgelstils (Essen, 1942). He advocated a reform in score notation through the exclusive use of the G clef with octave indications ('Einheitspartitur') and edited Schumann's Manfred Overture using this system (1905). He was a prolific composer; wrote about 100 opus numbers, mostly vocal works; also contrapuntal pieces for various combinations of instruments; edited works by Handel, Weber, etc. A 'Festschrift' was presented to him on his 70th birthday (Regensburg, 1947).

Stephens, Charles Edward, English organist and teacher; b. London, March 18, 1821; d. there, July 13, 1892. He studied piano with Cipriani Potter; in 1843 he was appointed to his first church position as organist, and was active in that capacity in various churches in London until 1875. From 1850 he was associated with the Philharmonic Society, as treasurer and director. He composed a piano trio, several orchestral overtures, a string quartet, and a symphony; all these works were performed in London.

Sterkel (shtehr'kel), Abbé Johann Franz Xaver, German ecclesiastic and composer; b. Würzburg, Dec. 3, 1750; d. there, Oct. 12, 1817. He studied theology and became a priest; was self-taught in music, but acquired sufficient proficiency as organist to occupy various positions as music director. In 1778 he became chaplain and organist in the Elector's court at Mainz; in 1782 he was in Italy, where he produced his opera, Farnace (Naples, Jan. 12, 1782). Beethoven heard Sterkel play in 1791, in Aschaffenburg, and was greatly impressed by his style as both composer and pianist. When the French expelled the Elector in 1794, Sterkel left Mainz and returned to his native city. From 1805 he was again court musician to the Elector of Mainz, until 1814, when the military campaign forced him to go back to Würzburg once more. He was a prolific composer; publ. 10 symphonies, 2 overtures, a piano quartet, a string quintet, 6 string trios, 6 piano concertos, a considerable amount of piano music. His Rondo comique for piano was very popular. —Cf. A. Scharnagl, J. F. X. Sterkel: ein Beitrag zur Musikgeschichte Mainfrankens (Würzburg, 1943).

Sterling, Antoinette, American contralto; b. Sterlingville, N. Y., Jan. 23, 1850; d. London, Jan. 9, 1904. She studied with Abella in N. Y., Mathilde Marchesi in Cologne, and with Pauline Viardot-Garcia in Baden; also took lessons with Manuel Garcia in London. Returning to America, she sang in Henry Ward Beecher's church in Brooklyn; then went to London, where she made her début at a Covent Garden Promenade Concert (Nov. 5, 1873). She introduced many favorite songs (most of which were especially composed for her), such as Arthur Sullivan's Lost Chord (Jan. 31, 1877), Barnby's When the Tide Comes In, etc. In 1875 she toured the U. S.; her permanent home was in London. —Cf. Malcolm S. MacKinlay (her son), Antoinette Sterling and other Celebrities (London, 1906).

Sterling, Winthrop Smith, American organist and teacher; b. Cincinnati, Nov. 28, 1859; d. there, Nov. 16, 1943. He studied in Leipzig, and later in London, where he remained for several years as organist. From 1887 to 1903 he was head of the organ dept. and teacher of singing at the Cincinnati College of Music; later taught the organ at the Univ. of Miami, Florida, for 8 years. He composed a number of organ pieces and songs.

Stern (shtern), Adolf, German writer; b. Leipzig, June 14, 1835; d. Dresden, April 15, 1907. He publ. several books dealing with music: Wanderbuch (1877); about the Bayreuth Festivals; Die Musik in der deutschen Dichtung (1888); Gluck in Versailles (1904); edited the poems of Peter Cornelius (1890) and Liszt's Briefe an K. Gille (1903). He married (1881) the pianist Margarete Herr (b. Dresden, Nov. 25, 1857; d. there, Oct. 4, 1899), who was a pupil of Liszt, and after her death he publ. her biography (Leipzig, 1901).

Stern, Isaac, outstanding violinist; b. Kremenetz, Russia, July 21, 1920. He was brought to San Francisco as an infant. His mother was a professional singer, and he received his primary musical education at home. He studied violin with Naoum Blinder and Louis Persinger; made his professional début with the San Francisco Symph. at 11; N. Y. début, Oct. 11, 1937, producing an excellent impression; made an extensive tour in Australia in 1947; subsequently appeared regularly with American and European orchestras, and gradually advanced to the foremost ranks of contemporary virtuosos. In May, 1956, he made a spectacularly successful tour of Russia.

Stern (shtern), Julius, eminent German music pedagogue; b. Breslau, Aug. 8, 1820; d. Berlin, Feb. 27, 1883. He studied violin with Lüstner, and later took courses with Rungenhagen in Berlin. He was in Dresden and in Paris between 1843 and 1846; in 1847 he founded the famous 'Sternscher Gesangverein' in Berlin, conducting it until 1874. In 1850 he founded the Stern Cons. in Berlin (with Kullak and Marx); Kullak withdrew in 1855, and Marx in 1857; thenceforth Stern became the sole head of the institution; it prospered and acquired the reputation of one of the greatest music schools in Europe. Stern conducted the Berlin Sinfonie-Kapelle from 1869 to 1871, and later led the 'Reichshalle' concerts (1873-75). He was also a composer, and received commendation from Mendelssohn for his songs; publ. Barcarolle for voice, cello, and piano; Les Adieux, for violin and piano; male choruses; songs. His opera, Ismene, was not produced. —Cf. Richard Stern, Erinnerungsblätter an Julius Stern (Berlin, 1886).

Stern, Leo, English cellist; b. Brighton, April 5, 1862; d. London, Sept. 10, 1904. He studied cello at the Royal Academy of Music in London with Piatti, and later with Julius Klengel in Leipzig. He was an assistant artist in Adelina Patti's concert tour in 1888; made a tour in America in 1897-98. He publ. solo pieces for cello and songs. His second wife was Suzanne Adams, the opera singer.

Sternberg, Constantin, pianist and composer; b. St. Petersburg, July 9, 1852; d. Philadelphia, March 31, 1924. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. with Moscheles and others, and later in Berlin with Th. Kullak, visiting Liszt in the summer months. He conducted various choral societies in Germany; toured as concert pianist in Russia (1879-80), including central Asia. In 1880 he made his 1st tour in the U. S., where he eventually settled; was director of the College of Music at Atlanta (1885-89); in 1890 established the Sternberg School of Music in Philadelphia, and was its director until his death. He publ. Dances Cosaques for violin; Fantasia, for cello; more than 200 salon pieces for piano, and instructive studies. He was the author of Ethics and Esthetics of Piano-Playing (N. Y., 1917); Tempo Rubato and Other Essays (N. Y., 1920).

Sternberg, Erich Walter, Israeli composer; b. Berlin, May 31, 1898. He studied with Hugo Leichtentritt; in 1932, went to Palestine. His works are mostly inspired by Hebrew subjects; among them is the orch. set of variations, Twelve Tribes of Israel (Tel Aviv, May 3, 1942). He further wrote 2 string quartets; piano pieces; songs.

Sternfeld, Daniel, Belgian composer; b. Antwerp, Nov. 27, 1905. He studied flute, conducting, and composition at the Antwerp Cons.; then took courses in conducting with Clemens Krauss and Karajan in Salzburg. Returning to Antwerp, he became conductor of the local orch.; in 1944 appointed 1st conductor at the Flemish Opera there. His works include an opera, Mater Dolorosa (Antwerp, 1935); a symphony (1943); chamber music.

Sternfeld, Frederick William, musicologist; b. Vienna, Sept. 25, 1914. He studied at the Univ. of Vienna (1933-37); then went to the U. S., and enrolled at Yale Univ. (1940-43), obtaining his Ph. D. there. He taught at Wesleyan Univ., Conn. (1940-46); at Dartmouth College (1946-56; prof. in 1955); in 1955, at the Institute for Advanced Studies, Princeton; since 1956, lecturer at Oxford Univ. He was editor of 'Renaissance News' (1946-54); in 1954 received a Guggenheim Fellowship. He publ. a number of informative studies in the 'Mus. Quarterly' and other American and British publications; also a bibliography, Goethe and Music (N. Y., 1954).

Sternfeld, Richard, German writer on music; b. Königsberg, Oct. 15, 1858; d. Berlin, June 21, 1926. A thoroughly trained musician, he publ. piano pieces and songs, and valuable books concerning music: Beethoven und Wagner (1885); Hans von Bülow (1898); Beethoven's Missa Solemnis (1900); Albert Niemann (1904); Schiller und Wagner (1905); Richard Wagner und die Bayreuther Bühnenfestspiele (2 vols., 1906); Aus Richard Wagners Pariser Zeit (1906); Musikalische Skizzen und Humoresken (1919); Berühmte Musiker und ihre Werke (1922).

Steuerlein, Johann, German composer; b. Schmalkalden, July 5, 1546; d. Meiningen, May 5, 1613. He studied in Magdeburg; occupied various positions as a clerk; became a notary public in Meiningen in 1589; in 1604 was given the rank of poet laureate by the Emperor. At the same time he was active as a song composer, and brought out 21 Geistliche Lieder for 4 voices (1575), 24 Weltliche Gesänge (1575); 23 Geistliche Gesänge, for 4-6 voices (1576), 27 Geistliche Gesänge, for 4 voices (1588), 8 Geistliche Gesänge, for 5 voices (1589). He was the composer of the celebrated New Year song, Das alte Jahr vergangen ist. —Cf. G. Kraft, Johann Steuerlein, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (May, 1931).

Steuermann, Eduard, pianist; b. Sambor, near Lwow, June 18, 1892. He studied with Busoni (piano) and Schoenberg (theory) in Berlin (1911-14). He was instructor at the Paderewski School in Lwow, and later at the Jewish Cons. of Cracow (1932-36). In 1937 he went to the U. S.; settled in N. Y. as teacher and pianist. He dedicated himself to the cause of modern music, and particularly to that of Schoenberg; gave several performances with leading American orchestras of Schoenberg's piano concerto; also brought out piano scores of Schoenberg's orchestral compositions; edited piano music by Brahms.

Stevens, Bernard, English composer; b. London, March 2, 1916. He studied at Cambridge Univ. and the Royal College of Music in London; later taught in the latter school. He has written a Symphony of Liberation (1946); Fugal Overture (1948); a violin concerto (1943); a piano trio (1943); songs. His music adheres to traditional concepts in harmony, while the programmatic content is often political.

Stevens, Denis (William), English musicologist, violinist, and conductor; b. High Wycombe, Buckinghamshire, March 2, 1922. He studied music at Oxford Univ. with R. O. Morris and Egon Wellesz (M. A., 1947); spent a year in Calcutta, India, as a journalist (1946); then was again in Oxford, before settling in London, 1949, when he joined the BBC. He has lectured in various American universities. He edited the Mulliner Book (vol. 1 of 'Musica Britannica') and publ. a commentary on that collection of keyboard works (London, 1952); also publ.

Tudor Church Music (N. Y., 1955) and a monograph on Thomas Tomkins (London, 1957). Edited compositions by Boyce, Tomkins, etc. He has contributed articles on English music to various periodicals in England and America.

Stevens, Halsey, American composer and writer on music; b. Scott, N. Y., Dec. 3, 1908; studied music with William Berwald at Syracuse Univ. and with Ernest Bloch in California. He held teaching positions at Syracuse Univ. (1935-36); Dakota Wesleyan Univ. (1937-41); Bradley Univ. (1941-46); Univ. of Redlands (1946); in 1946, appointed chairman, dept. of composition, Univ. of Southern California School of Music. He was program annotator for the Los Angeles Philharmonic (1946-51); lectured widely in the U. S.; publ. The Life and Music of Béla Bartók (N. Y., 1953). — Works: symph. No. 1 (San Francisco, March 7, 1946, composer conducting; revised version, Los Angeles, March 3, 1950); symph. No. 2 (1945; NBC, May 17, 1947; subsequently withdrawn by the composer); A Green Mountain Overture (Burlington, Aug. 7, 1948; revised version, Tallahassee, Fla., March 20, 1954); Triskelion for orch. (Louisville, Feb. 27, 1954); Sinfonia Breve (Louisville, Nov. 20, 1957); 3 string quartets; quintet for flute, piano, and strings; 3 piano trios; violin sonata (1947); viola sonata (1950); bassoon sonata (1949); horn sonata (1953); 3 piano sonatas; choral works; songs. — Cf. P. A. Pisk, Halsey Stevens, in 'Bulletin of the American Composers Alliance' (vol. 4, no. 2; 1954).

Stevens, Richard John Samuel, English composer of glees; b. London, March 27, 1757; d. there, Sept. 23, 1837. He was a chorister at St. Paul's Cathedral in London, and served as organist of the Temple Church (from 1786); from 1801 was prof. of music at Gresham College. He received numerous prizes for his glees, of which the most famous were Sigh no more, Ladies; Ye spotted snakes; The cloud-capt towers; Crabbed Age and Youth, and From Oberon in Airy Land; 3 sets were publ.; he also brought out 3 sonatas for harpsichord, and edited a 3-vol. collection of sacred vocal music by Italian and English composers. — Cf. J. B. Trend, R. J. S. Stevens, in 'Music & Letters' (vol. 14).

Stevens, Risë, American mezzo-soprano; b. New York, June 11, 1913. She studied voice with Anna Schoen-René at the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y.; later took a course with George Schick in Prague. She made her début as Mignon in Prague (1938); appeared in the same role at the Metropolitan Opera, in Philadelphia, on Nov. 22, 1938; subsequently sang on the radio, and also in motion pictures and on television. In 1939 she married the Czech actor Walter Surovy; they settled in New York.

Stevenson, Robert, American musicologist; b. Melrose, N. M., July 3, 1916; studied at Harvard and Yale Univ.; later at Rochester Univ., where he received his Ph. D. He was instructor at Westminster Choir College in Princeton (1946-49); in 1950 appointed assistant prof. of music at the Univ. of California, Los Angeles; publ. a valuable book, Music in Mexico (N. Y., 1952); also Patterns of Protestant Church Music (Durham, N. C., 1953); Music Before the Classic Era (London, 1955).

Stewart, Humphrey John, organist and composer; b. London, May 22, 1856; d. San Diego, Calif., Dec. 28, 1932. He studied privately in England; in 1886 emigrated to the U. S., and settled in San Francisco as church organist; he was one of the founders of the American Guild of Organists. His 3 operas were produced in San Francisco: His Majesty (1890), The Conspirators (1900), and King Hal (1911); the MSS of the first two were lost in the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906. His most successful work was the sacred music drama The Hound of Heaven (San Francisco, April 24, 1924); he further wrote the orchestral suites Montezuma and Scenes in California; a Mass; organ pieces; songs. — Cf. E. E. Hipsher, American Opera and its Composers (Philadelphia, 1934, pp. 391-94).

Stewart, Reginald, conductor and pianist; b. Edinburgh, April 20, 1900. He studied piano with Mark Hambourg and Isidor Philipp; composition with Nadia Boulanger. He appeared as piano soloist with the London Symph.; taught at the Canadian Academy of Music in 1920; was pianist in the Hambourg Trio in 1921; in 1933 he went to Canada, where he organized the Bach Society of Toronto (1933-41); inaugurated Promenade symph. concerts there, and formed the Toronto Philharmonic Orch. in 1934. In 1942 he was engaged as conductor of the Baltimore Symph. (until 1952); in 1941 he was appointed director of the Peabody Cons. of Music, resigning in the spring of 1958.

Stewart, Sir Robert Prescott, Irish organist and composer; b. Dublin, Dec. 16, 1825;

d. there, March 24, 1894. He was a chorister of Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, and at the age of 18 was appointed organist there. In 1852 he became vicar-choral at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin; in 1861 was appointed to the faculty of Dublin Univ., as teacher of harmony. He was engaged as conductor of the Dublin Philharmonic in 1873. He gave concerts as organist in England; wrote several cantatas and odes for various occasions; also anthems, glees, and miscellaneous songs. —Cf. O. Vignoles, Memoir of Sir Robert P. Stewart (London, 1899); J. C. Culwick, The Works of Sir Robert Stewart (Dublin, 1902).

Stich (stiyh), Jan Václav (Johann Wenzel; he Italianized his German name, Johann Stich, as 'Giovanni Punto'), famous Czech horn player; b. Žehušice, near Čáslav, 1746; d. Prague, Feb. 16, 1803. He studied in Prague, Munich, and Dresden; traveled in Germany and Hungary; visited England; then entered the service of the Elector at Mainz (1769-74); subsequently served at the court of the Prince-Bishop of Würzburg, and in 1782 became chamber musician to the Comte d'Artois (later Charles X) at Paris; in Paris he met Mozart, who wrote for him, the flutist Wendling, the oboist Ramm, and the bassoonist Ritter the Symphonie concertante (K. Anhang 9). During the French revolution (1789-99) Stich was in charge of the music at the Théâtre des Variétés Amusantes; returned to Germany in 1799; proceeded to Vienna in 1800; made the acquaintance of Beethoven, who was enchanted by his playing, wrote for him a sonata for horn and piano (op. 17), and played it with him at a concert on April 18, 1800. He went to Prague in 1801. His works comprise 14 horn concertos, much chamber music with horn, a method for horn (1798; a revision of one by his Dresden teacher Hampel); publ. a book of exercises for the horn (Paris, 1795).

Stiedry (stē-drē), Fritz, conductor; b. Vienna, Oct. 11, 1883. He studied law at the Univ. of Vienna, and music theory at the Vienna Cons.; for 2 years he was assistant conductor to Ernst von Schuch in Dresden (1907-08); subsequently conducted operas in Germany. In 1914 he was appointed conductor of the Berlin Opera (until 1923); then led the Vienna Volksoper for 2 seasons (1923-25); after traveling as guest conductor in Italy, Spain, and Scandinavia (1925-28), he returned to Berlin as music director of the Berlin Municipal Opera (1929-33). With the advent of the Nazi regime in 1933, he left Germany, and conducted the Leningrad Philharmonic for 4 seasons (1933-37). In 1938 he settled in the U. S., as conductor of the New Friends of Music Orchestra, in N. Y. In 1946 he was engaged as conductor of the Metropolitan Opera. He is particularly distinguished as a Wagnerian conductor; but he has also presented excellent performances of the operas of Verdi; at his symph. concerts. he often brought out important compositions of the modern school.

Stiehl (shtēl), Carl Johann Christian, German organist and music historian; b. Lübeck, July 12, 1826; d. there, Dec. 2, 1911. He was a pupil of his father, Johann Dietrich Stiehl; served as church organist in Jever (1848-58) and at Eutin (1858-77); in 1878 returned to Lübeck, where he conducted the 'Musikverein' and 'Singakademie' (until 1897); also wrote music criticism, and was in charge of the music section in the Lübeck Library. —Publications: Zur Geschichte der Instrumentalmusik in Lübeck (1885); Lübeckisches Tonkünstler-Lexikon (1887); Musikgeschichte der Stadt Lübeck (1891); Geschichte des Theaters in Lübeck (1902); ed. Buxtehude's sonatas a 3 and 4 (vol. 11 of the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst').

Stiehl (shtēl), Heinrich (Franz Daniel), German organist, choral conductor, and composer; son of Johann Dietrich Stiehl; b. Lübeck, Aug. 5, 1829; d. Reval, May 1, 1886. He studied with Moscheles, Gade, and Hauptmann at the Leipzig Cons.; in 1853 he went to St. Petersburg, where he remained for 13 years as organist at the Lutheran Church and conductor of a German choral society. He was subsequently active in Vienna (1867-69), in Italy (1869-72), London (1872-73), and Belfast (1874-77). In 1880 he was engaged as organist and conductor in Reval, Estonia, where he remained to the end of his life, with occasional appearances in St. Petersburg. He wrote in all 172 op. numbers, including 2 light operas, Der Schatzgräber and Jery und Bätely; Die Vision for orch.; 2 piano quartets; 3 piano trios; a violin sonata; a cello sonata; numerous piano pieces of programmatic content, such as Spaziergänge im Schwarzwald, Italianische Reisebilder, Hexentanz, Musikalische Portraits, etc.

Stiehl, Johann Dietrich, German organist; b. Lübeck, July 9, 1800; d. there, June 27, 1873. He lived virtually all his life in Lübeck, where he was organist at St. Jacobi; his sons, Heinrich and Carl Johann Christian, were also excellent organists.

Stierlin (shtēr'-lën), Adolf, German composer, singer, and pedagogue; b. Adenau, Oct. 14, 1859; d. Münster, April 26, 1930. He studied singing and was engaged as bass at various theaters in Germany; in 1897 he opened his own music school in Münster. He wrote the operas Scapina (Münster, 1887) and Zamora (Halle, 1893), a ballet, Die sieben Todsünden; choruses.

Stigelli, Giorgio (real name Georg Stiegle), celebrated German tenor; b. 1815; d. in his villa Boschetti, near Monza, Italy, July 3, 1868. He made extensive concert tours in Europe, and appeared in America in 1864-65. He was the composer of many songs, among them the popular Die schönsten Augen.

Still, William Grant, American Negro composer; b. Woodville, Miss., May 11, 1895. He studied at Oberlin Cons., and later with Chadwick in Boston and Varèse in N. Y.; received a Guggenheim Fellowship (1934-35). He began his career as a practicing musician by arranging music for W. C. Handy, Paul Whiteman, and other conductors in the popular field. Determined to develop a symphonic type of Negro music, he wrote an Afro-American Symphony (1931), which was the first work of its kind by a Negro composer. In his music he occasionally makes use of actual Negro folksongs, but mostly he invents such themes by recreating the melo-rhythmic elements of Negro spirituals. He was the first Negro to conduct a major American orch. (Hollywood Bowl, 1936). — Works: for orch.: From the Black Belt (1926); Darker America (Rochester, Nov. 21, 1927); From the Journal of a Wanderer (Rochester, May 8, 1929); Africa, symph. poem (1930); Afro-American Symphony (Rochester, Oct. 29, 1931); Three Dances, from the ballet La Guiblesses (Rochester, May 5, 1933); Kaintuck (Kentucky), for piano and orch. (Rochester, Jan. 16, 1936); Dismal Swamp (Rochester, Oct. 30, 1936); Ebon Chronicle (Fort Worth, Nov. 3, 1936); symph. in G minor (1937); And They Lynched Him on a Tree, for narrator, contralto, chorus, and orch. (N. Y., June 25, 1940); Plain Chant for Americans for baritone and orch. (N. Y., Oct. 23, 1941); Old California (1941); Pages from Negro History (1943); In Memoriam: The Colored Soldiers Who Died for Democracy (N. Y., Jan. 5, 1944); Poem (Cleveland, Dec. 7, 1944); Festive Overture (Cincinnati, Jan. 19, 1945); 3rd symphony (1945); Archaic Ritual (1946); Wood Notes (Chicago, April 22, 1948); 4th symphony (1949); numerous pieces for symph. band: From the Delta (1945), To You, America (1952), etc.; vocal works: Caribbean Melodies, for chorus, piano, and percussion (1941), Wailing Woman, for soprano and chorus (1946), etc.; Pastorela for violin and piano (1946). In addition, he wrote several stage works: La Guiblesses, ballet (1927); Sahdji, ballet (1930); Blue Steel, opera in 3 acts (1935); Lenox Avenue, ballet (1937); Troubled Island, opera in 4 acts (1938); A Bayou Legend, opera in 3 acts (1940); Miss Sally's Party (1940); A Southern Interlude, opera in 2 acts (1942); Costaso, opera in 3 acts (1949). He married the writer Verna Arvey, who has collaborated with her husband in stage works. — Cf. M. Cuney Hare, Negro Musicians and Their Music (Washington, D. C., 1936); A. Locke, The Negro and His Music (Washington, D. C., 1936); Verna Arvey, William Grant Still (N. Y., 1939).

Stillman, Mitya, Russian-American viola player and composer; b. Ilyintza, near Kiev, Jan. 27, 1892; d. New York, April 12, 1936. He studied violin at the Kiev Cons.; theory with Glière. After the Revolution he came to the U. S. In 1921 he joined the Detroit Symph. Orch. as viola player; then was a member of the Hartmann String Quartet; from 1928 he was the first viola player of the CBS orch. As composer, Stillman adopted a strong contrapuntal idiom; his 4 songs for mezzo soprano, flute, harp, and string quartet won first prize in Detroit; he wrote 8 string quartets; No. 7 received a posthumous first prize award from the NBC Guild as the best chamber music work for 1936 (publ.). Other works are Dnieprostroy, a symph. poem (1933); Cyprus for strings, woodwinds, and percussion; string trio, Yalta Suite; orchestral transcriptions.

Stillman-Kelley. See Kelley.

Stirling, Elizabeth, English organist and composer; b. Greenwich, Feb. 26, 1819; d. London, March 25, 1895. She studied organ and piano with Edward Holmes, and harmony with J. A. Hamilton and G. A. Macfarren. She was appointed organist of All Saints', Poplar, at the age of 20, and retained this position for nearly 20 years, when she competed for one at St. Andrew's, Undershaft. She won the contest, and was organist there until 1880. In 1856 she passed the examination for the degree of Mus. Bac. at Oxford (her work was Psalm 130 for 5 voices with orch.), but the degree could not be granted to a woman; her moral victory upon acceptance of the work by Oxford Univ. as satisfactory was all the greater. In 1863 she married F. A. Bridge. She made many organ transcriptions from classical works; publ. 6 Pedal-Fugues and other organ pieces; also part-songs, of which All Among the Barley won great popularity.

Stobæus, Johann, German composer; b. Graudenz, July 6, 1580; d. Königsberg, Sept. 11, 1646. In 1595 he went to Königsberg, where from 1599-1608 he was a pupil of J. Eccard; in 1601 he entered the Electoral chapel as bass singer, and in 1602 was cantor at the Cathedral. He succeeded Krockner as Kapellmeister to the Elector of Brandenburg in 1626. He publ. Cantiones sacrae 5-6, 7, 8 et 10 vocibus item aliquot Magnificat 5 et 6 vocibus adornatae (Frankfurt, 1624); a new ed. of Geistliche Lieder auf . . . Kirchen-Melodeyen for 5 voices with some additional songs of his own (1634); and an edition of Eccard's Preussische Festlieder (2 vols.; 1642, 1644; modern edition by Teschner, 1858). — Cf. R. Eitner in 'Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte' (1883); A. Mayer-Reinach, Zur Geschichte der Königsberger Hofkapelle, in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' VI, 1 (1904); L. Kamiński, Johann Stobæus z Grudziadz (Posen, 1928).

Stock (stōhk), Frederick A., conductor; b. Jülich, Germany, Nov. 11, 1872; d. Chicago, Oct. 20, 1942. Taught by his father, a bandmaster; from 1886-91 he attended the Cologne Cons., studying violin with G. Japha and composition with Wüllner, Zöllner, and Humperdinck; 1891-95, violinist in the Cologne municipal orch.; in 1895, first viola in the Chicago Symph. Orch. (Th. Thomas); appointed assistant conductor in 1901, conducting all concerts outside of Chicago (1903-05), and elected conductor after Thomas' death in 1905. He was also conductor of the Musical Art Club (1907-09) and of the Civic Music Student Orch. (from 1920). Music director of the Century of Progress Fair, Chicago, 1933. In 1910 he was elected a member of the American Institute of Arts and Letters. He received the degree of Mus. Doc. (hon. c.) from Northwestern Univ. (1915), from the Univ. of Michigan (1924), from Chicago Univ. (1925), etc. In 1939 he received the medal of the Bruckner Society of America; Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur, 1925. He became a naturalized U. S. citizen in 1919. He was also a composer; wrote a symph., overtures, string quartet, etc. His violin concerto was performed by Efrem Zimbalist at the Norfolk Festival, June 3, 1915, under Stock's direction. — Cf. P. A. Otis, The Chicago Symphony Orchestra . . . (Chicago, 1925).

Stockhausen, Franz, conductor and educator, brother of Julius Stockhausen; b. Gebweiler, Alsace, Jan. 30, 1839; d. Strasbourg, Jan. 4, 1926. Pupil of Alkan in Paris, and of Moscheles, Richter, and Hauptmann at the Leipzig Cons., 1860-62. From 1868, conductor of the 'Société de chant sacré' in Strasbourg (resigned 1879), and music director of the Cathedral; from 1871 until his retirement in 1907 he was director of the Strasbourg Cons.

Stockhausen, Julius, son of the harpist and composer Franz Stockhausen (1792-1868); baritone and teacher; b. Paris, July 22, 1826; d. Frankfurt, Sept. 22, 1906. Pupil of Paris Cons., and of Manuel García in London, soon winning renown as a concert singer. From 1862-67, conductor of the Philharmonic Concerts and the 'Singakademie' at Stuttgart; 1874-78, conductor of the 'Sternscher Gesangverein' at Berlin; 1878-79, teacher of singing at Hoch's Cons., Frankfurt; after Raff's death in 1882 he resumed the professorship at the Cons., retiring in 1898; after that time he gave private lessons only. As an oratorio and lieder singer he was unsurpassed; a close personal friend of Brahms, he was among the first and greatest interpreters of that master. He also was an excellent conductor. His Gesangsmethode (2 vols., 1886, 1887; also in English) is a standard work. Also publ. Gesangstechnik und Stimmbildung and several songs. — Cf. Julia Wirth-Stockhausen, J. S. der Sänger des deutschen Liedes (Frankfurt, 1927) and Unverlierbare Kindheit (Stuttgart, 1949); A. H. Fox Strangways, J. S., in 'Monthly Mus. Record' (March-April, 1949).

Stockhausen, Karl Heinz (or Karlheinz), German composer of the advanced modernist school; b. Mödrath, near Cologne, Aug. 22, 1928. He studied piano at the Musikhochschule in Cologne (1947-50) and composition with Frank Martin during the latter's residence there (1950-51); then with Olivier Messiaen and Darius Milhaud in Paris (1951-53); also made a study of 'musique concrète' and adopted an empiric method of composition which included highly complex contrapuntal formulas and uninhibited application of dissonance as well as the simplest procedures of tonal reiteration; all this in the freest of rhythms and a great variety of instrumental color, with emphasis on per-cussive effects. He has also perfected a system of constructivist composition in which the subjective choice of the performer determines the succession of given thematic ingredients and their polyphonic simultaneities. Among his works are Kreuzspiel for orch. (1952); Kontra-Punkte (Cologne, May 26, 1953); Klavierstück XI (one of a series of constructivist pieces); Zeitmasse, for oboe, flute, English horn, clarinet, and bassoon (1956). Co-ed. (with H. Eimert) of 'Die Reihe,' a periodical devoted to developments in contemporary music (from 1955).

Stoeckel, Carl, son of Gustave Jakob Stoeckel; b. New Haven, Conn., Dec. 7, 1858; d. Norfolk, Conn., Nov. 1, 1925. Through his personal devotion and generous financial support he raised the annual festival of the 'Litchfield County Union,' established by Robbins Battell (b. Norfolk, Conn., April 9, 1819; d. there, Jan. 26, 1895), from an event of merely local to one of national importance. In 1899 the 'Norfolk Glee Club' and 'Winchester Choral Union' joined forces, to which later were added those of other choral groups, resulting in an aggregation of almost 700 trained voices. From 1902 the festivals were held in the 'Music Shed' (capacity 2,000 seats) on Stoeckel's estate. The festival itself came to be known as 'The Norfolk Festival.' Every year in June, 3 or 4 concerts were given, under eminent conductors with the assistance of famous soloists and an orchestra selected from the best players of Boston and New York, all expenses being met by Stoeckel. What contributed especially to the fame of these festivals was the production, annually, of 2 important new works (choral or orchestral), generally by American composers, for which Stoeckel established substantial cash prizes. Sibelius composed his tone-poem Aallottaret especially for the Norfolk Festival and conducted its 1st performance there in 1914. Among other composers represented were J. A. Carpenter, G. W. Chadwick, S. Coleridge-Taylor, H. F. Gilbert, P. Grainger, H. K. Hadley, E. S. Kelley, C. M. Loeffler, H. Parker, D. S. Smith, C. V. Stanford, and Deems Taylor.

Stoeckel, Gustave Jakob, pedagogue; b. Maikammer, Bavarian Palatinate, 1819; d. Norfolk, Conn., May 14, 1907. He came to America in 1847, and in 1849 became instructor of music and chapel organist at Yale Univ.; appointed Battell Prof. of Music in the newly established department of music at Yale; retired in 1896 with the title of prof. emeritus. He composed some vocal and instrumental pieces, arranged college songs, and assisted in editing the 'College Hymn-Book' for men's voices. —Cf. D. S. Smith, G. J. Stoeckel, Yale Pioneer in Music (New Haven, 1939).

Stoessel, Albert (Frederic), American conductor and composer; b. St. Louis, Oct. 11, 1894; d. N. Y., May 12, 1943. After preliminary study in his native city, he went to Berlin, where he studied violin with Willy Hess and theory with Kretschmar; appeared as violin soloist with the Blüthner Orch. in Berlin on Nov. 14, 1914; made his American début with the St. Louis orch., Nov. 19, 1915. In 1921 he was appointed successor to his father-in-law, Walter Damrosch, as conductor of the N. Y. Oratorio Society; from 1923 till 1930, he was head of the music dept. of N. Y. Univ.; from 1930, director of the opera dept. of the Juilliard Graduate School, N. Y.; from 1925 he conducted music festivals in Worcester, Mass. He was stricken fatally at the annual ceremonial of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, while leading the première of the symph. sketch Dunkirk by Walter Damrosch. Stoessel's works include Hispania Suite for orch. (1921; originally for piano); Cyrano de Bergerac, a symph. poem (1922); Concerto Grosso for strings and piano (1935); Suite Antique, for two violins and piano (his most successful work; 1922); a violin sonata and violin pieces; many choruses; piano pieces; songs. His opera Garrick was produced under his direction at the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y., on Feb. 24, 1937. Publ. The Technic of the Baton (N. Y., 1920; new ed., 1928).

Stoeving, (Carl Heinrich) Paul, violinist and composer; b. Leipzig, May 7, 1861; d. New York, Dec. 24, 1948. He studied violin at the Leipzig Cons. and with Léonard in Paris; gave concerts in Germany, Russia, and Scandinavia, and in 1887 visited the U. S. In 1896 he went to London, where he was prof. at the Guildhall School of Music (until 1914). At the outbreak of World War I he emigrated to the U. S., and served as teacher in various music schools in New Haven and N. Y. He wrote a violin concerto, chamber music, songs, and a 'song-play' Gaston and Jolivet; publ. The Art of Violin Bowing (London, 1902); The Story of the Violin (London, 1904); Elements of Violin Playing and A Key to Ševčík's Works (London, 1914); The Mastery of the Bow and Bowing Subtleties (N. Y., 1920); The Violin, Cello and String Quartet (N. Y., 1927); The Violin: Its Famous Makers and Players (Boston, 1928).

Stöhr, Richard, Austrian music theorist and composer; b. Vienna, June 11, 1874. He studied medicine (M. D., 1898), but then turned to music and studied with Robert Fuchs and others at the Vienna Cons. In 1904 he was appointed instructor in theory there, and during his long tenure he had many pupils who later became celebrated (Artur Rodzinski, Erich Leinsdorf, etc.). In 1938 he was compelled to leave Vienna; settled in the U. S., where he taught at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia (1939-41); then taught music and German at St. Michael's College, Winooski, Vt., retiring in 1950. He was living in Vermont in 1958. A concert of his works was given by the Vermont State Symph. Orch. on Oct. 31, 1954, including the world première of his Vermont Suite, an early symphony, and songs accompanied by the composer. His list of works includes 4 symphonies in all; much chamber music; piano pieces. He publ. a popular manual Praktischer Leitfaden der Harmonielehre (Vienna, 1909; 14th ed., 1928); also Praktischer Leitfaden des Kontrapunkts (Hamburg, 1911); Modulationslehre (1932). — Cf. R. Felber, Richard Stöhr, in 'Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music' (London, 1930; vol. 2, p. 458).

Stojanovits, Peter Lazar, violinist and composer; b. Budapest, Sept. 6, 1877; d. Belgrade, Sept. 12, 1957. He studied violin with Hubay at the Budapest Cons. and with J. Grün at the Vienna Cons.; in 1913 established his own school for advanced violin playing in Vienna. In 1925 he settled in Belgrade, and became director of the Belgrade Cons. His works include the operas A Tigris (The Tiger; Budapest, Nov. 14, 1905), Das Liebchen am Dache (Vienna, May 19, 1917), Der Herzog von Reichsstadt (Vienna, Feb. 11, 1921); an operetta, Orlić; 2 ballets; a symph. poem, Heldentod; 7 violin concertos, 2 viola concertos, a flute concerto, a horn concerto; several pieces of chamber music, including a piano trio, a piano quartet, and a piano quintet. He publ. a Schule der Skalentechnik for violin.

Stojowski (stoh-yohf'-skē), Sigismund, Polish pianist; b. Strzelce, April 8, 1869; d. New York, Nov. 5, 1946. He was a pupil of Zelenski at Cracow and of Diémer (piano) and Delibes (composition) at the Paris Cons. (1887-89), winning 1st prize for piano playing and composition; later he took a course with Paderewski. At an orchestral concert of his own works, given in Paris in 1891, he played his piano concerto; he remained in Paris until 1906, when he came to the U. S.

as head of the piano dept. at the Institute of Musical Art in N. Y.; later held a similar position at the Von Ende School of Music, N. Y.; taught at the Juilliard Summer School for several years. He became a naturalized American citizen in 1938. In his prime he was extremely successful as concert pianist; and in his later years was greatly esteemed as a pedagogue. His works include, besides his piano concerto, Prologue, Scherzo and Variations, for piano and orch., performed by him (as piano concerto No. 2) in London, June 23, 1913, under the direction of Nikisch; many solo piano pieces; Prayer for Poland, for chorus and orch. (1915); 2 violin sonatas; a cello sonata.

Stokowski (stoh-kohf'-skē), Leopold, celebrated conductor; b. (of a Polish father and Irish mother) London, April 18, 1882. He attended Queen's College, Oxford, and also studied at the Royal College of Music, London, with Stevenson Hoyte (organ), Walford Davies (counterpoint), and Sir Charles Stanford (composition); obtained the position of organist at St. James, Piccadilly in 1900; traveled to Paris and Munich for additional studies. In 1905 he went to America; was organist and choir-master at St. Bartholomew's, N. Y. (1905-08); his organ playing there attracted attention; during the summer of 1908 he conducted some concerts in London. In 1909 he was engaged as conductor of the Cincinnati Symph. Orch., resigning in 1912 to accept the conductorship of the Philadelphia Orch., which he brought to a brilliant standard of execution; the number of players was increased to 104, and Stokowski established a vigorous system of training with emphasis on color and dynamics. He introduced numerous modern scores new to Philadelphia audiences, including works by Schoenberg and Varèse, the performances of which aroused loud protests from the audience and an animated discussion in the press; Stokowski also resorted to lecturing the audiences as to the proper attitude towards modern music. His treatment of classical compositions was often unorthodox; in order to obtain greater sonority and novel effects, he upon occasion changed the orchestration, doubling the number of brass instruments, adding percussion sounds, etc. Always eager to promote innovations, he was the first conductor in America to introduce the Thérémin; made numerous radio broadcasts applying special techniques. His orchestral transcriptions of works by Bach exhibit characteristics of musical grandiosity, but there is no denying their sonorous impact. He acted in the motion pictures The Big Broadcast of 1937 and One Hundred Men and a Girl, and in 1940 supervised the music and acted in the Walt Disney film Fantasia. He was given the Bok Award of $10,000 as 'the person who has done the most for Philadelphia'; received several honorary degrees of Dr. of Music. In 1936 he took the Philadelphia Orchestra on a transcontinental tour; in 1938 he resigned as musical director of the Philadelphia Orchestra; however, he continued to conduct several concerts a season, until 1941, when he undertook concerts with specially assembled groups; in 1940-42 he conducted in the U. S. and in South America the All-American Youth Orchestra; during the season of 1942-43, he was associate conductor with Toscanini of the NBC Symph.; in 1945 he became musical director of the Hollywood Bowl; held a similar post in 1949-50 with the N. Y. Philharmonic, sharing the season with Mitropoulos; subsequently conducted concerts with various orchestras in Europe and America. In 1955 he was engaged as permanent conductor of the Houston Symph. He was married to Olga Samaroff (q.v.) in 1911 (divorced in 1923); to Mrs. Evangeline Brewster Johnson in 1926 (divorced in 1937); and to Gloria Vanderbilt on April 21, 1945 (divorced in 1955). He publ. Music for All of Us (N. Y., 1943). —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 215-27).

Stoltz, Rosine (real name Victoire Noël), French mezzo-soprano; b. Paris, Feb. 13, 1815; d. there, July 28, 1903. She was the daughter of a janitor; was sent by Duchess de Berri to a convent, and in 1826 to the Choron School, which she entered under the name of Rosa Niva. She first appeared in public under the assumed name of Mlle. Ternaux; later as Mlle. Héloïse Stoltz (the latter being derived from her mother's maiden name Stoll). Her first important engagement was in Brussels on June 3, 1836, when she sang Rachel in Halévy's La Juive, with Adolphe Nourrit, who recommended her to the administration of the Paris Opéra; made her début there as Rachel on Aug. 25, 1837. She became intimate with Leon Pillet, manager of the Opéra from 1844, and through him wielded considerable influence on appointments of new singers; after a series of attacks in the press, accusing her of unworthy intrigues, she resigned in March, 1847; fought for vindication through 3 obviously inspired pamphlets (C. Cantin-jou, Les Adieux de Madame Stoltz; E. Pérignon, Rosine Stoltz, and J. Lerner, Madame Rosine Stoltz), all published in 1847. At the invitation of the Brazilian Emperor Don Pedro (who was romantically attached to her) she made 4 tours of Brazil between 1850 and 1859, at a salary of 400,000 francs a season. She was married to A. Lescuyer (March 2, 1837; legitimizing a son born Sept. 21, 1836); was subsequently married to the Duke Carlo Lesignano (May 18, 1872); assumed the title of Baroness von Ketschendorf, from the castle given her by Ernest Ketschendorf, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. She publ. 6 songs (not composed by her in all probability), and her name (as Princesse de Lesignano) was used as author of a learned volume, Les Constitutions de tous les pays civilisés (1880), which was written in her behalf. The mystifying aspects of her private life and public career are recounted by G. Bord in Rosine Stoltz (Paris, 1909) and by A. Pougin in La Vérité sur Madame Stoltz, in 'Le Ménestrel' (Aug. 28, 1909 et seq.).

Stoltzer, Thomas, German composer of sacred music; b. Schweidnitz, Silesia, c. 1475; d. as chaplain of the Hungarian King Louis in the battle of Mohács, Aug. 29, 1526. He entered the service of Hungary in 1522. His Latin psalms were publ. in 1538, 1545, and 1569; German songs were included in collections of 1536, 1539, and 1544. His Octo tonorum melodias containing instrumental fantasies for 5 voices is a collection of instrumental pieces in all 8 church modes. Modern reprints are in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vols. 34 and 65), 'Das Chorwerk' (vol. 6), and 'Das Erbe deutscher Musik' (Series 1, vol. 22, 1942). —Cf. K. L. Hampe, Die deutschen Psalmen des Thomas Stoltzer (Halle, 1943); G. Reese, Music in the Renaissance (N. Y., 1954; pp. 723-25).

Stolz, Robert, Austrian operetta composer; b. Graz, Aug. 25, 1882. He was the pupil of his father, of Robert Fuchs in Vienna, and of Humperdinck in Berlin. He conducted at the Theater an der Wien for 12 years; also appeared with many European orchestras. In 1938 he came to the U. S., and lived in N. Y. and in Hollywood; about 1950 returned to Vienna. He wrote many operettas in a characteristic Viennese style, of which the most successful was Zwei Herzen im ¾ Takt (Zürich, Sept. 30, 1933). Other operettas are: Die lustigen Weiber von Wien (Munich, 1909), Das Glücksmädel (1910); Das Lumpenlär (Graz, 1915); Lang, lang, ist's her (Vienna, March 28, 1917); Der Tanz ins Glück (Vienna, Oct. 18, 1921); Die

Tanzgräfin (Vienna, May 13, 1921); Mädi (Vienna, Oct. 5, 1923); Ein Ballroman oder der Kavalier von zehn bis vier (Vienna, Feb. 29, 1924); Eine einzige Nacht (Vienna, Dec. 23, 1927); Peppina (1931); Wild Violets (1932); Venus in Seide (1932); Frühling im Prater (Vienna, Dec. 22, 1949); Karneval in Wien (1950); wrote music for about 100 films in Germany and the U. S.; about 1500 songs. —Cf. the biography by G. Holm, Im ¾ Takt durch die Welt (Linz, 1948).

Stolz, Teresa (Teresina), soprano; b. Kosteletz, Bohemia, June 2, 1834; d. Milan, Aug. 23, 1902. She studied at the Cons. of Prague, and later with Luigi Ricci in Trieste; began her operatic career in Russia; from 1865 until 1879 she appeared with brilliant success at the principal Italian opera houses. She was greatly admired by Verdi, and was famous in the role of Aida and of Leonora in La Forza del destino. Her farewell appearance was in Verdi's Requiem at La Scala, Milan, on June 30, 1879. —Cf. U. Zoppi, Mariani, Verdi e Stolz (Milan, 1947).

Stölzel (Stözl), Gottfried Heinrich, German composer; b. Grünstädtl, Jan. 13, 1690; d. Gotha, Nov. 27, 1749. He studied with the cantor Umlauf at Schneeberg, and with Melchior Hofmann at Leipzig; became a music teacher in Breslau (1710-12), where his opera Narcissus was performed in 1711; this was followed by productions of his operas Valeria, Artemisia, and Orion (all in 1712). After a journey to Italy, he was in Prague, where he brought out the operas Venus und Adonis (1714), Acis und Galathea (1715), and Das durch die Liebe besiegte Glück (1716). He subsequently went to Bayreuth, where he produced the opera Diomedes (1717), to Gera, and to Gotha, where he produced Der Musenberg (1723). Altogether he wrote 22 operas, the pastoral Rosen und Dornen, 14 oratorios, 8 double sets of cantatas and motets for the church year, other religious works, symphonies, serenades, concertos, etc.; a concerto grosso ed. by Schering is found in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vols. 29-30); a solo cantata for contralto was ed. by J. Bachmair (1926). His autobiography was reprinted in 'Selbstbiographien deutscher Musiker,' ed. by Willi Kahl (Cologne, 1948). —Cf. W. Schmidt-Weiss, G. H. Stölzel als Instrumentalkomponist (dissertation, Würzburg, 1939).

Stöpel, Franz (David Christoph), German writer on music; b. Oberheldrungen, Nov.

14, 1794; d. Paris, Dec. 19, 1836. He introduced Logier's method of piano teaching in Berlin in 1822; later taught it in other cities, finally in Paris; nowhere with striking success. —Writings: Grundzüge der Geschichte der modernen Musik (1821); Beiträge zur Würdigung der neuen Methode des gleichzeitigen Unterrichts einer Mehrzahl Schüler im Pianofortespiel und der Theorie der Harmonie (1823); System der Harmonielehre (after Logier; 1825); Über J. B. Logiers System der Musikwissenschaft (1827); etc.

Stör, Karl, German violinist and composer; b. Stolberg, June 29, 1814; d. Weimar, Jan. 17, 1889. He was a pupil of Götze and Lobe at Weimar; appointed court conductor in 1857, but in a few years failing eyesight compelled his resignation. —Works: opera Die Flucht (Weimar, 1843); Tonbilder zu Schillers 'Lied von der Glocke' for orch.; a violin concerto; several ballets; a Ständchen for cello with orch.; male choruses; songs.

Storage, Anna Selina (Nancy), celebrated soprano; b. London, 1766; d. there, Aug. 24, 1817. She was of Italian origin; her father Stefano Storage was a player on the double-bass; her brother Stephen Storage (q.v.) was a composer. She was a pupil of Rauzzini and of Sacchini in Venice; sang in Florence, Milan, and Parma; then went to Vienna in 1784, where she was engaged at the court opera. She created the role of Susanna in Mozart's Nozze di Figaro (May 1, 1786). Returning to England in 1787, she became popular as a singer in comic operas. —Cf. M. K. Ward, Nancy Storage, in the 'Mus. Times' (Nov., 1949).

Storage, Stephen, composer; brother of Anna Selina Storage; b. London, Jan. 4, 1763; d. there, March 19, 1796. He was a pupil of his father Stefano Storage, an excellent double-bass player of Italian descent, whose original name was Sorage. He studied violin at the Cons. di S. Onofrio in Naples. When his sister went to Vienna from Italy, he followed her; there he became acquainted with Mozart. In Vienna he brought out 2 of his operas to Italian texts: Gli Sposi malcontenti (June 1, 1785) and Gli Equivoci (Dec. 27, 1786). Back in London, he produced an Italian opera, La Cameriera astuta (March 4, 1788), and a number of English operas: The Haunted Tower (Nov. 24, 1789; his greatest success; performed many times in London and revived as late as 1922), No Song No Supper (April 16, 1790), The Siege of Belgrade (Jan. 1, 1791), The Pi- rates (Nov. 21, 1792), The Prize (March 11, 1793), My Grandmother (Dec. 16, 1793), The Cherokee (Dec. 20, 1794), The Three and the Deuce (Sept. 2, 1795). An opera, Mahmoud, or The Prince of Persia, was not finished at his death, but was arranged by Michael Kelly, and performed posthumously on April 30, 1796. Storace wrote several other pieces of theatrical music, some of them adaptations, admitted or concealed, of works by other composers, such as Dittersdorf's Doctor und Apotheker and Salieri's Grotta di Trofonio.—Cf. R. Graves, The Comic Operas of Stephen Storace, in the 'Mus. Times' (Oct., 1954).

Storch (shtohrh), M. Anton, Austrian conductor and composer; b. Vienna, Dec. 22, 1813; d. there, Dec. 31, 1888. He was conductor at the Carl and Josephstadt Theaters in Vienna, and produced several of his operettas and opera-burlesques there: Romeo und Julie (Oct. 31, 1863); Das Festkleid (April 1, 1865), Löwen im Dorfe (Sept. 27, 1866), Wiener Zugstücke (April 26, 1868), Prinz Taugenichts (March 8, 1870; successful); wrote many favorite male quartets (Letzte Treue, Grün, etc.).

Storck, Karl, Alsatian writer on music; b. Dürmenach, April 23, 1873; d. Olsberg, May 9, 1920. He studied at the Universities of Strasbourg and Berlin (Dr. phil., 1897); wrote music criticism for the 'Deutsche Zeitung' (Berlin). He publ. a unique edition, Musik und Musiker in Karikatur und Satire (Oldenburg, 1911), richly illustrated by numerous reproductions of caricatures on musical subjects; other publications include: Der Tanz (1903); Geschichte der Musik (1904); Das Opernbuch (1905; 44th printing, 1946); Die Kulturelle Bedeutung der Musik (1907); Mozart (1908; 2nd ed., 1923); Musik-Politik (1911); Emil Jaques-Dalcroze (1912). He edited selections from the letters of Beethoven (1905; 3rd ed., 1922), Mozart (1906), and Schumann (1906).

Storer, John, English organist and composer; b. Hulland, near Derby, May 18, 1858; d. Berwick-on-Tweed, May 1, 1930. He was a chorister at various churches before entering Oxford Univ. (Mus. Bac., 1878). In 1891 he became music director of the old Globe Theatre in London, and later filled similar positions in London; settled in Waterford, Ireland, as organist of the Roman Catholic Cathedral, and prof. of plainchant at St. John's Ecclesiastical College; left Waterford in 1916, and lived in Sheffield and Reading, England. He composed the operas The Punchbowl (London, 1887) and Gretna Green (London, 1889); an oratorio, Deborah and Barak (1881); 2 symphonies: The Holiday (1909) and Vita (1914); several Masses; church services; songs; organ pieces.

Stöwe (shtō'-veh), Gustav, German pianist and pedagogue; b. Potsdam, July 4, 1835; d. there, April 13, 1891. He studied at the Stern Cons. in Berlin; in 1875 founded the Potsdam Musikschule, and was its director until he died. He publ. Die Klaviertechnik, dargestellt als musikalisch-physiologische Bewegungslehre (1886; thorough analysis of the elements of piano touch); wrote piano pieces.

Stradal (shtrah'-dahl), August, pianist; b. Teplitz, Bohemia, May 17, 1860; d. Schönlinde, Germany, March 13, 1930. He studied composition with Bruckner at the Vienna Cons. and piano with Door; was a pupil of Liszt in 1884 and became an ardent propagandist for Liszt's piano music; gave concerts in Germany, Austria, France, and England; made arrangements of Liszt's orchestral works; also of Bach, Frescobaldi, etc. His original compositions consist of piano pieces (Ungarische Rhapsodie, etc.) and songs. He wrote Erinnerungen an Franz Liszt (Bern, 1929).—Cf. Hildegard Stradal, August Stradals Lebensbild (Bern, 1934).

Stradella, Alessandro, Italian composer; b. Montefestino, 1642; murdered in Genoa, Feb. 25, 1682. According to a story narrated in Bonnet-Bourdelot's Histoire de la musique et de ses effets (Paris, 1715), Stradella was engaged to compose an opera for Venice, but there met the mistress of a Venetian nobleman and ran off with her before his work was produced; the enraged nobleman thereupon engineered an attempt upon Stradella's life at Turin in 1677. Though he was one of the most famous composers of his time, details of his biography are lacking, and he has been made the subject of many legends. He is the hero of Flotow's opera Alessandro Stradella (Hamburg, 1844), and operas by Niedermeyer (Paris, 1837), Sinico (Lugo, 1863), etc. His murder is attributed to the jealousy of an actress. Another attempt on his life was also made in Rome.—As a composer Stradella developed the structural form and expressive power of the aria, and was one of the first to make use of the instrumental crescendo.—Works: 148 MSS in the Modena Library, including 8 oratorios and 11 dramas; cantatas in the Naples Cons. Library; 21 cantatas in the library of San Marco, Venice (10 publ. by L. Escudier, with piano accompaniment by Halévy); others in the Paris National Library, and at the Cons.; 1 motet and 8 cantatas at Christchurch Library, Oxford; a number of cantatas, madrigals, arias, duets, etc., in the British Museum; etc. Among his extant works are the oratorios S. Giovanni Battista, Esther, S. Pelagia, S. Giovanni Crisostomo, Susanna, and S. Edita vergine; the operas Il Corispeo, Orazio Cocle sul ponte, Trespolo tutore, La Forza del amore paterno (1678; new ed. by A. Gentili, Rome, 1931); the cantata Il Barcheggio (dated June 16, 1681). —The church aria Pietà, Signore and the arias O del mio dolce ardor and Se i miei sospiri have been wrongly attributed to Stradella. —Cf. A. Catelani, Delle Opere di A. S. esistenti nell' archivio musicale della R. Biblioteca Palatina di Modena (Modena, 1866); P. Richard, A. S. (Paris, 1866); H. Hess, Die Opern A. S., in 'Beiheft' II, 3 of 'Publikationen der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (1906); F. M. Crawford, S. (London, 1911); A. Einstein, Ein Bericht über den Turiner Mordanfall auf A. S., in 'Sandberger-Festschrift' (1918); E. M. Dufflocq, A. S., in 'Bollettino Bibliografico Musicale' (1929); A. Della Corte, in 'Musica d'oggi' (1931); A. Gentili, A. S. (Turin, 1936); G. Roncaglia, Le Composizioni strumentali di A. S., in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (1940-42; also separately, 1942).

Stradivari (Stradivarius), Antonio, the most celebrated of all violin makers; b. Cremona, 1644 (according to Bacchetta, end of 1648 or beginning of 1649); d. there, Dec. 18, 1737. He was a pupil of Niccolò Amati and worked for him from about 1667-79. He purchased the house in which, for half a century, his workshop was situated, in 1680. His finest instruments were made in the period from 1700 to 1725; but he still worked up to the year of his death; his last instrument was made by him at the age of 92. His label reads: 'Antonius Stradivarius Cremonensis. Fecit Anno . . . (A * S.)'. His cellos command even higher prices than the violins, and violas the highest of all, for he made very few of them. Stradivari had 11 children; of them Francesco (b. Feb. 1, 1671; d. May 11, 1743) and Omobono (b. Nov. 14, 1679; d. July 8, 1742), were his co-workers. Stradivari also made viols of early types, guitars, lutes, mandolins, etc. —Cf. F. J. Fétis, A. S., luthier célèbre (Paris, 1856; English transl., London, 1864); P. Lombardini, Cenni sulla celebre scuola Cremonense degli stromenti ad arco . . . e sulla famiglia del sommo Antonio Stradivari (Cremona, 1872; with genealogical table from the 13th century to date of publication); A. Reichers, The Violin and the Art of its Construction; A Treatise on S. (1895); H. Petherick, A. S. (London, 1900); W. H., A. F., and A. E. Hill, A. S. His Life and Work (London, 1902; the standard work); A. Mandelli, Nuove indagini su A. S. (Milan, 1903); H. Herrmann, Geschichte und Beschreibung von zwei Meisterwerken des A. S. (N. Y., 1929); R. Bacchetta, S. (1937); G. Hoffmann, S. l'enchanteur (Paris, 1938); W. D. Orcutt, The S. Memorial at Washington . . . (Washington, 1938); M. Boger, Das Geheimnis des Stradivari (Berlin, 1944); D. J. Balfourt, A. S. (Amsterdam, 1945; also in English); E. N. Doring, How Many Strads? . . . a tabulation of works believed to survive, produced in Cremona by A. S. between 1666 and 1737 . . . (Chicago, 1945); G. Ottani, S. (Milan, 1945).

Straesser, Ewald, German composer; b. Burscheid, June 27, 1867; d. Stuttgart, April 4, 1933. He studied with Wüllner at the Cologne Cons.; taught theory there until 1921; from 1922 to his death was prof. at the Stuttgart Musikhochschule. He wrote 6 symphonies, 5 string quartets, piano pieces, and songs.

Straeten. See Van der Straeten.

Strakosch, Maurice, pianist and impresario; b. Gross-Seelowitz, Moravia, 1825; d. Paris, Oct. 9, 1887. He studied with Sechter at the Vienna Cons.; traveled as a pianist in Europe; came to America in 1848, settling in N. Y. as a teacher; from 1856 he was active mainly as an impresario. He was the brother-in-law of Adelina Patti, and managed her concerts. He gave his first season of Italian opera in N. Y. in 1857, and in 1859 took his company to Chicago; then went to Europe. His opera Giovanna di Napoli was brought out in N. Y.; he also wrote salon pieces for piano; publ. Ten Commandments of Music for the Perfection of the Voice (posthumous; 1896) and Souvenirs d'un Impresario (Paris, 2nd ed., 1887). After his departure from America, his brother, Max Strakosch (1834-92), carried on the management of his enterprises.

Strang, Gerald, American composer; b. Claresholm, Canada, Feb. 13, 1908. He studied at Stanford Univ., and later at the Universities of California and Southern California; during World War II he worked as an engineer at the Douglas Aircraft Co. He joined the ranks of advanced modernists; was for a time managing editor of the 'New Music Quarterly Edition' (1935-40); was assistant to Schoenberg at the Univ. of California, Los Angeles (1936-38). His music is strongly formalistic, with a technical idea determining the content. —Works: Intermezzo for orch. (2nd movement of a symph.; Los Angeles, April 14, 1937, composer conducting); Canzonet, for strings (1942); sonatina for clarinet alone (1932); clarinet quintet (1933); Three Pieces for flute and piano (1933); Percussion Music for 3 players (1935); Mirrororrim ('mirror' in mirror spelling), for piano; etc.

Strannolyubsky, Boris Mikhailovitch, Russian composer; b. St. Petersburg, Aug. 8, 1903; studied with Gnssin and Glière in Moscow; devoted himself mainly to the study of folk music; edited the series 'Songs of the Peoples of the Soviet Union' (1949-54). —Works: 2 symphonies: I (1944); II, The Kremlin Chimes (1947); 2 symph. suites: Three Elements (1941) and Fatherland (1951); a cello sonata; 2 piano trios; 2 piano sonatas; Fairy Tale for 2 harps (1954); pieces for the mandolin, for guitar, for accordion, and other popular instruments; choruses; songs.

Stransky, Josef, orchestral conductor; b. Humpoletz, near Deutschbrod, Bohemia, Sept. 9, 1872; d. New York, March 6, 1936. While studying medicine (M. D., Prague, 1896), he also studied music, at Leipzig with Jadassohn and in Vienna with R. Fuchs, Bruckner, and Dvořák. In 1898 he was engaged by A. Neumann as 1st Kapellmeister at the Landestheater in Prague; in 1903 he went in a similar capacity to the Stadttheater in Hamburg; in 1910 he resigned from the Hamburg opera to devote himself to concert work; in the autumn of 1911 became Mahler's successor as conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic Society, a position he held until 1923. A bequest of one million dollars to the society (by Joseph Pulitzer, 1912) enabled Stransky to carry out successfully the sweeping reforms instituted by his illustrious predecessor (chief of which was a system of daily rehearsals during the season of 23 weeks). For 2 seasons (1923-25) he was conductor of the N. Y. State Symph. Orch. Having formed a valuable picture collection of his own, he abandoned all of his musical activities, and entered the business of a prominent New York and Paris firm of dealers in oil paintings. He publ. Symphonische Lieder; an operetta, Der General, was produced in Hamburg. He also wrote some instrumental music, and publ. a new ed. of Berlioz's Beatrice und Benedikt.

Straram, Walther, French conductor; b. London (of French parents), July 9, 1876; d. Paris, Nov. 24, 1933. He was educated in Paris, where he studied violin; in 1892 joined the Lamoureux Orch.; in 1896 was opera coach in Lyons; in 1906 became chorusmaster at the Opéra-Comique in Paris; from 1909 to 1913, assistant of André Caplet at the Boston Opera Co. In 1926 he established the Concerts Straram in Paris, and gave several concerts every season until his death. He conducted the 1st performance of Ravel's Boléro for Ida Rubinstein (1928).

Strategier, Herman, Dutch composer; b. Arnhem, Aug. 10, 1912. He studied music with his father, a church organist, whom he succeeded at St. Walburgis Church at Arnhem, in 1935; the church was destroyed in war action in 1944, and he went to Haarlem, and later to Utrecht. He has written much church music; a flute concerto; a symphony; a string quartet; many solo songs; publ. a collection of folksongs.

Stratton, George (Robert), English violinist and pedagogue; b. London, July 18, 1897; d. there, Sept. 4, 1954. He studied in London; was concertmaster of the London Symph. Orch. (1933-52); also organized the Stratton String Quartet (1925-42). He publ. (in collaboration with Alan Frank) a practical book, The Playing of Chamber Music (London, 1935; reprinted, 1951).

Stratton, Stephen Samuel, English organist; b. London, Dec. 19, 1840; d. Birmingham, June 25, 1906. Pupil of C. Gardner (organ) and C. Lucas (composition); settled in 1866 in Birmingham, where he held various posts as organist, the last being at the Church of the Saviour (1878-82); for several years music critic of the Birmingham 'Daily Post' and contributed to the London 'Monthly Mus. Record' and 'Mus. Times.' He was the author (with J. D. Brown) of a valuable work, British Musical Biography (1897); also publ. Mendelssohn (1901; revised ed., 1934) and Niccolò Paganini: His Life and Work (1907). His compositions include chamber music, piano pieces, part-songs and songs.

Straube (shtrou'-beh), Karl, prominent German organist; b. Berlin, Jan. 6, 1873; d. Leipzig, April 27, 1950. Pupil of H. Reimann (organ) and Ph. Rüfer (composition) in Berlin. 1897-1902, organist at the Cathedral in Wesel; from 1902 at St. Thomas' in Leipzig, having also been appointed conductor of the 'Bachverein' (1903), prof. at the Cons. (1907), and official organist at the Gewandhaus (1908). In 1918 he succeeded G. Schreck as cantor of St. Thomas'. At his suggestion the Gewandhaus chorus and the Bachverein were united in 1919, and he conducted the combined choirs until 1922. He founded the 'Kirchenmusikalisches Institut der Landeskirche Sachsens' and became its director. He conducted the Handel Festival in 1925, leading to the formation of the Handel Society. Dr. phil. (hon. c.) from Leipzig Univ., 1918. His first recital in 1894 attracted unusual attention; thereafter, until 1918, he was heard in the principal cities of Germany. He was the first to introduce the organ works of Reger, with whom he was on terms of intimate friendship. He publ. 'Alte Orgelmeister' (1904); '45 Choralvorspiele alter Meister' (1907); 'Alte Meister des Orgelspiels' (2 vols., 1929); 'Ausgewählte Gesänge des Thomanerchors' (1930); also editions of Bach's Magnificat (1909), Handel's 'Dettingen' Te Deum (1913) and Salomon (1926), organ works of Liszt, etc. His Briefe eines Thomaskantors were publ. posthumously (Stuttgart, 1952). —Cf. G. Robert-Tornow, Max Reger und Karl Straube (Göttingen, 1907; new ed., Leipzig, 1929); J. Wolgast, Karl Straube (Leipzig, 1928). A 'Festschrift' was publ. for him on his 70th birthday (Leipzig, 1943).

Straus, Oscar, Austrian operetta composer; b. Vienna, March 6, 1870; d. Ischl, Jan. 11, 1954. He studied privately in Vienna with A. Prosnitz and H. Grädener, and with Max Bruch in Berlin. From 1895 to 1900 he conducted at various theaters in Austria and Germany; in 1901 he became conductor of the artistic cabaret 'Überbrett!' managed by Ernst von Wolzogen in Berlin, and wrote a number of musical farces for it. He remained in Berlin until 1927; then lived in Vienna and Paris; on Sept. 3, 1939, he became a French citizen. In 1940 he came to America; lived in New York and Hollywood until 1948, when he returned to Europe. He was one of the most successful composers of Viennese operettas; his most celebrated production was Der tapfere Soldat, based on G. B. Shaw's play, Arms and the Man (Vienna, Nov. 14, 1908; in N. Y. as The Chocolate Soldier, Nov. 13, 1909; London, Sept. 10, 1910; innumerable performances all over the world). Other operettas are: Die lustigen Nibelungen (Vienna, Nov. 12, 1904); Hugdietrichs

Bräutfahrt (Vienna, March 10, 1906); Ein Walzertraum (Vienna, March 2, 1907; revised 1951); Didi (Vienna, Oct. 23, 1909); Das Tal der Liebe (Berlin and Vienna, simultaneously, Dec. 23, 1909); Mein junger Herr (Vienna, Dec. 23, 1910); Die kleine Freundin (Vienna, Oct. 20, 1911); Love and Laughter (London, 1913); Rund um die Liebe (Vienna, Nov. 9, 1914; in N. Y. as All Around Love, 1917); Die himmelblaue Zeit (Vienna, Feb. 21, 1914); Die schöne Unbekannte (Vienna, Jan. 15, 1915; in N. Y. as My Lady's Glove, 1917); Drei Walzer (Zürich, Oct. 5, 1935); Ihr erster Walzer (Munich, March 31, 1950); Bozema (Munich, May 16, 1952). He further wrote a Serenade for string orch.; Alt-Wiener Reigen, for string orch.; Suite in Tanzform for violin, cello, and piano; Der Traum ein Leben, overture; many piano pieces; an album, Bilderbuch ohne Bilder for 4 hands. —Cf. B. Grun, Prince of Vienna: the Life, the Times, and the Melodies of Oscar Straus (London, 1955; N. Y., 1957).

Strauss, Eduard, brother of Johann Strauss, Jr.; b. Vienna, March 15, 1835; d. there, Dec. 28, 1916. A pupil of G. Preyer in composition, he made a successful début with his own orch. at the 'Dianasaal' in 1862; acted as Johann's substitute during the latter's tour of Russia (1865); succeeded him in 1870 as conductor of the court balls. For many years he gave concerts in the 'Volksgarten' (summer) and in the hall of the 'Musikverein' (winter); also made extended tours, visiting the U. S. in 1892 and 1901-02. He then dissolved his orch. (founded by his father in 1826), which after three-quarters of a century of uninterrupted success, had become almost a historical institution. His publ. dances comprise 318 opus numbers, but could not rival his brother's in popularity. In 1906 he published Erinnerungen.

Strauss, Franz, German horn virtuoso, father of Richard Strauss; b. Parkstein, Feb. 26, 1822; d. Munich, June 2, 1905. Until his retirement in 1889 he was solo hornist at the Hofoper in Munich; although a violent opponent of Wagner, the master valued him highly, and entrusted to him at the premières of Tristan, Meistersinger, and Parsifal the important solo passages; until 1896 he was prof. of his instrument at the Akademie der Tonkunst, and from 1875-96 conducted an excellent amateur orch., the 'Wilde Gungl,' in Munich. He wrote a horn concerto in C minor (op. 8); Nocturne (op. 7) and Empfindungen am Meere (op. 12) for horn and piano; 17 Konzerttuden und Übungen für Naturhorn (2 books). —Cf. F. Trenner, Der Vater: Franz Strauss, in 'Zeitschrift für Musik' (June, 1955).

Strauss, Johann (Sr.), 'The Father of the Waltz'; b. Vienna, March 14, 1804; d. there, Sept. 25, 1849. His father, who kept a beer-house and dance-hall, apprenticed him to a bookbinder; after Strauss had run away, his parents consented to his becoming a musician. He studied the violin under Polyschansky, and harmony under Seyfried; at 15 joined Pamer's orch. in the 'Sperl' dance-hall, and the Lanner Quartet in 1823, later acting as deputy conductor of Lanner's orch.; organized an independent orch. of 14 in 1826, playing at various resorts, and producing his first waltzes (op. 1 is the Täuberl-Walzer, for the garden concerts at the 'Zwei Tauben'). His renown spread, and his orch. increased rapidly in size and efficiency; from 1833 he undertook concert tours in Austria, and in 1834 was appointed bandmaster of the 1st Vienna militia regiment. His tours extended to Berlin in 1834, and to Holland and Belgium in 1836; in 1837-38 he invaded Paris with a picked corps of 28, and had immense success both there and in London. In 1845 he was made conductor of the court balls at Vienna. Among 152 published waltzes, the Lorelei-, Gabrielen-, Taglioni-, Cäcilien-, Victoria-, Kettenbrücken-, and Bajaderen-Walzer, the Elektrische Funken, Mephistos Höllenrufe, and the Donau-Lieder are prime favorites; he also wrote 24 galops, 13 polkas, 32 quadrilles, 6 cotillons and contredances, 18 marches, and 6 potpourris. Both as composer and conductor he distinctly raised the level of dance music. His complete works (251 op. numbers), edited by his son Johann, were publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel in 1889: Vols. I-V, Waltzes; vol. VI, Polkas, Galops, Marches; vol. VII, Quadrilles (piano scores only; full scores in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' vols. 63, 68, and 74). —Cf. L. Scheyerer, J.S.s musikalische Wanderung durch das Leben (Vienna, 1851); R. Kleinecke, J. S. (Leipzig, 1894); F. Lange, Josef Lanner und J. S. (Vienna, 1904; 2nd ed., 1919); F. Farga, Lanner und S. (Vienna 1948); M. Schönherr and K. Reinöhl, J. S. Vater (Vienna, 1953).

Strauss, Johann (Jr.), greatly celebrated Austrian composer of light music, 'The Waltz-King'; b. Vienna, Oct. 25, 1825; d. there, June 3, 1899. His father intended all three of his sons for business; but the mother privately procured instruction on the violin (from Kohlmann) and in composition (Hofmann and Drexler) for Johann, who threw off paternal control, tender though it was, and appeared as conductor of his own ensemble of 15 players at Donmayer's restaurant at Heitzing (Oct. 15, 1844). His success was instantaneous, and his new waltzes won wide popularity. Despite his father's objections to this rivalry in the family, Johann Strauss continued his concerts with increasing success; after his father's death in 1849 he united his father's band with his own; made a tour through Austria, Germany, Poland, and Russia. From 1863 to 1870 he was conductor of the court balls in Vienna, resigning in favor of his brother Eduard to obtain more leisure for composition, turning from dance music, in which he had won supreme artistic and popular success, to operetta. In 1872 he accepted an invitation to visit the U. S., and directed 14 monster-concerts in Boston and 4 in N. Y. He contracted 3 marriages: to the singer Henriette Treffz, the actress Angelica Dietrich, and Adele Deutsch. He wrote almost 500 pieces of dance music (498 op. numbers); of his waltzes the greatest popularity was achieved by An der schönen blauen Donau (op. 314, 1867), the Blue Danube Waltz, whose main tune became one of the best-known in all music. Brahms wrote on a lady's fan the opening measures of it, and underneath: 'Leider nicht von Brahms' (Alas, not by Brahms); Wagner, too, voiced his appreciation of the music of Strauss. Other well-known waltzes are Geschichten aus dem Wiener Wald (1868), Wein, Weib, Gesang (1869), Wiener Blut (1870), Rosen aus dem Süden (1878); Frühlingsstimmen (1881), Tausend und eine Nacht, Künstlerleben, etc.; also numerous quadrilles, polkas, polka-mazurkas, marches, galops, etc. His finest operetta is Die Fledermaus, an epitome of the Viennese spirit that continues to hold the stage as one of the masterpieces of its genre. It was first staged at the Theater an der Wien on April 5, 1874, and was given within a few months in N. Y. (Dec. 29, 1874); productions followed all over the world. It was performed in Paris with a new libretto as La Tzigane (Oct. 30, 1877); the original version was presented there as La Chauve-souris on April 22, 1904. Also very successful was the operetta Der Zigeunerbaron (Vienna, Oct. 24, 1885). All his operettas were first produced in Vienna, with the exception of Eine Nacht in Venedig (Berlin, Oct. 3, 1883). A complete list of Vienna productions includes: Indigo und die vierzig Räuber (Feb. 10, 1871); Der Karneval in Rom (March 1, 1873); Cagliostro in Wien (Feb. 27, 1875); Prinz Methusalem (Jan. 3, 1877); Blindekuh (Dec. 18, 1878); Das Spitzenruch der Königin (Oct. 1, 1880); Der lustige Krieg (Nov. 25, 1881); Simplizius (Dec. 17, 1887); Ritter Pázmán (Jan. 1, 1892); Fürstin Ninetta (Jan. 10, 1893); Jabuka, oder Das Apfelfest (Oct. 12, 1894); Waldmeister (Dec. 4, 1895); Die Göttin der Vernunft (March 13, 1897).—Bibliography: L. Eisenberg, J. S. (Leipzig, 1894); R. von Procházka, J. S. (Berlin, 1900); R. Specht, J. S. (Berlin, 1909); F. Lange, J. S. (Leipzig, 1912); J. Schnitzer, Meister Johann (2 vols.; Vienna, 1920); E. Decsey, J. S. (Berlin, 1922; reprinted Vienna, 1948); K. Kobald, J. S. (Vienna, 1925); S. Loewy, Rund um J. S. (Vienna, 1925); H. Sündermann, J. S., ein Vollender (Brixlegg, 1937); Ada B. Teetgen, The Waltz Kings of Old Vienna (London, 1939); A. Witeschnik, Die Dynastie Strauss (Vienna, 1939); H. E. Jacob, J. S. und das 19. Jahrhundert . . . (Amsterdam, 1937; English transl. as J. S., Father and Son, A Century of Light Music (N. Y., 1940); W. Jaspert, J. S. (Berlin, 1939); Erich Schenk, J. S. (Potsdam, 1940); David Ewen, Tales from the Vienna Woods; the Story of J. S. (N. Y., 1944); J. Andriessen, J. S., de koning van de wals (Amsterdam, 1950); J. Pastene, Three-Quarter Time; the Life and Music of the Strauss Family (N. Y., 1951); P. Kuringer, J. S. (Haarlem, 1952). See also J. S. schreibt Briefe, ed. by his third wife, Adele Strauss (Vienna, 1926). A complete catalogue of works is found in C. Flamme, ed., Verzeichnis der sämtlichen im Drucke erschienenen Kompositionen von Johann Strauss (Vater), Johann Strauss (Sohn), Josef Strauss, und Eduard Strauss (Leipzig, 1898) and in A. Weinmann, Verzeichnis sämtlicher Werke von Johann Strauss, Vater und Sohn (Vienna, 1956).

Strauss, Josef, Austrian composer of waltzes; brother of Johann Strauss, Jr., b. Vienna, Aug. 22, 1827; d. there, July 21, 1870. He was versatile and gifted, and at various times wrote poetry, painted, and patented inventions. He first appeared in public conducting in Vienna a set of his waltzes (July 23, 1853); was often asked by his celebrated brother to replace him as conductor, and accompanied him on tours to Germany, Russia, etc. He wrote 283 op. numbers, of which some are well worthy of his family's renown. His op. 173, Dynamiden, was used by Richard Strauss for a theme in Der Rosenkavalier. —Cf. A. Witeschnik, Die Dynastie Strauss (Vienna, 1939).

Strauss, Richard, great German composer; b. Munich, June 11, 1864; d. Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Sept. 8, 1949. His father, the well-known horn player Franz Strauss, supervised his son's education. At the age of 4, he received regular instruction from A. Tombo, the harpist of the court orch.; in his 8th year he began to study the violin with Benno Walter, the concertmaster of the court orch.; from 1875 to 1880 he studied composition with the court conductor, F. W. Meyer. His first attempt at writing music (a Polka in C) dates from the year 1870, when he was 6, and he wrote piano pieces, songs, and even orchestral overtures as a child; his op. 1, a Festmarsch for orch., written at the age of 12, was publ. in 1880. In the meantime he had completed an academic course of study at the Gymnasium, graduating in 1882; then attended lectures on philosophy at the Munich Univ. (1882-83). On March 30, 1881, the first major work of Richard Strauss, the Symphony in D minor, was performed in Munich by Hermann Levi; Benno Walter, Strauss's teacher, played his violin concerto (Munich, Feb. 8, 1883). These works, written in the forms of the classic masters, revealed an astonishing degree of technical mastery, and won for Strauss immediate recognition; he was only 20 when he could boast the distinction of an American première, for on Dec. 13, 1884, Theodore Thomas, then conductor of the N. Y. Philharmonic, gave the first U. S. performance of the Symphony in F minor. Strauss spent the winter of 1883-84 in Berlin, where Hans von Bülow became interested in him and engaged him as assistant conductor with Bülow's orchestra in Meiningen. When Bülow left Meiningen in 1885, Strauss became his successor. Although he remained in Meiningen for only one season (1885-86), this sojourn proved to be a turning point in his career, for in that short time he became intimately associated with the poet and musician Alexander Ritter (q.v.), who revealed to Strauss the meaning of the revolution in esthetics produced by Wagner and Liszt. Ritter urged on Strauss the concept of 'music as expression' and thenceforward Strauss became convinced of the artistic importance of music with a literary or philosophical outline. After a journey to Italy in the spring of 1886, he became one of the conductors of the Court Opera in Munich (1886-89); his duties were not onerous, and he had ample time for composition; in Munich he wrote the symph. fantasy Aus Italien, and his first significant works in the new style, the symph. poems Don Juan and Tod und Verklärung. In the autumn of 1889 he was appointed 1st conductor of the Weimar court orch.; there he remained until spring, 1894. In Weimar he brought out Don Juan on Nov. 11, 1889 and another tone-poem, Macbeth, on Oct. 13, 1890; on June 21, 1890, he conducted the 1st performance of Tod und Verklärung at the meeting of the Allgemeiner Deutscher Musik-Verein in Eisenach. These works were revelations of a talent of striking originality and boldness, and made Strauss one of the greatest figures of the nascent era of musical modernism; he was praised extravagantly by admirers, and damned violently by traditionalists. Hans von Bülow called him 'Richard the Second' as a legitimate heir to Wagner's mantle. Indeed, Strauss extended Wagner's system of leading motifs to the domain of symphonic music; his tone-poems are interwoven with motifs, each representing some relevant programmatic element. Analytical brochures, compiled especially by German commentators, illustrate the complex involvements of thematic allusions in these works. —Strauss spent the winter of 1892 in Greece, Egypt, and Sicily, writing the text and music of his first stage work, the opera Guntram, which he conducted in Weimar on May 12, 1894. Pauline de Ahna sang the leading part; she married Strauss on Sept. 10, 1894, and remained with him throughout his life, dying a few months after he did. Strauss was appointed successor to Bülow as conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic in the autumn of 1894, and led it during the season of 1894-95. In 1896 he conducted his own works in Brussels, Liège, and Moscow, and also in many German cities; in 1897 he visited Amsterdam, Paris, London, and Barcelona. In the meantime, he continued unremittently to write music; in quick succession, he brought out his masterpieces of musical characterization, Till Eulenspiegels lustige Streiche (Cologne, Nov. 5, 1895, Wüllner conducting), the philosophical poem after Nietzsche, Also sprach Zarathustra (Frankfurt, Nov. 27, 1896, composer conducting), and Don Quixote, variations with a cello solo, after Cervantes (Cologne, March 8, 1898, Wüllner conducting). The series of his great tone poems was concluded with the autobiographical work, Ein Heldenleben (Frankfurt, March 3, 1899, composer conducting). For his first visit to America in the early months of 1904, Strauss wrote a new work of considerable dimensions, a Symphonia domestica, which he conducted at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., on March 31, 1904. The score was so naturalistic, and so frankly autobiographical, that it amused and shocked the public, but the music itself fell distinctly below the poetically charged inspiration of the preceding tone-poems. Even more literal was his last symphonic work, Eine Alpensinfonie, which calls for a wind machine and a thunder machine to portray a storm in the Alps; it was first performed by the composer himself in Berlin, on Oct. 28, 1915. But while his symphonic production lagged, he turned vigorously to the field of the opera, producing works of exceptional merit. After Guntram, he wrote Feuersnot (Dresden, Nov. 21, 1901), which attracted little attention. Then on Dec. 9, 1905, the Dresden Opera staged the opera Salome, after Oscar Wilde's French play, translated into German. In this score he went far beyond the limits of Wagnerian music drama, and created a psychological tragedy of shattering impact; the erotic subject was illustrated by sensuous music. The opera made the rounds of European theaters in quick succession, but when the Metropolitan Opera Co. produced Salome in N. Y. (Jan. 22, 1907), there were violent protests, and it was taken out of the repertory, not to be revived until many years later. Scarcely less forceful was the impression produced by the next opera, Elektra (Dresden, Jan. 25, 1909), in which the horrors of matricide were pictured with extraordinary strength. Then, as if to make a graceful concession to public taste, Strauss produced Der Rosenkavalier (Dresden, Jan. 26, 1911), a charming comedy, which quickly became famous. With Elektra and Der Rosenkavalier, Strauss established his fruitful collaboration with the poet Hugo von Hofmannsthal, who wrote the librettos for these works, and also for the subsequent operas Ariadne auf Naxos (Stuttgart, Oct. 25, 1912), Die Frau ohne Schatten (Vienna, Oct. 10, 1919), Die ägyptische Helena (Dresden, June 6, 1928), and Arabella (Dresden, July 1, 1933). After Hofmannsthal's death in 1929, Strauss turned to Stefan Zweig for the libretto of Die schweigsame Frau (Dresden, June 24, 1935), and to Josef Gregor for Friedenstag (Munich, July 24, 1938), Daphne (Dresden, Oct. 15, 1938), and Die Liebe der Danae (written in 1938-40; produced posthumously, Salzburg, Aug. 14, 1952). The last opera by Strauss was Capriccio, to a libretto by the conductor Clemens Krauss (Munich, Oct. 28, 1942). The operas after Der Rosenkavalier were received with deference and interest, but were not retained in the permanent repertory. It may be said, therefore, that the true creative period of Strauss ended for his stage works in 1911, with Der Rosenkavalier; and for his symphonic compositions in 1899 with Ein Heldenleben. From 1898 to 1918 Strauss was on the staff of the Berlin Opera; in 1919, he became co-director (with Franz Schalk) of the Vienna State Opera, holding this position until 1924, not on a permanent basis, however, so that he had time for extended tours, one of which took him again to America in 1922. He also spent much time at his villa in Garmisch, Bavaria. On Nov. 15, 1933, Strauss was appointed president of the Reichsmusikkammer under the Nazi regime, but resigned in June, 1935. He visited London as conductor of his own works in 1937, and received there the gold medal of the Philharmonic Society. He was the recipient of numerous other honors and decorations. In 1902 the Univ. of Heidelberg made him Dr. phil., honoris causa. He remained in his home at Garmisch during World War II, and wrote the mournful Metamorphosen (with a symbolic quotation from Beethoven's funeral march from the Eroica) in the last months of the war; then lived for some time in Switzerland. He was strong enough to travel to England for a series of concerts in 1947; returning to Germany, he had to face the special court at Munich, investigating collaborators with the Nazis, but was officially exonerated (June 8, 1948).—Works: Operas: Guntram (Weimar, May 10, 1894; new version, Weimar, Oct. 22, 1940); Feuersnot (Dresden, Nov. 21, 1901); Salome (Dresden, Dec. 9, 1905); Elektra (Dresden, Jan. 25, 1909); Der Rosenkavalier (Dresden, Jan. 26, 1911); Ariadne auf Naxos (Stuttgart, Oct. 25, 1912); Die Frau ohne Schatten (Vienna, Oct. 10, 1919); Intermezzo (Dresden, Nov. 4, 1924); Die ägyptische Helena (Dresden, June 6, 1928); Arabella (Dresden, July 1, 1933); Die schweigsame Frau (Dresden, June 24, 1935); Friedenstag (Munich, July 24, 1938); Daphne (Dresden, Oct. 15, 1938); Die Liebe der Danae (1938-40; Salzburg, Aug. 14, 1952); Capriccio (Munich, Oct. 28, 1942). Ballets: Josephslegende (Paris, May 14, 1914); Schlagobers (Vienna, May 9, 1924). For orch.: Festmarsch (1876); symphony in D minor (Munich, March 30, 1881); violin concerto (Munich, Feb. 8, 1883); symph. in F minor (N. Y., Dec. 13, 1884); horn concerto No. 1 (Meiningen, March 4, 1885); Burleske, for piano and orch. (1885); Aus Italien, symph. fantasy (Munich, March 2, 1887); Don Juan, symph. poem, after Lenau (Weimar, Nov. 11, 1889); Tod und Verklärung, symph. poem (Eisenach, June 21, 1890); Macbeth, after Shakespeare (Weimar, Oct. 13, 1890); Till Eulenspiegels lustige Streiche, symph.

poem (Cologne, Nov. 5, 1895); Also sprach Zarathustra, symph. poem, after Nietzsche (Frankfurt, Nov. 27, 1896); Don Quixote, variations based on Cervantes (Cologne, March 8, 1898); Ein Heldenleben, symph. poem (Frankfurt, March 3, 1899); Symphonia domestica (N. Y., March 31, 1904); Festliches Präludium (Vienna, Oct. 19, 1913); Eine Alpensinfonie (Berlin, Oct. 28, 1915); Parergon zur Symphonia domestica, for piano (left hand) and orch. (Leipzig, Oct. 29, 1925, Paul Wittgenstein, soloist); München Walzer (originally written for film, 1939; new version, 1945; performed posthumously, Vienna, March 31, 1951), Festmusik on the 2600th anniversary of the Japanese Empire (Tokyo, Oct. 27, 1940); Divertimento on pieces by Couperin (Vienna, Jan. 31, 1943); horn concerto No. 2 (Salzburg, Aug. 11, 1943); Metamorphosen, for 23 string instruments (Zürich, Jan. 25, 1946); oboe concerto (Zürich, Feb. 26, 1946); duet concertino, for clarinet, bassoon, strings, and harp (Radio Svizzera Italiana, April 5, 1948). Chamber music: string quartet (1879-80); cello sonata (1882-83); Serenade, for 13 wind instruments (1881); piano quartet (1884); violin sonata (1887); sonatina No. 1, for 16 wind instruments (1943); sonatina No. 2, for 16 wind instruments (1944-45). Choral works: chorus for Electra of Sophocles (1880); Wanderers Sturmlied, for chorus and orch. (1884); Eine deutsche Motette, for solo voices and 16-part chorus (1923); Die Tageszeiten, cycle for men's chorus and orch. (1928); many unpubl. choral pieces. For voice and orch.: 4 songs (1896-97); 4 Hymns for soprano (1921); Drei Gesänge, for high voice (1948); Im Abendrot, for high voice (1948). For voice and piano: 26 albums to words in German; of these songs the earliest are the most famous: Zueignung (1882); Die Nacht (1882); Allerseelen (1883); Ständchen (1885); Barcarole (1886); Breit über mein Haupt (1886); Cäcilie, Heimliche Aufforderung, and Morgen (1893-94); Traum durch die Dämmerung (1894); Ich trage meine Minne (1896). For recitation and piano: Enoch Arden, after Tennyson (1890) and Das Schloss am Meer, after Uhland (1899). For piano: 5 pieces (1881); sonata (1881); 4 Stimmungsbilder (1883). Strauss arranged Gluck's Iphigénie en Tauride for production at Weimar; his version was used for the American première at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., Nov. 25, 1916; translated, revised, and enlarged the Traité d'Instrumentation of Berlioz (1905); made a new arrangement of Beethoven's The Ruins of Athens (Vienna, 1927); edited Mozart's Idomeneo (1930); harmonized a number of folksongs for Peters' 'Volksliederbuch für Männerchor'; edited and published his father's posthumous works for horn. He publ. his souvenirs, Betrachtungen und Erinnerungen (Zürich, 1949; edited by W. Schuh; in English, N. Y., 1953).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: A. BIOGRAPHY: A. Seidl and W. Klatte, R. S. Eine Charakter-skizze (Prague, 1896); G. Brecher, R. S. Eine monographische Skizze (Leipzig, 1900); E. Urban, R. S. (Berlin, 1901); Ernest Newman, R. S. (London, 1908); M. Steinitzer, R. S. (Berlin, 1911; 17th ed., 1928); H. T. Finck, R. S. The Man and His Works (Boston, 1917); R. Specht, R. S. und sein Werk (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1921); H. W. von Waltershausen, R. S. (Munich, 1921); R. C. Muschler, R. S. (Hildesheim, 1924); W. Hutschenruyter, R. S. (in Dutch; The Hague, 1929); E. Gehring, ed., R. S. und seine Vaterstadt (Munich, 1934); F. Gysi, R. S. (Potsdam, 1934); R. Tenschert, Anekdoten um R. S. (Vienna, 1945); R. Tenschert, R. S. und Wien (Vienna, 1949); W. Brandl, R. S., Leben und Werk (Wiesbaden, 1949); K. Pfister, R. S., Weg, Gestalt, Denkmal (Vienna, 1949); C. Rostand, R. S. (Paris, 1949); O. Erhardt, R. S. Leben, Wirken, Schaffen (Olten, 1953); F. Trenner, R. S. Dokumente seines Lebens und Schaffens (Munich, 1954); E. Krause, R. S., Gestalt und Werk (Leipzig, 1955). —B. CRITICISM, APPRECIATION: G. Jorisienne, R. S. Essai critique et biologique (Brussels, 1898); E. Urban, S. contra Wagner (Berlin, 1902); E. Newman, R. S. and the Music of the Future, in Musical Studies (London, 1905); O. Bie, Die moderne Musik und R. S. (Berlin, 1906); E. Schmitz, R. S. als Musikdramatiker (Munich, 1907); E. Zeigler, R. S. in seinen dramatischen Dichtungen (Munich, 1907); J. C. Manifarges, R. S. als Dirigent (Amsterdam, 1907); F. Santoliquido, Il Dopo-Wagner: C. Debussy e R. S. (Rome, 1909); G. Tebaldini, Telepatia musicale e proposito dell' Elektra di R. S. (Turin, 1909); M. Steinitzer, Straussiana und Anderes (Stuttgart, 1910); O. Hübner, R. S. und das Musikdrama (Leipzig, 1910); H. Rutters, R. S. en de S-feesten (Amsterdam, 1911); H. Daffner, Salome: Ihre Gestalt in Geschichte und Kunst (Munich, 1912); A. Seidl, Straussiana (Regensburg, 1913); M. Steinitzer, R. S. in seiner Zeit (Leipzig, 1914; 2nd ed., 1922); W. Schrenk, R. S. und die neue Musik (Berlin, 1924); J. Subirá, R. S., su hispanismo (in Spanish; 1925); K. J. Krüger, Hugo von Hofmannsthal und R. S. (Berlin, 1935); H. Röttger, Das Formproblem bei R. S. (Berlin, 1937); J. Gregor, R. S. Der Meister der Oper (Munich, 1939); R. Tenschert, 3 x 7 Variationen über das Thema R. S. (Vienna, 1944); W. Schuh, Über Opern von R. S. (Zürich, 1947); F. von Schuch, R. S., Ernst von Schuch und Dresdens Oper (2nd ed., Leipzig, 1953); G. Hausswald, R. S., ein Beitrag zur Dresdner Operngeschichte seit 1945 (Dresden, 1953); Strauss numbers of the 'Allgemeine Musikzeitung' (1939) and 'Die Musik' (vol. 4, no. 8; vol. 13, no. 17). The following books contains important chapters on various phases of Strauss' art: J. Huneke, Mezzotints in Modern Music (N. Y., 1899); J. Huneke, Overtones (N. Y., 1904); L. Gilman, Phases of Modern Music (N. Y., 1904); F. Draeseke, Die Konfusion in der Musik (Stuttgart, 1906); F. Niecks, Program Music in the Last Four Centuries (London, 1907); L. Gilman, Aspects of Modern Opera (N. Y., 1908); L. A. Coerne, The Evolution of Modern Orchestration (N. Y., 1908); P. Bekker, Das Musikdrama der Gegenwart (Stuttgart, 1909); R. Louis, Die deutsche Musik der Gegenwart (Munich, 1909); L. Schmidt, Aus dem Musikleben der Gegenwart (Berlin, 1909; with preface by Strauss); R. Mayrhofer, Zur Theorie des Schönen (Leipzig, 1911); R. Rolland, Musiciens d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1908; in English, 1914); P. Rosenfeld, Musical Portraits (N. Y., 1920); C. Gray, Survey of Contemporary Music (London, 1927). See also vols. VI and VII of H. v. Bülow's Briefe und Schriften (Leipzig, 1907). —C. CATALOGUES, GUIDES: R. Specht, Vollständiges Verzeichnis der im Druck erschienenen Werke von R. S. (Vienna, 1910; also contains valuable biographical data); E. H. Müller von Asow, R. S. Thematisches Verzeichnis (began publ. in 1955; a complete thematic catalogue); Modern Music and Drama (2 vols.; Boston, 1911, 1915; gives list of several hundred titles of articles publ. about Strauss in English and American journals); Festschrift der R. S. Woche München (1930); E. Blom, The Rose Cavalier (London, 1930); T. Armstrong, S.'s Tone-poems (London, 1931). Analyses of the instrumental works are found in H. Kretzschmar's Führer durch den Konzertsaal (Leipzig, 1887; 4th ed., 1913) and in Schlesinger's 'Musikführer' and 'Meisterführer' (Berlin); guides to the dramatic works in Schlesinger's 'Opernführer' (Berlin), Wossidlo's 'Opernbibliothek' (Leipzig), and the numerous handbooks of Kufferath, Taubmann, Chop, Roese, Gilman, Schanzer, etc. —D. CORRESPONDENCE: R. S. Briefwechsel mit Hugo von Hofmannsthal, ed. by Franz Strauss (S.'s son; Vienna, 1926; in English, N. Y., 1927); R. S. und Hugo von Hofmannsthal: Briefwechsel (complete ed., by Franz and Alice Strauss; Zürich, 1952); R. S. et Romain Rolland; correspondance (Paris, 1951); Briefe an die Eltern: 1882-1906 (Zürich, 1954); Correspondence: Hans von Bülow and R. S. (London, 1955); R. S. und Josef Gregor Briefwechsel, 1934-1949 (Salzburg, 1955); Briefwechsel zwischen R. S. und Stefan Zweig (Frankfurt, 1957).

Stravinsky, Feodor Ignatievitch, Russian bass singer; father of Igor Stravinsky; b. in the Tchernigov district, June 15, 1843; d. Wildungen, Germany, Dec. 3, 1902. He became a member of the Imperial Opera at St. Petersburg in 1876; his interpretations of heroic and comical types in Russian operas evoked sincere praise from critics and professional musicians alike. He was famous as Méphistophélès in Gounod's Faust; was distinguished not only for the power of his voice, but also for his acting talent; Shaliapin emulated him in this respect. Altogether, he made 1,235 appearances in 64 operatic roles.

Stravinsky, Igor (Feodorovitch), one of the greatest masters of modern music; b. Oranienbaum, near St. Petersburg, June 17, 1882. He was the son of a famous bass singer at the Imperial Opera, Feodor Stravinsky (q.v.) and was brought up in an artistic atmosphere. He studied law, and it was not until he reached the age of 19 that a meeting with Rimsky-Korsakov in Heidelberg encouraged him to undertake a serious study of composition. Upon Rimsky-Korsakov's advice, he studied theory with Kalafati. In 1907 Stravinsky began to take regular private lessons with Rimsky-Korsakov himself in St. Petersburg. On Jan. 22, 1908, his 1st symph., already showing a mastery of technique, was performed in St. Petersburg; and on Feb. 29, 1908, his set of songs, Le Faune et la bergère, for mezzo-soprano and orch., was brought out in St. Petersburg with considerable success. For Maximilian Steinberg's marriage to Rimsky-Korsakov's daughter (June 17, 1908), Stravinsky wrote an orchestral fantasy Feu d'artifice. Rimsky-Korsakov died a few days later, and Stravinsky wrote a threnody to pay tribute to his master. On Feb. 6, 1909, Stravinsky's next orchestral work, Scherzo fantastique, was performed in St. Petersburg. The famous impresario, Diaghilev, heard it and became interested in the new talent. Diaghilev had just asked Liadov for a ballet to be presented at the Paris season of the Ballets Russes, but Liadov declined;

Diaghilev then commissioned Stravinsky to write a suitable work on a Russian subject. The result was the production of the first of Stravinsky's ballet masterpieces, Zhar-Ptiitsa, performed under the French title, L'Oiseau de feu (Paris, June 25, 1910). Here Stravinsky wrote a score of coruscating brilliance, steeped in Russian folklore, and marking a natural continuation of Rimsky-Korsakov's series of musical fairy-tales. There are numerous striking effects in orchestral treatment, such as a glissando of harmonics in the string instruments, and the rhythmic elements are exhilarating; 2 orchestral suites were extracted from the work, the more famous of which was reorchestrated by Stravinsky in 1919, to conform to his new ideas of musical economy, with a general reduction of the orchestral apparatus; but the original scoring remained a favorite with conductors and orchestras. Stravinsky's association with Diaghilev shifted his activities to Paris, where he made his home from 1911, with sojourns in Switzerland. His 2nd ballet for Diaghilev, Petrouchka (Paris, June 13, 1911), was highly successful; not only was it remarkably effective on the stage, but the music, arranged in 2 orchestral suites, was so new and original that it marked a turning point in 20th-century modernism; the spasmodically explosive rhythms, the novel instrumental sonorities, with the use of the piano as an integral part of the orchestra, and the bold innovation in employing 2 different keys sounded simultaneously (C major and F# major—the "Petrouchka Chord") exercised a highly potent influence upon contemporary composers. Two years later Stravinsky brought out a work of even greater revolutionary import, the ballet, Le Sacre du printemps (Rite of Spring; Russian title, Vesna Sviashchennaya, literally Spring the Sacred), produced by Diaghilev and his Ballets Russes in Paris on May 29, 1913. In this score, Stravinsky severed all ties with traditional harmony, and made use of dissonant combinations without precedent in modern music; the score still stands out as one of the most daring creations of the musical mind. Its impact was tremendous; there were demonstrations at the première on the part of some of the audience who believed that a trick was being played on them; but progressive musicians accepted the work as the beginning of a new era in composition. Shortly before the outbreak of World War I, Diaghilev produced Stravinsky's lyric fairy-tale, Le Rossignol, after Hans Christian Andersen (Paris, May 26, 1914). The war disrupted musical activities in Europe; Stravinsky spent the years 1914-18 mostly in Switzerland, where he continued to compose; Russian subjects still dominated his creative imagination. He worked on his ballet, Les Noces (Russian title, Svadebka, literally, Little Wedding), scored for an unusual ensemble of chorus, soloists, 4 pianos, and 17 percussion instruments. During the last months of the war Stravinsky formulated his idea that economy in musical settings became imperative in the impoverished world. To indicate the way, he wrote a stage play, Histoire du Soldat, scored for only 7 players; the work includes several stylized modern dances. At the same time he wrote a work for 11 instruments entitled Ragtime, rhythmically derived from early American jazz music. He resumed his association with Diaghilev and wrote for him a ballet, Pulcinella (on themes attributed to Pergolesi, although recent investigation has shown that some of them are not by him). He also wrote for Diaghilev two 1-act operas, Mavra, after Pushkin, and Renard, to stories from Russian folk literature (both produced by Diaghilev, Paris, June 3, 1922). These two works were the last in which Stravinsky used Russian subjects. In his next significant composition, the piano concerto, commissioned by Koussevitzky, Stravinsky inaugurated the much-discussed neo-Classical trend, abandoning his erstwhile luxuriance of instrumental color and affective dissonance; but his reversion to old forms was not an act of ascetic renunciation, but rather a grand experiment in reviving Baroque practices which had fallen into desuetude. He performed it with the Boston Symph. Orch. under Koussevitzky on Jan. 23, 1925, on the occasion of his 1st American tour. The Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation commissioned him to write a pantomime for string orch.; the result was Apolon Musagète, given at the Library of Congress in Washington, on April 27, 1928. This score, serene and emotionally restrained, evokes the court ballets of Lully in its spirit. He continued to explore the possibilities of neo-Classical writing in the Capriccio for piano and orch. (Paris, Dec. 6, 1929), but in this score he produced a work of hedonistic entertainment quite modern in its impact, the rhythmic element being exploited to the utmost. A desire for tragic expression became manifest in his opera-oratorio, Oedipus Rex, to a Latin text (Paris, May 30, 1927). A religious feeling found utterance in the Symphony of Psalms, written for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symph. and dedicated 'to the glory of God.' It is scored for chorus and orch., omitting the violins and violas, thus emphasizing the lower registers and creating an austere sonority suitable to the solemn subject. Owing to a delay of the Boston performance, the world première of the Symphony of Psalms took place in Brussels (Dec. 13, 1930). In 1931 Stravinsky composed a concerto for violin and orch., commissioned by the violinist Samuel Dushkin, and performed by him in Berlin on Oct. 23. On a commission from Ida Rubinstein Stravinsky wrote a ballet to a text by André Gide entitled Perséphone, which he conducted at the Paris Opéra on April 30, 1934. For his American tour in 1937, he wrote a 'ballet in three deals,' Jeux de Cartes, to his own scenario derived from an imaginary poker game, and conducted it at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., on April 27, 1937. His concerto for 16 instruments, entitled Dumbarton Oaks (after the Washington estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss) and performed in Washington, D.C., on May 8, 1938, continued the deliberate practice of neo-Baroque composition (in Paris the work was played under the simple title Concerto, without the reference to Dumbarton Oaks). Stravinsky was named Charles Eliot Norton lecturer at Harvard Univ. for 1939-40. He became a French citizen on June 10, 1934, but in 1939 he left France and settled in the U. S., making his home in Hollywood; he became an American citizen on Dec. 28, 1945. He continued to conduct his works in America and in Europe; his creative energy did not abate with the advancing years. He wrote music in variegated styles and for widely different purposes: a Circus Polka 'composed for a young elephant' commissioned by the Ringling Bros. Circus (1942); Ebony Concerto, for clarinet and swing band, performed by Woody Herman in Carnegie Hall, N. Y. (March 25, 1946); a Mass for men's and boys' voices and 10 instruments (Milan, Oct. 27, 1948); as a temporary return to his Russian antecedents, he wrote an orchestral Scherzo à la russe (1944). At the time of his application for American citizenship, he publ. an arrangement of the Star-Spangled Banner and conducted it with the Boston Symph. (Jan. 14, 1944), but because of complaints on the part of some of the audience against the unorthodox harmonization, and on account of legal injunctions existing in the state of Massachusetts against intentional mutilation of the national anthem, Stravinsky reverted to the standard version. In 1951 he completed his opera The Rake's Progress, after Hogarth's famous series of engravings, to a libretto by W. H. Auden and C. Kallman, and conducted its world première in Venice on Sept. 11, as part of the International Festival of Contemporary Music there. The opera had tremendous repercussions in the musical world, as still another illustration of Stravinsky's capacity of changing his course towards unexpected destinations; here, the style was a conglomeration of elements of 19th-century Italian opera, early English stage plays, and French opéra comique. In his latest works he applied a method of serial composition, modelled after the creations of Anton von Webern, rather than those of Schoenberg; in this manner he wrote his Canticum sacrum ad honorem Sancti Marci nominis, for tenor, baritone, chorus, and orch., which he conducted at St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice on Sept. 11, 1956. In 1957 he wrote a ballet for 12 dancers, Agon, also based on the serial technique; it was presented in Los Angeles on the occasion of his 75th birthday, June 17, 1957. —Igor Stravinsky's influence on contemporary music has been profound. Inasmuch as his early masterpieces were produced in Paris, the impact was strongest upon French composers of the generation that grew up in the 1st quarter of the 20th century. Several American composers who studied in France experienced Stravinsky's influence to a considerable degree, as did many from Spain and South America. In England, his influence was relatively weaker, and it was not strong in Germany or Italy. Owing to Soviet opposition to modern music, Stravinsky's works were virtually banned in Russia after the Revolution; he himself was proclaimed an obscurantist and a reactionary, and evoked wrathful comment in the Soviet press. A certain relaxation of restrictions against performances of Stravinsky's music came after Stalin's death (1953); the Russian pianist Gilels put Stravinsky's arrangement of Petrouchka on the programs of his recitals in Russia and the U. S.; Shostakovich publicly declared the work to be a masterpiece.

STRAVINSKY

WORKS: FOR THE STAGE: Rossignol, 'lyric tale' in 3 acts, after Andersen (Paris, May 26, 1914; also performed as a ballet, Paris, Feb. 2, 1920); The Firebird, ballet (Paris, June 25, 1910); Petrouchka, ballet (Paris, June 13, 1911); Le Sacre du printemps, ballet, 'scenes of pagan Russia' (Paris, May 29, 1913); Renard, burlesque chamber opera (Paris, June 3, 1922); Mavra, comic opera, after Pushkin (Paris, June 3, 1922); Les Noces, 'choreographic Russian scenes' (Paris, June 13, 1923); Histoire du soldat, for narrator and 7 instruments (Lausanne, Sept. 28, 1918); Pulcinella, ballet 'after Pergolesi' (Paris, May 15, 1920); Oedipus Rex, operaoratorio, after Sophocles (concert performance, Paris, May 30, 1927; stage performance, Berlin, Feb. 25, 1928); Apollon Musagète, classic ballet (Washington, D. C., April 27, 1928); Le Baiser de la fée, ballet on themes by Tchaikovsky (Paris, Nov. 27, 1928); Perséphone, ballet with recitation and chorus, to text by André Gide (Paris, April 30, 1934); Jeux de cartes (Card Party), 'ballet in 3 deals' (N. Y., April 27, 1937); Orpheus, ballet (N. Y., April 28, 1948); The Rake's Progress, opera after Hogarth's engravings; libretto by W. H. Auden and C. Kallman (Venice, Sept. 11, 1951, Stravinsky conducting); Agon, ballet for 12 dancers (Los Angeles, June 17, 1957). FOR ORCH.: symph. in Eb major, op. 1 (1905-07; St. Petersburg, Jan. 22, 1908); Le Faune et la bergère, for mezzo-soprano and orch., op. 2 (St. Petersburg, Feb. 29, 1908); Scherzo fantastique, op. 3 (St. Petersburg, Feb. 6, 1909); Fireworks, op. 4 (St. Petersburg, June 17, 1908); Funeral Chant on the Death of Rimsky-Korsakov, for chorus and orch. (1908); The Firebird, 2 orchestral suites from the ballet (1910; the 2nd reorchestrated in 1919); Petrouchka, orchestral suite from the ballet (1910-11); Le Roi des étoiles, cantata for voice and orch. (1911); Le Sacre du printemps, orchestral suite from the ballet (Paris, April 5, 1914); Chant du rossignol, suite in 3 parts from the opera (Geneva, Dec. 6, 1919; 1st performance as a ballet, Paris, Feb. 2, 1920); Ragtime, for 11 instruments (composed Nov. 11, 1918); Pulcinella, suite from the ballet (1920); Symphonies of Wind Instruments, in memory of Debussy (1920; London, June 10, 1921); suite no. 1 for small orch. (1917-25; orchestral arrangement of four of the 5 Pièces faciles for piano, 4 hands: Andante, Napolitana, Española, Balalaïka); suite no. 2 for small orch. (1921); March, Waltz, Polka, Galop; concerto for piano and wind instruments (Paris, May 22, 1924); Capriccio for piano and orch. (Paris, Dec. 6, 1929); 4 Études for orch.: Danse, Excentrique, Cantique, Madrid (Berlin, Nov. 7, 1930); Symphony of Psalms, for chorus and orch. (Brussels, Dec. 13, 1930; Boston, Dec. 19, 1930); violin concerto (Berlin, Oct. 23, 1931); concerto for 2 pianos (Paris, Nov. 21, 1935); concerto in Eb major, Dumbarton Oaks, for 16 instruments (Washington, D. C., May 8, 1938); symphony in C (Chicago, Nov. 7, 1940); Tango, arrangement of the violin piece (Philadelphia, July 10, 1941); Dances concertantes (Los Angeles, Feb. 8, 1942); Circus Polka (1942; Boston, Jan. 14, 1944); Ode, in 3 parts (Boston, Oct. 8, 1943); Norwegian Moods, 4 episodes (Boston, Jan. 14, 1944); Scènes de ballet (N. Y., Feb. 3, 1945); Scherzo à la russe (1944; San Francisco, March 22, 1946, composer conducting); symphony in 3 movements (N. Y., Jan. 24, 1946); Ebony Concerto, for clarinet and swing band (N. Y., March 25, 1946); concerto in D for string orch. (Basel, Jan. 21, 1947). CHAMBER MUSIC: 3 Poems from the Japanese, for soprano, 2 flutes, 2 clarinets, piano, and string quartet (1912-13); 3 Pieces for string quartet (1914); Pribautki, songs for voice with 8 instruments (1914); Berceuses du chat, suite of 4 songs for female voice and 3 clarinets (1915-16); 3 Pieces for clarinet solo (1919); concertino for string quartet (1920); octet for wind instruments (Paris, Oct. 18, 1923); Duo concertant, for violin and piano (Berlin, Oct. 28, 1932); Suite italienne, for cello and piano, from Pulcinella (1934); Tango, for violin and piano (1941); Élégie, for unaccompanied violin or viola (1944); septet for piano and string and wind instruments (1952; Washington, D. C., Jan. 24, 1954); 3 Songs from William Shakespeare, for mezzo-soprano, flute, clarinet, and viola (Los Angeles, March 8, 1954); In Memoriam Dylan Thomas, for tenor, string quartet, and 4 trombones (Hollywood, Sept. 20, 1954); 4 Russian songs for soprano, flute, guitar, and harp (1954). CHORAL WORKS: The Saucer, 4 Russian songs for women's voices (1914-17); Paternoster, for mixed chorus, a cappella (1926); Credo for mixed chorus, a cappella (1932); Ave Maria, for mixed chorus, a cappella (1934); Mass for men's and boys' voices and 10 instruments (Milan, Oct. 27, 1948); Cantata on 4 poems by anonymous English poets of the 15th and 16th centuries (Los Angeles, Nov. 11, 1952); Canticum sacrum ad honorem Sancti Marci nominis, for tenor, baritone, chorus, and orch. (Venice, Sept. 11, 1956, composer conducting); arrangement for chorus and orch. of J. S. Bach's Choral-Variationen über das Weihnachtslied 'Vom Himmel hoch da komm' ich her' (1956); Threni, on Lamentations of Jeremiah from the Vulgate, for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (International Festival of Contemporary Music, Venice, Sept. 23, 1958). PIANO MUSIC: 2 sonatas (1904; 1922); 4 Études (1908); 3 Pièces faciles, for piano 4 hands (1915); 5 Pièces faciles, for piano 4 hands (1917); Étude for pianola (1917); Piano Rag-Music (1920); Les cinq doigts, 8 melodies on 5 notes (1921); Serenade in A (1925); sonata for 2 pianos (1944). —Books: Chroniques de ma vie, autobiography (Paris, 1935; 2 vols.; in English as Chronicles of My Life, London, 1936); Poétique musicale, the

STRAVINSKY

Charles Eliot Norton Lectures at Harvard Univ. (Paris, 1946; in English as Poetics of Music, Cambridge, Mass., 1948). —BIBLIOGRAPHY: C. Van Vechten, in Music After the Great War (N. Y., 1915); C. S. Wise, Impressions of I. S., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1916); M. Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers (N. Y., 1917); R. D. Chennevière, The Two Trends of Modern Music in S.'s Works, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1919); B. de Schloezer, I. S. (Paris, 1926); A. Casella, I. S. (Rome, 1926); J. Waynkop, I. S. (in Russian; Leningrad, 1927); V. Belaiev, I. S.'s Les Noces, an outline (London, 1928; also in Russian); Igor Glebov, S. (Leningrad, 1929); C. F. Ramuz, Souvenirs sur I. S. (Paris, 1929; new ed., Lausanne, 1946); P. Collaer, S. (Brussels, 1930); E. W. White, S.'s Sacrifice to Apollo (London, 1930); H. Fleischer, S. (Berlin, 1931); A. Schaeffner, I. S. (Paris, 1931); J. Handschin, I. S. (Zürich, 1933); E. Evans, The Firebird and Petrouchka (London, 1933); D. de Paoli, I. S. (Turin, 1934); M. Blitzstein, The Phenomenon of S., in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1935); M. Armitage (ed.), S., a compendium of articles (N. Y., 1936); special S. issue of the 'Revue Musicale' (May-June, 1939); A. Kall, S. in the Chair of Poetry, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1940); S. Babitz, S.'s Symphony in G, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1941); M. D. Fardel, S. et les ballets russes (Nice, 1941); G. F. Malipiero, S. (Venice, 1945); A. Casella, S. (Brescia, 1947; a different work from his book publ. in 1926); E. W. White, S., a Critical Survey (London, 1947; N. Y., 1948); A. Tansman, I. S. (Paris, 1948; in English, N. Y., 1949); Theodore Stravinsky, Le Message d'I. S. (Lausanne, 1948; in English as The Message of I. S., London, 1953); M. Lederman, ed., S. in the Theatre (N. Y., 1949); E. Corle, ed., I. S. (N. Y., 1949; a compendium of articles, including some reprinted from M. Armitage's collection of 1936); F. Onnen, S. (Stockholm, 1949; in English); J. E. Girtot, I. S. (Barcelona, 1949); R. H. Myers, Introduction to the Music of S. (London, 1950); W. H. Auden et al., I. S. (Bonn, 1952); L. Oleggini, Connaissance de S. (Lausanne, 1952); H. Strobel, I. S. (Zürich, 1956; English version as S.: Classic Humanist, N. Y., 1955); 'The Score', special number for Stravinsky's 75th birthday, 1957, with articles by Sessions, H. Keller, etc.; I. S.: a Complete Catalogue of his Publ. Works (London, 1957); 'Musik der Zeit' (Bonn; 1st Series, vols. 1, 12; New Series, vol. 1); H. Kirchmeyer, I. S. Zeitgeschichte im Persönlichkeitsbild (Regensburg, 1958).

Stravinsky, Soulima, pianist, son of Igor Stravinsky; b. Lausanne, Sept. 23, 1910. He studied in Paris with Isidor Philipp and Nadia Boulanger; then gave piano recitals in Europe and America; has appeared frequently with his father, playing his works for 2 pianos.

Streafeld, Richard Alexander, English writer on music; b. Edenbridge, June 22, 1866; d. London, Feb. 6, 1919. He studied at Pembroke College, Cambridge; in 1889 he became assistant in the Dept. of Printed Books in the British Museum; was music critic of the 'Daily Graphic' (1898-1912). He publ. the following books: Masters of Italian Music (1895); The Opera (1897; 5th ed., enlarged, 1925); Modern Music and Musicians (1906); Handel (1909); Life Stories of Great Composers (Philadelphia, 1910); Musiciens anglais contemporains (French transl., 1913; English original not published); Handel, Canons and the Duke of Chandos (London, 1916); contributed many articles to English publications.

Streicher (shtri'-her), Johann Andreas, piano maker; b. Stuttgart, Dec. 13, 1761; d. Vienna, May 25, 1833. During a stay at Augsburg in 1793 he married Nanette Stein (b. Augsburg, Jan. 2, 1769; d. Vienna, Jan. 16, 1835), daughter of the piano manufacturer Johann Andreas Stein; in 1802 succeeded Stein in the business and moved it to Vienna. He invented the piano action in which the hammer strikes from above. He was on friendly terms with Beethoven. —Cf. T. Bolte, Die Musiker-Familien Stein und Streicher (Vienna, 1917); T. von Frimmel, Beethoven und das Ehepaar Streicher, in 'Alt-Wiener Kalender' (1925); W. Lütge, Andreas und Annette Streicher, in 'Der Bär' (1927).

Streicher, Theodor, Austrian song composer, great-grandson of Johann Andreas Streicher; b. Vienna, June 7, 1874; d. Wetzelsdorf, near Graz, May 28, 1940. He studied singing with F. Jäger in Vienna and J. Kniese in Bayreuth; piano with F. Löwe in Vienna; composition with H. Schulz-Beuthen in Dresden. He lived most of his life in Vienna; wrote numerous songs in a Romantic manner, reminiscent of Hugo Wolf. He set to music 36 poems from Des Knaben Wunderhorn; wrote Wanderers Nachtlied, after Goethe, for chorus a cappella; a sextet for strings; etc. He also orchestrated the accompaniments of Karl Loewe's ballads. In 1934 a 'Theodor Streicher Gemeinde' was founded in Vienna to propagate his music.

Strelezki, Anton, pianist and composer; b. Croydon, England, Dec. 5, 1859; d. 1907. According to some sources, his real name was Burnand. He studied with Clara Schumann; settled in London, where he was very popular; place and exact date of his death are unknown. He publ. a great deal of piano music (more than 225 op. numbers), some of which was widely used: Valse-Souvenir; Jagdstück; Valsette; Sérénade espagnole; Menuet à l'antique; Barcarolle; also songs; publ. Personal Recollections of Chats with Liszt (1895).

Strelnikov, Nicolay Mikhailovitch, Russian composer; b. Plotsk, May 14, 1888; d. Leningrad, April 12, 1939. He studied music with Liadov in St. Petersburg; wrote 2 operas, A Fugitive (Leningrad, May 26, 1933) and Count Nulin (1935; after Pushkin). Other works include a piano concerto, choruses, chamber music. He publ. monographs on Glinka, Rachmaninoff, and other Russian composers.

Strens, Jules, Belgian composer; b. Ixelles, Dec. 5, 1892. He studied with Paul Gilson; was one of the founders of a group called 'Synthétistes,' endeavoring to establish a modern style of composition within the formal categories of old music. In 1931 he was appointed conductor of the Association Symphonique in Brussels. —Works: opera, Le Chanteur de Naples (1922); Les Elfes, symph. poem (1927); Danse funambulesque, for orch. (1930); 4 string quartets, string sextet, wind quintet, piano trio; songs.

Strepconi (strep-pöh'-nē), Giuseppina, Italian soprano; b. Lodi, Sept. 18, 1815; d. Busseto, Nov. 14, 1897. She was the daughter of the opera conductor in Trieste, Felice Strepconi; having completed her studies at the Milan Cons. (1830-35), she made a successful début in Trieste, and was engaged at the Italian Opera in Vienna. Her appearances in Rome, Florence, Venice, and other Italian cities established her reputation as a foremost interpreter of dramatic roles. She created a sensation by her performance of Abigaille in Verdi's Nabucco (Milan, March 9, 1842). Verdi admired her greatly; after many years of intimacy they were married (1859).

Strickland, Lily Teresa, American composer; b. Anderson, S. C., Jan. 28, 1887; d. Hendersonville, N. C., June 6, 1958. She studied at Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C., later in N. Y. with A. J. Goodrich and W. H. Humiston. She married J. Courtney Anderson of N. Y. in 1912. She traveled in the Orient between 1920 and 1930, and spent several years in India; then returned to the U. S. She publ. a number of successful songs, such as Mah Lindy Lou, Dreamin' Time, Songs of India, Song From High Hills; piano suites (Moroccan Mosaics, Egyptian Scenes, Himalayan Idylls, etc.); also wrote stage works; cantatas; Oasis for orch. (1942); etc. Co-author (with Helen Frost) of Oriental and Character Dances (N. Y., 1930).

Strickland, William, American conductor; b. Defiance, Ohio, Jan. 25, 1914. He studied organ and singing; was music master at St. George's School, Newport, R. I. (1934-36). In 1946 he organized the Nashville, Tenn., Symph., of which he became permanent conductor; in 1955 appointed musical director of the N. Y. Oratorio Society.

Striegler, Kurt, German composer and conductor; b. Dresden, Jan. 7, 1886; d. Wildthurn, near Landau, Aug. 4, 1958. He studied with Draeske at the Dresden Cons. From 1912 to 1945 he was conductor at the Dresden Opera, and for 40 years (1905-45) he taught at the Musik Hochschule there. In 1945 he became director of the Cons. of Coburg. He wrote 4 symphonies; a violin concerto; a cello concerto; much chamber music; a scherzo for 7 kettledrums with orch.; numerous choruses; songs and piano pieces; also the operas Der Thomaskantor and Hand und Herz (Dresden, 1924).

Striggio (strēd'jöh), Alessandro, Italian lutenist, organist, and composer; b. Mantua, c. 1535; d. there, c. 1595. He lived at the court of Cosimo de' Medici in Florence, and later in Mantua as court conductor. In 1567 he was in Paris and London, and in 1574 at the court of the Emperor Maximilian. He composed 3 musical intermezzi for Psiche ed Amore (intermezzo for the comedy La Cofanaria; Florence, 1565, for the wedding of Francesco de' Medici and Princess Johanna of Austria) and also 3 intermezzi for the comedy L'Amico fido (not extant); also other festival music (particularly, with Merulo, Caccini, and Strozzi, a festival play for the wedding of Francesco de' Medici with Bianca Capello in 1579). Publ. several books of madrigals and Il Cicalamento delle donne . . . (1567; descriptive songs in the manner of Janequin; new ed. by Solerti and Alaleona in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' XII and XIII; new ed. by B. Somma, Rome, 1947); many compositions by Striggio are found in collections of the period (1559-1634); 5 madrigals were reprinted by Torchi in 'L'Arte Musicale in Italia' (vol. I). —Letters of Striggio were publ. by Gandolfi in 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' XX, p. 527 ff.; see also A. Solerti, Gli Albori del melodramma (Milan, 1904); O. G. Sonneck, A Description of A. S. and F. Corteccia's Intermedi 'Psyche and Amor', 1565, in Miscellaneous Studies in the History of Music (N. Y., 1921). —His son, Alessandro (called Alessandrino), was a poet, and a notable player of the violin and lra. He was active at the court of Mantua (still there in 1628) and in 1607 wrote the libretto of Monteverdi's La Favola d'Orfeo. In 1596-97 he publ. 3 books of his father's madrigals for 5 voices.

Strimer, Joseph, Russian-American pianist and composer; b. Rostov-on-the-Don, Oct. 21, 1881. He studied with Rimsky-Korsakov, Liadov, Steinberg, Tcherenpin, and Glazunov at the St. Petersburg Cons.; after graduation, went to Germany, where he studied conducting with Arthur Nikisch. He lived mostly in Paris after 1920; came to N. Y. in 1941, and established himself as a teacher of piano and composition. He publ. a number of piano pieces; paraphrases of works by Rimsky-Korsakov, Borodin, Liadov, etc.; arrangements of folksongs.

Stringfield, Lamar, American composer and conductor; b. Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 10, 1897. He served in the U. S. Army during World War I; then studied with Goetschius (theory) and Georges Barrère (flute) at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (1920-24); conducting with Chalmers Clifton. In 1930 he organized the Institute of Folk Music at the Univ. of North Carolina; was conductor of the North Carolina Symph. Orch. (1932-35), of the Knoxville Symph. Orch. (1946-47), and of the Charlotte Symph. Orch. (1948-49); remained in Charlotte as composer and arranger. The source material of his music is largely derived from Southern folklore; as a self-taught printer and engraver, he is able to publish his own works. He wrote a musical folk-drama, Carolina Charcoal (1952); for orch.: Indian Legend (1923), suite From the Southern Mountains (Pulitzer Prize, 1928; contains his best-known piece, Cripple Creek), A Negro Parade (1931), Moods of a Moonshiner (1934), Mountain Dawn (1945), About Dixie (1950); chamber music: Chipmunks for flute, clarinet, and bassoon, From a Negro Melody, for 12 instruments, Indian Sketches for flute and string quartet, Virginia Dare Dance for wind quintet; sacred cantata, Peace, for chorus a cappella; etc. He publ.

America and Her Music (Univ. of North Carolina Press, 1931).

Stringham, Edwin John, American music educator and composer; b. Kenosha, Wis., July 11, 1890. He studied at Northwestern Univ. and at Cincinnati Cons.; in 1929 went to Italy, where he took courses with Respighi. He taught at the Denver College of Music (1920-29), Teachers College of Columbia Univ. (1930-38), the Juilliard School of Music, N. Y. (1930-45), and at Queens College of the City of N. Y. (1938-46). In 1948 he settled at Chapel Hill, N. C. — Works: for orch.: The Phantom, symph. poem (1916); Visions, symph. poem (1924); The Ancient Mariner, after Coleridge (Denver, March 16, 1928); Three Pastels (Rochester, May 17, 1928); symph. No. 1 (Minneapolis, Nov. 15, 1929); 2 Nocturnes (1931; 1938); Fantasy on American Folk Tunes, for violin and orch. (1942). Vocal works: The Pilgrim Fathers, for mixed chorus a cappella (1931); Dream Song, for soprano, 2 contraltos, and piano (1933); also chamber music and songs. He publ. a book on music appreciation, Listening to Music Creatively (N. Y., 1943; revised ed., 1959); in collaboration with H. A. Murphy, Creative Harmony and Musicianship (N. Y., 1951).

Strobel, Heinrich, German musicologist; b. Regensburg, May 31, 1898. He studied in Munich with Sandberger and Kroyer; Dr. phil., 1922, with a dissertation on Hässler. From 1927 to 1933 he was music critic of the 'Börsenkurier' in Berlin; in 1939 he went to Paris; in 1945 became music director of the radio station at Baden-Baden; also editor of the monthly magazine 'Melos.' He wrote the librettos for Rolf Liebermann's Leonore 40/45 and Penelope. — Publications: Paul Hindemith (Mainz, 1928; revised ed., 1931; new enlarged ed., 1948; basic biography); Claude Debussy (Zürich, 1940; new ed., Paris, 1952); Stravinsky: Classic Humanist (publ. in English, N. Y., 1955).

Strobel, Otto, German musicologist; b. Munich, Aug. 20, 1895; d. Bayreuth, Feb. 23, 1953. He studied at the Univ. of Munich (Dr. phil., 1924). After working as an archivist at Bayreuth, he was appointed in 1938 director of the newly created Richard Wagner Institute there. He publ. Genie am Werk: Richard Wagners Schaffen und Wirken im Spiegel eigenhändischer Urkunden (Bayreuth, 1934); Richard Wagner, . . . ein Zeittafel (Bayreuth, 1952); ed.

König Ludwig II. und Richard Wagner: Briefwechsel, 4 vols. (Karlsruhe, 1936-37), and a supplement to this, Neue Urkunden zur Lebensgeschichte Richard Wagners (Karlsruhe, 1939); Neue Wagner-Forschungen, vol. 1 (Karlsruhe, 1943).

Strong, George Templeton, American composer; b. New York, May 26, 1856; d. Geneva, Switzerland, June 27, 1948. He was the son of the New York lawyer, G. T. Strong, who was also a music lover, and whose diary, expressing his dislike of Liszt and Wagner, was publ. in 1952. From him, and from his mother, who was an amateur pianist, Strong received his first training. In 1879 he went to Leipzig, where he studied with Jadassohn. He entered the Liszt circle at Weimar, and became an adherent of program music; from 1886 to 1889 he lived in Wiesbaden, where he became friendly with MacDowell; he returned briefly to America, and taught theory at the New England Cons., Boston (1891-92); then went back to Europe and settled in Switzerland. He expressed his indignation at the lack of recognition of American composers in their own country; most performances of his works took place in Switzerland. In 1930 he donated many of his original MSS to the Library of Congress in Washington. Toscanini performed his orch. suite Die Nacht with the NBC Symph. Orch., N. Y., on Oct. 21, 1939; his symph. poem, Une Vie d'artiste for violin and orch., was presented at the 20th festival of the Association des Musiciens Suisses at Zürich in June, 1920; he also wrote 3 symphonies; the symph. poem Undine and Le Roi Arthur; etc.

Strozzi (stroh'-tsē), Pietro, Florentine composer; flourished in the last quarter of the 16th century; was a member of the Bardi circle in Florence, and one of the creators of the 'stile rappresentativo,' leading to the development of opera. With Caccini, Merulo, and Striggio he wrote the festival music for the wedding of Francesco de' Medici in 1579; in 1595 he set to music Rinuccini's libretto La Mascherata degli accecati; 2 madrigals by Strozzi are in Luca Bati's Secondo Libro di Madrigali (Venice, 1598).

Strube, Gustav, composer and music educator; b. Ballenstedt, Germany, March 3, 1867; d. Baltimore, Feb. 2, 1953. He was taught the violin by his father and later by Brodsky at the Leipzig Cons.; was a member of the Gewandhaus Orch. there until 1891, when he emigrated to America; was a violinist in the Boston Symph. from 1891 to 1913; then he became head of the theory department in the Peabody Cons. at Baltimore. In 1916 he was appointed conductor of the newly organized Baltimore Symph. Orch., which he led until 1930; director of the Peabody Cons. (1916-46). He publ. a useful manual, The Theory and Use of Chords: a Textbook of Harmony (Boston, 1928). His works written in America include a symphony subtitled 'Lanier' (after Sidney Lanier, poet and musician; Washington, D.C., March 17, 1925, composer conducting); Sinfonietta (1922); Symphonic Prologue (Baltimore, April 24, 1927, composer conducting); 2 violin concertos (1924; 1930); Americana, for orch. (1930); Harz Mountains, symph. poem (1940); Peace Overture (1945); 2 string quartets (1923; 1936); 2 violin sonatas (1923); viola sonata (1924); cello sonata (1925); piano trio (1925); quintet for wind instruments (1930); also an opera, Ramona (1916). — Cf. G. Klemm, Gustav Strube: The Man and the Musician, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1942).

Strungk (shtröönk), Nicolaus Adam, German violinist, organist, and composer; b. Brunswick (baptized Nov. 15), 1640; d. Dresden, Sept. 23, 1700. He studied with his father, Delphin Strungk (1601-94), whose assistant he became at the age of 12; was then organist at the Church of St. Magnus at Brunswick; studied violin at Lübeck under Schnittelbach while attending Helmstadt Univ. At 20, he became 1st violinist in the Brunswick orch., later holding similar positions at Celle and Hanover. In 1678 Strungk became music director at Hamburg; wrote and produced operas in German (in keeping with the nationalist trend of the time), among them Der glückselig-steigende Sejanus and its sequel Der unglücklich-fallende Sejanus (1678) with German librettos by Christoph Richter adapted from the Italian; Die Liebreiche, durch Tugend und Schönheit erhöhet Esther; and Doris (all in 1680); Theseus; Semiramis; and Floretto (all in 1683), etc. (The opera Die drey Töchter Cecrops, formerly attributed to Strungk, was written by Johann Wolfgang Franck.) Strungk was subsequently chamber organist to the Elector Ernst August of Hanover, where he won the admiration of Corelli. On Jan. 26, 1688, Strungk was appointed vice Kapellmeister in Dresden, succeeding Carlo Pallavicino, whose unfinished opera Antiope Strungk completed. In this post he was beset with difficulties arising from friction with Italian musicians, and only managed to maintain his authority through the intervention of his patron the Elector Johann Georg III; when Bernhard, Kapellmeister in Dresden, died in 1692, Strungk was appointed to succeed him. In 1693, he organized an opera company in Leipzig; between 1693 and 1700 he wrote 16 operas for it, among them Alceste (performed at the inauguration of the Leipzig opera house, May 18, 1693), Agrippina (1699), etc. Financially, the enterprise was a failure, but Strungk continued to receive his salary from Dresden until his retirement on a pension in 1697. He publ. the important manual Musicalische Übung auf der Violine oder Viola da Gamba in etlichen Sonaten über die Festgesänge, ingleichen etlichen Ciacconen mit 2 Violinen bestehend (1691). A selection of airs from his operas was publ. in Hamburg under the title Ein hundert auserlesenen Arien zweyer Hamburgischen Operen, Semiramis und Esther. Mit beigefügten Ritornellen (1684). Among his instrumental works, a sonata for 2 violins and viola da gamba, and several other sonatas are extant; MS No. 5056 of the Yale Univ. Music Library (Lowell Mason Collection) contains capriccios and ricercars by Strungk, among them the Ricercar sopra la Morte della mia carissima Madre Catherina Maria Stubenrauen . . . (Venice, 1685). Six capriccios and a ricercar by Strungk, included in the 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' (XIII, 2), are wrongly ascribed to Georg Reutter (Senior). — Cf. F. Zelle, J. Theile und N. A. Strungk (Berlin, 1891); F. Berend, Nicolaus Adam Strungk: sein Leben und seine Werke (dissertation; Hanover, 1915); see also G. Frotscher, Geschichte des Orgelspiels (Berlin, 1934-35, vol. I).

Strunk, (William) Oliver, American musicologist; b. Ithaca, N. Y., March 22, 1901. He was educated at Cornell Univ. (1917-19; also 1927, musicology with Otto Kinkeldey) and at the Univ. of Berlin (1927-28; musicology with J. Wolf); also studied privately with Sinding and Royce at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y. From 1928 to 1932 he was on the staff of the Music Division of the Library of Congress; then was assistant chief (1932-34), and chief (1934-37); also taught at the Catholic Univ. in Washington, D. C. In 1937 he was appointed to the faculty of Princeton Univ.; prof. there since 1950; lectured at various universities in America and Europe; held a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1951. He publ. State and Resources of Musicology in the U. S. (Washington, 1932) and the extremely valuable compilation Source Readings in

STUART—STUNTZ

Music History (N. Y., 1950), containing English translations of treatises and documents on music from the earliest times to the 19th century. He has also publ. important articles, especially in the fields of Renaissance, 18th-century, and Byzantine music.

Stuart, Leslie (real name Thomas A. Barrett), English operetta composer; b. Southport, March 15, 1866; d. Richmond, Surrey, March 26, 1928. He was church organist in various provincial towns in England; settled in London in 1895, where he soon became known as a composer of popular songs. He achieved enormous success with his operetta, Floradora, produced in London on Nov. 11, 1899, and subsequently performed in England and America for many seasons, but failed to duplicate this success in any of his later works, which included The Silver Slipper (1901), The School Girl (1903), The Belle of Mayfair (1906), Havana (1908), Captain Kidd and The Slim Princess (1910), and Peggy (1911).

Stuck, Jean Baptiste, cellist and composer of operas; b. Florence, c. 1680; d. Paris, Dec. 9, 1755. He played the cello in theater orchestras in Italy and in Paris, and also wrote incidental music for various plays; lived most of his life in Paris, except for a brief sojourn in Bavaria (1714). He wrote 3 operas to French texts: Méléagre (1709), Manto la fée (1711), Polidore (Feb. 15, 1720), and ballets for the Versailles Court. He publ. 4 books of cantatas (1706, 1708, 1711, 1714); a collection of airs (1709).

Stucken, Van Der. See Van Der Stucken.

Stuckenschmidt, Hans Heinz, eminent German music critic and writer; b. Strasbourg, Nov. 1, 1901. He studied piano and composition; from 1929 till 1933 he was music critic of the Berlin daily 'B. Z. am Mittag,' and was active as a lecturer and writer on modern music. In 1934 he was forbidden to continue journalism in Germany, and went to Prague, where he wrote music criticism until 1941, when his activities were stopped once more by the occupation authorities; was drafted into the Germany army; after the war became director of the department for new music of the radio station RIAS in Berlin; also was lecturer at the Technical Univ. there (1948). He publ. Arnold Schönberg (Zürich, 1951) and Neue Musik (as vol. 2 of the series 'Zwischen den beiden Kriegen,' Berlin, 1951; in French, Paris, 1956). With Josef Rufer, founded and edited the monthly musical magazine 'Stimmen' (Berlin, 1947-49).

Stückgold, Grete (née Schneidt), soprano; b. London, June 6, 1895. Her mother was English, her father German. She studied voice with Jacques Stückgold, whom she married (divorced in 1928). She was a member of the Berlin State Opera before coming to America in 1927. On Nov. 2, 1927 she made her début at the Metropolitan Opera as Eva in Die Meistersinger, and remained on its roster until 1939. In 1953 she opened an opera school in N. Y. Her second husband was Gustav Schützendorf (q.v.).

Stückgold, Jacques, singing teacher and writer; b. Warsaw, Jan. 29, 1877; d. New York, May 4, 1953. He studied in Venice; in 1899 settled in Germany as singing teacher; in 1933 came to the U. S., and lived in N. Y. He publ. Der Bankrott der deutschen Gesangkunst and Über Stimm-bildungskunst.

Stumpf, Carl, German musicologist; b. Wiesentheid, Lower Franconia, April 21, 1848; d. Berlin, Dec. 29, 1936. He studied philosophy, theology, and the natural sciences at Würzburg and Göttingen (Dr. phil., 1870), and in 1873 became full prof. at Würzburg; from 1879 at Prague, from 1884 at Halle, from 1889 at Munich, and from 1893 at Berlin; retired in 1928. A profound student of music, he wrote valuable works dealing with the physiological and psychological aspects of that subject. Ed. 'Beiträge zur Akustik und Musikwissenschaft' (1898-1924) and, with Hornbostel, the 'Sammelbände für vergleichende Musikwissenschaft' (from 1922). —Publ. Tonpsychologie (2 vols., 1883, 1890), extending the researches of Helmholtz; Die pseudo-aristotelischen Probleme über Musik (1897); Geschichte des Konsonanzbegriffs (1897); Die Anfänge der Musik (1911); Die Sprachlaute. Experimentellphonetische Untersuchungen nebst einem Anhang über Instrumentalklänge (1926); Lieder der Bellakula-Indianer, in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' II (1886); etc. —Cf. E. Schumann, Die Förderung der Musikwissenschaft durch die akustischpsychologische Forschung C. Stumpfs, in 'Archiv für Musikwissenschaft' (1923); C. Sachs, Zu Carl Stumpfs achtzigstem Geburtstag, in 'Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 10).

Stuntz, Joseph Hartmann, German conductor and composer; b. Arlesheim, near Basel, July 25, 1793; d. Munich, June 18, 1859. He studied in Munich with Peter Winter; succeeded him as conductor in 1826; wrote several operas produced at Munich; publ. 2 overtures; a string quartet; men's choruses.

Sturgeon, Nicholas, English divine and composer; date and place of birth unknown; d. London, May 31, 1454. In 1442 he became precentor of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. He was the owner, and possibly the scribe, of the MSS found in Old Hall, near Ware; 7 works by Sturgeon (2 not complete) are part of the Old Hall MS collection, including a curious isorhythmic motet, Salve mater Domini, for 3 voices, which was probably written for the journey of Henry V to France (1416), on which Sturgeon accompanied him.

Stürmer, Bruno, German composer; b. Freiburg-im-Breisgau, Sept. 9, 1892; d. Bad Homburg, May 19, 1958; studied piano at the Cons. of Karlsruhe; then organ and composition with Philipp Wolfrum at the Univ. of Heidelberg; musicology with Sandberger and Kroyer at the Univ. of Munich. After service in the German Army during World War I, he taught piano in Karlsruhe (1917-22); was theater conductor in Remscheid, Essen, and Duisburg (1922-27); in 1927 founded a music school in Homburg; then was conductor of choral societies in Kassel and elsewhere (until 1945); after 1945, lived in Darmstadt and Frankfurt. He was a prolific composer (about 150 op. numbers); wrote in a distinctively modern manner, leaning towards neo-Classicism; was particularly adept in choral writing; his most notable work was Die Messe des Maschinenmenschen, for baritone, male chorus, and orch. (1932). Other works: dance drama, Die Maske der Katze; cantatas with orch.: Von der Vergänglichkeit, Vom Tod zum Leben, Aus Liebe, Gott in der Natur; for voice with chamber groups: Erlösungen, Marienlieder, Lieder der Geisha, Lieder aus den Lüften, Musikantenleben, Das Lied vom Kinde, etc.; Der Zug des Todes, for 8-part chorus and percussion; Der Rattenfänger von Hameln, for baritone, children's chorus, and chamber orch.; a Requiem; many choruses a cappella; for orch.: Heitere Sinfonie, Burleske Musik, Feierliche Musik for 2 string orchestras, Tanzsuite for chamber orch., suite for amateur orch., piano concerto, violin concerto, cello concerto; chamber music: quintet for wind instruments, divertimento for clarinet and string quartet, 2 string quartets, 5 piano trios, clarinet trio, violin sonata, viola sonata, cello sonata, flute sonata, oboe sonata; piano pieces.

Stutchevsky, Joachim, cellist and composer, b. Romny, Ukraine, Feb. 7, 1891. He studied cello with Julius Klengel in Leipzig (1909-12); lived in Zürich (1912-24) and Vienna (1924-38). In 1938 he settled in Palestine; visited N. Y. in 1948. He publ. Das Violoncellspiel (Vienna, 1932; 4 vols.) and other technical studies for his instrument; composed a Chassidic Suite for cello and piano (1946); several other pieces for cello; Twilight, duet for 2 recorders (1951); piano pieces on Jewish themes; made numerous arrangements for cello of works by Mozart, Tartini, Boccherini, etc.

Subirá (Puig), José, eminent Spanish musicologist; b. Barcelona, Aug. 20, 1882. He studied at the Madrid Cons., winning 1st prizes for piano (1900) and composition (1904). He also qualified for the practice of law in 1904 (Dr. jur., 1923). From 1908-10 he studied music history and esthetics at Antwerp. In 1928 he was made Officier de la Légion d'Honneur. He specialized in the study of old Spanish theater-music, and his work in this field is extremely valuable: La Tonaadilla escénica, 3 vols. (Madrid, 1928-30); La Participación musical en el antiguo teatro español (Barcelona, 1930); Tonaadillas teatrales inéditas (Madrid, 1932); Celos aun del aire matan, Opera del siglo XVII (cf. Hidalgo; Barcelona, 1933); La Opera en los teatros de Barcelona (2 vols.; Barcelona, 1946); Historia de la música teatral en España (Barcelona, 1945); Historia y anecdotario del Teatro Real (Madrid, 1949); El Compositor Iriarte . . . y el cultivo español del melólogo (2 vols.; Barcelona, 1949-50); El Teatro del Real Palacio (Madrid, 1950). Other publications: Enrique Granados (Madrid, 1926); La Música en la Casa de Alba (Madrid, 1927); Manuscritos de Barbieri existentes en la Biblioteca Nacional (Madrid, 1936); Historia de la música (2 vols.; Madrid, 1947; revised ed., 1951); La Música, etapas y aspectos . . . (Barcelona, 1949); Historia de la música española y hispano-americana (Barcelona, 1953); Sinfonismos madrileños del siglo XIX (Madrid, 1954); Temario de crítica musical (Madrid, 1955). With H. Anglés he publ. a Catálogo musical de la Biblioteca nacional de Madrid (vol. 1, Barcelona, 1946). In 1953 he was elected member of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Madrid. Apart from his musicological works, he publ. a novel, Su virginal pureza (1916) and a historic account, Los Españoles en la guerra de 1914-1918 (4 vols.).

Such, Percy Frederick, cellist and music editor; b. London, June 27, 1878. He studied cello in Germany (1892-98); appeared frequently with the Joachim Quartet; settled in the U. S.; in 1928 became prof. of cello at Rutgers Univ., and subsequently was on the faculty of the N. Y. College of Music (1938-49). With Sir Donald Tovey he edited the cello sonatas of Beethoven; publ. about 50 cello arrangements of Classical works, and editions of old cello music.

Sucher (zöð'-her), Joseph, conductor; b. Döbör, Hungary, Nov. 23, 1843; d. Berlin, April 4, 1908. He studied in Vienna with Sechter; in 1876 was conductor of the Leipzig City Theater; 1877, married the soprano Rosa Hasselbeck; they were at the Hamburg Stadttheater from 1878 to 1888; Sucher then became conductor of the Berlin Opera, his wife being engaged there as prima donna. He was especially distinguished as an interpreter of the Wagner repertory. He composed several vocal works: Aus alten Märchen, for women's voices with orch.; Waldfräulein, for soprano solo, mixed chorus, and orch.; Seeschlacht bei Lepanto for male chorus and orch.; songs (Ruheort, etc.).

Sucher, Rosa (née Hasselbeck), operatic soprano; wife of Joseph Sucher; b. Velburg, Germany, Feb. 23, 1849; d. Eschweiler, April 16, 1927. She received her first instruction from her father, a chorusmaster; sang in Berlin and Danzig; then in Leipzig, where she married the conductor Joseph Sucher (1877); both were engaged for Hamburg (1878-88) and then at the Berlin Opera. From 1886 to 1899 she sang at every Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, and in 1895 she appeared in the great Wagner roles in Damrosch's season at the Metropolitan Opera, making her American début as Isolde (Feb. 25, 1895). Her repertory included every soprano part from Senta to Kundry in Wagner's music dramas; her interpretation of Beethoven's Fidelio was regarded as equal to that of Katharina Klafsky and Lilli Lehmann in excellence. She publ. the memoirs Aus meinem Leben (Leipzig, 1914).

Suchon, Eugen, Slovak composer; b. Pezinok, Sept. 25, 1908. He studied at the Bratislava Cons. (1927-31) and at the Prague Master School with Novák (1931-33). In 1933 he joined the faculty of the Bratislava Univ. He continued to compose, striving to achieve a distinct Slovak style in his music. His most important work is the opera Krútnava (The Whirlpool), produced in Bratislava on Dec. 10, 1949. He further wrote a serenade for strings, a piano quartet, a serenade for wind quintet, many choruses, piano pieces. —Cf. John Clapham, The Whirlpool, a Slovak Opera, in the 'Music Review' (Feb., 1958).

Suckling, Norman, English composer and writer on music; b. London, Oct. 24, 1904. He received his academic education at Queen's College, Oxford; was assistant master at Liverpool Collegiate School (1925-43); then lectured on French literature at King's College in Newcastle-on-Tyne. While thus occupied, he developed sufficient mastery of the piano to give concerts, specializing in modern French music. He publ. a biography of Gabriel Fauré in the 'Master Musicians Series' (London, 1946) and books dealing with French literature. His compositions are mostly in smaller forms (chamber music; vocal pieces).

Suda, Stanislav, blind Czech flutist and composer; b. Starý Plzeň, April 30, 1865; d. Plzeň, Aug. 28, 1931. He was brought up at the Prague Institute for the Blind, and developed his innate musical abilities to the point where he could give concerts and compose operas, 3 of which were produced at Plzeň: U Božich Muk (March 22, 1897); Lešetínský Kovář (April 4, 1903); and Il divino Boemo (Dec. 30, 1927). He also wrote an autobiographical symph. poem, Život ve tmách (The Life in Darkness).

Sudds, William, English composer; b. London, March 5, 1843; d. Gouverneur, New York, Sept. 25, 1920. He was taken to America as a child; was a bandmaster during the Civil War; studied violin with Eichberg in Boston; wrote over 100 piano pieces and about 75 pieces of church music; many songs, etc. He publ. 2 albums of organ music: Organ Gems and 50 Organ Voluntaries; also guides to violin playing, a piano method, etc.

Suggia, Guilhermina, Portuguese cellist; b. Oporto, June 27, 1888; d. there, July 31, 1950. She was a child prodigy, and played 1st cello in the Oporto Orch. at the age of 12. Under the patronage of the Queen of Portugal she was sent to Leipzig in 1904 to study with Julius Klengel; made her début with the Gewandhaus Orch. under Nikisch at the age of 17. In 1906 she married Pablo Casals (divorced 1912). Shortly afterwards she settled in London, where she continued to appear in concerts until 1949, when she went back to Portugal. She was greatly appreciated for her fine musicianship as well as virtuosity. In 1923 Augustus John painted her portrait, which became celebrated.

Suk, Josef, Czech violinist and composer; b. Křečovice, Jan. 4, 1874; d. Benešov, near Prague, May 29, 1935. He studied with his father, a chorusmaster, and at the Prague Cons.; after graduation he took a course in composition with Dvořák, whose daughter Ottilie he married in 1898. In 1892 he became a 2nd violinist in the celebrated Bohemian String Quartet, continuing until 1922, when he became a prof. at the Prague Cons. He was a devoted follower of Dvořák in his style of composition; his works are cast in a characteristically Romantic vein, with the rhythmic elements drawn from Bohemian folk music. When his wife died in 1905, he was disconsolate; he expressed his sorrow in his 2nd symph., Asrael, dedicated to her memory and to the memory of Dvořák. He continued to compose, developing an individual manner marked by deep expressiveness and religious feeling.—Works: operatic fairy-tale, Radúz and Mahulena (Prague, April 6, 1898); dramatic legend, Pod jabloní (Under the Apple Trees) 1902; Prague, Jan. 31, 1934; for orch.: Dramatic Overture (Prague, July 9, 1892); symphony in E major (Prague, Nov. 25, 1899); Prague, symph. poem (1904); Scherzo fantastique (Prague, April 18, 1905); Asrael, 2nd symph. (Prague, Feb. 3, 1907); Pohádka léta (A Summer Fairy-Tale); Prague, Jan. 26, 1909; Zrání, symph. poem (Prague, Oct. 30, 1918); Meditation on the Chorale 'St. Venceslas' (1914); Epilogue, for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (1920-32); Fantasy, for violin and orch. (Prague, Jan. 9, 1904); 2 string quartets; piano quartet; piano trio; piano quintet; Allegro giocoso, for string quartet; other chamber music; several sets of choruses; a number of piano pieces.—Cf. Josef Suk, a collection of articles, ed. by J. M. Květ (Prague, 1935); V. Štěpán, Novák a Suk (Prague, 1945); J. Berkovec, Josef Suk (Prague, 1956).

Suk, Váša, Czech conductor and composer; b. Kladno, Nov. 16, 1861; d. Moscow, Jan. 12, 1933. He studied with Fibich at the Prague Cons.; then played the violin in the Warsaw Symph. (1879-81); conducted opera in Kiev and Moscow (1881-84); in 1906 joined the staff of the Moscow Opera. He was appreciated in Russia for his thoroughness in drilling the singers and the orch.; achieved a fine reputation as an operatic conductor. He wrote an opera, The Forest King, which he conducted at Kharkov on Feb. 16, 1900; a symph. poem, Jan Huss; a serenade for string orch.; a number of piano pieces and songs.—Cf. I. Remezov, V. Suk (Moscow, 1933).

Sulek (shoo'-lek), Stjepan, Croatian violinist and composer; b. Zagreb, Aug. 5, 1914. He studied violin with V. Huml; in composition mainly self-taught; yet he succeeded in becoming a composer of considerable merit. Among his works are 4 symphonies (of which the 2nd, Eroica, received a State Prize), a violin concerto, a cello concerto, 2 piano concertos, etc.

Sullivan, Sir Arthur Seymour, famous English composer; b. London, May 13, 1842; d. there, Nov. 22, 1900. In 1854 he entered the Chapel Royal as a chorister, under Helmore; publ. an anthem in 1855; was elected (the first) Mendelssohn Scholar in 1856, studying at the Royal Academy of Music from 1857 under Bennett, Goss, and O'Leary, and at the Leipzig Cons. 1858-61 under Moscheles, Hauptmann, Richter, Plaidy, etc., conducting a performance of his overture to Lalla Rookh in 1860, and writing string quartets and music to The Tempest (Crystal Palace, April 5, 1862). His cantata Kenilworth (Birmingham Festival, Sept. 8, 1864) stamped him as a composer of high rank. In 1864 he visited Ireland and there composed his 'Irish Symphony.' In 1866 he was appointed prof. of composition at the Royal Academy of Music. About this time he formed a life-long friendship with Sir George Grove, whom he accompanied in 1867 on a memorable journey to Vienna in search of Schubert MSS, leading to the discovery of the score of Rosamunde. The year 1867 was also notable for the production of the first of those comic operas upon which Sullivan's fame chiefly rests. This was Cox and Box (libretto by F. C. Burnand), composed in 2 weeks and performed on April 27 at the home of Arthur Lewis; later it had a long public run. Less successful were The Contrabandista (London, Dec. 18, 1867) and Thespis (London, Dec. 23, 1871); but the latter is significant as inaugurating Sullivan's collaboration with Sir W. S. Gilbert, the celebrated humorist, who became the librettist of all his most successful comic operas, beginning with Trial by Jury (March 25, 1875). This was produced by Richard D'Oyly Carte, who in 1876 formed a company expressly for the production of the 'Gilbert and Sullivan' operas. The first big success obtained by the famous team was with H.M.S. Pinafore (May 25, 1878), which had 700 consecutive performances in London, and enjoyed an enormous vogue in 'pirated' productions throughout the U. S. In an endeavor to protect their interests, Gilbert and Sullivan went to N. Y. in 1879 to give an authorized performance of Pina-

Paine (theory) at Harvard Univ. (graduated 1891); was church organist at Concord (1883-93); then teacher at Pottstown, Pa., and organist at Baltimore. In 1909 he was appointed staff lecturer in the extension department of Oxford Univ.; later, a member of the advisory board of music for the Boston Public Schools. He was extremely influential in shaping the musical curriculum in New England; in 1914 he founded the Concord Summer School of Music, which attracted students from all parts of the country. With A. T. Davison he edited 'The Concord Series' of educational music, which was adopted in many schools throughout the U. S. In 1921 he became head of the music department at Bryn Mawr College; from 1937 to 1939, he taught at Black Mountain College, N. C.; then retired. His publications include The Appreciation of Music (with D. G. Mason; 5 vols., of which vols. 2 and 5 are by Mason alone; N. Y., 1907; 16 printings before 1950); Course of Study on the Development of Symphonic Music (Chicago, 1915); Music and Life (Boston, 1917); various other publications on music history and music appreciation. He was also a composer; his light opera Priscilla, or The Pilgrim's Proxy, after Longfellow, first produced at Concord, on March 6, 1889, had more than 1,000 performances in the U. S.; he also wrote an opera, Cascabel or The Broken Tryst (Pittsburgh, May 15, 1899).

Suriano (or Soriano), Francesco, a composer of the Roman school; b. Soriano, 1549; d. there, after 1621. Was a chorister at St. John Lateran; later a pupil of Nanino and Palestrina. In 1580, choirmaster at S. Ludovico de' Francesi; from 1581-86, in Mantua; in 1587 at S. Maria Maggiore; 1588 again at S. Ludovico, returning to S. Maria Maggiore in 1595; in 1599 at St. John Lateran, and from 1600 once more at S. Maria Maggiore (pensioned June 23, 1620). He collaborated with F. Anerio in the revision of the 'Editio Medicea' of the Gradual (cf. Palestrina). Publ. 2 books of madrigals a 5 (1581, 1592); 1 book of madrigals a 4 (1601); motets a 8 (1597); Masses a 4-8 (1609); includes an arrangement of Palestrina's Missa Papae Marcelli for 8 voices; Canoni . . . sopra l'Ave Maris Stella a 3-8 voci (1610); 2 books of psalms and motets (1614, 1616); Villanelle a 3 (1617); a Passion and several Magnificats (1619). —Cf. F. X. Haberl, in 'Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch' (1895); R. Molitor, Die nachtridentinische Choralreform (1901-02).

Surinach, Carlos, Spanish composer and conductor; b. Barcelona, March 4, 1915. He studied in Barcelona with Morera (1936-39) and with Max Trapp in Berlin (1939-43). Returning to Spain in 1943, he was engaged as conductor of the Gran Teatro del Liceo in Barcelona; acted as guest conductor in Lisbon and in Paris, where he lived from 1947 to 1950; then settled in New York. — Works: El Mozo que casó con mujer brava, 1-act opera (Barcelona, Jan. 10, 1948); ballet, Monte Carlo (Barcelona, May 2, 1945); Passacaglia Symphony (Barcelona, April 8, 1945, composer conducting); 2nd symph. (Paris Radio, Jan. 26, 1950, composer conducting); Sinfonietta flamenca (Louisville, Jan. 9, 1954); Feria magica, overture (Louisville, March 14, 1956); also Tres Cantos Berberes, for flute, oboe, clarinet, viola, cello, and harp (1952); Flamenquerías for 2 pianos (1952); Ritmo Jondo, for clarinet, trumpet, xylophone, and percussion (N. Y., May 5, 1952; extended version, in ballet form, Deep Rhythm, was performed N. Y., April 15, 1953); Tientos, for English horn, harpsichord, and timpani (1953); a string quartet; songs; piano pieces.

Surzynski, Józef, Polish music scholar; b. Szrem, near Poznan, March 15, 1851; d. Koscian, March 5, 1919. He studied at Regensburg and Leipzig, then theology in Rome. In 1882 he returned to Poznan, dedicating himself to the codification of Polish sacred music; also was conductor of the cathedral chorus there. Beginning in 1885, he brought out the valuable series 'Monumenta Musicae Sacrae in Polonia,' containing works by Polish composers of the 16th and 17th centuries; also publ. several manuals for use in Polish churches; wrote many choral compositions, using Gregorian modes. His two brothers, Stefan and Mieczyslaw, were also musicians.

Susato, Johannes (real name Johannes Steinwert von Soest), German composer and singing master; b. Unna, 1448; d. Frankfurt, May 2, 1506. He was a chorister at Soest, then was in Cleve and Bruges, where he studied with English musicians; was subsequently active as singing master in Cologne, Kassel, and, from 1472, Heidelberg; Viridung was one of his pupils there. He was also a physician, and about 1500 went to Frankfurt as a municipal doctor.

Susato, Tielman, German publisher and composer; probably son of Johannes Susato; b. Cologne; d. Antwerp, c. 1561. In 1529 he moved from Cologne to Antwerp, where he was a town trumpeter; then established a music printing shop (1543) and issued 13 books of chansons, 4 vols. of Masses, 4 vols. of motets, 4 books of various songs, etc.; several of these miscellaneous works were of his own composition. —Cf. P. Bergmans, Un Imprimeur musicien: Tilman Susato, in the 'Bulletin de la Société Bibliophile Anversoise' (Antwerp, 1923). See also A. Goovaerts, Histoire et bibliographie de la typographie musicale dans les Pays-Bas (Antwerp, 1880).

Susskind, Walter, conductor; b. Prague, May 1, 1913. He studied composition with Josef Suk and Alois Hába, and conducting with Szell; in 1932 made his début as conductor at the German Opera House in Prague. In 1939 he went to Holland as pianist; then to England, where he conducted the Carl Rosa Opera Co. (1942-45). After the end of the war he conducted the Sadler's Wells Opera Co. in Germany; in 1946 he was appointed conductor of the Scottish Orch. in Glasgow; held this position until 1954, when he became conductor of the Victoria Symph. Orch. in Melbourne. —Cf. Donald Brook, International Gallery of Conductors (Bristol, 1951; pp. 200-06).

Süssmayr, Franz Xaver, Austrian composer; b. Schwabenstadt, 1766; d. Vienna, Sept. 17, 1803. He was a pupil of Salieri, and also of Mozart, of whom he became an intimate friend; after Mozart's death his widow entrusted the completion of his Requiem to Süssmayr; he was clever in emulating Mozart's style of composition, and his handwriting was so much like Mozart's that it is difficult to distinguish between them. He was conductor at the National Theater in Vienna from 1792, and 2nd conductor at the Court Opera from 1794; wrote a number of operas and operettas, which he produced in Vienna, among them: Moses (May 4, 1792); L'Incanto superato (July 8, 1793); Der Spiegel von Arkadien (Nov. 14, 1794); Idris und Zenide (May 9, 1795); Die edle Rache (Aug. 27, 1795); Die Freiwilligen (Sept. 27, 1796); Der Wildfang (Oct. 4, 1797); Der Marktschreier (July 6, 1799); Soliman der Zweite, oder Die drei Sultaninnen (Oct. 1, 1799); Gülznare (Gonora; July 5, 1800); Phasma (July 25, 1801). He wrote secco recitatives for Mozart's opera La Clemenza di Tito (Prague, Sept. 6, 1791); composed several numbers for the Vienna production of Grétry's La double épreuve, given there under the title Die doppelte Erkenntlichkeit (Feb. 28, 1796). Other works include a clarinet concerto and pieces for the English horn, for guitar, and other instruments. Most of his works are in MS. —Cf. G. L. P. Sievers, Mozart und Süssmayr (1829); W. Pole, Mozart's Requiem (1879); W. Lehner, F. X. Süssmayr als Opernkomponist, in 'Studien zur Musikwissenschaft' (vol. 18; 1931).

Suter (zöö'-tër), Hermann, Swiss composer and conductor; b. Kaiserstuhl, April 28, 1870; d. Basel, June 22, 1926. He was a pupil of his father, an organist and cantor; then studied with Hans Huber in Basel; also took courses in Stuttgart with Faisst and in Leipzig with Reinecke (1888-91). From 1892 to 1902 he conducted choral societies in various Swiss communities; in 1896 was appointed to the faculty of the Zürich Cons.; in 1902, settled in Basel, where he was active as conductor and teacher; was director of the Basel Cons. from 1918 to 1921. His best-known work is the oratorio Le Laudi di S. Francesco d'Assisi (1924); he also wrote a number of other vocal works, a symph., a violin concerto, 3 string quartets, a string sextet, and 3 song cycles. —Cf. W. Merian, Hermann Suter (Basel, 1936).

Sutermeister, Heinrich, Swiss composer; b. Feuerthalen, Aug. 12, 1910. He studied literature in Basel and Paris, then entered the Munich Academy of Music, where he was a pupil of Courvoisier and Orff; his main endeavor was to create a type of modern opera that would be dramatically effective and melodically pleasing; in this he has largely succeeded. He wrote his own librettos. His first, and greatest, success was the Shakespearean opera Romeo und Julia (Dresden, April 13, 1940); there followed Die Zauberinsel, after Shakespeare's The Tempest (Dresden, Oct. 30, 1942); Niobe (Zürich, June 22, 1946); Raskolnikoff, after Dostoyevsky's Crime and Punishment (Stockholm, Oct. 14, 1948); and Die Rote Stiefel (Stockholm, Nov. 22, 1951). Especially for the radio he wrote an opera in 1 act, Die schwarze Spinne (1936; revised for the stage, and produced at St. Gall, on March 2, 1949); his radio ballad Füsse im Feuer, was also arranged for an operatic production, and staged at the Berlin City Opera (Feb. 12, 1950); a radio melodrama, Fingerhütchen, was produced in operatic form at St. Gall on April 26, 1950. Other works include the ballet Das Dorf unter dem Gletscher (1937); Jorinde und Joringel (1936) and Andreas Gryphius (1936) for chorus; a piano concerto (1944); Orazione per orchestra, for piano and orch. (1951); Max und Moritz, for vocal quartet and piano duet (1951); music for Büchner's Wozzeck for vocal quartet (1953); Missa da Requiem (Basel, June 11, 1954); a burlesque opera, Titus Feuerfuchs (Basel, April 14, 1958); choral pieces, songs, piano pieces.

Sutro, Florence Edith (née Clinton), American music educator; b. May 1, 1865; d. New York, April 29, 1906. A graduate of the N. Y. Cons. of Music, she was the first woman in the U. S. to receive the degree of Mus. Doc. In 1898 she organized the National Federation of Musical Clubs, and was its first president; for her efforts in behalf of women composers and executants she was awarded a gold medal at the Atlanta Exposition in 1895. On Oct. 1, 1884, she married Theodore Sutro, a prominent lawyer of New York. She wrote Women in Music and Law (N. Y., 1895).

Sutro, Rose Laura (b. Baltimore, Sept. 15, 1870; d. there, Jan. 11, 1957) and Ottile (b. Baltimore, Jan. 4, 1872), American duopianists; daughters of Otto Sutro, a patron of art and founder of the Baltimore Oratorio Society. Both began piano lessons with their mother, and in 1889 were sent to Berlin, where they continued their studies. They made a spectacular début in London on July 13, 1894; first American appearance, Brooklyn, Nov. 13, 1894, followed by a tour of the U. S. Returning to Europe, they won fresh laurels, and were invited to play before Queen Victoria. Max Bruch wrote his concerto for 2 pianos and orch. expressly for them, and they gave its première with the Philadelphia Orch. on Dec. 29, 1916. In 1953 the sisters established a Sutro Club Room at the Maryland Historical Society in memory of their father.

Svanholm, Set, Swedish tenor; b. Västerås, Sept. 2, 1904. He studied at the Stockholm Cons.; was active at first as church organist in the provinces; in 1929 was appointed singing teacher at the Stockholm Cons. In 1930 he began to study voice with John Forsell; made his début in 1930 as a baritone in the part of Silvio in I Pagliacci; also sang Figaro in The Barber of Seville; then developed a higher range, and from 1936 on sang tenor parts exclusively; was equally successful in Wagner roles and the Italian repertory; sang in Vienna, Munich, and at La Scala in Milan. In 1946 he appeared as Tristan in Rio de Janeiro; in 1946 sang in San Francisco and at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. Since 1957, general music-director of the Stockholm Opera.

Svečenski (svěh-chěhn'-skě), Louis, violinist; b. Osijek, Croatia, Nov. 6, 1862; d. New York, June 18, 1926. He studied violin with J. Grün and J. Hellmesberger at the Vienna Cons.; emigrated to America in 1885 and became a member of the Boston Symph. Orchestra (1885-1903); he was also the violist throughout the entire career of the Kneisel Quartet (1885-1917); in 1917 went to live in N. Y. He publ. 25 Technical Exercises for Viola.

Svendsen, Johan (Severin), Norwegian violinist and composer; b. Christiania, Sept. 30, 1840; d. Copenhagen, June 14, 1911. He acquired practical experience in music from his father, a bandmaster, and played several instruments; then conducted a band himself; also began to compose violin music without formal education. It was not before he was 23 that he began serious study at the Leipzig Cons. (with F. David, Reinecke, and others); then toured Denmark, Scotland, Iceland, Norway, and France; played in theater orchestras in Paris; wrote incidental music for Coppée's play Le Passant (Paris, Jan. 14, 1869), a violin concerto, and other violin works. In 1870 he went back to Leipzig; then traveled to America, and married an American lady, Sarah Levett. Returning to Norway, he became conductor of the Christiania Musical Association (1872-77 and again in 1880-83). In 1883 was appointed court conductor in Copenhagen; from 1896 also conducted at the Royal Theater there. His most popular works are the 4 Norwegian Rhapsodies for orch. and the Carnaval des artistes norvégiens (also for orch.), based on genuine folk melodies; he further wrote 2 symphonies; a string quartet; a string quintet; a string octet; a cello concerto; 2 albums of songs to German, French, and Norwegian words; a Romance for violin and orch. (very popular); arrangements of Scandinavian melodies for string quartet; etc. — Cf. A. Grönwold, Norske musikere (1883); G. Schjelderup, in Norges Musikhistorie. Letters of Svendsen were publ. by G. Hauch in 'Tilskueren' (Copenhagen, 1913).

Svetlanov (svyět-lah'-nof), Evgeny Fedorovitch, Russian conductor and composer; b. Moscow, Sept. 6, 1928. He studied composition with Gnëssin and Shaporin, and conducting with Gauck; graduated from the Moscow Cons. in 1955. He was appointed conductor of the Moscow Radio in 1953, and joined the staff of the Bolshoy Theater in Moscow in 1955. — Works: cantata, The Native Fields (Moscow, 1949); a symph.; Siberian Fantasy for orch. (1953); a piano concerto (1951); a suite for string orch; a string quartet; a violin sonata; 4 piano sonatas; 5 piano sonatinas; 24 preludes for piano; several song cycles to words of Pushkin and of Soviet poets.

Sviridov (svě'-rē-dof), Georgy Vassilievitch, Russian composer; b. Fatezh, near Kursk, Dec. 16, 1915. He studied in Kursk; then was a pupil at the Leningrad Cons. of Youdin and Shostakovitch; in 1941-44 was in Novosibirsk, with a group of Leningrad composers and musicians evacuated there during the siege of Leningrad. In 1944, returned to Leningrad. —Works: musical comedies, The Real Bridegroom (1939) and Little Flames (Kiev, 1952); a symph. for string orch.; 2 piano concertos (1936, 1942); piano quintet (1945); 2 string quartets; a piano trio; many piano pieces and songs.

Swain, Freda, English pianist and composer; b. Portsmouth, Oct. 13, 1902. She studied at the Royal College of Music in London with the pianist Arthur Alexander, whom she married in 1921; gave duo-piano concerts in South Africa and Australia in 1940-43. —Works: piano concerto (1939); concertino for clarinet, strings, and horn (1948); 2 string quartets (1924; 1949); numerous piano pieces; transcriptions for 2 pianos of works by Bach and Chopin; songs.

Swalin, Benjamin, American violinist and conductor; b. Minneapolis, March 30, 1901. He studied violin with Franz Kneisel in N. Y., while supporting himself by playing in theater orchestras there. He subsequently took music courses at the Univ. of Vienna (1930-33); upon his return to the U. S., taught at the Univ. of North Carolina; organized the North Carolina Symph. in 1943, and became its regular conductor. He publ. a book, The Violin Concerto: A Study in German Romanticism (Univ. of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, 1941). —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 228-35).

Swan, Alfred (Julius), musicologist and educator; b. St. Petersburg, Russia (of English parents), Oct. 9, 1890. After attending the German Katharinenschule (high school) in St. Petersburg, he went to Oxford in 1908 and studied at the Univ. (B. A. and M. A.); returned to Russia in 1911, and studied music at the St. Petersburg Cons. (1911-13). After service with the American Red Cross in Siberia during the civil war (1918-19), he went to the U. S.; taught at the Univ. of Virginia (1921-23); in 1926 became head of the music dept. at Swarthmore College and Haverford College, Pennsylvania, retiring from these posts in 1958. His specialty is Russian music. —Publications: Scriabin (London, 1923); Music 1900-1930 (N. Y., 1930); Znamenny Chant of the Russian Church, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, July, Oct., 1940); many other articles on Russian music and Russian composers in various magazines. He also publ. a useful brochure The Music Director's Guide to Musical Literature (N. Y., 1941). His compositions include a trio for flute, clarinet, and piano (1932); 2 violin sonatas (1913; 1948); 4 piano sonatas (1932-46); several albums of songs. He edited Songs from Many Lands (1923), Recueil de chansons russes (1936), etc.

Swan, Timothy, b. Worcester, Mass., July 23, 1758; d. Northfield, July 23, 1842. His only musical training consisted of 3 weeks at a singing school, and while serving in the Continental army he also learned to play the flute. From 1783 he lived in Suffield, Conn., and in 1807 moved to Northfield, Mass. Composed the hymn tunes Poland, China, Ocean, and Pownal. Publ. The Songster's Assistant (c. 1800); New England Harmony (1801); and also probably was the author of The Songsters' Museum (1803). —Cf. F. J. Metcalf, American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music (N. Y., 1925, p. 103 ff.).

Swanson, Howard, American Negro composer; b. Atlanta, Aug. 18, 1909. He was taken to Cleveland as a child, and had to earn a living by manual labor on the railroad; served also as a postal clerk. He then entered the Cleveland Institute of Music, won a Rosenwald Fellowship for study in Europe, and went to Paris, where he took composition lessons with Nadia Boulanger. He remained in Paris until 1940; then returned to N. Y., where he obtained a job with the Internal Revenue Dept. (until 1945). He continued to compose, however, and his songs attracted attention when Marian Anderson performed them in N. Y. His first signal success came with a Short Symphony (1948), a work of simple melodic inspiration, which was highly praised at its première (N. Y. Philharmonic, conducted by Mitropoulos, Nov. 23, 1950); Mitropoulos performed it also at the Edinburgh Festival, on Aug. 31, 1951, and the piece was taken up by many other conductors. In 1952 it was selected as the best work of the season by the N. Y. Music Critics Circle. His other works include symph. No. 1 (1945); Night Music for small orch. (1950); a suite for cello and piano (1949); a number of songs; piano pieces.

Swarowsky, Hans, conductor; b. Budapest, Sept. 16, 1899. He studied in Vienna; was a pupil of Schoenberg; then devoted himself mainly to conducting; was opera conductor in Stuttgart, Hamburg, Berlin, and Zürich; led the Polish Philharmonic in Cracow (1944-46); from 1947 to 1949 he was in charge of the Graz Opera; then again in Vienna as conductor and teacher. He edited the French versions of Gluck's Orfeo and Alceste; translated into German several Italian librettos.

Swarthout, Gladys, American contralto; b. Deepwater, Mo., Dec. 25, 1904. She studied at the Bush Cons. in Chicago, also opera with L. Mugnone; made her début in a minor part with the Chicago Civic Opera in 1924, and then made regular appearances with the Ravinia Opera Co. in Chicago. On Nov. 15, 1929, she sang the part of La Cieca in La Gioconda at the Metropolitan Opera; she remained on its roster until 1945. She married the singer Frank Chapman in 1932. Publ. an autobiography, Come Soon, Tomorrow (N. Y., 1945).

Sweelinck (svä'-link), Jan Pieterszoon, great Dutch organist and composer; b. Deventer (or Amsterdam), 1562; d. Amsterdam, Oct. 16, 1621. Contrary to repeated assertions that Sweelinck was a pupil of Zarlino in Venice, documentary evidence proves that he remained in Amsterdam virtually all his life; this also refutes the theory that Sweelinck was the carrier of Venetian ideas and techniques in Northern Europe. About 1580 he became organist of the Old Church in Amsterdam, a position previously held by his father, Pieter Sweelinck (d. 1573). As a player and teacher he was celebrated far and wide; most of the leading organists in Northern Germany, of the next generation, were his pupils. During his lifetime only some of his vocal music was publ.; but his organ music is more remarkable and important: Sweelinck was the first to employ the pedal in a real fugal part, and originated the organ fugue built up on one theme with the gradual addition of counter-themes leading up to a highly involved and ingenious finale—a form perfected by Bach. In rhythmic and melodic freedom, his vocal compositions show an advance over the earlier polyphonic style, though replete with intricate contrapuntal devices. A complete ed. of Sweelinck's works, in 12 vols., edited by Max Seiffert for the 'Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis,' was publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel (1895-1903): vol. I, works for organ and clavier; vol. II, 1st half of the First Book of Psalms (1604); vol. III, 2nd half of the same; vol. IV, 1st half of the Second Book of Psalms (1613); vol. V, 2nd half of the same; vol. VI, Third Book of Psalms (1614); vol. VII, Fourth Book of Psalms (1621); vol. VIII, Cantiones sacrae a 5; vol. IX, Chansons a 5; vol. X, Rimes françaises et italiennes a 2-4; vol. XI, processional compositions; vol. XII, Rules for composition, ed. by H. Gehrmann. Vols. II-VII comprise the 150 Psalms of David in the rhymed French version by Marot and Beza. —Cf. F. H. J. Tiedeman: J. P. S., een bio-bibliografische Schets (Amsterdam, 1876; 2nd ed., 1892); M. Seiffert, J. P. S. und seine direkten deutschen Schüler, in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1891); M. Seiffert, J. P. S., in 'Tijdschrift' of the 'Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis' (1900); D. F. Scheurleer, Sweelinckiana, in the same (1914); C. Van den Borren, Les Origines de la musique de clavier dans les Pays-Bas jusque vers 1630 (Brussels, 1914); O. Gombosi, S., in 'Tijdschrift' (as above) (1932); E. R. Sollitt, From Dufay to S. (N. Y., 1933); B. van den Sigtenhorst Meyer, J. P. S. en zijn instrumentale muziek (The Hague, 1934; 2nd ed., 1946); B. van den Sigtenhorst Meyer, De vocale Muziek van J. P. S. (The Hague, 1948); R. L. Tusler, The Organ Music of J. P. S. (2 vols.; Bilthoven, 1958; in English).

Swert, Jules de. See Deswert.

Swoboda, Adalbert (Viktor), writer on music; b. Prague, Jan. 26, 1828; d. Munich, May 19, 1902. He founded (1880) and edited till his death the 'Neue Musikzeitung' in Stuttgart; author of Illustrierte Musikgeschichte (2 vols., 1893).

Sygietyński (sĭg-yĕh-tĭn'-skĕ), Tadeusz, Polish conductor and arranger; b. Warsaw, Sept. 24, 1896; d. there, May 19, 1955. He studied music in Lwow with Roman Statkowski and Henryk Melcer; later took courses with Max Reger in Leipzig and with Schoenberg in Vienna. In 1949 he organized in Poland the Mazowsze State Song and Dance Ensemble for the purpose of popularizing Polish folk music; toured with it in the Far East and in Western Europe with considerable acclaim. He made numerous arrangements of Polish folksongs for this group; in 1951 he received a State prize, and later was awarded the Banner of Labor by the State Council of Poland.

Sykora, Bogumil, cellist; b. Glinisk, Russia, Jan. 15, 1890; d. New York, Jan. 19, 1953.

He studied with Julius Klengel at the Leipzig Cons. (1909) and made his professional debut there on Jan. 20, 1911; toured Russia (1913-15); then came to America; gave his 1st recital in N. Y. on Dec. 12, 1916. He toured in the Far East (1917-21), in the U. S. and Canada (1921-25), in South America (1925-33), in Spain (1934-35), etc. In 1938 he returned to N. Y. and settled there as a teacher. He composed a concerto and a number of pieces for cello.

Szabados (sah'-bah-dosh), Béla Antal, Hungarian composer; b. Budapest, June 3, 1867; d. there, Sept. 15, 1936. He studied with Erkel and Volkmann at the Budapest Academy of Music; later joined its staff as piano teacher and vocal coach. He wrote 2 serious operas, Maria (Budapest, Feb. 28, 1905; in collaboration with Árpád Szendy); and Fanny (Budapest, Feb. 16, 1927); 11 comic operas; 4 string quartets; a psalm and several song cycles; also publ. several vocal manuals.

Szabó (säh'-böh), Ferenc, Hungarian composer; b. Budapest, Dec. 27, 1902. He studied with Kodály; in 1932 went to Russia, and became closely associated with the ideological work of the Union of Soviet Composers in Moscow. In 1946 he returned to Hungary and was appointed prof. at the Budapest Academy of Music. In conformity with his political beliefs, Szabó emphasizes in his music folk elements and realistic subject matter. —Works: symph. poem, Glass Struggle (Moscow, April 27, 1933); Sinfonietta for an ensemble of Russian national instruments (1935); Moldavian Rhapsody for orch. (1941); 2 string quartets, a piano trio, a string trio, 2 piano sonatas, etc.

Szabolcsi (sah'-bohl-chē), Bence, Hungarian musicologist; b. Budapest, Aug. 2, 1899. He studied jurisprudence at the Univ. of Budapest, music with Kodály at the Budapest Academy and with Albert at the Univ. of Leipzig; Dr. phil., 1923, with the dissertation Benedetti und Saracini. Beiträge zur Geschichte der Monodie. In 1926 he became a member of the staff of the musical periodical 'Zenei Szemle'; its publication was suspended during World War II, but resumed in 1947; Szabolcsi became an editor again in 1950. With Aladár Tóth he brought out a music dictionary in Hungarian (1930-31); publ. a history of music (Budapest, 1940), a monograph on Beethoven (Budapest, 1948), and a number of valuable papers in Hungarian, German, Italian, and English music publications; was a member of the editorial board of 'Zenetudományi Tanulmányok' ('Studies in Musical Science'); ed. Bartók, sa vie et son œuvre (Budapest, 1956).

Szalkiewicz (shahl-kyä'-vich), Cyril, Finnish pianist; b. Helsinki, Dec. 21, 1914 (of Polish parents). He studied with Lazare Lévy and Cortot in Paris; gave concerts in France and Belgium (1931); then returned to Finland, where he is regarded as one of the country's foremost pianists.

Szalowski (shah-lov'-skē), Antoni, Polish composer; b. Warsaw, April 21, 1907. He studied violin with his father; in 1931 went to Paris; studied there with Nadia Boulanger; his works reflect the combined influences of Impressionism and neo-Classicism. His Overture (Warsaw Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, April 21, 1939) is his most successful composition; other works are: a symphony (1939); Concertino for strings (1942); piano concerto (1930); violin concerto (1949); flute concerto (1951); 3 string quartets; clarinet sonata; oboe sonatina (Amsterdam Festival, June 8, 1948); piano pieces; songs.

Szántó (sähn'-töh), Theodor, Hungarian pianist and composer; b. Vienna, June 3, 1877; d. Budapest, Jan. 7, 1934. He studied with Dachs (piano) and Fuchs (composition) at the Vienna Cons., and later with Busoni in Berlin (1898-1901). In 1905 he settled in Paris; from 1914 to 1921 lived in Switzerland; then divided his time between Paris and Budapest, giving frequent recitals; also played at other musical centers in Europe. His opera on a Japanese story, Typhoon, was produced in Mannheim, on Nov. 29, 1924, and there were a few subsequent performances in other cities. He also wrote a Japanese Suite for orch. (1926); several symph. works based on Hungarian folksongs; chamber music; many piano pieces (of which Variations on a Hungarian Folksong became fairly well known).

Szeligowski (shēh-lē-gov'-skē), Tadeusz, Polish composer; b. Lwow, Sept. 13, 1896. He studied with Jachimecki in Cracow (1919-22) and with Nadia Boulanger in Paris (1929-31); then was prof. at the Vilna Cons. (1938-39). After the end of the war he became director of the State Opera School in Poznan. —Works: opera Bunt Zakow (Rebellion of Clerks; Wrocław [Breslau], July 14, 1951); ballet Pau i dziewczyna (The Peacock and the Maiden; Wrocław, Aug. 2, 1949); 2 violin concertos; clarinet concerto; piano concerto (Cracow, May 17, 1946); sacred choral works; symph. suites on Polish themes; several string quartets and other chamber music; piano pieces.

Szell (sehl), George, eminent pianist and conductor; b. Budapest, June 7, 1897. He began his career as a pianist and composer of extraordinary precocity. From his earliest childhood he studied piano with Richard Robert in Vienna, where his family had moved, and he was only 11 when he performed his Rondo for piano and orch. with the Vienna Symph. Orch.; his teacher in composition was J. B. Foerster; he also studied with Mandyczewski and Max Reger. He conducted his own symphony and played Beethoven's 'Emperor Concerto' with the Berlin Philharmonic at 17; Richard Strauss became interested in him, and recommended him for the post of conductor at the Municipal Theater in Strasbourg, where Szell remained for a season (1917-18); he subsequently was engaged as conductor of the German Opera in Prague (1919-21), at Darmstadt (1921-22), and at Düsseldorf (1922-24). In 1924 he was appointed 1st conductor at the Berlin State Opera, holding this post until 1930; also taught at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (1927-30); from 1930 to 1936 conducted once more at the German Opera in Prague; appeared as guest conductor in Russia and England; in 1930 he conducted for the first time in America, with the St. Louis Symph. He then became conductor of the Scottish Orchestra in Glasgow (1937-39); the outbreak of World War II caused its suspension, and Szell accepted a position as teacher at the opera workshop of the New School for Social Research in N. Y.; also taught theory at the Mannes School of Music. At the invitation of Toscanini he appeared as guest conductor of the NBC Symph.; from 1942 to 1945 he conducted at the Metropolitan Opera House; in 1946 he was engaged as permanent conductor of the Cleveland Orch.; in 1957 he took the orch. on an extended tour of European cities, with tremendous acclaim. He also filled guest engagements as symphony and opera conductor with various organizations; was on the staff of the Metropolitan Opera for occasional appearances until 1954. Szell's distinguishing characteristics as conductor are clarity of line and controlled security of emotional projection, so that the pure substance of the music is expressively brought out, and the instrumental balance, or, in opera, the vocal predominance is always preserved. He excels particularly in interpretations of the Viennese classics. —He publ. a Lyric Overture (1922) and Theme and Variations for orch. (1916) among other works. —Cf. Hope Stoddard, Symphony Conductors of the U. S. A. (N. Y., 1957; pp. 236-43).

Szendrei (sehn'-drey), Aladár (in the U. S. changed his name to Alfred Sendrey), conductor and composer; b. Budapest, Feb. 29, 1884. He studied with Hans Koessler at the Budapest Academy of Music (1901-05); then was active as theater conductor in Germany; conducted opera in Chicago (1911-12) and New York (1913-14); returned to Europe in 1914; was conductor at the Berlin Opera (1914-15) and at the Volksoper in Vienna (1915-16). After service in the Austrian army, he became conductor of opera in Leipzig (1918-24); then led symph. concerts there (1924-32). In 1933 he left Germany and went to Paris, where he conducted at the Radiodiffusion Française; in 1940, came to the U. S. and settled in Los Angeles as music teacher. He wrote a 1-act opera, Das türkisenblaue Garten (Leipzig, 1920); ballet, Danse d'odalisque; several orch. works, including a Hungarian Overture; choral music; miscellaneous pieces for various instruments; publ. Rundfunk und Musikpflege (Leipzig, 1931); Dirigierkunde (Leipzig, 1932; 2nd ed., 1952); Bibliography of Jewish Music (N. Y., 1951).

Szendy (sehn'-di), Arpád, Hungarian pianist and composer; b. Szarvas, Aug. 11, 1863; d. Budapest, Sept. 10, 1922. He studied at the Budapest Cons. and at the Academy of Music there; then became a student of Liszt (1881). In 1890 he was appointed to the faculty of the Academy of Music; enjoyed great esteem in Hungary as a piano teacher. He publ. numerous editions of piano classics; wrote an opera, Mária (with Béla Szabados; Budapest, Feb. 28, 1905); a string quartet; much piano music; songs.

Szenkar (sehn'-kahr), Eugen, Hungarian conductor; b. Budapest, April 9, 1891. He studied with his father, Ferdinand Szenkar, a prominent organist, and later at the Academy of Music in Budapest. He was successively conductor of the German Opera in Prague (1911-13); the Popular Opera in Budapest (1913-15); the Mozarteum at Salzburg (1915-16); at Altenburg (1916-20); at the Frankfurt Opera (1920-23); at the Volksoper in Berlin (1923-24); and at the Cologne Opera (1924-33). With the advent of the Nazi regime he was compelled to leave Germany, and conducted several years in Moscow. In 1939 he was engaged as permanent conductor of the Brazilian Symp. Orch. in Rio de Janeiro; in 1947, was guest conductor of the NBC Symp. Orch., N. Y.; returned to Germany in 1950, and in 1952 was appointed music director of the Düsseldorf Opera and conductor of the Düsseldorf Symphony.

Szervánsky (ser'-vahn-skē), Endre, Hungarian composer; b. Kistétény, Jan. 1, 1912. Of a musical family, he learned to play the clarinet as a child; studied composition with Albert Siklós at the Budapest Academy of Music, graduating in 1936; in 1948, appointed teacher there. His style is influenced mainly by Bartók; the rhythmic element is very strong; the melodic material is modeled after Hungarian folksong.—Works: string quartet (1938); 3 Divertimentos for string orch. (1939-43); violin sonata (1945); Serenade for strings (1947); symphony (1948); Oriental Tale, ballet suite (1949); Home Guard Cantata (1949); Rhapsody for orch. (1950); trio for oboe, clarinet, and bassoon (1950); trio for flute, violin, and viola (1950); sonatina for flute and piano (1952); quintet for wind instruments (1953); Serenade for clarinet and orch. (1954); 20 pieces for 2 violins; etc.

Szigeti (si'-geh-ti), Joseph, famous violinist; b. Budapest, Sept. 5, 1892. He studied in Budapest with Hubay; made his professional debut in 1905; from 1906 to 1913 he lived in England; in 1917 he was appointed prof. of violin at the Geneva Cons.; subsequently devoted his time mainly to concert activities; in 1926 made his home in the U. S. (in New York and later in California). His tours covered every part of the world; he was particularly interested in promoting new music; gave the world premiere of Ernest Bloch's violin concerto (Cleveland, Dec. 15, 1938); played Prokofiev's violin concertos on numerous occasions; participated in many festivals of modern music; toured South America in 1954. He became an American citizen in 1951.—Publ. With Strings Attached, an autobiography (N. Y., 1947).—Cf. R. Gelatt, Music Makers (N. Y., 1953; pp. 135-48).

Szostakowicz. See Shostakovich.

Szulc (shoolts), József Zygmunt, operetta composer; b. Warsaw, April 4, 1875; d. Paris, April 10, 1956; studied at the Warsaw Cons. with Noskowski, and in Paris with Moszkowski (piano). He remained in Paris as a piano teacher; then turned to composition of light operas. His first work in this genre, Flup (Brussels, Dec. 19, 1913), was very successful and had thousands of performances in France and other European countries. Except for disruptions of musical life during the two wars, he continued to produce operettas at regular intervals; the last one was Pantoufle (Paris, Feb. 24, 1945). He also wrote a ballet, Une Nuit d'Ispahan (Brussels, Nov. 19, 1909).

Szumowska (shoo-mohf'-skah), Antoinette, Polish pianist and teacher; b. Lublin, Feb. 22, 1868; d. Rumson, N. J., Aug. 18, 1938. She studied at the Warsaw Cons. with Michalowski, and later took lessons with Paderewski in Paris (1890-95). In 1895 she came to the U. S., settling in Boston, where she taught at the New England Cons. for many years. In 1896 she married the cellist Josef Adamowski, and with him and his brother Timothée, violinist, formed the 'Adamowski Trio,' which presented numerous concerts in New England.

Szymanowska (shi'h - mah - nohf' - skah), Maria (née Wolowska), Polish pianist and composer; b. Warsaw, Dec. 14, 1789; d. St. Petersburg, July 24, 1831. She studied piano with local teachers in Warsaw, and began to play in public as a child. In 1810 she married a Polish landowner, Theophilus Joseph Szymanowski (divorced in 1820). In 1822 she toured in Russia, and was appointed court pianist; in 1823, played in Germany; in 1824, in France; then in England, Holland, and Italy (1824-25), returning to Warsaw in 1826. In 1828 she settled in St. Petersburg as pianist and teacher, and remained there until her death (of cholera). She was admired by Goethe, whom she met in Germany; his poem Aussöhnung (Trilogie der Leidenschaft) alludes to her (cf. Goethe's correspondence with Zelter). She publ. 24 mazurkas and several character pieces for piano, of which Le Murmure became popular. Her piano studies were commended by Schumann.—Cf. I. Boelza, Maria Szymanowska (Moscow, 1956).

Szymanowski (shi-mäh-nóhf-skē), Karol, eminent Polish composer; b. Timoshovka, Ukraine, Oct. 6, 1882; d. Lausanne, March 28, 1937. The son of a cultured landowner, he grew up in a musical environment. He began to play the piano and compose very early in life. His first teacher was Gustav Neuhaus in Elisavetgrad; in 1901 he went to Warsaw, where he studied with Noskowski. His first work, 9 Preludes for piano, op. 1, was publ. in 1906 in Berlin by the Association of Young Polish Composers (later known as 'Young Poland in Music'). Szymanowski lived in Berlin from 1906 to 1908, writing symphonic and other music, much influenced by Richard Strauss. He returned to Warsaw in 1909, and his 1st symph. was performed there on March 26, 1909; however, he was dissatisfied with the score, and withdrew it from further performance. In 1911 he completed his 2nd symph., which demonstrated a stylistic change from German dominance to Russian influences, paralleling the harmonic evolution of Scriabin; it was played for the first time in Warsaw, on April 7, 1911. The pianist Artur Schnabel was one of the earliest champions of Szymanowski's piano music and performed his 2nd piano sonata in Germany and in Vienna. From 1912 to 1914 Szymanowski lived in Vienna, where he wrote his 1-act opera, Hagith; the years of World War I (1914-18) he spent in Timoshovka, where he wrote his 3rd symph.; appeared in concert with the violinist Paul Kochanski in Moscow and St. Petersburg, giving 1st performances of his violin works; it was for Kochanski that he composed his violin triptych, Mythes (La Fontaine d'Aréthuse) from this cycle is one of his best-known compositions). About this time, his music underwent a new change in style, veering towards French Impressionism. During the Russian Revolution of 1917 the family estate at Timoshovka was ruined, and Szymanowski lost most of his possessions. He lived in Elisavetgrad from 1917 to 1919, where he continued to compose industriously, despite the turmoil of the civil war. Early in 1920 he settled in Warsaw; traveled to other Polish cities, and soon established his reputation as the most important modern composer of Poland. His international renown also was considerable; his works were often performed in Europe, and figured at festivals of the International Society for Contemporary Music. He visited Paris, London, and New York (1921). In 1926 he was appointed director of the Warsaw Cons. and reorganized the system of teaching along more liberal lines. His Stabat Mater produced a profound impression (1928), and his ballet Harnasie, composed in 1926, and based on the life and music of the Tatra mountain dwellers, demonstrated his ability to treat national subjects in an original and highly effective manner. In 1933 he appeared as soloist in the first performance of his Symphonie Concertante for piano and orch. at Warsaw, and repeated his performances in Paris, London, and Brussels. In April, 1936, greatly weakened in health by chronic tuberculosis, he attended the première of his ballet Harnasie at the Paris Opéra. —Through successive influences, Szymanowski developed into a national composer whose music has universal significance also. Of particular interest is his treatment of the mazurka; though he was a lifelong admirer of Chopin, he found a way to treat this dance form in a new and personal manner. —Works: Hagith, opera (Warsaw, May, 1922); Król Roger, opera in 3 acts (1920-24; Warsaw, June 19, 1926); ballet, Harnasie (1926; Prague, May 11, 1935); Concert Overture (Warsaw, Feb. 6, 1906); 3 symphonies: No. 1 (Warsaw, March 26, 1909), No. 2 (Warsaw, April 7, 1911), No. 3, for tenor, mixed chorus, and orch. (1916); 1st violin concerto (Warsaw, 1922); 2nd violin concerto (Warsaw, Oct. 6, 1933); Symphonie Concertante for piano and orch. (Paris, Feb. 25, 1934, composer soloist). Vocal works with orch.: Stabat Mater (1929); Veni Creator (1929); Litania (1933). Chamber music: 2 string quartets (1917; 1927); violin sonata (1904); Notturmo e tarantella, for violin and piano (1914); Mythes, 3 poems for violin and piano: La Fontaine d'Aréthuse, Narcisse, Dryades et Pan (1915). For piano: 3 piano sonatas; Fantasy (1905); Métopes, 3 poems: L'île des sirènes, Calypso, Nausicaa (1915); 12 études (1917); Masques, 3 poems: Shéhérazade, Tantris le bouffon, Sérénade de Don Juan (1917); 4 Polish dances (1926); 20 mazurkas (1924-26); etc. About 100 songs, including a set of 5 to words by James Joyce (1926), 8 Love Songs of Hafiz (also with orch.), 12 Kuprian Songs (1932). —Bibliography: Z. Jachimecki, Karol Szymanowski, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1922); A. Tansman, Karol Szymanowski, in the 'Revue Musicale' (May, 1922); G. Pannain in Modern Composers (transl. from the Italian, N. Y., 1932); Z. Jachimecki, Karol Szymanowski, in the 'Slavonic and East European Review' (July, 1938); also the Szymanowski issue of 'Muzyka Polska' (Warsaw, 1937); S. Lobaczewska, Karol Szymanowski (Cracow, 1950; exhaustive biography and musical analysis); S. Golachowski, Karol Szymanowski (Cracow, 1956).

T

Tabourot, Jean. See Arbeau.

Tacchinardi (tähk-kě-nahr'dě), Nicola, Italian tenor; b. Leghorn, Sept. 3, 1772; d. Florence, March 14, 1859. After singing on Italian stages (La Scala, Milan, 1805), he was engaged at the Théâtre Italien, Paris, 1811-14, with Crivelli; from 1822-31, 'primo cantante' in the Grand Ducal chapel at Florence, also appearing repeatedly on the stage; then lived in Florence as a teacher, one of his pupils being his daughter, Fanny Tacchinardi-Persiani (see Persiani). He publ. vocalises and exercises; also Dell'Opera in Musica sul teatro italiano e de' suoi difetti. — His son, Guido Tacchinardi (b. Florence, March 10, 1840; d. there, Dec. 6, 1917), was a composer and theorist; from 1891 director of the Istituto Musicale at Florence.

Tadolini, Giovanni, Italian composer; b. Bologna, 1785; d. there, Nov. 29, 1872. He studied composition with Mattei and singing with Babini; from 1811 to 1814 he was on the staff of the Théâtre des Italiens in Paris; then went to Italy, where he produced a succession of operas: Le Bestie in uomini (Venice, 1815); La Principessa di Navarra (Bologna, 1816); Il Credulo deluso (Rome, 1817); Tamerlano (Bologna, 1818); Moc-tar (Milan, 1824); Mitridate (Venice, 1826); Almanzor (Trieste, 1827); from 1830 to 1839 he was again at his post at the Théâtre des Italiens. He also wrote many canzonets and romances; one of them, Eco di Scozia, was popular in his time.

Taffanel, (Claude-) Paul, French flutist and conductor; b. Bordeaux, Sept. 16, 1844; d. Paris, Nov. 22, 1908. He was a pupil of Dorus (flute) and Reher (composition). From 1864-90, flutist in the Paris Opéra orch.; 1867-90, flutist of the Cons. concerts, which he conducted 1890-1903; from 1892 till his death he was one of the 'chefs d'orchestre' at the Opéra; in 1893 succeeded Altès as prof. of flute-playing at the Cons. In 1879 he founded the 'Société des quintettes pour instruments à vent.' With Clau-berth he wrote a Méthode complète de flûte.

Tag, Christian Gotthilf, German composer; b. Bayerfeld, Saxony, April 2, 1735; d. Niederzwoitz, near Zwickau, June 19, 1811. From 1749-55 he studied at the Kreuzschule in Dresden (pupil of Homilius), and from 1755-1808 was cantor at Hohenstein. — Publ. 6 Chorale-preludes with Trio and Allabreve (1783); 12 Preludes and a Symphony for organ (1795); songs (1783, 1785, 1793, 1798); 70 variations for piano on an Andantino (1785); Der Glaube, melody with organ (1793); Urians Reise um die Welt und Urians Nachricht von der Aufklärung (1797); Naumann, ein Todtenopfer (1803; voice with piano); Melodie zum Vaterunser und den Einsatzworten (1803; with organ); Wörlitz, an ode (1803; voice with piano); many sacred and instrumental works are in MS. — Cf. J. F. Roch-litz, Für Freunde der Tonkunst, vol. III (1830); H. J. Vieweg, C. G. T. (Leipzig, 1933).

Tagliapietra (tähl-yäh-pi-ët-räh), Gino, Italian pianist and composer; b. (of Italian parentage) Ljubljana, May 30, 1887; d. Venice, Aug. 8, 1954. He studied piano with Julius Epstein in Vienna and with Busoni in Berlin; in 1906 was appointed to the faculty of the Liceo Benedetto Marcello in Venice. His compositions include a ballet, La Bella dormiente nel bosco (Venice, March 11, 1926); a piano concerto; numerous studies for piano. He edited for Ricordi an important anthology of keyboard music from Willaert to modern times, 'Antologia di musica antica e moderna' (1931-32; 18 vols., containing 519 works by 157 composers).

Tagliapietra (tähl-yäh-pi-ët-räh), Gio-vanni, Italian baritone; b. Venice, Dec. 24, 1846; d. New York, April 11, 1921. He studied naval architecture, and was a gradu-ate from the Univ. of Padua. After a study of singing with Giovanni Corsi, he appeared in various Italian opera houses; made a tour of South America; in 1874 was engaged as member of Max Strakosch's company and sang in the U. S. In 1876 he married the famous pianist Teresa Carreño, but was di-voiced; his brother Arturo was married to her in 1902.

Tagliavini (tähl-yäh-vē-nē), Ferruccio, prominent Italian tenor; b. Reggio, Aug. 14, 1913. After studying at the Cons. of Parma, he won 1st prize for singing at the May Festival in Florence (1938); made his opera début there as Rodolfo in La Bohème (1939); later sang at La Scala, Milan, and other opera houses in Italy; in 1946, toured South America; on Jan. 10, 1947, made a very successful 1st appearance, as Rodolfo, at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y.; has also given recitals in the major American cities; subsequently traveled widely in both hemi-spheres. In 1941 he married the soprano Pia Tassinari. — Cf. C. Tedeschi, Ferruccio Tagliavini (Rome, 1942).

Tagore, Sir Surindro Mohun (Rajah Saurindramohana Thakura), Hindu musi-cologist; b. Calcutta, 1840; d. there, June 28, 1914. At the age of 17 he began to study Hindu music under Luchmi Prasad and Kshetra Mohun Goswami, and European music under a German teacher in Calcutta; founded and endowed from his personal fortune the 'Bengal Music Soc.' (1871) and the 'Bengal Academy of Music' (1881), continuing to preside over both until his death. He perfected a new and simpler system of musical notation, which gradually replaced the older system throughout India. A connoisseur of instruments, he was at various times commissioned by the principal museums of Europe to procure for them instruments of Asiatic nations; perhaps the finest collection is that in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in N. Y. He wrote nearly 60 books on an amazing variety of subjects; those concerning music (publ. in Calcutta, in the Bengali language, and some in English) include the following: Yantra Kosha, or A Treasury of the Musical Instruments of Ancient and Modern India (1875); Hindu Music, from Various Authors (1875; 2nd ed., in 2 vols., 1882); Short Notices of Hindu Musical Instruments (1877); 6 Principal Ragas (1877); The 8 Principal Ragas of the Hindus (1880); The Five Principal Musicians of the Hindus, or A Brief Exposition of the Essential Elements of Hindu Music (1881); The Musical Scales of the Hindus with Remarks on the Applicability of Harmony to Hindu Music (1884); The 22 Musical Srutis of the Hindus (1886); Universal History of Music . . . (1896). —Cf. F. Chrysander, Über Tagore's 'Hindu Music' in 'Allgemeine Musikalische Zeitung' (1879; p. 540 ff.); F. Chrysander, Über altindische Opfermusik, in 'Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft' (1885; p. 21 ff.).

Tailleferre (ti-yě-fehr'), Germaine, French composer; b. Pau-St.-Maur, near Paris, April 19, 1892. She studied at the Paris Cons., and later took lessons with Ravel; associated herself with the vanguard of modern musicians. She obtained wide recognition as the only feminine member of the group known as 'Les Six' (Honegger, Milhaud, Poulenc, Auric, and Durey being the other members). However she wrote comparatively little music, and performances of it were infrequent. Her style of composition is simple and unaffected; some of her songs and piano pieces possess a certain poetic charm. — Works: Image, for piano, flute, clarinet, string quartet, and celesta (1918); string quartet (1919); 2 violin sonatas (1921; 1951); Jeux de plein air, for 2 pianos (1922; also for orch.); piano concerto (1924); concertino for harp and orch. (Boston Symp. Orch., Cambridge, Mass., March 3, 1927); ballet, Le Marchand d'oiseaux (Paris, May 25, 1923); Chansons françaises, for voice and instruments (Liège Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, Sept. 2, 1930); Ouverture, for orch. (Paris, Dec. 25, 1932); concerto for 2 pianos, voice, and orch. (Paris, May 3, 1934); Pastorale, for flute and piano (1942); ballet, Paris-Magie (Paris, June 3, 1949); opera, Il était un petit navire (Paris, March 9, 1951); songs; piano pieces.

Takács (tä'h-käch), Jenő, Hungarian pianist and composer; b. Siegendorf, Austria, Sept. 25, 1902. He studied composition with Joseph Marx and Hans Gál at the Vienna Cons. In 1927 he accepted an invitation to become a teacher at the Cairo Cons. in Egypt; in 1932 went to Manila, Philippine Islands, returning to Cairo in 1935. During his travels, he collected much material on Oriental music; his research in this field is also reflected in his own works. In 1938-39 he toured the U. S.; in 1939-42, was prof. at the Sopron (Ödenburg) Cons.; 1942-48, director of the Cons. of Pécs, Hungary; 1949-51, visiting prof. at the Cons. of Lausanne and Geneva; 1952, came to the U. S. as prof. of piano at the Cincinnati Cons.; since 1955, also visiting prof. at the Cons. of Geneva (summer sessions). —Works: ballets, The Nile Legend (Budapest, May 8, 1940) and Napolitana (1940); Philippine Suite, for orch. (1934); Antiqua Hungarica, for orch. (1941); Folk Dances of Burgenland, for orch. (1953); 2 piano concertos (1932; 1947); Partita for guitar and orch. (1950); Gumbry, Oriental Rhapsody for violin and piano (1930); Sonata concertante for violin and piano (1956); sonata for trombone and piano (1956); Sonata Missoulana for oboe and piano (1957); Sonata breve for trumpet and piano (1958); a number of piano pieces, based on Hungarian and Oriental themes; publ. the treatises Music of the Philippines (Manila, 1933), Tune and Chant in Egypt (Johannesburg, 1935), etc.

Takagi, Toroku, Japanese composer and pianist; b. Okayama, July 7, 1904. He graduated from Tokyo Academy of Music in 1928; later studied in Paris. His opera Shunko-Den was produced in Tokyo, Nov. 20, 1948.

Takata, Saburo, Japanese composer; b. Nagoya, Dec. 4, 1913. He studied at the Tokyo Music Academy. Among his works are Ballade for violin and orch. (Tokyo, Jan. 13, 1945); octet for clarinet, bassoon, trumpet, horn, and string quartet (1939); 2 piano sonatas (1935; 1941); a violin sonata (1949); a sonatina for cello and piano (1950); suite for 5 wind instruments (1952); 2 piano sonatas; other piano pieces; songs.

Takata, Shin-ichi, Japanese composer; b. Tokyo, Jan. 24, 1920. He studied at the Tokyo Academy of Music; has written a symph. poem, In Praise of Peace (Tokyo, Nov. 25, 1948), of which a full score has been published. The style of this work reveals the influence of Richard Strauss.

Taktakishvili, Otar, Soviet Georgian composer; b. Tiflis, July 27, 1924. He studied at the Tiflis Cons., graduating in 1947; in 1949, became prof. there. —Works: 2 symphonies (1949; 1953); 3 overtures; a piano concerto (Tiflis, Nov. 15, 1951); cello concerto (1947); many choral works; film music.

Taktakishvili, Shalva, Soviet Georgian composer; b. Kvemo-Khvit, Aug. 27, 1900. He studied violin at the Tiflis Cons.; from 1928 to 1937 taught in Batumi; from 1937, prof. at the Tiflis Cons. —Works: operas The Deputy (1939) and Otar's Widow (1942); several children's operas; ballet Maltakva (1937); Festive Overture (1944); cello concerto (1932); 2 string quartets; 2 piano trios; choruses; songs.

Taku, Koji, Japanese composer; b. Sakai-City (Osaka), March 10, 1904. He studied at the École normale de musique in Paris with Nadia Boulanger, then later with Yamada in Tokyo. Among his works are the ballet, White Flower (1942); a string quartet; several albums of piano pieces for children.

Tal (real name, Gruenthal), Joseph, Israeli composer; b. Posen, German Poland, Sept. 18, 1910. He studied in Berlin with Tieszen and Trapp; settled in Palestine in 1934; in 1937 became prof. of piano and composition at the Cons. of Jerusalem. —Works: Exodus, choreographic poem for orch. (Tel Aviv, Dec. 14, 1947); A Mother Rejoices, symph. cantata (1949); Visions, for string orch. (1950); symphony (1952); piano concerto (1953); viola concerto (Mount Carmel Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 3, 1954); a violin sonata; an oboe sonata; piano pieces; songs.

Talbot, Howard (real name Munkittrick), operetta composer; b. Yonkers, N. Y., March 9, 1865; d. London, Sept. 12, 1928. He was taken to England at the age of 4, and studied music at the Royal College of Music under Parry, Bridge, and Gladstone; from 1900, was active as conductor in various London theaters. He was a prolific composer of light operas, all produced in London; his greatest success was A Chinese Honeymoon (1899); his last work was The Daughter of the Gods (posthumous, 1929). Other operettas: Monte Carlo (1896); Three Little Maids (1902); The Blue Moon (1905); The White Chrysanthemum (1905); The Girl Behind the Counter (1906); The Three Kisses (1907); The Belle of Brittany (1908); The Arcadians (1909); The Pearl Girl (1913); A Narrow Squeak (1913); A Mixed Grill (1914); A Lucky Miss (1914); The Light Blues (1915); etc.

Talich, Václav, Czech conductor; b. Kroměříž, May 28, 1883. He studied music with his father, Jan Talich (1851-1915), and then entered the Prague Cons. as a pupil of Ševčík (1897-1903); in 1904 he became concertmaster of the Odessa Orch.; made his début as conductor with that orch.; in 1905-07 he taught violin at Tiflis, Caucasus. He returned to Prague in 1907, and in 1908 became conductor of the Philharmonic Orch. at Ljubljana; in 1910 he took a course of studies with Max Reger and Hans Sitt at the Leipzig Cons., and also with Arthur Nikisch in conducting. From 1912 to 1915 he was opera conductor at Pilsen; from 1919 to 1935 he was chief conductor of the Prague Philharmonic Orch., which he brought to a high degree of excellence; toured with it in Italy and Germany, and also performed with it in Vienna, Paris, and London. In 1935 he was appointed conductor of the National Opera in Prague; he lost this position in 1945, owing to political and personal dissension; in 1949 he went to Bratislava, where he formed a Slovak Philharmonic Orch. A symposium of articles was publ. on the occasion of his 60th birthday, under the editorship of Otakar Sourek (Prague, 1943).

Talley, Marion, American soprano; b. Nevada, Mo., Dec. 20, 1907. She was educated in Kansas City, where her family moved when she was a small child; sang in church there, and attracted attention by her unusually lovely voice; appeared in a local performance of Mignon at the age of 15, after which funds were raised to send her to N. Y., and later to Italy, for study. At 18, she made her début at the Metropolitan Opera (Feb. 17, 1926) as Gilda in Rigoletto, and the occasion was exploited for sensational publicity by her fellow townsmen; she remained a member of the Metropolitan Opera for the next 3 seasons, singing coloratura roles, and also gave many recitals throughout the U. S. and Canada. However, the extravagant hopes held for her as a native talent were not fulfilled, and she failed to continue her career as an opera singer; after appearances on the radio and in several motion picture films, she settled in Beverly Hills, Calif. She married Michael Raucheisen (q.v.), June 30, 1932; marriage annulled, Jan. 28, 1933.

Tallis (or Tallys, Talys), Thomas, English organist and composer; b. c. 1505; d. Greenwich, Nov. 23, 1585. Organist or master of the choristers of Waltham Abbey until 1540; Gentleman of the Chapel Royal during the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth, and joint-organist with Byrd. With the latter he obtained in 1575 letters patent for the exclusive privilege of printing music and ruled music paper, the first work issued by them being 34 Cantiones quae ab argumento sacrae vocantur, 5 et 6 partium, in 1575 (16 motets by Tallis and 18 by Byrd). Tallis' most famous work is a 'song of 40 parts' for eight 5-part choirs: Spem in alium non habui (specimen page in first ed. of Grove, Vol. III, p. 274). A composer of great contrapuntal skill, he was among the first to set English words to music for the rites of the Church of England. Surviving are 2 Masses, 2 Magnificats, 2 Lamentations, 52 motets and other pieces with Latin text, 18 English anthems, 3 sets of Psalms, etc., as well as some keyboard music. —In Barnard's 'First Book of Selected Church Music' (1641) is a First Service, or Short Service (a 4), Preces, Responses, etc., often republished (by Rimbault, Novello, Jebb, Davison & Apel, etc.); J. Day's 'Morning and Evening Prayer' (1560), Boyce's 'Cathedral Music,' and the histories by Hawkins and Burney contain specimens of his music. Rimbault republ. the Order of Daily Service, with the Musical Notation. R. Terry ed. a Mass a 4 in 1908 (Breitkopf & Härtel), and most of Tallis' church music is in vol. VI of 'Tudor Church Music' (1928). There are many works in MS at Oxford, Cambridge, and in the British Museum. —Cf. H. B. Collins, T. T., in 'Music & Letters' (1929); B. Schofield, The Manuscripts of T.'s Forty-Part Motet, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (April, 1951); D. Stevens, The Keyboard Music of T. T., in the 'Mus. Times' (July, 1952).

Talma, Louise, American composer; b. New York, Oct. 31, 1906. She studied at N. Y. Univ. (B. M.) and at Columbia Univ. (M. A.); studied piano with Isidor Philipp and composition with Nadia Boulanger at the Fontainebleau School of Music, France. In 1946 she received a Guggenheim Fellowship; joined the faculty at Hunter College, N. Y. In her music she adopts a strongly contrapuntal neo-Baroque style. — Works: Toccata, for orch. (1944); Introduction and Rondo Giocoso (1946); Three Madrigals for women's voices and string quartet (1929); La Belle Dame Sans Merci, for baritone solo (1929); Terre de France, a song cycle (1925); Five Sonnets from the Portuguese, song cycle (1934); piano sonata (1943); The Divine Flame, oratorio (1948); Let's Touch the Sky, cycle of poems, after e. e. cummings, for chorus and woodwind instruments (1952); piano pieces. —Cf. Madeleine Goss, Modern Music-Makers (N. Y., 1952).

Tamagno (täh-mäh'-ñoh), Francesco, famous Italian tenor; b. Turin, Dec. 28, 1850; d. Varese, near Turin, Aug. 31, 1905. He was at first apprenticed to a baker, and later to a locksmith; entered the Turin Cons. as a pupil of Pedrotti, and in 1873 made his début as 2nd tenor at the Teatro Regio there, his powerful voice immediately attracting attention. Following his appearance in Un Ballo in maschera at Palermo on Jan. 17, 1874, his success was rapid. In 1876-77, he sang at the Liceo of Barcelona, and from 1877 at La Scala, Milan, where in 1887 he created the role of Otello in Verdi's opera. He sang at the Metropolitan Opera House, N. Y., during the season 1894-95 (début, Nov. 21, 1894, as Arnold in Rossini's Guillaume Tell). Other engagements included South America, Lisbon, Madrid, Paris, and London. In 1902, having made a fortune, he retired from the stage. —Cf. E. de Amicis, Francesco Tamagno (Palermo, 1902); M. Corsi, Tamagno (Milan, 1937); E. Gara, Francesco Tamagno, in 'La Scala' (Jan., 1954).

Tamberlik, Enrico, famous Italian tenor; b. Rome, March 16, 1820; d. Paris, March 13, 1889. He studied singing with Zirilli in Rome and with Guglielmi in Naples, where he made his stage début in 1840. On April 4, 1850, he made his 1st London appearance, as Masaniello in Auber's La Muette de Portici, at the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, and sang annually in London until 1864, with the exception of 1857, when he undertook an extensive European tour, including Spain and Russia. In 1860 he settled in Paris, and lived there most of his life. Verdi admired him, and wrote the part of Don Alvaro in La Forza del destino for him; Tamberlik sang in its world première at St. Petersburg, Russia, on Oct. 30, 1862, and this role became one of his most famous interpretations. He appeared at the Academy of Music, N. Y., on Sept. 18, 1873, but his American season was a brief one. He was famous for his rich high notes, and his ability to sustain the high C was legendary. —Cf. H. Brody, La Carrière d'un ténor italien in the 'Revue Musicale' (April 15, 1904, et seq.).

Tamburini, Antonio, Italian baritone; b. Faenza, March 28, 1800; d. Nice, Nov. 9, 1876. First learned to play the horn as a pupil of his father; then studied singing with A. Rossi and B. Asioli; début at Cento in 1818; thereafter sang on the chief stages of Italy, being engaged by Barbaja from 1824-32. During 1832-41 he sang at the Théâtre Italien, Paris, as part of a brilliant company that included Grisi, Persiani, Viardot, Rubini, and Lablache, appearing in London in the alternate seasons; after a short stay in Italy, he remained for ten years in Russia. In 1855 he retired to his estate at Sèvres, near Paris. His greatest triumph was in Bellini's La Straniera, in which he created a frenzy of enthusiasm by his singing of the aria Meco tu vieni, o misera. In 1822 he married the singer Marietta Goja. —Cf. J. de Biez, T. et la musique italienne (1877).

Tamura, Hirosada, Japanese musicologist; b. Tokyo, Sept. 6, 1883. From 1904 to 1907 he studied at the Imperial Univ. of Tokyo, qualifying as tutor there in 1909 (from 1916, prof.); from 1924 also lecturer on esthetics at the Women's Univ. in Tokyo. —Writings (in Japanese): Richard Wagner (1916) and Beethoven's 9th Symphony (1924); also transl. Hanslick's Vom Musikalisch-Schönen into Japanese, with a commentary.

Taneyev (tah-nyeh'-chf), Alexander Sergeyevitch, Russian composer, uncle of Sergey Taneyev; b. St. Petersburg, Jan. 17, 1850; d. there, Feb. 7, 1918. He studied composition with F. Reichel in Dresden; upon his return to St. Petersburg, he took lessons with Rimsky-Korakov. Music was his avocation; he followed a government career, advancing to the post of head of the Imperial Chancellery. The style of his music is Romantic, lapsing into sentimentalism; the main influence is that of Tchaikovsky. —Works: operas, Cupid's Revenge (concert performance, St. Petersburg, May 19, 1899) and Buran (The Snow Storm); a Festival March for orch.; 3 symphonies (1890; 1903; 1908); 2 orchestral mazurkas; Hamlet Overture; 2 suites for orch.; Ballade after a poem (Alyosha Popovitch) by Alexey Tolstoy, for orch.; 3 string quartets; Arabesque for clarinet and piano; piano pieces; songs.

Taneyev (tah-nyeh'-chf), Sergey Ivanovitch, Russian composer and pedagogic; nephew of Alexander Taneyev; b. district of Vladimir, Nov. 25, 1856; d. Moscow, June 19, 1915. He began taking piano lessons at the age of 10 at the Moscow Cons.; after attending academic school for a year, he re-entered the Cons. and studied piano with Nicholas Rubinstein and composition with Tchaikovsky, forming a lifelong friendship with the latter. He made a very successful début in Moscow as a pianist, playing the D minor concerto of Brahms (Jan. 31, 1875); after a tour of Russia with Leopold Auer, he visited Turkey, Greece, and Italy; spent the winter of 1877-78 in Paris; in the autumn of 1878 he succeeded Tchaikovsky as prof. of harmony and orchestration at the Moscow Cons.; after the death of Nicholas Rubinstein in 1881, he took over the latter's piano classes there; from 1885 to 1889 he was director; from 1889 to 1906 he taught composition. Taneyev was a first-class pianist; Tchaikovsky regarded him as one of the finest interpreters of his music; but Taneyev was not interested in a virtuoso career, and gradually confined himself to composition and pedagogy. His position as a composer is anomalous: he is one of the most respectable figures of Russian music history, and there is a growing literature about him; his correspondence and all documents, however trivial, concerning his life, are treasured as part of the Russian cultural heritage; yet outside Russia his works are rarely heard; his great treatise on counterpoint, Podvizhnoy kontrapunkt strogovo pisma (Florida Counterpoint in Strict Style), publ. in 1909, remains untranslated into any Western language, and therefore inaccessible to musicians outside Russia. The style of his compositions presents a compromise between Russian melos and Germanic contrapuntal writing; the mastery revealed in his symphonies and quartets is unquestionable. His most ambitious work was the trilogy Oresteia after Aeschylus, in 3 divisions, Agamemnon, Choëphorai, and Electra, first performed in St. Petersburg on Oct. 29, 1895. Other works are John of Damascus, cantata, after Alexey Tolstoy (1884); At the Reading of the Psalm, cantata (1914); symph. in C minor (1902); 2 earlier symphonies are in MS; 2 string quintets; 6 string quartets; 1 piano quartet; 2 string trios; 1 piano trio; about 50 songs, most of them of a very high quality. After his death an almost completed Treatise on Canon and Fugue was found among his papers and published (1929). —Cf. M. Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers (N. Y., 1917) K. A. Kuznetsov, ed., Memorial and Bibliography of S. I. Taneyev (Moscow, 1925); V. Yakovlev, S. I. Taneyev: His Musical Life (Moscow, 1927); V. Karatygin, To the Memory of S. I. Taneyev in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1927); M. D. Calvocoressi and G. Abraham, Masters of Russian Music (London, 1936; pp. 439-49); V. Protopopov, ed., Memorial of S. I. Taneyev (Moscow, 1947); G. Bernandt, S. I. Taneyev (Moscow, 1950); a symposium, S. I. Taneyev; Materials and Documents (vol. I, 1952); Jacob Weinberg, S. I. Taneyev, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Jan., 1958).

Tango, Egisto, Italian conductor; b. Rome, Nov. 13, 1873; d. Copenhagen, Oct. 5, 1951. He first studied engineering; then entered the Naples Cons.; made his début as opera conductor in Venice (1893); conducted at La Scala, Milan (1895); then at Berlin (1903-08). He conducted at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., in 1909-10; in Italy (1911-12); and in Budapest (1913-19), where he gave the earliest performances of stage works by Béla Bartók. From 1920 to 1926 he was active in Germany and Austria. In 1927 he settled in Copenhagen. He was distinguished for the technical precision and interpretative clarity of his performances.

Tannenberger, David, German-American organ builder; b. Berthelsdorf, Upper Lusatia, March 21, 1728; d. York, Pa., May 19, 1804. Tannenberger came to America in 1749 and became a member of the Moravian Church settlement at Bethlehem, Pa. Following the death of his teacher and colleague, Johann Gottlob Clemm (q.v.), he established himself in Lititz, Pa.; made 32 organs for churches in Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina; he also made a few pianos. —Cf. P. E. Beck, David Tannenberger, Organ Builder, in 'Papers Read Before the Lancaster, Pa. Historical Society' (Jan., 1926); D. M. McCorkle, The Moravian Contribution to American Music, in 'Music Library Association Notes' (Dec., 1956); D. M. McCorkle, Musical Instruments of the Moravians of North Carolina, in the 'American German Review' (Feb.-March, 1955).

Tannhäuser, famous lyric poet and Minnesinger; flourished in the 13th century; led a wandering life typical of his calling; for a time was at the court of Friedrich II, Duke of Austria; then with Otto II of Bavaria. His name became legendary through the tale of the Venusberg, pagan intimacy with Venus, penitence, pilgrimage to Rome, and the miracle of the flowering of his pilgrim's staff. Wagner's Tannhäuser is based on this legend, unconnected with the actual life of the real Tannhäuser. —Cf. F. Zander, Die Tannhäuser Sage und der Minnesinger Tannhäuser (1858); J. Siebert, Tannhäuser (1894).

Tansman, Alexander, Polish composer; b. Lodz, June 12, 1897. He studied with Piotr Rytel in Warsaw, and piano with Lütischg; his Sérénade symphonique was performed by the Lodz Orch. in 1917; after a brief service in the Polish army, he resumed his studies; submitted 2 works for the National Prize, and received both 1st and 2nd prize. In 1919 he went to Paris, which became his permanent home. He first appeared in public, playing his piano works, in Paris on Feb. 17, 1920; performances of his symph. and chamber music followed in rapid succession; his Danse de la sorcière for chamber orch. was presented at the Zürich Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music (June 22, 1926). He made an extensive tour of the U. S. in 1927-28 as pianist in his own works. In 1933 he toured the Far East. After the occupation of Paris by the Germans in 1940, he made his way to the U. S.; settled in Hollywood, where he wrote music for films; returned to Paris in 1946. His music is distinguished by a considerable melodic gift, fine craftsmanship, and a vivacious rhythm; his harmony is often bitonal; there are some Impressionistic traits that point to his Parisian tastes. —Works: operas: La Nuit kurde (1925-27; not produced) and Le Serment (Brussels, March 11, 1955); ballets: Sextuor (Paris, May 17, 1924; also in Chicago, as The Tragedy of the Cello, Dec. 26, 1926), La Grande Ville (1932), Bric-à-brac (1937); for orch.: 7 symphonies: No. 1 (1925; Boston, March 18, 1927), No. 2 (1926), No. 3, Symphonie concertante (1931), No. 4 (1939), No. 5 (1942; Washington, Feb. 2, 1943), No. 6, In Memoriam (1943), No. 7 (1944; St. Louis, Oct. 24, 1947); Danse de la sorcière (Brussels, May 5, 1924; numerous subsequent performances); Sinfonietta (Paris, March 23, 1925); Ouverture symphonique (Paris, Feb. 3, 1927); piano concerto No. 1 (Paris, May 27, 1926, Tansman soloist); piano concerto No. 2 (Boston, Dec. 28, 1927, Tansman soloist); suite for 2 pianos and orch. (Paris, Nov. 16, 1930); viola concerto (1936); Fantaisie for violin and orch. (1937); Fantaisie for cello and orch. (1937); Rapsodie polonaise (St. Louis, Nov. 14, 1941); Études symphoniques (1943); Concertino for guitar and orch.

(1945); Ricercari (St. Louis, Dec. 22, 1949); Capriccio (Louisville, March 6, 1955); chamber music: 8 string quartets (No. 1, 1917; No. 8, 1956); Danse de la sorcière, for woodwind quintet and piano (a version of the ballet; 1925); a string sextet (1940); Divertimento, for oboe, clarinet, trumpet, cello, and piano (1944); violin sonata (1919); flute sonata (1925); cello sonata (1930); etc.; for piano: 20 pièces faciles polonaises (1924); Sonata rustica (1925); mazurkas, and other Polish dances; Sonatine transatlantique (1930; very popular; contains imitations of jazz; also for orch., Paris, Feb. 28, 1931; used by Kurt Jooss for his ballet Impressions of a Big City, Cologne, Nov. 21, 1932); Pour les enfants, 4 albums for piano. He publ. a monograph on Stravinsky (Paris, 1948; in English, Igor Stravinsky: The Man and His Music, N. Y.: 1949); contributed numerous articles on Polish music to the 'Revue Musicale' and other publications. — Cf. Irving Schercké, Alexandre Tansman, Compositeur polonais (Paris, 1931); R. Petit, Alexandre Tansman, in the 'Revue Musicale' (Feb., 1929).

Tans'ur, William, English organist, composer, and lexicographer; b. Dunchurch (baptized, Nov. 6), 1706; d. St. Neots, Oct. 7, 1783. His real name was Tanzer, and he was the son of Edward Tanzer; he changed his name to Tans'ur (using the apostrophe). He was a church organist and taught music in various provincial towns in England. His publications include: The Royal Melody Compleat, or the New Harmony of Zion (2nd ed., 1760; 3rd ed., in 3 parts, 1764, 1765, 1766; at least 11 American eds. are known, publ. as The American Harmony, or Royal Melody Complete, or under similar, slightly varying titles); Heaven on Earth, or the Beauty of Holiness (1738); Sacred Mirth, or the Pious Soul's Daily Delight (1739); The Universal Harmony (1743, etc.); The Psalm-Singer's Jewel (1760, etc.); Melodia sacra (1771, 1772); New Musical Grammar (1746; 7th ed., 1829); an epitome of this last, The Elements of Music Displayed (1772). — For details on various eds. see I. Lowens and Allen P. Britton, in 'Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America' (1955, No. 4; pp. 340-54).

Tapper, Bertha (née Feiring), wife of Thomas Tapper (q.v.).

Tapper, Thomas, American music educator; b. Canton, Mass., Jan. 28, 1864; d. White Plains, N. Y., Feb. 24, 1958. He studied music in Europe; from 1897 to 1905 was editor of the 'Musician'; then taught at N. Y. Univ. (1908-12); was lecturer at the Institute of Musical Art (1905-24); also filled other editorial and educational positions. His publications include The Music Life (1891); The Education of the Music Teacher (1914); Essentials in Music History (1914; with Percy Goetschius); The Melodic Music Course, 28 vols. (with F. H. Ripley); Harmonic Music Course, 7 vols.; The Modern Graded Piano Course, 19 vols.; Music Theory and Composition, 6 vols.; From Palestrina to Grieg (Boston, 1929; 2nd ed., 1946). — His wife, Bertha Feiring Tapper (b. Christiania, Norway, Jan. 25, 1859; d. New York, Sept. 2, 1915), was a good pianist; studied with Agathe Backer-Gründahl in Norway and with Leschetizky in Vienna; came to America in 1881; taught piano at the New England Cons., Boston (1889-97) and at the Institute of Musical Art, N. Y. (1905-10); edited 2 vols. of Grieg's piano works; publ. piano pieces and songs. She married Thomas Tapper on Sept. 22, 1895.

Tappert, Wilhelm, German music scholar and writer; b. Ober-Thomaswaldau, Silesia, Feb. 19, 1830; d. Berlin, Oct. 27, 1907. He was trained as a schoolmaster till 1856, when he entered Kullak's Academy of Music in Berlin; studied theory privately with Dehn; settled in Berlin. He was editor of the 'Allgemeine deutsche Musikzeitung' (1876-80); collected a large assemblage of old tablatures, including unique specimens; after his death this collection and his entire valuable library was acquired by the Royal Library of Berlin. An ardent admirer of Wagner, he publ. a curious volume, Ein Wagner-Lexikon: Wörterbuch der Unhöflichkeit, enthaltend grobe, höhnende, gehässige und verläumdende Ausdrücke welche gegen den Meister Richard Wagner, seine Werke und seine Anhänger von den Feinden und Spöttern gebraucht worden sind. Zur Gemüts-ergötzung in müssigen Stunden gesammelt, a collection of anti-Wagner reviews (Leipzig, 1877); a 2nd, enlarged ed. was publ. under the title Richard Wagner im Spiegel der Kritik (Leipzig, 1903). Other publications: Musik und musikalische Erziehung (1867); Musikalische Studien (1868); Das Verbot der Quintenparallelen (1869); Wandernde Melodien (2nd ed., 1889); 54 Erbkönig-Kompositionen (1898; 2nd ed., 1906); Sang und Klang aus alter Zeit (1906); also publ. arrangements of old German songs; 50 left-hand studies for piano; other piano pieces.

Tappolet, Willy, Swiss writer on music; b. Lindau, near Zürich, Aug. 6, 1890. He studied philology and music in Berlin, Zürich, and Geneva; in 1950, appointed to the faculty of Geneva Univ. He is the author of monographs on Honegger (Zürich, 1933; in French, Neuchâtel, 1939; enlarged German ed., Zürich, 1954); and Ravel (Olten, 1950); also wrote La Notation musicale et son influence sur la pratique de la musique du moyen-âge à nos jours (Neuchâtel, 1947), and articles for various publications.

Tarchi (tahr'-kē), Angelo, Italian composer; b. Naples, about 1755; d. Paris, Aug. 19, 1814. He studied at the Cons. dei Turchini in Naples with Fago and Sala; in 1786, was in London; in 1797 settled in Paris. He wrote about 45 operas in Italian, and 6 in French; of these the following were produced at La Scala in Milan: Ademira (Dec. 27, 1783); Ariarte (Jan., 1786); Il Conte di Saldagna (June 10, 1787); Adrasto (Feb. 8, 1792); Le Danaïdi (Dec. 26, 1794); and L'Impostura poco dura (Oct. 10, 1795). In Paris he produced the French version of Il Conte di Saldagna as Bouffons de la foire St. Germain (1790), D'Auberge en auberge (Opéra-Comique, April 26, 1800), etc. He acquired a certain notoriety by his attempt to rewrite the 3rd and 4th acts of Mozart's Le Nozze di Figaro (1787); regarding this episode, see A. Einstein, Mozart e Tarchi, in the 'Rassegna Musicale' (July, 1935); see also C. Sartori, Lo 'Zeffiretto' di Angelo Tarchi, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (July, 1954).

Tarditi, Giovanni, Italian bandleader and composer; b. Acqui, March 10, 1857; d. Rome, Sept. 19, 1935. He traveled as bandleader in Europe and America; publ. manuals for band playing, such as Segnalofono for trumpet calls; wrote the operettas Monte Carlo (Genoa, March 1, 1897) and L'Isola degli antropofagi (Rome, June 1, 1925), military marches, etc.

Tarasio, Luigi, Italian violin-maker; b. Fontanetto, near Milan, c. 1795; d. Milan, Oct., 1854. He began life as a carpenter, and in his spare hours acquired sufficient skill on the violin to play dance music at country fairs, etc. His trade brought him into many humble homes, where he found old violins, the value of which was not suspected by their owners. Gifted with extraordinary powers of observation, he soon recognized the value of those neglected instruments, and, whenever possible, acquired them. After some time he began to imitate the models thus collected; then in the capacity of repairer, he obtained access to Italian chapels and monasteries, where he discovered many valuable instruments. In 1827 he paid his first visit to Paris, disposing of a number of Italian violins to celebrated dealers. Soon he was acknowledged as the foremost connoisseur, so that his regular visits to Paris were eagerly looked for. In 1851 he made his first trip to London. Tarasio was the first to recognize the value of the now famous Italian violins; it was he who created a market for them. He left a collection of over 200 violins, which was acquired by Vuillaume of Paris.—Cf. G. Hart, The Violin: Famous Makers and Their Imitators (London, 1875; 4th ed., 1887); H. R. Haweis, Old Violins (London, 1898); Hill, A. E. et al., Antonio Stradivari (London, 1909); W. A. Silverman, The Violin Hunter (N. Y., 1957; mostly anecdotal).

Tarp, Svend Erik, Danish composer; b. Thisted, Jutland, Aug. 6, 1908. He studied at the Conservatory of Copenhagen, in Munich, and in Innsbruck; returning to Denmark, he became editor of the 'Dania Edition' (1941).—Works: the ballets Skyggen (The Shadow, after Andersen, 1941-44) and Den detroniserede Dyretæmmer (The De-throned Tamer; Copenhagen, Feb. 5, 1944); Sinfonia divertente (1945); Pro Defunctis, for orch. (1946); symph. in E♭ major (1949); Mosaic, miniature suite for orch. (1940); The Battle of Jericho, symph. picture (1949); much chamber music; piano pieces. His opera Prinsessen i det Fjerne, based on Hermann Sudermann's story, was produced in Copenhagen on May 18, 1953.

Tárrega, Francisco, Spanish guitar virtuoso; b. Villarreal, Castellón, Nov. 21, 1852; d. Barcelona, Dec. 15, 1909. The outstanding representative of the modern Spanish guitar-school; studied at the Madrid Cons. He composed many pieces for his instrument, also made many transcriptions of classical and modern works.—Cf. 'La Guittarra,' No. 1 (Buenos Aires, 1923).

Tartini, Giuseppe, Italian violinist, composer, and theorist; b. Pirano, Istria, April 8, 1692; d. Padua, Feb. 26, 1770. While studying, at his parents' desire, for the priesthood, he took violin lessons that strengthened his ardent longings for a secular career; his father finally allowed him to study law at Padua (1710), but music, especially the violin, and fencing were his passion. A charge of abduction, following on his secret marriage to a protégée of Cardinal Cornaro's, obliged him to take refuge in the Franciscan monastery at Assisi; for two years he studied the violin, also composition (under the organist Czernohorsky, called 'il Padre Boemo') and then returned to Padua, a reconciliation having been effected with the Cardinal. Shortly afterward he heard the violinist Veracini at Venice, and was stimulated to more arduous endeavor; he retired to Ancona for further study of the violin. About this time (1714) he discovered the combination-tones, and utilized them in perfecting purity of intonation. His fame then increasing, in 1721 he was appointed solo violinist and conductor of the orch. at St. Antonio in Padua. He spent the years 1723-25 as chamber musician to Count Kinsky in Prague, having been invited there to perform at the coronation of Karl VI; he then resumed his duties at Padua, and in 1728 founded a violin school there, in which were trained many distinguished violinists (Nardini, Pasqualino, Lahoussaye, etc.). Although repeatedly invited to visit Paris and London, he refused to leave Italy after his return to Padua; in 1740 he visited Rome, and on his way home made a triumphal tour of the principal Italian cities. — Tartini was one of the great masters of the violin; his style of bowing still serves as a model, and his compositions are regarded as classics. He composed about 150 concertos and 100 violin sonatas as well as some choral pieces, of which a Salve Regina was his last composition. Publ. works: op. 1, 6 concertos (1734; 3 republ. in Paris; 3 others republ. there with 2 viola parts added by Blainville, as Concerti grossi); also as op. 1, 12 violin sonatas with cello and cembalo; op. 2, 6 sonatas for the same; op. 3, 12 sonatas (incl. op. 2) for violin and bass; op. 4, Sei concerti a violino solo, 2 violini, viola e violoncello o cembalo di concerto; also as op. 4, 6 sonatas for violin with continuo; op. 5, 6, and 7 each comprise 6 sonatas for violin and continuo; op. 8, Sei sonate a 3, due violini col basso; op. 9, 6 sonatas a 3; and L'Arte dell' arco (reprinted in French by Choron in Principes de composition, and separately by André); the famous and oft-republished Trillo del diavolo was a posthumous work (it was discovered by Baillot and first publ. in Cartier's L'Art du violon); the concertos have been republ. in various editions and in varying combinations; sonatas have been republ. by Alard, Lefonard, David, Jensen, Wasielewski, etc. — Theoretical works: Trattato di musica secondo la vera scienza dell'armonia (1754); Risposta alla critica del di lui Trattato di musica di Msgr. Le Serre di Ginevra (1767); De'

principj dell' armonia musicale contenuta nel diatonico genere (1767); Lettera alla signora Maddalena Lombardini inserviente ad una importante lezione per i suonatori di violino (1770; English transl. by Burney, London, 1771; German transl., 1786); and another treatise, only in a French transl. by P. Denis, Traité des agréments de la musique (1782). As a theorist he follows Rameau, and derives the minor chord from an undertone series opposed to the overtone series; like Zarlino, he regards the minor chord as the opposite of the major. — BIBLIOGRAPHY: Fanzago, Orazione . . . delle lodi di G. T. (Padua, 1770); J. A. Hiller, Lebensbeschreibungen berühmter Musikgelehrten und Tonkünstler (Leipzig, 1784); F. Fanzago, Elogi (Padua, 1792); C. Ugoni (1802; in Della letteratura italiana . . ., vol. I, pp. 1-28); F. Fayolle, Notices sur Corelli, Tartini, etc. (Paris, 1810); G. Benedetti, Brevi cenni su G. T. (Trieste, 1897); M. Tamaro, G. T. (Pavenza, 1897; in Atti e memorie della Società istriana . . . vol. XII); A. Bachmann, Les grands violinistes du passé (Paris, 1913); C. Bouvet, Une Leçon de T. . . (Paris, 1918); M. Dounias, Die Violinkonzerte G. T.'s (Munich, 1935); H. P. Schökel, G. T. (Berlin, 1936); A. Capri, G. T. (Milan, 1945; includes a thematic index of the Tartini MSS at Padua); A. Spalding, A Fiddle, a Sword, and a Lady (N. Y., 1953; a fictionalized account of Tartini's life). A thematic index of Tartini's concertos was publ. by G. Tebaldini, in L'Archivio mus. (Padua, 1895).

Taskin (tähs-kän'), (Émile-) Alexandre, French baritone, grandson of Henri Joseph Taskin; b. Paris, March 8, 1853; d. there, Oct. 5, 1897. He was a pupil of Ponchard and Bussine at the Paris Cons. Début at Amiens, 1875. Sang in Lille and Geneva; returned to Paris in 1878; engaged at the Opéra-Comique in 1879, and created important parts in many new operas. He retired in 1894, and from then until his death he was prof. of lyrical declamation at the Cons. On the night of the terrible catastrophe of the burning of the Opéra-Comique (May 25, 1887) he was singing in Mignon; through his calmness and bravery many lives were saved, and the government decorated him with a medal.

Taskin, Pascal, manufacturer of keyboard instruments; b. Theux, near Liège, 1723; d. Paris, Feb. 1793. Went to Paris at an early age and entered Blanchet's atelier, later succeeding to the business and becoming highly celebrated as an instrument maker.

He invented the leather plectra for the harpsichord (1768), replacing the crow quills previously in use. He built his first piano in 1776. —Cf. E. Closson, P. T., in 'Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' XII, pp. 234-67. —His nephew, Joseph Pascal Taskin (1750-1829), was Keeper of the King's Instruments from 1772 to the Revolution. His 2nd son, Henri Joseph (1779-1852), was an organist and composer.

Tate, Phyllis (Margaret Duncan), English composer; b. Gerrards Cross, Bucks, April 6, 1911. She studied composition with Harry Farjeon at the Royal Academy of Music; composed a symph., a cello concerto, and several other large works, but withdrew them as immature. She adopted a neo-Classical style enlivened by modernistic dissonance and syncopated rhythms. Among her works are Valse lorraine, for small orch. (1941); Prelude, Interlude and Postlude, for chamber orch. (1942); cello concerto (1933); saxophone concerto (1944); sonata for clarinet and cello (1947); performed at the Salzburg Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, June 23, 1952; string quartet (1952); Occasional Overture, for orch. (1955). In 1935 she married Alan Frank (q.v.). —Cf. H. Searle, Phyllis Tate, in the 'Mus. Times' (May, 1955); M. Carner, The Music of Phyllis Tate, in 'Music & Letters' (April, 1954).

Tauber, Richard (real name Ernst Seifert), eminent tenor; b. Linz, Austria, May 16, 1892; d. London, Jan. 8, 1948. He studied music at Hoch's Cons. in Frankfurt; made his début at Chemnitz as Tamino in Die Zauberflöte (March 2, 1913), with such success that he was engaged in the same year at the Dresden Opera; in 1915 he appeared with the Berlin State Opera at Salzburg. Later he abandoned serious opera and sang mostly in light opera; was particularly successful in the leading parts of Lehár's operettas. He made his American début on Oct. 28, 1931, in a N. Y. recital. In 1938 he went to England; became a British subject in 1940. In London he wrote an operetta, Old Chelsea, and took the leading role in it at its production there (Feb. 17, 1943). He made his last American appearance at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., on March 30, 1947. —Cf. H. Ludwig, ed., Richard Tauber (Berlin, 1928); Diana Napier Tauber (his second wife), Richard Tauber (Glasgow, 1949).

Taubert (tow'-behr), Ernst Eduard, German composer and music critic; b. Regenwalde, Sept. 25, 1838; d. Berlin, July 14, 1934. He studied theology in Bonn, and music there with Albert Dietrich; later with Friedrich Kiel in Berlin, where he became teacher at the Stern Cons. and music critic for the 'Berliner Post'; also contributed to various German music magazines. His works include a piano quintet; a wind quintet; a piano quartet; 5 string quartets; a piano trio; a Ballade for orch.; piano pieces for 2 and 4 hands; songs.

Taubert, (Karl Gottfried) Wilhelm, German composer; b. Berlin, March 23, 1811; d. there, Jan. 7, 1891. Piano pupil of Neithardt, later of L. Berger, and for composition of Bernhard Klein. Appeared early as a concert player; taught music in Berlin, became assistant conductor of the court orch. in 1831; court Kapellmeister from 1845 to 1870. He conducted his 1st symph. in Berlin at the age of 19 (March 31, 1831). His operas (all produced in Berlin) include: Die Kirmes (Jan. 23, 1832); Marquis und Dieb (Feb. 1, 1842); Der Zigeuner (Sept. 19, 1834); Joggeli (Oct. 9, 1853); Macbeth (Nov. 16, 1857); Cesario, after Shakespeare's Twelfth Night (Nov. 13, 1874). He composed much instrumental music but is best remembered for his Kinderlieder (op. 145, 160), the favorites among his 300 songs. —Cf. W. Neumann, Wilhelm Taubert und Ferdinand Hiller (Kassel, 1857).

Taubman, Howard, American music critic; b. New York, July 4, 1907. He studied at Cornell Univ.; joined the staff of the 'N. Y. Times' in 1930; in 1955, succeeded Olin Downes as chief music critic there. —Books: Opera—Front and Back (N. Y., 1938); Music as a Profession (N. Y., 1939); Music on My Beat (N. Y., 1943); The Maestro; the Life of Arturo Toscanini (N. Y., 1951); How to Build a Record Library (N. Y., 1953; new ed., 1955); How to Bring Up Your Child to Enjoy Music (Garden City, N. Y., 1958).

Taubmann (towb'-mahn), Otto, German conductor and composer; b. Hamburg, March 8, 1859; d. Berlin, July 5, 1929. After graduation from school he followed a commercial career for 3 years; then studied music under Wüllner, Rischbieter, Nicodé, and Blassmann at the Dresden Cons.; traveled a year for further study, and began his career as theater conductor; 1886-89, director of the Wiesbaden Cons.; 1891-92, theater conductor in St. Petersburg; 1892-95, conductor of the Cäcilienverein in Ludwigshafen; then settled in Berlin, where from 1898 he was music critic of the 'Börsen-Courier.' —He composed chiefly choral works, of which the most successful was

Eine Deutsche Messe for soli, double chorus, organ, and orch. (1896).

Taudou (toh-doo'), Antoine (-Antonin-Barthélemy), French violinist and composer; b. Perpignan, Aug. 24, 1846; d. St.-Germain-en-Laye, July 6, 1925. He studied at the Paris Cons., winning the Grand Prix de Rome in 1869 with the cantata Francesca da Rimini; 1883, prof. of harmony at the Cons. — Publ. a Marche-Ballet, a Chant d'automne, and a Marche nocturne, for orch.; a violin concerto; a string quartet; a piano trio; a trio for flute, viola, and cello; etc.

Tausch (towsh), Franz, celebrated German clarinetist; b. Heidelberg, Dec. 26, 1762; d. Berlin, Feb. 9, 1817. At the age of 8 he played in the Electoral orch. at Mannheim; was engaged at Munich (1777-89), and then in the court orch. at Berlin, where he founded a school for wind instruments in 1805. Heinrich Bärmann was his pupil. He published 2 clarinet concertos, 3 concertantes for 2 clarinets, Andante and Polonaise for clarinet, clarinet duos, trios for 2 clarinets with bassoon, 6 quartets for 2 basset-horns and 2 bassoons (with 2 horns ad lib.), 6 military marches, a 10, etc.

Tausch, Julius, German pianist; b. Dessau, April 15, 1827; d. Bonn, Nov. 11, 1895. He studied with Fr. Schneider, and at the Leipzig Cons. (1844-46), then settled in Düsseldorf; there he became conductor of the 'Künstlerliedertafel'; was Schumann's deputy from 1853, and in 1855 his successor as conductor of the Music Society and Subscription Concerts in Düsseldorf, retiring in 1890. He wrote the following cantatas: Der Blumen Klage auf den Tod des Sängers; Dein Leben schied, dein Ruhm begann; Germanenzug; Rheinfahrt; also Festouvertüre for orch., duo for piano and violin, piano pieces, male choruses, etc.

Tausig (tow'zih), Carl, celebrated piano virtuoso; b. Warsaw, Nov. 4, 1841; d. Leipzig, July 17, 1871. He was trained by his father, Aloys Tausig (1820-85), who was a pupil of Thalberg and wrote brilliant piano music; from the age of 14 he studied with Liszt, almost equalling him in grandeur of interpretation, and in technique—the latter due, in great part, to his systematic and zealous practice of his original transposing finger-exercises. His public début was made in 1858, at an orchestral concert conducted by von Bülow at Berlin. During the next two years he gave concerts in German cities, making Dresden his headquarters; then went to Vienna in 1862, giving orch. concerts with 'advanced' programs similar to Bülow's at Berlin. He settled in Berlin in 1865, and opened a 'Schule des höheren Klavierspiels.' He gave concerts in the principal towns of Germany, and at St. Petersburg and other Russian centers. He died of typhoid fever. — Works (for piano): 2 études de concert, op. 1; Ungarische Zigeunerweisen; Nouvelles soirées de Vienne; Valses-Caprices on themes from Strauss; Tägliche Studien (transposing chromatic exercises of high value; ed. by Ehrlich); also transcriptions and arrangements. — Cf. K. F. Weitzmann, Der Letzte der Virtuosen (Leipzig, 1868); W. von Lenz, Die grossen Pianoforte-Virtuosen unserer Zeit (Berlin, 1872; in English, N. Y., 1899).

Tauwitz (tow'vits), Eduard, German conductor and composer; b. Glatz, Silesia, Jan. 21, 1812; d. Prague, July 25, 1894. He was Kapellmeister at theaters in Vilna (1837), Riga (1840), Breslau (1843), and Prague (1846; pensioned 1863). He wrote more than 1,000 compositions, including 3 operas: Trilby (Vilna, 1836), Bradamante (Riga, 1844), and Schmolke und Bakel (Breslau, 1846), church music, songs, and part-songs.

Taverner, John, English composer; b. c. 1495; d. Boston, Lincolnshire, Oct. 25, 1545. He was probably a native of Tattershall, where he was a lay clerk until his appointment as master of the choristers and organist at Cardinals' College, Oxford, in 1526. In 1528 he was imprisoned for heresy, but soon released; he left Oxford in 1530, and also gave up music, spending the rest of his life in promoting religious persecution as a paid agent of Thomas Cromwell. In 1537 he was elected a member of the Guild of Corpus Christi in Boston, becoming a steward in 1543. He was one of the greatest of the early English church composers. — His church music, printed in vols. I and III of 'Tudor Church Music' (1923-24), includes 8 Masses, several sections of Masses, 3 Magnificats, a Te Deum, and 28 motets. Besides his church music, he wrote 3 secular vocal compositions for W. de Worde's 'Song-book' (1530). — Cf. H. B. Collins, John Taverner's Masses, in 'Music & Letters' (1924).

Taylor, David Clark, American singing teacher; b. New York, Nov. 11, 1871; d. there, Dec. 6, 1918. A graduate of the College of the City of N. Y. (B. A., 1890), he studied piano with O. W. Wilkinson (1888-94), theory with A. Remy (1893-97), and singing (1890-96) with several masters in N. Y. He was long connected with the Macmillan Co. — Publ. The Psychology of Singing (N. Y., 1908); Self Help for Singers (N. Y., 1914); New Light on the Old Italian Method (N. Y., 1916); The Melodic Method in School Music (N. Y., 1918); contributed the chapters on Voice Culture to 'The Art of Music' (14 vols.; N. Y., 1917).

Taylor, (Joseph) Deems, American composer and writer; b. New York, Dec. 22, 1885. He graduated from N. Y. Univ. (B. A., 1906); studied theory with O. Coon (1912-13). After doing editorial work for various publications and serving as war correspondent for the N. Y. 'Tribune' in France (1916-17), he became music critic for the N. Y. 'World' (1921-25), editor of 'Mus. America' (1927-29), and critic for the N. Y. 'American' (1931-32). Member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters; Mus. Doc. (hon. c.), N. Y. Univ., 1927; Litt. D., Juniata College, 1931. Following the success of his orchestral suite Through the Looking Glass (1923), he was commissioned by Walter Damrosch to compose a symph. poem, Jurgen (1925). Meanwhile, 2 widely performed cantatas, The Chambered Nautilus and The Highwayman, had added to his growing reputation, which received a strong impetus when his opera The King's Henchman (libretto by Edna St. Vincent Millay), commissioned by the Metropolitan Opera, was produced in that house on Feb. 17, 1926. Receiving 14 performances in 3 seasons, it established a record for American opera at the Metropolitan Opera House, which, however, was surpassed by Taylor's next opera, Peter Ibbetson (Feb. 7, 1931); this attained 16 performances in 4 seasons. From 1942 to 1948 he was president of the American Society for Composers, Authors and Publishers. — Works: The Echo, mus. comedy (N. Y., 1909); The King's Henchman, opera (N. Y., Feb. 17, 1926); Peter Ibbetson, opera (N. Y., Feb. 7, 1931); Ramuntcho, opera (Philadelphia, Feb. 10, 1942); The Dragoon, 1-act opera (N. Y. Univ., Feb. 6, 1958); The Siren Song, symph. poem (1912; N. Y., July 18, 1922); Through the Looking-Glass, suite for chamber orch. (1917-19; N. Y., Feb. 18, 1919; rescored for full orch., 1921-22; N. Y., March 10, 1923); The Portrait of a Lady, for 11 instruments (1918); Jurgen, symph. poem (N. Y., Nov. 19, 1925); Circus Day, suite (for jazz orch., 1925; for symph. orch., 1933); Ballet Music from Casanova for orch. (N. Y., April 18, 1937); Marco Takes a Walk, variations for orch. (N. Y., Nov. 14, 1942); A Christmas Overture (N. Y., Dec.

23, 1943, composer conducting); Élégie, for orch. (Los Angeles, Jan. 4, 1945); Restoration Suite, for orch. (Indianapolis, Nov. 18, 1950); The Chambered Nautilus, cantata for mixed voices and orch. (1914); The Highwayman, cantata for baritone, women's voices, and orch. (1914); Lucrece, suite for string quartet; A Kiss in Xanadu, pantomime for piano or 2 pianos; part-songs; songs; piano pieces; many arrangements. — Books: Of Men and Music (N. Y., 1937); The Well Tempered Listener (N. Y., 1940); Music to My Ears (N. Y., 1949); Some Enchanted Evenings; the Story of Rodgers and Hammerstein (N. Y., 1953). Also wrote numerous magazine articles. — Cf. J. T. Howard, Deems Taylor (N. Y., 1927).

Taylor, Franklin, English pianist and teacher; b. Birmingham, Feb. 5, 1843; d. London, March 19, 1919. Pupil of C. Flavell (piano) and T. Bedsmore (organ); also studied 1859-61 at Leipzig Cons. Returning to London, he settled there as a highly successful concert pianist and teacher; 1876-82, prof. at the National Training School, and from 1883 at the Royal College of Music. — He publ. Primer of Pianoforte Playing (1877); Pianoforte Tutor; Technique and Expression in Pianoforte Playing (1897).

Taylor, Raynor, composer; b. in England, c. 1747; d. Philadelphia, Aug. 17, 1825. He received his early training as a chorister in the Chapel Royal, and in 1765 became organist of a church in Chelmsford; that same year he was also appointed music director at Sadler's Wells Theatre, London. In 1792 he came to the U. S., going first to Baltimore and then to Annapolis, where he was organist of St. Anne's Church. Moving to Philadelphia in 1793, he became organist of St. Peter's there, and in 1820 was one of the founders of the Musical Fund Society. A gifted singer, he gave humorous musical entertainments which he called 'olios,' and in 1796 conducted an orchestral concert that included several of his own compositions. In collaboration with A. Reinagle (q.v.), who had been his pupil in London, he composed a 'Monody' on the death of Washington (1799), and a ballad opera, Pizarro, or the Spaniards in Peru (1800); some of his songs are in the N. Y. Public Library. — Cf. L. C. Madeira, Annals of Music in Philadelphia (1896); O. G. Sonneck, Bibliography of Early American Secular Music (1905; new ed., 1945); O. G. Sonneck, Early Concert-Life in America (1905); J. T. Howard, A Program of Early American Piano Music (1931).

Tchaikovsky, Boris Alexandrovitch, Russian composer; b. Moscow, Sept. 10, 1925. He studied at the Moscow Cons. with Shostakovitch, Shchepalin, and Miaskovsky. He publ. his earliest piano works at the age of 13; wrote an opera, The Star (1949); a symph. (1947); a Fantasy on Russian Themes for orch. (1950); Slavic Rhapsody for orch. (1951); Symphonietta (1953); a string quartet; a piano trio; a violin sonata; piano pieces.

Tchaikovsky, Modest, Russian playwright and librettist; brother of the composer; b. St. Petersburg, 1850; d. Moscow, Jan. 15, 1916. He was the closest intimate of Tchaikovsky, and the author of the basic biography. His plays had only a passing success, but he was an excellent librettist; he wrote the librettos of Tchaikovsky's last 2 operas, The Queen of Spades and Iolanthe.

Tchaikovsky, Piotr Ilyitch, famous Russian composer; b. Votkinsk, district of Viatka, May 7, 1840; d. St. Petersburg, Nov. 6, 1893. The son of a mining inspector at a plant in the Urals, he was given a good education; had a French governess and a music teacher. When he was 10, the family moved to St. Petersburg, and he was sent to a school of jurisprudence, from which he graduated at 19 and became a government clerk; while at school he studied music with Lomakin (q.v.), but did not display conspicuous talent as either pianist or composer. At the age of 21 he was accepted in a musical institution, newly established by Anton Rubinstein, which was to become the St. Petersburg Conservatory. He studied with Zarembo (harmony and counterpoint) and Rubinstein (composition); graduated in 1865, winning a silver medal for his cantata to Schiller's Hymn To Joy. In 1866 he became prof. of harmony at the Moscow Cons. under the directorship of Nicholas Rubinstein. As if to compensate for a late beginning in his profession, he began to compose with great application. His early works -- a programmatic symphony, subtitled Winter Dreams, some overtures and small pieces for string quartet -- reveal little individuality. With his symph. poem Ratsum (1869) came the first formulation of his style, highly subjective, preferring minor modes, permeated with nostalgic longing and alive with keen rhythms. In 1869 he undertook the composition of his overture-fantasy Romeo and Juliet; not content with what he had written, he profited by the advice of Balakirev, whom he met in St. Petersburg, and revised the work in 1870; but this version proved equally unsatisfactory; Tchaikovsky laid the composition aside, and did not complete it until 1879; in its final form it became one of his most successful works. A Belgian soprano, Désirée Artôt, a member of an opera troupe visiting St. Petersburg in 1868, took great interest in Tchaikovsky, and he was moved by her attentions; for a few months he seriously contemplated marriage, and so notified his father (his mother had died of cholera when he was 14 years old). But this proved to be a passing infatuation on her part, for soon she married the Spanish singer Padilla; Tchaikovsky reacted to this event with a casual philosophical remark about the inconstancy of human attachments. It is interesting to note that throughout his creative career Tchaikovsky never allowed his psychological turmoil to interfere with his work: the list of his compositions shows almost no gap in the continuous flow of music from his pen. Besides teaching and composing, he contributed music criticism to Moscow newspapers for several years (1868-74), traveled often abroad, and visited the first Bayreuth Festival in 1876, reporting his impressions for the Moscow daily 'Russkiye Vedomosti.' His closest friends were members of his own family, his brothers (particularly Modest, his future biographer) and his married sister Alexandra Davidov, at whose estate, Kamenska, he spent most of his summers. The correspondence with them, all of which was preserved and eventually published, throws a true light on Tchaikovsky's character and his life. Tchaikovsky had other intimate friends -- his publisher Jurgenson, Nicholas Rubinstein, and several other musicians. The most extraordinary of his friendships was the epistolary intimacy with Nadezhda von Meck, a wealthy widow, whom he never met (except for some fleeting, accidental encounters in public places) but who was to play an extremely important role in his life. Through the violinist Kotek (q.v.) she learned about Tchaikovsky's financial difficulties, and commissioned him to write some compositions, at large fees; then arranged to pay him an annuity of 6,000 rubles. For more than 13 years they corresponded voluminously, even when they lived in the same city (Moscow, Florence); on several occasions Madame von Meck hinted that she would not be averse to a personal meeting, but Tchaikovsky invariably declined such a suggestion, under the pretext that one should not see one's guardian angel in the flesh. On Tchaikovsky's part, this correspondence had to remain within the circumscribed domain of art, personal philosophy, and reporting of daily events, without touching on the basic problem of his existence. On July 18, 1877, Tchaikovsky contracted marriage with a conservatory student named Antonina Milyukova, who had declared her love for him. This was an act of defiance of his own nature; Tchaikovsky was a deviate, and made no secret of it in the correspondence with his brother Modest (who was also abnormal in this respect). He thought that by flaunting a wife he could prevent the already rife rumors about his abnormality from spreading any further. The result was disastrous, and Tchaikovsky fled from his wife in horror. He attempted suicide by walking into the Moskva River in order to catch pneumonia, but suffered nothing more severe than simple discomfort. He then went to St. Petersburg to seek the advice of his brother Anatol, a lawyer, who made suitable arrangements with Tchaikovsky's wife for a separation. (They were never divorced; she died in an insane asylum in 1917.) Madame von Meck, to whom Tchaikovsky wrote candidly of the hopeless failure of his marriage (without revealing the true cause of that failure), made at once an offer of further financial assistance, which Tchaikovsky gratefully accepted. He spent several months during 1877-78 in Italy, in Switzerland, in Paris, and in Vienna. During these months he completed one of his greatest works, the 4th Symphony, dedicated to Mme. von Meck. It was performed for the 1st time in Moscow on March 4, 1878, but Tchaikovsky did not cut short his sojourn abroad to attend the performance. He resigned from the Moscow Cons. in the autumn of 1878, and from that time dedicated himself entirely to composition. The continued subsidy from Mme. von Meck allowed him to forget money matters. Early in 1879 he completed his most successful opera, Eugene Onegin ('lyric scenes,' after Pushkin); it was first produced in Moscow by a conservatory ensemble, on March 29, 1879, and gained success only gradually; the 1st performance at the Imperial Opera in St. Petersburg did not take place until 5 years later (Oct. 31, 1884). A morbid depression was still Tchaikovsky's natural state of mind, but every new work sustained his faith in his destiny as a composer, despite many disheartening reversals. His piano concerto No. 1, rejected by Nicholas Rubinstein as unplayable, was given its world première (somewhat incongruously) in Boston, on Oct. 25, 1875, played by Hans von Bülow, and afterwards was performed all over the world by famous pianists, including Nicholas Rubinstein himself. His violin concerto, criticized by Leopold Auer (to whom the score was originally dedicated) and attacked by Hanslick with sarcasm and virulence at its world première by Brodsky in Vienna (1881), survived all its detractors, to become one of the most celebrated pieces in the violin repertory. The 5th Symphony (1888) was successful from the very first. Early in 1890 Tchaikovsky wrote his 2nd important opera, The Queen of Spades, which was produced at the Imperial Opera in St. Petersburg in that year. His ballets Swan Lake (1876) and The Sleeping Beauty (1889) became famous on Russian stages. But at the peak of his career, Tchaikovsky suffered a severe psychological blow; Mme. von Meck notified him of the discontinuance of her subsidy, and with this announcement she abruptly terminated their correspondence. Tchaikovsky could now well afford the loss of the money, but his pride was deeply hurt by the manner in which Mme. von Meck had acted. It is indicative of Tchaikovsky's inner strength that even this desertion of one whom he regarded as his staunchest friend did not affect his ability to work. In 1891 he undertook his first and only voyage to America. He was received with honors as a celebrated composer; he led 4 concerts of his works in N. Y. and one each in Baltimore and Philadelphia. He did not linger in the U. S., however, and returned to St. Petersburg in a few weeks. Early in 1892 he made a concert tour as conductor in Russia, and then proceeded to Warsaw and Germany. In the meantime he had purchased a house in the town of Klin, not far from Moscow, where he wrote his last symphony, the Pathétique. Despite the perfection of his technique, he did not arrive at the desired form and substance of this work at once, and discarded his original sketch. The title Pathétique was suggested to him by his brother Modest; the score was dedicated to his nephew, Vladimir Davidov. Its music is the final testament of Tchaikovsky's life, and an epitome of his philosophy of fatalism. In the 1st movement, the trombones are given the theme of the Russian service for the dead. Remarkably, the score of one of his gayest works, the ballet The Nutcracker, was composed simultaneously with the early sketches for the Pathétique. Tchaikovsky was in good spirits when he went to St. Petersburg to conduct the première of the Pathétique, on Oct. 28, 1893 (which was but moderately successful). A cholera epidemic was then raging in St. Petersburg, and the population was specifically warned against drinking unboiled water. Nonetheless, Tchaikovsky did exactly that, no doubt from carelessness. He showed the symptoms of cholera soon afterwards, and nothing could be done to save him. The melodramatic hypothesis that the fatal drink of water was a defiance of death, in perfect knowledge of the danger, since he must have remembered his mother's death of the same dread infection, is untenable in the light of published private letters between the attendant physician and Modest Tchaikovsky at the time. Tchaikovsky's fatalism alone would amply account for his lack of precaution. —As a composer, Tchaikovsky stands apart from the militant national movement of the 'Mighty Five.' The Russian element is, of course, very strong in Tchaikovsky's music, and upon occasion he made use of Russian folksongs in his works, but this national spirit is instinctive rather than consciously cultivated. His personal relationship with the St. Petersburg group of nationalists was friendly without being intimate; his correspondence with Rimsky-Korsakov, Balakirev, and others was mostly concerned with professional matters. Tchaikovsky's music was frankly sentimental; his supreme gift of melody, which none of his Russian contemporaries could match, secured for him a lasting popularity among performers and audiences. His influence was profound on the Moscow group of musicians, of whom Arensky and Rachmaninoff were the most talented. He wrote in every genre, and was successful in each; besides his stage works, symphonies, chamber music, and piano compositions, he composed a great number of lyric songs that are the most poignant creations of his genius. By a historical paradox, Tchaikovsky became the most popular Russian composer under the Soviet regime. His subjectivism, his fatalism, his emphasis on melancholy moods, even his reactionary political views (which included a brand of amateurish anti-Semitism), failed to detract from his stature in the new society. In fact, official spokesmen of Soviet Russia repeatedly urged Soviet composers to follow in the path of Tchaikovsky's esthetics. Tchaikovsky's popularity is also very strong in Anglo-Saxon countries, particularly in America; much less so in France and Italy; in Germany his influence is insignificant. — Works: Operas: The Voyevode (1867-68; Moscow, Feb. 11, 1869); Undine (1869); The Oprichnik (1870-72; St. Petersburg, April 24, 1874); Vakula the Smith (1874; St. Petersburg, Dec. 6, 1876); Eugene Onegin (1877-78; Moscow, March 29, 1879); The Maid of Orleans (1878-79; St. Petersburg, Feb. 25, 1881); Mazeppa (1881-83; Moscow, Feb. 15, 1884); Tcheravitchky (The Little Shoes; revised version of Vakula the Smith; 1885; Moscow, Jan. 31, 1887); The Sorceress (1885-87; St. Petersburg,

TCHAIKOVSKY

Nov. 1, 1887); The Queen of Spades (1890; St. Petersburg, Dec. 19, 1890); Iolanthe (1891; St. Petersburg, Dec. 18, 1892). Ballets: Swan Lake (1875-76; Moscow, March 4, 1877); The Sleeping Beauty (1888-89; St. Petersburg, Jan. 15, 1890), The Nutcracker (1891-92; St. Petersburg, Dec. 18, 1892). For orch.: 6 symphonies: No. 1 (Winter Dreams; 1868; revised 1874; Moscow, Feb. 15, 1868); No. 2, the Little Russian or Ukrainian symph. (Moscow, Feb. 7, 1873); No. 3 (1875; Moscow, Nov. 19, 1875); No. 4 (1877; Moscow, March 4, 1878); No. 5 (1888; St. Petersburg, Nov. 17, 1888); No. 6 (Pathétique; 1893; St. Petersburg, Oct. 28, 1893); overture to Ostrovsky's play The Storm (1864); symph. poem Fatum (1868; Moscow, Feb. 27, 1869); overture Romeo and Juliet (1869; Moscow, March 16, 1870; final version 1880); symph. fantasy The Tempest, after Shakespeare (1873; Moscow, Dec. 19, 1873); 1st piano concerto (1874-75; Boston, Oct. 25, 1875); Sérénade mélancolique, for violin with orch. (1875; Moscow, Jan. 28, 1876); Slavonic March (1876; Moscow, Nov. 17, 1876); symph. fantasy Francesca da Rimini, after Dante (1876; Moscow, March 9, 1877); suite from the ballet Swan Lake (1876); Variations on a Rococo Theme, for cello and orch. (1876; Moscow, Nov. 30, 1877); Valse-Scherzo, for violin and orch. (1877; Paris, Oct. 21, 1878); suite No. 1 (1878-79; Moscow, Nov. 23, 1879); violin concerto (1878; Vienna, Dec. 4, 1881); piano concerto No. 2 (1879-80; Moscow, May 30, 1882); Italian Capriccio (1880; Moscow, Dec. 18, 1880); 1812 Overture (1880; Moscow, Aug. 20, 1882); Serenade for string orch. (1880; Moscow, Jan. 28, 1882); suite No. 2 (1883; Moscow, Feb. 16, 1884); suite No. 3 (1884; St. Petersburg, Jan. 28, 1885); Concert Fantasy for piano with orch. (1884; Moscow, March 6, 1885); symphony Manfred, after Byron (1885; Moscow, March 23, 1886); suite No. 4, Mozartiana (1887; Moscow, Nov. 26, 1887); overture-fantasy, Hamlet (1888; St. Petersburg, Nov. 24, 1888); Pezzo capriccioso, for cello with orch. (1887; Moscow, Dec. 7, 1889); suite from the ballet The Sleeping Beauty (1889); symph. ballad, The Voyevode, after Pushkin's translation of Mickiewicz's ballad (1890-91; Moscow, Nov. 18, 1891); suite from the ballet Nutcracker (1892; St. Petersburg, March 19, 1892); 3rd piano concerto (one movement only; posthumous; St. Petersburg, Jan. 19, 1895); Andante and Finale for piano with orch. (1893; actually 2nd and 3rd movements of the 3rd piano concerto; posthumous; St. Petersburg, Feb.

20, 1896). Chamber music: 3 string quartets (1871; 1874; 1876); piano trio, in memory of Nicholas Rubinstein (Moscow, Oct. 30, 1882); Souvenir de Florence, for string sextet (1887; St. Petersburg, Dec. 7, 1892); also Souvenir d'un lieu cher, for violin and piano (1878); several fragments of early works. For piano: Scherzo à la russe (1867); Souvenir de Hapsal, 3 pieces (No. 3 is the famous Chant sans paroles; 1867); Valse-Caprice (1868); Romance in F minor (1868); Valse-Scherzo (1870); Capriccio (1870); 3 morceaux: Rêverie, Polka de Salon, Mazurka de Salon (1870); 2 morceaux: Nocturne and Humoresque (1871); 6 morceaux: Rêverie du Soir, Scherzo humoristique, Feuillet d'album, Nocturne, Capriccioso, Thème original et variations (1872); 6 morceaux sur un seul thème: Prelude, Fugue, Impromptu, Marche funèbre, Mazurka, Scherzo (1873); Grande sonate, in G major (1879); Les quatre saisons, 12 characteristic pieces for each month of the year (1875-76; of these the most famous are No. 6, Barcarole; No. 10, Chant d'automne; No. 11, En Trainneau; No. 12, Noël); 12 morceaux (1876-78); among them Chanson triste and Danse russe; Album pour enfants, 24 pieces (1878); 6 pièces (1882); Dumka (1886); 18 morceaux (1893); sonata in C# minor (1865; posthumous). Vocal works: cantata, An die Freude (Schiller), for chorus and orch. (1865); Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom, for mixed chorus in 4 parts (1878); Vesper Service, for mixed chorus (1882); Moskva, coronation cantata for solo voices, chorus, and orch. (1883); 3 Cherubic Hymns, for mixed chorus (1884); 6 Church Songs (1885); other sacred and secular vocal pieces; about 100 songs, among them such favorites as Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt (after Goethe), Berceuse, etc.; 6 duets. He publ. a Manual of Harmony (Moscow, 1870; many eds. English transl. as Guide to the Practical Study of Harmony, 1900). The collected criticisms and reminiscences were publ. in 1898; new ed., revised and enlarged, Moscow, 1953; diaries, comprising 11 separate fragments, covering the years between 1873 and 1891, were publ. in Moscow in 1923 (English transl., N. Y., 1945). A centennial edition of the complete works, in about 70 vols., was begun in 1940, interrupted during the war years, and resumed in 1946. Most of the manuscripts, correspondence, etc. are preserved in Tchaikovsky's house in Klin (now the Tchaikovsky Museum). A complete thematic catalogue was issued by B. Jurgenson (Moscow, 1897; reprinted N. Y., 1941).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: The basic source is the 3-vol. biography by Modest Tchaikovsky, The Life of P. I. T. (Moscow, 1900-02), but in it the author was compelled to withhold essential facts of Tchaikovsky's life; translations were made, into German by Paul Juon (2 vols.; Leipzig, 1900, 1902) and into English by Rosa Newmarch (abridged) as The Life and Letters of P. I. T. (London, 1906). Chapters on Tchaikovsky are included in all music histories and books dealing specifically with Russian music. Books and articles in various languages that should be noted include: V. Tcheshikhin, P. T. Attempt at a Characterization (Riga, 1893); H. Laroche and N. Kashkin, In Memory of T. (Moscow, 1894); N. Kashkin, Reminiscences of T. (Moscow, 1897); E. Markham Lee, T., in the 'Music of the Masters' series (N. Y., 1904); Edwin Evans, Sr., T. (London, 1906; revised ed., 1935); P. I. T., a symposium, in the series 'The Past of Russian Music' (Petrograd, 1920), containing documents relating mainly to the Tchaikovsky Museum in Klin; Igor Glebov, T.: an Essay of Characterization (Petrograd, 1922); Igor Glebov, P. I. T.: His Life and Works (Petrograd, 1922; a different book from the preceding); H. Laroche, Collected Musico-Critical Articles, vol. 2 (Moscow, 1922); M. Steinitzer, T. (Leipzig, 1925); R. H. Stein, T. (Stuttgart, 1927); Eric Blom, T.: Orchestral Works, in the 'Musical Pilgrim' series (London, 1927); M. D. Calvocoressi and Gerald Abraham, Masters of Russian Music (London, 1936; pp. 249-334; this essay publ. separately, 1949); Nikolai von Pals, P. T. (Potsdam, 1939); H. Weinstock, T. (N. Y., 1943); Gerald Abraham, T.: A Short Biography (London, 1944); H. Célis and W.-P. Right, T. (Brussels, 1945); Gerald Abraham, T.: A Symposium (London, 1945; in the U. S. as The Music of T., N. Y., 1946); D. Brook, 6 Great Russian Composers (London, 1946); D. Shostakovich and others, Russian Symphony; Thoughts About T. (N. Y., 1947); R. Hofmann, T. (Paris, 1947); A. Alshvang, Analytic Essay on T.'s Creative Work (Moscow, 1951); G. Dombayev, Creative Work of T. (Moscow, 1958). Numerous pamphlets dealing with Tchaikovsky's operas, ballets, orchestral works, etc. have been issued in Russia; of these, the most valuable are: N. Findeisen, T.'s Chamber Music (Moscow, 1930); A. Budiakovsky, P. I. T., Symphonic Music (Leningrad, 1935); V. Bogdanov-Berezovsky, Operatic and Choreographic Works of T. (Moscow, 1940); B. M. Yarustovsky, Operatic Dramaturgy of T. (Moscow, 1947), and N. Nikolayeva, Sym- phonies of T. (Moscow, 1958). V. Yakovlev compiled a most detailed chronology (often day by day) of Tchaikovsky's life, Days and Years of T. (Moscow, 1940). Of the greatest importance is the publication of the complete extant correspondence between Tchaikovsky and Mme. von Meck, in 3 vols. (Moscow, 1933; 1934; 1936). Other correspondence includes Letters to Relatives (vol. 1, Moscow, 1940); Correspondence with P. I. Jurgenson (2 vols., Moscow, 1939, 1952); letters to and from S. Taneyev (Moscow, 1951); selected letters to intimates (Moscow, 1955). Magazine articles on Tchaikovsky include the following, publ. in the 'Mus. Quarterly': Olga Bennigsen, A Bizarre Friendship: T. and Mme. von Meck (Oct., 1936); N. Slonimsky, Further Light on T. (April, 1938); Olga Bennigsen, More T.-von Meck Correspondence (April, 1938); S. Bertensson, The T. Museum at Klin (July, 1944). There are several fictional biographies of Tchaikovsky; among them one written by Catherine D. Bowen and Barbara von Meck, Beloved Friend (N. Y., 1937); Klaus Mann, Symphonie pathétique (Amsterdam, 1938; in German; in English, N. Y., 1948); J. Mühlberger, Im Schatten des Schicksals (Esslingen, 1950).

Tcherepnin (chch-rep-nēn'), Alexander Nikolayevitch, composer and pianist; son of Nicolas Tcherepnin; b. St. Petersburg, Jan. 20, 1899. He studied piano as a child with his mother (née Benois, a sister of the stage designer, Alexander Benois). He profited much from his father's advice, but did not take formal lessons with him; began to compose early in life; wrote a comic opera at 12, a ballet at 13, and 14 piano sonatas before he was 19 (sonata No. 13 was publ. under the title Sonatine romantique). In 1917 he entered the Petrograd Cons. and studied with Sokolov, but remained there only a few months; then accompanied his father to Tiflis, where the latter was appointed director of the local conservatory; gave piano recitals all over the Caucasus; in 1921 went to Paris; there he studied piano with Isidor Philipp and counterpoint with Paul Vidal; in 1922 he appeared in London as pianist and composer; subsequently gave concerts in Germany, Austria, and the U. S.; between 1934 and 1937 he made 2 visits to the Far East; played in the principal cities of China and Japan; had many pupils there; established in Tokyo a firm for the publication of serious works by Japanese composers, including a number of his own students; brought out more than 50 Japanese and Chinese compositions. He married a Chinese pianist, Lee Hsien-Ming (q.v.). In 1938 he made his home in Paris, remaining there throughout the war; resumed his international career in 1947; gave concerts in Scandinavia and elsewhere in Europe. In 1949 he and his wife joined the faculty of De Paul Univ. in Chicago. —In his music Tcherepnin follows a neo-Romantic trend, using original means of expression within the framework of traditional forms. He adopted a 9-tone scale (formed by the insertion of passing tones in an augmented triad) and applied it integrally in several of his instrumental works; at the same time he explored the latent resources of folk music; adjusted Oriental scales so as to utilize them in modern forms. He also elaborated a method of rhythmic polyphony, introducing thematic rhythmic units, and termed it 'interpunctus.' —Works: Operas: Ol-Ol, after Leonid Andreyev (Weimar, Jan. 31, 1928); Die Hochzeit der Sobeide, after Hugo von Hofmannsthal (Vienna, March 17, 1933); The Farmer and the Fairy (Aspen Festival, Colorado, Aug. 13, 1952); completed Mussorgsky's opera The Marriage (Essen, Sept. 14, 1937). Ballets: Ajanta Frescos (London, Sept. 10, 1923); Training (Vienna, June 19, 1935); Der fahrend Schüler mit dem Teufelsbannen (1938); Trepak (Mordkin Russian Ballet, Richmond, Va., Oct. 10, 1938); La Légende de Rasin (1941); Déjeuner sur l'herbe (Paris, Oct. 14, 1945); Chota Roustaveli (Monte Carlo, May 5, 1946); La Colline des fantômes (1946); Jardin persan (1946); Nuit kurde (Paris, 1946); La Femme et son ombre, after Paul Claudel (Paris, June 14, 1948); Aux temps des tartares (Buenos Aires, 1949). Cantatas: Vivre d'amour (1942); Pan Kéou (Paris, Oct. 9, 1945); Le Jeu de la Nativité (Paris, Dec. 30, 1945); Les Douze, poem by Alexander Blok for narrator, strings, harp, piano, and percussion (Paris, Nov. 9, 1947). For orch.: symph. no. 1 (Paris, Oct. 29, 1927); symph. no. 2 (1945-51; Chicago, March 20, 1952); symph. no. 3 (Indianapolis, Jan. 15, 1955); Magna Mater (1927; Munich, Oct. 30, 1930); Russian Dances (Omaha, Feb. 13, 1934); 3 Pieces for Chamber Orch.: Overture (1921), Mystère, for cello and chamber orch. (Monte Carlo, Dec. 8, 1926), Pour un entraînement de boxe (1922; originally a ballet sketch); Concerto da camera, for flute, violin, and chamber orch. (1924); Concertino for violin, cello, piano, and strings (1931); Rhapsodie géorgienne for cello and orch. (Bordeaux, 1924); 3 piano concertos (composer soloist at all performances): No. 1 (1919; Monte Carlo, 1923); No. 2 (Paris, Jan. 26, 1924); No. 3 (Paris, Feb. 5, 1933); Suite georgienne for orch. (Paris, April 17, 1940); Fantaisie for piano and orch. (1946-49); Evocation (1948); Suite for orch. (Louisville, May 1, 1954); concerto for harmonica and orch. (Venice, Sept. 11, 1956); Capriccio for orch. (Chicago, Nov. 14, 1957). Chamber music: piano trio (1925); 2 string quartets (1925; 1926); piano quintet (1927); Ode for cello and piano (1919); 3 cello sonatas; violin sonata; Elegy for violin and piano; Le Violoncelle bien temperé, 12 preludes for cello with piano, 2 of them with drum added (Berlin, March 23, 1927); suite for cello solo (1946); Mouvement perpétuel, for violin and piano (1945); sonatina for kettle-drums and piano (1939); Sonatine sportive, for bassoon and piano (1939); Andante, for tuba and piano (1939); trio for flutes (1939); quartet for flutes (1939); Marche, for 3 trumpets (1939); etc. For piano: Scherzo (1917); 10 Bagatelles (1913-18); Sonatine romantique (1918); Toccata (1921); Feuilles libres (1920-24); 5 Ara-besques (1921); 9 Inventions (1921); 2 Novelettes (1922); 6 Études de travail (1923); 4 Préludes nostalgiques (1922); Entretiens (1930); Études de piano sur la gamme pentatonique (1935); Autour des montagnes russes (1937); Badinage (1942); Le Monde en Vitrine (1946); 7 songs on poems translated from the Chinese, for narrator and piano (also with orch.); several albums of songs to poems in Russian, French, and Chinese; he edited Russian songs; publ. articles on Oriental music, including Music in Modern China, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1935).

Tcherepnin (cheh-rep-nēn'), Nicolas (Nikolay Nikolayevitch), Russian composer and conductor; b. St. Petersburg, May 14, 1873; d. Issy-les-Moulineaux, near Paris, June 26, 1945. He was a pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov at the St. Petersburg Cons. (1895-98); in 1905, became prof. of the orch. class and conducting there; also conducted at the Imperial Opera. He conducted Russian operas in Paris in 1908, and until 1914 toured with the Diaghilev Ballets Russes. He then returned to Russia; after the Revolution went to Tiflis, in the Caucasus, where he remained from 1918 until 1921, as director of the Tiflis Cons.; with the occupation of the Caucasus by the Red army, he, accompanied by his son Alexander (q.v.), proceeded to Paris, where he settled permanently; also conducted in London, Madrid, etc. His music embodies the principal elements of the Russian national school; he wrote successful ballets; a number of songs, some of which are favorites in the Russian repertory. He completed Mussorgsky's unfinished opera, The Fair at Sorochintzy (Monte Carlo, March 17, 1923; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., Nov. 29, 1930). His own works include the operas The Marriage Broker, Poverty is Not a Crime, and Ivan the Chancellor; the ballets Le Pavillon d'Armide (1903), Narcissus and Echo (Monte Carlo, April 26, 1911; produced by Diaghilev), The Masque of the Red Death, after Poe (St. Petersburg, Jan. 29, 1916); Prelude to Rostand's La Princesse lointaine, for orch. (1897); Fantaisie dramatique, for orch. (1903); Le Royaume enchanté, symph. tableau (1904); piano concerto (1907); chamber music: 14 Esquisses sur les images d'un alphabet russe for piano (an orchestral version of 8 of them was performed by the Boston Symph. Orch., Nov. 27, 1931). The 1st part of his sacred work Pilgrimage and Passions of Virgin Mary was given in Paris (Feb. 12, 1938). — Cf. M. Montagu-Nathan, Contemporary Russian Composers (London, 1917).

Tcheshikhin, Vsevolod Evgrafovitch, Russian writer on music; b. Riga, Feb. 18, 1865; d. Leningrad, 1934. After completing his law studies, he became a justice of the peace; was also active as music critic, and in 1898 established the Riga branch of the Imperial Russian Music Society; later went to St. Petersburg. He publ. a very valuable History of Russian Opera (St. Petersburg, 1902; 2nd enlarged ed., 1905); this was to be the 1st vol. of a history of Russian music in all its branches, but the project did not advance beyond this work; his other publications were: P. Tchaikovsky: Attempt at a Characterization (1893); Short Librettos (1894); Echoes from the Opera and Concert Hall (1896); etc.

Tebaldi, Renata, Italian soprano; b. Langhirano, Parma, Feb. 1, 1922. She received her elementary musical education at home from her father (a cellist) and her mother (a singer). She studied with Passani in Parma; then took a thorough course in vocal training with Carmen Melis (1939-42). She made her operatic début as Desdemona in Trieste (1946); sang the same role at Covent Garden, London (1950), and at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. (Jan. 31, 1955); also appeared in South America (1952). Her repertory includes Aida, Madama Butterfly, Tosca, Marguerite, Violetta, etc.

Tebaldini, Giovanni, Italian music scholar; b. Brescia, Sept. 7, 1864; d. San Benedetto del Tronto, May 11, 1952. He studied with Ponchielli and Amelli at the Milan Cons., and at the School for Church Music in Regensburg; from 1889 to 1894 he was 2nd maestro di cappella at San Marco, Venice; then at the Padua Cathedral (1894-97); from 1897 to 1902, was director of the Cons. of Parma; from 1902 to 1924, at the Cathedral of Loreto; then appointed prof. at the Cons. di S. Pietro in Naples. In 1930 he went to Genoa, as director of the Ateneo Musicale there. He publ. in modern notation the scores of Peri's Euridice, Cavaleri's Rappresentazione di anima e di corpo, and Monteverdi's Poppea. He wrote a number of church compositions; with Enrico Bossi, publ. an important organ method (Milan, 1894). His own writings include La Musica sacra in Italia (Milan, 1894); L'Archivio musicale della Cappella Antoniana in Padova (Padua, 1895); L'Archivio musicale della Cappella Lauretana (Loreto, 1921); Ildebrando Pizzetti (Parma, 1931); contributed numerous articles on Gregorian Chant, Palestrina, etc. to various publications. He created an uproar in musical circles with his article, Telepatia musicale, publ. in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (March, 1909), in which he cited thematic similarities between the opera Cassandra by Vittorio Gnecci (produced in 1905), and Elektra by Richard Strauss, written much later; he failed to prove, however, that Strauss actually plagiarized Gnecci. — Cf. M. Pilati, in the 'Bollettino bibliografico musicale' (Milan, 1929).

Tedesco, Ignaz (Amadeus), pianist, called the 'Hannibal of octaves'; b. Prague, 1817; d. Odessa, Nov. 13, 1882. He studied with Trichensee and Tomaschek; made successful concert tours, especially in Southern Russia; settled in Odessa. He composed for piano in a salon style—mazurkas, waltzes, rhapsodies, nocturnes; made transcriptions.

Teichmüller, Robert, German pianist and teacher; b. Brunswick, May 4, 1863; d. Leipzig, May 6, 1939. He studied piano with his father and with Reinecke at the Leipzig Cons., where from 1897 until his death he taught piano; made prof. in 1908. With K. Hermann he publ. a valuable guide, Internationale moderne Klaviermusik (Leipzig, 1927). — Cf. A. Baresel, R. T. als Mensch und Künstler (Leipzig, 1922); A. Baresel, R. T. und die Leipziger Klaviertradition (Leipzig, 1934).

Telemann, Georg Michael, German theorist and composer; grandson of Georg Philipp Telemann; b. Plön, Holstein, April 20, 1748; d. Riga, March 4, 1831. In 1773 he went to Riga and became cantor there (pensioned in 1828). He publ. Unterricht im Generalbass-Spielen, auf der Orgel oder sonst einem Clavier-Instrumente (1773); Beytrag zur Kirchenmusik (1785; organ pieces); Sammlung alter und neuer Kirchenmelodien (1812); and Über die Wahl der Melodie eines Kirchenliedes (1821); composed a book of trio sonatas, 6 violin sonatas, organ works.

Telemann, Georg Philipp, noted German composer; b. Magdeburg, March 14, 1681; d. Hamburg, June 25, 1767. He had only an ordinary school training in the musical rudiments, and owed his later eminence to self-instruction. At 12 he wrote an opera à la Lully; at 14 he conducted the music for a church at Hildesheim; in 1701 he entered Leipzig Univ. as a student of law and modern languages, and in 1704 became organist at the Neukirche, enlarging his choir by a students' singing society ('Collegium musicum') organized by himself. From 1704 to 1708 he was Kapellmeister to Count Promnitz at Sorau; then Konzertmeister at the court of Eisenach, where he succeeded Hebenstreit in 1709 as court conductor, retaining title and emoluments when called to Frankfurt in 1712 as Kapellmeister at the churches of the 'Barefooted Friars' and St. Catherine. From 1721 till his death he was town musical director at Hamburg, declining, on Kuhnau's death in 1722, the proffered position of cantor of the Thomaschule at Leipzig. An astonishingly productive composer, he wrote with ease and fluency in any desired style; he was far better known in his time than Bach, though subsequently his fame suffered an eclipse. After Handel and Keiser he was the most notable of the early German dramatic composers. He wrote about 40 operas; of these the following were produced in Hamburg: Der gedultige Sokrates (Jan. 28, 1721); Der neu-modische Liebhaber Damon (June, 1724); Die ungleiche Heirat (Sept. 27, 1725); Miriways (May 26, 1728); Flavius Bertaridus König der Longobarden (Nov. 23, 1729); 21 operas were written for Leipzig, and 4 for Weissenfels. — Other works: 12 series of cantatas and motets for the church year (about 3,000 numbers with orch. or organ); 44 Passions; 32 installation numbers for preachers; 33 Hamburger Capitänsmusiken (each being a cantata with instrumental introduction); 20 pieces for jubilees, consecrations, or coronations; 12 funeral services; 14 numbers of wedding music; over 600 overtures; many serenades and marches; trio sonatas and other chamber music; also cantatas, odes, and oratorios. Most of his publ. works were engraved by Telemann himself. The following are among those that have been reprinted: the opera Pimpinone, in the 'Erbe deutscher Musik' vol. 6 (1936); oratorio Der Tag des Gerichts and the 'monodrama' Ino (solo cantata for soprano with orch.), in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 28); a violin concerto (vol. 29); trio sonata in Eb, in Riemann's 'Collegium Musicum'; a 'symphony' in Schering's 'Perlen alter Kammermusik'; a concerto for 4 violins ed. by H. von Dameck; concerto ed. by H. Engel; an oboe concerto ed. by F. Stein; a flute quartet ed. by Ermeler; Sing-, Spiel- und Generalbassübungen, ed. by M. Seiffert (1914); clavier fantasias ed. by Seiffert (Frankfurt, 1923); Musique de Table (instrumental suites), ed. by Seiffert, in the 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' (vol. 61-62); 24 Odes (vol. 57); also several cantatas, etc. A collected ed. of his works was begun in 1950 by Bärenreiter in Kassel. — Cf. Telemann's autobiography in J. Mattheson's Grundlage einer Ehrenpforte . . . (Hamburg, 1740; reprinted by M. Schneider, Berlin, 1910); a brief curriculum vitae and a letter in J. Mattheson, Grosse General-Bass-Schule, oder der exemplarischen Organisten Probe (2nd ed., Hamburg, 1731), reproduced in Willi Kahl, Selbstbiographien deutscher Musiker (Cologne, 1948); K. Ottzenn, Telemann als Opernkomponist (Berlin, 1902); R. Rolland, Voyage musical au pays du passé (1919; English transl., 1922); M. Seiffert, Telemanns 'Musique de Table' als Quelle für Händel, in the 'Bulletin de la Société Union Musicologique' (1924); H. Gräser, Telemanns Instrumental-Kammermusik (Frankfurt, 1925); R. Meissner, G. P. Telemanns Frankfurter Kirchen-Kantaten (Frankfurt, 1924); E. Valentin, G. P. Telemann (Burg, 1931; revised ed., 1952); H. Büttner, Das Konzert in den Orch.-Suiten Telemanns (Leipzig, 1931); L. de La Laurencie, Telemann à Paris, in the 'Revue Musicale' (1932); H. Hörner, Telemanns Passions-musiken (Leipzig, 1933); K. Schäfer-Schmuck, Telemann als Klavierkomponist (Leipzig, 1934); W. Menke, Das Vokalwerk G. P. Telemanns (Kassel, 1942).

Tellefsen, Thomas Dyke, Norwegian pianist and composer; b. Trondheim, Nov. 26, 1823; d. Paris, Oct. 6, 1874. In 1842 he went to Paris, where he studied with Kalkbrenner; in 1844 he became a pupil of Chopin, and accompanied him to England and Scotland in 1848. He publ. an edition of Chopin's works, and played Chopin's music at recitals in Paris and in Scandinavia. His own compositions were imitative of Chopin; he wrote nocturnes, waltzes, and mazurkas, but he also made use of Norwegian folksongs in many of his works, and thus became an early proponent of national music in Norway.

Telmányi, Emil, Hungarian violinist; b. Arad, June 22, 1892. He studied with Hubay at the Academy of Music in Budapest. In 1911 he began an active career as concert player; in 1918, married a daughter of Carl Nielsen (q.v.); his 2nd wife, whom he married in 1936, is the pianist Annette Schiöler. In 1940 he settled in Aarhus, Denmark, as a teacher; he toured the U. S. in 1950. He made a number of arrangements for violin of works by Chopin, Schumann, Brahms, and others; supervised the devising of a curved bow for the playing of Bach's unaccompanied sonatas and partitas.

Temianka, Henri, violinist; b. Greenock, Scotland, Nov. 19, 1906. He studied as a child with Carel Blitz in Rotterdam; then with Willy Hess in Berlin and with Jules Boucherit in Paris. In 1926 he came to America as a student of the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, in the class of Karl Flesch. He became 1st violinist in the Paganini Quartet; toured widely in Europe and America.

Templeton, Alec, blind pianist and composer; b. Cardiff, Wales, July 4, 1909. He studied at the Royal College of Music in London until 1923 and at the Royal Academy of Music until 1931. He settled in the U. S. in 1935, becoming a citizen in 1941; was extremely successful as a radio pianist, especially with his humorous musical sketches, parodies, etc., such as Bach Goes to Town, Mozart Matriculates, etc. He also wrote some more ambitious works, including Concertino lirico (1942) and Gothic Concerto (N. Y., Dec. 19, 1954, composer soloist), for piano and orch. In 1950 he established in N. Y. his own music publishing firm.

Templeton, John, Scottish tenor; b. Riccarton, near Kilmarnock, July 30, 1802; d. New Hampton, July 2, 1886. He sang in various churches in Edinburgh; then went to London, where he took lessons in singing with Tom Cooke; also studied theory with Blewitt. He began to appear in theaters around London, and on Oct. 13, 1831 he made his début in a London theater; subsequently became a regular member of Drury Lane. Maria Malibran selected him as tenor for her operatic appearances in London (1833-35). In 1842 he was in Paris; during the season of 1845-46 he made an American tour announced as 'Templeton Entertainment,' singing folksongs of Great Britain; his commentaries and reminiscences were publ. as A Musical Entertainment (Boston, 1845). He retired in 1852. -- Cf. W. H. Husk, ed., Templeton and Malibran. Reminiscences (London, 1880).

Tenducci (tĕn-dōō'-chē), Giusto Ferdinando, celebrated male soprano; b. Siena, c. 1736; d. in Italy after 1800. He went to England in 1758 and was received with such enthusiasm that, with the exception of very short periods, he sang throughout the British Isles until 1791, being applauded even after his voice was almost completely gone. He scandalized and amazed the public when he married in 1767 one of his pupils, Dorothy Maunsell, but the marriage was annulled in 1775. She publ. an account of the affair under the title A True and Genuine Narrative of Mr. and Mrs. Tenducci (1768). He wrote a treatise on singing, Instruction of Mr. Tenducci to his Scholars (London, 1785); also composed music for a comic opera The Campaign, produced in London in 1784, and a group of Ranelagh Songs. -- Cf. A. Heriot, The Castrati in Opera (London, 1956; pp. 185-89; provides an explanation of Tenducci's extraordinary marriage).

Tenschert, Roland, musicologist; b. Podersam, Bohemia, April 5, 1894. He studied at the Leipzig Cons. and in Vienna (Dr. phil., 1921); from 1926 to 1931 he was librarian and teacher at the Mozarteum in Salzburg; in 1945, became prof. of music history at the Vienna Academy of Music. -- Publications: Mozart: ein Künstlerleben in Bildern und Dokumenten (Leipzig, 1931); Mozart (Leipzig, 1931); J. Haydn (Berlin, 1932); Vater Hellmesberger: ein Kapitel Wiener Musikerhumor (Vienna, 1947); Musikerbrevier (Vienna, 1940); Mozart: ein Leben für die Oper (Vienna, 1941); Drei-mal sieben Variationen über das Thema Richard Strauss (Vienna, 2nd ed., 1945); Frauen um Haydn (Vienna, 1946); Salzburg und seine Festspiele (Vienna, 1947); Richard Strauss und Wien, eine Wahlverwandtschaft (Vienna, 1949); C. W. Glück (Olten, 1951); W. A. Mozart (Salzburg, 1951; in English, 1952); edited the letters of R. Strauss and Joseph Gregor (Salzburg, 1955).

Terhune, Anice (née Potter), American pianist and composer; b. Hampden, Mass., Oct. 27, 1873. She studied in Cleveland, in Rotterdam (with Louis Coenen), and in N. Y. (with E. M. Bowman). In 1901 she married Albert Payson Terhune, the author; in 1952, was living at Pompton Lakes, N. J. She publ. several books of songs for children (Dutch Ditties, Chinese Child's Day, Colonial Carols, Our Very Own Book, etc.) and a number of separate songs; also many piano pieces for children; the operas Hero Nero (1904) and The Woodland Princess (1911); a book, Music-Study for Children (1922), and an autobiography, Across the Line (N. Y., 1945).

Ternina, Milka, Croatian soprano; b. Vezisće, near Zagreb, Dec. 19, 1863; d. Zagreb, May 18, 1941. She studied voice at the Vienna Cons. with Gänsbacher; made her operatic début in Zagreb (1882); then sang in Leipzig (1883-84) and Graz (1884-86). She subsequently was a member of the Bremen Opera (1886-89), and of the Munich Opera (1890-99), where she distinguished herself as a Wagnerian singer. She was engaged by Walter Damrosch for his German Opera Co. in N. Y., and made her American début as Elsa on March 4, 1896; also appeared at Covent Garden, London, as Isolde (June 3, 1898); after a series of successes at the Bayreuth Festivals, she was engaged by the Metropolitan Opera Co., singing there every season from 1899 until 1904; sang Tosca at the American première (Feb. 4, 1901) and Kundry in Parsifal (Dec. 24, 1903). She retired from the stage in 1906 and settled in Zagreb, where she remained until her death.

Terrabugio (ter-rah-hoo'-joh), Giuseppe, Italian composer; b. Fiera di Primiero, May 13, 1842; d. there, Jan. 8, 1933. He studied in Padua, and then in Munich under Rheinberger. In 1883 he settled in Milan, where, as editor of 'Musica Sacra,' he exerted a strong influence in reforming Italian church music. His publ. works (about 100 opus numbers) are almost exclusively for the church (12 Masses, a Requiem, litanies, motets, etc.); he also publ. L'Organista pratico (3 vols.).

Terradellas (tĕr-rāh-dēhl'-yāhs), Domingo (Italianized as Domenico Terradeglias), Spanish composer; b. Barcelona, 1713 (baptized Feb. 13); d. Rome, May 20, 1751. He studied with Durante at the Cons. dei Poveri di Gesù Cristo in Naples (1732-36); began his career as dramatic composer with the opera Astasio (Rome, Jan. 3, 1739); from 1743 to 1745, he was at S. Giacomo degli Spagnuoli, Rome; in 1746, went to London, where he produced his operas Mitridate (Dec. 2, 1746) and Bellerofonte (April 4, 1747); returned to Italy in 1750, after traveling through Belgium and France (1748-49). There is no foundation for the story that he drowned himself in the Tiber owing to the failure of his opera Sesostri (Rome, 1751); 12 arias and 2 duets were publ. in 1747 by J. Walsh of London, who also publ. 'the favourite songs' from the operas Mitridate and Bellerofonte. — Cf. J. R. Carreras y Bulbena, Domingo Terradellas (Barcelona, 1908); H. Volkmann, Domingo Terradellas, in the 'Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft' (vol. XIII, p. 306).

Terrasse (tehr-rahss'), Claude, French composer; b. Grand-Lemps, near Grenoble, Jan. 27, 1867; d. Paris, June 30, 1923. He studied at the Lyons Cons. and at the École Niedermeyer in Paris; from 1888 to 1895, church organist in Arcachon, then in Paris until 1899, when he began to write for the stage, producing a series of successful operettas; the best-known are Les Travaux d'Hercule (March 7, 1901); Le Sire de Vergy (April 16, 1903); Monsieur de la Palisse (Nov. 2, 1904); La Marquise et le marmiteux (Dec. 11, 1907); Le Coq d'Inde (April 6, 1909); Le Mariage de Télémaque (May 4, 1910); Les Transatlantiques (May 20, 1911); Cartouche (March 9, 1912).

Terry, Charles Sanford, eminent English scholar; b. Newport Pagnell, Buckinghamshire, Oct. 24, 1864; d. Westerton of Pitfodels, near Aberdeen, Nov. 5, 1936. He became prof. of history at the Univ. of Aberdeen in 1903, and occupied himself with historical research; at the same time he devoted much of his energy to the study of Bach and his period. His biography of Bach (1928; revised ed., 1933; German transl., Leipzig, 1934) is unique in that it places Bach's life within the historical perspective of his time; the documentation is exceedingly fine, and the few errors are slight. Other books and editions dealing with Bach include: Bach's Chorals (3 vols., 1915-21); J. S. Bach's Original Hymn-Tunes for Congregational Use (1922); J. S. Bach, Cantata Texts, Sacred and Secular (1926); The Four-Part Chorals of J. S. Bach (5 vols., 1929); The Origin of the Family of Bach Musicians (1929); Bach: the Historical Approach (1930); Bach's Orchestra (1932); The Music of Bach: an Introduction (1933). To the 'Musical Pilgrim' series he contributed analyses of the B minor Mass (1924), the cantatas and oratorios (1925), the Passions (1926), and the Magnificat, Lutheran Masses, and motets (1929). He arranged and publ. a stage version of the 'Coffee Cantata' as Coffee and Cupid (1924); also translated into English Forkel's life of J. S. Bach (1920), and wrote a biography of Johann Christian Bach (1929).

Terry, Sir Richard Runciman, English music editor; b. Ellington, Northumberland, Jan. 3, 1865; d. London, April 18, 1938. In 1890 appointed organist and music master at Elstow School; 1892-96, organist and choirmaster at St. John's Cathedral, Antigua, West Indies; 1896-1901, at Downside Abbey. There he attracted attention by the revival of the Catholic church music of early English masters (Byrd, Tallis, Tye, Morley, Mundy, White, Fayrfax, etc.); 1901-24 was organist and director of music at Westminster Cathedral, continuing his labors in behalf of early English music; 1915-16, examiner for National Univ. of Ireland and Birmingham Univ. He was chairman of the committee appointed to prepare the English supplement of the Vatican Antiphony, and mus. ed. of the 'Westminster Hymnal,' the official Roman Catholic hymnal for England. He was knighted in 1922. — Besides Masses, motets, and other church music, he composed 48 Old Rhymes with New Tunes (1934). Edited The Shanty Book (2 vols.; 1921; 1926); Old Christmas Carols (1923); Hymns of Western Europe (with Davies and Hadow; 1927); Salt Sea Ballads (1931); A Medieval Carol Book (1932); 200 Folk Carols (1933); Calvin's First Psalter, 1539, harmonized (1932); also the collections of 16th-century music 'Downside Masses' and 'Downside Motets,' 'Motets Ancient and Modern,' and many separate works by the early English composers mentioned above. — Books: Catholic Church Music (1907); On Music's Borders (1927); A Forgotten Psalter and other essays (1929); The Music of the Roman Rite (1931); Voodooism in Music and other essays (1934). — Cf. S. Grew, Favourite Musical Performers (Edinburgh, 1923); H. Andrews, Westminster Retrospect: a Memoir of Sir Richard Terry (London, 1948).

Terschak (tehr'-shak), Adolf, celebrated flutist; b. Hermannstadt, Transylvania, April 6, 1832; d. Breslau, Oct. 3, 1901. He studied with Zierer at the Vienna Cons. (1850-52); made long tours, as far west as London, and east to Siberia. — Works: for flute and orch.: Salut à la Hongrie; Konzert-Fantasie; Columbus, an American rhapsody; Carnaval suisse; Murillo, Allegro de concert; Le Papil- lon en voyage, étude-caprice; 2 suites for flute and piano, Deutsche Soldatenbilder and Nordlandsbilder; 2 sonatas; a melodrama, Die Mutter; numerous minor pieces for flute and piano; École de mécanisme and technical studies; piano pieces; songs and choruses.

Tertis, Lionel, English viola player; b. West Hartlepool, Dec. 29, 1876. He studied violin at the Leipzig Cons. and at the Royal Academy of Music in London; played the viola in various quartets, and decided to make it his chief instrument. He eventually became one of the most renowned viola players in Europe; traveled also in America. Several English composers wrote viola concertos for him. He retired in 1936. He arranged for viola Mozart's clarinet concerto, Elgar's cello concerto, and other works; publ. Beauty of Tone in String Playing (London, 1938) and an autobiography, Cinderella No More (London, 1953). In 1956 he designed a "Tertis model" viola.

Terziani (tehr-tsiah'nē), Eugenio, Italian composer; b. Rome, July 29, 1824; d. there, June 30, 1889. He studied with Mercadante at the Naples Cons.; at the age of 19, produced an oratorio, La Caduta di Gerico (Rome, March 31, 1844), followed by the operas Giovanna regina di Napoli (Rome, June 1, 1845) and Alfredo (Rome, Feb. 21, 1852); was conductor in Rome at the Teatro Apollo from 1850; then at La Scala, Milan (1867-71), and finally (from 1877) prof. of composition at the Accademia di Santa Cecilia in Rome. His last opera, L'Assedio di Firenze, was produced in Rome, Feb. 24, 1883. He was also the composer of a ballet, Una Sinfide a Pechino (Rome, Dec. 26, 1859), and of much sacred music.

Teschner, Gustav Wilhelm, German music editor and teacher of singing; b. Magdeburg, Dec. 26, 1800; d. Dresden, May 7, 1883. He was a pupil of Zelter in Berlin and of Crescentini in Italy; mastered Italian teaching methods thoroughly and settled in Berlin as a vocal instructor, specializing in the Italian repertory. He publ. elementary vocal exercises of his own, and edited many works by Italian masters (Cilari, 8 books; Crescentini, 5 books; Zingarelli, 10 books; etc.); also brought out early choral church music.

Tesi, Vittoria, famous Italian contralto; b. Florence, Feb. 13, 1700; d. Vienna, May 9, 1775. She received her instruction in Florence and Bologna; appeared on the stage at the age of 16 in Parma; then was engaged in Venice (1718) and Dresden (1719). She sang in Italy every year, and also appeared in Madrid (1739) and Vienna (1747-48). She was married to one Tramontini, a barber by trade, and adopted the professional name Tesi-Tramontini. She was remarkably free in her morals, and many stories, in which it is impossible to separate truth from invention, were circulated about her life. Her letters to a priest were publ. by Benedetto Croce in his book Un Prelato e una cantante del secolo XVIII (Bari, 1946).

Tessarini, Carlo, Italian violinist and composer; b. Rimini, 1690; d. c. 1765. He was a follower, if not actually a pupil, of Corelli; in 1729 he was violinist at San Marco in Venice and later served at the Cathedral of Urbino; he then went to Rome and to Fano (1742), and finally entered the service of Cardinal Hannibal in Brünn, Moravia. In 1762, already an old man, he gave concerts in Amsterdam. His violin sonatas, generally in 3 movements, contributed to the establishment of a 3-movement sonata as a norm. He publ. several trio-sonatas, duets, concertinos, concerti grossi, and a violin method, Grammatica di musica (Rome, 1741; also in French and English transl.). — Cf. A. Schering, Geschichte des Instrumentalkonzerts (Leipzig, 1905; p. 107 ff.).

Tessier (teh-syā'), André, French musicologist; b. Paris, March 8, 1886; d. there, July 2, 1931. He studied law, history of art, and other subjects; after attending the lectures of Romain Rolland and André Pirro at the Sorbonne, he devoted himself to musical research; was archivist in the dept. of Fine Arts, and in 1926 was elected secretary to the Société Française de Musicologie; also editor of the 'Revue de Musicologie,' in which his catalogue of the Versailles Library was publ. (Nos. 38-39). He edited the complete works of Chambonnières (with P. Brunold; 1925), and Denis Gaultier's Rhétorique des Dieux (facsimile, 1932; transcription, 1933). He was the author of a book on Couperin (Paris, 1926); prepared materials for the complete edition of Couperin's works, but died before his work was finished. A complete list of his writings was publ. by A. Schaeffner in the 'Revue de Musicologie' (Dec., 1953). See also P. Brunold, Quelques souvenirs sur André Tessier, in the 'Revue de Musicologie' (Aug., 1931).

Tessier, Charles, French lutenist and composer; b. Pézénas (Hérault), c. 1550; date and place of death unknown. He was chamber musician to Henri IV; traveled in England; his book, Chansons et airs de cour for 4 and 5 voices, was publ. in London (1597), dedicated to Lady Penelope Riche (Sir Philip Sidney's 'Stella'); his Airs et villanelles, for 3, 4, and 5 voices, were publ. in Paris (1604). —Cf. the 'Musical Antiquary' (vol. 1, p. 53; 1909).

Tessmer, Hans, German writer on music; b. Berlin, Jan. 19, 1895; d. there (killed in an air raid), March 1, 1943. He studied music in Berlin, becoming music critic of the 'Tägliche Rundschau' in 1921; also was engaged as stage director at the opera houses in Dresden (1923-27), Berlin (1928-30), Stuttgart (1934-35), and Görlitz (from 1935). —Books: Profile und Fantasien (1921); Anton Bruckner (1922); Richard Wagner (1930); Robert Schumann (1930); also a fictionalized story of Schumann, Der klingende Weg (1923). He revised Cherubini's opera, Lo Sposo di tre, marito di nessuna, and produced it under the title Don Pistacchio, der dreifach Verlobte (Dresden, Nov. 27, 1926).

Testore, Carlo Giuseppe, Italian instrument-maker; b. Novara, c. 1660; d. c. 1720. He was a pupil of Grancino and worked in Milan (1690-1715); made mostly cellos and double-basses, and only a few violins. His son, Paolo Antonio (1690-1760), made violins on the model of Guarneri. —Cf. O. A. Mansfield, Carlo Giuseppe Testore, in the 'British Musician' (1927; p. 38).

Testori, Carlo Giovanni, Italian theorist; b. Vercelli, March 24, 1714; d. there, May 20, 1782. He publ. La Musica ragionata (Vercelli, 1767), a theoretical treatise based on the system of Rameau; it was followed by 3 supplements (1771, 1773, 1782). —Cf. C. Negri, Brevi considerazioni sull'evoluzione storica ed estetica della musica: Biografie di musicisti vercellesi (Vercelli, 1909); R. Altorio, La 'Musica ragionata' di Carlo Giovanni Testori, in the 'Rivista Musicale Italiana' (July-Sept., 1951).

Tetrazzini (teh-träh-tsē'-nē), Eva, Italian soprano; sister of Luisa Tetrazzini; b. Milan, March, 1862; d. Salsomaggiore, Oct. 27, 1938. After studying with Ceccherini in Florence, she made her début there in 1882, as Marguerite in Faust. She sang Desdemona in Verdi's Otello at its first American production (N. Y., April 16, 1888). On May 15, 1887 she married the conductor Cleofonte Campanini. She sang with the Manhattan Opera, N. Y., in 1908; after appearances in various European countries, she returned to Italy.

Tetrazzini (teh-träh-tsē'-nē), Luisa, famous Italian coloratura soprano; b. Florence, June 28, 1871; d. Milan, April 28, 1940. At the age of 12 she had learned the words and music of several operas by listening to her elder sister, Eva (Mme. Cleofonte Campanini); she then studied at the Liceo Musicale in Florence with Ceccherini. After her début as Inez in L'Africaine in Florence (1895) she sang in Rome and other Italian cities; then traveled with various companies in South America and Mexico, and in 1904 created a local sensation at the Tivoli Opera House in San Francisco. On Nov. 2, 1907, she made her first London appearance (as Violetta) and was so successful during that season that Hammerstein engaged her for his Manhattan Opera House in N. Y., where she was first heard in the same role on Jan. 15, 1908; she remained with Hammerstein's company until its closing in 1910, appeared for one season (1911-12) at the Metropolitan Opera House, and then sang in concert tours and in opera in the U. S. She was one of the greatest opera stars before World War I; continued her career as a concert singer; her last American appearance was in N. Y., 1931. She wrote My Life of Song (London, 1921) and How to Sing (N. Y., 1923).

Teyber (ti'-ber), Anton, Austrian composer; b. Vienna, Sept. 8, 1754; d. there, Nov. 18, 1822. He studied with Padre Martini at Bologna; from 1792 was cembalist at the Imperial Opera in Vienna, and assistant of Salicri; from 1793, court composer and music master to the Imperial children. He wrote an opera, 2 oratorios, a Passion, a melodrama, many Masses, symphonies, string quartets, minuets, etc. Some of his songs are printed in 'Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich' vol. 79.

Teyber (ti'-ber), Franz, Austrian composer; brother of Anton Teyber; b. Vienna, Nov. 15, 1756; d. there, Oct. 22, 1810. He studied with Wagenseil; after a concert tour in Southern Germany and Switzerland, he conducted Schikaneder's itinerant opera troupe; was then Konzertmeister at Karlsruhe and Bern, and from 1799 to 1810 composer to Schikaneder's Theater an der Wien. He produced a number of operas and Singspiele there and in other theaters in Vienna: Die Dorfdeputierten (Dec. 18, 1785); Fer- nando und Jariko, or Die Indianer (Sept. 5, 1789); Alexander (June 13, 1801); Der Schlaftrunk (Nov. 12, 1801); Die Neuigkeitskrämer (May 12, 1802); Pfändung und Personalarrest (Dec. 7, 1803); Scheredin und Almanzor (Aug. 9, 1804); Der Zerstreute (Jan. 29, 1805); Ruthards Abentheuer (July 26, 1808); Pumphia und Kulikan (Oct. 8, 1808); Das Spinner-Kreutz am Wienerberge (posthumous; Aug. 24, 1811).

Teyte, Maggie (real name Tate), English soprano; b. Wolverhampton, April 17, 1888. She studied in London; then was a pupil of Jean de Reszke in Paris (1903-07). In order to insure correct pronunciation of her name in France, she changed the original spelling Tate to Teyte. She made her operatic debut as Zerlina at Monte Carlo (1907); was very successful as a concert singer in Paris, and appeared with Debussy at the piano; Debussy also selected her as successor to Mary Garden in the role of Mélisande (1908). She sang at the Opéra-Comique (1908-10), with Beecham's Opera Co. in London (1910-11), with the Chicago Opera Co. (1911-14), and the Boston Grand Opera Co. (1915-17). She continued her recitals of French music in London during World War II. She publ. a book of memoirs, Star on the Door (London, 1958). — Cf. C. Wallis, Maggie Teyte, in 'Opera' (London, April, 1952).

Thadewaldt (täh-dë-vählt), Hermann, German conductor and composer; b. Bodenhagen, April 8, 1827; d. Berlin, Feb. 11, 1909. He was bandmaster at Düsseldorf (1850-51) and Dieppe (1853-55); from 1857 to 1869, conductor of his own orch. in Berlin, and in 1871 of the concerts at the Zoölogical Gardens there. In 1872 he founded the 'Allgemeiner Deutscher Musikerverband,' of which he was the first president, and to whose interests he devoted his entire time until his death. He published a symph. poem, Das Rätsel der Sphinx; Im Walde for orch.; Meermusik for string orch.; Herbstlied for string quintet; etc.

Thalberg, Sigismond, piano virtuoso and composer; b. Geneva, Jan. 8, 1812; d. Posilipo, near Naples, April 27, 1871. His parents were Joseph Thalberg of Frankfurt and Fortunée Stein, also of Frankfurt, but resident in Geneva. Thalberg, however, pretended to be the natural son of Prince Moritz Dietrichstein, who took charge of his education. His first instructor was Mittag, the bassoonist of the Vienna Court

Opera; he subsequently studied piano with Hummel and composition with Sechter. He played as a precocious pianist in the aristocratic salons of Vienna, and began to compose piano music. In 1830 he made a successful concert tour through Germany; in 1834 he was appointed court pianist in Vienna; in 1835 he went to Paris, where he perfected his playing under Kalkbrenner; from that time he became one of the most admired piano virtuosos of Paris, and soon extended his triumphs through most of Europe, including Russia. In 1843 he married the widow of the painter Boucher. In 1855 he set out on a concert tour through Brazil and the U. S. (1856); made a 2nd Brazilian tour in 1863, and in 1864 retired to Naples. — Thalberg was unexcelled as a performer of fashionable salon music and virtuoso studies. He possessed a wonderful legato, eliciting from Liszt the remark, 'Thalberg is the only artist who can play the violin on the keyboard.' His technical specialty was to play a central melody with the thumb of either hand, surrounding it with brilliant arpeggios and arabesques. To present this technique graphically in notation, he made use of the method initiated by Francesco Pollini (q.v.) of writing piano music on 3 staves. He wrote 2 operas, Florinda (London, July 3, 1851) and Cristina di Suezia (Vienna, June 3, 1855), which were not successful; but his brilliant piano pieces were the rage of his day, easily eclipsing, in popular favor, those of Chopin, his close contemporary. Among them are a group of nocturnes, several Caprices, 2 Romances sans paroles, Grandes valse brillantes, Le Départ, varié en forme d'étude, Marche funèbre variée, Barcarole, Valse mélodique; Les Capricieuses; Tarentelle; Souvenir de Pest; La Cadence (very popular); Les Soirées de Pausilippe (6 albums); Célèbre Ballade; La Napolitaine; several sonatas, many pianistic studies; fantasies on operas by Rossini, Bellini, Meyerbeer, Weber, Verdi, etc.

Thallon, Robert, organist and composer; b. Liverpool, March 18, 1852; d. Brooklyn, March 13, 1910. He was taken to N. Y. as a small child; studied in Germany, in Paris and Florence (1864-76); upon his return to the U. S., he settled in Brooklyn as organist and music teacher; publ. a number of songs and piano pieces, and some orchestral arrangements.

Thayer, Alexander Wheelock, authority on Beethoven; b. South Natick, Mass., Oct. 22, 1817; d. Trieste, July 15, 1897. After graduation at Harvard Univ. in 1843, he became assistant librarian there; during 6 years' work in the library, he matured a plan for writing a detailed and trustworthy biography of Beethoven. For preliminary study, and to collect material, he first spent 2 years (1849-51) in Germany, also writing letters for newspapers; in 1852 he joined the staff of the New York 'Tribune,' and returned to Europe in 1854, where, excepting 2 years (1856-58) spent in Boston, he remained. Dr. Lowell Mason and Mrs. Mehetable Adams (of Cambridge, Mass.) gave generous and disinterested aid at this juncture. In 1862 Thayer was attached to the American embassy at Vienna; in 1865, Abraham Lincoln appointed him consul at Trieste, a post held during life. He then publ. a Chronologisches Verzeichniss der Werke Ludwig van Beethovens (Berlin, 1865); in 1866 vol. I of his life-work, Ludwig van Beethoven's Leben, appeared in German, translated from the English MS by Deiters; vol. II was publ. in 1872; vol. III, in 1879. In 1877 he publ. Ein kritischer Beitrag zur Beethoven-Litteratur. Unhappily, his wonderful capacity for work was overtaxed, and vol. IV of his nobly conceived work, executed with a painstaking thoroughness and scrupulous fidelity beyond praise, was left unfinished. Though he lived for years in straitened circumstances, he resolutely refused offers from firms like Novello & Co. and G. Schirmer, hoping to recast entirely the English version of his Beethoven, which was publ. in 3 vols. by Krehbiel in 1921. —Cf. H. E. Krehbiel, A. W. Thayer and His 'Life of Beethoven,' in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (Oct., 1917); Christopher Hatch, The Education of A. W. Thayer, in the 'Mus. Quarterly' (July, 1956).

Thayer, Arthur Wilder, American composer and conductor; b. Dedham, Mass., Aug. 26, 1857; d. there, Nov. 17, 1934. Pupil of C. A. Guilmotte and C. R. Adams (singing), Chadwick (theory and instrumentation), and Zerrahn (conducting). Conducted choral societies in Lowell, Salem, Worcester, Providence, etc.; 1882-85, superintendent of music in schools at Dedham; 1885-88 at Milton; then music director at Eliot Church, Newton. He publ. numerous songs; also church music and piano pieces.

Thayer, (Whitney) Eugene, American organist; b. Mendon, Mass., Dec. 11, 1838; d. Burlington, Vt., June 27, 1889. He began to study the organ at 14; in 1862 assisted at the opening of the great organ in the Music Hall, Boston, where he became regular organist after study (1865-66) under Haupt, Wieprecht, etc., in Germany; also conductor of the Boston Choral Union, etc. For a Festival Cantata he received the degree of Mus. Doc. from Oxford Univ. He publ. a Mass; 4 organ sonatas; part-songs; also The Art of Organ Playing (5 parts).

Thayer, William Armour, American organist and song composer; b. Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 5, 1874; d. there, Dec. 9, 1933. Pupil of J. H. Brewer (organ), D. Buck (theory), and J. D. Mehan (voice); 1893-1914, organist of St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church, Brooklyn; from 1914 of St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church; from 1907 also prof. of music at Adelphi College, Brooklyn. He publ. many songs, of which the best known is My Laddie.

Thebom, Blanche, American mezzo-soprano; b. Monessen, Pa., Sept. 19, 1918, of Swedish parents. She studied singing with Margaret Matzenauer and Edyth Walker; made her concert début in N. Y. on Jan. 12, 1944, and her operatic début at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., as Fricka, Dec. 14, 1944. She then sang in various opera houses, in America and Europe, with increasing success. In 1958 she appeared as a guest artist in Russia. Among her best roles are Ortrud in Lohengrin, Azucena in Il Trovatore, Amneris in Aida, Laura in La Gioconda, and Carmen.

Theile (tī'lē), Johann, German composer; b. Naumburg, July 29, 1646; d. there (buried June 24), 1724. Pupil of H. Schütz at Weissenfels; in 1673, Kapellmeister to the Duke of Holstein at Gottorp; went to Hamburg and wrote (for the opening of the Opera there in 1678) the Singspiele Adam und Eva (Jan. 12, 1678) and Orontas; he also produced a Christmas Oratorio in 1681. In 1685, Kapellmeister to the Brunswick court at Wolfenbüttel; then Kapellmeister at Merseburg. He was called by contemporaries 'the father of counterpoint.' Among his numerous pupils were Buxtehude and Zachau. —Works: a German Passion (publ. Lübeck, 1675, reprinted by Zelle in 'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst' vol. 17); Noviter inventum opus musicalis compositionis 4 et 5 vocum, pro pleno choro (20 Masses), and Opus secundum, novae sonatae rarissimae artis et suavitatis musicae (a collection of instrumental sonatas, preludes, courantes, airs, and sarabands a 2-5, in single, double, triple, and quadruple counterpoint). —Cf. F. Zelle, Johann Theile und N. A. Strungk (Berlin, 1891); W. Maxton, Johann Theile (dissertation, Tübingen, 1926).

Theodorini, Helena, Rumanian soprano; b. Craiova, March 25, 1862; d. Bucharest, March, 1926. Pupil of D. Fumagalli (piano) and A. Sangiovanni (singing) at the Cons. Verdi in Milan; début (as contralto) at Teatro Municipale in Cuneo (1879); gradually her voice changed to a mezzo-soprano of wide range; after appearing in Warsaw (1881), at La Scala, Milan (1883), and in Madrid (1884-86), she sang in the chief opera houses of Europe and South America until 1902. In 1905 she established herself as a vocal teacher in Paris; lived several years in Buenos Aires, and in 1916 settled in N. Y.; later she returned to Rumania.

